Warmer here, but freeze threatens Valley

From Staff and Wire Reports

A slight warming trend is expected in the Pampa area Saturday, but Arctic air that roared into Texas today on the heels of a winter storm sent the mercury plunging and threatened to spread sub-freezing weather as far south as the semi-tropical Lower Rio Grande Valley.

The Pampa area temperature, which dropped to 8 Thursday night, is expected to climb into the low 40s Saturday after dipping to about 10 tonight.

The National Weather Service issued a freeze warning for tonight for the Winter Garden, coastal bend and Lower Rio Grande Valley area. Temperatures are expected to dip to near freezing in the Valley.

Temperatures at the freezing mark would not seriously harm the valley's citrus crop, still trying to come back after a disastrous freeze in 1983, but could harm some of the area's vegetables.

Citrus industry officials say temperature must dip to at least 27 degrees and remain there for several hours to cause damage to citrus fruit and trees.

The leading edge of the frigid air pushed across the Panhandle, South Plains and western portions of North Texas early today. Temperatures plunged into the teens and lower 20s in the area covered by the frigid air.

Lows tonight will range from near 10 in northwest sections of North Texas to near 20 in southeast portions of North Texas. Lows tonight in West Texas will range from near 10 in the Panhandle to the mid 20s in Southwest Texas. In South Texas, lows tonight will range from the upper teens in the Hill Country to near freezing in the Valley.

The Arctic air moved into the state after a winter storm moved across much of West Texas and veered northeastward out of the state after reaching western portions of North Texas.

Some snowfall was reported in western sections of North Texas, but the storm veered away from the Dallas-Fort Worth area late Thursday. Only some freezing drizzle, sleet and snow flurries were reported in the heavily populated area.

Forecasters had expected several inches of snow to fall after a bout with freezing rain and sleet, but the fierce storm never materialized.

A travelers advisory was in effect early today for northwest sections of North Texas, including the cities of Wichita Falls, Abilene and Gainesville. The travelers advisory for other portions of North Texas was canceled early today.

The area covered by the travelers advisory was north of a line from Sherman to Eastland to Ballinger.

There was enough freezing rain, sleet and scattered snow to snarl traffic and close some schools, mainly in the Fort Worth area, early Thursday.

At about 9 p.m. Thursday, the National Weather Service downgraded a winter storm warning for the area to a travelers advisory for northern and western North Texas.

"It couldn't be worse," said meteorologist Bill Alexander.

Appraisal district ratifies suspension

BY CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

The Gray County Appraisal District board made its decision to suspend chief appraiser Charles Buzzard official Thursday by ratifying the action taken at a special meeting Nov. 26.

The action from the special meeting had to be ratified because the State Registrar's Office, an agency which enforces the Texas Open Meetings Law, apparently received no notice of the meeting. Area media representatives say they were unaware of the meeting, also.

According to minutes of the November meeting, the board gave Buzzard three options: to divest himself from Associated Properties, a real estate sales and appraisal firm which he operates in addition to his government appraisal job; to resign as chief appraiser or to be placed on a 30-day unpaid leave of absence until he clears up his connection with the real estate firm. Buzzard chose to be placed on the leave of absence.

Board chairman Dr. Robert Lyle hesitated to say whether Buzzard would be dismissed if his ties with the company aren't severed. Buzzard has until Dec. 30 to clear up his connection, and four new appraisal board members will replace incumbents Jan. 2, three days later.

Lyle said that according to the Texas Real Estate Commission, Buzzard can have a real estate business as well as be appraiser, even though the jobs are tied together.

"It's just that we feel this is a full-time job," Lyle said.

Arthur Zapski, an attorney with the Texas Real Estate Commission, confirmed that a chief appraiser can legally hold a real estate job on the side, "as long as there's no conflict between the two."

"In fact, you have to have a real estate license to do appraising," he said, adding that government appraisers are exempt from that requirement.

Lyle said Buzzard could be back at his appointed county job before his leave is up if he clears up his connection with Associated Properties. He added that he does not know what Buzzard has done since being placed on suspension.

At the Thursday meeting, some board members were not sure how to go about ratifying their decision. "Does anyone know what ratify means, by the state's definition," Lyle asked the board. Some members answered that a decision is ratified if the board accepts the minutes of the meeting.

Board members agreed to ratify the action taken at the November meeting.

For past meetings, Buzzard or his secretary have been responsible for posting the meeting notices and notifying the state registrar and media of the meetings. Board members say Buzzard had posted the meeting notice on the bulletin board at the Gray County Courthouse and had mailed the notice to the state.

"It is very likely that he did fully notify the people and that he posted all the things he should have," Lyle said, adding that the notice for the registrar could have gotten lost in the mail.

Buzzard, who has owned Associated Properties since August, could not be reached for comment. He said earlier that he has been trying since September to divest himself from the firm, but has had trouble finding a broker.

McLean scores above state average

McLEAN — The McLean schools' 22 juniors scored higher than the state average in the Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills test, high school counselor Earl Dwyer has reported.

School trustees looked at the TEAMS test results at their regular board meeting this week.

The students are required to pass, or "master," the TEAMS test in order to graduate from high school and are given several chances to pass the test, which was first administered in October. The test is divided into math and language arts divisions.

Dwyer reported that 86 percent of the students (19 out of 22) passed the math part while 90 percent (19 out of 21) passed the language arts.

He pointed out that, with the two parts of the test being taken on separate days, one student was absent during the language arts testing day.

Students scored best in reference source identification, which all students mastered; reference source usage, sentence combining, reading context clues and sequence of events, in which all but one student passed.

When the test was taken, state education officials expected 75 percent of the students to pass the test.

In other business, the board amended its budget to include $5,100 in revenue from collection of delinquent taxes, penalty and interest.

The district is trying to collect more than $72,000 in delinquent taxes and began suing delinquent taxpayers in November. In October, trustees voted to run legal notices in the local paper threatening to sue the delinquent taxpayers if they don't get the money. They then authorized their attorney to send letters to the taxpayers.

But one delinquent taxpayer claimed she never got any notice until she got the attorney's letter.

The woman, Charlie Shirley, maintained that, while she is willing to pay the tax she owes, she should not have to pay penalty and interest because she had not been notified in the past.

Past letters, she claimed, were sent to an Oklahoma City address, "where I haven't lived for six years."

Board members agreed to waive penalty and interest charges for the woman if she agrees to pay the taxes she owes back to 1957.

Trustees also appointed a committee to draw up a school discipline management policy. The committee will consist of superintendent Jim Rutherford, Dwyer, teacher Bobby Stalls, high school principal Pete Bateman, elementary principal Dorman Thomas, students Bob Patman and Shawn Crockett, trustee Gwen Henley and school patron Mrs. Robert Gibson.

Also approved was a Christmas bonus of $100 for school employees.

Bodies, answers sought at crash scene

Related stories, Page five

GANDER, Newfoundland (AP) — Scores of searchers returned today to the snow-blanketed hills where a DC-8 packed with U.S. soldiers exploded and crashed, seeking the cause of the disaster in which all 258 people aboard died.

The four-engine jet crashed early Thursday seconds after takeoff from this airport on Canada's Atlantic coast. Aboard were troops of the 101st Airborne Division, returning home for Christmas after a six-month tour of duty with the multinational peacekeeping force in Egypt's Sinai peninsula.

The plane's flight recorders and the bodies of half of the victims were recovered by late Thursday, but a Canadian official cautioned that pinpointing the reasons behind the tragedy could prove "time-consuming."

Air Safety Board spokesman Christiane Beaulieu told reporters early today that a search team including 100 Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers, 140 Canadian military personnel and 40 investigators from the safety board was resuming efforts to recover bodies and tag wreckage.

She said officials had no new clues to the cause of the disaster but added, "Everything that comes up in an investigation is given consideration." She said some of the victims' bodies would undergo autopsies in Gander, but that they had not yet begun.

Ms. Beaulieu said 32 representatives of the U.S. military were on hand to observe the Canadian search effort in 25-degree weather at the crash site in sparsely wooded terrain about a half-mile from Gander International Airport. Reporters were kept away from the site.

Dick Pepper, regional public relations director for the Transport Ministry, said, "It's very important for the investigating teams to get in there and examine the site as quickly as possible."

"You can determine a number of things from the positions of the bodies and the wreckage," Pepper said.

Horrified airport employees watched the pre-dawn sky light up with the explosion minutes after they had chatted with the U.S. soldiers, heard them singing Christmas carols in the terminal and directed them onto the Arrow Air charter.

"There was a flash, just like a sunburst," said Judy Parsons, a car rental agent who witnessed the crash from the Gander parking lot. "It lasted for just two seconds and then I heard an explosion."

Canadian Transport Minister Don Mazankowski said the plane climbed no higher than 1,000 feet before crashing. Transport Canada spokesman Bruce Reid, returning from a helicopter tour over the site, said there was no suggestion that the jet exploded in flight.

"Where it came down, it obviously exploded on impact. Everything in the area is charred," he said. "It's not nice to look at."

The crash littered the sparse, hilly landscape 1,200 feet from the runway's end with Christmas gifts, weapons and smouldering debris.

A makeshift morgue was erected next to a body of water known as Deadman's Pond.

Officials said there was no indication what might have caused the crash.

Gander airport manager John Pittman and Royal Canadian Mounted Police Sgt. Roger Tinkham said the plane was not de-iced before takeoff, despite having landed a little more than an hour earlier in light freezing rain after a refueling stop in Cologne, West Germany.

But authorities refused to speculate on the possible cause of the crash and Pittman, appearing later at an evening news briefing, refused to elaborate on his earlier statement.

Thursday's crash, the worst air disaster ever in Canada, adds to this year's record death toll in commercial aviation, which now stands at 1,948, according to the International Civil Aviation Organization in Montreal.

Lefors board hears test report

LEFORS - Trustees of the Lefors Independent School District heard reports on TEAMS tests results and the second six-weeks grades during their regular board meeting Thursday night.
 Lefors High School Principal Gene Gee reported all 19 juniors passed the test, with one student - Norman Howard - making a perfect score.
 Under new state mandates, students must pass the TEAMS test in order to graduate from high school with a diploma. The Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills measures student mastery of math and English language, including reading and grammar.
 Gee said he was very pleased with the results. In September he had predicted 100 percent of the students taking the test this year would pass.

Gee and Lefors Elementary School Principal Bill Crockett reported on the student grades for the second six weeks. Gee noted that 46 percent of the junior high and high school students made the B or above honor roll. Only 28 percent fell on the ineligible list for extracurricular activities with one or more failing grades.
 But, he noted, out of a total of 740 grades recorded for students, less than 6 percent were failing grades.
 In other matters, Supt. Earl Ross reported on progress toward filing a grant application with the Department of Energy. The federal department has made grants available for updating old buildings to better conserve energy.
 The board approved $3,900 to pay for an energy audit and the completion of the application, which is due Jan. 10.

Ross said estimated costs for implementing more energy efficient improvements in the main school building would be about $63,580. If the grant is approved, the DOE would pay half of the costs for the repair and renovation work.
 In other business, the trustees appointed a committee to study a proposed Discipline Management Plan and to report to the board at its January meeting.
 Trustees also reviewed information on a Christmas party for school employees, approved bills for payment and held an executive session without taking any action.

Wholesale prices rise in November

WASHINGTON (AP) - Wholesale prices, stamped by another surge in beef costs, surged 0.8 percent in November, the Labor Department said today.
 The increase came on the heels of a 0.9 percent increase the previous month and means wholesale prices for finished goods have risen at an annual rate of 1.8 percent through the first 11 months of 1985.
 Retail inflation is running at an annual rate of 3.3 percent so far this year, the lowest in nearly two decades.
 The November Producer Price Index showed food costs rose 1.6 percent after seasonal adjustment, in large part because of a 4.5 percent jump in beef costs. Overall food costs had risen 1.4 percent in October, beef prices 11.8 percent.
 Another major factor was a 3.1 percent increase in energy prices, the first advance in that category since May, as prices for gasoline and home heating oil rose sharply.

 Changes that show up in the producer price measure are a good barometer of how food, energy and other commodity prices will move at the retail level. However, the Consumer Price Index, due out next Friday, checks a broader range of items and generally does not follow the PPI's tendency to bounce sharply from month to month.
 The Labor Department offered these specifics at the finished goods level on November wholesale price activity:
 - Although the increase in meat and poultry prices, which were up 4.1 percent, drove overall food prices higher, there was a 0.6 percent decline for fresh vegetables and a 2.1 percent decline for coffee. On the other hand, dairy products prices soared 12.6 percent and fresh fruits rose 5.8 percent.

Weather cancels 'Atlanta' concert

It wasn't because "Atlanta Burned Again Last Night" that the country-rock group Atlanta's Pampa performance was postponed Wednesday night.
 The problem was more like the opposite.
 An Arctic cold front that has sent temperatures plummeting toward zero and pelted the area with snow and ice left the group stranded in Wichita Falls on Wednesday. Texas Department of Public Safety troopers halted all 18-wheel traffic leaving Wichita Falls, including the group's buses and equipment trucks, because of slick road conditions, promoter Jesse Allen, of Pampa, said.
 "The problem was Mother Nature," Allen commented.
 Atlanta, whose hits include "Atlanta Burned Again Last Night" and "Sweet Country Music," was to have performed at 8 p.m. Wednesday at M.K. Brown Auditorium.
 Allen said the concert will be rescheduled, probably sometime in late February or early March. Tickets purchased for Wednesday's show will be honored at the rescheduled performance, Allen said.
 Ticket holders may also obtain refunds at the auditorium until Tuesday at 4 p.m., excluding Saturday and Sunday. Refunds began Thursday.

Demos won't budge on tax bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - Democratic leaders are firmly resisting Republican demands for new concessions in a big tax overhaul bill, dimming chances the measure can win House approval this year even with President Reagan's support.

 A full day of arm-twisting by the president and top aides on Thursday produced pledges of support from only 34 of the 182 House Republicans. Democratic strategists said. And several of those votes were offered only on condition that they be allowed to offer amendments to the bill before it is passed.

 At issue is a bill making broad changes in the income tax. Written chiefly by Rostenkowski and other Democrats on his Ways and Means Committee, it is reasonably close to what Reagan recommended to Congress last May.

Another child rape suspect arrested

Another man has been arrested on re-opened charges of rape of a child after his alleged victim came forward with new information.
 Pampa police arrested Clyde Leland Davis, 62, 308 Miami, at his home Thursday on a warrant alleging rape of a child. Custody of Davis was transferred to the Gray County Sheriff's office and Justice of the Peace David Potter set bond at $20,000.
 Police Chief J.J. Ryzman said the alleged incidents have "been going on for some time" but the alleged victim, who is now 18, recently came forward with new information.
 Davis is the second man arrested in as many days by the department on charges of rape of a child. Fifty-year-old Glenda Ray Currie, 532 Powell, was arrested Wednesday, after his alleged victim, also now 18, also came forward with new information.
 The department has added indecency with a child charges to Currie's rape charge. He remains in the city jail with a $50,000 bond.

'Poor' woman's will stirs up $5 million worth of trouble

DALLAS (AP) — When Gary Joe Lewis visited Elizabeth Tietze, he only hoped to buy property owned by the aging woman.

Instead, Lewis found a friend in the sweet, slightly eccentric lady who kept her dearest belongings in a paper bag and never let it out of her sight.

Lewis may also end up with more than $100,000 for his friendship.

The seemingly impoverished Dallas woman left behind a handwritten will and addenda bequeathing $5 million — one that includes Lewis.

Whether anyone will get to keep any of the fortune is currently being debated in a Dallas probate court after several cousins of the woman contested the will.

Shirley Smith, a friend who was put on the witness stand to answer questions from the crowd of lawyers, suddenly burst into tears.

"I'm sorry," she said, "but I feel like nobody's shed a tear for Mrs. Tietze."

The woman lived in an aging house in East Dallas, a house she apparently let no one enter.

She was usually seen in one of two dresses and tennis shoes and went about in public dirty from her frequent yardwork, acquaintances said.

It's even possible the 73-year-old woman took a meal or two from charities.

But she made friends in recent years, largely through business. Someone would get interested in buying one of her properties and come to talk to her about it.

The elderly widow with no children was usually glad for the company. She warmed to people who took an interest in her, even if it started out strictly business.

In return, they warmed to her.

"When I'd call, she'd ask that I bring her a pimiento cheese sandwich, a Dr Pepper in a bottle. Sometimes, she'd ask for a Twinkie," said Lewis, who first dropped by in 1984 to inquire about some warehouse property he was interested in and that was listed on the tax rolls as owned by Mrs. Tietze.

They first met on the front porch of her home, he told the Dallas Morning News.

Later, she'd send flowers from her home garden to Lewis' wife. She visited his home once. Soon he found himself taking her on errands, helping her with some remodeling work and bringing her lunch.

One day over a cheese sandwich, she told him that she wanted him and his family to have something, Lewis said. She handed him a handwritten codicil to her will. She gave him and his family $150,000. He tried to give it back, he said, but she insisted.

Meanwhile, some of Mrs. Tietze's residential properties were red-tagged by the city as candidates for demolition due to disrepair.

Mrs. Tietze, whose wealth stemmed from inheritance and investments, died of a heart attack in June. She was living in a rooming house nearby, rent-free.

Her friends didn't know she was rich — 11 pieces of property, some residential, some warehouse buildings — valued on tax rolls at $1.5 million, plus another $3.5 million tucked away in various bank accounts around town.

How it's always been

You looked outside Wednesday — at the snow, ice and accidents in waiting — and, either out loud or in the dark recesses of your minds, wondered 'Why do I live in a place that's like this?'

Why do you?

Why aren't you in balmy Hawaii now, sipping frozen pina colodas and working on your December tan? Why isn't everyone?

I ask these questions because of a story that's been prominent in the local news lately.

M & M Cattle Company, and now Phillips Petroleum Company, have served eviction notices to the folks who live in Phillips to make room for expansion of the giant Borger oil refinery. The homeowners are fighting to stay, and I'm having a hard time figuring out why.

If you look at the geographical, environmental and commercial evidence, it seems the Phillips residents are behaving with extreme irrationality.

They live adjacent to an oil refinery that emits pollutants which stink up the air and leave a nasty black film on every car around. The plant explodes every once in a while, too.

Physically, Phillips is nothing to look at, and commercially it's next to nothing. Aside from the refinery, which makes up most of the Phillips Independent School District's tax base, the town has no business save a hamburger stand and an Allsup's. Phillips is no oasis of beauty, just a bunch of frame houses the company built and the school.

The school. That's why those people want to live in a place that's dirty, odorous and, shall we say, less-than-beautiful.

Phillips High School has a proud past but maybe no future. Before the U.I.L. put a stop to what was essentially the recruitment of high school athletes, Phillips was a Texas football power and Chesty Walker Stadium could once hold maybe 10,000 people, now-defunct end zone seats included. Even afterward, Jill and Debra Rankin grew up in Phillips and made the Lady Blackhaws state basketball powers. The townfolk were and still are proud of that.

Because of the huge tax base the refinery offers, the Phillips Independent School District has been able to build itself a nice educational complex, complete with a luxurious gymnasium (which moved on its foundation when the refinery exploded six years ago), and social life in the community has always revolved around the school.

On the pictures of each of Phillips' senior classes, the repetition of family surnames is profuse. Members of the family so-and-so have always gone to school and Phillips and their descendants are fighting to make sure that they forever will. It's called tradition.

Let's go to Merriam-Webster to see what tradition is.

'tradition: the process of handing down information, opinions, beliefs, and customs by word of mouth or by example; transmissions of knowledge and institutions through successive generations without written instruction,' or 'an inherited or established way of thinking, feeling, or doing; a cultural feature (as an attitude, belief, custom, institution) preserved or evolved from the past; usage or custom rooted in the past.'

Phillips came to be because, in the late '20s, Frank Phillips found oil and people needing jobs migrated there to work, and to live in the company camps near the job. Folks have been living there ever since, and they've become so accustomed to it that they can't bear the thought of not living beside the big refinery.

The threads of what every town is are woven on tradition and how the residents follow it. Some cities are progressing, some are adamantly clinging to the old ways, always because that's the way the residents want it. Cities are not brick, glass, concrete and wood. They're the people, and many times those people carry on beliefs without even knowing why.

I can relate because, though I can't stand the Texan stereotype — silly drawl, big stetson, jeans, boots, ego deluxe, exaggerated mannerisms and on — I'm still, by gosh, a Texan. What makes me so proud? Still, I don't mind moving and wherever I'm living is home.

A lot of folks aren't like that. Some live and die without ever leaving the big city. Some are buried outside their old country home. Is that the way they wanted it to be, or just the way things worked out?

I'm reminded of what The Dallas Times Herald's Skip Hollandsworth came back with when he was sent to cover the traditional Texas-OU football game. He wrote:

"Imitation is nine-tenths of our culture, and so once again the Texas and Oklahoma people trooped out to the Cotton Bowl, participating in the grand tradition because that is what they have always done, yelling, drinking beer, wearing ridiculously colored clothes and perpetuating a myth that, to be honest, they no longer understand.

"There are some things in life, inscrutable to mankind, that simply sustain themselves. And so it is with the Texas-OU weekend, which sways mankind as mysteriously as the sun moves the planets. Probably Shakespeare, or some other equally brainy bird, could figure it all out — but Saturday almost everyone milling around before the game responded in basically unintelligent tones, side-stepping the questions like bantamweights.

"Great spectacle. 'Great game.' 'We're going to find out which state is the best.'

"Not good enough."

And of what Springsteen said on his last tour:

"Look around you. This is your hometown."

Good luck to the residents of Phillips; may your wishes be granted. I only hope you're convinced they're worth it.

One-pound premature baby survives

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A 1-pound, 1-ounce premature baby born with only six tablespoons of blood has survived and gone home with her mother, officials at Medical Center Hospital say.

The infant was delivered Aug. 13 and is the smallest ever to be born and survive at the hospital, records show.

Teacher turned in notebook

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — A former school teacher accused of participating in an international drug-smuggling ring probably was lured to the drug trade because of easy money, a government agent said Thursday.

Juan Frank Garcia, 35, was one of 44 people named this week in a 109-page indictment alleging that the drug ring brought into the United States more than a quarter-million pounds of marijuana in the past five years.

Several of his family members, including a 79-year-old uncle, also are among those indicted.

Garcia is a former migrant school teacher and high school football booster who arranged to have topless dancers at a party for coaches. But he's also a convicted drug felon and an alleged abductor who is on the run.

"I don't know why John Frank Garcia got into this business, but probably for the profit ... and the excitement," said Ken Miley, a Drug Enforcement Administration agent in McAllen.

The indictment against Garcia and others grew out of a large-scale investigation called "Cash Crop."

The probe was instigated two years ago by the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force Program created by President Reagan to break up major narcotics rings.

The alleged drug ring was said to have started in 1980 and involved the importation of narcotics from Mexico into the Rio Grande Valley and other parts of the United States.

Garcia "was certainly in the upper echelon of the organization here in the Valley," Miley claimed.

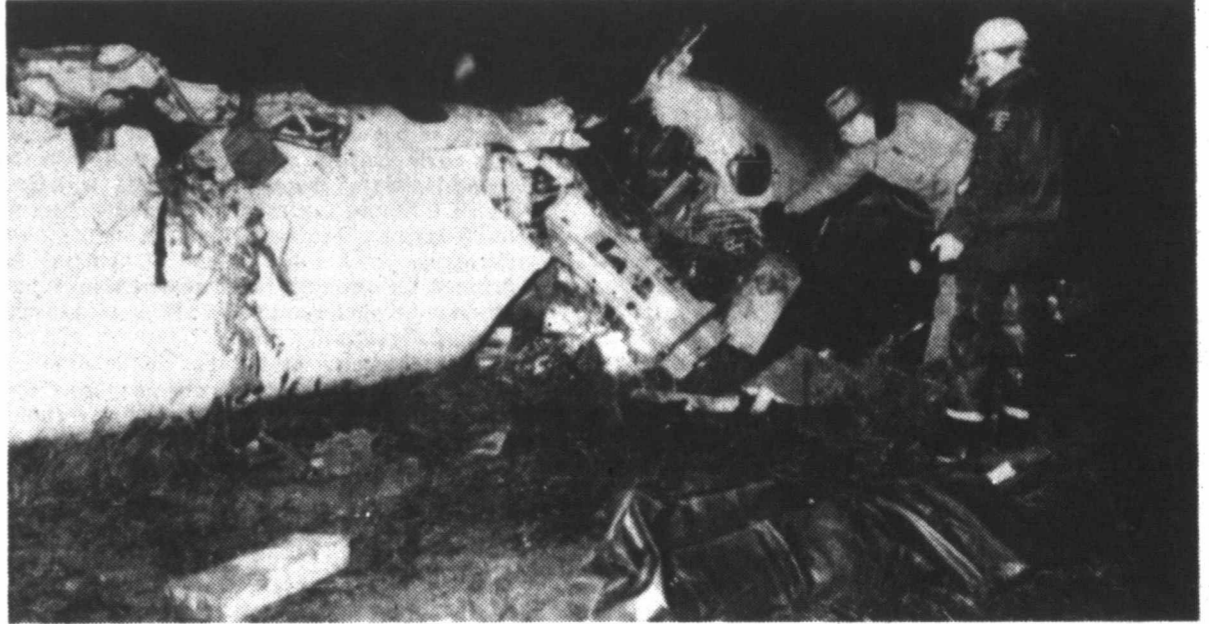

In 1983, Garcia had purchased a residence in Humble, Texas, for $383,000 in cash and had transferred the title to Ignacia Payan, the mother of Juan Jose Quintero-Payan, 37, and Emilio Quintero-Payan, 32.

The Payan brothers are uncles of Rafael "Caro" Quintero, the reputed Mexican drug kingpin who has been jailed in connection with the kidnapping and slaying of DEA agent Enrique Camarena.

The Payan brothers are accused of making large cash deposits in American banks and providing marijuana for Garcia.

Garcia and two others, Jose F. Muniz, 35, of McAllen, and James Fox, the former president of Metropolitan National Bank in McAllen, are accused of participating in the transactions.

Garcia and Muniz also are charged with conducting a continuing criminal enterprise and that they supervised aspects of the alleged drug trafficking operation.

FATAL PLANE CRASH — Officials examine the wreckage of a General Telephone and Electric twin engine jet that crashed after taking off from Easterwood Airport at College Station Thursday night. Two people were killed and a third is in serious condition at a College Station hospital. The plane apparently lost power on one engine and flipped over after take-off. (AP Laserphoto)

Courier aircraft explodes after takeoff, kills two

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — A LearJet crash that killed two people and injured another forced the closing of the Texas A&M University-owned airport because of debris scattered on the runway, a university spokesman says.

Shortly after takeoff at 7:21 p.m. Thursday, the Lear L-35, owned by GTE of the Southwest, caught fire and crashed, said Lane Stephenson, A&M spokesman.

The dead were identified as GTE pilot Jerry LaBoid, 43, of San Angelo and company engineer Susan O'Rear, 39, of San Angelo, said A. Beamer, Department of Public Safety spokeswoman in Bryan.

The pilot at the time of the crash, Wayne Melvin Short, 47, of Bedford was in guarded condition early today at St. Joseph's Hospital in Bryan where he was being treated for head and chest injuries, Beaman said.

LaBoid and Short were both licensed pilots, said Bob Wiatt, Texas A&M security director.

According to the sole witness to the accident, an airport attendant, "the plane had just reached takeoff speed and become airborne at about 20 to 30 feet when he heard a pop and then saw sparks from the rear of the plane."

Stephenson said airport attendant Doug Dunn, the witness, said sparks then created a fireball and what appeared to be an explosion.

The plane hit the ground and skidded a couple of hundred yards off the runway, crossing the airport field and into an open taxi area.

The Bryan Eagle reported that the jet's right engine had caught fire.

The jet was making a regular courier flight picking up corporate mail. It was en route to Houston Hobby Airport and then to San Angelo GTE headquarters, Stephenson said.

"There was no evidence that the plane was having any problems at all," said Wiatt.

Stephenson said the weather was "reasonably good" at the time of the crash and didn't seem to be a factor. It had been raining at times during the day at College Station Thursday, he said.

But wet and muddy fields hampered rescue attempts, the Bryan Eagle reported. An airport crash truck was stuck in the mud about 10 feet from the jet, the newspaper reported, and rescue vehicles couldn't get close to the jet because the L-35 had landed in a muddy field.

Man, 88, attacked by dog

CONROE, Texas (AP) — A retired machinist was hospitalized after he was attacked by a Doberman pinscher guard dog chained to a house near a salvage yard, authorities said.

Henry Miller, 88, of New Caney, was listed in satisfactory condition Thursday at the Veterans' Administration Medical Center.

He suffered puncture wounds to his ankles, feet, legs and arms after the Tuesday afternoon incident.

The dog that attacked Miller was chained to a house in front of an auto salvage yard.

The dog's owner, Ed Vanden, said the animal "was just doing his job. He was chained in my private yard and the man must have taken a shortcut through my yard to get to the salvage yard. He was talking to me about getting a gas tank and the next thing I know, my wife was beating the dog off of him."

Although Vanden has not asked that the animal be destroyed, Vanden's wife, Marlene, said she did not want the dog returned.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Today's teenagers not much different

If you've had more than enough of punk rock, colored hair and spiked leather, take heart. Rebellion is still big with American youth, but Twisted Sister isn't the top role model.

According to a national survey of 4,000 teenagers, they most prefer the irreverent style of actor Eddy Murphy.

Murphy, star of last year's movie "Beverly Hills Cop," often portrays characters who subversiveness shines through even when the authorities have the upper hand. For that, he topped the poll of teen-age heroes conducted by the "World Almanac and Book of Facts."

The results are a mixed bag of characters; it would be unfair — perhaps impossible — to draw coherent conclusions about why Sylvester Stallone barely outranks Clint Eastwood, and why Bill Cosby outranks them both. The top 10 are all entertainers (President Reagan, in second place, is the only possible exception.)

Teen heroes seem to be rated more on popularity than substance. But how often, in your teen-age years, did you characterize the election of class officers as a contest to find the most popular student in school instead of its best leader?

What is heartening is that everyone's mother finished in the No. 11 spot. Teenagers may be a little rebellious at times, but apparently they still appreciate mom's guiding hand. It's been that way for countless generations and it looks as if the tradition will continue.

Despite the publicity given to worries over the influence of MTV and video games, today's teens probably aren't much different than their forebears. Surprised? You needn't be.

We don't cherish freedom

Americans flatter themselves that they hold a principled belief in freedom. They don't. A principled belief in freedom says: "I like beer; you like marijuana. I'll let you have your joint if you'll let me have my drink." It acknowledges the reciprocal demands of a system of individual rights.

What Americans truly believe in is their right to do what pleases them. This belief says: "I'll have my drink, and you can't stop me because we drinkers have the votes. But let you get stoned? No way."

The only safe freedoms, with the possible exception of those enshrined in the Constitution, are those popular with the majority. A freedom whose exercise most people find morally offensive or aesthetically displeasing is one without a future. If Americans frown on a practice, they can rarely restrain themselves from using the law to discourage it. As the volume of drinking has declined, for example, the laws regulating it have grown more intolerant, and they threaten to grow more intolerant still.

In that respect, the trustees of the American Medical Association are no different from their fellow citizens. In proposing that the government forbid all advertisements for cigarettes, they are in lockstep with the prevailing mood, which has no use for tobacco.

If cigarettes are bad, the AMA's trustees reason, then cigarette advertisements are bad. And though it's impossible, at least now, to outlaw cigarettes, it may be possible to ban ads for them. That would merely expand the noxious prohibition on TV ads, inaugurated in 1971. A ban on all ads will provide a beachhead from which to launch further attacks on the liberty of smokers and tobacco companies.

The authors of this proposal which was approved this week by the AMA's House of Delegates, insist that it conforms to constitutional requirements, but they approach the First Amendment the way W.C. Fields approached the Bible — in search of loopholes, not inspiration.

They probably haven't found one big enough to admit this exception. The Supreme Court in recent years has given considerable protection to commercial speech, which once was relegated to oblivion. In 1976, it struck down a Virginia law forbidding pharmacists from advertising their prices for prescription drugs.

Its reasoning there applies equally well here. "What is at issue," the Court declared, "is whether a state may completely suppress the dissemination of concededly truthful information about entirely lawful activity, fearful of that information's effect upon its disseminators and its recipients." The answer was no. What the AMA's trustees want to ban is also truthful information about lawful activity, out of fear that its recipients be persuaded to buy cigarettes.

That is the sort of government action the First Amendment is supposed to prevent. If critics of smoking are worried about the persuasive powers of cigarette advertisers, they are free to combat it with ads of their own warning of tobacco's health hazards. They shouldn't shield adults from information that they may choose to act upon in a way that harms no one but themselves.

Of course, the anti-smoking crusaders say it does harm others, that society as a whole has to pay in the form of higher taxes and insurance premiums to repair the damage smokers do to themselves. Oh? "Society" is free to deny government-paid health care to those who recklessly endanger themselves. Non-smokers are likewise free to buy insurance from companies that provide discounts for those who spurn tobacco. This is not a reason to suppress smoking, only an excuse.

But the liberty of cigarette makers to advertise and of smokers to buy their products is bound up with the personal rights of others, including the right of groups like the AMA to proselytize against tobacco use. To deny either is to erode the foundation on which both rest. If the opponents of smoking get their way, they may not realize it, but they too will lose.

Standoff the only option

The dream of global disarmament is a worthy one.

The dream of global government — all of us pulling together — is a worthy one. It is what happens in practice that must give us pause.

The League of Nations and the United Nations have demonstrated that when your wagon is hitched to unbroken horses, you end up with a busted wagon and horses that are wilder than ever.

Presently, most of 100 of the United Nations nations are at war with themselves or with one another.

Europe was the cockpit of two world wars in this century. Europe, for 40 years, has been at peace.

Yes, some of Europe's nations are presently bedeviled by serious internal conflicts: Northern Ireland with its internecine strife, Spain with its Basques — and varying degrees of terrorism trouble Italy, West Germany, France, Belgium, Netherlands, Portugal, Corsica, Greece.

Warfare in Africa is a pandemic.

Ethiopia is fighting wars on two fronts. Chad's warlords have been at one another's throats for two decades, remain divided.

Morocco, Angola, Libya, Sudan, Somalia, Uganda, Zaire, Zimbabwe, Mozambique — you name it — Africa, top to bottom, is rife with strife.

Many, too many, of the world's many wars involve people killing people in the name of religion.

Notably, though certainly not exclusively in the Middle East the fighting in Israel and Lebanon, Syria and Turkey, Iran and Iraq and Kuwait is religion-related.

Big-guns war rages in Afghanistan and a Communist takeover of the Philippines is an increasing threat. India, Sri Lanka, Burma are involved in religious and/or ethnic internal fighting.

In the "peaceful South Pacific" there is no peace in New Guinea, New Caledonia, East Timor.

In our home hemisphere rebellion or border clashes bedevil Nicaragua, Honduras, Guatemala, El Salvador, Costa Rica, Colombia, Peru.

And while it is not rational to blame all the world's chronic chaos on Communists, Moscow does delight in throwing fuel on any fire which might blister us. The superpowers test their weapons in proxy wars.

The Chicago Tribune rolled back its reporters around the world one recent day and computed that in our present "world at peace" 41,000 people are being killed each month in some armed conflict.

Presently the eyes of the news are focused on superpower efforts to "rehabilitate the atom."

Probably there is no way to un-invent the big bomb and even if that might be accomplished, an undisciplined world could yet nibble itself to death.

Unless humankind miraculously reforms, an armed standoff with ultimate weapons seems to be some of us the only option affording even a measure of security.

Is liberalism on the decline in U.S.?

By William A. Rusher

National Review, the conservative journal of opinion of which I have had the honor to be publisher for most of my adult life, celebrated its 30th birthday recently with a posh dinner party at New York's Plaza Hotel. It was a glittering affair, and inspired in me, as such things tend to do, mellow reflections about how the wheel of fortune turns.

For example, shortly after I became National Review's publisher in 1957, Bill Buckley (then and now its owner and editor) suggested that I approach Gil Harrison, the editor of The New Republic, our opposite number on the liberal side of the spectrum, about offering special joint subscriptions to the two publications to college and high school political science classes — the idea being to expose students to both liberal and conservative views on public issues, while improving our two magazines' circulation figures.

At the time, however, The New Republic had been around for about 40 years, whereas National Review was barely 2 years old, and it soon became apparent that Harrison was in no mood to yoke his venerable journal with some parvenu right-wing sheet, even for purposes of contrast. So he declined my proposal, and suggested instead that I inquire whether I.F. Stone's Weekly, a much smaller and further left publication, might be inclined to accept it. (I didn't bother — we have our pride, too.)

A decade further on, under new management, The New Republic had gotten off its high horse and cheerfully entered into an arrangement with National Review to offer a 10 percent discount to any advertiser who would buy space in both publications (thereby avoiding charges of political bias). Apparently those 10 years had cured National Review of its leprosy.

Another example. In 1955, when Buckley founded National Review, "liberal" was the thing to be in American political circles. The word "conservative," as a designation for a contemporary political viewpoint, let alone movement, was very much out of fashion. It had sometimes been applied to Sen. Robert Taft (who died in 1953) and Lionel Trilling was not far off the mark when he wrote, in 1950, that "In the United States at this time liberalism is not only the dominant but even the sole intellectual tradition. For it is the plain fact that there are no conservative or reactionary ideas in general circulation."

Contrast that with the results of a poll conducted for The New York Times and CBS News in early November this year and subsequently reported in the Times under the headline "A Liberal by Any Other Name May Get More Votes." Asking 1,659 adults, by telephone, whether various political labels would make them think better or worse of a public figure, the pollsters discovered that 27 percent would think better of a person described as "conservative" and only 13 percent would think worse of him. Just 15 percent, however, would think better of a public figure described as "liberal," and a slightly larger group (17 percent) would actually think worse of him.

This, it seems to me, is an extraordinary turnaround, and while its principal cause is undoubtedly liberalism's own sorry performance over the past 35 years, National Review indisputably played a part in spotlighting that performance and identifying its perpetrators.

Incidentally, two labels that also fared well in the poll were "moderate" (21 percent of those interviewed would think better of someone so described; only 6 percent worse) and "progressive" (37 percent better; 7 percent worse). Clearly, the thing for a politician to be these days is a moderately conservative progressive, or just possibly a moderately progressive conservative. But never, under any circumstances, a liberal.

By the way, the most distinguished guest and chief speaker at National Review's birthday party was the (conservative) president of the United States. I didn't see Gil Harrison anywhere around.

Relatives keep alive 'glimmer of hope'

FORT CAMPBELL, Ky. (AP) — Friends and relatives, stunned by reports their loved ones were among 250 soldiers killed in a fiery airplane crash in Canada, "are holding on to a glimmer of hope" as they wait for officials to identify the victims.

A team of officers from the 101st Airborne Division resumed the somber task today of visiting next-of-kin who live on or near the U.S. Army base, said Maj. James Gleisberg, the division's public information officer.

"No one has been officially notified of a death," Gleisberg said Thursday. "But they have been notified that we believe their relatives were on the aircraft and possibly have been killed."

The formal notifications will not be made until authorities use medical records to identify the bodies — probably sometime next week after the charred remains are transferred to Dover Air Force Base in Delaware, Gleisberg said.

"The relatives are holding on to a glimmer of hope," he said.

Cindy Ivy said her husband, Cpl. Herbert Guy Ivy, called her Tuesday from Egypt to wish her a happy fourth wedding anniversary.

"Nothing has really been confirmed," she said, brushing away a tear.

The 21,000-soldier base, straddling the Tennessee-Kentucky border, awoke to the news Thursday that comrades were killed when a chartered DC-8 jet crashed after takeoff at Gander International Airport in Newfoundland.

The soldiers were returning from a peacekeeping mission in the Sinai Peninsula, where they helped operate checkpoints and make reconnaissance patrols in the Middle East.

A band and choir concert of Christmas music went on as scheduled Thursday night in tribute to the dead, but only about 100 people attended.

Col. Bernard F. Nass, Army chaplain, dedicated the concert "to the memory of our fallen comrades."

"The events of this day have certainly had an impact on our performance as well as on the audience. Life is always surrounded by the mist of death, but life goes on."

A homecoming celebration planned Thursday morning was shattered as families and friends mourned the crash that officials say caused more deaths in one day than the division had ever suffered in combat in World War II and Vietnam.

"We have suffered a tragic loss that will be everlasting, and our hearts go out to the families and loved ones of these brave soldiers who were on their way home from the peacekeeping mission in the Sinai," Maj. Gen. Burton D. Patrick, the base commander, said Thursday.

"They did a magnificent job. Their mission was flawless. For six months there, they kept the peace. Then by some quirk of fate, some plane falls from the sky and 250 soldiers are dead," Patrick said.

An Army chaplain telephoned his wife from Newfoundland to say how much he was looking forward to coming home for Christmas and cut the conversation short because he had to board his plane for Fort Campbell, Ky.

Minutes later, the Arrow Air plane crashed and exploded near Gander International Airport, and Maj. Troy Carter, 41, was believed to be among the 250 members of the Army's 101st Airborne Division and eight crewmembers who died.

"He believed in being a chaplain that was with the people in the field," Carter's brother, Gary, said of the major, who joined the Army eight years ago after four years as a missionary in the Philippines.

The Pentagon today began releasing the names of those on the flight's passenger manifest, but said it would be several days before all the victims were identified.

Witt's wife, Cathy, and 2-year-old daughter were to return with him to Minnesota for Christmas, she said. They had planned to meet him when the jet landed at the division's Kentucky headquarters.

Farah Karadsheh of Warren, Mich., a Detroit suburb, said he received notification from Fort Campbell that his son, Sgt. Ibrahim Karadsheh, 25, was listed on the manifest.

he would be returning from the Middle East aboard the flight on Thursday.

"It may be two days before the remains are identified," Long said. "I know he was scheduled to come back today, I know he was manifested on that plane. But the officials have not confirmed that he was aboard the plane."

In Minnesota, KSTP-TV reported Thursday night that Nicole Kidd of St. Paul had been awaiting the arrival of her husband.

"The only way that he wouldn't have been on the airplane is if the Army screwed up in the passenger list, and that's very unlikely,"

Mechanic: earlier problems with the DC-8 that crashed

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A mechanic who says he worked on the jet that crashed in Newfoundland, killing all 258 people aboard, says he wouldn't sign a maintenance log last summer because he thought the plane was unsafe.

"The particular aircraft was in pretty poor shape at the time," said Randy Stirm, who said he was working for ServAir, a maintenance subcontractor, when he worked on the four-engine Arrow Air DC-8 at McChord Air Force Base in Tacoma, Wash.

Stirm, now employed by Pacific Southwest Airlines, said the plane was experiencing compression stalls in its No. 3 engine, caused by malfunctioning bleeding valves. The condition can cause a buildup of fuel and result in an engine explosion in flight, Stirm said.

The plane crashed early Thursday seconds after takeoff from Gander International Airport, killing 250 U.S. servicemen and eight civilian crew members. The cause of the crash has not been determined, but Canadian transport ministry officials have said the plane appeared to have exploded after hitting the ground rather than in the air.

Stirm said he called the Federal Aviation Administration on Thursday and confirmed that the plane was the same one he had worked on on July 31. An FAA official in Miami told the San Diego Tribune that Stirm contacted the agency to talk about the plane's earlier condition.

Stirm said two Arrow Air mechanics tried to correct the engine problem with new valves in July but didn't change a malfunctioning in-line filter, which can lead to fuel buildup in the engine.

He said he added 10 quarts of oil to the engines and instructed the Arrow Air mechanics how to replace the valves, but he refused to add his name to the maintenance log.

"The plane was in such bad condition that I didn't want the responsibility of putting my name in the log," he said.

He also said the plane had other problems, including missing cowling rivets and dents in the engine intake.

He said he tried to get an FAA representative to check his allegations last summer, but none came. An FAA representative in San Diego said normal agency procedure is to rely on certified mechanics to correct aircraft problems.

An Arrow Air official said the company had no knowledge of the engine problems and refused to comment on Stirm's allegations.

Arrow Air had number of past violations of safety

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arrow Air, owner of the DC-8 that crashed in Newfoundland killing 258 people, has had a number of safety violations in its four years of operation and last summer agreed to pay a $34,000 fine, according to federal documents.

But the Federal Aviation Administration said a detailed inspection of the Miami-based airline in early 1984, during which many of the improper procedures were uncovered, also revealed a new management team with "a strong desire" to correct the problems.

A spokesman for the airline, Robin Mattel, said Thursday the improper practices cited by the FAA in its in-depth investigation have been resolved and that the airline has had an "excellent" safety record. Prior to the crash early Thursday, in which 250 U.S. soldiers and eight crew members were killed, the airline had not had a fatal accident.

But Arrow Air, founded by George Batchelor, a longtime southern Florida aviation entrepreneur, has had a checkered past. Shortly after it began carrying passengers in 1982, after a year of flying only cargo, it began a rapid expansion program.

The expansion was so fast, the FAA concluded, that the airline put new planes into service "without revising company manuals" including operational, training and maintenance manuals.

Investigators found that the Arrow Air's record-keeping and internal inspection programs also did not keep pace, resulting in a series of enforcement actions that led to the settlement last June in which the airline agreed to pay a fine of $15,000 immediately and another $19,000 in monthly increments of $2,000.

During the FAA's nationwide "white gloves" inspection of more than 400 airlines in early 1984, Arrow Air was singled out as one of 16 air carriers that needed to be more closely examined.

The special team of FAA inspectors, according to documents made public Thursday, noted that the airline was in a period of transition and urged FAA inspectors assigned to the carrier to increase their surveillance.

A WHITE HOUSE CHRISTMAS — The National Christmas tree glows in the Ellipse near the White House Thursday evening after President Reagan pushed the button to turn on the lights.

Reagan lights national tree

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, officially launching the holiday season with the lighting of the national Christmas tree, used the occasion to urge Americans to unite as a family and reach out to the persecuted.

The president, standing with his wife Nancy at the White House south entrance, pushed the button on a switchbox that lit up the 30-foot Colorado spruce several hundred yards down a slope on the grassy Ellipse. A crowd estimated at 12,500 cheered Thursday as the tree's ornaments twinkled red and gold for the conclusion of the evening's "1985 Christmas Pageant of Peace."

Before lighting the tree, Reagan delivered a short speech about the gift-giving spirit of the holiday, inspired by the "pure, perfect and sure" generosity of God.

"If each of us could give but a fraction to one another of what He gave to the whole human family, how many hearts could heal, how much sorrow and pain could be driven away," the president said as his wife Nancy stood at his side with her new dog, Rex, clutched to her bright red coat.

The tree lighting, a 61-year-old presidential tradition, and Reagan's message capped an outdoor ceremony that featured Christmas carols and old favorites.

San Angelo girl gets wish to meet country singer

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Cynthia Hernandez may suffer from a malignant brain tumor that impairs her hearing, but she hears well enough to enjoy the tunes of Kenny Rogers and dreams of meeting the entertainer.

On Saturday, the 11-year-old girl will meet the man of her dreams.

"I'm going to get up there and kiss him, even if his wife is there. Then I'm going to faint," Cynthia said.

The little girl's dream of meeting Rogers was arranged by the Make-A-Wish Foundation of West Texas Inc., which grants special wishes to children with terminal illnesses.

The foundation has planned for Cynthia, her mother Estella Hernandez, her sister Tina, her uncle and his son to fly to Fort Myers, Fla., where Rogers will appear in concert.

The talkative, brown-eyed child can hardly wait.

"I'm going to ask him (Rogers) if I can sing with him since I know all his songs," she said.

Cynthia has loved Kenny Rogers all her life, according to her mother. She has two of his albums and two tapes. She collects his pictures and pastes them on the wall. Mrs. Hernandez said. Cynthia's favorite song is Rogers' "Islands in the Stream."

"When we get there, I'm going to ask Kenny Rogers to go out with me," the girl said.

The airline, the motel and the concert tickets were donated. The foundation will provide money for incidentals. Rogers provided Cynthia's backstage pass.

M.L. Leddy and Country Elegance Plus donated a vacation wardrobe for Cynthia, including new boots and a custom belt with her name tooled into the leather.

The trip to Florida will include another first for Cynthia. She has never seen the ocean.

"I'm not going swimming. I'm going to get a suntan," she told the San Angelo Standard-Times.

The brain tumor was discovered when Cynthia was 5. She has had three operations since. She wears a helmet, covered with cheerful tags and stickers, to protect her head where a portion of the skull was removed.

Church schedules musical on Christ

"Noel, Jesus Is Born" will be presented by candlelight at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Spirit of Truth Church, 1421A N. Hobart, by Alive Christian Ministries of Amarillo.

Under the direction of Ted and Jean Hunt, this original music text is written by Lanny Wolfe and arranged by Don Marsh and Bob Benson.

Co-pastors Henry Veach and Mark Zedlitz said the production appeals to all ages.

Crystal Butler will narrate. Soloists include Ted Hunt, Sharon Thomas, Wayne Edwards, Jean Hunt, Jackie Butler and Michelle Edwards.

The pastors invited the public to attend the free performance in celebration of Christ's birth.

Banquet rescheduled

The Sunshine Club banquet at First Baptist Church has been rescheduled for Sunday at 12 noon in the Fellowship Hall.

The banquet had originally been scheduled for Tuesday night, but it was cancelled due to the bad weather.

Those attending the banquet are asked to bring a covered dish for the Sunday luncheon.

White, comptroller: crude price drop not devastating

AUSTIN (AP) — The decision by OPEC ministers to let oil prices fall below current levels shouldn't dramatically affect Texas' oil and gas severance tax revenues, state officials say.

Gov. Mark White told his Thursday news conference that the price reductions still are higher than the estimates used in preparing the current state government budget.

"I don't think there's anything to be alarmed (about) at this time," White said.

Sunday, members of the Organization of Petroleum

Exporting Countries agreed to abandon attempts to control world oil prices through cuts in production.

The 13-nation group also decided to give up its defense of the current $28 per barrel price, instead seeking to protect a share of the world market but cutting its prices.

Dale Craymer, director of revenue estimates for the state comptroller's office, said the action was expected.

"We realize that OPEC has some very basic problems, and that was reflected and is reflected in our own price forecasts," he said.

Bonner to enter hospital Tuesday for tests

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Soviet dissident Yelena Bonner will enter a hospital next week for coronary artery tests to find where the blood vessel is blocked, her doctor says.

Mrs. Bonner, the 62-year-old wife of Nobel Peace Prize winner Andrei Sakharov, had a heart attack in April 1983 and an electrocardiogram showed minor heart damage from an earlier episode. Dr. Adolph Hutter, director of Massachusetts General Hospital's coronary care unit, said Thursday.

Mrs. Bonner, meanwhile, telephoned her husband Thursday and the two reassured each other about their health, her daughter, Tatiana Yankelevich, said.

Mrs. Yankelevich blamed Soviet officials for static on the line that she said was caused by jamming.

The call was jammed when Mrs. Bonner tried to warn Sakharov that he was being secretly filmed, said Mrs. Yankelevich, who lives in this Boston suburb.

The jamming, a long, steady noise, occurred about 10 minutes into the conversation, the first between the two since Mrs. Bonner left the Soviet Union on a temporary visa for medical treatment in the West, Mrs.

Yankelevich said.

"She told him she met with the prime minister of Italy and with the pope (last week before flying to the United States) and that she saw films (made in 1984 and 1985) shot with hidden cameras," Mrs. Yankelevich said.

"Immediately, the interference on the line began," Mrs. Yankelevich said.

Mrs. Bonner, who has said that a condition of her visa was to refrain from talking to the news media, did not meet with reporters, but her daughter played a recording of the conversation to show when the interference came on the line.

Time turns backwards at abandoned town

EDITOR'S NOTE — A trip to Bodie, Calif., an old gold mining camp in a high desert near the Nevada border, turns the calendar back a century. The miners, gamblers and prostitutes are gone, but they left many of their belongings behind.

By STEVE LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

BODIE, Calif. (AP) — Russ Guiney strolls along the wooden sidewalk, past weather-beaten buildings and old freight wagons in what was once one of the toughest towns in the West. Sunlight sparkles off his badge and his arm brushes the pistol on his hip. But Guiney, 35, is not on his way to a showdown with a gunslinger. He's the top lawman in Bodie today, but his duties as state park ranger are primarily to watch out for light-fingered tourists, assess the sag of the aging buildings and run off stray cows. A minister a century ago called this old gold mining camp "a sea of sin, lashed by the tempests of lust and passion." The miners, gamblers, gunmen, vigilantes and prostitutes who made Bodie notorious are gone, but the tales of their lives and a surprising number of the town's buildings and furnishings remain.

"I talked to a guy who has been to 200 ghost towns and he said this is the best," Guiney says, surveying Main Street, once a solid mile of one-and two-story frame and brick buildings. Bodie is located near the California-Nevada border in a small valley on the high desert, just east of Yosemite National Park. It's 13 miles from Highway 395 via a road that's paved for 10 miles, then becomes dirt, rocks and holes for the final three. In its heyday in the late 1870s and 1880s the town had more than 10,000 residents, 65 saloons, 30 mines, a Chinatown and a busy red-light district.

Today only about 170 structures remain. Major fires in 1892 and 1932 destroyed much of the town's business district. There is still a treasure trove of furniture, clothing, merchandise and tools left behind by the original residents. There are a pipe organ, pews and a wood-burning stove in the Methodist Church, built in 1878-79. But an oilcloth inscribed with The Ten Commandments is gone — stolen. Old beds, clothing, magazines, dishes, tables and rocking chairs litter many of the houses. "All of the things were left here," Guiney says. "People's jobs ran out with the mines. They didn't have a lot of money. It was cheaper to leave things and buy new things later." Essays from former students are pinned to a board near one of the school's windows. One, by a boy named Victor Cain, decided that girls of his day had an equal chance with boys to become famous. Another observed that "Bodie isn't much of a town but us kids like it." More than 100,000 people a year visit the old town to walk the streets, peek in windows and inspect the few buildings that are open. The park is open to visitors year round, but heavy snows during the winter at Bodie's

8,375-foot elevation make it reachable only by snowmobiles or cross-country skis. The town is named after Waterman S. Body, who discovered gold in the area in 1859. An illiterate sign painter is sometimes blamed for the change in spelling to Bodie, but state officials say the switch was made by Bodie residents to ensure proper pronunciation of the town's name. Some mining activity continued in Bodie until World War II. The Standard Mill, built around the turn of the century to replace one destroyed by fire, still looms over the town, but it is off limits to visitors.

Special master named in no pass, no play lawsuit

HOUSTON (AP) — A South Texas School of Law professor will be the special master determining the effects of the controversial no pass, no play law that bars failing students from participating in extracurricular activities. Gerald Treece, 40, was named by State District Judge Marsha Anthony, who is considering a lawsuit challenging no pass, no play. "It might be like being named the fattest horse in the glue factory," Treece said. "It's nice that I'm well thought of, but it's going to be a lot of work." Treece's appointment came despite the sentiment from the lead attorney for the plaintiffs in the suit that a special master was no longer necessary. Anthony Sheppard said the state was provided information previously withheld from him and the special master was not really needed.

However, he said Treece's appointment would have positive impact on his case, which accuses the no pass, no play law of discriminating against minority and handicapped children because they have higher failure rates than white students. "We will have more evidence before the court when he finishes," Sheppard said. Treece said Wednesday his appointment was unexpected, but because the case deals with constitutional law, he was "deeply interested." "And if I can serve, I will serve," he said. Treece said he hoped to provide a report to the court as early as February. Ms. Anthony ruled earlier this year that the no pass, no play provision of the state's tougher education code was unconstitutional, but the Texas Supreme Court overruled her.

Professor says poisonous poinsettia false belief

LUBBOCK — The Christmas poinsettia is believed by many people to be poisonous, a belief a Texas Tech University professor says is totally false.

Marihelen Kamp, of the plant and soil sciences department, said the poinsettia earned its unjust reputation in 1919 when unsubstantiated stories spread about a two-year-old child dying after eating a poinsettia leaf.

"Those stories were totally without substantiated medical or scientific fact," Kamp said. "It's really too bad because those stories scared many people into believing the plants were poisonous to humans and pets, a fear that still exists today."

Kamp said the Society of American Florists, a national trade association, collaborated with researchers at Ohio State University to determine the toxicity of poinsettias.

"That study found that rats, when given unusually high doses of various portions of the poinsettia, showed no mortality, no symptoms of toxicity and no changes in dietary intake or general behavior patterns," she said.

Kamp said she believes that Ohio State study done in 1971 effectively disputes the old wives tale that poinsettias are harmful to humans and animals.

As further proof, Kamp cites figures from the Poison Control Center of the Food and Drug Administration that show that in 1974, the most recent figures available, not a single human being was hospitalized and no one died as a result of ingesting parts of any plant sold by commercial florists in the nation, including poinsettias.

The poinsettia has gained a special place in the Christmas decorations of many homes and churches, Kamp said. In 1975, approximately 25 million poinsettia plants were bought by Americans.

The plant derives its name from Joel R. Poinsett, the American ambassador to Mexico in 1851, who introduced the flaming scarlet leafed plant to the U.S.

Kamp said the poinsettia plants available in the U.S. are cultivated and grown in greenhouses and, because of concentrated plant breeding and selections, are hardy plants.

"While most people think of poinsettias as having bright scarlet colored leaves, they are also available in white and pink," she said.

People should remember that poinsettias are green plants with long-lived colored leaves and golden yellow flowers, she said. To increase the life span of the plant,

Kamp suggests the following:
—Place the plant in a room with sufficient natural light to read fine print.

—Avoid any drafts or excess heat from appliances, radiators and ventilating ducts.

—Select a place to put the plant which is up and out of the traffic and away from unmonitored children and pets.

—Put the plant in a water-proof container to protect furnishings.

—Water the plant thoroughly when the soil is dry to the touch and always discard excess water.

—Ideal temperatures should never exceed 72 degrees during the day or 60 degrees during the night

Makin' Things

Quilted stuffed animals

By STEVIE BALDWIN

To our family, one of the best things about Christmas is making new decorations, ornaments and gifts.

This year I decided to go ahead and use the antique quilts that had been in storage for so long, unseen and unappreciated because they no longer were sturdy enough to use as bed clothes. It took some heavy gritting of teeth, but I cut into them to make these stuffed ornaments and decorations.

Now portions of those treasured quilts are on display for all to see, not only at Christmas time but throughout the year! The best part is you can make items like these even if you don't have any antique quilts awaiting their second life in the sun. They can be made from new fabric just as well.

This year's designs include a very huggable teddy bear, a chubby little bunny, two different doves, a chicken and a small heart. The birds can be used as tree ornaments, gift decorations or window hangings. The hearts can be used individually in those same ways, or you can assemble several to form a wreath.

To make one of the dove ornaments, you'll need a 5x9-inch piece of fabric for the front and another for the back. You can make it the same on front and back, or use different fabrics. I used the antique quilt material and unbleached muslin.

Additional materials are optional — I used a length of decorative narrow ribbon to tie around the dove's neck, and a holly leaf and berry.

The dove is easy to assemble. Cut identical front and back pieces from the fabric or fabrics you have chosen. Make them 1/2 inch larger all the way around than you want the finished bird to be.

Place them right sides together and stitch a 1/2-inch wide seam all the way around the outer edges, leaving an opening about two inches long at the bottom. Clip the curves and corners and turn right side out. Press the seam allowances to the inside along the edges of the opening.

Stuff with fiberfill, but not too tightly, and blindstitch the opening edges together. To create a more dimensional look, you can soft-sculpt detail features such as wing or feather outlines. To do this, simply stitch by hand or machine through both layers and the stuffing.

Finally, add whatever decoration you like: a ribbon tied around the neck, a tiny button eye, etc. I made a hanging loop from gold thread.

Our detailed, illustrated plans for the quilted stuffed animals include full-size patterns for all six designs, plus complete step-by-step instructions and a section of sewing tips and techniques. If you would like to order the plans, just specify Project No. 1574-3 and send $4.95.

Also available are our plans for a winter vest and tam ensemble which can be made from antique or new quilted fabric or from fleece with candlewick decoration. Specify Project No. 1562-2; also $4.95.

Mail your order to Makin' Things, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla., 74008.

Dear Abby

Principal's immodest proposal draws sympathy for students

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I sympathize with the student signed "Upset in Elk River" whose principal announced that he was going to remove all the doors from the compartments in the girls' lavatory because some girls had been smoking there.

It's been nearly 50 years since I entered first grade in a one-building Southern school, where I had to share a large restroom with girls from elementary, junior and high school grades combined.

I was from a farm and had been more or less isolated from other children and was doubly shy. The pain of embarrassment was far worse than the physical discomfort I suffered from avoiding going down to that basement bathroom with no partitions. I hated school for that one reason.

Thanks for printing that letter, Abby. I hope the principal in Elk River changes his mind and considers the girls' right to privacy. After all, the few girls who smoked in the lavatory will find somewhere else to smoke. But modesty, even that of one student, should be preserved if possible. There seems to be so little of it left in the world.

ALSO CONCERNED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ALSO: Hear, hear! Another Californian suggested that the principal leave the lavatory doors alone and install smoke alarms in the girls' restroom instead. Great idea. Where there's smoke there will either be fire—or somebody smoking.

DEAR ABBY: Not too long ago you had a piece in your column about which came first, the chicken or the egg, and you ended up by saying that the egg came first—and it came from a reptile!

Well, I used to love eggs and ate two every morning for breakfast, but now I am unable to eat eggs because I hate reptiles.

I am so sorry you put that in your column, Abby. Just the thought of eating reptile eggs turns my stomach!

NO MORE EGGS IN FORT DODGE, IOWA

DEAR NO MORE: I did not mean to imply that the eggs we eat today come from reptiles; I was referring to the process of evolution that began millions of years ago.

The eggs you enjoyed were from hens—not reptiles. I hope this settles your stomach because food phobias are no yolk.

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing this while waiting for my husband to finish shaving and join me for breakfast.

About five minutes ago, I glanced out the window and saw 10 or 12 men exiting from a large van. They were nicely dressed, all carried briefcases, and were obviously a crew of salesmen. Within minutes my doorbell rang. I ignored it. My husband heard it and shouted, "Will you please get the door!" I yelled back, "It's some salesman; besides, I never answer the door unless I'm expecting someone."

He became very impatient with me and said, "What's the harm in answering the door and finding out what the salesman is selling?"

I told him I felt no obligation to listen to strangers who want to sell me something. He insisted I could always say no. Abby, this has happened several times in our 40-year marriage. I feel that this is my home and I don't have to open my door to every person who pushes my doorbell. What is your opinion?

JANE IN GREENVILLE, TEXAS

DEAR JANE: Same as yours. It's a wise woman who realizes that she's no match for high-pressure, fast-talking salespeople. I admire their talent, but I wouldn't want to pit my resistance against their persistence.

Gena on Genealogy

By GENA WALLS

Traditions vary with each family and are often influenced by area and ethnic background. These events add character to our families and should be included in genealogy to prevent it just being names on a lineage chart.

THANK YOU to readers who sent their holiday traditions. With Christmas two weeks away you might have time to implement some of them for your own family.

—Cookie exchanges seem to be a favorite way to get together with friends. Most indicate the amount of cookies to bring and the recipe along with a container for the ones to be shared. One reader suggested boxing the cookies and sending them to military personnel overseas or donating them to a charitable food source.

—A different twist to the cookie exchange is the "bake-a-thon" where your favorite holiday treat is prepared for the oven and taken to the hostess ready to be placed in the oven. Distribution can be made after sampling — if you have any left!

—Children enjoy different things at Christmas. Several readers sent traditions especially for the youngest family members. Each year, have a special ornament for each child, one that is made or purchased and belongs to the person, not the family tree. When taking the tree down, tag the ornament or box it in a separate box for next year. When your child reaches the time that Christmas is no longer spent with you, the perfect gift is ready, complete with memories of past years together.

—Needle crafters might want to start a Christmas cloth by having all visitors sign the cloth and after the holidays embroider the signatures making them permanent for the following years.

—Decorate the tree with peppermint canes and invite your guests to take one.

—Ornament exchange parties or gift exchanges are popular in some areas.

You might not realize that you have a family tradition because it is something that you do every year from habit. Think about your holiday and write down your customs. Start a tradition!

Boy invents better bicycle

By BOBBY BURNLEY
Sulphur Springs News-Telegram

SULPHUR SPRINGS, Texas (AP) — The old saying goes, "Build a better mousetrap, and the world will beat a path to your door." But if you build a better bicycle, will the world also hasten to knock down your door?

No, says Shane Clayton, but interest is trickling in.

Clayton, a Sulphur Springs eighth-grader, recently put the finishing touches on a revolutionary new bicycle that is 8½-feet long and uses the rider's body as an aerodynamic shield.

The handlebars and peddles are designed so that the rider leans back in the chair-like seat, making the bicycle more aerodynamic than when a rider hunches over the handlebars, said the inventor, the son of Danny and Elaine Clayton.

"You kind of lay back on it, and it's easier," Clayton explained. "On my bike, you use your back, your arms and your legs because of the way you sit on the bike. On a regular bike, you just use your legs."

Clayton, who runs his own bicycle repair shop in a shed behind his house, said the idea for the bicycle just came to him because of his cycling experience.

"I got the idea just from myself really," he said. "I've been cyclist all of my life."

His experience dates to the age of 7, when he started "tearing apart bikes." Learning the detailed workings of the two-wheeled creatures at such an early age made it possible for him to piece together in his mind the structure of his new bicycle, and then transfer that idea into a metal reality, he said.

The bike uses four regular chains put together — 901 links — and is a three-bicycle conglomeration. "All of the bike is alloy, except for two bars, which are steel," Clayton said. One of the bikes that went into manufacturing of the prototype was his own racing bicycle.

"I used to do a lot of racing but not any more since I used my racing bike to make this one. But this one is faster than a regular 10-speed, anyway."

He raced a conventional 10-speed once, he said, and although the regular bike led him at the start, Clayton said he breezed past the conventional cycle near the end of the race.

The energetic 15-year-old said that although he hasn't gotten an opinion from a large bicycle manufacturer, he has been offered $600 for his prototype from a local resident.

"I turned that down," he said. "My dad and I were talking about making some more, but I would like to see what the bicycle shops have to say."

Designing the bike was no quick process. Clayton said it took six months to design it and get the parts together. Clayton's friend, Pete Gregory, welded the pieces together.

"We spent a couple of hours in the garage and then he brought it in the next day," Clayton said. "I just told him where I wanted everything."

The end result is sort of a two-wheeled Cadillac — a long and low, laid-back riding machine. Although his invention looks difficult to steer, Clayton said he has had no problems with the steering, the elongated chain or any other bicycle part.

"I made it about five weeks ago," he said, "and everything is just fine with it. I haven't had any problems."

But he has had to make a variation. Originally, the bike had two brakes: one for the back wheel and one for the front wheel. Clayton, however, took the back brake off when he found it inconvenient. He added that he plans to redesign the brake and put it back on.

Exam shows Lucas sane

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — An El Paso psychologist says his findings confirm one thing convicted killer Henry Lee Lucas has said all along:

"I'm not crazy." Based on tests and an interview with Lucas last week, El Paso psychologist Randolph H. Whitworth said he considers Lucas "completely competent to stand trial" and is not now nor was he at the time of the alleged offense legally insane.

Lucas is in the El Paso County Jail awaiting trial on charges that he killed 72-year-old Librada Apodaca 2½ years ago. At one time, Lucas confessed to that slaying along with about 600 others. He recanted those confessions last spring.

In May, psychologists from Waco and the Texas Department of Corrections evaluated Lucas and reported that "his story is strange, but believable ... he is telling the truth — at last."

State District Judge Brunson Moore ordered the evaluation to make sure Lucas is competent to stand trial.

Tobacco Road not like it was

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — If Jeeter Lester were to return to Tobacco Road, the only thing he'd recognize would be the skinny pine trees and red clay banks which line the highway.

Lester, a poor sharecropper, and his family — wife Ada, daughters Pearl and Ellie May and son Dude — are the bleak characters in Erskine Caldwell's "Tobacco Road," which painted a scathing picture of ignorant and amoral sharecroppers during the Depression.

The novel, set in east Georgia, shocked and embarrassed residents of the Augusta area when it was published 53 years ago.

Although there is a Tobacco Road in Richmond County, some Augusta residents insist that Caldwell wrote the novel based on his memories of Wrens in Jefferson County, a farming community southwest of Augusta, where Caldwell lived as a youth.

Others believe Caldwell was writing about farmers in Burke County, located on Richmond County's southeast border.

"He located that book on Tobacco Road, but it could have been about people anywhere," said Augusta attorney Glenn Nixon, whose family has owned property along Tobacco Road since the 1920s. "Some of the things Caldwell refers to in the book were owned by my family."

Tobacco Road, now anchored in southwest Richmond County by Bush Field Airport on one end and Fort Gordon, a U.S. Army base, at the other, has changed drastically since Jeeter Lester made futile attempts to grow cotton on his small farm. The only reminders of the area's agricultural past, a John Deere tractor dealership and a "Sher-cropper" Restaurant, are being squeezed out by several middle-income housing developments, 11 churches and several small factories.

Even two small boys playing with a puppy in front of one of the few ramshackle houses visible from the road were wearing designer sport shirts.

"They've torn down all the old shacks and really changed this place," said Robert Brady, a Boston native and Army veteran who has operated White Feather Farm on Tobacco Road for 30 years. "The small farms are gone. But Caldwell was talking about Burke County, anyway."

Margaret Twigg, a lifelong Augusta resident, said the area has changed drastically since the road was developed by farmers who rolled barrels of tobacco from Wilkes County to the docks along the Savannah River.

"That book was a slap in the face to Augusta, even though he wrote about Wrens," she said of Caldwell's graphic descriptions of the Lesters' extreme poverty. "Everybody was poor then, although I don't remember too much the shantytowns, even in Wrens."

A lot goes into choosing a tree

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — If there is one thing Arthur Fisher has learned after seven years of peddling pines, it's that there really is no accounting for taste. "You'd be surprised at what people pick out," he said, walking through rows and rows of Virginia Pines growing seven miles outside Lufkin alongside U.S. 69.

Some like 'em plump and some don't mind scraggly and that's good news for growers like Fisher, who counts each cut Christmas tree as a little more money in his pocket.

Whatever your taste in trees to trim, searching for one makes for a fine fresh air outing this time of year.

Most searching these days takes place at either a tree lot or a choose-and-cut site like Fisher's. His operation, which he says has no real name, will be open daily from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. through Dec. 22.

Choosing a tree is one thing — lightly tripping up and down the rows calling "Oh, here's a pretty one," or "This one has a nice shape."

Making it yours is another thing altogether.

First there is the selection phase. You've given the needles the crush test — if they bounce back the tree is fresh — and you've made a decision. Moments ago, the choice had been difficult. There were so many nice ones. Once you've decided, however, it seems like the only tree for you and a tiny worry creeps in if you have to leave to get an attendant to cut it or pick it up for you.

What if somebody else claims it while you are gone? People will leave all kinds of things behind to mark a tree — a piece of plastic, a paper cup, a tissue or a child.

Once your tree is selected, paid for, loaded, unloaded set up and decorated, the last thing you want is for it to turn brown before the holidays are over.

Join Us In Worship

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

For Whom Toll The Bells?

The bells of the church steeple are an ancient part of Christian practice, but for whom do they ring? Is the worship of the church just for those who are members? Is it for only one segment of society or only one class? No, that can never be. So when you hear the bells ringing never wonder for whom they ring; they ring for you and for every person on this earth, calling us to worship the one true God who is Lord of all. The bells call all persons to come to the Lord that they may drink from the water of life which He alone gives and which, if a man drink, he will never thirst for salvation, for verily, his is the Kingdom of Heaven.

The bells of the church ring an invitation to you, "come, let us worship and bow down before the Lord our God."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedom which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it sets the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

'Enchanted tree' to be transformed

A bare tree sits cold and leafless today in the sanctuary of St. Paul's United Methodist Church. This is a Christmas tree of a different kind. Rev. James W. Putnam, pastor, says the stark tree will soon be transformed into an enchanted tree as part of a program to put Christ at the center of the Christmas experience for all church members. Rev. Putnam says the transformation is to occur during a special 6 p.m. worship service Sunday when young and old alike will hang brightly colored leaves on the tree. The leaves are red, amber and green cellophane bags filled with gifts. A spotlight is to shine on the tree and its new leaves to complete the tree's rebirth. The special service is open to the public and will include some of the best known and loved Christmas hymns and a Christmas story. After the leaf-hanging ceremony, members and guests are to go to the church's Fellowship Hall for a time of fellowship and refreshments. During the fellowship time, the gifts will be removed from the tree and counted. As soon as the total giving is known, the response will be celebrated by those present.

Choir to perform Christmas music

A Festival of Christmas will be presented by the Chancel Choir of First United Methodist Church, Foster and Ballard, at 4 p.m. Sunday. Ken McDonald is director of the 50-voice choir. The program will feature a variety of well-loved traditional Christmas carols, with several set to modern accompaniment. Appropriate scripture readings will be given by Janice and Lee Porter, Beverly and Don Alexander, Janetta and Annie Geiser, Betty Wright, Fran and Vernon Stillman, Velma and Wyatt Lemons, and Faustina and John Curry. Accompanists will be members of the Amarillo Symphony and Tracy D. Cary, church organist, and Ruby Gunn, pianist. Other local instrumentalists will be Jim Duggan, Art Owen and Greg Williams. McDonald said area residents are invited to attend the annual Christmas program and the reception following the program. No tickets are needed. The four o'clock hour will allow guests to attend their own regularly scheduled evening church services, he said.

Church planning a Holiday Feast

The members of the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ are planning a Holiday Feast for area residents on Christmas Day, Dec. 25, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. The meal, which will be served in the fellowship hall of the church, is being prepared for those in the community who are in need. The meal will be served free of charge. The ham and turkey dinner is also available for delivery to those who are shut-in and not able to come to the fellowship hall. Those needing a ride to the church or needing the meals delivered at home should call 669-2283 or 665-0031 to make arrangements. Also to help those in need during the holiday season, the middle school and high school youth of the congregation are preparing Holiday Baskets to be delivered throughout the area. The baskets will contain food which has been donated by the congregation. The youth are putting the baskets together and will deliver the baskets on Dec. 21.

Religion Roundup

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Reform Judaism's central body has become the first national Jewish organization to join with numerous Christian denominations in endorsing the movement to provide sanctuary to refugees from Central America. At its biennial assembly, the Union of American Hebrew Congregations called on its 791 synagogues to provide "safe haven" to Central American and other refugees who request it "out of fear of persecution" if returned to their homelands. Citing the "serious legal implications" of such action, the assembly noted the trial now going on in Tucson, Ariz., of several sanctuary workers. NEW YORK (AP) — Most people have become "habitual non-readers," says a Scripture specialist, a condition that has been added to illiteracy as an obstacle in regard to the Bible. Unless it is "heard through the ears, the great majority of people in every country will not receive it," says the Rev. Tom Houston, president of World Vision and former head of the British and Foreign Bible Society.

Lawyers, doctors 'like scorpions in a bottle'

EDITOR'S NOTE — As the counsel for New York Blue Cross and Blue Shield says, "The lawyers are shouting 'malpractice.' The doctors are shouting 'greed.' The doctors are like the proverbial two scorpions in the bottle." This second story in a three-part series on medical malpractice focuses on one such doctor and one such lawyer.

By SID MOODY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

In the quiet den of the shady old house in New Vernon, N.J., the phone rings. Charles Bippart, M.D., grunts out of his favorite chair to answer. The caller says his pregnant wife is hemorrhaging. The husband does not ask. He demands that Bippart be at the hospital in 10 minutes. Or else.

Or else what? Or else he'll sue. Bippart, once again, is quickly out the door. This time he is seething. After 5,000 babies, it has come to this. Threats. They had stolen the joy he had felt in 35 years as an obstetrician bringing new life into the world.

"It's the happiest specialty," he says. "You're dealing with life, not death. I've lost one mother, but that didn't have anything to do with her pregnancy. But I don't enjoy it any more. I don't like being under the gun of someone insisting I be there in 10 minutes when I'd have been there in five on my own."

Unspoken was another word. Malpractice.

Some 40 miles away in Manhattan, Harvey Weitz leans back in a king-sized swivel chair. On his desk is a model of a section of human anatomy. It looks like a plastic whiplash.

"I don't deny I'm extremely well-paid, but I think I perform a necessary service," he says. What Harvey Weitz does from his office near the courthouse district is sue the Charley Bipparts of the world. He is a malpractice lawyer.

Dr. Bippart and lawyer Weitz are two sides of the coin in a heads-tails-does-anybody-win? confrontation that has poisoned the dialogue between two of the nation's leading professions. They give flesh in microcosm to that struggle.

It is a struggle that is seeing, according to the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, the average doctor pay one tenth of his $215,000 yearly income in malpractice insurance premiums. Bippart's premium has just been raised to $30,000.

He is a tall man of 60 who has dined well on his European wife's memorable cuisine. He has a calm, kind face and gentle hands that have won the esteem of his colleagues and the warm regard of his patients. In his rare spare time he gardens, dabbles at painting and even needlepoint. But his composure ruffles when he talks about lawyers. He deeply resents fellow professionals turning what he has given his life to into what he regards as an ambulance chase for money.

Harvey Weitz has nothing against doctors. In fact his partner's daughter is training in obstetrics. His credo is simple: When a doctor or a hospital injures someone through negligence, the victim should be compensated.

Bippart does not deny medicine makes mistakes. "But the law was meant to be a profession practiced by men with a high degree of integrity for the maintenance of the public well-being. It has become a quasi-profession in which men with normal integrity are dismayed by their brethren who engage in all this litigiousness. They play on juries to extract money from people who are incapable of being perfect at all times. The doctor gets to feel he's really just a transfer agent between the insurance companies and the plaintiffs. In this Disneyland world, people are encouraged to sue their doctors by lawyers who advertise on TV. It's disgusting."

He meant such ads as a Boston law firm's: "We can help you determine your rights. Including the right to collect."

Harvey Weitz does not advertise, not that he has to. "I guess I'm old fashioned."

He is 56 and doesn't look it. Time's only visible scar is a permanently bent finger dating to a youthful career as a frustrated athlete.

"No," he says, "I never sued anybody for it."

Weitz has little patience with frivolous suits or many of the "storefront lawyers" who bring them. Almost all the 300 cases his partnership of some 25 lawyers considers each year are referred by other attorneys.

"We may take 50 or 100 that are significant in terms of what happened to the individual. A storefront lawyer can handle small cases. We can't. There's too much paperwork, obtaining expert witnesses, screening records, taking depositions. We put in a lot of work to make sure we have a sound case. A good lawyer cannot manufacture a case. There has to be liability to begin with. The worst abuse of the system is the ignorant lawyer who takes a case when he doesn't have one."

Weitz, like most casualty lawyers, takes a share of the award, up to 40 percent, if he wins. If he loses, he gets nothing. That is another inducement to picking cases carefully, one the federal government has said discriminates against the worthy but small claim.

In any event, ACOG says its doctors win 80.9 percent of the time. The plaintiff's average share is 28 cents on the dollar.

Critics such as Charley Bippart view the contingency fee as encouragement for attorneys to drum up business and pay for the Mercedes by filing megabuck suits. They point to the "mole industry" in which lawyers pay nurses and hospital clerks under the table for tips on potential suits.

Weitz has had his share of large settlements. He justifies the contingency fee, as do most of his colleagues, as "the key to the courthouse door" for claimants who otherwise could not afford a skilled attorney.

Victory, says Weitz, comes from hard work, work often knowingly frustrated by the medical profession.

It was this so-called "gauze curtain," the silent wall he says doctors throw up against lawyers, that drew Weitz into malpractice law. "I was working with a lawyer who again and again couldn't get answers. How come a man dies on the operating table? You couldn't get the people involved to talk. I ended up being his right hand researcher, trying to learn what the cases were about."

Then and now Weitz says doctors and hospitals doctor the records as well as the patient. "Doctors aren't dumb. They don't erase anything. But they'll expand the files to hide any negligence. Even then it takes months to get answers."

"I wanted to be a doctor as long as I can remember," says Charley Bippart. He is the fifth straight generation in his family to practice medicine. His son recently joined his partnership, making it six.

"Good times in my family centered around doctors. During Sunday dinners at my grandfather's, they were always talking medicine."

Bippart graduated from the prestigious New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center in 1950, did a tour as a Navy doctor, then opened an obstetrical practice in Morristown, N.J.

The times were good. A bigger home. Private school for three children. Foreign cars. Who would deny the good life to a man who put in 80-hour weeks and days and nights at a stretch, grabbing catnaps on a cot at the hospital?

But there were booby traps planted unknowingly in these good years. A mother is currently suing Bippart's partnership for damage allegedly done at the birth of her daughter in 1969. Bippart is named even though he did not deliver the baby. The suit charges one of Bippart's partners used pitocin, a synthetic hormone that induces labor and stimulates lactation, in a manner that was "flagrantly outdated."

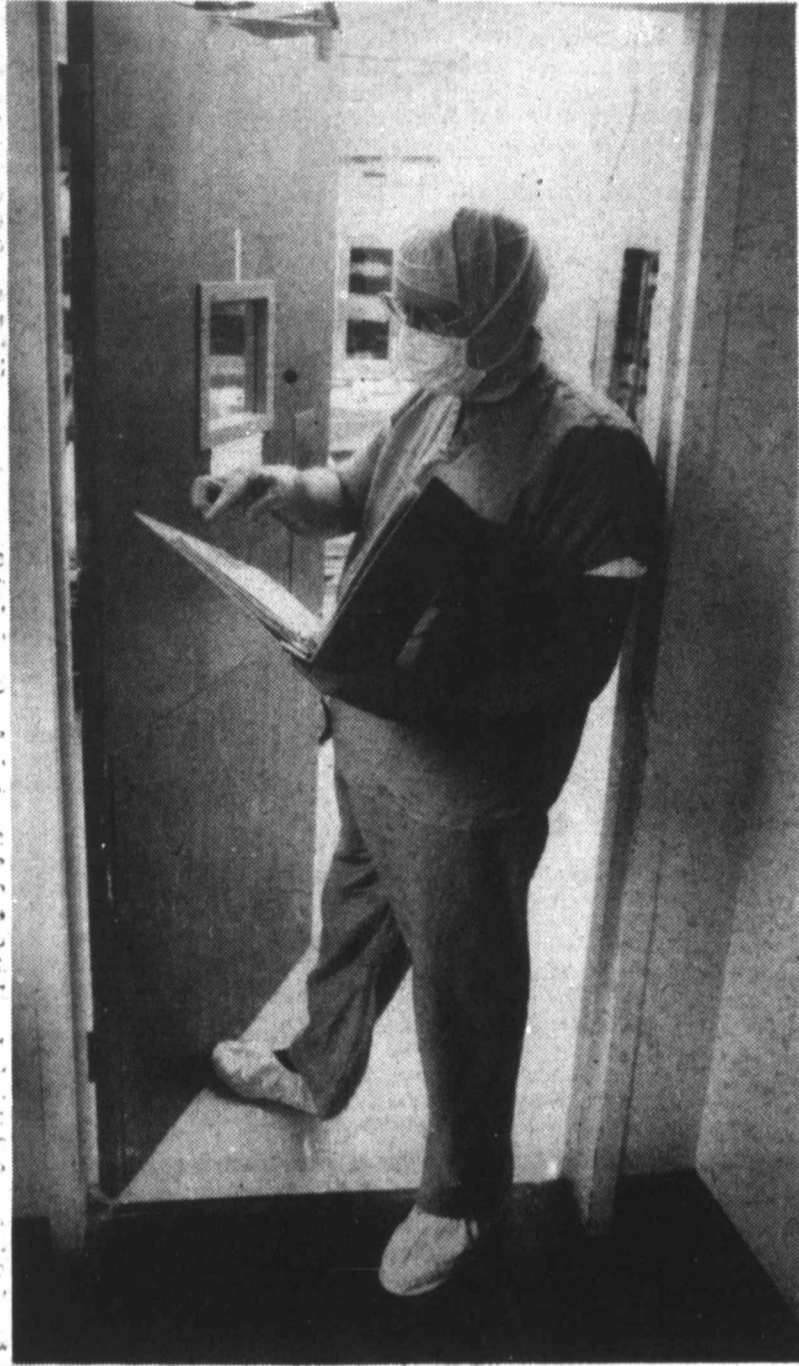

"It wasn't at the time," Bippart says. "In the years since, new information and technology have more accurately monitored the dosage and the way pitocin is given." Ironically, one of Bippart's professors in med school first synthesized pitocin. He won a Nobel Prize for it.

Harvey Weitz knows all about pitocin. He says New York resident doctors are taught "creative charting" to disguise how they have administered it to avoid risk of suits.

Bippart is far from alone when he questions why doctors should be held liable for using an accepted technology at one time if the technology subsequently changes.

"In the mid-1970s we used the Dalkon Shield (an intrauterine device) because the company said it was the best on the market, and women wanted IUDs like crazy. You can't say this was not proven at the time, and the IUD is generally a good device. But this one was poorly designed." When he learned there had been several deaths among users, Bippart stopped putting them in. "And we took them out whenever women came in for their annual checkups. That prompted us to increase our malpractice insurance from $300,000 to $3 million."

Until then, Bippart had paid about as much for malpractice insurance as he did to cover his cars.

Houston spends 17 cents to collect an eight-cent bill

HOUSTON (AP) — Danny Mladenka was pretty surprised when the city of Houston spent 17 cents to mail him a letter threatening to sue if he didn't pay an 8-cent delinquent tax bill.

"This is all kinda funny. But if you want to know the truth, I think the city is wasting money going to all this trouble over an 8 cent bill," Mladenka said.

City officials said Tuesday that such a small amount was considered delinquent taxes because Mladenka's check for his 1983 taxes apparently was 5 cents short of the amount he owed. The remaining 3 cents is a penalty payment.

Just mailing the threatening letter to Mladenka as part of a delinquent tax collection drive cost the city 17 cents.

Gerald Schmelter, the city's supervisor of tax administration, said the city goes out of its way not to mail bills for such small amounts.

"We usually catch these things. We just didn't catch this one. Hey, these things happen," he said.

To make sure everything gets cleared up, Mladenka says he is going to ask the city to mail him a receipt.

Impressive Rocky's plaza has its critics

EDITOR'S NOTE — It was a seedy area in the heart of Albany called "The Gut," a poor neighborhood of brownstones and carriage houses in disrepair. Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, embarrassed by The Gut when Queen Juliana of the Netherlands visited the city 25 years ago, decided to give the area a massive face-lift. Today Rocky's plaza is an impressive complex, but not without its critics.

By JOEL STASHENKO
Associated Press Writer

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Grudgingly, New York's capital city is finally learning to live with Nelson Rockefeller's "edifice complex," as some derided the $2 billion project when construction began two decades ago.

Since its completion seven years ago, the Nelson A. Rockefeller Empire State Plaza, with its immense state office building, convention center and museum complex, has become the focus of a building boom that's rejuvenating Albany, one of the oldest cities in North America.

Block after block of the shabby brownstones and carriage houses that shamed Rockefeller and led to his conception of the project 25 years ago are being restored to their turn-of-the-century grandeur around the plaza.

A decade ago, these neighborhoods were largely populated by the poor Albanians uprooted from the 40-block area expropriated by the state for the project. Now they are among the hottest rental properties in the area and home to many of the young professionals who work in the plaza.

It's all a far cry from the way the streets looked in 1960, when Rockefeller, as New York governor, toured downtown Albany with Queen Juliana of the Netherlands.

"I could see the way the city was running down and what this lady might think," he later told aides. "Here was a great Dutch city built in the New World, and then she comes to look at it, never having seen it before. My God!"

Rockefeller's inspiration for the plaza was the palace of the Dalai Lama at Lhasa, Tibet, which he'd visited as a young man. To execute the design he sketched out on the back of an envelope, the governor selected Wallace Harrison, who had designed another symbol of his family's visions, Manhattan's Rockefeller Center.

With the concept firm in his mind, Rockefeller shocked the city when he had an aide walk into the Albany County Clerk's office and file a map on March 27, 1962, seizing nearly 100 acres of downtown Albany. When the map was stamped by the clerk, the state became the owner of 1,150 buildings and landlord to some 6,000 residents, most poor, some estitute. All would be gone within three years.

"The city turns over poorer people for richer people," said Christopher Smith, an associate professor at the State University of New York at Albany. "Those people who are lost are exactly the ones the city wants lost."

The expropriated area was nicknamed "The Gut," and parts of it lived up to its inelegant designation. It was the neighborhood where gangster Jack "Legs" Diamond was murdered in 1931. Brothels could be found along the narrow streets. The city jail, near a ready supply of customers, was built there.

"Seedy," is the way Albany Mayor Thomas Whalen III remembered it.

But the area also contained historic landmarks, more than 100 legitimate businesses and four churches. One neighborhood that disappeared entirely was a conclave of first- and second-generation Italians on Jefferson Street.

"Rockefeller made a comment that the worst part of Albany is gone," said Sam Aquino, who grew up on Jefferson Street. "He was mistaken when he made that statement."

The impending mill construction prompted a migration from the targeted plaza site. Smith and his students tracked those displaced by the plaza by tracing their addresses in city directories for 1965, 1970, 1975 and 1981.

"Many people just literally moved up the street" onto the fringes of the plaza, Smith said.

The prospect of uprooting thousands of poor Albany residents didn't daunt Rockefeller as the project was being built. Nor did its skyrocketing costs.

When plaza plans were first unveiled in 1962, it was to be a four-year project costing $250 million. But by the late summer and fall of 1965, when construction actually began, it had doubled in price. When the project was completed a dozen years later, the price had risen to over $1.5 billion. It now will likely cost the state just under $2 billion when the bonds and the interest are paid off at the end of this century.

The project also moved ahead despite building delays, design changes and more sinister doings which plagued it from the outset.

There were some 60 fires on the site, one alone causing $2.4 million in damage. To this day, there are problems keeping marble from flaking off some of the plaza buildings. And theft was a recurring headache: $500,000 worth of steel rods disappeared one day, $78,000 of plywood another day. No one was ever prosecuted for the thefts.

The plaza, Albany's Pulitzer Prize-winning novelist and historian William Kennedy has said, was "one of the most perfectly designed perpetual-opportunity machines in the history of boondoggery."

More than 900,000 cubic yards of concrete was poured into the site; 3.1 million cubic yards of earth had to be moved as the 100 acres were fashioned for construction; and 232,000 tons of steel were used to gird the structures — the equivalent of 20 Eiffel Towers.

Marble was imported from as far away as Georgia for the project, skilled workers from farther away than that.

And when it was dedicated in 1978 in Rockefeller honor, just a few months before his death, the plaza was everything he had hoped for — as much a monument to himself as Rockefeller Center was to his father, John D. Rockefeller II.

Inside the plaza complex are a convention center and meeting rooms, banks, restaurants, newsstands and barbershops. A dozen huge mobiles and statues adorn the outside of the plaza, dozens of murals and paintings line the marble walls inside. Most of the artwork was chosen personally by Rockefeller. All of it is in the modernistic style he favored.

Historic cannon to be on display at UT

AUSTIN (AP) — The historic "Come and Take It" cannon that fired the opening shot of the Texas Revolution in 1835 will be on display at the University of Texas this month.

Officials said Wednesday the cannon, a small artillery piece only 20 inches long and weighing less than 70 pounds, will be displayed through Dec. 20 at UT's Barker

Texas History Center.

The cannon had been lent to Texas settlers in Gonzales in 1831 by Mexican authorities to help fight off Indian attacks.

The little cannon became one of the early symbols of Texas independence, which will be marked by next year's sesquicentennial celebration.

Question: Were the Dallas Cowboys that lousy against Cincinnati last week or were they looking ahead to the New York Giants?

Answer: Both. When Giants visit Texas Stadium Sunday to decide the NFC East title, they'll find the Cowboys questioning themselves. "I don't understand this team," says Tony Dorsett.

In reality, there's not much to understand.

The Cowboys are a decent team with a mystique that leads people to believe they're better than they are — even Tom Landry admits he's surprised they have nine wins by now. They probably aren't better than the Giants, whom they beat 30-29 in New Jersey, courtesy of one of New York quarterback Phil Simms' myriad fumbles.

That's what the oddsmakers say. Dallas is favored by three — home-field advantage.

The Cowboys get an edge on experience, including the more experienced coach — Landry won't panic following the 50-24 debacle with the Bengals. But the game may be decided on the field — if the New York offensive line can give Simms some time and Joe Morris a few holes. TYhe pick is: GIANTS.

NEW ENGLAND (plus 6) at MIAMI (Monday night):

DOLPHINS. CHICAGO (minus 2 1/2) at NEW YORK JETS (Saturday): BEARS. Cincinnati (plus 2) at Washington: REDSKINS. SEATTLE (plus 4 1/2) at L.A. Raiders: SEAHAWKS.

KANSAS CITY (plus 10 1/2) at DENVER (Saturday): CHIEFS. St. LOUIS (plus 9) at RAMS: CARDINALS.

HOUSTON (plus 10) at CLEVELAND: BROWNS. SAN FRANCISCO (minus 10) at NEW ORLEANS: 49ERS.

BUFFALO (plus 10) at PITTSBURGH: STEELERS.

Also: (HOME TEAM IN CAPS):

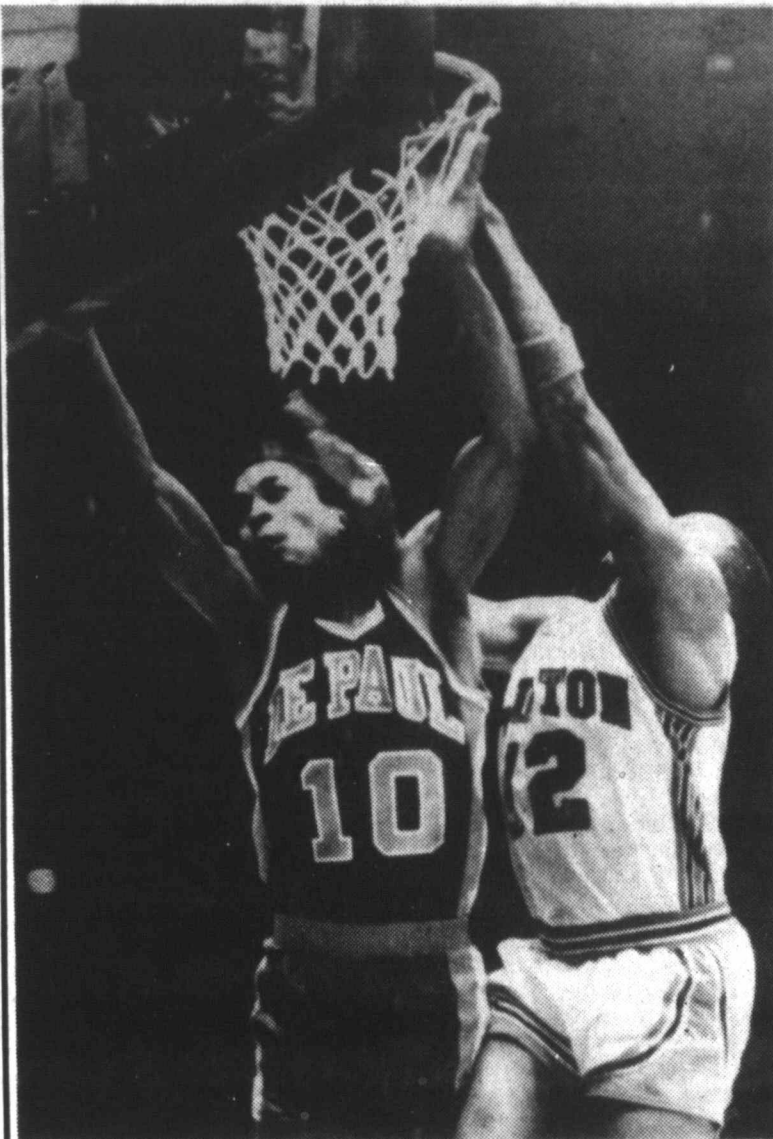

Minnesota (minus 1) over FALCONS. TAMPA BAY (minus 2 1/2) over Indianapolis.

DETROIT (minus 4 1/2) over Green Bay. SAN DIEGO (minus 7) over Philadelphia.

Straight up: Giants, Dolphins, Bears, Redskins, Raiders, Broncos, Rams, Browns, 49ers, Steelers, Vikings, Bucs, Lions, Chargers.

Last Week: 8-6 spread, 10-4 straight up. Season: 92-97-6 (spread), 125-70 (straight up)

Cougars bow to Blue Demons

A FOUL SHOT — DePaul's Ron Strickland (left) is slapped across the face by Houston's Renaldo Thomas while trying to score in first-period action Thursday night. (AP Laserphoto)

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Cougars Coach Guy Lewis, who could be considered an expert on the subject, says the 19th ranked DePaul Blue Demons are "definitely a Top 20 team."

The Blue Demons impressed Lewis and the Cougars with an 84-78 non-conference college basketball victory Thursday night.

Noting that Houston lost to DePaul at Chicago last year, 69-58, Lewis, who has coached the Cougars to the Final Four five times, said, "they killed us this year and last year on the boards."

"They're definitely a Top 20 team that will get better."

DePaul used its inside strength in the victory Thursday night, something that Coach Joey Meyer said he intended the team to do.

"Our game plan was to go inside and I think we did a good job," Meyer said. "We have a lot of big people and we used them well tonight."

Houston forward Ricky Winslow, who had 17 points and four rebounds agreed.

"We had a lot of problems up front, they have many big guys that just keep coming in," Winslow said.

"They are not only good up front but also from the back court," added Houston center Gregg Anderson.

Lamone Lampley scored 19 points and Dallas Comegys added 18 for the visitors.

Lampley, a 6-foot-11 center, was an example of the inside scoring advantage the Blue Demons held over Houston as he connected for eight of the Blue Demons' first 12 points, including three of his five dunk shots.

DePaul, 5-0, outrebounded Houston 21-13 in the first half and held a 9-2 edge in offensive rebounds. Guard Alvin Franklin of Houston, 3-2, led all scorers with 25 points.

DePaul took command of the game at 42-33 after outscoring the Cougars 15-3 in a scoring spree highlighted by 2 steals, 2 assists and five points by Freshman Rod Strickland.

"Strickland's defense (3 steals) keyed the first half," Cougars Coach Lewis said.

Houston cut the lead to 43-39 after Franklin's second straight driving layup.

Houston fell behind 59-46 in the second half before Franklin staged an 11-6 comeback to a 65-59 deficit as he scored 6 points to go with 2 steals.

Renaldo Thomas hit a follow-tip shot and a free throw for Houston to further cut it to 75-71 with five minutes left. But Terence Greene, DePaul's other freshman guard, connected on three 18-foot corner jump shots to increase the Blue Demons lead to an insurmountable 81-72.

Halftime—DePaul 47, Houston 39. Fouled out—DePaul Jackson; Houston McGee. Rebounds—DePaul 40 (Lampley 7), Houston 36 (Winslow 12). Assists—DePaul 18 (Strickland 8), Houston 20 (McGee 7). Total fouls—DePaul 21, Houston 21. Technicals—DePaul Embry (rim), 4-4.93.

Pampa cagers scheduled to resume play tonight

Both Pampa High boys' and girls' basketball squads hope to get a break from the weather today so scheduled games can be played. The Harvesters will travel to Raton, New Mexico to play Trinidad, Colo. at 6 p.m. tonight (New Mexico time) and Raton at 3 p.m. Saturday. The Harvesters will make the trip without their head coach Garland Nichols, who is hospitalized.

The Harvesters have a 6-4 record and will be trying to snap a two-game losing streak.

Pampa girls, who won the Abilene Tournament title last weekend, travel to Lubbock to take on the Dunbar Pantherettes. It will be the district opener for both teams. Pampa has a 4-3 record while Dunbar is 2-6.

Miami teams drop first-round games

HIGGINS — Both Miami teams fell to Higgins in first-round action Thursday in the Higgins Basketball Tournament. Miami girls lost, 49-37, while Higgins boys came from behind in the fourth quarter to take a 46-44 decision.

In the girls' game, Miami trailed 14-4 in the first quarter and never could catch up. Bonnie Detrixhe tossed in 24 points for the hosts while Stephanie Russell added 10.

Robin Daugherty had 15 for the Warriorettes while Kristi Kaiverwieden added eight. Also scoring for Miami were Lanese Lisenby, four; Gerri Anderson, four; Karie Bailey, four, and Amy McReynolds, two.

Higgins led by 10 at halftime, 22-12.

The Warriorettes go against Darrouzett at 12:30 Saturday.

Higgins boys rallied after trailing by five, 35-30, at the end of the third quarter.

Hornets win tourney game

SAMNORWOOD — Mobeetie boys tipped off the Samnorwood Tournament with a 60-55 victory over Hedley Thursday night.

Mobeetie girls, however, fell to Samnorwood, 66-54, after leading by seven points at halftime.

In the boys' game, Waylon Howard was high scorer for the Hornets with 16 points. McLaughlin added 11.

"We were ahead all the way until there were 12 seconds left in the game," said Miami coach Brent Fountain. "They outscored us, 34-19, in the second half."

Miami had built up a 13-point lead at halftime.

Brett Blackwood paced the Higgins' comeback with 14 points, followed by 12 for Don Jeffers.

Brett Byrum scored 17 points for the Warriors and teammate John Locke chipped in 12. Other's scoring for Miami were Greg Alexander, six; David Scott, four; Clint Wheeler, four, and Jeff Bass, two.

Miami meets Briscoe at 2 p.m. Saturday in the consolation bracket.

In other first-round games Briscoe girls defeated Darrouzett, 56-39, and Darrouzett boys downed Briscoe, 60-30.

Both White Deer teams dropped out of the tournament due to weather conditions.

Pokes hope to avoid 'The Big Fade'

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys have done "The Big Fade" in December the past three years.

In fact, they've lost their last two games in the 1982, 1983 and 1984 seasons.

Historically, the Cowboys have been a fast-closing team.

Now, they face the final two critical games of the season against the New York Giants and San Francisco 49ers.

A victory over the Giants can assure Dallas the National Conference Eastern Division title for the first time since 1981. Dallas could still make it as a wild card with a loss to New York and a victory over the 49ers. Why the slide in recent years in the clutch?

"We're not as strong a football team as we have been," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "Everything is a growing process in this business. We have a young team, and you can't predict what will happen."

"Nobody expected us to win the East before the season began. All we know is that destiny is in our hands. If we don't win we don't deserve to go." The players are determined to bounce back from last Sunday's 50-24 loss to Cincinnati.

Field widens lead

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Lewis Feild of Elk Ridge, Utah, enjoying another steady performance, widened his lead for rodeo's top cowboy Thursday while California's Ted Nuce won his second bull riding event at the National Finals Rodeo.

Feild, a bareback rider who has yet to win his event in six performances of the NFR, took a fourth place to win $2,020 and widen his lead to $3,119 in the battle with Clay O'Brien Cooper for the coveted all-around cowboy title.

Cooper, of Gilbert, Ariz., failed to place in the team roping competition with partner Jake Barnes of Bloomfield, N.M., after winning the event three of the first five nights.

Cooper, who held a $3,900 lead going into the finals rodeo, has won $112,608 for the year, below the $115,802 won by Feild, who has placed in the top four on five of six nights despite having no wins.

Nuce, of Manteca, was fourth in the bull riding standings coming into the NFR but moved into second behind Tuf Hedeman of El Paso, Texas, with his second win.

Nuce, the rodeo's leading bull riding money winner so far with $18,180, scored a 79 to edge eight-time world champion Don Gay of Mesquite, Texas, who had a 76.

Moving into third place in the overall standings was Roy Cooper of Durant, Okla., who used a 7.7 time in the calf roping to earn second place money of $6,060 and push his season total to $101,289.

Cooper was in first place in the event before Mike McLaughlin of Ft. Worth, Texas, set a new arena record with a 7.6 second clocking to take the first place money.

A longshot contender for the all around title, Jimmy Cooper of Monument, N.M., captured the team roping event with partner Allen Bach of Modesto, Calif., to push his total earnings to $93,524.

Cooper, who is in fifth place in the all around competition, is one of only four cowboys who qualified for two events in the finals. He failed, however, to place in the calf roping competition.

Cooper and Bach ripped off a 5.1 second time, the best so far in the team roping finals, to top Rusty Wright of Mt. Pleasant, Texas, and Leo Woodbury of Nampa, Ida., who roped their calf in 5.7 seconds.

Dee Pickett, the defending all around champion, fell to fourth place overall behind Roy Cooper despite a third place in team roping with partner Mike Beers of Rufus, Ore. Pickett, another cowboy in two events, failed to place in the calf roping.

Charmayne James of Clayton, N.M., and Janet Powell of Anthen, Texas, continued their domination of the women's barrel racing competition with another 1-2 finish.

The 15-year-old James, who leads the world championship standings by about $19,000 over Powell, beat Powell's already established 14.49 second mark by clocking a 14.48 to win the first prize money. James, who pushed her season earnings to $82,485, has won three of the six competitions while Powell has taken the other three.

Wayne Herman of Dickinson, N.D., tied with Chuck Logue of McKinney, Texas, to share the bareback riding event. Herman also won the event Tuesday night while Logue won on Sunday.

John Jones of Morro Bay, Calif., captured the steer wrestling with a time of 3.3 seconds, topping Bob Bonsall of Keithville, La., who took 3.7 seconds to wrestle his steer to the ground.

Jones came into the rodeo in third place in season earnings, but had been shut out in the NFR before capturing the win worth $8,080. Jones was the first contestant and had to wait as 14 other cowboys unsuccessfully challenged his mark.

In the saddle bronc competition, Clint Johnson of Spearfish, S.D., scored a 79 to edge Brad Gjermundson by one point and win the event. Johnson's earnings pushed him to within $1,500 of Gjermundson in the total saddle bronc winnings for the year.

The unique bullfight event, which matches rodeo clowns in freestyle matches against bulls, concluded after four performances with a win by Rex Dunn of Bowie, Texas, who edged Rob Smets of Roseburg, Ore.

Smets, however, captured the year's title with his second place finish.

three-point favorite. The Giants have not won a title of any kind since 1963.

Wide receiver Tony Hill, listed as questionable for the game with a hamstring injury, said "I want to be out there regardless of the circumstances."

Rookie Karl Powe will replace Hill if Dallas' leading pass receiver can't go.

Landry plans to use recently activated Gordon Banks as a kick returner and wide receiver. Banks is a refugee from the United States Football League who had been on the inactive roster until two weeks ago.

Baseball meetings

Yanks, White Sox make swap

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer
SAN DIEGO (AP) — The New York Yankees and Chicago White Sox, locked in a game of "Let's Make A Deal" for several weeks, finally landed lesser prizes on the final day of baseball's winter meetings.

But the Thursday swap that sent pitcher Britt Burns and two minor-leaguers to the Yankees for pitcher Joe Cowley and catcher Ron Hassey was not the big deal both teams hoped to make.

"There's a possibility this could lead to another trade," White Sox General Manager Ken Harrelson said.

That other deal would send Chicago catcher Carlton Fisk to New York for designated hitter Don Baylor. But Chicago is still trying to sign free agent Fisk, who wants a three-year contract, and the Yankees are still trying to get Baylor to drop his no-trade clause, which he might do for enough money. Baylor reportedly also wants a $1 million year.

Fisk and Baylor are both represented by Jerry Kapstein, and Harrelson said the agent effectively has the trade on hold.

"You have to follow his lead, and that's what we're doing," Harrelson said.

The Yankees-White Sox deal, along with a transaction that sent Mike Stenhouse from Boston to Minnesota for a minor-league pitcher, brought the trade number to 12 and the players moved to 26 during the winter meetings.

There had been speculation that, because of changes in trading deadlines, that action would be slow here. But there were two more deals and one more player traded than last year.

The official business of the meetings ended Thursday. And the final day also produced a few more trade rumors.

Kansas City had been working on a trade that would have brought outfielder Chili Davis from San Francisco for pitcher Mark Gubicza, outfielder Pat Sheridan and a top minor-league pitcher. But snags developed and it was called off.

Cincinnati, having acquired John Denny on Wednesday, tried to pry Mike Krukow from San Francisco and Montreal's Bill Gullickson.

Baltimore was talking about sending reliever Sammy Stewart to Boston for shortstop Jackie Gutierrez. That deal may still be possible.

In the past, the end of the meetings was the deadline for interleague trades. But, that rule has been changed and teams are now free to trade without waivers through July 31.

"We've been working on this thing for over two months," Harrelson said after the Yankees-White Sox trade. "We finally got it done."

Along with Burns, the Yankees acquired minor-league shortstop Mike Soper and outfielder Glen Braxton.

By trading Cowley and Hassey, the Yankees were temporarily left thin in the catching department. Butch Wynegar is a free agent and two others, Scott Bradley and Juan Espino, have only brief major-league experience.

But New York Manager Lou Piniella said that situation would be solved soon, although he did not mention Fisk by name.

The Twins sent Mike Stenhouse, a power hitter in the minors who has not done well in the majors, to Boston for pitcher Charlie Mitchell. Last month, the Red Sox also traded away Mitchell's brother, John, also a pitcher, to the New York Mets.

The Pittsburgh Pirates announced that former manager Bill Virdon, who also managed Houston, Montreal and the Yankees, has been hired as the team's hitting and outfield coach.

Har-rumph!

Why Penn State is my No. 1 team

By Maj. Amos B Hoopie
Wizard of Odds

Egad, friends! Can you believe it? Of the 114 major college football teams, only two — Penn State, the Hoopie System's choice for No. 1, and Bowling Green, my No. 20 selection — finished the regular season at 11-0.

The Orange Bowl-bound Nittany Lions proved themselves to be No. 1 by being able to rise to the occasion, no matter the opposition. They won the close ones early on — and in their last two games they beat Notre Dame and Pittsburgh, two teams that easily defeated them in 1984.

Joe Paterno's stalwarts demolished the Irish, 36-6, and Pitt, 31-0, to establish their position at the top. (Incidentally, close on the heels of those two contests, coach Gerry Faust of ND resigned, and Foge Fazio was dismissed as coach at Pitt.)

Our No. 20 pick, Bowling Green, swept all Middle Atlantic Conference foes, and shocked Kentucky of the SEC, 30-26, on the way to a perfect record and the California Bowl. In Brian McClure, Bowling Green has a signal caller equal to any in the college ranks.

Here are the Major Hoopie Top 20 college football teams for 1985, along with their regular-season records and bowl assignments:

1. PENN STATE (11-0), Orange; 2. IOWA (10-1), Rose; 3. MIAMI, Fla. (10-1), Sugar; 4. OKLAHOMA (9-1), Orange; 5. MICHIGAN (9-1), Fiesta; 6. FLORIDA (9-1-1), Not eligible; 7. AIR FORCE (11-1), Bluebonnet; 8. BRIGHAM YOUNG (10-2), Florida

Citrus; 9. TEXAS A&M (9-2), Cotton; 10. NEBRASKA (9-2), Fiesta.

11. TENNESSEE (8-1-2), Sugar; 12. ARKANSAS (9-2), Holiday; 13. ALABAMA (8-2-1), Aloha; 14. UCLA (8-2-1), Rose; 15. GEORGIA TECH (8-2-1), All-American; 16. AUBURN (8-3), Cotton; 17. OHIO STATE (8-3), Florida Citrus; 18. TEXAS (8-3), Bluebonnet; 19. FLORIDA STATE (8-3), Gator; 20. BOWLING GREEN (11-0) California.

The Iowa Hawkeyes earned their No. 2 ranking by winning the rugged Big Ten title. With the flying feet of RB Ronnie Harmon and the precision passing of All-America QB Chuck Long, Iowa racked up 421 points while allowing only 142.

Miami's No. 3 Hurricanes lost their opener to neighbor Florida, 35-23, and then took the next 10 straight, including a humiliating defeat of retiring Coach Gerry Faust and Notre Dame, 58-6. QB Vinny Testaverde made Miami a threat to score every time they got the ball.

Oklahoma, No. 4, swept the Big Eight by a 7-0 count. Its lone loss was at the hands of Miami, 27-14. Now Oklahoma gets a shot at No. 1 Penn State in the Orange Bowl.

The surprise of the year is No. 5 Michigan. Lightly regarded at the start of the season, Bo Schembechler's Wolverines picked up strength from opening day and just missed taking the Big Ten crown because of a 12-10 loss to Iowa.

Florida's Gators, No. 6, under suspension from bowl games by the NCAA, have made Galen Hall the winningest big-time coach around — percentage-wise. Hall took over from coach Charlie Pell early in '84 and won eight in a row. With his 9-1-1 this fall, that gives him a 17-1-1 record and an amazing average of .944. And soph QB Kerwin Bell will be around for two more years to bedevil SEC foes.

The Air Force Falcons, No. 7, stand 11-1, with only an upset loss to Brigham Young to mar their record. Their battle with Texas in the Bluebonnet Bowl should be a beauty.

Brigham Young, No. 8, slipped from its perch as defending national champs, but continued its winning ways. A 27-24 loss to Rose Bowl-bound UCLA ended their 25-game winning streak.

Along with Michigan, the Texas A&M Aggies were the big surprise of 1985 and earned them our No. 9 spot. Unheralded in September, the Aggies won the SWC title and the host position in the Cotton Bowl. Coach Jackie Sherrill is entitled to take a couple of bows.

Rounding out the first 10 are the always dangerous Nebraska Cornhuskers of coach Tom Osborne. Their two losses came at the hands of No. 4 Oklahoma and No. 19 Florida State. Not exactly demeaning.

Watch for my forecast of the bowl games — coming next. Har-rumph!

College players

NEA All-American football team

By Murray Olderman

NEW YORK (NEA) — A pair of exceptional runners — one a heralded senior, the other a surprising sophomore — carry the ball for the 1985 All-America football team chosen by Newspaper Enterprise Association.

Bo Jackson, surely the college player of the year in his final season at Auburn, was an obvious choice with his average of 6.7 yards gained every time he tucked the ball in the crook of his elbow.

Lorenzo White, the stumpy second-year star for Michigan State, gained more yards (1,908) than any sophomore in the history of varsity football. He offers resounding proof that All-Americans aren't created by pre-season hype.

Chosen every season since 1917, NEA's team is the nation's oldest existing All-America football squad. Today NEA distributes its All-America selections to more than 600 U.S. daily newspapers.

The 1985 NEA All-America team:

OFFENSE

DEFENSE

The repeaters from last year's NEA All-America team are Williams, Casillas and Fulcher.

This year's prospects didn't necessarily have to play on national championship contenders to attract the attention of the football coaches, scouts and writers who were consulted for the NEA all-star brigade.

This was an outstanding year for offensive linemen, and three of them — tackle Dombrowski of Virginia and guards Rienstra of Temple and Bregel of Southern California — played on teams with so-so records. Defensive back Woodson also was a standout on a struggling Purdue team.

The closest competition for a first-team All-America position was at quarterback. Long of Rose Bowl-bound Iowa, had to ward off Big Ten rival Jim Everett of Purdue and Vinnie Testaverde of Miami (Fla.), as well as Robbie Bosco of pass-happy Brigham Young.

Several football teams offered dual NEA All-America prospects (with a slight edge going to the first-named in each case): linebackers Spielman and Pepper Johnson of Ohio State; linebackers Conlan and Rogers Alexander of Penn State; and offensive linemen Bregel and James FitzPatrick of USC.

The Oklahoma defense had three blue-chip performers in nose tackle Casillas, end-linebacker Murphy and linebacker Brian Bosworth. The 280-pound Casillas is considered the dominant defensive lineman in college football.

The 1985 NEA All-America second team:

Ruth wins Outlandaward

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — After being awarded the 1985 Outland Trophy as the nation's outstanding college interior lineman, Boston College's 6-foot-2, 268-pound noseguard, Mike Ruth says his religious beliefs seem to be leading him to play football for a few more years.

"My decision from the start was to follow God no matter what He decides for me to do," Ruth said, who had been considering a career in either religion or football. "It's to follow Him, not just to follow my own goals."

"To go into the priesthood would be nice, it offers a lot of security. That's a tough thing to come to grips with. Right now the priesthood, as I see it, is not where He's leading me. It's playing football for a few more years and to keep following Him."

Offense: WR, Reggie Bynum, Oregon State; WR, Michael Irvin, Miami (Fla.); TE, William Harris, Texas; T, Joe Milinichik, North Carolina State; T, Brian Joswiak, West Virginia; G, Jeff Zimmerman, Florida; G, Jamie Dukes, Florida State; C, Bill Lewis, Nebraska; QB, Jim Everett, Purdue and Vinnie Testaverde, Miami, Fla.; (tie); RB, Ronnie Harmon, Iowa; RB, Reggie Dupard, SMU; PK, Chris White, Illinois.

Defense: T, Tim Green, Syracuse; T, Jon Hand, Alabama; NG, Mike Ruth, Boston College; LB, Pat Swilling, Georgia Tech; LB, John Offerdahl, Western Michigan; LB Michael Brooks, LSU; B, Vester Jackson, Washington; B, Mark Moore, Oklahoma State; B, Phil Parker, Michigan State; B, Mark Collins, Cal-Fullerton; P, Barry Helton, Colorado.

Honorable Mention:

Offense: WR, Chris Carter, Ohio State; WR, Walter Murray, Hawaii; T, James FitzPatrick, USC; C, Pete Anderson, Georgia; QB, Brian McClure, Bowling Green; QB, Bart Weiss, Air Force; QB, Robbie Bosco, BYU; RB, Rueben Mayes, Washington State; RB, Paul Palmer, Temple; RB, Thurman Thomas, Oklahoma State; PK, Max Zendejas, Arizona.

Jury sentences transvestite babysitter to life in prison

DALLAS (AP) — Giving a life sentence to a man who posed as a woman babysitter and plunged a 4-month-old into scalding water shows "an expression of community outrage," a prosecutor said.

Richard Arthur Gilbert, a 29-year-old transvestite who said he accidentally spilled hot water for pasta noodles on the child, was sentenced Thursday to a maximum life in prison and fined $10,000 after the jury deliberated less than an hour.

He was convicted of injury to a child on Wednesday. The infant later died of his injuries.

"I think it was an expression of the community outrage — that a person like this could prey on the community," said prosecutor Rider Scott.

Jurors wept with the parents of the child in the Dallas courtroom as the punishment was announced.

A finding by jurors and State District Judge Jack Hampton that a deadly weapon — the scalding water — was used in the crime mandates that Gilbert serve at least 20 years of the sentence, Scott said. The baby later died of his injuries.

Gilbert's attorney, Russ Heinrichs, said the verdict would be appealed.

The seven-man, five-woman jury deliberated slightly more than an hour before finding Gilbert guilty of holding the infant the hot water at the home of Vera and Andrew Baker, where he was babysitting.

The Bakers have declined to comment on the trial's outcome.

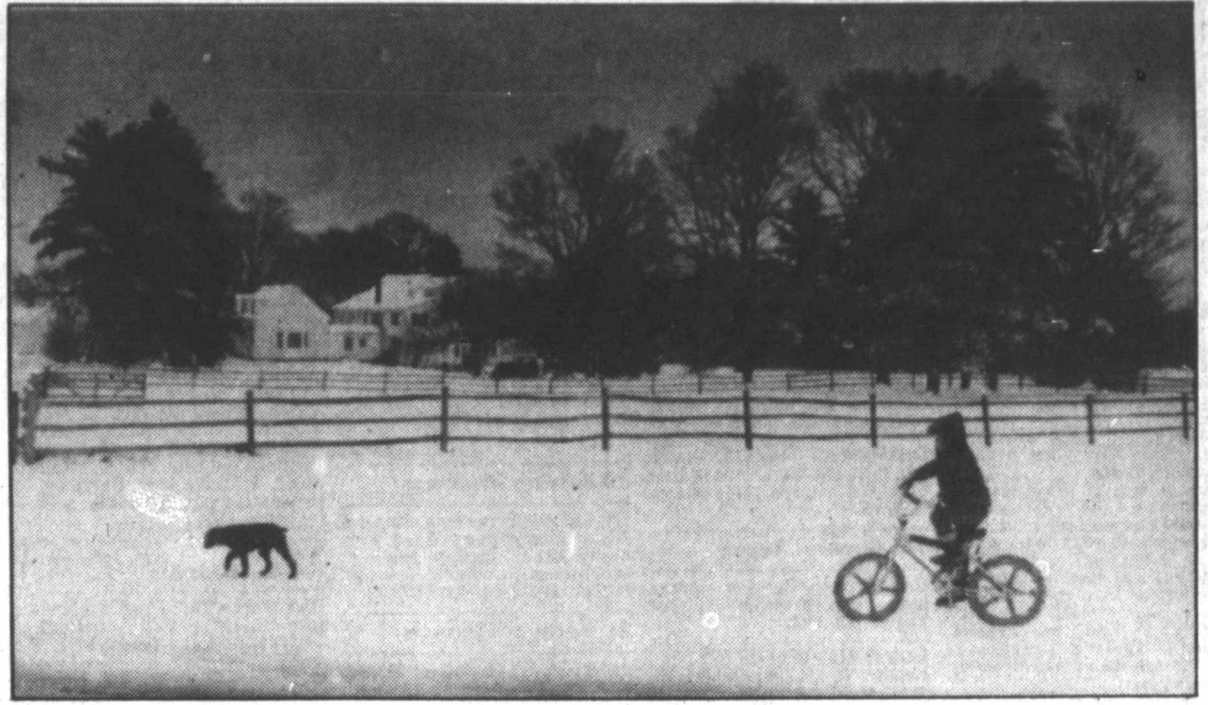

Defense attorney Heinrichs argued that Gilbert, whom one defense witness described as a "clumsy klutz," accidentally spilled the water on the baby Sept. 26.

Gilbert testified Wednesday that the scalding was not intentional, and said, sobbing, that he was "hysterical" after the child was hurt.

U.S. firing 100 of its Russian employees at Moscow embassy

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a security move, the Reagan administration is replacing about half the Russian drivers, guards, mechanics and other workers at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow with Americans.

Similar changes will be made at the U.S. embassies in Eastern Europe, also to counter a "hostile intelligence threat," the State Department said Thursday.

Officials said privately, however, that the Russian workers do not have access to U.S. secrets and already are "hermetically sealed" in the embassy's ground floor.

The cutback was demanded by some members of Congress and initially resisted by the department as unnecessary and expensive. The Russian employees are useful for their language fluency and access to Soviet travel and other services, officials said.

"Some of the congressmen don't seem to realize that," said one official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

"They all have to be considered as potential Soviet agents, but they have no access to secret information or to the places where it's stored," another U.S. official said.

About 100 Soviet workers at the Moscow embassy will be replaced, the officials said.

The security move was announced by department spokesman Charles Redman in response to questions prompted by a Los Angeles Times report that President Reagan had ordered the elimination of all Soviet nationals at the embassy, the U.S. consulate in Leningrad and at U.S. embassies in the Eastern bloc.

Redman said Secretary of State George P. Shultz had authorized the gradual replacement of a "substantial" number of the Soviets at the Moscow embassy and fewer in Leningrad and elsewhere.

"The Department of State has long been active in efforts to take strong and practical steps to counter the hostile intelligence threat against our embassies abroad," he said.

About 200 Soviet nationals work at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow and 29 in Leningrad. A second U.S. consulate may be opened soon in Kiev.

On a related subject, the spokesman refused to say whether Shultz would submit to the lie-detector tests ordered by Reagan for thousands of U.S. government employees with access to top secret information.

An official told The Associated Press on Wednesday that Shultz was opposed to mandatory polygraphs as "a matter of principle."

Names in News

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Rock star David Crosby, wearing designer jeans and a red T-shirt emblazoned "David's Tour," surrendered to the FBI on a charge of failing to show up for a bond hearing in Texas, an agent said.

The former member of Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young walked into the FBI's Palm Beach office Thursday, said supervisor Robert Neumann. He appeared to be "under the influence of something ... and extremely uptight," Neumann said.

The singer was searched and fingerprinted before being taken to the Palm Beach County Jail, where he is being held without bond pending a request by Dallas authorities for his transfer, Neumann said.

An arrest warrant was issued for Crosby, 44, after he failed to appear in Dallas on Nov. 25 for a bond-revocation hearing in his appeal of drug and weapons convictions from 1983.

Dallas officials said he had violated the terms of his bond earlier this year by leaving a New Jersey hospital where he was being treated for drug addiction. Crosby also was charged with hit-and-run driving and possession of a concealed weapon and drug paraphernalia in California last month, authorities said.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Actress Jane Fonda has asked the proponent of a monument to peace activists to stop using her name in publicizing the project.

Phoenix cab driver Terry Choate had written Fonda, 47, and her husband Tom Hayden, a California assemblyman, both of whom were active in anti-Vietnam War protests, asking help to build his proposed monument in Phoenix.

But in a letter from Fonda's attorney Stanton L. Stein, published Thursday in the San Diego Union, Choate was told, "We expect you will immediately cease all further use of our clients' name or likeness in conjunction with your project, (or) the publicity for your project."

Choate said he would stop using Fonda's name. "I respect her greatly and I'll certainly accede to her wishes," he said. "We wanted to name this in her honor. That's up to her."

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — "Tonight Show" sidekick Ed McMahon and his wife, Victoria, have adopted a baby girl, a spokesman said.

The McMahons named the infant Katherine Mary upon adopting her last week, McMahon's spokesman, Joe Bleeden, said Thursday. The girl, who was 10 days old Thursday, is the couple's first child, he said.

UP FOR SALE — Swami Deva Sapan contemplates the inevitable closure of Rajneeshpuram as he sits amongst chairs collected in Rajneesh Mandir, an 88,000-square-foot assembly hall where Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh held court. The chairs and other furnishings and equipment are being gathered together in anticipation of an auction as the Indian guru's commune winds down. (AP Laserphoto)

Everything's for sale at commune of Indian guru

RAJNEESHPURAM, Ore. (AP) — The assembly hall where guru Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh held court is silent, a drum pushed into a corner the only reminder of raucous celebrations by thousands of singing and dancing disciples.

The 88,000-square-foot hall — Rajneesh Mandir — now is being filled with hundreds of chairs, piles of pillows, desks and other items being sold as the commune liquidates its assets.

Mud is tracked across the linoleum floors where shoes once were banned. The guru's state-of-the-art public address system lies dismantled on the floor in front of the stage.

The 400 or so disciples who remain in the north-central Oregon commune gather elsewhere for meetings and the now infrequent meditation sessions.

After the commune was established in 1981, followers poured in millions of dollars and countless hours of free labor trying to realize Rajneesh's dream of a model community. He envisioned it as a showplace that would draw 100,000 disciples and the world's admiration. At its height, the commune had a population of perhaps 4,000.

On Nov. 15, however, Rajneesh pleaded guilty to two federal charges of immigration fraud and agreed to leave the country. A week later, leaders announced the commune would be disbanded and disciples began leaving.

A plan approved in federal bankruptcy court requires the commune to pare the population to 100 by Dec. 24.

Those who want to join the caretaker crew and stay until the property is sold are writing letters to the commune leaders. Others are joining Rajneesh communes elsewhere, forming new businesses or relocating enterprises once based at Rajneeshpuram.

The Rajneesh International Meditation University is moving to Italy, where disciples also plan to start a publishing business. The Rajneesh Times, the commune's weekly newspaper, may move to Colorado or California. Other members purchased gardening tools from the commune and plan to start a landscaping business in California.

"I think it's really interesting seeing all these sannyasins going out and being sprinkled all over the world," said Swami Satyam Ambhoj, who was compiling a list of forwarding addresses.

He didn't know when he would leave or where he would go. "I guess I'll figure it out on the way," said Ambhoj.

Hundreds escape river collision

DONALDSONVILLE, La. (AP) — The $15.5 million Mississippi Queen languished on a sandbar today while the Coast Guard sought to learn why the swank sternwheeler, with 431 people aboard, collided with a tugboat in the Mississippi River above New Orleans.

Three people among the 272 passengers and 159 crewmen were treated for minor injuries after the collision Thursday. One crewman of the excursion boat was rescued from the river by another passing tug.

The collision left the Mississippi Queen with a gaping hole in its bow, while the tugboat Crimson Glory, owned by Agri Trans Corp. of Long Grove, Ill., apparently was not in need of major repairs.

"We were enjoying a vacation. It ruined it, it really did. Thank God it wasn't worse," said passenger William Smith, 69, of Rockland County, N.Y.

The 382-foot Mississippi Queen, which features a sauna, swimming pool and wide-screen movie theater, had left New Orleans last Friday, churning up Vicksburg, Miss., and was returning to New Orleans.

It was pushed onto a sandbar to keep it from sinking.

National government solvent again, at least until Monday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is operating through Monday under a temporary money bill while Congress finishes work on long-term spending legislation — and President Reagan tries to reverse his defeat on tax revision.

A government shutdown today was avoided Thursday night, when Congress extended the government's spending authority until 6 p.m. Monday. The House and Senate also extended the 16-cent-a-pack cigarette tax, the dairy price support program and current Medicaid reimbursement levels, all due to expire this week, in anticipation of permanent bills early next week.

Without action, the cigarette tax would have dropped to 8 cents and dairy price support levels would have soared.

Congress is eager to break for the holidays and was shooting for adjournment this week. But the spending bill must be finished first. The legislation is needed because many of the regular appropriations bills have not been passed and signed by the president.

House and Senate negotiators abandoned efforts to meet the midnight deadline with a long-term bill after they were unable to resolve differences over spending by the Defense and Interior departments. The four-day extension was then quickly approved and sent to President Reagan, who said he would sign it.

The administration, handed a stinging defeat Wednesday when only 14 House Republicans voted for the tax overhaul bill, lobbied hard Thursday to gain enough votes before Congress departs.

However, the president and his top aides appeared to gain only a few pledges of support. Some of those were on the condition that Democratic leaders reverse themselves and agree to open the bill to amendment on the floor.

The House bill to revise the income tax code was written by Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., and other Democrats on his Ways and Means Committee, but it is reasonably similar to the tax plan proposed by Reagan.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said he wouldn't let the tax bill come up again this year unless the votes were in place.

"If the president can deliver 50 to 75 votes ... we'll bring it up," he said. "If the Republicans want to kill it, that's their business."

Lawmakers also were working to find agreement on the farm bill and on a separate budget package designed to save $80 billion in the next three years.

The farm bill negotiations moved forward Thursday in a hard-fought area when Senate negotiators voted 6-2 to accept a House-offered package dealing with subsidies and price support levels for wheat and corn through the end of the decade.

Under the proposal, the per-bushel income subsidy levels for those two crops would be frozen at current levels for the next two years, then be reduced in small increments in each of the following three years. Income guarantee levels in 1990 would be about 90 percent of current targets.

A separate House-Senate conference committee has labored all week on disputed portions of a bill designed to reduce deficits by about $80 billion in the next three years. The bill would commit Congress to making the spending cuts and tax changes envisioned in the budget passed last summer.

President Reagan on Thursday signed a balanced-budget bill that would force even further cuts, including up to $11.7 billion this fiscal year.
