U.S. exercises in Libyan gulf conclude today

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. naval exercises in the Gulf of Sidra will end later today, the Pentagon announced this morning.

A spokesman, Maj. Fred Lash, said only:

"The exercise by the 6th Fleet in the Gulf of Sidra is ending today."

He would not be more specific. First word that the exercises were about to end came from the Italian government. In Rome, a spokesman said the United States had informed Premier Bettino Craxi's office that the maneuvers would soon be over.

The spokesman, Antonio Ghirelli, said his government had been told of the decision to suspend the operations at 6 a.m. EST.

An hour later, a spokesman for the 6th Fleet in Naples said the operations were not yet over.

"The ships are continuing to operate as scheduled," said Capt. Douglas Strode, a Navy joint information bureau spokesman for the U.S. European Command in Naples.

"There haven't been any incidents or things with the 6th Fleet ships. They're continuing to operate in the same area of Sidra," he said.

Defense Department sources said that if the maneuvers within the gulf do end today, the 6th Fleet vessels would remain nearby in the Mediterranean Sea.

The Pentagon had said the current naval maneuvers would occur between last Saturday and April 1.

Word of the impending departure came as Libya vowed to retaliate with terrorism for the destruction wrought by the U.S. warships.

It also followed a day on which the Pentagon reported that U.S. planes and ships operated without challenge inside the disputed gulf. The American forces remained on what amounted to a war-time alert, officials said, primed for action against an enemy that didn't appear.

"We have demonstrated that we have the right to operate in international waters." Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims said. "You have to do that periodically. There's nothing unusual about a freedom-of-navigation exercise. What is unusual is that Mr. Khadafy chose to react to it with force."

On Monday morning Eastern time, less than 24 hours after U.S. planes and ships first entered the gulf, Libya fired at least six surface-to-air missiles, according to the Pentagon. U.S. forces on Monday and early Tuesday subsequently sank three Libyan boats, damaged at least one other and twice attacked a radar-guided missile facility near the Libyan town of Sirte, the Pentagon has said.

In the absence of military action Wednesday, the U.S. government ordered tightened security at its installations worldwide.

And in another development, Vice Adm. Frank B. Kelso told reporters visiting the carrier USS Saratoga he had exercised his authority as fleet commander to order an attack on Libyan forces immediately after Libya fired its first missiles against his planes Monday.

"We did nothing to provoke an action," Kelso said, adding no U.S. ship had moved closer than 72 miles to the Libyan coastline. "We were not going to permit them to attack our forces."

Khadafy claims the gulf, a large, U-shaped appendage of the Mediterranean that cuts into the central Libyan coastline, as his own territorial waters. That contention is dismissed by the United States, which recognizes only a 12-mile limit.

Among related developments: —In a Kremlin speech, Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev called the U.S. missile attacks aggression that was "conceived and planned in advance." He added that he would be willing to withdraw Soviet combat ships from the Mediterranean if the United States would do the same, and offered to begin negotiations on such a withdrawal.

Contra aid compromise comes apart

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both sides in the Nicaraguan aid debate agreed the Senate still was likely to approve President Reagan's $100 million package of assistance to the Contra rebels after attempts to forge a strong bipartisan compromise failed.

The Republican-controlled Senate was scheduled to return to debate on the issue today and vote before leaving on an Easter recess.

Before the Senate voted on final passage, several amendments were expected to be considered, including proposals to kill the package outright, or to modify it by requiring U.S.-Nicaragua peace talks or to delay release of the aid until another congressional vote is taken.

Whatever plan the Senate approves will be sent back to the Democratic-controlled House, where Reagan's proposal was defeated last week 222-210.

"I don't think we have the votes to impose any substantial changes" on Reagan's package, Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., the chief spokesman for Democrats opposed to the plan, said late Wednesday.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, generally agreed with Sasser, but was cautious in his estimate of support for the Reagan package. "My guess is that we have 51 votes," he told reporters.

Reagan's plan would give $70 million in military aid and $30 million in non-lethal help to the Contra guerrillas fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government. The current U.S. aid package, which expires Monday, includes $27 million in non-lethal assistance for items such as medicine and clothing.

Reagan has offered to modify his proposal by withholding any "offensive" weapons from the Contras for 90 days while the United States and Nicaragua try to negotiate their differences.

Lugar and Sasser were the key players in a daylong series of meetings Wednesday aimed at adopting a compromise that would meet the concerns of enough critics to win a large approval vote and send a message of unity to Managua.

Sasser said progress had been made until Adm. John M. Poindexter, the national security adviser, appeared at the meeting in the office of Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

"The admiral, he just steamed in there at flank speed and just said, we're not going to have any negotiations (between Washington and Managua) without preconditions," Sasser said.

But Lugar disagreed, saying Poindexter "cannot be blamed for torpedoing anything" and said his views had been sought because "the administration's thoughts are important to us." Lugar blamed the breakdown on the Democrats.

Following Nicaragua's reported incursion into neighboring Honduras to attack Contras operating across the border, Reagan on Tuesday said he was sending $20 million in emergency military aid to Honduras to help that U.S. ally cope with the Nicaraguan action. U.S. officials said about 100 Sandinistas and 80 Contras had been killed in four days of fighting. However, accounts of fighting could not be verified independently, and Honduran military sources said soldiers were ordered to keep journalists out of the border area.

Report says proposal safe

Dump foes blast business panel study

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A proposal that a nuclear waste dump be located near Hereford has evoked bitter opposition, but initial studies indicate the proposal would be safe and also provide a major boost to the area economy, a committee of area civic and business leaders concluded.

Wayne Sturdivant, chairman of the committee, recommended during a news conference Wednesday that the Department of Energy proceed with a site characterization phase of the project to select the nation's first high-level nuclear waste depository.

The report doesn't constitute an endorsement of a nuclear dump in Deaf Smith County, only a realization that the site characterization phase will occur despite how state or local officials feel.

The committee released a study, in progress since mid-1985 and sponsored by the chambers of commerce in Amarillo and Hereford, the Amarillo Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, West Texas State University, and Amarillo College. Sturdivant's report drew criticism from opponents of a nuclear waste dump in the Panhandle.

Wayne Richardson, who operates a multimillion dollar seed company adjacent to the proposed site in northern Deaf Smith County, about 35 miles west of Amarillo, complained that the committee "swallowed the line" from federal officials trying to sell the area on the repository.

"It will be a devastating blow to this area out here," Richardson said, referring to the prospects of a dump in the Panhandle. "There will be billions lost."

Committee members concluded the nuclear waste repository would have positive effects on the beleaguered Panhandle economy. Estimates of the annual impact range from $116 million to $227 million, making the dump one of the largest economic activities in the region.

Richardson and others reacted angrily Wednesday in response to a move by the Amarillo chamber to accept a committee study supporting the DOE's consideration of conducting site characterization tests at a 9-square mile site south of Interstate 40 near Vega.

Vega is along the southern edge of Oldham County. The town is 35 miles west of Amarillo and 30 miles north of Hereford, the seat of Deaf Smith County.

"In our opinion, the DOE and the federal government already have decided to test the Deaf Smith County site regardless of local or state opinion," the report said. The DOE is expected to announce where it will conduct characterization in April.

"What we should be discussing is, if we are going to be the site, we should work together to see that the impact of it is favorable and not negative," Sturdivant said.

George Drain, chairman of Serious Texans Against Nuclear Dumping, said opponents of the dump aren't basing their opposition strictly on fear, but on well-founded doubts about technology to be used in the dump.

In Austin, Steve Frishman, of the governor's nuclear waste programs office, took issue with the chamber and its belief the DOE should go ahead with site characterization at the Deaf Smith site before the federal agency has announced such an avenue.

Frishman said technical information in his office shows the Deaf Smith site isn't suitable for locating the dump.

Angela Lamb, spokesman for the Texas Department of Agriculture in Amarillo, said the state's No. 1 agriculture-producing county is in danger with the prospects of the dump. Deaf Smith generates $400 million annually directly from agriculture, plus more from ag-related businesses.

Committee members concluded that unanswered questions about the location would be answered only through the characterization process and listed 12 assurances it was seeking from the Department of Energy in its selection process.

Among those are a written warranty to all individuals and entities that could be adversely affected economically by the site.

Sturdivant said the committee

Pampa Rotarian may be one in a million

One of the two new members of the Pampa Rotary Club could have the distinction of being the world's 1 millionth Rotarian.

Ray Thompson and Danny Parkerson, both of Pampa, were admitted to membership the week of Feb. 17, when the international service club passed the 1 million member milestone.

Rotary International President Edward F. Cadman is determining the 1 millionth Rotarian in a random drawing of all new Rotarians worldwide admitted during that week. The selectee will be honored June 1 at the organization's international convention in Las Vegas, Nev.

Feb. 23 marked the anniversary of the founding of Rotary in Chicago in 1905. Currently, there are more than 22,000 Rotary clubs, made up of business and professional men in 160 different countries and geographic regions, with service activities benefiting youth, the disabled, the elderly and the community.

In Pampa, the local Rotary Club is involved in projects as diverse as the Wonderful World of Travel Film Series, a blood drive with the Altrusa Club, an Easter Seal Project and Little League baseball, raising funds for 15 charitable organizations.

The Rotary Foundation has spent more than $127 million worldwide on international humanitarian and educational programs since 1947. The foundation funds scholarships for study abroad, exchange programs and large-scale health care, nutrition and community development projects in Third World nations.

The foundation's new PolioPlus program, which will cost an estimated $120 million, aims to immunize children against polio and supports immunization campaigns against other vaccine-preventable diseases in developing countries.

Waste dump

is satisfied that possible transportation means and the storage of salt above ground would not pose threats to the Panhandle residents.

While no device for transporting the waste has been chosen, the Amarillo lawyer said, "If they adopted the method of transportation they are now testing, we believe it would be safe."

Assurances the committee has received from technical experts on salt led them to conclude it could be stored without spreading into areas adjacent to the dump site, Sturdivant said.

Committee members realized early on in the study that they wouldn't be able to affect a decision on choosing Deaf Smith County for site characterization, Sturdivant said.

The test of the Deaf Smith County site, listed last year as one of three possible locations for the dump, which is set to be operational by 1998, would include drilling test holes and two full-scale mine shafts.

Committee members estimated the Department of Energy would spend between $600 million and $900 million on the site characterization.

The Amarillo Chamber of Commerce accepted the report, but took no formal action on it Wednesday.

Air Force wants more rockets as space shuttle replacement

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Air Force wants additional rockets to launch satellites and a replacement for space shuttle Challenger to meet a backlog that in one to two years could total 10 to 21 satellites the service says are essential to national security.

"The near-term impact on the Department of Defense is severe if the orbiter fleet is down for a year," Edward C. Aldridge, the Air Force's top space official, said Wednesday. "There is no recovery option that will mitigate this impact within the next two years."

Aldridge, testifying before two Senate subcommittees, said decisions must be made immediately "to minimize the negative long-term impacts of the orbiter loss."

The Air Force has had 10 expendable launch vehicles (ELVs) on order since last year when it convinced Congress that the nation could not afford to rely on only one launch system — the shuttle.

"Even with additional ELVs, it is not clear that the current three-orbiter fleet can meet the demands of both NASA and DOD," said Aldridge, the undersecretary of the Air Force.

"Our view of this is that it's a national emergency," he said.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration, which once fought to prevent the Air Force from getting throwaway rockets that might divert military payloads from the shuttle, endorsed them Wednesday.

"The right thing for us to do is to have a balance between shuttle capabilities and ELV capabilities," said Richard Truly, a Navy rear admiral and former shuttle astronaut who was appointed as NASA's shuttle chief after the Jan. 28 Challenger explosion.

Truly said, as he has before, that NASA expects at least a year's down time before any shuttle flies again.

When the flights resume, Aldridge said, the Pentagon will exercise its "bumping rights" to reduce a backlog of 10 military payloads that will have accumulated by then.

If the down time is two years, there will be 21 backed up military payloads, Aldridge said.

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, who as chairman of the subcommittee that oversees NASA spending flew on the shuttle last year, had opposed the Air Force request last year for its own expendable rockets to launch satellites.

On Wednesday, he apologized to Aldridge: "I think it's fair to say that you were right and I was wrong. I'm glad you held me to the fire."

Stock market moves to another new high

By The Associated Press

For the third time this month, the stock market has chalked up a gain of more than 30 points in one session — and hit a record high as well.

Fueled by hopes for more declines in interest rates, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 32.20 to 1,810.70 Wednesday, surpassing the peak of 1,804.24 it reached last Thursday.

The average soared 43.10 points on March 11 and another 39.03 on March 14.

In other economic news Wednesday:

—Citgo Petroleum Corp. said it was cutting the price it would pay for immediate delivery of the major grade of U.S. crude oil by $1 to $13 a barrel, among the lowest prices currently being offered by a major U.S. producer. The average posting price currently ranges between $14 and $15 a barrel.

—McGraw-Hill Information Systems Co. said new construction contracts in the United States increased by 11 percent in February on the strength of a startup in delayed public works projects.

—Yields on seven-year Treasury notes fell to 7.48 percent in Wednesday's auction, the lowest level in more than eight years.

Wall Street analysts said the market bounced back from a recent spell of profit-taking with the help of a highly positive news background. The 0.4 percent drop in the Consumer Price Index reported by the government Tuesday exceeded most expectations on Wall Street. With inflation dormant and economic activity remaining relatively subdued, many analysts believe the case has been strengthened lately for more easing of credit policy by the Federal Reserve.

Trade deficit pushed lower by oil prices

WASHINGTON (AP)—The country's foreign trade deficit, aided by falling petroleum prices, totaled $12.5 billion in February, 24 percent below the record deficit set in January, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said imports of petroleum products plunged by 28 percent. The decline in imported oil reflected a cut in the amount purchased and the price of oil.

An average of 5.4 million barrels of oil was purchased daily, down from 6.2 million barrels a day in January while the price fell to $24.85 per barrel, down $2.29 from the January level. This was the lowest oil price since November 1979.

The price of oil on the spot market has fallen by more than $10 per barrel since November. But the bulk of oil is purchased under long-term contracts that do not change as quickly as the spot market price. Still, experts believe one of the major positive factors that will help the country's trading performance this year will be lower oil prices.

Economists also believe that the sharp decline in the value of the dollar will help to boost exports while reducing Americans' appetite for foreign goods.

The dollar has fallen by 30 percent since it peaked in March 1985, but experts say it normally takes between one year and 18 months for a currency decline to show up in more favorable trade numbers.

The improvement in the trade deficit last month came from a 9.7 percent drop in imports, which still totaled $30.2 billion, and a 4.3 percent rise in exports. This gain put exports at $17.7 billion, the highest monthly level since last June.

Libya calls for suicide attacks

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP)—The official media called on all Arabs to make suicide attacks against American targets around the world, but despite the rhetoric the Libyan capital and the disputed Gulf of Sidra appeared quiet.

State Department spokesman Charles Redman said in Washington that Libyan agents have U.S. installations under surveillance and may have targeted Americans for attack. He called the situation "potentially dangerous."

There were no signs in Tripoli Wednesday night of the anti-U.S. demonstrators who have paraded through the streets in recent days, and no sign of extraordinary military activity.

Anti-American posters were tacked up at the airport. One showed a figure with headgear resembling that of the Statue of Liberty, its arms filled with an American flag and missiles with the Star of David on them. A black man and an American Indian were shown spiked on Liberty's pointed crown.

No new action was reported in the Gulf of Sidra, where the U.S. 6th fleet remained on alert after its warplanes hit at least four Libyan patrol boats and a shore installation Monday and Tuesday.

U.S. officials said the attacks were in response to at least six Libyan missiles fired at U.S. planes.

The 6th fleet commander said Wednesday that the Libyan attack had provided valuable information about a part of the Soviet arsenal the U.S. military has never seen in combat.

Libya is one of the Soviet Union's main allies in the Middle East.

Vice Adv. Frank B. Kelso, aboard the Saratoga, told reporters it was the first time that American-piloted jets had been fired on by SA-5s, relatively old surface-to-air missiles that are still a mainstay of Soviet air defenses.

Libyan radio, monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp. in London, urged Arabs of all countries to transform themselves

"into suicide squads and into human bombs, missiles and aircraft to deter and resist terrorism and destroy it for good."

"Oh heroes of our Arab nation, let your missiles and suicide cells pursue American terrorist embassies and interests wherever they may be."

Prime Minister Carmelo Bonnici of Malta visited Tripoli to meet Khadafi, according to Maltese and Libyan official reports.

"We, Mediterranean states, have to understand that we are on the edge of a precipice and if we do not move back, we will throw our peoples into serious trouble," he was quoted as saying on his return home.

Two Miami students advance to regional FOLLETT — Two Miami students qualified for regional literary competition by taking top honors at the district literary meet here Saturday.

The meet was the first step toward the Class I-A University Interscholastic League state championships in May.

Christy Seal took first place in prose while Tracey Stauff placed second in poetry.

Tonya Gilmer of Briscoe placed third in prose.

TEXCEL program topic for chamber luncheon

Jay Kayne, Texas Economic Development Commission deputy executive director, will be the featured speaker at the March monthly membership luncheon of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce on Monday.

Kayne will discuss specific details of the TEXCEL economic development program under which Pampa has been selected as one of 37 cities in the state.

The luncheon will begin at 11:45 a.m. Monday in the Starlight Room at Coronado Inn.

The TEXCEL program — Texas Cities for Economic Leadership — is administered by the Texas Economic Development Commission and is co-sponsored by the Texas Municipal League and the Texas Industrial Development Council.

The economic development program will be coordinated locally by city officials, the Chamber and the Pampa Industrial Foundation.

TEXCEL staff members and professionals will train local leaders in different aspects of economic issues, help set up a coordinating organization, provide general guidelines and assist local personnel in devising a local economic development strategy.

Pampa received notification last week of its acceptance as a TEXCEL community under the new program unveiled last fall at a TML convention by Gov. Mark White.

The state will provide experts to assist local businesses, industries and municipal leaders in setting up and coordinating an economic development strategy to improve the economic climate of the city.

The buffet luncheon is sponsored by Cabot Corporation. Cost is $6.50 a person.

Chamber President Bill Duncan said reservations should be made with the Chamber office by 5 p.m. Friday.

School district trying to attract spring-break teachers

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP)—College students on spring break have flocked to area beaches to forget about school, but local education officials don't want to let them.

The Brownsville Independent School District needs about 400 teachers for math, English, science, elementary and special education for the fall semester, and it has advertised for teachers both in and out of state.

But now, they are interrupting the rock 'n' roll tunes on local radio stations to try to attract would-be teachers who are tanning at South Padre Island.

"Like the beach, stay and teach," is the message that blares from stereos in cars, on the beach and around hotel swimming pools.

The message tells listeners about the teaching field, the salaries, bonuses and fringe benefits in an area close to the border and the beach with great weather year round.

"The radio spots are just something new," said Oscar Barbour, assistant superintendent for personnel. "We have to try everything. We thought radio was the best way to do it."

During the month of March, more than 150,000 people—most of them college students—will have visited the area, chamber of commerce officials say. The throngs will pump about $8 million into the area economy.

BISD officials want prospective teachers to return permanently.

The enrollment next year is expected to be about 38,000 students in 33 schools. There are about 1,950 teachers in the district, Barbour said.

He said because of state-mandated education reforms and the 6 percent attrition rate, about 400 teachers will be needed in all fields next year.

"We've been losing a lot of kids to other fields," Barbour said. "I think it's time we tell them it has a good salary, good fringe benefits and that it's a good profession."

Barbour also said there are about 1,500 students from Mexico who will be enrolled in the local school district and with the student-teacher ratio rule, the district will have to build more elementary and secondary schools.

He said he is confident the district's teachers will pass the competency test administered earlier this month.

"We feel most of our people will be OK, but the attrition rate will really have an effect," Barbour said.

Last year, 60 percent of the school district's new teachers came from states other than Texas, Barbour said. College students from as far away as Wisconsin have spent their spring breaks in deep South Texas, and Barbour hopes some of them would want to return as teachers.

"There just seemed to be shortage of teachers. Maybe we've been missing the boat a lot of years," Barbour said of not trying to attract spring breakers.

He said he has received some responses to the advertisements, but hopes to get more next week.

"It's just another form of advertising," Barbour said. "We knew the kids were not going to pick up a newspaper and read it, but they would have the radio on. It's something we had to do."

Goddess of Liberty takes up residence in small town

By ROGER CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

RHOME, Texas (AP)—Bravo Walker moved to this rural town northwest of Dallas and converted an old cotton gin into his art foundry, his refuge to sculpt and escape.

But these days he is drawing distracting crowds.

The Goddess of Liberty is occupying his already storied

American Art Foundry, and the folks in this town of less than 500 situated off Texas Highway 114 are visiting with the open-eyed vigor of tourists.

"It's the biggest thing that has happened here," said Walker, who is making master molds from the old Goddess for the casting of an aluminum replica.

"We've had so many people come by here — from the banker to the man who owns the grocery store.

They really want to see it."

The replica is expected to be airlifted to the top of the Texas Capitol on May 31.

Today, they would see the weather- and time-worn Goddess scattered in about 100 large pieces throughout Walker's studio.

They would see, on any day, a crew of two to seven people using shells of clay, plaster and rubber to develop a perfect likeness of each section. They would see the workers paint layers and layers of wax until the appropriate thickness of the statue panel is achieved.

"We want to make the maximum structure, so we won't have to do it in another 100 years," said Patrick Rice, vice president and general manager of Washington University Technology Associates, a restoration engineering firm assigned to the project.

"We're using a very old technique done in Africa about 6,000 years ago," he said.

The project began soon after the Goddess was removed last fall. She had stood on top of the Capitol for 97 years before her 1½-ton zinc frame deteriorated beyond repair.

"The problem with the old Goddess was the corrosion through the surface of the metal," said Rice.

The new Goddess will be cast in sections by pouring molten aluminum into the ceramic shells.

GODDESS RESTORATION — Bravo Walker sits with the original head of the Goddess of Liberty and a small replica of the Goddess. The Goddess, which was removed from her place on top of the State Capital building in Austin is being restored by Walker at his Rhome foundry and will eventually be recast in Houston. (AP Laserphoto)

Look! Up in the air! It's...

Early, very early Wednesday morning, around 5 a.m., I dragged myself out of bed, slipped on only a jacket, a pair of pants and a pair of loafers and went out to my car.

I then drove out to the loop, turned south and drove a couple of miles. There I stopped the car, got my binoculars and stepped outside to look up in the clear sky for Halley's comet.

I saw a wide, very wide band of silvery milkiness — but it was no comet's tail. Instead, there was a bright, full moon casting shadows along the flat ground and obscuring any hope for me to hunt out the dim trail of the comet.

So I just drove back home, undressed and slipped back into bed. I later mentioned the disappointing experience to Paul. I received no sympathy. Instead, he expressed wonderment that anyone would want to waste time looking at a piece of dirty ice in the sky, especially at that time of the night. And to rub it in, he offered to come by my house in the middle of the night and toss an ice cube past my bedroom window.

It took me awhile, but I was finally able to come back with a comment: "Well, Paul, there are those who always have their feet stuck in the mud, and then there are those of us with our heads in the stars."

I have always been intrigued by the mysteries and the wonders of the planets, comets, stars, galaxies and whatever else lies beyond our atmosphere.

I can still remember the first really big book I read, 300 pages or so, while only in the second grade. It was a collection of science fiction stories, and among them was H. P. Lovecraft's "The Colour Out of Space."

I became a big sci-fi fan, reading Heinlein, Van Vogt, Bradbury, Clarke and numerous others over the years, and attending all the sci-fi shows that came to town. And I read widely in the field of astronomy and other sciences, memorized the constellations and various stars and planets in the sky, looked through smoky glass at the various partial solar eclipses we had in the area, gazed at Comet Khoutek.

And I was soured by the launching of the Sputnik and then soared with Shepherd and Glenn as they headed out into space, even being late to junior high on the morning Glenn circled the earth, my mother not being able to pull me away from the TV set.

I can still recall one warm summer night when my friend Mike and I slept out on the flat roof of his garage. We were listening to Wolfman Jack when he was still in Del Rio. Mike fell asleep, but I remained awake, gazing at the twinkling stars, watching for falling stars and thinking how great it would be to travel among the stars.

Suddenly, almost as though it were a vision, I could feel myself being pulled into the sky, falling among the stars and the galaxies that rushed by me in a kaleidoscopic maelstrom. The experience was so real I became dizzy and grabbed for the shingles on the roof to keep myself from being pulled skyward.

Such was my attraction to the universe above us.

Over the years, though, some disillusionment has set in. I gave up my desire to have a career in astronomy when I realized all the math, chemistry and physics that was required. I've given up hope that I'll have a holiday on a space station or that there will be colonies on the Moon and Mars in my life time, and maybe never.

And the science fiction I loved has been replaced by dreary fantasies, sword and sorcery, Dungeons and Dragons rot, based more on weird imagination than speculations of factual possibilities.

When I was younger, so many science fiction writers had predicted the space stations and colonies to be common occurrences by now, or at least by the end of the century. Instead, we can't even count on a safe space shuttle presently.

And instead of Star Trek expeditions to "boldly go where no man has gone before," we have a President who would prefer to fill the skies with murderous weapons — although I have to admit there were writers who had predicted that eventually also.

But there are still times when that wonder and starry wanderlust returns: when I've seen and reread 2001: A Space Odyssey, Close Encounters of the Third Kind and even the Star Wars movies, though the latter are more fantasy than real science fiction.

Yet I have to face the strong probability my feet will remain gravity-bound to the earth. At least until I die.

Then I look forward to heaven, a heaven where there will be eternally available tours of the universe, the experience of watching some worlds end and helping others form, participating in the endless variety that will unroll through eternity with other sons and daughters of God.

Until then, I'll settle for a chance to glimpse Halley's comet or to view the pictures of Mars, Jupiter, Saturn and Uranus that have come back to us all too rarely.

Conservative blacks' problem

BY DEROY MURDOCK

As a young American who happens to be black, conservative, and outspoken about his beliefs, I have been charged with "selling out" to white America and being a "traitor" to my race. While these accusations are frustrating, they're also puzzling. It seems blacks are the only citizens in this country expected not to disagree with one another.

Debate among members of other ethnic groups is utterly routine. The majority of Irishmen voted for Ronald Reagan for president, yet no one accuses Rep. Tip O'Neill, (D-Mass.) leader of the loyal opposition in Congress, of "selling out" the Irish. Governor Mario Cuomo (D-N.Y.) serves the people of New York with a set of beliefs which conflict with those of the state's Republican senator, Alphonse D'Amato. Will the real Italian please stand up? Neoconservative Irving Kristol and New York Mayor Ed Koch can disagree without anyone questioning either's Jewish credentials.

Just as this diversity of "white opinion" raises no eyebrows, the disagreements of other minority groups are starting to look run-of-the-mill. For instance, while long-time Democrat Cesar Chavez organizes California farm workers, former White House aide Linda Chavez is seeking the Maryland Republican Senate nomination. Ms. Chavez's move has been hailed as a milestone in Hispanic progress and not denounced as a cynical betrayal of all Mr. Chavez ever stood for.

Why then is political pluralism, one of America's greatest strengths, so strongly discouraged in the black community? Many black and white liberals seem to feel there is only one "black" point of view to which all blacks must subscribe. But given blacks' diversity of values, backgrounds, and ambitions, the expectation that blacks will hold one set of beliefs is as ludicrous as the idea of unanimous "white" opinion on any matter.

There is a frightening premise underlying this thinking: that blacks are not yet sufficiently sophisticated to disagree with each other, or that the black rank-and-file is not equipped to choose between the differing opinions advocated by blacks of various political complexions.

But the fact is: blacks are becoming increasingly sophisticated in many areas, and consequently are being accepted by others now more than ever. In politics, Rep. William Gray (D-Pa.) has received kudos for his work as House Budget Committee chairman; last November Virginia voters elected a black lieutenant governor; Washington, Atlanta, Chicago, and Los Angeles are among the many cities which have elected black mayors. Bill Cosby, Whoopi Goldberg, and Lionel Richie are just three of the many black performers who have attracted sizable white, as well as black, audiences; and, with much less fanfare, a black middle-class is emerging.

Despite these encouraging signs, the need for debate among blacks has never been greater. While some 55 percent of black infants are born out of wedlock, and the number one cause of death among black males age 18 to 25 is murder, black conservatives cannot accept the notion that the formulas prescribed by liberal black leaders are either effective or desirable. With these and other grim realities facing blacks in the United States, it is time to examine alternative proposals to the status quo:

To revive our inner cities, black conservatives have proposed enterprise zones which would draw commerce to areas it has previously scorned.

To relieve black teenagers of a 45 percent unemployment rate, we have proposed a youth opportunity wage. It seems self-evident that it is better to be employed at $2.75 per hour than unemployed at $3.35.

To build a sense of community in public housing projects, we have proposed that residents in those areas be allowed to purchase their homes from the government at reasonable prices and interest rates.

To boost educational quality, we have proposed vouchers and tuition tax credits to give lower income families wider opportunities for schooling their children.

And with the hope of seeing policies and beliefs guided by personality rather than pigment, we have dreamed of a color-blind society - free of quotas and racial preference schemes.

Black conservatives also understand that by wedding themselves to one party, black Americans are being taken for granted by Democrats and seen as inaccessible by Republicans. In contrast, Hispanics remain uncommitted and thus have both parties courting them, appointing them, and supporting their efforts. Black Americans can benefit from the political leverage inherent in the bipartisan spirit Hispanics have embraced.

Black conservatives may not have all the right answers, but we have something to offer. We also do not expect to be agreed with on everything. But with so many black Americans in dire straits, we expect our ideas to be treated at least with curiosity and interest. And as people with the well-being of all Americans, black and otherwise, at the center of our thinking, we deserve to be treated with respect, not intolerance and verbal abuse.

It is time for black America to shed itself of monolithic thinking and wake up the internal debate which has witnessed the success of Irishmen, Italians, Jews, and others who emigrated to this land. If black progress is to come from within, we must have the courage to discuss new views - and listen to new voices.

Murdock, a black conservative activist, is a senior at Georgetown University.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Why do we choose a road to failure?

In the Soviet Union the other day, a man was put to death for his opinions. In India, another socialistic country, hundreds of thousands marched in the streets of New Delhi protesting government increases in the prices of food. The marchers included 750 women and about 100 members of Parliament. Their banners read: "A government that cannot feed its people is worthless. It should step down."

These are examples of things that are going on in communist-socialist states. They are characterized by political tyranny and economic failure.

Why, then, are we Americans, who have prospered under a free Constitution and free enterprise, demanding more and more services from government?

Why are we adopting more socialism when the failure of socialism is so widely demonstrated?

Is it because government is so efficient? Clearly it is not. Is it because we lack workers need to increase production? Quite the contrary. For several years, nearly 10 percent of our labor source has been unemployed. Is it because we lack natural resources from which to produce goods? We have them in abundance.

The only marked change over the last decade has been the increase of socialization. Whenever we have a big job to be done, we turn to political legislatures and demand that government do it. These projects range all the way from building a new school house to making the buckling of seat belts mandatory. They weaken Americans' willingness and ability to help themselves. The substitute bureaucrats for doers. They increase not only taxes, but government borrowing, which in turn creates excess paper money, which decreases the value of all money.

Some lay it to the lawyers, of whom we have an excess in our legislatures. When a question is raised, usually by a lawyer, the law-educated mind immediately formulates a new law to answer the question or settle the problem.

Well, we elected them. It is natural for them to assume that we chose them to solve problems by passing laws.

We have a president who claims to believe that we have too many laws, and that we collect and spend too many dollars. But when he acts to cut back a federal agency, people label him a tightwad. The cry goes up: "Our children are hungry, but our president wants to spend more for guns."

The No. 1 danger facing this country is not the federal deficit, nor is it the danger of attack from abroad. Our main threat is that we are neglecting freedom and adopting socialism, differently named but as fallacious as ever. We, like the rats of Hamelin, are following the Pied Piper on a route that can lead only to destruction.

A 'service station' again

Now that there is plenty of oil again and oil prices have plummeted to new lows, I've noticed some distinct changes at my local service station.

About the only service that had been rendered me before was there was a kid named Arnold to take my money for the gasoline and sell me paper towels to clean off my dipstick.

I drove in the other day, however, and Arnold ran out to greet me.

It was the first time I had seen him when he wasn't wearing his Walkman, listening to his favorite punk group, Sickening Imbeciles, and sporting a T-shirt that read, "You Obviously Have Me Confused With Somebody Who Gives A Damn."

"Fill it up, Mr. Grizzard?" he said quite cheerfully.

"Have you been sniffing gas fumes again, Arnold?" I asked.

"No, sir," he replied. "We just want you to know how much we appreciate your business."

Want Abdul to clean your windshield?"

"Who is Abdul?"

"New guy who just came to work. He used to be a sheik, but when the oil prices dropped he lost his sheikdom and came to work here."

"Hey, Abdul! Get out here and clean the man's windshield."

Abdul came out of the garage where he had been washing a car by hand.

"A thousand pardons," he said to me. "It pleases me greatly to have the opportunity to clean your windshield, and could I interest you in a clean, one-owner camel at a once-in-a-lifetime price?"

Arnold filled my car with gasoline, checked my oil and checked the water in my radiator. He also filled my windshield cleaner container and polished my hood ornament with a towel Abdul had been wearing around his head.

Abdul, meanwhile, not only cleaned my windshield, he even pressed down on the spots where bugs had splattered themselves. He also check-ed the air in my tires and came off $50 on the price of the camel and threw in a Rolex watch.

Arnold also brought me a handful of road maps and told me I could take all I wanted free of charge.

"Eastern United States is a very popular item with our other customers," he said.

I was flabbergasted at such treatment. This is how I had remembered service stations when they actually were "service stations."

"What do I owe you?" I asked when Arnold and Abdul couldn't think of anything more they could do for me.

"Let me check," said Arnold. "We're currently getting 82 cents a gallon, but if you'll wait a minute or two, that will go down. We're having a gas war with the guy down the street. He'll go to 81 any second and I'll have to counter with 80." I made a phone call and finally bought at 78.

"See you dipsticks, later," I said as I drove away. By the way, anybody know what a camel eats?

Textile industry losing imports battle

By Robert Walters

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. (NEA) — The Eno Cotton Mill here has a long, proud tradition dating back to its construction in 1895 — but today it stands abandoned and forlorn behind a barbed wire fence.

The mill's plight in recent years typifies the anguish of the entire textile industry as it has sought to cope with competition beyond its control: the torrent of low-cost imports from throughout the world.

The mill, the 550 jobs it provided at its peak, the residents of this small community and the plant's owner, Cone Mills Corp., all are victims.

In the late 1950s, Cone Mills began producing corduroy at the sprawling 340,000-square-foot facility, but by the early 1980s, this country was experiencing what William O. Leonard, a company vice president, describes as "severe import penetration" of that fabric.

Cone Mills sought to keep the plant open by adding twills and other fabrics to its product line, but they also faced stiff competition from imports.

"After losing $7 million at that one facility, we just had to give it up," says Leonard. The plant closed permanently in early 1984.

The textile, fiber and apparel industry is the largest single source of employment in North Carolina, providing jobs for slightly more than 300,000 people — but its payrolls now are being relentlessly pared.

In January, the most recent month for which statistics are available, slightly more than 205,000 men and women were working in the state's textile mills alone — a decline of more than 20,000 from the comparable figure only one year earlier. Nationally, more than 150,000 textile mill jobs have been lost since 1980.

At that time, U.S. textile and apparel imports were equivalent to 4.8 billion square yards of material. That figure increased in each ensuing year and by 1985 it had more than doubled, to 10.8 billion square yards.

Last year, the value of this country's textile and apparel imports was $21.2 billion. The value of its comparable exports was less than $3.2 billion, producing a trade deficit of more than $18 billion.

Many of the cheap imports come from Hong Kong, South Korea and the two Chinas — but they also originate in Portugal, Turkey, Sri Lanka, Mauritius and scores of Third World nations where workers are paid less for a full day's work than mill employees in this country earn in an hour.

"I don't want to see the standard of living in China improved on the backs of North Carolinians," says Charles Dunn, executive vice president of the North Carolina Textile Manufacturers Association.

"If the trend continues, we could easily go back to rural poverty like we haven't seen in this state since the Depression," adds Dunn.

Mattox promises hearings on liability insurance problems

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox, saying he is disappointed that the State Board of Insurance won't hold special public hearings on liability insurance, says he will launch a probe on his own.

"Since the State Board of Insurance will not use its statutory authority to get to the bottom of this, my office will use every power within our authority to do this job," Mattox said Wednesday in an exchange of letters with board chairman Lyndon Olson.

Olson told Mattox earlier that the board had no immediate plans for a special hearing because the board had no specific information about state law violations in the insurance industry.

"The State Board of Insurance is proceeding in accord with our best judgment and within the constraints of our authority to seek solutions to today's liability insureance problems and to assist Texas consumers in finding coverage," Olson said in answer to Mattox's March 7 and 19 letters asking for the hearing. "We believe we are moving properly and successfully."

Mattox said he asked for the special hearing because "our citizens who own small businesses, our local government officials and local taxpayers, our professionals such as ministers and corporation officers are confused and suspicious about why they suddenly cannot obtain liability coverage or, if they can, their rates are double or triple what they paid last year — even though they've had no claims filed against them."

Olson replied that Mattox mentioned facts that he did not forward to him.

"If you have specific information in your possession which warrants board action, please forward such information immediately," Olson said.

He added that it was his understanding that the attorney general had authority to prosecute any unfair trade practices.

"I believe that the attorney general's office has full powers under the anti-trust statutes and other laws to bring charges where the evidence is indicated," Olson said. "I understand that you have authority to initiate fact-finding visits in relation to that authority."

Olson said no special hearing was planned on liability insurance but information could be submitted at an upcoming hearing on the "claims-made" policy in commercial liability insurance.

"We plan to again entertain testimony on market availability to meet the public need for information," Olson said.

Police catch one escapee

GAINESVILLE, Texas (AP) — The first time Lawrence Edward Byrom escaped from Cooke County Jail, he escaped in a taxi.

The second time, authorities said, he and another escapee commandeered a pickup truck and abducted the driver.

Authorities continued their search today for Byrom, 56 — who has been called half of a modern-day Bonnie and Clyde, husband-wife bank-robbing team — and three other men who sawed through bars Monday night and escaped.

Five men escaped from the jail, but Steven Dooley, 22, was arrested in Gainesville Wednesday without incident.

Byrom and his wife, Alice Hart Byrom, pleaded guilty last year to robbing four North Texas banks.

Byrom was serving a 50-year federal sentence and was in Cooke County awaiting trial next month in connection with the June 1983 robbery of Valley View National Bank. Mrs. Byrom is serving a 25-year sentence in federal prison in Alderson, W. Va.

Authorities said it was not the first time that Byrom had escaped from the Cooke County Jail. In 1960, Byrom and another prisoner overpowered a guard and made a phone call.

"They called (a cab company) and said send a cab to the county jail," said Lewis Rigler, a retired Texas Ranger who pursued Byrom in 1950. "The cab driver came down there, and they walked out and got in the cab."

But this time, Byrom used a less-willing driver, Cooke County Sheriff John Aston said.

Byrom and Thomas Bromfield, 25, released the hostage Wednesday in Wise County, Aston said. He said they had commandeered the man's pickup truck Monday night and had stolen a rifle and ammunition from a Denton County house.

96-year-old man seeks re-election

BALLINGER, Texas (AP) — Felix Itz might be the oldest person running for re-election in Texas. And he might be the oldest elected official, period.

But that doesn't matter much to Itz. At age 96, he's doing what he enjoys — working as Runnels County surveyor — and nobody is opposing him so far for re-election.

When asked how long he had been county surveyor, Itz grins and says, "I always forget that. I believe I was appointed in October 1958. Gosh, I didn't think it was that long ago."

What did he do before becoming the Runnels County surveyor?

Itz, still grinning, replies that "I doubt if I know. That's too far back."

He has always been connected with surveying. He worked for construction companies in Arizona and Kansas before coming back to Texas about 1938 to work with the highway department at Junction.

He transferred to Ballinger and worked for the highway department "til they said it was time to retire."

But retirement didn't set well with him.

"At that time, I tried fishing for a while, but that didn't pay off — there were no fish," he told the Abilene Reporter-News.

Some abstractors asked him to help them out as county surveyor and "that's how I got in this thing."

"I like the engineering work, a lot of interesting things go into it," he says. Much of the work sounds easy, he said, but there are legal requirements to comply with and paperwork to do.

Itz was born in Gillespie County near Fredericksburg and graduated from Texas A&M. His first job was for a Frisco railroad crew that surveyed the route for what he believes is the only train tunnel in Texas.

The track was later taken up for scrap during World War II, leaving some rancher with a tunnel through a hill in his pasture, he says.

His wife, Selma, died about five years ago after 67 years of marriage. He has a son, two grandchildren and two, great-grandchildren.

Over the years, he's seen many changes.

Inmates say family ties can help reduce repeat offenders

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Promoting good relationships between prisoners and their families could help reduce the number of repeat offenders, several state prison inmates say.

The inmates told a legislative committee Wednesday that their families were the only connection with reality they could cling to while in prison.

"Without such (family) feedback, the inmate can become disoriented to the outside world, thus incurring severe problems upon eventual release," said John Indo, who is serving a life sentence for murder.

Indo said ex-convicts with good family relationships were six times more likely to stay out of trouble than those with bad relationships.

Five prisoners testified Wednesday at a hearing of the Joint Special Committee on the Family Role in Reducing Recidivism after being subpoenaed by the committee.

The inmates and several family members of prisoners who also testified supported the Texas Department of Corrections' 6-year-old inmate furlough program and the new contact visiting policy.

"Those have really helped us and give an inmate a chance to reconstruct his family," said Huntsville resident Barbara Herrera, wife of an inmate.

Harris County law enforcement officials have criticized the program as being too dangerous, but TDC Director O. Lane McCotter defended the program that allows convicts five-day vacations home.

"I believe it's one of the finest tools we have in allowing a man to go home and maintain the family support system," he said.

McCotter said there have been few incidents of violence and only a handful of escapes from the furlough program.

The Texas prison system's 43 percent rate of recidivism — the tendency to lapse back into antisocial or criminal behavior — is higher than that of most other states, McCotter said.

But he said recidivism could be reduced by a combination of the contact visiting and furlough programs along with the new Texas Employment Commission inmate job-search effort.

DOING A DANCE — Katerina Lycheva, an 11-year-old Soviet girl on a peace tour of the U.S., takes to the floor to do a Russian dance during a visit to the Wheatley School in Washington Wednesday. (AP Laserphoto)

Soviet schoolgirl hopes her trip is not in vain

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Soviet schoolgirl, continuing her United States peace trip, planned to visit the White House and tour the sights of the capital city that she said made her think of Moscow.

Katerina Lycheva, 11, told the District of Columbia City Council on Wednesday that she was enjoying her U.S. reception and hoped her efforts at promoting world peace would have some effect.

"I appreciate it very much. I've been made so welcome here. People here are very kind," the slim, fair-haired girl said, with the help of an interpreter.

"I do hope this trip is not going to be vain," she added.

Katerina was scheduled to take a tour of the White House today, and Virginia Garrison, a spokeswoman for the group sponsoring the visit, said Wednesday night that Katerina would meet with President Reagan.

But White House spokesman Ben Jarrett said he knew of no such meeting on the president's schedule.

The rest of her itinerary for the day included a tour of the capital's monuments, the grave of President Kennedy, the Kennedy Center, dinner at a restaurant run by high school students and a farewell party at the Capital Children's Museum.

She was to leave Friday for Houston, continuing the trip commemorating the 1983 visit to Moscow by Maine schoolgirl Samantha Smith.

At every stop on the visit that began March 20 in Chicago, Katerina has spoken of her hopes for peace and of her admiration for Samantha, who captivated the Soviet people and who died last August in a plane crash in Maine.

Katerina capped her first day in Washington Wednesday night with a visit to the circus, where she rode a float with several other children in a big-top parade around the arena.

After being greeted Wednesday morning by children at Wheatley elementary school in the city's northeast section, Katerina visited Mayor Marion Barry Jr. He proclaimed the day "Katerina Lycheva Day."

Katerina told the mayor: "I like this city very much. I like it even more than New York City. I think the buildings in New York City were a bit too tall and didn't

Reagan heads for ranch

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan was still jousting with Congress over his Central American policy and a balanced-budget amendment as he prepared for a 10-day vacation at his California "Ranch in the Sky."

On his way to the ranch north of Santa Barbara — known formally by its Spanish name, Rancho del Cielo — the president was stopping off in New Orleans to do his bit in helping Republicans retain control of the Senate.

At a $5,000-a-ticket reception and $1,000-a-head luncheon today, he planned a pitch for Rep. W. Henson Moore, who is battling to become Louisiana's first GOP senator since the 1870s.

Moore, a fifth-term member of the House, is facing Democratic Rep. John Breaux, a 14-year veteran, for the seat being vacated by retiring Democratic Sen. Russell Long. They are the only two announced candidates.

White House was out front with news

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — "You can't cover the war from the White House," presidential spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters as they peppered him with questions about Nicaragua's reported attack across the Honduran border.

That statement is evident, but this was a fight that might not have been noticed — much less netted $20 million in U.S. military aid to repel the attackers — had it not been for the bully pulpit in the White House press briefing room. The White House, in fact, was the principal source of information about the conflict this week.

A senior administration official, briefing reporters there Monday, told of a report — he called it preliminary and unconfirmed — of "a very large Sandinista incursion into Honduras." Normally, when administration officials are asked about such reports, they refuse to answer until they know more about the situation.

But in this case, the official, speaking from behind the curtain of anonymity, was unusually forthcoming and took care to point out the purported attack came "within 48 hours of the House vote" last week rejecting President Reagan's request for

An AP News Analysis

$100 million in aid to the Contra rebels battling Nicaragua's Sandinista government. He was speaking only three days before an even more critical Senate vote was scheduled on the same issue.

Speakes and other administration officials in Washington and U.S. Embassy spokesmen in Tegucigalpa quickly became the primary sources of information about the incursion, which was said to involve two 800-man Nicaraguan battalions assaulting a rebel base camp and hospital about 12 miles inside Honduras.

Honduran officials at first denied there had been an attack, then reversed themselves. Nicaragua denied its forces had crossed the border and called for international observers to monitor the frontier.

Although the fighting described by Speakes was the largest confrontation in recent years, reporters in Honduras were unable to verify it was taking place. And Honduran military sources said Wednesday that soldiers were ordered to keep journalists out of the area.

Associated Press reporter Filadelfo Aleman reported from northern Nicaragua that he was able to move along the Nicaraguan side of the frontier without restriction and found the border region quiet. Speakes said his information indicated Sandinista reinforcements were massing on the border and had crossed at another point.

The White House spokesman continued to be hammered with questions, both as to details of the fighting and as to why his information could not be verified elsewhere.

"It's an isolated region," he said, explaining his inability to provide many answers. "Information is sketchy. Communications are sketchy."

But the spokesman insisted he was sure the attack was real and that the information he had was true.

Speakes said he had "numerous sources, and this is accurate information."

Finding right prosthesis matter of black, white

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Here's a question I hope you have the answer to. I am a black female who had a mastectomy in 1981. I came through it and made a good recovery. I'm just getting to the point of thinking of myself as the same woman I was before I lost one breast, then every morning I have to put on this pink or rose-colored prosthesis made for whites, and I don't feel right. It looks very different, and I can't get used to it.

Abby, do you know of any company that makes prostheses for blacks? I haven't been able to find one in this area.

Pontius Pilate's wife tried to prevent crucifixion of Jesus

EDITOR'S NOTE—This third installment of a five-part series, "Easter's Unsung Heroes," deals with the wife of Pontius Pilate.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Abruptly she awoke, rearing upright in bed, her eyes wide with fright. The nightmare still churned in her mind and she could hear the deadly drone, almost as if it were real. It was real!

With a sweep of her arm, Claudia Procula yanked the netting from around her canopied bed and called out for her slaves. Oh gods, she murmured. Her dream had turned to fact and she could hear the rasping chant for blood.

Her maid slaves came running, bringing trays of fruit, but she waved the food aside and ordered them to dress her at once. She clasped a tiny icon of Juno at her breast, breathing a supplication.

From outside on the stone-paved square came the harsh rise and fall of dickering voices and, at intervals, that organized rumble of Temple hirelings, "Let him be crucified!"

The same sort of homicidal craze had tortured her sleep. Sweat beaded her body and she spun away from the wardrobe maids, knotting the sash about her stola herself. She had to stop this madness.

Too many times her husband, Pontius Pilate, had crushed and killed, subjugating this Judean province, yet thereby only deepening enmity toward Rome. In her dream, that virulence swept over themselves, and now she sensed it actually happening.

Claudia, a descendant of the Roman emperor Augustus, had doubtless gained the procuratorship for Pilate, since he didn't rank in the empire's ruling aristocracy. A tough military officer, the son of slaves and product of Rome's conquering legions, he had resorted to iron discipline and swift reprisals to hold Judea under heel.

His wife privately disapproved, an attitude she made expressly clear in the case of Jesus. She was among those background figures who gamely sided with him, despite the countervailing weight of political-institutional authority.

Though her role is generally unnoted, she sought to save him. Unlike his panicked men who fled into hiding, one even denying acquaintance with him, Claudia, in the very center of power, tried her best to protect him—an unsung heroine of those hours.

A religiously disposed woman, reared in the state polytheism of the empire, drawn to amulets, diviners and omens, she may have heard Jesus teaching in the streets or adjacent Temple. At least she had learned of him from others, moved by his sure, discerning and compassionate appeal.

Now, alarmed by the sound of those lethal execrations outside, she hurried down the corridor toward the open platform of the praetorium. Sentries at the archways saluted, slapping arms to chest, at her approach. Claudia halted, just inside the portal, listening.

"We found this man perverting our nation, and forbidding us to give tribute to Caesar, and saying he himself is Christ a king." Then came Pilate's taunting query, "Are you the king of the Jews?" No answer, only silence.

She foreknew her husband's reaction. Vexed, he ordered the Galilean to the guardhouse for scourging, a vicious lashing with bone-tipped whips while tied over a post.

Claudia bit her lip and put her head in her hands, suddenly feeling weak. The vision of her troubled sleep flooded her anew, and she retreated toward her rooms. It was happening almost as she had imagined. She must do something, reverse it, delay it. But how?

The city remained hushed, the sun barely up. How odd for Pilate to hear a case at so early an hour. Yet she had guessed something strange afoot, noticing the couriers going and coming the previous evening between their quarters in Fort Antonia and the adjacent Temple offices.

Pilate considered it shrewd statecraft to enlist provincial lackeys behind his more inflammatory executions so as to dissipate any uproar and shift blame if Rome inquired. He obviously saw Jesus' case as especially ticklish, taking it up before the populace even stirred.

Claudia dropped on a couch beside the table. Her hand trembling, she picked up a feather quill and dipped it in the ink, hesitating.

Again, that dream flooded her, the scene, like an amphitheater, the Roman coliseum, with the gentle prince, like Jesus, bound to the stake, the death cries, Pilate jabbing his thumbs downward and flames springing up around the victim.

Then she had felt herself caught up in a wild wave of humanity, her husband, too, his eyes glazed and sightless, hurled into a trampling maelstrom, a death frenzy of dark, tangled figures.

But the doomed prince incredibly had grown larger, his stature rising above the mad travail. He had spread his arms over them all; she had seen the face, the kind, wise face of the Galilean, pitying and sorrowing over the world's turmoil.

The pen shook in Claudia's hand as she touched it to the parchment. "Have nothing to do with that righteous man," she wrote, "for I have suffered much over him today in a dream."

She folded the note and stood up, pausing at the window, seeing the soldiers lead the mauled, bleeding prisoner away from the guardhouse, a cluster of thorns pressed on his head. She rushed back along the corridor in time to see him yanked into Pilate's inner tribunal.

Halting outside the door, she heard again the scoffing question, "So you are a king?"

This time, Jesus spoke, "My kingship is not of this world... you say that I am a king. For this I was born, and for this I came into the world, to bear witness to the truth."

Pilate snapped cynically, "What is truth?" His chair scraped the floor and his boots clomped back toward the outer platform, his judgment seat. She edged quickly to the curtained portal, beckoning an officer, giving him the note to relay to her husband.

Some peculiar parleying went on between him and the Temple clique, jammed in the narrow compound gateway. She saw him glance briefly at the note, scowling, then crumpled it in his hands. "Then what shall I do with the man you call the king of the Jews?" he baited them.

"Crucify him!" they shouted. "He stirs up the people... If you release this man, you are not Caesar's friend; every one who makes himself a king sets himself against Caesar."

A knot formed in Claudia's throat. All of it was so arranged, contrived, phony. She, Pilate and Rome itself knew the Jews bitterly hated the empire's occupation, but now these confederates mouthed the imperial line. She could see the bought chief priests urging them on, "persuading them," the record says.

"Shall I crucify your king?" Pilate toyed with them.

"We have no king but Caesar. Crucify him!"

At length, done with his game, Pilate pronounced the verdict.

Advancing to final four makes recruiting easier

DALLAS (AP) — A giant by-product of being in the NCAA Tournament's Final Four, besides the $850,000 payday for each team, is the wonders it works for recruiting.

"It's like having the U.S. government stamp meat with 'government inspected,'" said Louisiana State's colorful coach, Dale Brown. "It makes recruiting easy. Nobody says 'LSU Who?' when you call. It's a distinct advantage to being in the Final Four."

Kansas Coach Larry Brown says, "I agree, it adds credibility to your program."

Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski adds: "It should help next year's class. A youngster sees you are in the Final Four and perceives your program as being an excellent one."

Louisville Coach Denny Crum said a Final Four berth "makes it a lot easier to get your foot in the door to talk. After we won the title in 1980 it really helped us."

The four coaches discussed the matter on Tuesday in a national telephone hookup with the media.

Kansas arrived late Wednesday night with the other three teams expected today.

Louisville plays LSU at 2:42 p.m. Saturday in Reunion Arena, with Duke and Kansas he's helped me get prepared." Krzyzewski is worried about the Blue Devils' poor shooting during the tournament.

"I don't know why because it is one of our strong points," he said. "We've played good defense and we've rebounded well. Kansas is the best shooting team we've played and if we both have hot shooting it could be a high-scoring game."

Duke defeated Kansas 92-86 in the finals of the Big Apple NIT tournament in December.

"Our earlier victory over Kansas doesn't mean much because it happened too long ago," the Duke coach said. "We have two evenly matched teams."

"We'll have to play the best basketball game of the year and quit making turnovers and giving the other team second shots to win," Brown said. "I don't believe their earlier victory over us will have any bearing on the game, although we have great respect for Duke."

meeting 30 minutes after the first game is over.

Krzyzewski is making his coaching debut in the Final Four, but said he's not worried about being a rookie.

"I'm too excited to feel the pressure and I hope the players catch onto it," said Krzyzewski. "I talked to (Indiana Coach) Bobby Knight and

Hill recalls tension of Final Four tournament

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — It has been 20 years since Bobby Joe Hill was in the furnace of the Final Four, but he still can feel its unique heat and tension.

"Oh yeah, this is the time of year when I really think about it," he said from his office at the El Paso Natural Gas Co. "A lot of memories start coming back."

Memories. He remembers going to the Final Four with a Texas Western team viewed by the aristocrats of the game not only as an underdog, but an impostor.

Memories. He remembers stealing the ball twice in the first half of the final, sending the first shivers of doubt through Adolph Rupp's aristocrats from Kentucky.

Memories. He remembers coming back to El Paso with the only NCAA basketball championship ever won by a Texas team and finding the city literally ablaze with pride and joy. Victory bonfires were glowing everywhere.

"No one else thought we could do it," Hill said Tuesday. "But we were a very tight bunch with a lot of confidence. We had to be. We've been close ever since, too."

Rupp went to his grave refusing to believe what happened that March night in College Park, Md. Years after he retired, the Baron would say, "I still wake up in the middle of the night wondering what I could have done to help my boys win that game."

He never got an answer. Bobby Joe Hill and the Miners were too quick, too close, too underrated, too confident. When Hill stole the ball from Louie Dampier and raced down the court for an easy layup, Rupp rose off the bench, barked at Dampier and stared hard at the Miners on their bench, as if they were insolent party crashers.

Rupp later admitted, "I knew at that point we were in trouble. I knew we might not be able to control their speed and adjust to their defense."

He was right. Texas Western held the lead the rest of the game and won, 72-65, one of the biggest of Final Four upsets.

Texas Western no longer exists. In its place is UT-El Paso. The small pit of a gym has long since been replaced by a big field house. The memories are still there, however. And the team still exists.

Three weeks ago, an El Paso jeweler fitted championship rings on their fingers in a ceremony during halftime of a Miners game in the big field house.

"Every one of us showed up, too. Like I said, we're still close," Hill said.

Twelve of the 13 walked on the floor for the ceremony. The 13th, Willie Cager, was in a wheelchair. He suffered a stroke a month ago, left the hospital to get the ring he worked for 20 years ago, and went back to the hospital that night.

They were a diverse collection of players recruited by Don Haskins, who was Texas Western's coach and is still UTEP's coach. They came from the streets of

New York, from Detroit, from Texas. The closer they got to the Final Four, the more their pedigrees were questioned.

"Rupp even suggested we recruited some of them from jail," Haskins said.

Whatever their origins, they were welded by Haskins into a dogged, unselfish defensive-oriented team that lost only one game, to Seattle in the middle of the season.

"Outlaws." "Playground punks." The Miners were given several nicknames, especially in Kentucky, especially in Rupp's bitter soul.

If he could only see them now, though. They've done well in the 20 years. Only Cager has been struck by misfortune.

Five of them — Cager, Nevil Shed, Willie Worsley, Jerry Armstrong, and Togo Railey — became coaches.

Two of them became corporate vice presidents — Dick Myers for Farrah Manufacturing in El Paso and David Palacio for Capitol Records in Hollywood.

Two of them entered and flourished in strangely different professions — Louis Baudoin as an art teacher in Albuquerque and Orsten Artis as a detective in Gary, Ind.

Hill joined the gas company soon after he left Texas Western and has been there ever since. Dave "Big Daddy" Lattin is a public relations executive for a Houston liquor distributor.

"They were good kids then and they're fine men now," Haskins said.

Buckeyes win NIT title

NEW YORK (AP) — Maybe if Ohio State had played this way sooner, Coach Eldon Miller would be back later.

As it turned out, the Buckeyes went on to win the 49th National Invitation Tournament. They did it in Miller's final game with the team before his firing went into effect.

"I didn't say goodbye to them. I don't say goodbye to friends," Miller said after Ohio State beat Wyoming 73-63 in the NIT championship game Wednesday night. "But next year, they won't have a bigger fan than Eldon Miller."

Miller was dismissed Feb. 3, but was told he could complete the season at Ohio State. In the meantime, he was hired to coach Northern Iowa next year, and Boston College's Gary Williams was hired for the Ohio State job.

The Buckeyes completed the regular season at 14-14, yet managed to draw an NIT bid. And, with Miller continuing to recruit for Northern Iowa by telephone, Ohio State kept winning.

Victories over Ohio University, Texas, Brigham Young and Louisiana Tech set up the championship game at Madison Square Garden, and the Buckeyes pulled together one last time to give Miller a memorable going-away present.

"I've experienced this feeling only one other time in basketball, 25 years ago," Miller said. "I was a senior at Wittenberg College and we won the college division national championship."

"I told our team at halftime that 25 years from now, I want to be able to celebrate two championships. Now, all I have to do is make it that far."

Junior guard Dennis Hopson scored 26 points, including nine straight field goals. Hopson keyed a 12-2 spurt late in the first half that put the Big Ten Conference team in control. Senior 7-footer Brad Sellers added 17 points and 12 rebounds.

In the consolation game, Louisiana Tech beat Florida 67-62.

Wyoming, which finished 24-12, started out strong and jumped to a 12-6 lead. The Cowboys were sparked by 6-foot-4 sophomore Fennis Dembo, who finished with 27 points and seven rebounds.

But with Hopson hitting from the outside and Sellers working inside, the Buckeyes kept pounding away. They took their first lead at 19-18 midway through the half and completed their 12-2 streak with a 29-22 lead.

Wyoming trailed 35-28 at intermission and cut the margin to four points early in the second half, but high-scoring center Eric Leckner drew his fourth foul 2½ minutes into the period. With Leckner out of the game, Hopson moved inside and teamed with Sellers, the tournament MVP, to help Ohio State steadily pull away. Hopson made 12 of 17 shots while Curtis Wilson scored 10 for the Buckeyes.

Hopson, who scored 23 points in a semifinal victory over Louisiana Tech, said he was glad that Ohio State was not invited to the NCAA's 64-team tournament.

"We didn't have a good season," he said. "We were a .500 team. If we had gone to the NAAs, we probably would have lost in the first or second round. We had to be realistic and go where we had a chance."

Davis named to all-region team

Senior post Petie Davis of Pampa has been named to the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches All-Region 1-4A Team.

Davis, a third-team selection, led the Harvesters in scoring (16.6 ppg) and averaged around eight rebounds per game. The 6-3, 225-pounder has been a two-year starter for Harvester head coach Garland Nichols.

"Petie is well deserving of the honor," Nichols said. "He was one of the top 10 or 15 ball-players in the region."

Davis had to fight off injuries. First came a sprained ankle that slowed him down at the start of the season. Then came a bruised achilles tendon that caused him to miss three games.

"After he got over those injuries, Petey became one of the most consistent players I've ever had," Nichols added. "He has some college offers, but he's just waiting now to see what develops."

Davis scored in double figures in 23 of the 26 games he played in this season. Davis scored 17 points and had seven rebounds in Pampa's 53-52 upset of eighth-ranked Borger late in the season. The Bulldogs had won 25 district games in a row.

Terry Whitcher, a 6-4 senior from Borger, was a first-team all-region pick. Todd Welty, a 6-5 junior from Canyon, made the third team.

Benoit to miss marathon

BOSTON (AP) — Two-time Boston Marthan winner Joan Benoit reportedly will not run in this year's race because she is still recovering from surgery.

Benoit, who won the 26-mile, 385-yard race in 1979 and 1983, is coming off double Achilles surgery, and the lower part of one leg is not responding as well as the other, WNEV-TV in Boston reported Wednesday night.

Because of the number of hills on the course from Hopkinton to Boston, she decided not to risk reinjuring the leg, the station said.

WCVB-TV in Boston said Benoit would do color commentary for WCVB during the race.

Benoit, who did not compete in last year's 89th Boston Marathon, won the first-ever women's Olympic marathon gold medal.

Baseball Roundup

Rose's Reds favored in NL West

By JOHN NELSON
AP Baseball Writer

The talent is there, so the key may be attitude. And Cincinnati Reds player-manager Pete Rose has a jump on the others in that department.

"I think if our guys come back with the same attitude they left with in '85, we have a good chance of winning the West," Rose said.

The Los Angeles Dodgers won the National League West by 5½ games over Cincinnati last year, but with almost all the teams in the division on the rise, it's time for a shakeup.

"I just feel we're going to be a lot stronger ballclub with Bo Diaz for a whole year, with Buddy Bell for a whole year, and John Denny and Bill Gullickson," Rose said. "With those four guys, we ought to be able to make up the games the Dodgers beat us by last year."

In 1985, the Reds closed to within four games before falling back another 1½ games at the finish. They were followed, in order, by Houston, San Diego, Atlanta and San Francisco.

In 1986, the division will look more like this:

Cincinnati Reds

Bell, the third baseman, and Diaz, the catcher, came to the Reds in midseason 1985. Then, the Reds went out and got Denny from Philadelphia and Gullickson from Montreal to help out rookie 20-game winner Tom Browning and Mario Soto.

"I don't want to go out on a limb," Rose said. "But I'll be very disappointed if we don't win the West."

Los Angeles Dodgers

"We've managed to do very well in the pitching department over the years," Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda said. "This year will be no different."

In fact, on the strength of their pitching, many are picking the Dodgers to repeat in 1986, something no West team has done since the Dodgers in 1977-78.

With Fernando Valenzuela, Orel Hershiser, Bob Welch, Jerry Reuss and perhaps Alejandro Pena in the rotation, and Ken Howell, Tom Niedenfuer and newcomer Ed Vande Berg in the bullpen, the Dodgers are undeniably strong.

It could be a close race—one of the most hotly contested in baseball—but not too close to call.

Dodgers No. 2

Atlanta Braves

There was a changing of the guard in Atlanta. Bobby Cox took over as General Manager, and Chuck Tanner was brought in to manage. Both have made immediate impressions—Cox with two key trades and Tanner with his infectious optimism.

If it weren't for some uncertainty on the staff of starting pitchers, the Braves could give either Cincinnati or Los Angeles a good run.

Problem is, however, that after opening-day starter Rick Mahler and young left-hander Zane Smith, the rest of the starting jobs still are in a state of flux.

Cox made two important trades in the offseason, getting Ozzie Virgil from Philadelphia to catch and Ted Simmons from Milwaukee to strengthen their No. 1 preseason priority, the bench.

With Bob Horner healthy and Dale Murphy a model of consistency, the Braves are good enough for third.

San Diego Padres

The Padres can't help but be a little disorganized this year, at least early on. Manager Dick Williams dug his trenches for a battle with the front office, then went AWOL. He quit during spring training, leaving the job of finishing what he started to Steve Boros.

Boros has at least one bright side—some pretty good pitching with starters LaMarr Hoyt, Andy Hawkins, Eric Show and Dave Dravecky, and a strong bullpen with Goose Gossage and comer Lance McCullers.

After a slow start, the Padres will have trouble finishing any better than fourth.

Houston Astros

Playing in the Astrodome, the Astros generally have been a team built for speed. Not last year, though.

In 1985, the Astros stole only 96 bases, better in the league than only San Diego and Atlanta. First-year Manager Hal Lanier spent five years as a coach with the St. Louis Cardinals before coming to Houston, so he recognizes the deficiency.

To that end, Lanier will be asking Bill Doran, Kevin Bass, new acquisition Mickey Hatcher and even veteran Jose Cruz to start running.

Another problem: pitching. After Mike Scott, Nolan Ryan and Bob Knepper, there aren't any proven major league starters.

No better than fifth.

Golfers feel uneasy as TPC opens today

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP)—A field of 144 players, most of whom could be described as "uncomfortable," today headed into the first round of the annual championship of golf's touring pros.

The uncomfortable feeling has nothing to do with the golf course, the beautifully conditioned Tournament Players Club at Sawgrass, the home course for the PGA Tour.

And it has nothing to do with the Tournament Players Championship, a $900,000 event that the defending champion insists is one of the game's "majors," equal in status to the recognized Big Four of the Masters, the U.S. and British Opens and the PGA.

It has to do, primarily, with a couple of controversies that are surrounding the tour at the moment.

The players are uncomfortable, PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman said Wednesday following another in a series of closed-door meetings of the game's leading players.

"Golf is and has been different from other sports," Beman said. "The players in the late '60's laid down some standards of conduct which have given us the best image in sports. Some changes have occurred. We are not as different as we once were."

The changes have involved controversies centering around Mac O'Grady and Seve Ballesteros. And, Beman seemed to admit, the changes have tarnished to a degree that carefully protected image.

O'Grady, 34, has been served notices of proposed disciplinary action arising from his published attacks on Beman. The action could include fines of as much as $12,000 and a 12-week suspension.

When the determination of the penalties is made, they will not be announced, Beman said. "It will be treated as a private matter. If Mac wishes to make it public, that's up to him."

"I'll probably have something to say," said O'Grady, who is competing in this event.

Rangers beat Braves

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Rookie Ed Correa, a 19-year-old righthander, hurled perfect ball for the first four innings Wednesday as the Texas Rangers downed the Atlanta Braves 8-6 in exhibition baseball.

Correa fanned five batters while retiring the first 12 Braves, but he lost his no-hitter in the fifth when the Braves collected four singles, pushing across one run on an Ozzie Virgil hit that followed singles by Ted Simmons and Brad Komminsk. Correa was lifted after the fifth.

The Rangers took charge of the game early by reaching Atlanta starter Len Barker, 0-2, for six runs on eight hits and four walks in the first four innings.

Pete O'Brien and Pete Incaviglia each had RBI singles in the first inning. O'Brien also singled in a run in the fourth and Incaviglia followed with a two-run homer, his sixth in 14 games this spring.

Dwayne Walker had an RBI double for Texas in the third and the Rangers added two more runs in the seventh on Don Slaught's double and a run-scoring groundout by Toby Harrah.

Atlanta erupted for five runs in the ninth, a rally that started with a single by Dale Murphy.

Town divided over dancing issue

PURDY, Mo. (AP) — The school board here isn't budging on a century-old anti-dancing policy. One opponent branded dances in the gym an "avenue for alcohol consumption, drug abuse and illicit sex."

But many students and parents think school-sponsored dances are healthy fun, and they have threatened a lawsuit and are planning a rally.

They even invited the stars of the movie "Footloose," who in the film overcome a citywide ban on dancing.

"I wish to goodness we could get everybody as excited about mathematics as we have this," complains Superintendent Richard Place.

In this southwest Missouri community of 928 the dancing issue comes up annually, and earlier this month the Purdy R-2 Board of Education again upheld its policy to the dismay of most students.

The rally that some of the parents are now helping students organize is designed to show the school board at its April 14 meeting just how much support there is for school-sponsored dances.

The intensity of the argument has stayed high.

"It's pushing people further and further into a corner," Place said. "Their willingness to compromise is out the window. It just sticks in people's craw."

A local Baptist minister, the Rev. Ted Davis, said the next step after dancing at school would be dancing in nightclubs.

"What goes on in the road-houses except the illicit activities that tend to immortalize the whole neighborhood?" he said. "I just can't see opening another avenue for alcohol consumption, drug abuse and illicit sex."

At the recent school board meeting, about 250 people turned out to show their support for the board's policy. Less than 50 opposed the policy, said Place, the superintendent.

But some of those who think school-sponsored dances are a good idea believe the turnout was lopsided because ministers put pressure on their congregations, including out-of-towners, to show up.

"They rallied in the churches," said Carolyn Flummerfelt, the mother of a 15-year-old high school student. "We made no special effort to get more people out."

She said she and other producers were surprised the school board based its decision on the turnout at what was supposed to be an informational meeting.

"We believe religion is at the base of it," Mrs. Flummerfelt said. A lawyer for the parents, Raleigh Johnson, sent a letter to the school board warning of a suit to overturn the no-dance vote if it was shown that board members were taking a religious stand.

Because the dancing issue has become so divisive, many people are reluctant to show their true feelings and support dancing, said Joan Fox, another mother. But they'd show up too if Purdy's rally won support from Hollywood, she figured. Hence the invitations to the "Footloose" stars.

However, agents for Kevin Bacon and Christopher Penn said this week that the actors were busy — Penn with a film, Bacon with a play — and wouldn't be able to go to the April rally.

Texas briefs

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A Bexar County grand jury has indicted a city police officer on a criminal brutality charge in an incident involving a shoplifting suspect.

Stephen Richard Smith, 30, turned himself in to the Bexar County Jail Tuesday after he was indicted. He was released on a personal recognizance bond.

The third-degree felony carries a maximum 10-year prison sentence and a $5,000 fine.

SUNDANCE, Utah (AP) — Actor Robert Redford and a number of other residents of the scenic mountain pass called Provo Canyon have joined forces in a bid to seek a ban on truck traffic through the area.

About 40 residents turned out for a meeting Tuesday at Redford's Sundance ski area, including Lhomond and Barbara Jones, whose daughter, son-in-law and three grandchildren were killed in a traffic accident in the canyon recently.

Redford, 49, is a long-time Utah resident.

The Tucanos will be built by Northern Ireland's Short Brothers Company, through a licensing agreement with Embraer.

HONDURAN TROOPS TRANSPORTED — U.S.-supplied helicopters transport Honduran troops towards the Nicaraguan border from the Honduran frontier near James-tran Wednesday. (AP Laserphoto)

Israeli jets attack Palestinian camp

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli jets attacked Palestinian refugee camps outside Sidon today, killing 10 people and wounding 22, police said. The attack came shortly after a rocket exploded in an Israeli town near the Lebanese border.

Guerrillas in the Ein el-Hilweh and Mieh-Mieh refugee camps and the nearby hilltop village of Siroubieh unleashed barrages of shoulder-fired SAM-7 anti-aircraft missile at the Israeli fighter-bombers.

The planes released scarlet hot-air balloons to deflect the Soviet-made heat-seeking missiles.

Police said no hits were reported on the four planes that made six attack runs firing rockets on the three targets. Israel's military command reported all planes returned safely to their base.

Israel's military command said the air strike was launched 1½ hours after a Soviet-made Katyusha rocket fired from southern Lebanon hit a school yard in the northern Israeli town of Kiryat Shmona.

Five Israelis were slightly wounded by glass shards, it said. They were the first Israeli casualties caused by rocket fire from southern Lebanon since Israel invaded Lebanon in 1982 to crush the Palestine Liberation Organization's main power base.

All the camps near Sidon attacked today are strongholds of PLO chief Yasser Arafat's mainstream Fatah movement.

A Fatah leader, Badi Abu-Suleiman, said three of his guerrillas were among the 10 dead, and 10 other guerrillas were wounded.

A two-story building believed to be a Fatah headquarters near Mieh-Mieh was flattened in the raid. Police said seven civilians, including Lebanese, were killed about 100 yards from the headquarters building.

Black smoke from burning buildings billowed over the camps on the outskirts of Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut.

The raid was the second Israeli air strike against Palestinian camps in Lebanon this year.

One person was killed and five wounded Jan. 29 when Israeli fighters bombed three bases used by Syrian-backed guerrillas in Darb el-Seem.

Contras say Sandinistas are cornered inside Honduras and will not escape

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Anti-Sandinista rebels claimed to have surrounded up to 1,500 Nicaraguan soldiers in southern Honduras and said they could foil any attempt to break the encirclement and retreat back across the border.

On Wednesday, U.S. military helicopters ferried about 600 Honduran soldiers to the remote area to join another 3,000 Honduran troops near the border. Honduras has said its soldiers are not directly involved in the fighting.

A U.S. Embassy official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said no further flights were contemplated.

Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government denies sending any soldiers onto the territory of its northern neighbor, and claims the reports of an incursion are designed to promote the Reagan administration's campaign in Congress to allocate $100 million in aid to the Contras.

Accounts of the fighting could not be verified independently. Honduran military sources said soldiers were ordered to keep journalists out of the area.

However, Honduran military intelligence sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said Wednesday that the Contras had killed 200 Sandinista troops and wounded 150 others since full-scale fighting broke out Saturday.

One military source said Wednesday that "very important things could happen tomorrow in favor of the Contras and harmful to the invading army." He did not elaborate.

Frank Arana, a spokesman for the largest Contra group, the Nicaragua Democratic Front, said in Tegucigalpa, "Everything is under control. The invaders are not going to return to Nicaragua. Our troops have them surrounded." He also refused to elaborate.

U.S. officials in Tegucigalpa said 14 helicopters from Palmerola air base, 50 miles northwest of the Honduran capital, airlifted infantry and artillery units to the "Las Vegas salient" on Wednesday. The previous day, Honduran helicopters transported about 3,000 soldiers to the border area.

The triangular-shaped wedge juts into Nicaragua about 120 miles east of Tegucigalpa. The region has long been the site of a major camp of the U.S.-backed Contras, who use it as a base for raids into Nicaragua.

U.S. officials said four unarmed Huey and 10 Chinook helicopters of U.S. Task Force Bravo took part in the airlift. The U.S. task force of about 1,200 men is based at Palmerola.

Each Chinook was manned by five U.S. servicemen and was capable of carrying up to 30 soldiers. Hueys have three crewmen each and carry about five passengers.

The airlift represented an escalation of U.S. military involvement in Honduras, where U.S. forces hold almost continuous training exercises with Honduran units. President Reagan approved $20 million in emergency aid to Honduras on Tuesday to help it deal with the reported incursion.

Honduran military sources have said 1,500 Sandinistas crossed the frontier on Saturday in pursuit of the Contras and were trapped inside Honduras by rebels who cut off their retreat.

There was no immediate evidence of Sandinista reinforcements gathering on the Nicaraguan side of the border. Associated Press reporter Filadelfo Aleman went to the border from Managua, the Nicaraguan capital, and said it was quiet.

On Wednesday, the Honduran military called a news conference to show two young, frightened men the officials said were Sandinistas who crossed into Honduras and were captured Monday. Reporters were not allowed to question the two.

"As you can see... this is clear evidence of the warlike action of the Popular Sandinista Army that is trying, not only at this time, but on many other occasions, to aggravate the situation along the Coco River," said Maj. Jorge Alberto Arguella, the army's chief information officer.

The Coco forms the border between Honduras and Nicaragua in the region the Honduran government says the Sandinista troops invaded.

2,500 reported arrested, two more blacks killed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police said today they shot dead two blacks in a slum near Cape Town when a crowd firebombed a private vehicle, bringing to 30 the number of blacks killed in two days anti-apartheid unrest.

It has been one of the most violent outbreaks since daily rioting began in September 1984. Police confirmed 27 black deaths from police gunfire and three in black-against-black fighting.

Meanwhile, police in the black homeland of Bophuthatswana said 2,500 blacks were arrested after police fired on a crowd of protesters at a mass rally Wednesday, killing 11 people.

Col. Dave George, in the homeland capital, Mafikeng, also said 32 people were admitted to a hospital with gunshot wounds, and an undetermined number of other people were treated for lesser wounds. Residents said they believed as many as 100 people were wounded by the gunfire.

Bophuthatswana President Lucas Mangope ordered a judicial inquiry into the shootings, said Minister of State Affairs Rowan Cronje.

Police have said they fired in self-defense after the crowd attacked with rocks and gasoline bombs during the mid-day rally at a soccer field in the Winterveld squatter area near Pretoria.

A riot patrol used shotguns against a crowd in the Crossroads shanty city near Cape Town during the night, fatally wounding two blacks and wounding two others, police headquarters in Pretoria said. A mixed race man was wounded by the mob, the report said.

Two blacks had been shot in the Crossroads area a day earlier.

New violence also was reported in Kwazakele near Port Elizabeth, in the eastern Cape province. Police used tear gas and shotguns to scatter crowds hurling gasoline bombs at riot patrols.

Kwazakele was the scene of a running battle during the early hours Wednesday between youths attacking a liquor store and police defending the building. Nine blacks were shot dead in that clash, and two others in separate skirmishes in the area.

More than 1,250 people have died in riots against apartheid, the system of segregation under which 5 million whites dominate 24 million voteless blacks. Nearly all the victims have been blacks, two-thirds of whom were killed by police and soldiers. Others have died in fighting between rival black groups and in mob attacks on individuals.

Car bomb injures 21, damages station

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — A car bomb exploded today in front of police headquarters, injuring 21 people, 11 of them police officers, authorities said. It was followed by five smaller blasts that police said may have been caused by detonators.

The city block was cordoned off and buildings were evacuated because police said they feared there might be another explosion.

Prime Minister Bob Hawke called the attack "deplorable" and said the nation was "shocked."

The blasts left a woman police officer with burns over 80 percent of her body, and at least two other officers seriously hurt. Ten passers-by also suffered injuries and were taken to hospital. Many of the injuries were caused by flying glass.

No one claimed responsibility for the blasts, but radio reports said police were hunting an alleged neo-Nazi in connection with the attack. Police would not comment on the report.
