Oil prices' rise halted

NEW YORK (AP)—Word that the Soviet Union is back in the oil market after suspending sales over the winter has dampened the price climb that followed the shutdown of Norway's strikebound North Sea oil rigs.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for May delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the main U.S. crude grade, plunged nearly $2 on Tuesday to close at $12.47 a barrel, down from Monday's $14.33.

Sunday's strike by caterers who serve the rigs took about 900,000 barrels off the market. Traders reacted by driving the price of May contracts up by $1.59 a barrel over Friday's close.

Then Tuesday, it was reported that the Soviet Union had agreed to sell its Urals export blend crude oil to some European contract holders at netback, or product-related prices, finally abandoning fixed-price sales.

The oil had been held off the market because of high drilling costs and winter demand within the Soviet Union and its Eastern European allies.

European oil industry sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the Soviet Union has begun shipping under its new pricing formula for April delivery. The formula was negotiated in March.

Germany gives boot to Libyans over bombing

BONN, West Germany (AP)—West Germany today ordered two Libyan diplomats to leave the country because of evidence emerging from the inquiry into the bombing of a West Berlin nightclub, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said.

A U.S. Army sergeant and a Turkish woman died in the blast at the La Belle discotheque and 230 people were injured, including 63 Americans.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Juergen Chrobog said Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher told the West German Cabinet today that he has asked the two diplomats, who were not identified, to leave.

Chrobog said the two diplomats' actions were not in keeping with "proper diplomatic custom," but refused to elaborate. He did not say whether the Libyans have left West Germany.

Genscher based his action on evidence emerging from the investigation of Saturday's nightclub bombing, Chrobog said.

The move to expel the diplomats was the first indication Chancellor Helmut Kohl's government suspected Libyan involvement in the attack.

A Libyan spokesman could not be reached for comment. There was no answer at the Libyan embassy in Bonn.

Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy threatened terrorist attacks on American targets worldwide after the clashes in the Gulf of Sidra two weeks ago between his forces and the U.S. 6th Fleet. American officials have indicated they believe Libya was behind the disco bombing.

In Washington, the State Department had no comment on West Germany's decision to expel the Libyan diplomats, said spokeswoman Sondra McCarthy.

Chrobog spoke to The Associated Press after today's regularly scheduled Cabinet meeting, in which government ministers examined measures that might be taken against the Libyan embassy in Bonn as a result of the nightclub bombing.

Communist East Germany today condemned the bombing. The official news agency ADN said the East Germans expressed "horror and indignation" at the attack.

A spokesman for the East German Foreign Ministry said it was wrong "to try to bring the GDR (East Germany) into any connection with this criminal act."

"Such acts should not be misused to poison the international atmosphere," the unidentified spokesman was quoted as saying.

His statement appeared to be a reaction to reports that a Libyan diplomat in East Berlin was suspected of involvement in the nightclub bombing.

A West Berlin Interior Ministry official Tuesday confirmed the report by the Bild newspaper that said Elamin Abdullah Elamin, 47, was "urgently suspected" of organizing the bombing.

Bild said the diplomat previously was stationed at the Libyan embassy in Bonn.

"This report is correct," said the West Berlin official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. He refused to elaborate.

Dieter Piette, deputy chairman of the police commission, said police did not suspect that the Libyan diplomat had placed the bomb in the nightclub, "but as to whether he is suspected as an organizer or had any other link, I will not say so."

Economic analysis of city approved

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Meeting in regular session Tuesday evening, city commissioners authorized agreements for an economic analysis of Pampa and for a study of water, waste water and sanitation rates.

The commission authorized Mayor Sherman Cowan to execute an agreement with Panhandle Economic Consultants for preparation of an economic analysis of the city.

City Manager Bob Hart said the analysis would cost $15,000, with Pampa Industrial Foundation paying $5,000.

That would make the city's cost $10,000, he said.

Hart explained the analysis would help obtain data for use in relation to the Texas Cities for Economic Leadership (TEXCEL) program.

Commissioner David McDaniel asked if the analysis would be duplicating any information that would be coming from the TEXCEL staff.

Mayor Cowan said it would not.

Hart explained the TEXCEL experts under the state program will be providing training to local leaders and officials during workshops and on-site visits to the city. During that time, the TEXCEL staff will "say what data they need."

The economic analysis provided by PEC "will be part of that data," he said.

The commission also authorized the mayor to execute an agreement with Willis, Graves and Morgan, Inc., relative to a study of city water, waste water and sanitation rates at a cost not to exceed $17,200.

"It's important that the city have a fair and equitable distribution of the (city utility) rates," Hart said, adding he has "some questions" about that here.

Hart said the utility rate study also would be beneficial to the TEXCEL program needs, especially in regard to industries and businesses.

The study will check the equitability of the rates in relation to other communities, among other things. The firm then will offer any proposals for correcting or changing rates and provide income projections through 1991, Hart explained.

Commissioner Bob Curry said the study would save the city staff from having to use their time, on top of other matters, for undertaking an in-house analysis.

City hall renovation action delayed

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners deferred action Tuesday evening on approving and awarding contracts for the proposed rehabilitation of City Hall to allow for further study on cost savings.

The agenda item had already been delayed from the last regular session after City Manager Bob Hart said bids were exceeding original cost estimates and time would be needed to decide how to proceed with the project.

He explained Tuesday night that, based on bids received, the cost would be approximately $625,000 for the major exterior renovation projects, including a handicapped access ramp, installation of an elevator, and electrical and mechanical work.

For interior renovation work, estimated costs would be $73,000 for the first floor, including the police station; $61,000 for the second or main floor; and $68,000 for the top third floor.

That places the estimated rehabilitation costs, for all proposed projects, at $827,000. But the original estimate had been for only $500,000.

Hart admitted that estimate was "just what I pulled out of the air" in order to meet legal-ties for the issuance of Certificates of Obligation from which the rehabilitation costs would be paid.

He said the staff had been looking at a number of areas which could be deleted from the rehabilitation plans. Eleven changes were suggested which could save $46,000, he said.

An additional $25,000 could be saved if some contracting work could be coordinated with rehabilitation efforts under consideration for the Schneider Hotel, being remodeled for apartments for retired persons, Hart said.

But no agreements have been reached yet on that coordination, he said, with the hotel renovation project still under study at this time.

Other alternatives for financing the City Hall projects, with the costs in excess over the proposed budget funds, could include deleting some other existing proposed projects in the city such as purchase of land and construction of a new animal shelter. Deletion of those projects could realize another $100,000 which could be available for use in the City Hall projects, Hart said.

"The City Hall building is 56 years old," he noted. Exten-

McLean city council members take oaths

MCLEAN — City council members had to call in municipal judge R.C. Parker to swear them in Tuesday night due to the absence of mayor George Terry and mayor pro tempore June Suggs.

City secretary Stella Lee said that Terry couldn't come because there was a fire at his business, Terry's Appliance and Furniture, earlier that day. Terry reportedly suffered some smoke inhalation. A spokesman for the McLean volunteer fire department said a state fire marshal is expected to investigate the fire today. Due to telephone transmission problems, Terry could not be reached for comment.

Mayor pro tempore Suggs, who was defeated Saturday in her bid for another term on the council, was absent, as was council member Miro Pakan.

Lee said that the council members waited about 30 minutes for Suggs to make it to the council meeting. At 7:30 p.m., Parker was called in to administer the oath of office to re-elected council members Martha Jo Bailey and Harold Fabian and newly elected council member Brian Pohlmeier, and to canvass the votes from the Saturday election.

After the swearing-in, the four council members present elected George Greene as mayor pro tempore.

Council members tabled action on a policy for collecting delinquent taxes. Also tabled was action on their proposed search for a city legal counsel.

They agreed to close city offices April 21 for San Jacinto Day.

Students in Pampa schools lose Memorial Day holiday

BY PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Writer

Pampa students will be spending most of Memorial Day in class this year after the school board on Tuesday scheduled a weather make-up day for May 26, the official date set aside to honor U.S. veterans.

The board voted 6-1 to schedule the required make-up day May 26 rather than May 30. Board member Darville Orr voted against the motion, which also called for an early dismissal at 2 p.m. May 26.

May 26 and May 30 were the only two dates recommended by Supt. James Trusty as possibilities. The May 30 date would have forced teachers to hold their records day on May 31, a Saturday.

School ends May 29.

Board member David Robertson, in suggesting the May 26 date, said having the students in school on the official observance of Memorial Day would give the press, veterans and other citizens a unique opportunity to sponsor a Memorial Day-related activity in the schools.

"I don't want to slight Memorial Day," he said. But "I doubt very seriously that most of the students will know what they're out of school for anyway."

Robertson said May 30 is the traditional observance of Memorial Day and added at the end of the school year students are not achieving "maximum capacity learning."

"The kids are kind of wild and hanging off the rafters anyway," he said.

High School Principal Oran Chappell and Middle School Principal Jack Alexander said shortening the day would not greatly affect preparations for final exams. Chappell said some students will use the time to visit a cemetery and others to study and added he would like to see the district give students the opportunity to honor veterans as they see fit rather than in an organized assembly at school.

Orr said he would have preferred keeping the Memorial Day holiday but could understand arguments against doing so. However, he said he opposes the idea of shortening the day if students are to be in school.

In other action, Dr. Robert Lyle was elected president of the Pampa Independent School Board for the second time and wasted no time implementing a major change in the way the board conducts its business.

Shortly after his fellow board members unanimously elected him to the position he held once before in 1978-79, Lyle said he would not appoint chairmen to head board committees.

Instead, he said the board will use one of its two monthly meetings to hold a work session, essentially abolishing the committee system. Lyle said he feels the citizens elected all seven board members to know all the issues facing the board.

The board tentatively scheduled the first work session for March 29.

Also during the board re-organization, Joe Van Zandt was named vice-president and Robertson was elected secretary. Both were elected to the Justices say subpoenas 'political,' won't be honored

AUSTIN (AP) — Two Texas Supreme Court justices, saying they won't honor a legislative committee's subpoenas, called the summons both illegal and politically motivated.

"The preservation of an independent judiciary requires us to reject your subpoenas," Justices C.L. Ray and William Kilgarlin said Tuesday in a letter to the chairman of the House Judicial Affairs Committee.

The letter to Rep. Frank Tejada, D-San Antonio, said the subpoenas violate the Texas Constitution's provisions separating the three branches of government.

"While we would relish the opportunity to discuss these matters fully and openly... we do feel it would be a violation of our oath of office to appear in this manner," the justices wrote.

The justices also implied that the committee investigation was sparked by politics. Tejada faces Rep. Tommy Adkisson, D-San Antonio, in the May 3 primary for a state Senate seat.

"The rushed manner and press conference approach to this whole situation leaves us no option but to believe that the pressure of the current primary campaigns has impacted on this process," their letter said.

"While certainly meaning no disrespect for you or the committee, we must also point out that it is a violation of the canons of ethics to involve the court in political campaigns," they said.

The subpoenas for Ray, Kilgarlin and two court staffers were delivered to the court about 11:30 a.m., while all nine justices were in conference.

The subpoenas summoned the four to testify before a committee hearing on Friday.

Tejada says his panel is investigating requests for transfer of two multimillion-dollar cases from a San Antonio appeals court to other appellate courts. The requests were made of Ray by San Antonio lawyer and campaign contributor Pat Maloney Sr.

Ray and Kilgarlin told Tejada it would be appropriate to answer the committee's questions at a public session in the Supreme Court offices, as suggested Monday by Chief Justice John Hill.

"We are certainly willing to attend a meeting in an appropriate forum, and hopefully, you also are interested in a full and open discussion," the Ray-Kilgarlin letter said.

They also said the session should be held "after the pressure of your political race is over."

After seeing the subpoenas, Hill reiterated his belief that they violate the Constitution.

"I'm not aware of any precedent for the subpoenaing of a sitting justice before a legislative committee," Hill said.

The committee wants Ray to testify about the transfer of cases, communications between court members with attorneys having cases before the court and the conduct of court members or its employees involving pending cases.

Kilgarlin was called to testify about transfers, communications and acceptance of gifts by the court or its employees from attorneys with cases pending before the court.

In an interview, Kilgarlin said he was eager to answer the committee's questions.

"I've got nothing to hide about all this... However, to me there is a grave constitutional issue involved on separation of powers," Kilgarlin said.

Downplaying the committee probe, Ray said it wasn't possible for him alone to have ordered cases transferred.

"The one thing that needs to be clear... is that the action taken on the transfer of the cases was done by all nine members of the court in conference. C.L. Ray does not transfer cases by himself. I think the chairman (Tejada) knows that," Ray said.

Tejada did not return three phone calls from The Associated Press on Tuesday. He scheduled a news conference for today in San Antonio.

Hill said he hadn't heard whether Tejada would agree to a meeting in the court offices rather than Friday's hearing.

Crowder walks out on press

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic gubernatorial candidate A. Don Crowder of Dallas called reporters to a news conference and then walked out after making it clear he is not happy with the way the Capitol press corps has covered his campaign.

In another Austin news conference Tuesday, attorney general candidate John Roach criticized Attorney General Jim Mattox, saying either of Roach's fellow Republican candidates would make a better attorney general.

"That's where (Roy) Barrera and (Ed) Walsh and Roach have it all over Mattox, in the question of integrity and professionalism," he said. "Although I think Raspunin the Mad Monk had it all over Jim Mattox, too, in that regard," Roach said.

Crowder fielded one question Tuesday before gathering his papers and walking out. Crowder called the news conference to charge that Gov. Mark White's campaign had forced a congress-sional candidate to fire a campaign manager who last week endorsed Crowder.

"I can't convince anybody in this room, but I really don't care to convince anybody in this room any longer. We're headed for a runoff," he said.

"I encourage all of you to start travelling the state and learn more about it. I'm tired of trying to convince the Austin press as to the legitimacy of my candidacy. I'll be glad to do so on May 3. This press conference is over," Crowder said.

Roach, a Collin County state district judge, challenged his fellow Republican contenders to talk less about crime fighting and more about their records in civil trials.

GOP candidates Barrera, a San Antonio judge, and Walsh, a former Williamson County prosecutor, both have made crime fighting a major portion of their campaigns.

Roach said he wants to "de-bunk the myth" that the attorney general has any power to prosecute criminals.

"Last Thursday in my court I put more people, more criminals in the penitentiary than the attorney general of this state has in the past 150 years," he said, adding that he sent five defendants to prison that day.

Mattox, who is unopposed in the primary, also has said Walsh and Barrera spend too much time talking about fighting crime. Roach said Walsh and Barrera are "vying with each other to see who can fool the most people."

Also on the campaign trail Tuesday, former Gov. Bill Clements continued to hammer on Gov. Mark White for not calling a special legislative session to deal with the budget crunch. The projected $1.3 billion shortfall is a "fiscal time bomb ready to explode," Clements said.

"The tax and spend policy of Mark White is coming home to roost," said Clements.

Former asbestos workers to share $145 million settlement

HOUSTON (AP) — More than 700 former asbestos workers will share an estimated $145 million as part of a settlement of a class-action federal lawsuit in which workers blamed manufacturers for their asbestos-related diseases, attorneys say.

The settlement ended the first class-action asbestosis trial in the nation.

"I was very pleased with the amount — very much so," said Port Arthur attorney Walter Umphrey, who represents 539 of the 741 plaintiffs. "It is two or three times the national average (in such cases)."

He estimated his clients alone would divide about $88 million.

A spokeswoman in U.S. District Judge Robert Parker's court in Marshall said the case was settled Thursday, but Parker issued a gag order that was lifted Tuesday.

Umphrey said attorneys would meet later with Parker to determine how the settlement will be divided among the plaintiffs, who he described as "tickled to death."

"I've only talked to two or three," Umphrey said. "Of course, they don't know their individual amounts. What I intend to do is within a week have a meeting with all of my clients and explain in detail what happened and what's going to happen."

But the money should begin being dispensed within 90 days, he said.

"The court will set individual amounts for individual people," Umphrey said. "We have been asked to submit a breakdown on each of our cases, depending on what type of asbestosis they have, their age, whether they are disabled or not, whether they have cancer."

Rex Houston, another plaintiffs' attorney, estimated individual settlements will range from $75,000 to $450,000.

Workers claimed their health was damaged or destroyed because of their exposure to asbestos products and sued 13 companies, primarily manufacturers of the products. In October, Parker consolidated the hundreds of cases into a class action.

Earlier in the trial, which began March 10, four companies settled with workers and dropped out. They were Combustion Engineering, GAF Corp., Nicolet Inc. and Raymark Industries Inc.

The nine defendant companies left were: Armstrong World Industries, Owens Corning Fibreglass Corp., Eagle Picher Industries Inc., Pittsburgh Corning Corp., Keene Corp., Celotex Corp., Fibreboard Corp., Owens-Illinois Inc. and Standard Insulators Inc.

Asbestos manufacturers are facing thousands of lawsuits nationwide, accusing them of concealing the harmful effects of their product from workers who later suffered from a debilitating lung disease called asbestosis, a rare form of cancer linked to asbestos fibers.

Attorneys for both sides said the settlement affected only those cases filed in the Eastern District of Texas.

Armstrong, Celotex, Owens Corning Fibreglass, Owens Illinois and Fibreboard Corp. were among eight manufacturers who set up an asbestos claims facility called the Wellington Group "for the purpose of providing a means to aid in the settlement of asbestos claims," said an attorney for Wellington, Richard Josephson of Houston.

Josephson said the money in the settlement was less than the figures cited by Umphrey, but he declined to be specific. He said the payments would be spread over a three-year period.

As far as the Wellington Group was concerned, the key point of the settlement was the establishment of arbitration and mediation procedures in asbestosis cases "to avoid protracted litigation in these cases," he said.

"We want to get away from punitive damages from defendants and try to resolve these on the basis of whether somebody really was exposed and whether that person suffers from asbestos-related disease and whether that person is entitled to money," he said. "There's a whole heck of a lot more that really don't have it (asbestos disease)."

New trial may cost defendant another 13 years

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — An Abilene man who won a new trial on a technicality may wind up serving extra time in prison after being convicted again in a car theft case.

After just 17 minutes of deliberation, a state jury on Tuesday convicted Marion Alexander Chaney Jr. of the Jan. 1, 1984, theft of three new Pontiacs from Western Pontiac-Datsun.

After hearing evidence of five prior felony convictions, jurors set Chaney's punishment at 99 years in prison.

Another jury had given Chaney a life prison term in the same case in January 1985, but Chaney appealed and won a retrial be-

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

A program that worked

Medicare, which for 20 years served as one of the main engines of rising health care costs, has now become a potent force for economy. The question now is whether it will be used to stimulate additional progress in providing high-quality medical care in more efficient ways. In 1983, the Reagan administration, alarmed by the growing cost of treating the sick, embarked on a drastic experiment in paying for the care of the elderly. Hence — for Medicare, which has always reimbursed hospitals for their full cost in treating patients, plus a margin for profit, began limiting its payments to fixed amounts for each of nearly 500 ailments.

The idea was to alter the fundamental incentives of hospitals. Under the old system, they had no incentive to cut costs and plenty to inflate them. Under the new "prospective payment system" those hospitals that can provide care for less than the government rate get to keep the difference. Those whose costs exceed the limit have to swallow a loss.

The change was greeted with considerable criticism, and its execution has drawn still more. But two and a half years later, the experiment has proved to be a dramatic success.

The numbers are revealing. In 1982, the average patient over the age of 65 spent 10.1 days in the hospital. Last year, the average stay was down to 8.8 days, a decline of 13 percent. Total admissions of the elderly fell by 2.9 percent in 1984 and 5 percent in 1985.

All this translates into a tidy savings for Medicare — $2.2 billion in the first year, by one estimate. Four years ago, the hospital trust fund was projected to run out of funds by 1987. Last week, the Social Security Board of Trustees reported that it should remain solvent until 1996.

More surprising is that the cuts have done no apparent harm to hospitals. In fact, 1984 was their most profitable year ever, and last year was nearly as good.

The picture is not entirely rosy, though. One chronic fear is that hospitals will respond to the fee limits by undertreating patients, or by discharging those who prove too costly to treat.

A report last October by the Senate Special Committee on Aging claimed that many Medicare patients are being discharged from hospitals too early. But there isn't enough evidence to know if the problem is real. And the threat of malpractice lawsuits serves as a strong incentive to keep patients as long as medically necessary.

The new system unquestionably has forced hospitals to look closely at costs and to improve their productivity. But it lacks the flexibility to reflect constantly changing market conditions.

Over time, it runs the risk of either overcompensating hospitals or squeezing them excessively.

What is needed, then, is a further step to encourage both efficiency and first-rate care. The Reagan administration has begun allowing beneficiaries to enroll in health maintenance organizations. For each new member, the HMO is paid 95 percent of the average retiree's annual cost to Medicare; in return it is obliged to provide all needed care, whatever the cost. The administration would like to expand that option, allowing more suppliers to compete for patients.

This measure, like the prospective payment formula, has the virtue of saving money and compelling efficiency. But it has two more attractions, which are just as important.

The first is that, because it covers not just hospital care but all treatment, it encourages the supplier to work with the patient to promote sound health and to catch any dangerous problems early. The second is that it gives suppliers a new incentive not to cut costs at the patient's expense — since the patient may switch to another HMO.

The federal government has used its leverage as a buyer of medical care to bring about sorely needed changes in the benefit of both medical patients and taxpayers.

U.S. Senate enters the modern world

"This is a major step forward. There is no turning back. The Senate has crossed the bridge, and the bridge is being burned behind us."

Cassius on the eve of the Ides of March? A declaration of war? Abolition of the income tax? Hardly. The U.S. Senate, as expressed in those oddly inappropriate words of Minority Leader Robert Byrd, had just begun a trial period of radio broadcasts, to be followed soon by television coverage of its proceedings on the C-span cable network.

Following the lead of the House, which has allowed radio and television coverage in its chamber since 1979, the Senate is thus stepping gingerly into the electronic age. If the results of the trial are deemed satisfactory, the Senate will decide by the end of July to make the practice permanent. Excerpts from Senate debates would thus become regular staples of the evening network news programs.

A befits its unofficial title as "the world's greatest deliberative body," the Senate agonized long and hard over this decision. Some of its members fear that, given the exhibitionist streak in most politicians, many will not be able to resist playing to the cameras. Some even fear that senators will be intimidated in casting their votes by the knowledge that their every word and vote can be observed by millions, or at least by all those citizens who take the trouble to look in.

Once answer to those fears it that those who live by the camera and microphone can just as easily perish by them. Another is that legislators who don't want their constituents to notice how they vote don't deserve the cloak of obscurity. And, although it's true that many important decisions are made behind closed doors, critical debates do take place in the chamber. Those debates often bring out the essence of issues in a way that no written account can.

There are inherent risks in any new political practice, of course, but in an open society the risk, especially where debate of public issues is concerned, ought to be on the side of openness. Television in the Senate is one way to counteract the growing distance between elected officials and their constituents in the electronic age, and if it forces a few nervous legislators to look over their shoulders, so much the better.

POLITICAL POWER GROWS OUT OF THE BARREL OF A GUN CONTROL LAW.

Paul Harvey

He's rebuilding himself

Remar Sutton Jr. looked in the mirror. He did not like what he saw. He was 45, bald, with 27 pounds of excess flab. All around him in Fort Lauderdale were the lean, bronze gods and goddesses who were born fit, don't sweat and have hair to share but won't. While Remar Sutton Jr., in his middle years, gets winded shaving.

June of last year Mr. Sutton decided to do something about himself. He'd read Dr. Kenneth Cooper's assurance that it's never too late to shape up, and he decided to give a year of his life to making himself one of the beautiful people.

Mr. Sutton talked Viking Penguin publishers into buying his story before it was written. With that money he would undergo a thorough physical exam then journey to the Bahamas for one year to shed his watermelon belly and streamline his blood pressure and entice lust into the eyes of every passing tropical beauty. First came the physical exam. Ouch! The thallium stress test implied and the radionuclide angiogram confirmed — coronary heart disease. It was "mild," they said. Probably the result of too many pounds, too many cigarettes and too little exercise.

Another test confirmed some pulmonary dysfunction — that, again, would be the cigarettes.

A final test shows one liver function abnormal.

Suddenly Mister-America-to-be is going to have to come from behind.

His first night after that medical verdict he dreamed of himself streamlined, dressed to reveal muscles, stretched out in a coffin!

Shaken but undaunted, Remar Sutton embarked on his odyssey.

Marriage delayed is marriage denied

That distinguished sociological journal, People magazine, has frightened a lot of young college-educated women — all unmarried. People, featuring cover photos of the likes of Diane Sawyer and Linda Ronstadt (both unmarried), reports flippantly on a serious study by three professors from Yale and Harvard.

The thesis — as developed by Dr. Neil Bennett and Dr. Patricia Craig (Yale) and Dr. David Bloom (Harvard) — is roughly this: College-educated women, pursuing careers, are likely to postpone marriage. They keep postponing it. And then they are likely to end up not getting married at all.

The study examines the marriage patterns of today's young women thus far, and relates these patterns to those of older women. It then projects future marriage patterns. The key results: If you're a white female college graduate not married by age 25 — you've only got a 20 percent chance of marrying. At age 35, the rate is down to 5 percent. And age 40 — forget it — the rate is 1 percent!

Will all this prove to be correct? There is a root of real truth to it. There will be somewhat less marriage. But my sense is that it will all turn out to be much overstated.

After all, these projections are based on the idea that future rates will resemble a variety of past rates. (The study uses data from 1976, 1978 and 1982.) But our present is different from our past. We have gone through a major social discombobulation. Women are going to college and are going to work at rates never seen before. Some now feel they don't want to marry. Men are facing women with different attitudes and different status.

Why should we think future marriage patterns will resemble past ones? In the old days, it's true that a large proportion of women were married by age 30 or 35. Under the social standards of that time, those few who weren't married, weren't ever likely to. But to compare the data of those few unmarried women of yesterday, with today's many unmarried women in a new social circumstance, is probably flawed.

Marriage delayed will not necessarily prove to be marriage denied. All we know is that many college-educated women have not married — yet. We don't know the future — yet.

My skepticism of the projections is based on humanity, not statistics. At a certain point in time, this new college-educated generation will have to make a choice. For both women and men it will not be a choice about getting married now or later. It will become a choice between getting married soon — or never.

Saying "never" means, for most intents and purposes, that a young person must say, "I have decided never to have a husband (or wife), a child, a family, grandchildren or a posterity." That is a cosmic choice. There are billions of years of genetics and human emotion working against it, factors more potent than the current lure of a fast-track career.

So I say most of the young women and men in question will decide to marry, albeit at later ages than we've normally seen. Eligible mates, now sensed to be in short supply, will materialize.

There is still a problem, however — but with births more than with marriages. A woman marrying after 30, certainly after 35, is less likely to have a large family and more likely than in earlier times to have either one child or perhaps none.

Such very low birth rates can yield a whole series of national problems in the years to come, from a long-range short-fall in Social Security benefits to the return of the peacetime draft.

"PLEASE, MISTER — HELP ME! I can't choose a long distance telephone company."

Former Texan gains fame helping Oregon Hispanics

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—After only a few years in Oregon, Jose Angel Gutierrez, 41, is gaining recognition for creating successful social service programs for Hispanics.

During the past two years, Gutierrez has been director of both the Oregon Commission on Hispanic Affairs and the Oregon Council for Hispanic Advancement. He took control of the state commission in early 1984, after it became a legislative agency rather than a governor's commission.

In May 1984, the United Way of Columbia-Willamette hired him to supervise the creation of the Oregon Council for Hispanic Advancement. The group was launched after a March 1985 conference on Hispanic strategy from 1985 to 1990. United Way then hired him as a full-time director of special projects for the council.

"He's kind of a catalyst, he keeps things ignited," said Raquel Aquillon, administrative assistant for the Hispanic commission. "A lot of things that are happening with OCHA and the commission wouldn't be happening if it weren't for him."

"He inspires people to get involved and to give 100 percent. If he were to leave the state, I can't think of anyone who has the strength to keep the commission alive."

Gutierrez doesn't mince words about his mission to assist Hispanics. He said he's "paid by the United Way, but I work for OCHA."

Gutierrez believes that for some, the American dream has been replaced by "an ugly American nightmare."

"The black and Hispanic youth are en route — as the Indian youth is already there — to becoming a subclass, where they could remain in unemployment and poverty," he said. "It's going to take people like them to understand that this is happening and people like me in partnership to help get them out of that."

"I firmly believe that you can make things happen, for yourself anyway," he said.

In his council work, Gutierrez has obtained funding to start several social and business groups for Hispanics. Gutierrez will directly supervise a newly formed Youth Leadership Institute and a regional non-partisan voter registration organization.

"We're fortunate to have him," said York Haines, vice president of communications for United Way. "This has been a very positive experience and, I think, a win situation for the United Way and the Hispanic community."

The Hispanic services project was intended as a pilot for future programs, Haines said. But it's been more.

"It broadened the concept and gave the Hispanic community a vehicle to become self-sufficient," Haines said.

The United Way expected the project to take three to five years, but Gutierrez made the independent Hispanic council possible in just a year and a half, Haines added.

"He's not just someone with a cause, he's results-oriented," Haines said. "He knows where to go and what he has to do."

"He wants to let Oregon know of the Hispanic presence and that they're in other professions besides agriculture," said Efrain Diaz-Horna, a former chairman of the state Hispanic commission. Gutierrez "doesn't alienate, he's diplomatic and positive," Diaz said.

"Some Hispanics have a lot of bitterness about how they've been treated by the system," Diaz said. While Gutierrez may harbor some bitterness, he reaches beyond that, Diaz added.

"You don't see anger; he has a desire to work for better things," said Diaz, a native of Peru who has lived in Oregon since 1966.

Gutierrez was born in Crystal City, a south Texas town of 10,000. By the time he was 30, he had earned bachelor's and master's degrees in political science and a Ph.D. in government at the University of Texas in Austin.

He was organizing Mexican-Americans in the 1960s, and in 1967 he was one of five college students who founded the Mexican-American Youth Organization in Texas.

In 1970, he led another group in founding La Raza Unida, which became a nationwide political party. The group pioneered the popular use of the term "Chicano" as a positive description of Mexican-Americans.

Gutierrez served on the school board in Crystal City and eventually became board president. He later became a county commissioner.

Gutierrez resigned his county post and in 1980 left Texas for Oregon where he hoped to become president of Colegio Cesar Chavez, the troubled Mount Angel college that closed in 1983.

Gutierrez did not get that job, however, and as a teacher he soon found that the college had more problems than a newcomer could solve. But he was not deterred from pursuing his own mission.

Gavin announces resignation, meets with Mexican president

MEXICO CITY (AP)—The Mexican press met U.S. Ambassador John Gavin's surprise resignation much as it has throughout his five years here—with criticism.

The actor-turned-diplomat announced Monday he was stepping down in mid-May as head of the largest U.S. diplomatic mission in the world. But Gavin, 55, gave no hint of his future plans, saying only he "would return to the private sector ... to meet new challenges."

Gavin had telephoned President Miguel de la Madrid to tell him of his decision before announcing it to the press Monday, and the two met privately for about 30 minutes Tuesday, the government news agency Notimex said.

De la Madrid told Gavin it was the "permanent policy of Mexico to maintain cordial, dignified and fruitful relations with the United States and always to use the diplomatic route to solve problems," Notimex said.

Newspapers, meanwhile, had another field day with Gavin, who once said such criticism was predictable in his position.

A front-page political column in El Universal said, "One of the best news stories that Mexicans have received ... is the resignation of John Gavin as U.S. ambassador in our country."

The same column also said, "Arrogant, imprudent and meddlesome in national affairs, the ex-actor is one of the most ghas-ly ambassadors" in many years.

The leftist La Jornada newspaper also noted Gavin was roundly criticized for meeting with members of the conservative opposition National Action Party, a move that prompted widespread charges two years ago that the ambassador was meddling in internal affairs.

The newspaper also said that Gavin had been criticized by government officials, denounced twice as "persona non grata" in Mexico by the Democratic Journalists Union and said that U.S. reporters complained that Gavin requires them to stand when he enters a room.

El Financiero, the financial daily, ran a cartoon of a man reading a newspaper with the headline "Gavin Resigns" and saying, "Now, who will follow, Woody Allen or Jerry Lewis?"

It was not the first time news accounts have made pointed reference to Gavin's acting background. He has sought to downplay it and preferred to point to his academic background in Latin American studies and private sector experience and the fact he speaks fluent Spanish.

When Gavin's appointment was announced in 1981 by President Reagan, it was reported here that Foreign Ministry officials privately joked that the nation's most famous film star, Mario Moreno, known as "Cantinflas," should be appointed as Mexico's ambassador to the United States.

Early in his tenure, Gavin maintained a low profile and was criticized by the Mexican media for being out of the country much of the time. But in mid-1983, he became more outspoken and decided to tackle what he called "merchants of disinformation" who played on fears about U.S. influence here.

The ambassador has had direct access throughout his tenure here with President Miguel de la Madrid and other top officials.

He was condemned in news reports for suggesting the U.S. State Department might consider a travel advisory for American tourists in the wake of increased highway crime.

Gavin also drew fire after the 1985 kidnap-murder of U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent of Enrique Camarena Salazar for implying that corruption went to very high levels of the Mexican government.

FINANCES POW RESCUE MISSIONS—French businessman Pierre O'Reilly, who resides in Carlsbad, Calif., has spent more than $30,000 financing a group of Vietnam veterans who are trying to win the freedom of missing POWs still in Southeast Asia. O'Reilly says the money spent is his way of showing his affection for America. He is shown with canceled checks and news clippings dealing with the ventures, which so far have failed. (AP Laserphoto)

Frenchman pours money into POW rescue efforts

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP)—French businessman Pierre O'Reilly rejects comparisons to Hollywood's "Rambo" but says he is serious about rescuing U.S. servicemen from Laotian captivity and is willing to use force if necessary.

Within the past six months, O'Reilly said, he and three Vietnam veterans led by a former Green Beret have staged two unsuccessful secret missions to Southeast Asia. They recently left on a third attempt, which O'Reilly says will be his final one.

He said his efforts have cost him $30,000.

"I've always had very deep, affectionate feelings toward America, and I wanted to do something to serve this country. I grasped the opportunity," said O'Reilly in an interview before his latest mission.

The earlier attempts took the group to Thailand and into Vietnam-backed Laos, where they negotiated with Free Laotian guerillas who claim to know the whereabouts of missing American prisoners of war, O'Reilly said.

SmithKline will reintroduce Contac

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The cold medicine Contac, pulled from store shelves last month because of tampering, will be reintroduced in the fall for the cold and allergy season, SmithKline Beckman Corp. has announced.

The company indicated Tuesday that Contac will be available in capsules as well as in new forms, including tablets. It had been sold only as capsules.

said.

He said that although he was losing confidence in the ability of his men to carry out the mission, he remained committed to the goal and to private efforts to accomplish it.

"Governments are just big monsters with very little humanitarian feelings. They count dollars, they count francs," he said. "To me, the human being goes first."

O'Reilly said he has been successful in several U.S. business ventures since 1980, including high-tech medical equipment and office furniture. He said he has spent tax-free profits he earned under his investor's visa on the Laos missions.

O'Reilly's raiders consist of three Boston men who hope to gain the freedom of colleagues who didn't come home after the war.

It was on a business trip to Thailand about a year ago that he met Vincent Arnone, a former Green Beret. The two talked and Arnone told his story of being so close, yet so far from his goal. O'Reilly, impressed but skeptical, later traveled to Boston to check out Arnone and his buddies.

"When I saw these people living very conservatively, I was convinced they weren't in this for the money," he said. He began writing checks to help Arnone and his group get to Laos and pay Free Laotian guerillas to help.

One mission failed last September. Another failed in January. Both times, O'Reilly said he went only as far as Thailand.

"I'm no adventurer," he said. "I think it's more part of an adventure for the other guys. I think they want to live again their years of war."

A French newspaper earlier this year characterized O'Reilly as one of a group of "Rambo" raiders whose goal was to blast its way in and out of a Laotian compound where POWs were being held.

O'Reilly scoffed at the comparison with Sylvester Stallone's jungle-fighting character but the mission plans he described could have been lifted from the movie.

"The first plan is negotiation with the Free Laos (guerillas). The second plan is to storm the compound," he said. "There is a team with a helicopter ready to take us out. Either we'll be successful or it will be the end of the line."

O'Reilly has canceled checks written to Arnone, French and American news clippings about Arnone's ventures and a letter from a Thai businessman who he said was one of the group's contacts in Southeast Asia.

A total of 2,441 Americans are listed as missing in action from the Indochina war, including 1,797 missing in Vietnam and the rest in Laos and Cambodia.

Since the United States withdrew its military forces from Indochina in 1973, there have been 806 reported "live sightings" of Americans in the region, most by refugees, according to U.S. government records. U.S. officials say they've discounted all but 95 reports.

"Just taking one guy out of there would be my best reward," O'Reilly said.

State Department spokesman Dan Howard in Washington said several groups are trying what O'Rourke is.

Drop in oil price, interest rates to boost world output

WASHINGTON (AP)—Economic growth in industrialized as well as developing countries is expected to average a modest 3 percent in 1986, despite a boost from lower oil prices and interest rates, the International Monetary Fund said today.

Despite the benefits of lower oil prices, virtually all developing countries will continue to be plagued with huge debts in the coming years, the report said. Hardest hit will be those developing countries like Mexico that are also oil producers.

The new IMF report said it sees production for the world's nations, excluding the Soviet Union and some of its East European allies, as growing by 3 percent in 1986 and 3.3 percent in 1987.

It estimated that the U.S. economy would grow by 3.8 percent in 1986 and 3.4 percent in 1987. The Reagan administration has predicted 4 percent growth in both years.

"There is likely to be a substantial shift of real incomes from oil exporting to oil importing countries," said the report, released at a meeting of the 149-nation IMF and World Bank.

In a related development, a group of 10 major industrial nations in the IMF and World Bank vowed to strengthen the organizations' watch over economic performance in those countries receiving loans.

A joint communique issued by the 10 nations shortly before midnight Tuesday suggested the possibility of using economic indicators, including money exchange rates, to help forge future loan policy.

The so-called "Group of 10" also voiced unanimous support for a plan initiated by Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III to raise $29 billion in new loans for developing nations over the next three years.

Also on Tuesday, the five largest industrial nations—the United States, West Germany, France, Great Britain and Japan—met secretly, reportedly to evaluate the relationship of the U.S. dollar to other foreign currencies and to review earlier actions aimed at lowering interest rates.

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker was asked by reporters if the group had taken any actions designed to keep the value of the U.S. dollar below a certain level—particularly in light of a sharp drop in the dollar in trading on Tuesday.

VICTORY FOR CLINT — Actor Clint Eastwood gives the victory sign during a press conference Tuesday night after winning the election for mayor of Carmel-By-The-Sea, Calif., beating out incumbent mayor Charlotte Townsend. (AP Laserphoto)

Record voter turnout makes Eastwood's day

CARMEI-BY-THE-SEA, Calif. (AP) — Clint Eastwood, hero of detective films and spaghetti westerns, proved to be as big a draw at the polling place as the box office as voters turned out in record numbers to make him mayor.

Smiling broadly, Eastwood said the triumph "ranks solidly" with his successes as a director and star. "It's a hit movie at the moment," he said.

"It's surprising and yet it's not surprising," the star of 40 movies and one election said in his victory speech Tuesday night. "I knew there was a lot of dissatisfaction."

"I think the great turnout of the voters and the wide margin by which we won are very important."

According to complete but unofficial results, Eastwood had 2,166 votes, or 72.2 percent, to 799 votes, or 26.6 percent, for two-time incumbent Charlotte Townsend. Two other candidates had a total of 37 votes, or 1.2 percent.

Business was brisk at all four polling places in the 1-square-mile village, with 72.5 percent of the 4,142 registered voters turning out. City clerk Jeanne Brehmer said that in five years in office, turnout hasn't topped 30 percent.

"It was a fantastic, enthusiastic turnout," said official poll watcher Louis LaBarbera. "A lot of young people voted and a lot of the retired people. Some had trouble getting here, in wheelchairs and all, but they came."

Townsend conceded less than 90 minutes after the polls closed, saying, "This whole campaign has been totally out of focus and so abnormal."

Eastwood, 55, takes over the $200-a-month, two-year job on April 15.

A resident of this tourist village for 14 years, he complained during the campaign about waste in a $6 million budget, too many consultants and lawyers and about rudeness on the part of the planning commission and city council, which vetoed his plans to build a small office complex.

Eastwood said he enjoyed his first campaign, but that he didn't expect, and didn't want, all the attention the race received. More than 130 newspapers, TV and radio stations, magazines and wire services covered the election.

French musician paying for much of Houston laser show

HOUSTON (AP) — French artist Jean-Michel Jarre and his production company plan to pay the bulk of an estimated $4 million spent on a laser light and fireworks show he staged last weekend in downtown Houston, Jarre's manager says.

Jarre's American debut Saturday night was seen by as many as 1 million people, who jammed city streets to see Houston's skyscrapers used to launch fireworks and reflect laser beams and powerful spotlights.

The 90-minute show was held in conjunction with the annual Houston Festival, the Texas and Houston Sesquicentennial celebrations and the 25th anniversary of NASA.

Jarre's manager, Francis Dreyfus, said Monday that Jarre's record company, Polygram Records, advanced $1.5 million for the show. In addition, about $500,000 was advanced to cover expenses for a movie that was made of the event.

Dreyfus said the money would be recouped through the sale of a new record released by Jarre and a film of the Houston performance, which is expected to be sold for television in as many as 80 countries.

Saturday's show was the most ambitious by Jarre, who has performed similar feats in Paris and China.

"We are betting on the success of this performance," Dreyfus said.

Houston Festival Foundation President Harry Golemon said Jarre is paying for loudspeakers, fireworks, lights, lasers and technical equipment needed for the show.

Golemon said the festival's costs were expected to be about $150,000. Other private companies were donating their services to the festival, festival organizers said.

City officials said it was unknown how much public money was required.

George Bush and the politics of oil

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When George Bush worried aloud that oil prices were falling too fast, it was reminiscent of Walter F. Mondale's call for higher taxes.

There were sound economic reasons for concern that oil prices were falling too fast, but they were lost on Americans who drive cars and farm equipment and heat their homes.

So too with Mondale. The logic of raising taxes to help drive down record federal deficits was clear to him and he said so. For a day or two, even President Reagan appeared taken aback by the boldness of Mondale's pronouncement.

Then the president decided to place his re-election hopes on voters who opposed having their taxes increased. He'd leave the others to Mondale.

The political fallout from Mondale's statement on taxes is history. He carried one state and the District of Columbia. The rest went to the president. Democratic candidates around the country had to fight off Republican attempts to tie them to Mondale's promise.

Now it's Bush's turn.

As Bush packed his bags for a trip to Saudi Arabia and other oil-producing nations, he told reporters, "It is essential that we talk about stability and that we not just have a continued free fall like a parachutist jumping out without a parachute, and that's what essentially has happened to the price of crude oil in recent months."

The vice president tread a careful diplomatic line.

Saudi Arabia, the world's largest producer, has stepped up production to try to force other producers to accept production controls.

Bush said he would not pressure the Saudis to cut production but "I will be saying that stability in the market is a very important thing."

The price of oil, which was $27 a barrel in January, has fallen by more than half and may still go lower.

The lower prices meant layoffs by domestic oil companies along with announcements they were cutting back on exploration. States such as Texas, Oklahoma, and Louisiana — heavily dependent on revenues from the oil industry — are hurting.

"This price dislocation has created severe problems for the American petroleum industry," said Energy Secretary John Herrington. "Service companies, drillers, producers are all having troubles, banks that loan the money — terrible problems."

But for Americans who have struggled to afford $1.50-a-gallon gasoline and heating oil during the past decade, the sight of gas pumps displaying prices under $1 a gallon was most welcome.

Federal official says

Record year for alien apprehensions

DALLAS (AP) — The United States must find ways to curtail a record number of illegal aliens entering the country and protect jobs for the unemployed, an Immigration and Naturalization Service official said.

Acting INS southern region director David Vandersall, basing his projection on field reports compiled for the first half of fiscal year 1986, said more than 337,000 illegal aliens were apprehended over a six-month period.

The figure released Tuesday for the 13-state area, from New Mexico to Florida and along the Eastern seaboard to North Carolina, represents a 42 percent increase over the same period during fiscal year 1985, he said.

"Illegal aliens don't complain about lower wages, and he can be taken advantage of more than the U.S. citizen," Vandersall said. "It's not a good situation we have. The only way to control our borders is to eliminate the illegal alien's motivation to come to this country."

Vandersall attributed the increasing influx to economic problems in Mexico and Central America.

"There is a real push factor to leave and also a real pull factor for people to come here," he said.

Although Congress has helped increase the number of apprehensions by adding 850 border patrol agents, 370 of them in the southern region, Vandersall said more legislation is needed.

"It's illegal for (aliens) to work here, but not for employers to hire them," Vandersall said. "That's why we are pushing for employer sanctions."

The 50,727 apprehensions in McAllen, one of seven border control sectors under the southern region's jurisdiction, represents the highest increase at 63 percent.

South Texans still remember Don Pedrito

By MAX ALBRIGHT
The Laredo News

FALFURRIAS, Texas (AP) — Honored in his own time and now inscribed in history and myth for a full generation, Don Pedrito is a venerated part of South Texas.

His name was Pedro Jaramillo, know as Don Pedrito. He was a self announced faith-healer who lived in a little "jacal" or hut on a ranch near present-day Falfurrias in Brooks County.

Although he died in 1907, many photographs of him remain. He seemed to have been a burly man. He was always pictured with a white flowing beard, pensive eyes, and some of the daguerreotypes show a big scar across his nose.

He is remembered for his charity as much as his "recetas" or prescriptions.

Today, his grave remains covered with flowers from devotees. It has become a shrine with rows of lit candles and a nearby curio shop.

While some approach it into investigating the life and times of the "healer of Los Olmos" — Los Olmos being the ranch where he lived.

The Texas Folklore Society, the Texas State Historical Survey Committee and the Brooks County Historical Survey Committee are just a few of the groups which have tracked Don Pedrito; from 1829 when he was born in Guadalajara, Mexico, to July 3, 1907, when he died on Los Olmos in South Texas.

This picture emerges. He came to Texas in 1881, announced to all he was a "curandero," a healer, claiming no healing power of his own, saying his job was to help the sick through their faith in God.

He gave few details about his life in Mexico but said he had worked as a laborer. The popular myth is that he used to be a shepherd.

The first 20 or so years as a healer he traveled by horseback in the land between the Nueces and Rio Grande Rivers. He used to visit Laredo.

All accounts say he never charged for his services but would accept donations. He lived simply, except for an expensive wide brimmed hat he owned. He often gave food and clothing away.

At one point he had 100 acres and grew corn, beans and peppers.

He used the traditional herbs in his cures, but drinking cool water and bathing in water were often part of his "recetas."

Even while he was alive he became known as a "benefactor of humanity," often attracting large cree him.

Monsignor Willaim Thompson, pastor of Blessed Sacrament Catholic Church in Laredo and Vicar General of the Diocese of Corpus Christi, said Don Pedrito should be remembered "as a real good man."

"He is not canonized, officially, by the church as a saint though," said Thompson.

"He wasn't much of a churchgoer. But then in those days people lived way out on ranches and it was hard to get to mass," he added.

"He knew herbs and he tried to help people in a quasi-medical way," said the pastor. "There is a lot we just don't know about him."

Thompson said he had been to the Don Pedrito shrine a couple of times and had noticed the devotion shown to his memory.

The shrine is a mile off U.S. Highway 281 just north of Falfurrias. Don Pedrito's grave is inside a small chapel. The tombstone says, in Spanish, "Here lies the remains of Pedro Jaramillo, the Benefactor of Humanity."

The grave is covered with flowers, some real, some cloth, some plastic. Two huge bulletin boards are near the grave and hundreds of pictures of individuals, families, and couples on their wedding day are tacked to the boards.

There is an altar in the front of the chapel, and 20 to 25 burning candles.

South Africa reports arrest of Libyan-trained terrorists

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Security forces have arrested two Libyan-trained terrorists sent to South Africa to assassinate prominent black leaders, Deputy Information Minister Louis Nel said today.

Nel, at a news conference in Cape Town, said the men were members of the Pan African Congress, a black nationalist guerrilla group, and were arrested during the last weekend in March.

He said they had flown on a Libyan airliner to Tanzania, then traveled to Botswana before entering South Africa.

He declined to say where they were apprehended or how large a group they were working with, but he did say a third person, as yet unidentified, was arrested with them.

Nel said the two arrested suspects were among a group of 150 Pan African Congress members who received political and mili-ary training in Libya starting in 1982.

He said they were sent to South Africa to mobilize black university students and assassinate certain black leaders.

The government knew the names of some of the targeted black leaders but was not prepared to disclose them, Nel said.

Nel said South African intelligence agencies had known for some time that Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy was "trying to export his madness to South Africa."

Meanwhile in the black homeland of Bophuthatswana, police and soldiers broke up crowds of black youths with tear gas and gunfire after banning a mass funeral for 11 people who were shot and killed by security forces two weeks ago.

Residents of the Winterveld squatter area said at least 100 youths were rounded up by police early today at an all-night vigil at the homes of one of the victims.

Reporters from CBS News said they saw policemen whipping about 40 youths in the courtyard of a police station in a neighboring township. The journalists said officers ordered youths to hold their chins high, then whipped them across the mouth five or six times each.

Associated Press reporter James Smith said policemen in three armored personnel carriers pulled up while he was trying to talk to a group of youths and chased the teen-agers into a cluster of houses, firing at least three shots in the process.

There were no official reports on whether anyone was injured in that incident or other clashes seen by foreign reporters during the morning in the squatter settlement of at least a half-million blacks.

USDA dairy cow slaughter under fire on two fronts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Cattlemen's Association sued the Agriculture Department to halt the subsidized slaughter of nearly a million dairy cows, saying the influx of beef is seriously depressing cattle markets.

The suit, filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Lubbock, Texas, means the "whole-herd buyout" program is now under fire on at least two fronts.

A federal judge in Rochester, N.Y., temporarily blocked the program because of complaints from the Humane Society about a requirement that cows destined for slaughter be branded on the face.

A hearing has been scheduled for Monday on whether to make that injunction permanent. Judge Michael Telesca on Tuesday extended his temporary order barring enforcement of the face branding through April 21.

Meanwhile, Rep. Frank Horton, R-N.Y., and 19 other House members introduced a resolution calling on the department to back down from the branding requirement and find a less harsh alternative. Horton said because dairy farmers aren't experienced at branding, they risk their own safety as well as harm to the animals.

The cattlemen's association said the department's failure to spread out the slaughter of dairy herds evenly over the life of the 18-month program has resulted in a heavy oversupply and plummeting prices in both the live cattle and futures markets.

Department officials put the program into effect on April 1 in an effort to reduce the nation's persistent dairy-surplus problem. It will spend $1.8 billion over the next 18 months to pay dairy farmers to slaughter their herds. Farmers themselves will pay about 38 percent of the subsidy cost through assessments on their milk production.

While not commenting directly on the suit, Daniel Amstutz, undersecretary for commodity programs, said cow sales were heavily loaded into the early part of the program because of the need for dairy producers for immediate cash.

Amstutz said some of the distribution of herd liquidations was dictated by bid levels and costs.

"Had we forced bids into farther-out programs and forced acceptance of those, we'd have paid more," he said. The department is doing its best to buy enough meat in the early period to offset the glut, he added.

Chuck Ball, a spokesman for the cattlemen's association, said the beef cattle producers who sold animals during the past week lost about $25 million because of price drops averaging $2 to $3 per hundred pounds.

"Unless the buyout is halted and precisely scheduled marketings are ordered, losses will mount even higher in the coming weeks," the organization said in a statement.

Ball said the buyout "has totally disrupted normal cattle marketing ... It's just falling apart on us."

"The last six months of last year were terrible for cattlemen. The market was just starting to recover, and this has just knocked the feet out from under the market. Our producers are just suddenly losing their pants," he said.

The suit seeks an immediate halt to the marketing of dairy cattle under the program and requests that the department be forced to withdraw its regulations and rewrite them to minimize the impact on beef markets. The cattlemen's group was joined in the action by the Texas Cattle Feeders Association and the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

Judge Halbert Woodward set a hearing for April 22.

The buyout program, part of the 1985 farm law, pays dairy producers a subsidy based on past productivity if they sell their herds for slaughter or export and stay out of milk production for at least five years.

The Agriculture Department has accepted bids to send nearly 1 million cows to market, along with 600,000 heifers and calves, over the next 18 months. Nearly two-thirds of the animals will go to market this spring and summer.

Farm crisis feeds anti-semitic activity in Midwest

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — It usually begins with talk of conspiracy: outsiders plotting to bankrupt America's farmers and take their land. International bankers are involved. So is the Federal Reserve System.

And somehow, they're all linked to the Jews.

That shadowy message, that Jews are behind the farm crisis, has become an uncomfortably familiar refrain in the economically devastated Midwest. With land values and crop prices down, it's not hard to see how farmers fall prey to such talk.

"Hitler did the same thing in Germany. This went on back during the Depression in the '20s and '30s," said retired Nebraska Judge Samuel Van Pelt. "Anytime you have someone in financial trouble, they're more vulnerable to a racist pitch."

Jews, furthermore, tend to be convenient scapegoats because so few live in rural areas.

A recent Louis Harris poll commissioned by the Anti-Defamation League of the B'nai B'rith found that while most rural Iowans and Nebraskans blamed farm problems on Congress, bankers, the Reagan administration and local loan agencies, 13 percent of the 606 people questioned believed substantial fault could be attributed to "certain religious groups, such as Jews, for example."

The poll also found that 27 percent felt Jews have "too much power" in this country.

The Harris organization said, "Any phenomenon which affects over one in four residents must be viewed as a mass phenomenon, even if it is not massive."

The poll has prompted varied interpretations. Michael Lieberman, the ADL's Midwest civil rights director, said it demonstrated that "despite these very concerted efforts ... (extremists) are not making a significant impact."

But Dan Levitas of the Iowa-based farm advocacy group Prairiefire saw it differently. "Without question, they've made significant inroads ... and have worked their way into the mainstream of rural communities," he said.

There is little dispute, however, between farm organizations and the ADL about those they believe are peddling anti-Semitism in newsletters and at farm meetings and foreclosures.

The major forces, they say, are not such notorious groups as The Order, a white supremacist organization with members linked to the murder of a Jewish radio talk show host in Denver.

The groups they did label as anti-Semitic included the Populist Party, founded in 1984 and known for extreme political and social goals, and Posse Comitatus, whose members are militant tax protesters.

In a 1986 ADL report, the league asserted that many Populist Party leaders had "unsavory connections with Ku Klux Klan, neo-Nazi and paramilitary hate movements." The document accuses the party of trying to "cloak itself in the seeming respectability of nationwide electoral politics."

The Populists, according to the

ADL, were on the ballot in 14 states in the 1984 election.

One Populist goal is abolition of the Federal Reserve, said Nancy Shearer, a party administrator in San Diego. Miss Shearer said the party believed the Federal Reserve was run by international banking families, a term the ADL says has long been code for Jews.

As for membership, Miss Shearer said no one had to pass a religious test to join a political party. "When I sign up people, I don't ask if they're with the Klan ... or if they're Jewish," she said.

The ADL says it's not that simple. It says the Populist Party was established to promote the goals of a different organization, the Liberty Lobby, which Lieberman called "the most professional and sophisticated anti-Semitic group in the country."

Miss Shearer acknowledged that Willis Carto, a member of the Populist Party's nine-member national executive committee, founded the Liberty Lobby.

The ADL also asserts that The Spotlight weekly newspaper, until recently published by the Liberty Lobby, has long maintained an antagonistic attitude toward Jews. The newspaper claims a paid circulation of about 200,000.

Vince Ryan, the Spotlight editor, declined comment on the ADL accusations. Trisha Katson, the Liberty Lobby's legislative liaison in Washington, said the group is "not against Semitic people, be they Jewish or Arab."

Prisons use tracking dogs to increase security

By JEFF BROWN
Brazosport Facts

ROSHARON, Texas (AP) — Nine dogs race across a sunlit, grassy field, gathering in the shade of a live oak to stare into its dark boughs and bark.

It's the successful end of an afternoon hunt.

Their quarry is Robert Dugger, a 44-year-old Texas Department of Corrections inmate.

Dogs are one of three prime security measures prisons have against escapes, says Rudy Artherholt, dog sergeant at the TDC's Ramsey II Unit.

"You can't beat that count, you can't beat the radio and you can't outrun the dogs," he says.

But dogs are not natural manhunters. They must be trained.

Their training starts when they are weaned.

They are taught first to ignore the instinct to chase animal scents and to recognize and follow human scents instead.

Artherholt has been in charge of the Ramsey II dog packs for eight years. Inmates do most of the actual training under his direction.

They start by playing with the puppies and running away, enticing them to follow.

Each day, they run a little farther until the puppies understand "hey, when he does that, I'm supposed to go find him," Artherholt said.

"For a puppy to mature into a good one, it takes about two years on an average. And not all of them make it," he says, estimating that out of a nine- or 10-puppy litter, only six or seven will make good tracking dogs.

Dogs that don't make the grade are eventually sold by the state.

The manhunting instinct is refined in frequent practice tracks in which dogs follow scents left by inmates.

On this day, Artherholt takes Bugger to a cow pasture south of the kennel shortly before 10 a.m.

With a two-hour head start, Bugger walks off, enjoying a chance to be in the open air along the Brazos River.

Back at the kennel two hours later, Artherholt walks outside the fence, telling an inmate which dogs to release into the run.

He has 32 adult dogs divided into four packs and uses only one pack per track.

Today, he uses Four Pack, comprised of Joe, Rock, Moose, Big Red, Honcho, Jim, Ruby, Rosie and Tom.

They are released into the run where they are teased into a frenzy by an inmate outside the fence or atop the kennel roof.

Artherholt whistles and tell the dogs, "Look for him."

One of the dogs stops and looks up every time he hears that command.

"Old Rock is looking," said Officer Ronald Wright. "He's a good old dog."

The dogs leave the kennel about noon and a short time later reach the pasture where Bugger was dropped off. They fan out, appearing to be meandering through the field. But they aren't meandering aimlessly.

This is an experienced pack sniffing for a scent.

"We don't use pre-scent technique here," Artherholt says. "We drag our dogs." Dragging means working in outward circles, or semi-circles, noses to the ground.

Officials know who was supposed to be where on a prison every minute of the day, so the dogs are taken to the site where the escapee was last seen, Artherholt says.

The silence is broken when one dog barks.

The others file behind him, start sniffing and bark in response.

They pick up Bugger's scent and "line it out," running briskly behind the lead dog, barking the entire way.

"They're testifying," Artherholt says. "As long as they're on the trail, they'll testify."

The track proves difficult, though. Bugger's scent gets mixed with those left by bulls and cows that frequent the fields he zig-zagged.

It is also a warm day, so the dogs get overheated quickly and frequently.

The pack stops barking a few hundred yards into the chase.

It fans out and starts dragging.

Eventually the dogs head for a water ditch.

Artherholt doesn't stop them.

They need the water to cool off and open up their noses, he explains. Then they'll come back and start the search again.

"They always go back to the last place they smelled it," he says. "And they go to work and that's what you want them to do."

Soon after returning to work, the dogs let out a howl, the pack reforms and the race continues.

It is the first of several breaks. Each time, the dogs search until they pick up the trail again.

Artherholt knows roughly where the trail should be. He told Bugger where to put it. But he won't help the dogs find it.

This is training and if he helps them now, they'll expect help every time the job gets difficult, he says.

Artherholt runs short tracks. His predecessor at Ramsey II used to run 15-mile tracks around the perimeter of the 15,088-acre prison unit.

"I don't lay a long track, but I put a lot of work in a short track," Artherholt says.

Bugger has set a complicated, winding trail.

Artherholt says an actual track is easier for the dogs to follow because escapees will run off in a straight line.

There are other problems during an actual prison break, though, when escapees often have several hours' head start.

Under other circumstances, particularly on a cool, dewy night, the dogs would be hard to keep up with.

"A dog can run a horse to death. When the dogs pick it up, you try to stay with the dogs," Artherholt says.

"If those dogs pick up a good, warm scent, they're going to leave you in the dust. Try to stay in hearing distance of them. Keep riding and listening. That's all you can do."

It is easy for Wright and an inmate on horseback to keep up with the pack today. They can see the dogs in the daylight.

National labs give boost to industry

By SUE MAJOR HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A drill bites through layers of hard rock, a punishing procedure that becomes more expensive as the rock loosens the polycrystalline diamonds on the bit, eventually causing them to drop off.

But now there's a new type of bond to keep the diamonds on. Insulated tubing carries steam down a wellbore, but the benefits of the insulation are nearly lost because heat escapes through uninsulated couplings.

But now there's an inexpensive way to insulate couplings.

Gene Kuswa says the procedures are only two examples of the hundreds of instances of technology transferred from Sandia National Laboratories to business.

The two inventions alone will save the beleaguered petroleum industry billions of dollars over a 10-year period, Sandia estimates.

In the last few years, innovations increasingly have been moved from the federal laboratories where they were engineered to the private sector where they can be developed and marketed.

"The underlying reason is the erosion of the United States' lead in technology," said Kuswa, head of the technology transfer and management department at Sandia.

A large share of the nation's research money has been invested in the national laboratories, and Congress and the public are demanding more from their dollars, Kuswa said. While much of the money goes into weapons, even defense science can be spun off into other areas, he said.

And technology transfer benefits the government as well.

"In working with industry, there's a lot of passing back of information that is very valuable," Kuswa said. "We may develop information, they may make improvements... It's a better buy for the government."

Congress in 1980 passed the Stevenson-Wylder Act, which promotes private sector use of federally developed technology. The Presidential Commission on Industrial Competitiveness recently released a report on the benefits of such transfers.

"We not only encourage the transfer of technologies where it will be beneficial, but we also work with various government agencies in helping implement" transfers, Kuswa said.

But, he said, laboratories also must be sensitive to the issues of what technology should not be transferred and what should not go to foreign competitors.

The national laboratories have some advantages in developing technology, Kuswa said. Government research and development can take on projects that involve expense and high risk over a long time or can do research smaller business can't afford, he said.

The labs have built up "a technical base that's second to none," Kuswa said. "Academically oriented people work in a field their whole careers without dislocation. Only large industry can afford similar research labs."

But, he said, developments from the national laboratories have to get out to industry before they can affect the nation's economy.

"The biggest challenge is to make that connection," he said. Take the drill bits. Oil and gas drillers use polycrystalline diamond compact bits because they are hard enough to cut through hundreds of feet of rock. But eventually the tiny diamonds on the bit become loosened and pop off, forcing the driller to pull out the pipe and replace the bits several times in the course of drilling.

Sandia researchers came up with diffusion bonding, a better way of keeping diamonds on the drill bits, lowering the cost because bits did not have to be replaced as often.

The technology now is being used by bit manufacturers, Kuswa said.

"Lots of people were making drill bits... but it took an external force to come along and say, 'We can do it better,'" he said. Or take the insulated couplings.

Insulated tubing is used to prevent heat loss in steam injection drilling, but the heat was disappearing anyway through the couplings between the pipe. A Sandia researcher invented a Teflon ring to act as additional insulation in the couplings.

"It was such a simple idea, such a difficult problem," Kuswa said. "The solution was cheap."

Sandia and a lab employee, Richard Braash, received the American Wind Energy Association's technology transfer award in 1984 for a verticle-axis wind turbine now manufactured by several U.S. companies.

Potato Puff perfect for a buffet

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: I am planning to serve smoked turkey for a springtime buffet supper along with salads and relishes. But I would like to have one hot dish to accompany the turkey. Any suggestions? — UNDECIDED.

DEAR UNDECIDED: I've found that a Potato Puff tastes delicious with smoked turkey. One of the good things about the following recipe is that it may be prepared ahead and then baked before serving. — C.B.

POTATO PUFF

2 pounds russet potatoes, peeled and cut into eighths
1/4 cup butter, soft
2 large eggs
1/2 cup sour cream
1/2 cup milk
1 to 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
4 scallions, thinly sliced (about 1/2 cup)
Paprika

In a 3-quart saucepan bring 2 cups water to the boil. Add potatoes; return to boiling. Cover and boil gently until tender — about 10 minutes. Drain well. Using a food mill or ricer, force potatoes into the clean dry 3-quart saucepan; stir in butter until melted.

In a small bowl beat together eggs, sour cream, milk, salt and pepper until blended. Gradually stir into potatoes; stir in scallions.

Turn into a buttered 5- to 6-cup baking dish. Dot with extra butter and sprinkle with paprika. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven, uncovered, until lightly browned and puffed — 45 to 50 minutes. Serve at once.

POTATO PUFF — You can prepare it ahead and bake just before serving for a buffet supper.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.
Note: If you wish, prepare recipe up to the point of baking.

Cover and refrigerate several hours or overnight; before serving bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until top is lightly browned and puffed — about 1 hour.

Asparagus

A favored vegetable choice

By AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Food Editor

Spring and asparagus are synonymous. It is no surprise to learn that this vegetable has been favored since the 2nd century B.C.

For many Europeans the white asparagus is the ultimate taste treat.

And there are many arguments among devotees about how best to enjoy this luscious sprig.

Abundant now (and available frozen or in cans year-round), asparagus makes an excellent hot or cold soup. Using ground oat flour as a thickener in this asparagus soup adds fiber and flavor.

HOME-GROUND oat flour adds fiber and flavor to an easy asparagus soup.

EASY ASPARAGUS SOUP

- 1 pound fresh asparagus, trimmed, cut into 1-inch pieces (about 3 cups), divided
- 2 10 1/2-ounce cans condensed chicken broth, divided
- 1 1/4 cups milk, divided
- 1/4 cup Ground Oat Flour (instructions follow)
- 1 cup (4 ounces) shredded Swiss cheese
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg

Combine 1 1/4 cups asparagus pieces and 1 cup chicken broth in blender container; blend until smooth. Combine asparagus mixture, remaining asparagus pieces and remaining chicken broth in large saucepan; bring to a boil. Reduce heat. Simmer about 5 minutes or until asparagus is tender.

Gradually stir 1/4 cup milk into oat flour; mix until smooth. Bring asparagus mixture to a full, rolling boil; gradually add oat flour mixture, stirring constantly. Add remaining milk; simmer about 5 minutes or until thickened. Remove from heat; add cheese and nutmeg, mixing well. Cover; let stand 3 to 5 minutes before serving. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 5 cups.

Note: Additional milk may be added if soup becomes too thick upon standing.

Variation: Substitute two 10-ounce packages of frozen cut asparagus, thawed, for fresh asparagus.

Ground Oat Flour: Place 1 1/4 cups quick or old-fashioned oats, uncooked, in blender or food processor. Cover; blend about 60 seconds. Makes about 1 cup.

To prepare larger quantities of Ground Oat Flour, repeat above directions to produce amount needed. Flour can be made ahead and stored in tightly covered container in cool dry place up to 6 months.

Egg whites alone make good omelet

Cholesterol is generally found in foods of animal origin, rather than in fruits or vegetables.

Here are some ways to cut back on cholesterol:

Select chicken, lean cuts of meat and fish for your meals. Be sure to remove skin from chicken and fat from meats before cooking.

Avoid foods cooked with butter, hydrogenated margarine and shortening.

Cut down on your intake of eggs and preferably eliminate yolks altogether. They are the trouble makers.

For instance, when making an omelet, use egg whites and polyunsaturated oil, instead of whole eggs and butter.

Fill your omelet with fruit or vegetables, rather than meat or cheese. And, finally, season with herbs and spices, rather than salt.

Here is a recipe for a "golden" omelet that is good for dieters.

- 4 egg whites
 - 1 tablespoon non-fat dry milk
 - 2 teaspoons safflower oil, divided
 - 1-1/6 teaspoon ground turmeric
 - 1/2 teaspoon sugar (optional)
 - 1/8 teaspoon ground cinnamon
 - 1-1/6 teaspoon ground nutmeg
 - 1/2 McIntosh apple, cored, peeled and sliced thin
- In small bowl, beat egg whites, dry milk, 1 teaspoon safflower oil and turmeric until foamy. In 6-inch, non-stick skillet brush 1/2 teaspoon safflower oil; heat. Add egg mixture. Cook over low heat until bottom of omelet begins to set. With small spatula lift edge of omelet and tip pan to allow uncooked egg mixture to run underneath. When omelet is done, remove it from heat and place on serving dish. Fold in half and cover to keep warm. In small bowl combine sugar, cinnamon and nutmeg. Add apple and toss to coat. In same skillet used to cook omelet, brush remaining 1/2 teaspoon of safflower oil and heat. Add apple mixture and saute until barely tender. Fill omelet with apples. Yield, 1 portion. This runs 203 calories, without the sugar.

Diabetic children Camp Sweeney offers fun, friendship

GAINESVILLE - Being "different" can make childhood a lonely time.

For reasons long forgotten to most adults, being just like everyone else can occupy a very high place on any child's list of priorities. They want to fit in, be "one of the gang."

When the difference is diabetes, a child definitely feels different. He often resents the fact that he is the only one among his classmates who has to take daily insulin injections and watch his friends eat desserts in the cafeteria, knowing that those desserts are forbidden to him.

It doesn't have to be so! He or she can enroll in one of three three-week sessions at Camp Sweeney for diabetic children scheduled this summer. The diabetic child will discover a world of difference in just three weeks.

The same children who sometimes feel sheltered at home and left out among their friends can discover a new independence and new friends who share their feelings and their disease.

They find new ways of eating that allows "treats" without upsetting the special diet that diabetics must follow in order to remain healthy. They learn more about diabetes, and with knowledge comes understanding and patience to deal with the "difference."

Camp Sweeney, located 10 miles northeast of Gainesville in North Central Texas, is nestled in a picturesque 346-acre site near the Oklahoma border. It has offered the diabetic child, ages 6 to 18 years, all the camping fun and activities of a regular summer camp, plus the extras of learning proper care for diabetes since its first year in 1950.

A medical staff, skilled in the knowledge of juvenile diabetes, gives campers around-the-clock supervision and attention when needed.

A dietitian gives them recipes, menus and information on balancing their insulin intake and their diet. They also learn how to substitute foods when a party is on their schedule so they can enjoy the fun without endangering their health.

In addition, meals are designed for each individual camper, taking into consideration their personal dietary needs for age, size and amount of foods needed from each food group.

How many summer camps can claim that?

Camp activities include arts and crafts, horseback riding, archery and riflery, swimming, tennis, soccer, sailing and fishing. Dances, talent shows, movies and other events such as the infamous "all-camp Olympics" give campers a full range of camp experience.

Campers stay in one of six air-conditioned cabins divided according to age groups.

The camp will open its 37th year of operation with session one to run from June 8 through June 27. Session two will be from June 29 through July 18, and the final session will be from July 20 through Aug. 8.

For parents who cannot afford to pay the three-weeks tuition, a scholarship program is available. Application forms may be obtained from the foundation business office.

A booklet answering all questions about the camp will also be sent to prospective campers. No child has ever been turned away from the camp for inability to pay. Children of all races, religions, nationalities or creeds are welcome at Camp Sweeney.

The only requirement for admission to the camp is that the child have diabetes.

For more information and/or application forms, write the Southwestern Diabetic Foundation, P.O. Box 918, Gainesville, TX 76240, or call at 1-817-665-9502.

TOPS FASHION AGAIN - Janie VanZandt of Pampa took top honors in the Natural Fibers Showcase in Fort Worth in March. The competition, held in conjunction with the Southwest Farm and Ranch Exposition, spotlights homemakers who use cotton, wool or mohair fabrics for home sewing. Mrs. VanZandt, whose husband Joe is Gray County Extension Agent, also was a first place winner in the 1983 competition.

'Oldest Living Graduate' in Amarillo on Thursday

AMARILLO - The Amarillo Art Center and Amarillo College Fine Arts Committee will present The Oldest Living Graduate, a classic Texas comedy, in celebration of the current Texas Sesquicentennial.

The play, part of the Texas Trilogy written by the late Preston Jones, will be performed by Austin's historic Paramount Theatre at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Amarillo Civic Center Auditorium.

Directing Graduate is Paul Baker, former artistic director for the Dallas Theater Center. The production is designed by Mary Sue Jones, the playwright's widow.

A humorous plotline revolves around Col. J. C. Kinkaid, the only surviving member of the graduating class of Mirabeau B. Lamar Military Academy. It's 1962, Bradleyville, Texas, and Kinkaid's greedy family seeks to stage a grandiose celebration with the ulterior motive of promoting land speculation at the expense of their patriarch.

Kinkaid is cantankerous, feisty, gregarious, and not about to let the vultures circling overhead desanctify his beloved land and the memories and secrets that it holds. The play is an enjoyable, light-hearted commemoration of Texas' proud history.

Tickets are on sale at the Amarillo Art Center on the Amarillo College Washington Street Campus, at Hastings' stores in Amarillo and at the Amarillo Civic Center box office. Prices are $12, $8, $6 and $4.

The performance is funded in part by the Texas Commission on the Arts and by corporate support from Target Stores.

Amarillo College changes advance registration plans

AMARILLO - Advance registration for Amarillo College academic coursework, Summer Sessions I and II, is scheduled April 14-25, contrary to the dates given in the AC general catalog.

The change came about as a result of studies by the college Registration Review Committee which showed that student traffic during advance registration is heavy the first and last few days of the allotted time, with very little activity in-between.

"This decision was made over a year ago," said AC Registrar-Director of Admissions Dick McCray, "but after the calendar was set, and thus the discrepancy. It is hoped, by shortening the advance registration period, we can make maximum use of everyone's time and effort while actually better serving the needs of our students."

Approximately half of the total enrollment for any semester or summer session is completed during advance registration, according to McCray.

Advantages to students enrolling early include a wider choice of classes, delayed payment of tuition and fees option, in-depth personal counseling and academic advisement where indicated, and a two-week time period in which to register at their discretion instead of on an assigned day at a designated time.

Academic Placement Testing is scheduled during advance registration as follows: April 14, 15, 16 and 17 at 1 p.m.; April 18 at 9 a.m.; April 22 and 23 at 1 p.m.; April 24 at both 1 and 5:30 p.m.; and April 25 at 9 a.m.

These sessions take approximately three hours, McCray said. Testing requirements are listed in the AC Adviser which is currently available in the Registrar's Office. Questions can be directed to AC Counselor Mary Storrs at 371-5445.

Students enrolling for Summer Session I have until May 28 to pay tuition and fees without losing class placement. Summer Session II students have until July 3.

Tuition and fees at Amarillo College can now be paid for with major credit cards. A full semester of classes at AC still costs under $200.

Questions concerning registration can be directed to the Registrar's Office at 371-5030.

Dear Abby

Other woman's invitation thoughtless, in poor taste

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My 7-year-old daughter (I'll call her Jessica) received a mailed invitation to a bridal shower. The bride-to-be is "Thelma" — a young woman who is marrying Jessica's father, whom I divorced when I learned that he and Thelma were having an affair.

Since Jessica doesn't drive yet, or do her own shopping, am I expected to purchase a shower gift for the bride and take Jessica to this event?

A little background: My husband met and fell in love with Thelma while he was commuting to work for his latest job change from Los Angeles to Newport Beach. Since I was not aware of the affair, I put my home on the market so we could relocate in Newport Beach. It sold in a few months, and we moved.

In less than a week, I learned about Thelma. I immediately moved back to Los Angeles, where my family, friends and career have always been. I also filed for divorce. I'll admit, I was burned up about selling our home and disrupting Jessica's school, plus bearing the expense of moving—both ways, since I wouldn't have moved in the first place had I known the score.

I need to know how to handle Jessica's invitation to the bridal shower. It seems thoughtless and in poor taste, but I want to do the right thing.

JESSICA'S DISGUSTED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I have never recommended ignoring an invitation, but considering the tastelessness of this one, I am making an exception.

LIKES MY JOB

DEAR ABBY: We have seen letters in your column praising Worldwide Marriage Encounter; it offers weekend retreats for married couples who want to strengthen their marriages. Worldwide Marriage Encounter weekends are offered to couples through their churches and synagogues.

Please be fair, Abby, and acknowledge the existence of National Marriage Encounter. We are not affiliated with any specific church or faith, and will accept any married couple whether they are churchgoers, into second marriages, or whatever.

We do not discriminate against mixed marriages, ethnic groups or anything else. Father Gabriel Calvo, the founder of our movement, believes that all married couples should have the marriage encounter weekend experience, and so do we.

Anyone wanting information about National Marriage Encounter may write to: Chuck and Sandy Ogg, 4704 Jameson Place, Orlando, Fla. 32807, or Father Bob Lexa, St. Joseph Church, Appleton, Wis. 54911. THE LOPACKIS, FOUNTAIN VALLEY, CALIF.

DEAR LOPACKIS: Thanks for the information about National Marriage Encounter. It was news to me, and should be good news to couples who have no religious affiliations but who want the marriage encounter experience. Readers, please send a self-addressed, stamped envelope, as this is a non-profit organization.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 27-year-old security guard. I live with my parents. (I'm not married.)

I have a seizure disorder, which is kept under control with medication, but that's not my problem. This is: In my work, I have to carry a pistol. I have a release from my doctor to be a security guard and to carry a pistol, but my father won't let me carry a pistol. He is afraid I might hurt myself. I explained that I had an OK from my doctor, and if I don't carry a pistol, I could lose my job. Please tell me how to handle this problem.

DEAR LIKES: Explain to your father that your job requires you to carry a pistol, that you are competent to handle it and are very careful, so there's no need to worry.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (36 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Giants spoil Astros' opener

HOUSTON (AP)—San Francisco's Candy Maldonado and Will Clark each chalked up career highlights in a season-opening 3-3 victory over the Houston Astros. Maldonado, obtained in an off-season trade with the Los Angeles Dodgers, clubbed a three-run triple in the seventh inning to break a 3-3 deadlock and rally the Giants to the victory. It was his first at bat as a Giant. Clark became the 53rd player in major league history to hit a home run in his first major league at bat in the first inning. Clark responded in the first inning by clubbing a pitch by loser Nolan Ryan, 0-1, over the center field fence. Glenn Davis hit a two-run home run in the first inning. Babe Ruth tryouts Babe Ruth baseball tryouts are scheduled for April 15-17 at Optimist Park. The Babe Ruth League is for youngsters 13 through 15 years of age. Registration fee is $20. Those already on a team are urged to come to the Optimist Club and pay their registration fee during the tryouts. Players must attend two of the three tryouts. OUT AT THIRD—Pampa third baseman Bret Mitchell puts the tag on Dumas' Mike DePaul trying to go from second to third on an infield grounder during District 1-4A

Dumas routs Harvesters in seventh

For six innings, last-place Pampa gave first-place Dumas quite a war. But the big guns came out in the seventh inning as the Demons scored six runs for a 12-4 win Tuesday in a District 1-4A baseball game at the PHS field. Pampa dropped to 0-4 in district play while Dumas lifted its record to 5-0, but for awhile it looked like the Harvesters might pull out a win over the Demons for the first time in three outings. Pampa jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Juan Soto's sacrifice fly drove Mark Williams home. Williams had opened in the inning with a walk, stole second and went to third on a wild pitch. Pampa hurler Brent Cryer held Dumas scoreless until the third when the Demons tied the score on two Pampa errors and a wild pitch. Dumas got Pampa down, 5-1, after scoring twice in the fourth and twice again in the fifth. The Harvesters finally got to Dumas lefty Brian Long in the bottom of the fifth, scoring three runs on an RBI single by Juan Soto and a two-rbi single by Paul Bowers.

Long had held the Harvesters hitless until the fifth, although he had put seven runners on base via walks. Long never surrendered another hit before he was relieved by Tommy Tobias to start the fifth. Dumas added another run in the sixth before the real explosion came in the seventh. The first six batters reached base, four with hits and two by walks. Grant Gamblin relieved Cryer and retired the next three batters on a strikeout and two flyballs. Long upped his mound record to 3-0. He surrendered only two hits while striking out six and walking nine before being relieved by Tommy Tobias to start the fifth. Cryer is now 1-5 and had one of Pampa's three hits, a single in the seventh. Dumas had 13 hits. Brett Miller had three singles and a run-batted-in. In other district games Tuesday, Lubbock Dunbar edged Levelland, 8-7, and Borger whipped Canyon, 11-7. Borger is in second place behind unbeaten Dumas with a 3-2 record. Pampa visits Dunbar for a 1 p.m. game Saturday.

Rangers open season with victory

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP)—Texas Rangers' rookie right-hander Jose Guzman made the most of his "big break" and was celebrating his 23rd birthday and a season-opening victory today. Veteran Charlie Hough broke the little finger on his pitching hand in training camp so Guzman got the starting nod from manager Bobby Valentine Tuesday night. Guzman, who is from Puerto Rico and posted a 3-2 record late in 1985 with the Rangers, scattered eight hits in eight innings, struck out three and didn't walk a batter in a 6-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays and Dave Stieb. Don Slaught's two-run homer and Larry Parrish's three-run opposite field homer provided all the offensive fireworks the Rangers needed before a record opening night crowd of 40,602. The largest previous crowd was 40,078 against the New York Yankees in 1978. Guzman became the first rookie to capture a major league opener since Fernando Valenzuela of the Los Angeles Dodgers did it in 1981. "Jose was just outstanding under the circumstances," said Valentine. "He had great control and probably could have gone nine innings but we didn't want to take any chances." Reliever Greg Harris mopped up in the ninth inning to earn a save.

Guzman appeared to tire in the sixth inning but Valentine stayed with him. "I was going to let him face one more batter and if he didn't get the job done he was coming out," said Valentine. Rance Mulliniks doubled home two runs and George Bell singled across another run. But Guzman forced Jesse Barfield to ground out to end the rally. "I wasn't tired and I told him (Valentine) that I'd be more aggressive," said Guzman. "I got out of the jam and I felt good but Bobby wanted a fresh arm in there in the ninth inning." Guzman said he didn't have opening night jitters. "I wasn't nervous because I had pitched with the Rangers last year," said Guzman. "I had a good sinker and a good slider and good control." Guzman said his victory was "a birthday present to all my fans in Puerto Rico." The game also marked the debut of celebrated Ranger rookie Pete Incaviglia, who became only the third player to start in the major leagues without spending some time in the minors. Incaviglia, who hit 48 home runs for Oklahoma State last year, doubled in four times at bat. "Ain't nobody in college throws like that," said Incaviglia. "Stieb is the best. He has a sinking fastball that makes him tough." Stieb, the American League earned run average leader last season, lasted only four and one-third innings. The loss spoiled the debut of Blue Jays' manager Jimmy Williams. "That kid Guzman is a good pitcher," said Williams. "He was in front of the hitters a lot and changed speeds well." Williams said "Stieb got tired. He threw 95 pitches so we decided to get Mark Eichhorn some work." Toronto is now 2-8 in opening games while the Rangers are 8-7. Rangers' rookie Ed Correa makes his debut tonight against Toronto veteran Doyle Alexander in the second game of the series.

UT players interviewed

DALLAS (AP)—A former University of Texas player has confirmed that an NCAA investigator and a lawyer hired by the school to investigate allegations concerning its football program have interviewed several dozen current and former players.

Tony Degrate, a defensive tackle who played in 1982-84, told The Dallas Morning News that NCAA investigator James G. Worley and Houston lawyer Knox Nunnally met with him, former All-America Jeff Leiding and all 1985 senior football lettermen.

Europeans among favorites

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — With the absence of a clear-cut American favorite in the international field of 88, the European contingent appears to have an excellent opportunity of capturing the Masters golf tournament for the fourth time in seven years.

Defending champion Bernhard Langer of West Germany and two-time winner Seve Ballesteros of Spain will be among the favorites when the season's first major championship unfolds for the 50th time Thursday at Augusta National Golf Club.

British Open champion Sandy Lyle of Scotland also proved last week that he can win in the United States when he captured the Greater Greensboro Open by two shots over Andy Bean, who says he is putting better than he has in five years.

John Mahaffey, this year's leading money winner after capturing the Tournament Players Championship two weeks ago, and Bean, who won at Doral earlier this year, figure to have as good a shot as any American.

Calvin Peete is the only two-time winner this season, but he has said his game doesn't suit this

6,905-yard, par-72 layout. In six appearances, he has never finished better than 15th.

Langer became only the third foreign player to win this event when Curtis Strange blew a three-shot advantage on the final six holes.

"I do think about it a lot," Strange said Tuesday in a news conference. "I'm anxious to get this thing started."

Strange, who had opened the 1985 event with a fat 80, got into contention with scores of 65 and 68 in the second and third rounds.

He appeared headed for a miracle comeback until his second shots found water on both the 13th and 15th holes, bogeys that opened the door for Langer.

Strange also bogeyed the 18th and fell into a three-way tie for second with Ballesteros and Raymond Floyd, whose mastery of the par 5s enabled him to win the 1976 Masters by a whopping eight strokes.

"It's still pretty much of a tough go to take," Strange said of the major foul-up of an otherwise brilliant season in which he won three events and a record $542,431.

"It would have been easy to let last year (Masters) devastate me," Strange said. "I tried to keep playing. I tried to keep working. Canada was the biggest win for me. It got me over the hump from this defeat."

Strange isn't expecting to win this time.

"I'm not at the top of my game right now," he said.

The final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally (CBS).

The gamble that paid off

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—Five years ago many American families were faced with one of the biggest gambles of their lives, and for those who took it, the gamble paid off.

Perhaps nothing comparable to it has ever happened in the history of consumer finance, and it isn't likely to be repeated, if ever, for generations to come.

The family decision was this: to seize the opportunity to own a house at a relatively low price, and take the chance that the economy would improve? Or play it safe, forego the house, and rent instead.

Many reasons existed for taking the safe course.

Because of the recession, units were unoccupied in many areas of the country and their owners were happy to offer inducements to prospective renters. And mortgage rates were at exceedingly high levels.

To get a fixed-rate mortgage back then, a borrower had to be willing to pay around 15 percent. Variable rates were becoming more popular, but at the time nobody was certain those rates wouldn't vary even higher.

Consider the magnitude of the decision.

Just a decade earlier, many people had obtained long-term, fixed-rate mortgage loans at one-half what lenders now asked of their latest customers. Over 30 years, the difference on a $50,000 loan would be nearly $100,000.

Those who took the risk won, and more than a few of them — and bankers too — are surprised by the outcome. Prices since then have risen steadily in most areas, and spectacularly in some. And interest rates dropped sharply.

So sharp has been the decline that all households that paid those 15 percent mortgage rates can now remortgage at lower rates, pay the fees — called points — for the new mortgages — and put money in their pockets.

Many are in the enviable position of being able to take money out of their properties by increasing the size of the mortgage without adding to their monthly payments. Or, in some instances, even lowering their payments.

The savings are of THAT magnitude. On a $50,000, 30-year, fixed-rate loan, the monthly payments at 15 percent are a bit more than $623; on a similar loan at 10 percent the monthly payment is under $440.

But even lower rates are appearing. This week a New York area lender offered a variable rate at 8.375 percent, guaranteed for three years and with a cap — or maximum — during the 30-year period of 13.375 percent.

Voyager 2 could collide with Neptune ring arcs if its course isn't changed

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—The Voyager 2 spacecraft, flying toward a 1989 encounter with Neptune, could be destroyed in a collision with boulders or pebbles orbiting the planet if its route isn't changed, scientists say.

But the researchers prefer to stick with Voyager's planned trajectory because it would take the probe near Triton, a moon of Neptune which apparently has organic sludge, methane ice and possibly lakes of liquid nitrogen.

"It's very possible we will just decide to take our chances," deputy Voyager project scientist Ellis Miner said Tuesday at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Scientists have been aware of the potential collision problem for more than a year. It was revealed publicly Tuesday by Fred Scarf, a TRW Inc. physicist and Voyager science team member, during a luncheon with reporters at the company's Redondo Beach offices.

"There is something circling around Neptune that we had not planned for in our initial considerations of trajectory for Voyager 2," Miner said later.

He said evidence accumulating since late 1983 suggests that in addition to two known moons —

Triton and Nereid — Neptune is orbited by three "arcs," or thin, incomplete rings different from the complete rings of dust, pebbles or boulders circling Jupiter, Saturn and Uranus.

Scientists still aren't sure the arcs exist. But if they do, Voyager's planned course goes directly through the region where they appear to be, Miner said. Collisions with anything larger than a pebble one-third of an inch wide would severely damage or destroy the spacecraft, he said.

Miner said Voyager scientists and engineers must decide by mid-1988 whether to change the trajectory orders they plan to transmit to Voyager then, roughly a year before the probe's scheduled Neptune-Triton flyby Aug. 24, 1989.

Scientists prefer the planned trajectory because it would take the probe within 5,100 miles of Triton's surface and within 800 miles of Neptune's upper atmosphere, Miner said. An alternate course would increase those distances to about 11,000 miles and 1,500 miles, respectively.

To keep both options open, engineers sent Voyager orders in February that put it on a course about halfway between the two, Miner said.

Voyager team members on Monday unanimously rejected a third possibility that would take the probe roughly 200,000 miles from Neptune, too far for good studies of the planet's magnetic field, he said.

Voyager 2 was launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla., in 1977.

Congressman says

Relations with Mexico should be top priority

EL PASO, Texas (AP)—United States relations with Mexico must be made a top foreign policy priority if the border's economy is to be helped, a U.S. representative told the International Trade Commission.

"We tend to conduct trade and diplomatic relations with Mexico on a crisis basis, and each U.S. agency seems to have its own independent Mexico policy," U.S. Rep. Ronald Coleman, D-Texas, said Tuesday.

Coleman and U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, were among several witnesses testifying before the commission, which scheduled a hearing on border trade in San Diego, Calif., Thursday.

Bentsen said he opposes a proposal by the Reagan Administra-

TWO ORYX'S ARE BETTER THAN ONE—Set of twin Arabian Oryx's, the first ever born in a North American zoo, walk in front of mom at the Phoenix Zoo recently. These rare and endangered animals, born last month, are the result of an extremely successful breeding program started in 1963, known as operation Oryx. The Oryx, once hunted for its sword-like horns, are closely related to various species of antelope.

tion to cut down on the number of U.S. Customs Service employees.

"Customs produces more revenue than it spends," he said. "They collect $17 for every dollar appropriated to them."

A cutdown on Customs personnel at border points would slow down traffic at ports of entry and discourage tourism and commerce between the two countries, Bentsen said.

Trade between the United States and Mexico has increased in the three years since the peso devaluation in 1982 but the prospect of continued growth is not good, Bentsen said.

"The expectation is that falling oil prices will cause Mexico's economy to contract in 1986 and that trade will contract along with it," he said.

Bentsen is a senior member of the Senate Finance Committee, which asked the ITC to study trade benefits Mexico receives under current U.S. policies and examine the effects of that trade on U.S. border communities. The ITC is expected to present its report Nov. 25.

Coleman released details of a proposal he called the "U.S.-Mexico Economic Development Initiative." Among suggestions in the proposal is making Mexico a beneficiary of President Reagan's Caribbean Basin Initiative, or CBI, a program of investment incentives and tariff breaks for nations in that region.

Changes in tax law announced by Reagan in February would allow the establishment of twin plants in Puerto Rico and the CBI nations, which Coleman called detrimental to the twin plant program along the border.

The twin plant concept, or maquiladoras, as they are called in Mexico, involves sending U.S. components to foreign countries where labor is cheap for assembly. The completed product is then returned to the United States, paying duties only on the value added by the finishing process.

"No one disputes the need to develop the economies of the Caribbean Basin countries, but... it clearly should not be done at the expense of the U.S.-Mexico border economy," said Coleman.

Other details of Coleman's proposal include allowing Mexico's participation in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade; promotion of direct investment in Mexico by U.S. businesses, and discussions of illegal migration as an economic issue.

Panel urges steps toward peace

WASHINGTON (AP)—A panel of 60 Western Hemisphere opinion leaders called on the United States today to end its support for Nicaraguan rebels and also urged the Sandinista government to renounce subversion and reduce its Soviet bloc military ties.

A report issued by Inter-American Dialogue, a group of citizens from the United States, Canada, Latin America and the Caribbean, said the present course of both the Reagan administration and Nicaragua "could produce U.S. military intervention."

In calling for an end to U.S. aid to the Contra rebels fighting the leftist Sandinista government, the report said present American policy offers no solution to the security problems posed by Nicaragua and "obstructs progress toward a negotiated settlement that could protect all of Central America."

However, the report said Nicaragua must renounce subversion in El Salvador and elsewhere. It also recommended that Nicaragua order the withdrawal of Soviet and Cuban military personnel and restrict arms acquisitions from those countries.

Catholics assured mass wine untainted

ROME (AP)—Italy faces an international backlash from contaminated wine that has killed 20 people, but a Vatican official assured Roman Catholics that the wine used during Mass is not tainted.

Cardinal Paul Augustin Mayer, who heads the Vatican's Congregation for Sacraments and Divine Cult, said Tuesday that a long-standing church regulation requires that only the "purest wine" be used and that bishops and priests make sure it is obeyed.

Authorities said 20 people are known to have died in Italy from drinking wine laced with methyl alcohol used illegally to raise the alcohol content, and many more have gotten sick.

Police continued a nationwide seizure of poisonous wine and three more people who allegedly supplied methyl alcohol to Italian wine merchants were arrested in northern Italy, raising the total arrests in the case to 10.

Hundreds of people lined up in health offices in several Italian cities this week to have wine examined. Many Italians bottle their own wine bought from wholesale dealers.

Italy is the world's largest wine producer and the government fears the scandal could lead some countries to bar imports. The Agriculture Ministry has ordered that bottles intended for export carry a certificate guaranteeing they are free of methyl alcohol.

U.S. officials have said none of the tainted wine has been found in the United States.

French officials on Tuesday said nearly 5 million gallons of suspect Italian wine had been seized in that country and nearly 1,100 tests had been conducted on both bottled and bulk wine from Italy.
