Home school issue headed for legislature

AUSTIN (AP) — Home schoolers have won a battle, but the war will be fought in the 1987 Legislature, says a Snyder woman who teaches her four children at home.

Ann Nita Taylor said she was pleased with the State Board of Education's 12-2 Saturday vote to urge lawmakers to take up the controversial issue of whether the state should regulate private and home schools.

The board opted to drop its proposed rules that would have defined what kind of home and private schools are legal under the state's compulsory attendance law.

Mrs. Taylor wants lawmakers to rule that "a home school is a viable method of educating our children and that the state will not interfere in our right to educate our children."

"I would say we probably won this battle, but not the war. It's far from over," she added after the Saturday vote.

The board resolution also includes optional guidelines that can be used by school districts that want help in dealing with those facilities.

The board vote came two days after Gov. Mark White told Chairman Jon Brumley that "an issue of this importance, with many ramifications, should be left in the hands of the members of the Legislature."

More than 1,000 people, including many fundamentalist Christians, packed a Thursday public hearing on the proposal.

Board members Geraldine Miller of Dallas and Volly Bastine of Houston voted against the resolution Saturday. They wanted to drop the guidelines and urge lawmakers to handle the issue themselves and not kick it back to the board.

"It makes me sick for us to sit here and try to justify our actions this morning," Bastine said. "This resolution is poppycock and we all know it."

"We should simply tuck our tails on this one, say we were wrong and do nothing," he said, adding that children who are being kept at home but not educated "must find their remedy in some other agency."

Ms. Miller said, "Down deep, I say I don't know if I have this right to tell people where they can educate their children and how."

In a letter dated Thursday, White told Brumley he had "carefully reviewed the situation."

"I believe it would be more appropriate for the Legislative Education Board and the Legislature to address the concerns which you have identified," White wrote.

Shortly after the Saturday vote, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby praised the board for its handling of controversial issues.

"The chorus of complaints is sometimes deafening. Many coaches are still loudly lamenting the simple fact that students have to pass their courses before they can play their games. Some teachers are still furious that they were required to take a simple literacy test," Hobby said.

"No one hears the chorus louder than you do here on the firing line," he added. "No one catches more flak."

Suspect questioned in rape, burglary

By Paul Pinkham
Staff Writer

A pellet-gun wielding 10-year-old may have unwittingly helped police capture a man suspected of raping an elderly woman in her home last month.

Pampa police answered calls about a domestic dispute on Var-non Drive at about 7 a.m. Sunday. When they arrived, they found a 28-year-old woman claiming to have been sexually assaulted and her 10-year-old son pointing a .22-caliber pellet gun at the suspect.

They arrested a 24-year-old Pampa man on charges of burglary with intent to commit sexual assault. He is currently in custody at the city jail.

Pampa Police Chief J.J. Ryzman said police are investigating a strong possibility that the man may be the prime suspect in a rape and robbery that occurred at a residence on Huff Road on March 3.

"We're sure hoping" it's the same man, Ryzman said this morning. The suspect has a Huff Road address.

In the March 3 case, a 70-year-old woman answered a knock on the door and, when she asked who was there, was given the name of a neighbor known to her, police said. When she opened the door, a black man apparently displayed a gun and entered the home.

After sexually assaulting her, the suspect allegedly took about $45 from her purse and left the scene, police said.

In Sunday's incident, the suspect apparently broke into the victim's bathroom at about 4 a.m. The woman told police she did not realize an intruder had entered the house until the suspect climbed in bed and began to choke her.

At one point in the three-hour ordeal, the woman said she attempted to call police but the man hung the telephone up and "told her not to do that," a police spokesman said.

The woman's 10-year-old son held the pellet gun on the victim, suspect and two police officers after the officers arrived, according to their report.

Police said they do not know if the victim knew her assailant prior to Sunday's ordeal.

MOB CAR BOMBING — Police investigators examine the wreckage of a car which was destroyed by a bomb in Brooklyn, N.Y. Sunday killing Frank DeCicco and injuring Frank Bellino, according to police. The New York Times reported Sunday that DeCicco was the No. 2 man in the Gambino crime family and Bellino is a member of the Luchese crime family. The bomb, described by police as a "high intensity explosive device," was placed under the front of the car.

Plans underway for July 4th observance

Efforts are underway to revive a community celebration for the 4th of July holiday.

Floye Christensen, who is spearheading the activity, said a meeting will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday at M. K. Brown Auditorium's Heritage Room to begin coordinating plans for the holiday celebration.

Christensen said the general public is invited to attend the meeting and get involved in plans for the talent show and various activities that will be part of the event.

Discussing the event with other members of the M. K. Brown Advisory Board last week, Christensen said the major activity will be a talent show, with contestants in six categories for all ages from three years and up. A $1,000 prize will be awarded the top winner in each category.

Other activities will include food booths, a flea market, games and rides, Christensen said. There also may be a "political platform" to allow candidates for the fall elections to address the crowds.

"It will be an old-fashioned Fourth of July, a fun day," she told the board.

She urged all clubs, organizations and interested individuals to attend Tuesday's meeting to assist with making plans.

Christensen said it is hoped the celebration will become an annual event and an attraction for the Pampa area.

CIA pays Contras' political bills, sources say

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Central Intelligence Agency, barred by Congress from giving military aid to Nicaraguan rebels, secretly paid several million dollars for the Contras' political projects over the past year, U.S. government officials say.

The officials, who insisted on anonymity, said the money went to the rebels' political umbrella group, the United Nicaraguan Opposition (UNO) to pay rebel officials and supporters, open offices in Europe and Latin America and take trips to seek foreign support for their cause.

The money came out of the CIA's budget, over which President Reagan and CIA Director William J. Casey have wide discretion. The CIA must inform the two congressional intelligence committees of such covert spending, and officials said notification about the "political projects" was given.

The clandestine aid allowed the CIA to maintain a strong influence over the rebel movement, even though a congressional ban existed from October 1984 through September 1985, prohibiting the agency from spending money "which would have the effect of supporting, directly or indirectly, military or paramilitary operations in Nicaragua," officials said.

Congress enacted that ban in 1984 amid disclosures that the CIA had directed the mining of Nicaragua's harbors and prepared a manual counseling the Contras on "neutralizing" officials of Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

The House is scheduled to vote Tuesday on Reagan's plan to give the Contras $100 million in new military and non-lethal aid and drop all restrictions on CIA involvement with the rebels.

"We suspected that the CIA had never really withdrawn from the scene, but the extent of the agency's direct involvement in the Contra war may astound even the most jaded observer," commented Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., a House Foreign Affairs Committee member.

"It should be clear by now that $100 million to the Contras would not go to benefit any army of indigenous freedom fighters but would simply allow the CIA a bigger budget to play war in Central America," he said.

CIA spokeswoman Kathy Pher-son refused comment on the political aid, but said the agency "has complied with congressional restrictions" on its activities.

One knowledgeable U.S. official described the CIA effort as "a major program" that was intended "to strengthen the civilian leadership (of the rebel movement) and create the aura that they are an actual political entity among our allies in Europe."

The official added that CIA money also went to Sandinista opponents who remain inside the country.

Official says

U.S. would 'back away' if Khadafy changes conduct

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States would back away from its confrontation with Col. Moammar Khadafy if the Libyan leader changes his conduct and stops plotting dozens of terrorists acts worldwide, a top State Department official says.

Deputy Secretary of State John C. Whitehead, appearing Sunday on the CBS-TV program "Face the Nation," said if Khadafy "stops training terrorists, financing terrorists, supplying them with arms, supplying them with documents ... we would certainly back away from our actions."

Whitehead, the No. 2 official at the State Department, said the strategy behind the United States making known possible plans for military force against Libya was the hope that Khadafy will change his conduct — not the desire to overthrow the Libyan leader.

"The object of all this is to get Khadafy to change his conduct," Whitehead said. "That is our objective. We're not out to overthrow him. We're not out to remove him in any way."

Whitehead said U.S. officials have information implicating Khadafy in the bombing of a West Berlin nightclub in which an American serviceman was killed, and that Khadafy is plotting "literally dozens of other terrorist actions around the world."

Vice President George Bush said Sunday that "Libyans have their fingerprints all over state-sponsored terrorism," and the United States has a duty to punish those who threaten Americans overseas.

President Reagan is weighing the use of military force against Libya in retaliation for the attack, Whitehead said, but added, "The prospect of military action is something that only the president will decide on. He has not yet made that decision."

Reagan last week indicated his willingness to take military action if the perpetrators could be identified and an appropriate target located.

Two U.S. aircraft carriers, the America and Coral Sea, which last month engaged Libyan forces in the disputed Gulf of Sidra, remained "underway in the Mediterranean," Pentagon spokesman Maj. Larry Icenog said. Pentagon sources said Saturday the carriers were awaiting orders off the coast of Sicily.

The Reagan administration was consulting with members of Congress and U.S. allies in Western Europe over the next step against Khadafy.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said Saturday he was invited to the White House today to discuss possible action against Libya.

"A decision will be made on that occasion or shortly thereafter as to what our response should be," said Lugar.

School trustees to consider tennis team rule exception

Pampa school board trustees will consider granting an exception from local board policy at 5 p.m. Tuesday to permit the high school tennis team to participate in post-district regional competition.

Local policy FM limits the number of days of school a student can miss during a semester to seven, according to Supt. James Trusty. The exception must be granted in order for tennis team members to participate in post-district competitions.

In other action, the board will consider bids for roof repair at Baker and Austin elementary schools and at the high school woodworking area and girl's gymnasium. Bids were received from Canadian River Roofing of Borger ($130,750 base bid) and Parsley Sheet Metal and Roofing Co. of Pampa ($68,900 base bid).

The board is also scheduled to consider:
 — recommendations by the career ladder advisory committee.
 — a budget report by Business Manager Jerry Haralson.
 — a personnel matter involving retirement.

Cities feuding like there's no tamale

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The tamale-hush puppy food feud between Ysleta-El Paso and Nacogdoches to prove which community is oldest has just gotten spicier.

Nacogdoches Mayor A.L. Mangham still claims his town is the oldest in Texas, has been and always will be — yesterday, today and tamale. Mangham is so sure his city is the oldest, he is doing all he can to hush El Paso Mayor Jonathan Rogers' claim that Ysleta is the oldest. Ysleta is a community within El Paso that once was its own city, while Nacogdoches is an East Texas city 800 miles away from El Paso.

Lufkin Mayor H. Garrison started the trans-Texas feud by challenging Rogers, Mangham and San Augustine Mayor J.W. Richey to a hush puppy cook-off May 17 in Lufkin as a joke to determine what city is "The Oldest City in Texas."

Rogers responded by saying there was no contest because Ysleta is well-documented as the oldest. But if there had to be a contest, it should be done with tamales — not an imported food like hush puppies.

Rogers then dashed off a letter to Garrison, quoting El Paso historian Leon Metz' evidence that Ysleta is the oldest city. Now Mangham has dragged his own historian into the fray.

Gray commissioners will review status of public golf course plans

The status of a public golf course in Gray County and how to determine the level of public support for the idea will be discussed when the county commissioners meet at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Supporters of a public golf course, including members of the Pampa Public Golf Association, will be on hand to air several proposals to the commissioners, County Judge Carl Kennedy said this morning.

Kennedy said those involved in the project have asked to meet with the commissioners in order to discuss ways to determine what the taxpayers feel about the idea. The judge said he assumes some type of referendum or reliable survey will have to be conducted.

"We are open to ideas as to how to best go about it," Kennedy said. "We just want to know what the people want."

 Kennedy said the commissioners have said they are in favor of a public golf course but do not want to utilize county personnel and equipment for it without the support of the taxpayers.

In a meeting of the PPGA last Tuesday, association president Buddy Epperson stressed that a tax increase would not be used for the course. He said a course will bring business to Pampa.

Epperson could not be reached for comment this morning.
 Kennedy said the county has agreed to receive contributions for the public golf course and that account currently has about $55,000 in it. He estimated the PPGA has about the same amount of money in its own funds.

 Epperson said last Tuesday that the association currently has $95,000 but it was unclear whether that amount included the contributions in the county fund.

In other action, the commissioners are scheduled to:
 — consider an application to close a four-mile county road in Precinct Three on the Bralley Ranch at the request of the new owner.

— consider authorizing Precinct Two Justice of the Peace David Potter to hire an additional part-time clerk.

— receive bids for services and materials to replace sections of the sidewalks and curbs around the courthouse.

— again consider office space for state health nurse Marge Holland.

— consider a contract for legal services to collect delinquent taxes.

— receive the county treasurer's report.

— pay salaries and bills and consider time deposits and transfers as recommended by County Auditor A.C. Malone.

City commission considering advisory boards membership

By BOB HART
 Pampa City Manager

The city commission will be considering meeting the appointments or reappointments of a number of individuals to our advisory boards at its April 22 meeting.

These include vacancies or expiring terms on the Board of Adjustments, M. K. Brown Memorial Auditorium Advisory Board, Parks and Recreation Advisory Board, Planning and Zoning Commission and the Panhandle Elderly Apartment Corporation.

If you are interested in serving on one of these boards or finding out additional information on these boards, please contact the mayor, one or more of the commissioners or me.

The staff and advisory board members of the M. K. Brown Auditorium have been working diligently to initiate the Top of Texas Review. This is a program along the lines of the Grand Ole Opry, featuring local and regional talent.

If you are interested in participating in the entertainment field and in the Top of Texas Review, please contact Danny Parkerson at the auditorium or call 665-4841.

With the coming of spring, we are busily preparing plans for the annual City-Wide Clean-Up Campaign.

We are making a number of changes this year in the program. Rather than limiting the program to the month of May, we will be running it through May and June. Additionally, to help neighborhood involvement, we will be altering our schedules so that the Sanitation Department will be picking up bulky items in the alleys over the weekend in addition to weekdays.

By concentrating heavily on the weekends, it is our hope that we can get help in identifying items that need to be disposed of and in loading the trucks.

Also, all of our city departments will be following the same schedule. By that, I mean that while the Sanitation Department is cleaning in a particular ward, our Parks and Recreation Department, Street Department, Water Department, Animal Control and the Code Enforcement Department will also be concentrating on their respective departmental activities within that ward.

This will permit each ward to receive proper attention and enable us to rotate through the community efficiently.

The dates for the Clean-Up are:
 - Ward 4: May 5 to May 30.
 - Ward 3: June 2 to June 13.
 - Ward 2: June 16 to June 27.
 - Ward 1: June 30 to July 7.

I hope you will mark these dates on your calendar and plan to stack items in the alleys a few days before the Clean-Up Campaign hits your area. Also, please plan to keep a Saturday or Sunday afternoon free to help us identify and load the flatbed trucks.

If you have any questions or would like to be further involved, please call Sanitation Superintendent Larry Simpson at 665-1689 or me at 665-8481.

At approximately 8 p.m. on the evening of Monday, March 3, 1986, a 70-year-old Pampa woman was sexually assaulted and robbed in her home in South Pampa.

The woman answered a knock on her front door, and on opening the door observed a black male. The suspect displayed a handgun with a blue finish, and forced his way into the victim's house, then raped her at gunpoint. The suspect then took money from the woman's purse and fled the scene in an unknown direction.

The suspect was described as a black male, 20 to 30 years of age, 6'2" and wearing a blue, white and green plaid shirt and blue jeans.

Crime Stoppers will pay $1,000 to anyone giving information leading to the arrest and indictment of the person responsible for this crime.

If you have information about this crime, or any other crime, you can report it and remain anonymous by calling 669-2222. Rewards are available for other crimes not in this announcement.

Some LaRouche candidates reporting they were duped

HOUSTON (AP) — Several candidates for the Houston-area Democratic Party executive committee are repudiating their connections to political extremist Lyndon LaRouche, whose supporters they say wooed them with frequent phone calls and visits.

LaRouche organizers claim to have fielded more than 80 candidates for the Houston-area posts. But in the wake of recent publicity regarding LaRouche's controversial ideas, several candidates say they want out.

Some describe themselves as political innocents who first bought LaRouche literature at airports or on downtown sidewalks. They talk of persuasive and persistent LaRouche supporters.

Others said they mistakenly thought LaRouche and his National Democratic Policy Committee were affiliated with the Democratic Party when they were asked to make donations.

D.R. Murrin of Channelview, a candidate in Precinct 150, is one person who no longer wants to be linked to the group.

She said her candidacy was "kind of a railroaded deal. They prey upon a person that really doesn't know too much about what's going on, and I consider myself just an average working person."

The Houston Post reported Sunday that it contacted 22 LaRouche candidates for the executive committee and 14 either disavowed any continued affiliation with the NPDC or wanted their names removed from the ballot.

"I'm not running for anything and I don't want to run for anything," said Mary G. Molina, a candidate for the Precinct 70 seat on the executive committee of the Harris County Democratic Party.

Ms. Molina is one of the NDPC counts among its list of candidates, but she said she was not aware she's running for the post.

"I signed something, but I thought I was giving a donation," she said.

Getting on the ballot for an executive committee seat does not require voter signatures or a filing fee — just the candidate's signature on a notarized form.

Hepatitis B outbreak reported

FORT STOCKTON, Texas (AP) — Pecos County led the state in reported hepatitis B cases last year, and everyone who contracted the disease late last year was between the ages of 16 and 35, health officials say.

From October through December 1985, the sparsely populated county had 19 cases of hepatitis

B, meaning the area had an incidence rate of 109.1 cases per 100,000 people.

In contrast, Ector County had an incidence rate of 8.5 cases per 100,000 and Midland County had 7.5 cases per 100,000, reports show.

"What we had in Fort Stockton was a classic outbreak of hepatitis B," said Lynn Sehulster, a staff epidemiologist for the Texas Department of Health in Austin.

"And the problem with hepatitis B is that it has a long incubation period — from two to six months, at least."

She said the incubation period makes it difficult to determine whether Fort Stockton still has a problem with hepatitis B, which strikes the liver.

Hepatitis B, which generally affects younger people, is transmitted primarily through intravenous drug use and sexual contact.

Ms. Sehulster said it is difficult to determine exactly how it is transmitted in all instances, because authorities rely on "anecdotal evidence" from those affected for much of the information.

Debbie Fish, infection coordinator at Memorial Hospital in Fort Stockton, about 90 miles south of Odessa, said the disease has been less prevalent in the community so far this year.

The hospital this year has treated three people for hepatitis B, but Ms. Fish said others may have sought treatment at clinics or private medical practices.

Car runs into festival crowd, killing one, injuring 24 others

PONCHATOULA, La. (AP) — A car that plowed into a crowd of fairgoers and mowed down people for a block, killing a man and injuring 24 others, sounded like repeating fireworks as it hit them, a witness said.

Teacher Kim Zabbia, who was in her front yard nearby when she heard what happened, said "It sounded like fireworks — pop, pop, pop. People were yelling, telling people to get out of the way."

The car, driven by an 83-year-old woman who apparently became ill at the wheel, smashed into a crowd of people Sunday as they were going to or coming from the popular Strawberry Festival.

"She got to the corner where she would normally turn, and something happened, possibly she had a seizure or possibly a heart attack," said Tangipahoa Parish Chief Deputy John Dahmer.

He said the car, traveling at 20 to 25 mph, knocked down people for a block along the roped-off street near the festival's main entrance. It stopped only when it smashed into a parked car.

Byron Ragan, 14, said he was walking down the street when he heard people screaming and saw the car coming toward him.

"My first reaction was just to grab people and throw them away from the street," he said.

"It all happened so fast," said fair-goer Margie Price. "With all the screaming, I thought it was like a riot over there."

"It was about a half a block away from the festival itself, and a lot of the people who lived right there whose houses were right in that area, their driveways and yards were used as emergency stations," said Laura Mauffray, 21, a disc jockey who was broadcasting live from the festival.

"They were dragging people up there. They were putting people in pickup trucks and driving them off to the hospital," she said. "It was really a sad scene; a lot of people were crying."

The driver, Inez Layrison, was hospitalized for observation and tests, Dahmer said. Mrs. Layrison, who suffered cuts and bruises in the accident, is the mother of Sheriff Ed Layrison.

The dead man was identified as Michael Meyer, 45, of suburban New Orleans. Three people were critically injured, hospital authorities said.

Sunny weather and temperatures in the low 80s brought what appeared to be a record crowd, estimated by fair officials at over 100,000, to the festival on Sunday.

Some things for kids to do

This week's column is written by one of my sons, Mike, who was named assistant city editor of The Pampa News when he was born.

Daddy said it was time I started taking my job as the assistant city editor more seriously, so here I am at age two years and nine months doing my first column. Can you beat that?

Actually, I asked to have the space this week because of the column by friend Kathy Spaulding wrote last Tuesday saying that the kids of Pampa don't have enough to do to keep them interested and out of trouble. I guess some of the really old people like Kathy, she's got to be over 15, are not as much in touch with what we kids are up to as they could be. There are more real super things going on in Pampa this summer than any kid could ask for.

Lovett Memorial Library is having John "Hank" the Cow Dog" Erickson to speak on June 15 and are hoping to have more fun-type speakers throughout the summer. The library's summer reading program for all ages lets you set a reading goal for the period starting June 6 and ending July 11 and, if you reach your goal, you get a reading certificate.

Even if you don't reach your goal, you still have the fun of a party half way through the program and another party, maybe with rodeo clowns, at the end of the program. My mom will have to get my books because you have to be six years old and in the first grade to get your own library card. There are even books that are all pictures for us kids who don't read so very good yet.

The Pampa Police Department is in the process of planning a bike rules and safety course that will teach anyone who can ride a two-wheeler — without training wheels — the best and safest way to enjoy your bike. The program is to include some bike hikes and bicycle rodeos. Officer Danny Lance will be in charge of the program and I will let you all know when the final plans are made.

The Optimist Club is starting its summer baseball season this week. Sign-ups and try-outs for Girls Softball, ages 9-15; Little League Baseball, ages 7-12; and Babe Ruth Baseball, ages 13-18, are being held at Optimist Park Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday this week. Games start in May. Hey! Better get moving — sign-up date is tomorrow!

The Pampa Independent School District will thrill lots of kids with good old Summer School. They are also offering one of the best Summer Band Programs anywhere. This summer band program is for kids who have already had some band experience during the school year. The program is a big part of the reason that the Harvester Band is "The Pride of Pampa" year after year.

The Pampa Youth and Community Center is planning several summer activities, but I was not able to get a list. All I know is that I'm going to get swimming lessons this year. Lessons will be held for very young people who want to learn to be safe around water.

The Pampa Department of Parks and Recreation has by far the most varied summer program. They will have both swimming pools open this year so there shouldn't be a problem with overcrowding at either one. The city department is sponsoring three, two-week sessions of swimming lessons beginning in June. There will be beginner, advanced beginner and intermediate lessons for everyone ages six and older.

June 6 through June 9 will be the dates for signing up for the rest of the summer classes offered by Parks and Recreation. Sign-ups will be held at the P&R Department building located at 816 S. Hobart. Actual classes will be held at Pampa High School. Classes will begin June 16 and run through July 11. The first class you will sign up for will include your T-shirt. If you want to be involved in more than one class, that can be arranged too.

A class consists of three hours per week for four weeks. Available classes at this time are: softball, tennis, basketball, gymnastics, cheerleading weightlifting, drill team, arts and crafts, soccer and volleyball. They hope to add more classes by the time they get started.

Most of the churches are planning Vacation Bible Schools and several are planning trips for camp and to some of the religious entertainment available in the area.

Speaking of religious entertainment, Sandy Crosswhite is trying to get all the Christian youth groups of Pampa working together to raise enough money and interest to have Mike Warnke come to Pampa this fall. Anyone interested in this idea should tell their director of youth at their individual church and the directors can reach Sandy during the day at 665-0701 or nights and weekends at 665-7393.

My mommy just told me to stop playing with the typewriter and go take my nap, so I guess this ends my column. I'll make Daddy let me write another one when I get some stuff I want to tell you about.

Governor stumps in East Texas

MARSHALL, Texas (AP) — Carrying his education reform message to voters in East Texas, Gov. Mark White says he had no regrets about the controversial new laws he pushed through the 1984 Legislature.

Although he was greeted by unhappy teachers at some appearances Saturday, White said the sweeping school reforms were vital to the state's future.

"I didn't do it just because I was looking for trouble," White told a campaign rally at Marshall.

"The children of our state are going to be the oil and gas of our future. Next month, we'll be graduating 160,000 youngsters across this state, and I see each and every one as a potential Spindletop," White said.

Despite a new opinion poll showing him trailing each of the three Republican gubernatorial candidates, White also insisted he's not worried about his reelection chances.

Recalling 1982 polls that showed him losing to then-Gov. Bill Clements, White said his first full day of campaigning Saturday left him feeling good about the May 3 primary and the general election.

"With the race developing as it is, I feel very confident of our victory," White said. "I think we're in good shape. These guys (pollsters) could have gone to a palm reader come up with about as good predictions."

White also downplayed another new poll that shows him getting 50 percent support in the six-way Democratic race.

"You could put five names against anybody and get 30 percent of the vote, or 40 percent, or whatever it is. You have to consider that we haven't begun to campaign," he said.

White carried another familiar message to voters as he made stops at Lufkin, Whitton, Corsicana and Marshall.

The governor continued to urge support for a tariff on imported oil.

"Don't shed any tears for Saudi Arabia. They're gleefully looking at shutting down production around the world," White said.

White has unsuccessfully been asking President Reagan to impose the emergency tariff on oil imports as worldwide prices have plummeted from $27 a barrel to as low as $10.

But the governor said he will continue trying to build national support for the tariff because today's oil glut presents a similar threat to the Arab oil embargo of 1973-1974.

Then, the United States was too dependent on foreign oil, he said, which will happen again should the current low prices continue driving American producers out of business.

DIET CORNER

BEGINNING WITH BREAKFAST

Q: My children love cold cereal, but doesn't it contain too much sugar?

A: Some breakfast cereals, especially sugar-coated, are high in sugar content.

At Diet Center, we suggest you serve your family whole-grain, natural cereals and breads with no sugar added. Some cold cereals fit into this category. To find out, check the label. Be careful of the other names used for sugar. It is often referred to as corn syrup, dextrose or glucose. Avoid buying foods listing these sweeteners as one of their first three ingredients.

There is a wide variety of healthful, nutritious breakfast foods. Natural fruit juices and fresh fruit can be prepared and refrigerated the night before for refreshing appetizers. Fresh fruit is also a flavorful, natural sweetener for whole-grain cereals. Scrambled eggs and whole-wheat toast add additional variety and nutrition to your breakfasts. And with the convenience of a microwave and a toaster, your children can learn to easily prepare their own breakfast.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Museum spending should be stopped

As part of its effort to comply with the provisions of the Gramm - Rudman - Hollings budget balancing law, the Reagan administration has proposed saving around $20 million a year by abolishing the federal government's Institute of Museum Services. But the House appropriations interior subcommittee is determined not to let this happen.

The administration has proposed a $330,000 budget for the Institute in fiscal 1987 — about enough money to fund the process of closing its operations down. And it has nominated as new director the Institute, Lois Burke Shepard, who is committed to its abolition.

Of course, the Reagan administration has installed bureaucrats in federal agencies for the purpose of abolishing those agencies in the past, only to discover that those who favor abolition of their own jobs sometimes change their tune once they've been installed in those jobs. Former Education Secretary Terrell Bell and former Synthetic Fuels Corporation President Edward Noble are cases in point.

Still, the biggest obstacle to the administration's effort is presented by forces on Capitol Hill, who not only want the Institute of Museum Services preserved, but also want its budget undisturbed. Democratic Congressman Sidney Yates of Illinois, who chairs the House Appropriations interior committee, says flatly that "IMS is an important agency...and its appropriation is modest."

The IMS provides operational funds for artistic, scientific and historical museums, botanical gardens, aquariums and zoos. It will supply up to 10 percent of such an organization's annual operating budget — up to $75,000 in any single year.

But why should taxpayers be footing any part of such bills? The argument that without federal subsidies, we would have no museums is obviously ridiculous. The IMS has been in existence only a little more than a decade. Yet museums proliferated before that time. In fact, a great many museums were established and maintained all over this nation long before any government funding of any kind was available for such purposes. These museums were funded by wealthy individuals and corporations, just as some of our best and most famous museums — the Getty museum in Malibu, for example — are today.

If some people want to have museums, botanical gardens, aquariums and zoos, as they obviously do, let those people pay for them. They have no right to use the power of government to force others, who have no interest in such institutions, to pick up any part of the tab.

No time for price controls

The Reagan administration, which was elected in 1980 partly on a ringing pledge to end the federal government's disastrous attempts to manipulate oil prices, has decided that maybe a little manipulation is warranted after all.

When the forces of supply and demand were bringing prosperity to oil companies and pain to consumers, free-market pricing seemed like a good idea. Today, as falling prices hurt producers and help consumers, Vice President Bush says, "We recognize that, as we talk about national security interests, that that comes in conflict at some point — and I don't know where that is — with the totally free-market concept that we favor." Hence his journey to Riyadh, where he argued that the world oil industry needs "stability" — by which he means higher prices.

Saudi Arabia, which since last fall has boosted its daily output of crude oil from 2.2 million barrels to 3.9 million barrels, is indeed responsible for the carnage in world oil markets. By cutting back, the Saudis could at least marginally raise prices. But given their low production costs, they apparently can make more money with higher production. They aren't likely to pay any more attention to Bush's pleas for higher prices than they paid to Jimmy Carter's for lower ones.

Falling prices do make trouble for some American industries, notably oil and banking, but that's no reason to hope for a reversal. Any of the cures being considered these days, from persuading the Saudis to reduce output to putting tariffs on imported oil, would be far worse than the disease.

Coming from Bush, who made his fortune in oil, the prattle about protecting "national security" is special interest pleading. The theory presumably is that in time of war, the U.S. might need to rely on domestic sources of oil, and that the current troubles may eliminate those sources.

In fact, the American Petroleum Institute estimates that U.S. production last year was nearly 9 million barrels a day, which is higher than it was two years ago. Some wells have been shut down as unprofitable, but many of them can be reopened if prices rise — as they would in the "national security" scenario.

The administration would like to ease the suffering of oil states. But this makes no more sense than it once did to hold down prices for the benefit of New England. Propping up oil prices would impose a huge tax on the rest of the country simply to spare Texas and Oklahoma from adjusting to the new reality — as the rest of the country had to adjust when prices rose.

Some people are fearful not that prices will stay down, but that they won't. This scenario envisions Americans going on an oil-guzzling binge that will produce a monumental hangover, reminiscent of the punishing oil shocks of the 1970s.

The fear is greatly exaggerated. One reason is that there are large sources of additional supply. Saudi Arabia's current output is still less than half what it supplied during the energy "crisis" and what it still could supply. Iran and Iraq are bound to conclude their war sooner or later, enabling them to produce and sell more oil.

Another is that this time, the American appetite for oil is not being whetted by price controls. If prices are free to rise in response to higher demand or lower supply, they will continually adjust to minimize the possibility of a sudden price explosion.

Decontrol of prices also reduces the chance that U.S. reserves will dry up. If, as this theory suggests, low prices now will lead to high prices later, entrepreneurs have good reason to spend money today to find new oil deposits — thus putting them in a position to take advantage of any future price increases, and incidentally to restrain those increases. Under the controls that were in place during the 1974 and 1979 oil shocks, producers had no such incentive.

After the nightmarish instability of the 1970s, Americans may be forgiven for distrusting any drastic change in world oil markets. But they shouldn't let that distrust be used to justify expensive and harmful measures to reverse the decline in prices. This is one change that is not only healthy, but probably durable.

Stuck in Afghanistan

The Soviets have a new head Red who smiles. Moscow is offering new proposals for mutually reduced weapons stockpiles and prohibition "with inspection" of nuclear testing.

But with this Soviet hierarchy, as with previous ones, what they do drowns out everything they say.

Soviet troops invaded Afghanistan in 1979, have steadily escalated their involvement since.

The pro-Soviet government which Moscow installed is seeking to wipe out Moslem resistance with weapons, tactics and strategy beyond what is militarily acceptable.

The massacre of civilian populations...

The use of anti-personnel mines...

The disproportionately heavy bombardment of villages and open looting and booby-trapped soap and explosives planted in children's toys...

All these ignore the Geneva Convention and moral law.

The United States Commission on Human Rights affirms that the Soviets slaughtered 35,000 civilians in Afghanistan last year. The report cites one case in which 16 elderly were thrown from helicopters.

The word which most appropriately describes the present Soviet strategy in Afghanistan is "genocide," yet for the U.N. to call it that would imply an obligation for the United Nations to intervene and the toothless U.N. is powerless except to protest.

Moscow military now controls most population centers in Afghanistan, has crushed any threat to Kremlin rule there.

But in the hills and valleys of that pitiful country the freedom fighters — however outgunned — fight on.

And the resistance cells are phenomenally effective in waging guerrilla war. So, make no mistake, this is a costly misadventure for the U.S.S.R.

There are three ways out: A Soviet victory — which would make all Afghans subservient to the Soviet Union. While ideal, from Moscow's point of view, increasing unlikely.

Or the Soviet Union could withdraw. Cut its losses, recall its army, let Afghans run their own country. Also unlikely.

The third option involves negotiations. Gorbachev recently indicated that he would be amenable to a negotiated settlement. A U.N. envoy has been seeking such. The United States has offered to guarantee a fair settlement.

But our idea of a "fair settlement" would guarantee a "free choice" for the Afghans and that is not at all what Moscow has in mind.

It's going on seven years that the Soviets have been spending more lives and money than they can afford trying in vain to conquer a nation the size of Texas.

Some House races worth watching

By Robert Walters

GREENSBORO, N.C. (NEA) — Representing North Carolina's 6th Congressional District in the U.S. House of Representatives provides numerous benefits to the officeholder — but job security surely is not one of them.

Fickle voters in the district — which includes the communities of Greensboro, High Point and Burlington — have sent a different politician to Congress in each of the last four elections. The Democrat elected in 1978 was succeeded by a Republican in 1980, a new Democrat in 1982 and a different Republican in 1984.

That makes the political venue here typical of the approximately 50 to 60 "battleground" districts that will be the focus during the next seven months of the two major political parties' struggle to enhance their power in the House.

Those House contests are likely to be almost totally obscured by Senate races for at least two reasons — statewide Senate elections traditionally are more glamorous and this year's Senate balloting could produce an important shift in the political control of the chamber.

With the Democrats dominating the House by a wide 253-182 margin, not even the most zealous Republican is predicting that the results of the November elections will give the GOP a majority in the chamber.

But there will be dozens of fiercely fought House races in locations stretching from the bayous of Louisiana to the beaches of Hawaii, with much of the action concentrated on the approximately 35 districts where incumbents are either retiring or relinquishing their House seats to seek other political posts.

Among the races worth watching in the months ahead:

— Louisiana Reps. W. Henson Moore, a Republican, and John B. Breaux, a Democrat, both are leaving the House to run for the Senate seat being vacated by the retirement of Democratic Sen. Russell B. Long.

— Rep. Cecil Hefelt, D-Hawaii, is expected to vacate his House seat, representing Honolulu and its suburbs, to seek his state's governorship. Hawaii long has been a Democratic bastion but has shown some surprising Republican tendencies in recent years.

— In east-central Mississippi, Democrats will be making their third consecutive attempt to defeat Rep. Webb Franklin, a Republican who twice has been victorious over a black Democrat in a district with a black majority.

— In southwestern Indiana, Democratic Rep. Francis X. "Frank" McCloskey and Republican challenger Richard D. McIntyre could stage a rematch of 1982's most bitterly contested election. The entire House became entangled in a months-long partisan debate over who to seat until McCloskey was declared the victor by exactly four votes out of more than 233,000 ballots cast.

— South Dakota's low population entitles it to only a single, statewide House seat, currently occupied by Democratic Rep. Thomas A. Daschle — but he is challenging Republican Sen. James Abdnor. As a result, both that race and the House contest are too close to call.

In terms of producing multiple races whose outcome probably will remain in doubt until Election Day, however, only one other state (Texas) even rivals North Carolina.

"This is the most politically volatile state in the country," one Washington political newsletter, the National Rendon Report, recently said of North Carolina. "Few incumbents are safe and hardly any race can be called predictable."

In 1982, for example, House contests in six of this state's 11 congressional districts were decided by fewer than 3,000 votes — a situation political scientist David Price ascribes to the emergence of the Republican Party in the state and region after a century of Democratic Party hegemony.

Price, who is on the faculty at Duke University and is a former chairman of the state's Democratic Party, says "the decline of party allegiance nationally" is reinforced here by "the coming of two-party politics in the South."

Turbulent years for the Republic of Texas

By The Associated Press

Perhaps the most turbulent years of Texas history came in the decade of the Republic, 1836-1846. Independence was declared at Washington-on-the-Brazos on March 2, 1836, but four days later, the Alamo fell to Mexican forces. Prospects for independence seemed even more remote after the Goliad massacre, but the decisive victory at San Jacinto finally assured Texas liberty. Independence presented a series of challenges for the young republic — debts from the revolution plagued the government, tense and often violent relations persisted with Indians, and the wrangling over the boundary lines brought Texans to battle with Mexicans. Still, the decade began with Texans expressing great confidence. The voters chose Gen. Sam Houston, fresh from his victory at San Jacinto, to be the first president. Houston served two terms, from 1836 to 1838 and from 1841 to 1844. Mirabeau Buonaparte Lamar presided over the nation from 1838 to 1841, and Anson Jones followed Houston's second term, becoming the last president of Texas. Of the many problems that beset the new nation, historian Stanley Siegel suggests that Indian relations were most significant.

In the Cherokee Treaty negotiated in 1836, Siegel says, the Cherokees would have autonomy in their tribal lands between the Neches and Sabine Rivers and would be exempt from taxation. The Cherokees honored their commitment, but the Republic's Senate refused to ratify the treaty. In 1839, upon the capture of documents revealing a Cherokee-Mexican alliance, President Lamar launched the Cherokee War to drive that Indian nation from Texas. Attempting to thwart Anglo-Texan settlement in their hunting territory, the Comanches continually raided isolated frontier communities, as well as San Antonio and Victoria. In 1842, units of mounted Texas Rangers defeated the Comanches at the Battle of Plum Creek near Seguin. Although it had been temporarily subdued, the campaign for U.S. annexation of Texas resumed, offering an attractive means of insuring federal military protection against Indian raids. In 1841, after several unsuccessful attempts to negotiate with Mexico, Lamar launched the Santa Fe expedition. His intention was to substantiate the Republic's claim to the upper Rio Grande before the U.S. annexation of Texas. Many in the Texan army never reached Santa Fe, as they either fell victim to Indian attacks or starvation along the way or encountered Mexican soldiers who easily captured and imprisoned them. Determined to renew the war against Texas, Mexican troops frequently crossed the Rio Grande and campaigned as far as the Nueces River, which they considered to be the border with Texas. In March and September of 1842, Siegel recounts, Mexican regulars entered San Antonio and menaced the capitol at Austin. President Houston bowed to political pressure and approved a retaliatory strike across the Rio Grande. After briefly capturing the town of Mier, on Christmas Day 1842, the invading Republic force was overwhelmed by two thousand Mexican soldiers. A number of those taken prisoner later tried to escape, but upon their capture were compelled to draw a black or white bean for their lives. Seventeen Texans drew the fateful black beans and were executed at Saltillo. The military disasters at Santa Fe and Mier enhanced the appeal of U.S. annexation, Siegel says. Only as a state in the union would Texas be able to secure its boundaries. President Anson Jones would serve until February 1846, when Texas formally joined the Union. He marked the end of the Republic by noting, "The final act of this great drama is now performed. The Republic of Texas is no more."

Enclave in downtown Dallas testing urban lifestyle

By BILL GORDON
Dallas Times Herald

DALLAS (AP) — Mark Mesec walks east on San Jacinto past the Wedgwood blue houses huddled in quiet cul de sacs and turns right on Allen Street. Tidy flower beds splash the morning with color. A half-block ahead diesel fumes exhaust the scent of flowers. The rush of traffic drowns the crisp sound of footfalls. Pawn shops, used car lots and liquor stores line the street. Mesec turns west on Ross Avenue, and downtown Dallas leaps into the sky five blocks ahead. Fifteen minutes after leaving his home, Mesec arrives at his law office in Thanks-Giving Tower. It is a unique commute from a unique neighborhood: Bryan Place. In the quintessential commuter city, Bryan Place is an experiment in downtown living. Six years after its debut, about 1,000 people — most of them young, white and professional — call it home. Carved out of an area of deteriorating houses and commercial buildings east of Central Expressway, the 30-acre development has enjoyed modest success in attracting both city lovers and suburbanites. The neighborhood, in turn, has grown into something of a suburb within the city — perhaps a "cityurb." "I've always been a downtown sort of person. I like the bustle," says Mesec, a 30-year-old native of Chicago. "But I think a lot of the people moved here for the convenience. I don't think they have a real love affair with the city." Bryan Place residents live minutes from museums, theaters, galleries, concert halls and the restaurants in Oak Lawn and the West End.

They also acknowledge that automobile-dependent Dallas breeds few urban animals. "I still want my spare bedrooms and bathrooms. I want my yard, and I want my garage," says antique shop owner Judy Fuller, who moved here six years ago after living in Garland for 18 years. "People talk about wishing they could walk to a grocery store, but I've never walked to a grocery store in my life. I doubt if many people have," says Marvin Thomas, a lawyer who moved in two years ago after 20 years in Richardson. Few Bryan Place residents walk to work, and they usually drive to nightclubs in the West End, events at the Dallas Museum of Art and even to the small cluster of cafes and boutiques growing up nearby. Committed city dweller Christy Mesec would love to stroll around downtown Dallas but feels uncomfortable in the empty streets.

"It's not like New York. There just aren't enough people on the streets here," said Mrs. Mesec. Now a sales representative at the Apparel Mart, she lived in Manhattan before marrying Mark Mesec. Within Bryan Place, residents feel safe enough to jog and stroll at any time day and night. In fact, police report the area's crime rate is as good or better than in most North Dallas neighborhoods. Part of their sense of security results from a sophisticated alarm system installed as a standard feature of every house and condominium. Another part comes from the sense of community. A tough fight with city hall to divert traffic from the area and a complicated deal to build themselves a clubhouse and swimming pool did much to bind them together. Proximity and common interests keep the friendships alive.

Now is the time to check out American Medical Care Products and High Plains Hearing Aid Center at the Pampa Mall. For a limited time, you can register for a drawing to win a five-day, all expense paid Caribbean cruise for two just by stopping by. No purchase is necessary.

Imagine not being able to hear a Beethoven symphony or the sound of a child's laughter. Then realize help is available at High Plains Hearing Aid Center, the largest center of its kind in the Oklahoma or Texas Panhandles, open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Run by A.W. McGinnas, a certified hearing aid audiologist and audioprosthologist, High Plains Hearing offers hearing tests, hearing aids and services and repairs all types of hearing aids.

On April 25, High Plains Hearing will be holding a special consultation for the hearing impaired — a good time to check out any suspected hearing loss or have a hearing aid tested. Helen Keller once said "the deep complex problems of deafness mean the loss of the sound of the human voice that brings language, sets thoughts astray and keeps all in the company of man." But the sooner a person seeks treatment for hearing loss, the easier it is to adopt to hearing aids. A properly fitted instrument can reduce sound distortion and promote greater understanding. As a certified hearing aid audiologist, McGinnas specializes in the problems of hearing and deafness. And as a certified audioprosthologist, he also specializes in fitting and dispensing hearing aids, providing the best of both worlds in one convenient location. His accurate electronic and bond conduction tests indicate the hearing aid that is best for the patient and help him tell whether aids are needed for both ears. Advantages to correcting hearing loss are improved speech clarity, balanced hearing, directional hearing, ability to localize, better overall hearing, more realized listening, better clarity in noise, natural quality, tinnitus relief and lower volume settings. A whole host of other medical and health care supplies and accessories are available at American Medical Care Products, operating out of the same convenient location. The oxygen concentrator takes room air and turns it into pure oxygen. It is available by prescription for people with lung disorders or allergies.

Also available are special convalescent beds with optional side rails, overbed tables, trapeze bar sets and intravenous stands, standard and upholstered commode chairs, bed-to-chair and bathtub patient lifts, all sizes and shapes of walkers, crutches and canes, 10 different types of wheelchairs, oxygen accessories, IPPB units and related breathing apparatus and the transcutaneous nerve stimulator. Oxygen tanks are refilled at American Medical Care Products. Another popular product is the American Hydra Air Spa, a whirlpool designed to relieve chronic leg or back pains, arthritis and rheumatism. The control panel, which can be installed on any wall, includes an automatic timer for up to 60 minutes of continuous comfort. Force control adjusts water turbulence from a gentle bubbling to an invigorating and stimulating massage. The tub manifold distributes air through 50 to 60 tiny jets in the tub bottom. A mobile spray unit may be used in any tub. At the Pampa Mall location, a certified respiratory therapist and certified surgical supports fitter are on hand from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. to assist the customer with either purchase or rental. All products are approved for either rental or purchase assistance through Medicare and Medicaid for approved patients. Also, American Medical Care Products offers free delivery and pick-up of its products. Stop by and see their inventory today and don't forget to register for that free cruise!

Organizations join to aid nursing homes

Through the assistance of associates of a local discount store, a Pampa woman will be making things a bit more comfortable for residents of the city's nursing homes.

Roberta Appleton, a member of the local Order of the Eastern Star Chapter No. 65, will be making lap robes, pillows and cushions for the backs of wheel chairs for residents in Pampa Nursing Center and Coronado Nursing Center.

Appleton has chosen her project under appointment from the Grand Chapter of Texas, OES. She is a Grand Committee member for Stars in Service, a Worthy Matron's committee. Myrt Leigh is Worthy Matron of the Pampa chapter of the OES.

Assisting Appleton with her project, Wal-Mart Discount Store, with the cooperation of a number of its associates, has made donations of money and fabric to the OES nursing home project.

Also helping Appleton with the project is Myrtle Carey, member of the Pampa charter chapter of the American Business Women's Association.

Appleton said the project shows that clubs and civic organizations can be united with the business community for service to others and to show "peace and harmony with all of it."

Those having materials to donate can call her at 669-2356 to arrange for delivery or pick up of the donations.

Alcoholism costs American businesses

By KAY KROPFF

Consider these two examples of alcoholic executives who were treated in dramatically different ways.

Alvin Johnson was the executive vice president of a large midwestern manufacturing firm. During the last 10 of his 30 years with the company, Johnson developed an acute drinking problem that finally degenerated into alcoholism.

When he became a liability to the company, the board of directors forced him — at age 53 — into early retirement. The company estimated the cost of replacing him at $200,000.

Angry, bitter and more dependent than ever on alcohol, Johnson drank himself to death within 10 years.

Joel Washburn was senior vice president of a major international brokerage firm. His progressive drinking spanned five years and had reduced his productivity by almost 75 percent by the time his two immediate subordinates — after pleading repeatedly with Washburn to seek treatment — went over his head and squealed on him to the company president.

Washburn was persuaded to seek treatment, accept his disease and finally give up drinking.

Washburn, 20 years from retirement, has rejoined his company as a creative and productive executive.

The difference? Somebody squealed on Joel Washburn and didn't on Alvin Johnson.

Employee alcoholism costs American business and industry an estimated $28 billion annually in lost production. Yet, alcoholics are consistently and routinely protected from the reality and consequences of their illness.

The employee who protects his boss or co-worker doesn't do the company or the alcoholic any service. Instead, he contributes to the progression of a fatal disease by failing to report it.

The common perception of the alcoholic as a skid row derelict is true only about 5 percent of the time. The other 95 percent of alcoholics function at apparently normal levels with society, their disease unacknowledged and undetected.

Such a person may very well be working at the desk next to you. Or directing your work activities.

It's possible no one but you and his family knows he comes to work late almost every day, misses appointments, forgets details of meetings, is frequently ill Monday mornings and is piling up a growing number of driving violations.

Intervention has a remarkably high rate of success.

But it can't be put into operation until someone cares enough about the alcoholic to stop covering for him and put the wheels into motion to get appropriate help.

Dear Abby

Child molester's ex-wife should alert his new wife

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: When I learned that my husband was a child molester, I feared for the safety of our grandchildren and the neighborhood children, so I divorced him.

He has recently married and is no longer required to report to his probation officer. My concern: Am I morally obligated to make sure that his wife is aware of his weakness in order to protect her children and the children in the neighborhood? This is worrying me sick.

CONCERNED IN ILLINOIS

DEAR CONCERNED: Yes, you have a moral obligation to be sure his present wife is aware of his weakness—which is more than a "weakness"; it's an illness that must be controlled.

Inform him that if he doesn't tell his wife, you will. Then advise him that it is your intention to check back with her to confirm that she knows.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been reading your column for many years but have never read anything about a problem we are currently having.

Several years ago, when our daughter "Patti" was in her teens, I put down one of her girlfriends for sporting several conspicuous tattoos on her arm. In a fit of rebellion, Patti went out and had several tattoos engraved on her arm! They are not tiny butterflies or pretty flowers; these tattoos are conspicuous, obscene and ugly.

Now that Patti is a young woman in her 20s, she regrets having had those tattoos. She's a bright and capable businesswoman and fears that these tattoos could cause her to be passed over for promotions.

Her father and I are willing to pay for having them removed, but we don't know if tattoos can be removed, and if so, how? You may answer this in your column if you think it will help others, but please, no names.

PATTI'S PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: Your daughter should consult a dermatologist. One method of getting rid of tattoos is "dermabrasion." (The top layers of skin are removed by a sandpaper "wheel" propelled by electricity.)

An alternative technique is grafting a section of skin from another part of the body. Grafting usually leaves some scarring but can be covered with makeup, skillfully applied. Neither method is painless or inexpensive. I urge you to select a dermatologist who is experienced in removing tattoos.

DEAR ABBY: One of the best and least expensive gifts a parent can give a child who is leaving home is a book of recipes of the meals he or she grew up with.

Buy a bound notebook with blank pages, and record each recipe as you prepared it—not necessarily as it was originally in the cookbook. Indicate your substitutions, flavorings and the cut of meat used. If you added something to a box cake mix, write it in—plus the brand name of the mix.

Few restaurants can duplicate the flavor of home cooking, and when away from home, that familiar taste is comforting.

My children have appreciated their books, and I'm sure others would, too.

CARING MOTHER IN BELLEVUE, WASH.

DEAR CARING MOTHER: Nothin' says lovin' like something from the oven. And no one said it better Than you did in a letter.

...

CONFIDENTIAL TO FAMILY FEUD IN ALBANY, MINN.: Heed the wise words of Thomas Mann: "Speech is civilization itself. The word—even the most contradictory word—preserves contact. It is silence which isolates."

Better late than never

Veteran finally receives Purple Heart

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP) — Harlan Hinkle, 61, has received his Purple Heart — about 41 years late.

Bethlehem attorney Joseph Leeson, a retired reserve officer who helped Hinkle apply for the medal, presented it to him recently.

While serving on the aircraft carrier USS San Jacinto as an aviation metalsmith 3rd class during the battle of Okinawa, on April 6, 1945, Hinkle was topside when a Japanese kamikaze plane crashed near him, spraying him with shrapnel, gas and oil. During the battle more than 300 Japanese planes were shot down, and two attacked the carrier he was on.

Luckily, his wounds were not too serious. Before he received first aid, Hinkle grabbed a piece of the plane's fuselage, more than a foot long, for a souvenir.

This memento was enough for Hinkle, and he never bothered to apply for the Purple Heart he deserved, until now.

Over the years, the now-rusted piece of metal had been relegated to the attic. And through an unfortunate set of circumstances, Hinkle's wife, Judith, innocently thinking it was "just a rusted piece of metal junk," threw it away while cleaning the attic one day.

At this point Hinkle decided to apply for the Purple Heart. Mrs. Hinkle, who was extremely upset about the incident, encouraged him to apply so he would have some recognition for what had happened to him.

Hinkle could have had Vice President George Bush present the medal to him in Washington, D.C., but he decided to have the presentation in Bethlehem because his family wanted to see the ceremony. Bush was serving with Hinkle on the USS San Jacinto at the time of the attack, and offered to personally present the Purple Heart to him at the White House.

During his 1980 campaign, while Bush was visiting Allentown, Secret Service men came to get Hinkle so he could visit Bush. Hinkle now has Bush's autograph on his copy of the USS San Jacinto's service record.

During the war, Hinkle wrote his parents frequently, but he was not allowed to give specific information, for security reasons. So his parents wouldn't worry, Hinkle devised a code for telling them when he was in battles. By telling them to "plant seven rosebushes," he was informing them he had been in seven battles.

LaLeche League to meet Tuesday

"Are there foods I should avoid if I breastfeed my baby?"

This and many other questions will be answered with the latest medical research and personal experience at the Pampa LaLeche League meeting at 10 a.m. Tuesday at 1006 E. Fisher.

The discussion will include suggestions about nutrition for nursing mothers as well as information about weaning the breastfed baby.

For further information, call 665-7816.

Babies are welcome with their parents at the meeting.

In the year ahead, you will successfully further the causes you believe in. The grander your concept, the larger your returns.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's important today to involve yourself in some form of activity you truly enjoy. You need a breather, especially if it's been a tough week. Trying to patch up romance? The Matchmaker set can help you understand what it might take to make the relationship work. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A substantial portion of your time might have to be devoted to attending to the needs of others today. Helping where you can will prove gratifying.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're strong in the idea department today, and you're also a 3rd salesman. This powerful combination can spell success for anything you promote.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's possible to have some extra funds in your purse today. Spend them on something you'll enjoy that will provide pleasure for others as well.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your leadership qualities will be extremely evident to your companions today and the example you set will be one they'll emulate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Pull the strings from behind the scenes today. More will be accomplished if you implant your ideas and let associates carry them out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You'll be happier today mingling with a large, active crowd than you will be with a small group. Get out where you can shake up the town and meet people.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're now in a good achievement cycle. Associates will admire your accomplishments and their approval will glid your image.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You will be easily aroused to defend what you believe today. This is because you have unwavering faith in your views and opinions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Cash in on the business acumen of a trusted associate today. The projection for joint ventures looks promising, and both could profit if you work as a team.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Cooperation, diplomacy and tact are tools you can use to great advantage today. A willingness to make concessions will get you everything you want.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You could be extremely lucky now in glamorous ventures or enterprises. Stay away from the mundane and operate in your element.

Golden Bear roars out of Augusta woods

Dramatic back nine 30 earns 'old' Nicklaus sixth Masters

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus' sixth Masters championship was one for scrap books, one which evoked memories of golf's classic confrontations, its great accomplishments down through the years.

Golf historian Herbert Warren Wind likened it to Bobby Jones' Grand Slam in 1930.

There were mentions of the 1913 feat of Francis Ouimet, the little ex-caddy who beat the British giants Harry Vardon and Ted Ray in the U.S. Open and started the American era in golf.

It also was likened to Ben Hogan winning the U.S. and British Opens and the Masters in 1953, and to Arnold Palmer at his peak beating the young amateur Nicklaus and the aging Hogan in the 1960 U.S. Open at Denver.

Then there was the last Nicklaus title on Augusta National, in 1975, when he beat Tom Weiskopf and Johnny Miller, the two biggest challengers to his supremacy. And in 1977, Tom Watson emerged as the game's dominant figure by beating Nicklaus in the incredible British Open shootout at Turnberry, Scotland.

And now there is Nicklaus, the 46-year-old Golden Bear, winning again after a six-year hibernation in major championships in one of the most dramatic performances in the history of the ancient game.

This one came when many were wondering if Nicklaus ever again would challenge for a title in any tournament, let alone a major event. "I keep reading in the papers all the time about no chance," Nicklaus said. "People 46 don't win the Masters."

"Done. Through. Washed up, huh?" Not on your life.

Trailing by four shots at the turn, Nicklaus ripped apart the back nine of this famed 6,905-yard layout with a record-tying 6-under-par 30. He had a final 65 for a 279 that moved him past the eight players he trailed at the start of the final round.

They were an international cadre of the world's greatest players — Seve Ballesteros of Spain, Bernhard Langer of West Germany, Greg Norman of Australia, Nick Price of South Africa, Tommy Nakajima of Japan and Americans Tom Kite and Watson, plus a longshot American, Donnie Hammond.

And, he beat them all.

Norman, the third-round leader who could have forced a sudden-death playoff, missed his 16-foot par putt on the final hole and fell into a second place tie with Kite at 280. Norman had a closing 70 and Kite a 68.

Ballesteros bogeyed two of the last four holes and finished fourth at 70-281 and Price, who set a course record with a 63 on Saturday, finished 71-282 in fifth place.

Nicklaus did it with a resurgence of the shotmaking that once prompted Jones to say, "The young man plays a game with which I am not familiar."

But it had been six years — the 1980 PGA Championship — since Nicklaus won his last major championship.

On Sunday Jack's surge started at No. 9 when he knocked in a 10-foot birdie putt.

He birdied the first two holes on the back side with putts of 25 and 20 feet. Then he bogeyed the 12th when he missed a 6-foot par putt — a bogey he said got him going.

"I knew I needed to be aggressive coming in from that point," he said.

He two-putted from 30 feet to birdie the par-5 13th and parred the 14th.

He nailed his drive on the 500-yard 15th and sent a 4-iron 12 feet from the cup, knocking that in for an eagle-3.

The magic was still there at 16. A nice little 5-iron came to rest three feet from the pin and he turned it into a birdie-2.

"When I was on the 17th tee, I heard a roar," Nicklaus said. "It was a funny sound. It wasn't a sound of cheer, but it was a sound of cheering. I knew something had happened."

After making another 10-footer for a birdie at 17, he learned what that roar was all about. Ballesteros, playing the 15th at nine under par, had found the water with his approach.

The Spanish star bogeyed and suddenly Nicklaus was in the lead. It was later in the round when Norman moved into the title chase with birdies at 14, 15, 16 and 17, matching the 9-under total Nicklaus was sitting on with his round completed.

Norman had gotten into trouble when his approach missed the green and landed right of the green in the gallery.

When Norman's par putt at 18 failed to drop, Nicklaus had his 18th major professional championship.

Golf's greatest...Masters winner Jack Nicklaus

Historic charge brought tears to even Jack's eyes

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus walked down the middle of the 18th fairway at historic Augusta National, striding purposefully and powerfully, like a man on a mission.

You would never know there was a tear in his eye.

Nicklaus had made this trip many times before, but never with more emotion. At 46, in the twilight of one of the greatest careers in golf history, he was reaching back for one more sunrise, one more Masters championship.

On each side of the ropes, his fans were packed as far as the eye could see, fans who had seen him win the coveted green jacket a record five times, fans who wanted him to take home one more for what it would represent, the triumph of will by an American hero.

Their cheers thundered around him and he walked proudly through the canyon of sound cascading down around him. It was a noisy tribute to what he has accomplished since he started coming here 27 years ago, and to what he was accomplishing on this brilliant spring afternoon.

Logic tells us that 46-year-old players don't win as demanding a golf tournament as the Masters. Even Nicklaus acknowledged that. But logic took a day off Sunday and in its place was a neat little fairy tale, a story of an old hero, spurred on by his fans and his sons to a spectacular, unlikely victory.

He began this day in the hunt, but only barely. He was four shots behind, tied with six other players, locked behind eight other names on the leader board when he awoke to a phone call from one of his sons, Steve. Nicklaus recalled the conversation.

"He said, 'Well, Pops, what do you think it will take?'"

"I said, '66 to tie, 65 to win.'"

"He said, 'Those were the numbers I had in mind. Now, go to it.'"

Nicklaus pretty much wasted the first eight holes, making no progress on the lead. Then, bent over a birdie putt at No. 9, he pulled up, stopped by the roar of the gallery at the eighth hole where Seve Ballesteros and Tom Kite had both scored eagles.

When he went back to the ball, it was as if a fire had been lit within him. He made that birdie and two more on the next two holes. Suddenly, his name appeared on the leader board and the word spread around the course: "Nicklaus is charging."

On each hole, he consulted with his caddy son, Jackie, on the shots. Once, after a good drive, he asked Jackie if the ball had reached the green.

"I'm missing the pleasure of seeing my golf ball finish," Nicklaus said. "I can't see that far anymore."

Hole-by-hole, he closed the gap, passing other golfers, gathering momentum and gallery.

As each birdie — in the case of No. 15, an eagle — dropped, the fans roared. "The sound, green to tee, was deafening, unbelievable," said the man who has heard a few cheers before. "I had no clue what I was shooting, just that I was getting birdies and I'd better keep doing it."

By the time he reached No. 18, he had the lead by a stroke. The tournament was there for the taking and he knew it.

"Several times, I had tears in my eyes," he said. "I get pretty emotional. I sort of well up."

He missed another birdie by no more than four inches on that hole and with Greg Norman staging a late charge of his own, the victory was in doubt. Nevertheless, he hugged his caddy son in a poignant scene.

"It was just a great feeling to share that moment with him," Nicklaus said.

It got even better a few minutes later when Norman's last-hole bogey clinched the tournament for Nicklaus. He had reached for that sunrise and grasped it proudly.

What made it so sweet for him and his fans is that they know the whispers are true. He is past his prime and there won't be many more wins.

"I'm not as good as I once was," he said. "But occasionally, I want to be."

"Today, I was."

Optimist baseball, softball tryouts

Little League and Babe Ruth baseball tryouts, and girls softball tryouts, will be held through this week and the Pampa Optimist Club Baseball Park.

Little League tryouts begin today and will run through Wednesday at the Optimist Park, from 5:30 to 7 p.m. each day. Participants must be age 10-12 (at least 10 before July 1) and must attend two of the three sessions. Registration fee is $18.

Babe Ruth tryouts begin Tuesday and will run through Thursday, from 5:30 to 7 p.m. each day. Registration fee is $20, and players already on a team are urged to come pay. Players trying out must attend two of the three sessions.

Optimist girls' softball tryouts will run Wednesday through Friday.

Teams will be divided into two age groups, 9 through 12, and 13 through 15. Signup times are from 5:30 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Diet Pill System Sweeping U.S.

Super Dream Pill Guaranteed Weight Loss

Eat Your Favorite Foods

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH — According to the latest review of customers' files, here's what some people are saying about the remarkable Dream Pill System for guaranteed weight loss:

"I lost 25 lbs. with a 30 day supply."
Mrs. J.N.S., Ft. Payne, Alabama
"Losing 1 lb. per day."

Mr. J.G., Pineville, Kentucky
"Your Dream Pill is working for me... ordering another supply."

Mrs. G.W., Fort Gay, West Virginia
"I have been on Dream Pill for one month and feel great... have lost 27 lbs."

Mr. A.D., Anadarko, Oklahoma
The Super Dream Pill System combines the natural substances L-arginine and L-ornithine which can stimulate the body's production of growth hormone. Dr. Robert Harris, a specialist in nutritional medicine in Stafford Springs, Connecticut, was recently quoted as explaining: "Growth Hormone may be what's responsible for allowing teenagers to down thousands of calories in hamburgers and other foods and still be thin as a rail."

"Growth Hormone is present in people up through the teenage years, then slowly diminishes with age. But L-arginine and L-ornithine make the body 'think' it belongs to a teenager again, allowing adults to eat [their favorite foods] — and still be thin and wiry."

Life Extension Authors Confirm Results
Durk Pearson and Sandy Shaw, graduates of MIT and UCLA respectively, introduced these miracle substances to the public in their runaway best selling book, Life Extension. They discovered the weight-loss effects by accident. Sandy fell and broke her foot and started taking L-arginine because of its well-known healing qualities. Much to her amazement Sandy lost 25 pounds of fat and put on 5 pounds of firm-toned muscle in six weeks. According to Durk's calculations, the pill caused Sandy to lose 400 times as much fat as she would otherwise have lost — without dieting!

Saturday's Area Track Results

Pampa, Wheeler boys; Miami, Canadian girls win meets

Gary Jernigan won the 100 and 200 and anchored Pampa to a win in the 400-meter relay, while Billy Butler cleared 6-6 in the high jump as the Harvesters won Dumas' North Plains Relays here Saturday.

Pampa logged 141 points to second place Canyon's 109.

At Spearman, Canadian's girls pasted the field enroute to another meet crown, while the Wildcats finished third. Wendi Burns won the long jump, triple jump and 100-meter hurdles, while Tracie Conn swept the 100 and 200 and finished third behind Burns in the field events.

At Booker, Miami's girls and Wheeler's boys cruised to their respective team championships.

Miami's Lancee Lisenby tacked an astounding 14 inches onto her previous season best in the long jump, winning it with a leap of 18-3. Lisenby also won the triple jump and the 400; Alane Dinsmore won the 1600, and the Warriorettes captured the 800 and 1600 relays.

Wheeler's boys won six individual events in cruising to the team title, including wins by Dicky Salyer in the long jump and 100, and by Dale Hazel in the 200 and 400, while Danny Benefield broke 40.0 in capturing the 300 hurdles.

Groom won the 400 relay, while Hank McConnell won easily in the discus.

Mavericks rip Lakers as NBA regular season ends

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

While the Philadelphia 76ers rested Julius Erving's knee and hoped that Moses Malone's broken bone around his eye heals in time for the playoffs, they found out the hard way who their first opponent will be.

A jumper by Darren Daye with two seconds left, after Washington rallied from a 17-point deficit and then lost an eight-point fourth-quarter lead, gave the Bullets a 98-97 victory over Philadelphia on Sunday and an NBA playoff berth against the 76ers.

NBA Roundup

Washington and New Jersey, trounced 135-107 by Boston, finished in a tie at 39-43, but the Bullets earned the sixth seeding position in the Eastern Conference because they won the season series from the Nets 4-2.

The Nets play Central Division champion Milwaukee, while Washington faces the injury-hobbled 76ers.

The best-of-five first round begins Thursday with Chicago at Boston, Detroit at Atlanta, Sacramento at Houston and San Antonio at the Los Angeles Lakers.

The rest of the field plays Friday, with Washington at Philadelphia, Utah at Dallas, New Jersey at Milwaukee and Portland at Denver.

In other games on the final day of the regular season, it was Cleveland 104, Chicago 97; San Antonio 123, Portland 118; Phoenix 118, Los Angeles Clippers 99; and Dallas 127, Los Angeles Lakers 104.

Erving, with a slightly bruised right knee, will be back for the playoff opener against the Bullets, but the status of Malone is questionable. He suffered a broken orbital bone below the right eye on March 28.

The Bullets trailed 39-22 in the second quarter, but cut the deficit to nine at halftime. A 20-8 spurt, including 14 points by Cliff Robinson, helped tie the score 75-75 after three periods.

Washington went ahead 87-79 before Philadelphia rallied to force a wild finish.

Celtics 135, Nets 107
Larry Bird scored 16 of his 26 points as Boston outscored New Jersey 46-27 in the third quarter of a game that featured a spirited battle for the individual free-throw shooting title.

The game was 51-51 at halftime before the Celtics rolled to their 31st consecutive home victory, extending their own NBA record. Boston's final home mark of 40-1 established an all-time percentage record of .976, breaking the standard of .971 (33-1) by the Rochester Royals in 1949-50.

Bird overtook Golden State rookie Chris Mullin for the four-shooting title by hitting seven consecutive shots from the line against the Nets. But Bird also got a late challenge from teammate Danny Ainge.

Ainge needed to sink 13 to qualify for the crown with 125 free throws made. He fell just two short as he made 11 of 12.

Kevin McHale was 11-for-13 from the field and scored 24 points for Boston, while Mike Gminski led New Jersey with 18.

Other Individual Leaders
Dominique Wilkins of Atlanta, who scored 57 points on Thursday to take control of the scoring race, had 34 more in the regular-season finale against Indiana on Saturday to finish with a 30.33 average. Adrian Dantley of Utah and Alex English of Denver, who didn't play when the two teams met in Denver Saturday night, finished at 29.83 and 29.80, respectively.

Mavericks 127, Lakers 104
Jay Vincent scored 19 points and Sam Perkins added 18 as Dallas defeated Los Angeles, which rested three starters.

The Mavericks had a 51-38 rebounding advantage over the Lakers, who played without Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Johnson and Kurt Rambis.

Byron Scott led all scorers with 24 points for Los Angeles, which lost for the first time in five meetings with Dallas this season.

Cavaliers 104, Bulls 97
World B. Free scored 31 points and Dirk Minniefeld collected 10 of his 20 points in the fourth quarter as Cleveland ended the season by beating Chicago and snapping a seven-game losing streak.

The Bulls, who clinched the final Eastern Conference playoff spot Friday night when Chicago defeated Washington and Cleveland lost to Boston, finished one game ahead of the Cavaliers.

Michael Jordan led the Bulls with 29 points.

Spurs 123, Trail Blazers 118
Mike Mitchell scored 10 of his 40 points in the last eight minutes of the game, leading San Antonio past Portland.

The Trail Blazers were led by

Kiki Vandeweghe with 28 points. Suns 118, Clippers 99
Larry Nance scored 21 points and Bernard Thompson had all 10 of his during a decisive second-quarter rally as Phoenix beat Los Angeles in a game pitting two non-playoff teams.

Norm Nixon had a game-high 28 points for the Clippers.

Baseball Roundup

Rangers, Astros lose by one

By Associated Press

American League

The Cleveland Indians and New York Yankees are off to fast starts this season.

The Indians are 3-3, the Yanks 5-1.

Everything is relative.

The Yankees haven't done this well in their first six games since 1976, the year they ended a 12-year American League pennant drought. A better start last year and they might have finished first in the AL East instead of second, two games behind Toronto.

"A good start means everybody else is playing catch-up," Yankees third baseman Mike Pagliarulo said. "That's what we had to do last year."

Last year the Indians lost their first five games and never recovered, losing 102 to finish as the league's worst team.

"You don't want to go 0-5 because you just bury yourself," Indians outfielder Joe Carter said. "If we can stay around .500 for the first half, we might be in the thick of things."

Elsewhere Sunday in the AL it was Oakland 11, California 7; Boston 12, Chicago 2; Seattle 4, Minnesota 2; Kansas City 7, Toronto 4; and Baltimore 3, Texas 2.

Yankees 3, Brewers 2
The Yankees' good start means the pressure is off Lou Piniella, their rookie manager — for now, anyway.

A year ago, Yogi Berra was dismissed after 16 games.

"We're doing just enough now to win," said Piniella, who played 11 seasons for the Yankees before becoming a coach in 1985. "We're winning those close games, and good clubs win the close ones."

Ron Guidry, the opening-day winner when a strained calf muscle limited him to five innings against Kansas City, scattered eight hits and a run in seven innings against the Brewers. The Yanks got all their runs — and the last of their three hits — in the third inning, two of them on Don Mattingly's single off the right-field wall.

Orioles 3, Rangers 2
Cal Ripken hit a tie-breaking two-run single in the top of the eighth inning to boost Baltimore past the Rangers. Alan Wiggins walked, was singled to third by Lee Lacy, who stole second, then both runners came home on Ripken's looper down the right-field line.

National League

The Philadelphia Phillies would like to inform everyone, especially the New York Mets and St. Louis Cardinals, that the National League East may not be the two-team race that most of the experts have predicted.

"I think New York and St. Louis know we're as good as they are and that we're going to give them a hard time," Shane Rawley said Sunday after scattering 10 hits in pitching the Phillies to a 4-2 triumph over the Mets.

The defending champion Cardinals, who were baseball's last unbeaten team, lost for the first time in five games, bowing to Montreal 3-2. Meanwhile, Los Angeles and San Diego set a major-league record a few minutes apart by playing their seventh consecutive one-run games to start the season. The Dodgers edged San Francisco 3-2 while the Padres nipped Cincinnati 7-6.

In other NL games, Pittsburgh trounced Chicago 8-0 and Atlanta outlasted Houston 8-7.

Rawley blossomed into the ace of the Philadelphia staff. Sunday's victory came following a no-decision nine-inning outing against Cincinnati in which he allowed one run and four hits.

Rawley got all the runs he needed when Gary Redus hit a solo homer in the third inning and Darren Daulton hammered a two-run shot in the fourth, both off Rick Aguilera. Glenn Wilson's RBI double in the sixth made it 4-0. The Mets scored in the eighth on doubles by Keith Hernandez and Gary Carter and Ray Knight homered in the ninth.

Braves 8, Astros 7
Billy Sample had three hits — including a controversial three-run homer — Ken Oberkfell drove in four runs and Gene Garber pitched out of a ninth-inning jam. Despite a heated protest by Houston manager Hal Lanier, third-base umpire John McSherry ruled that Sample's fourth-inning homer, which gave Atlanta a 4-0 lead, went just inside the foul pole.

Nakasone promises more import-oriented Japanese society

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. and Japanese officials say President Reagan has a firm promise from Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone that the Japanese leader will institute a program designed to restructure Japanese society to satisfy his country's Western trading partners.

Nakasone, the officials said, is determined to rid Japan of its long coveted trade surplus and convert its people into more leisurely, higher living and import hungry consumers.

That was the conclusion drawn Sunday by officials from both sides following a casual, midday meeting between the two leaders at the president's Camp David retreat in the Maryland mountains.

After years of concentrating nearly all their commercial efforts on developing an economy built on exports, the Japanese now realize that policy "is having a serious and adverse impact on relations with this country and others in the world," said one U.S. official briefing reporters after the meeting.

And a Japanese official, who, like the American, described the talks on condition he not be identified, said Reagan spoke of "mounting frustration in the United States" over the inability of U.S. firms to compete with Japanese products in either country.

The United States has about a $50 billion trade deficit with Japan.

"The prime minister said he realized Japan can't continue as is," the official said. "It is high time for the Japanese economy to change its own structure."

An American official who attended the talks said Nakasone assured Reagan he is "determined to effect an historic change" in Japanese lifestyle and culture to accommodate Western markets and interests. Reagan, he said, was "impressed by the commitment and determination of the prime minister" to eliminate the huge trade imbalance between Japan and the West.

The prime minister also expressed sympathy to Reagan for the most recent terrorist attack in Berlin in which an American soldier was killed and more than 200 people, including 63 U.S. military personnel, were wounded, the official said.

Both men expressed a desire for international cooperation in combatting terrorism, the source said, but Reagan neither sought nor received support for a retaliatory strike against Libya, which has been blamed for terrorist attacks in the past and which Reagan has termed a suspect in the latest killing.

Welcoming Nakasone to the famed mountaintop retreat established secretly by President Franklin Roosevelt during World War II, Reagan drove the prime minister by golf cart from his helicopter to their meeting site, a cabin deep in the heavily guarded and very private forest.

After an hour of talks with their advisers and interpreters present, the two leaders joined the president's wife, Nancy, for a private lunch, then returned to Washington separately in the afternoon.

U.S. and Japanese officials had said a key topic of the discussion was to be a report prepared for Nakasone earlier this month calling for fundamental changes in the Japanese lifestyle to accommodate the West.

The document recommends dramatic changes, including shortening the average work week from six days to five; raising wages; encouraging more consumer spending on housing and other personal comforts; and reducing personal savings which now, encouraged by special tax breaks, are the highest of any industrialized nation in the world.

The government hopes the changes over time would make Japanese exports more expensive while creating a domestic climate more conducive to purchases of foreign-made goods, which now encounter stiff consumer resistance in Japan.
