Gorbachev calls for joint abolition of Warsaw Pact, NATO alliances

BERLIN (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev said today he would support the simultaneous abolition of the Warsaw Pact and NATO military alliances.

In a speech to several hundred East German factory workers, Gorbachev also repeated his readiness to meet with President Reagan "so long as the appropriate international atmosphere is created, and real disarmament steps are possible. "We stress our readiness for a simultaneous disbanding of the Warsaw Pact and NATO, or, for a start, their military organizations," the Soviet Communist Party general secretary told workers at a machine factory in Marzahn, an East Berlin suburb.

Gorbachev visited the factory this morning before attending the closing session of the East German Communist Party Congress. His comments were carried on state-run East German television during the afternoon.

According to the television report, Gorbachev did not elaborate on his statement about the dissolution of the Warsaw Pact, a mutual defense agreement between the Soviet Union and its Eastern European allies, and the U.S.-led North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Gorbachev today also repeated his proposal made in a speech at the party congress Friday that conventional forces be cut back across the European continent.

The Soviet leader Sunday accused the United States of poisoning superpower relations, but said that under the right circumstances he still is willing to meet Reagan as they agreed at their meeting in Geneva last November.

He did not elaborate in his criticism of the United States, but apparently was referring to the U.S. air strike on Libya a week ago, and continued nuclear testing.

Because of the U.S. air raid on Libya, the Soviets canceled a May meeting in which Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze were to discuss preparations for the Washington summit.

If the United States "goes on acting as it is today, trying to poison the atmosphere, this will throw a shadow over any future meeting," Gorbachev said. "If it (the summit) is to happen, a better atmosphere is necessary."

"The meeting can take place if the United States realizes that it is necessary to take this path," he said.

Pampa's clean up to continue

Clean Pampa, Inc., is planning to continue its efforts to clean up highway entrances into the city following initiation of the project with a Sesquicentennial Sweep earlier this month.

Jo Potter, Clean Pampa coordinator, said various local civic clubs have been assigned specific highway entrances, with club members encouraged to develop on-going projects to keep trash and debris cleared from the right-of-ways and to urge nearby property owners to clean up and beautify their properties.

The project was launched Saturday, April 12, with members from eight local clubs working to pick up trash and litter and to cut back weeds on highway entrances.

Entitled Sesquicentennial Sweep, the project was an effort to clean up the entrances in preparation for Monday's San Jacinto Day celebrations in the city in observance of the state's Sesquicentennial, or 150th birthday, Potter explained.

Approximately 20 people participated in the project, Potter said. While the turnout wasn't as large as she had hoped it would be, the effort was certainly appreciated, she said.

Participants included Bill Lam and Ralph Milliron, Golden K Kiwanis Club; Ray White, Ed Wiens, Bill Ripple, Richard Kastein, Rocky Lucas and Conner B. Hicks, Pampa Evening Lions Club; Roy C. Sparkman, Pampa Noon Rotary Club; Jack Nichols and W. D. Morgan, Pampa Noon Kiwanis Club; R. B. Rogers, Roger D. Lamb and two children, AMBUCS; Richard Stowers and Sam Foden, Sunrise Rotary Club; Sharon Ripple, 4-H Club member; and Kirk Duncan, Clean Pampa board member.

The City of Pampa provided trucks at a central collection point for the depositing of bagged litter, with aluminum cans bagged separately, Potter said. After all the clubs brought in their bags, the material was taken to the city's sanitary landfill for disposal.

Sign-up began at 8 a.m. with coffee and light refreshments available for participants. After assignments were made, the members worked until noon at their respective locations.

Potter said many of the participants gained a sense of the need to combat littering problems in the city from the activity. One group, after cleaning up its assigned area, returned to the city and stopped to clean up trash on a store parking lot left from the Friday night gatherings of young people on "the drag," she said.

"They really did more than expected," Potter said, expressing her appreciation for the group's interest and efforts.

Potter said the civic clubs are being encouraged to adopt continuing projects for cleaning up and beautifying the highway entrances into the city.

"Those areas are the first impression visitors have of Pampa," she stated.

In addition to keeping the trash, litter and debris cleaned up on the right-of-ways, club members are asked to encourage property owners to undertake clean-up projects of their own, such as repainting buildings, repairing fences, removing junk items and otherwise improving the appearances along the highways into the city, Potter explained.

The project was undertaken in line with the state's current Trash-Off Campaign, with the slogan, "Don't Mess With Texas!"

The campaign is a program of the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation, with the Texas Department of Public Safety and the Keep Texas

Beautiful organizations assisting.

The aim of the campaign is to make Texans more aware of the state's litter problem, its costs and what can be done to reduce it, Potter explained.

In Pampa, local radio stations KGRO-KOMX and KSNZ have been broadcasting "Don't Mess With Texas" public service announcements.

In addition, state DPS patrolmen and local law enforcement agencies have been asked to increase efforts to cite, arrest and fine persons in violation of anti-littering laws as passed by the state Legislature, Potter said.

Persons arrested and convicted for littering on highways can be fined from $15 to $1,000, a costly amount that could be prevented simply by using litter bags in cars, waiting until a roadside or home trash receptacle is reached, or taking efforts to properly dispose of materials in available landfills.

"Most people aren't aware of how much it costs to keep litter and trash off our public highways," she said.

The state currently is spending more than $20 million a year to pick up after litterers on the state highways. That doesn't include the costs also incurred by local city governments for streets and roads.

"We hope to discourage all litterers in the Pampa area and make them think twice before using the roadside as their personal litter receptacle," Potter said.

But for the campaign to be successful, it will take more than the efforts of one organization or a few interested and concerned individuals, she stated.

A number of organizations, local and state government entities and groups of concerned citizens must become involved to make concerted efforts against the problem, Potter said.

City hall rehabilitation on agenda

Pampa city commissioners will reconsider matters related to approving a contract for the proposed rehabilitation of City Hall during their regular meeting at 6 p.m. Tuesday.

The matter had been deferred to allow further study of ways to cut costs after bids had exceeded previous estimates for the projects.

The staff has been studying items that could be deleted or modified from the proposals, along with possible consolidation of some work in relation to the rehabilitation efforts planned for the Schneider Hotel as means to cut down on expenses for the project.

The commission also will consider a change order relative to the City Hall rehabilitation projects.

In other matters, the commission will consider:

- award of bids relative to the purchase of vehicles, a police control console and concession operations at the city's softball field;

- appointment of three persons each to the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board, the M. K. Brown Memorial Auditorium Board, and the Planning and Zoning Commission;

- authorizing payments to Wagner and Klein, Inc., for architectural service, to Sam J. Smith, Inc., for fuel system improvements, and to Southwestern Public Service for relocation of utility lines for street improvements; and

- approval of accounts payable. In a discussion item, commissioners will review a report from the Traffic Commission.

In his report session, City Manager Bob Hart will discuss sale of water and departmental reports.

Some improvement noted in local retail sales

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Based on figures reported by State Comptroller Bob Bullock, retail sales in Pampa are down slightly more than 5 percent from last year, but some improvement is noted from last month's report.

Bullock sent the city a check this month of $80,831.83 for the city's 1 percent sales tax collections for retail sales and services, up nearly $1,700, or approximately 2 percent, from last April's check.

Payments for the first three months of the year total $491,635.07, down 5.03 percent from payments of $517,681.26 in the same period last year. But in March Bullock listed Pampa with a 6.32 percent decrease.

April checks represent taxes collected on sales made in February and reported to the Comptroller by March 20. Payments to date this year are for December, January and February collections. Checks sent to the cities run about six weeks behind the actual collections.

Bullock has sent checks this month totaling $50.6 million in local sales tax to the 1,015 Texas cities levying the 1 percent city tax.

Two other Gray County cities continued to show increases over last year's sales figures, according to Bullock's monthly report.

Lefors received no payment for April, though it had a payment of $657.62 last April. However, total payments for the year to date are $3,028.79, still enough for the city to show a 41.70 percent increase over last year's $2,137.42 total.

Last month Bullock listed Lefors with a 104.68 percent hike based on the first two checks for the current year.

McLean had an April check for $1,231.57, up nearly $180 from the $1,052.13 payment for April, 1985. Total payments for the first quarter are $6,927.21, an increase of 13.50 percent from the $6,103.31 recorded in the same period last year.

Bullock reported McLean as having a 12.76 percent increase in March, indicating further improved sales figures.

In Hemphill County, Canadian received a check for $12,148.25, a jump of more than $3,000 over the $9,051.58 payment for last April.

Though the large check improved the city's standing for the year, sales tax collections are still running behind last year. But the latest payment pushed total collections for the year to $49,093.45, only 5.65 percent under last year's total of $52,035.34. In March, Canadian was registering a 14.05 percent decline.

In Carson County, White Deer was in the positive column, while Groom and Skellytown showed decreases.

The state sent White Deer a check this month for $1,018.17, a 75 percent hike over last April's payment of $580.81. The bigger check sent the city's total payments to date this year to $5,820.02, a rise of 12.83 percent above last year's comparable period totals of $5,158.37.

That indicates a continued improvement; last month White Deer was recording only a 4.90 percent increase.

Groom had an April check for $1,006.46, down from the $1,155.19 received last April. Total payments for the first quarter are $6,572.25, a decrease of 5.26 percent from the $6,936.87 recorded in the same 1985 period. Last month Groom was listed with a 3.73 percent drop.

Skellytown received a check this month for $708.04, slightly under the $774.09 payment for last April. Payments for the year to date total $4,369.76, falling 22.18 percent from the $5,615.14 recorded in the same period last year.

But a slight improvement is indicated from Bullock's reports. In March, the Comptroller listed Skellytown with a 24.36 percent decline.

Similar figures are indicated for Miami in Roberts County. The city had a check this month for $773.51, only slightly behind the $781.30 received last April. Yearly payments to date are $5,089.02, a 22.12 percent drop from the $6,534.20 registered in the first quarter of 1985. Last month, though, Bullock listed Miami with a 24.99 percent decrease.

In Wheeler County, Wheeler remained in the positive column. Bullock sent the city a check this month for $2,717.33, more than $200 under the $2,955.61 received last April.

But yearly payments to date are $15,452.41, up 5.75 percent from last year's comparable period payments of $14,611.58. Last month Wheeler was recording a 9.26 percent increase.

Mobeetie remained in the negative column, but some improvement is indicated. The state sent the city an April check for $628.27, nearly $60 more than the $569.58 payment for last April.

First quarter payments stand at $1,601.21, down 16.81 percent from the $1,924.84 recorded in the first quarter of 1985. But last month Mobeetie was showing a 28.21 percent drop.

Researchers still trying to define hazards from dioxin

NEW YORK (AP) - Researchers are using clues as diverse as a mobile home park in Missouri and human fat samples from Vietnam in an attempt to pin down just what harm the toxic chemical dioxin can do to people.

Last week, researchers reported signs of possible liver and immune system problems in residents of a dioxin-contaminated mobile home park in Missouri, the state in which dioxin pollution forced evacuation of the town of Times Beach in 1983.

Also last week, another scientist said samples of human fat tissue from Vietnam show sharp difference in dioxin concentrations between the northern and southern parts of the country.

That difference, probably due partly to Agent Orange spraying in the south, may provide a natural laboratory for seeing what harm the chemical does to people, said Dr. Arnold Schecter, professor of preventive medicine at the Upstate Medical Center of the State University of New York in Binghamton.

Previous studies may have overlooked such harm, partly because of failure to appreciate how widespread dioxin contamination is among people in industrialized nations, he said.

He also estimated that some breast milk in the United States might contain worrisome levels of the substance. But he said the potential hazard is unknown and that for reasons such as nutrition and disease resistance, breast milk remains generally preferable to formula.

Dioxin, an industrial by-product and contaminant of herbicides like Agent Orange, takes many forms. The new research focused on the most hazardous: 2,3,7,8-tetrachlorodibenzo-p-dioxin, often called 2,3,7,8-TCDD.

Bicycle rodeo planned

Get ready all you bicycle cowboys and cowgirls.

The Pampa Police Department, in conjunction with the Pampa Optimist Club, Randy's Foods Stores, McDonalds and Wal-Mart, is sponsoring two bicycle rodeos in May.

Saturday, May 3, is the date set for the first rodeo, to be held in the Wal-Mart parking lot at 9 a.m. Ribbons will be awarded for the top three scores along with ribbons for participation. Wal-Mart and McDonalds also will provide a bicycle and bicycle safety equipment to be given away by drawing.

The second bicycle rodeo will be held Saturday, May 10, at the Pampa Optimist Club. Once again, ribbons will be awarded for first through third places, as well as ribbons for participation. The bicycle and bicycle safety equipment for the drawing will be provided by the Pampa Optimist Club and Randy's Food Stores.

There will be a film and safety test for the youngsters, along with bicycle safety inspection at each rodeo.

"The concept of the bicycle rodeo is to promote bicycle safety," Police Chief J. J. Ryzman said. "We invite all of Pampa's parents to bring their children to participate in both of the rodeos."

Park board members are needed

By BOB HART
Pampa City Manager

I want to remind everyone once again that we do have two vacancies on our Parks and Recreation Advisory Board.

The city commission will be considering appointments to that board at tomorrow's city commission meeting. If you are interested in being considered for one of those vacancies, please contact the mayor or one of the commissioners immediately.

The staff began the budget process with a work session nine days ago in preparation for the 1986-1987 fiscal year. If you have any suggestions or ideas on how we can improve the quality of city services, or areas in which we can operate more efficiently, please contact me. Your ideas are extremely important.

Mayor Cowan and Parks and Recreation Advisory Board Chairman Duane Harp were able to cut the ribbon at North Crest Park last week. North Crest Park was developed due to the efforts of Joe Warren with his ideas to create the park.

These are the types of ideas and involvement that we need to be a more effective organization in meeting your needs.

We expect the contractor to be gin work on a number of streets beginning the first week of May. Streets which will be worked include Somerville, Crawford, Albert, Hobart, Harvester and Lynn.

Plans are now underway for a Fourth of July celebration through the coordination of the M. K. Brown Auditorium Board. The next meeting will be on Monday, April 28, at 7 p.m. in the M. K. Brown Auditorium.

If you are interested in getting involved in the Fourth of July activities, please plan to attend the meeting or call Danny Parkerson at 665-4841.

House considers catch-all bill that Reagan may veto

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House this week takes up a $1.7 billion catch-all spending bill that would bolster security at U.S. embassies overseas, but which Republicans say is "loaded with goodies" and likely will be vetoed by President Reagan.

In addition to the new spending, the money bill raises the contentious issue of whether the president has the power to defer - sometimes indefinitely - spending ordered by Congress. Reagan has proposed some $25 billion in spending deferrals for this year. The bill would undo more than $5 billion of that amount, and outlaw the practice in the future.

The chamber's Democratic leadership had tried to bring the package - coupled with a bill providing military aid to Nicaraguan rebels - to a vote last week, but was forced to pull it back after a surprise parliamentary gambit by House Republicans. The Contra aid will be divorced from the spending measure this time around.

While the House wrestles with those questions, the Senate faces its own fiscal dilemma: what to do about the stalled 1987 federal budget.

The Senate Budget Committee passed a spending plan last month that includes $12 billion more than Reagan wants in new taxes and $25 billion less than he wants for military spending.

Officials say it was miracle tornado spared lives

SWEETWATER, Texas (AP) — National Guard troops patrolled today against looters after tornadoes carved a two-mile-long, half-mile-wide swath through this west Texas town, killing one person, injuring about 100 others and leaving 1,500 people homeless.

Despite the destruction, estimated at up to $20 million, officials said the human toll could have been much worse.

"After I saw the extent of the damage, I thought we'd have many more injuries and certainly more deaths," City Manager David Maddox said. "It was luck. It was a miracle."

As National Guardsmen patrolled the streets early today to watch for looting, volunteers and Salvation Army workers served more than 2,000 meals to people left homeless by the disaster, said Dewey Alderson, public relations director for the Salvation Army's Texas division.

"Sweetwater is still in a mess. People are cleaning up but it will be a long time," he said. "People are sifting through the debris by hand. That's all that is left from some of these trailer homes."

The National Weather Service said two tornadoes smashed into the southern part of the city of 12,000 early Saturday after merging in the air.

Mayor Rick Rhodes estimated property damage at between $15 million and $20 million and said about 100 people were injured, and some 1,500 left homeless.

Police Chief Jim Kelley said cleanup efforts were progressing. "We're getting a lot of volunteer types," he said. "They're swooping in there and they're helping."

Gov. Mark White visited the city Sunday and talked with residents of the Sun Village Housing Project, a federally subsidized development for the elderly that was hit hard. The storm's only fatality was an 87-year-old man who lived there.

One resident, Gladys Lane, stood looking through what used to be the side wall of her house as White spoke.

"It was just like I was in a vacuum," said Ms. Lane. "I was down on my knees begging the Lord to take care of me. I didn't care about the house."

"The only thing I can say is tough times never last, but tough people do, and we've got a lot of tough people around here," said White.

Nineteen people remained hospitalized Sunday, including a woman who was transferred to a Dallas hospital in critical condition, officials said. Seventy people were treated and released Saturday.

Meanwhile, a tornado struck near Jasper, Tenn., Sunday evening, damaging seven homes and injuring up to six people, officials said today.

The twister cut an erratic three-quarter-mile swath about two miles east of the southeast Tennessee town, said patrolman Don Willis of the Jasper police.

Women seek jail for fathers who don't pay child support

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — A group of mothers has called on Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox to go beyond publishing names of fathers delinquent in making child-support payments and stick the men in jail.

"We're trying to get some help for our kids," said Carol Bullard, 30, of Odessa, mother of two legally blind children.

Ms. Bullard and about 12 other women belonging to "Help Support Your Children" gathered at an Odessa park Saturday to compile a petition calling on Mattox to jail fathers who won't pay court-ordered child support.

They said Mattox's policy of publicizing the names of delinquent fathers hasn't done much good in West Texas.

Mattox acknowledged Saturday that West Texas hasn't received support collection attention on a par with South Texas because of a legislative cap on funding and personnel.

"I'm doing all I've got the ability to do. I didn't promise we were going to win the world — just do the best we could," Mattox said. "We've got a budget of $17 million and 40 lawyers to work the whole state."

Ms. Bullard said her former husband is about $8,000 behind in his child support payments. Joyce Carney said her ex-husband is $21,000 behind.

"The oldest child has to have large print books in school, and they both have to have new glasses every three months — that's $200 every three months," Ms. Bullard said.

"I'm trying to get some money for my kids. The attorney general has lost his (her former husband's) address three times. They let him get away. They don't do nothing with him when they find him," she said.

Ms. Carney said, "He's been making promises to help women all across Texas. I haven't seen a one of 'em. They're supposed to find the men for you. They don't find the men. You find the men, and when you do, they let them go."

Mattox said that, under recently voter-modified law, wages can be garnished when a parent is 30 days behind in child support payments.

"They have to hire a private attorney, go to court and get a judge to garnish the wages," Mattox said.

Odessa mother Debra Jones, 28, said she sees no feasible way for wages to be garnished successfully when the delinquent spouse constantly moves from job to job.

But Steve Hall, administrative assistant to the attorney general's office, said Mattox "is doing a good job" collecting child support payments.

"We've collected $31.9 million for the fiscal year 1985. In 1984, we collected $25.3 million. And in 1983, we collected $18 million. We're expecting to collect in excess of $50 million for 1986," Hall said.

Only $14.2 million was collected in 1982, when the child support division still was under the Texas Department of Human Resources, Hall said.

Nationally, Hall said, one-fourth of the fathers obligated to provide child support make full payments, about half make a payment of some kind and one-fourth make no payment.

TEXAS SIZE PARTY — Over 23,000 people showed up at the San Jacinto Battleground State Historical Park to listen to musicians and learn about Texas history at the "Texas 150 Celebration" Sunday afternoon. (AP Laserphoto)

Texans gather for celebration

HOUSTON (AP) — Texans are celebrating today's 150th anniversary of the Battle of San Jacinto in high style complete with spectacular fireworks, concerts and cannon blasts.

The festivities got under way Sunday as men dressed in Texas Army regalia traced the route Gen. Sam Houston's troops took to overcome Mexican forces and win Texas' independence.

Many of the other 23,000 people attending the San Jacinto Day Sesquicentennial celebration Sunday wore period costumes, while others, including Gov. Mark White and his family, just enjoyed the 75-degree weather.

The San Jacinto park, home of the San Jacinto Monument, is where Houston's forces defeated Mexican forces led by Gen. Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna on April 21, 1836.

"I felt it was part of being a Texan to come out today," Marilyn Henley, a native Texan from Houston, said Sunday. "All of this is a refresher course for me, but my kids already know this from school."

Sunday's celebration included performances from Texas musicians — ranging from bluegrass, rock 'n' roll, mariachi, country western and rhythm and blues — and will culminate tonight with singer Willie Nelson joining the Houston Symphony in a concert and a fireworks display.

While at the park Sunday, White presented 27 Houston-area Boy Scouts with medals for their work on Texas history. The governor's family then joined a group of 40 underprivileged children from the United Way Harbach-Ripley Center of Houston and a group of senior citizens for a picnic lunch.

Other events Sunday included the honoring of black and Hispanic heroes of the Texas Revolution and Daughters and Sons of the Republic of Texas.

Lionel Thomas of Houston said he brought his three children to learn about Texas history.

"We're going to see the monument," he said. "It's going to be a learning experience for me and the kids because I'm from Louisiana."

Cannon firing, anthems, historical flags, drum rolls and fireworks will serve as a backdrop Monday as an expected 75,000 people, including Vice President George Bush and White, join in the festivities.

Bush and White are scheduled to lead formal ceremonies at 4 p.m. in which about 70 representatives of foreign countries will attend.

Because of the dignitaries, security at the park will be tight. "We are well-prepared to handle any kind of incident — from terrorism to lack of electrical power," said David Cottom, spokesman for the State Parks and Wildlife Department.

About 1,000 security people, including local and state police and State Department agents, will be in the park area in plainclothes and uniforms, Cottom said.

The two-day celebration will end with a fireworks display — "Star of Light" — above the San Jacinto Monument. Simultaneous fireworks shows are planned in Austin, Corpus Christi, Waco, Dallas, Lubbock.

It's great to be a Texan

Today marks the 150th anniversary of the battle of San Jacinto when a handful of Texans, with help of men from eight states, many Tejanos and an Englishman, won their independence from Mexico.

This was an 18-minute battle in which Maj. Gen. Sam Houston's force of about 900 men defeated the army of Mexican President Gen. Don Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna y Perez de Lebron which has been estimated at between 1,100 and 1,300 soldiers.

This victory marked the beginning of the republic of Texas which lasted until Dec. 28, 1845, when it became the 28th state of the United States.

The fact that the Lone Star State was once an independent nation has always been a source of pride to its native sons and daughters.

Maybe this is why there is a different "way of life" in Texas, or could it be because Texas was the largest state in the nation until Alaska came along. Everything has always seemed so much bigger in Texas, especially when trying to go from one end of the state to the other in a car.

Texans always seem to be friendlier than residents of other states, especially those in the Northeast.

I have lived in many other states — eventually returning home to Texas each time when I needed to have my faith in human nature restored. In a majority of the other areas I have lived if you said "good morning" or "hello" to a stranger while walking down the street they looked at you like they thought you were crazy.

When I was living in Ohio it was a strange feeling to have next-door neighbors you had never met. Once when my family moved into a rural area, we did not exist until we finally made friends with an elderly couple — he was the son of the original family in that area. When we were given the "stamp of approval" by this couple by being invited to visit in their home, the remainder of the area's residents finally admitted we existed.

That is a far cry from the neighborliness which exists in Texas, especially among those who are native Texans. When my wife Sharon moved into the house where we now live, several months before we married, she was welcomed by the neighbors. One of the women who had lived there for many years brought over the evening meal, saying she knew that with all of the work of moving Sharon wouldn't feel like cooking.

When I was a student of the schools at nearby Phillips many years ago we were taught the history of Texas as a republic.

As we were studying the many details of what led Texas to break away from Mexico and of the history of the brief existence of the republic of Texas I often wondered what would have happened had Texas remained an independent nation.

This would have meant that Texas kept the areas of what eventually became parts of the states of New Mexico, Colorado, Oklahoma, Kansas and Wyoming instead of giving up this land to the United States, along with its independence, to have the United States cancel the fledgling nation's debt. This was part of the agreement, including becoming one of the states, forced on Texans as payment for the debt Texas incurred in its battle for independence.

If Texas had remained an independent nation would the remainder of these states along with the portion of Mexico which later became the states of California, Arizona and Nevada have become a part of the republic of Texas instead of joining the United States?

Considering the possibility of a large independent nation called Texas brings up many other questions. How would the course of history have been changed if Texas had remained independent? Would Texas have sided with the South in the Civil War or would it have been neutral? If an independent Texas had joined the South, would the North have still won?

Or, as an independent nation would the politicians of Texas developed a government the same as the United States, or would some other form of democracy have developed?

There is much to be considered as possibilities had Texas remained a republic, but it can only be speculation since Texas has been a part of the United States for more than 140 years.

But, one thing is for sure, those people who have never had the opportunity to either live in Texas or visit here have missed something.

As part of the song Beautiful Texas states: "You can live on the plains or the mountains, or down where the sea breezes blow — but you're still in beautiful Texas, the most beautiful place that I know."

Teachers hear pleas to vote Republican

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas gubernatorial candidates told unhappy teachers who blame Democratic Gov. Mark White for their troubles that they can wield more power if they vote in the May 3 Republican primary.

"If you want to have the most impact with your vote, vote in the Republican primary," GOP candidate Kent Hance said Saturday at a Fight for Right rally on the Capitol grounds.

"The Republicans will have a small turnout and you can take over," Hance told a crowd of about 2,500. "Your influence would be tremendous."

Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Texas also appeared at the rally. He abandoned Congress for a gubernatorial run.

"Mark White's only interest is in the next election," Loeffler said. "He is not interested in the next generation."

Loeffler then criticized the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers, a principal target of the new teachers' organization.

"When I am governor you will never take a TECAT test again," said Loeffler, who like Hance promised to cut out some of the paperwork that burdens teachers.

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Andrew Briscoe disagreed with his GOP opponents.

"You vote for these two Republicans on May 3 and you won't touch Mark White," said Briscoe. "The most viable candidate facing White is Andy Briscoe."

A. Don Crowder, Democratic candidate for governor, sympathized with the teachers who fail the TECAT tests.

"We're going to lose maybe 25,000 to 30,000 of you because of Mark White's law," said Crowder. "They say they are going to replace you with West Berliners, or even worse, Oklahomans."

Sponsors of the rally said former Gov. Bill Clements, the third GOP candidate, was unable to appear because of schedule conflicts.

Some rally participants wore T-shirts reading "Don't be White-washed, Fight for Right."

They sang the organization's new theme song, "Shove the Gov." It sounded much like the "shuffle" song of the pro football champion Chicago Bears.

Organizers of the Fight for Right organization said it has 2,000 members. The group was an intervenor in an unsuccessful lawsuit filed by the Texas State Teachers Association against the competency test.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

U.S. dollars go down U.N. drain

Two blue-ribbon commissions — one in-house and the other external — are seeking ways to pare the United Nations' $265 million general-budget deficit from an annual operating budget of more than $4 billion. The panels are being motivated more than usual by the U.S. intention to reduce its annual $1.2 billion U.N. contribution.

The Kassebaum Amendment introduced by Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., would cut U.S. contributions to the United Nations from 25 to 20 percent. The law takes effect in October unless the United Nations implements basic reforms of its inequitable voting system. Moreover, the Gramm-Rudman Budget Balancing Act is certain to cut into Washington's U.N. contributions.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar has already ordered $15 million be trimmed from such administrative expenses as office supplies, travel and overtime pay. But that amount is chicken feed compared to the money the United Nations wastes each year or fails to collect from member nations.

Nearly $400 million in overdue general assessments are owed the United Nations by Soviet-bloc nations. Yet these very countries continue to receive a disproportionate amount of financial assistance from the United Nations that is earmarked for Third World nations. Meanwhile, Moscow and its minions refuse to pay their share of the cost of maintaining three peacekeeping forces in the Middle East.

The United Nations also could save millions of dollars by cutting or eliminating some of its useless programs and agencies.

A case in point is the U.N. Conference on Trade and Development. Since its creation in 1964, UNCTAD has done precious little to spur either trade or development among Third World nations. Nevertheless, the agency's 1984-1985 budget was a whopping $54.5 million.

The U.N. Department of Public Information is another bottomless pit. Its $70 million budget was squandered last year on projects such as film assignments, editors' roundtables and other flights of fancy that have not improved the United Nations' negative image one iota.

Despite such bureaucratic boondoggles and fiscal mismanagement, Secretary-General Perez de Cuellar is trying to persuade President Reagan not to cut U.S. contributions to the United Nations. The Secretary General should save his sales pitch for Mikhail Gorbachev. After all, if the Soviet-bloc countries would simply pay their delinquent U.N. assessments, the international organization could balance its books.

The dispute over Zion

"Glorious things of thee are spoken, Zion, city of our God," says the hymn.

But these days unglorious things are spoken about Zion, Ill., to the effect that its municipal government takes its "city of God" status a bit more literally than the U.S. Constitution allows.

The dispute arose when Robert Sherman, a Buffalo Grove resident who runs the state chapter of American Atheists, spotted the city seal on Zion's water tower: a cross, a dove, and a crown and scepter, with the motto "God Reigns." Investigating, he found it on everything from police uniforms to street signs.

"I felt like I was in a theocracy," reported Sherman, who is not inclined to understate. "If you want to be a cop, a fireman or a paramedic in Zion, you have to wear the central symbols of the Christian religion on your sleeve."

It turns out the seal was designed by the city's founder, a Pentecostal preacher named John Alexander Dowie who envisioned Zion as an outpost of his brand of believers. It incorporates the main elements of the emblem of Dowie's Christian Catholic Church, the city's largest denomination.

Sherman complained to the city council. But Mayor Howard Everline, a self-described "born-again believer," says there will be no compromise: "We'll fight as far as we have to.

We're not going to change."

But Zion probably will have to change — as it should. The First Amendment ban on an establishment of religion forbids any government from endorsing any religion or sect. The government must be "neutral in matters of religious theory, doctrine and practice," said the Supreme Court in 1968. "It may not be hostile to any religion or to the advocacy of non-religion; and it may not aid, foster or promote one religion..."

The issue is not whether Zion may endorse a particular religion or sect: The Constitution says it may not. The only question is whether the seal constitutes an endorsement of Christianity in general or of the Christian Catholic Church in particular.

Mayor Everline says it doesn't, and that by keeping the seal, Zion is simply preserving a symbol of its "heritage." If the seal were an historical artifact with no religious motive or resonance, it would be permissible, like the motto "In God We Trust" on our currency.

But the religious symbols on the seal amount to more than that. "It's a struggle between Satan and God," insists the mayor, who says he has gotten letters of support from Christians all over the country taking the same point of view. A group of what he calls "Christian activists" from Chicago has offered to organize a march to Zion in support of the seal.

What accounts for this outpouring of support?

The only likely explanation is that some Christians think their religion ought to be endorsed by the government, regardless of the Constitution. It's absurd to believe any "Christian activists" would get involved if the fight were merely one to preserve the quaint historical heritage of an obscure Illinois town. And if it weren't for the potent religious character of the seal, it's hard to imagine Zion's "born-again" mayor would be willing to do whatever is necessary to keep it.

The propriety of a city deploying explicit religious symbols is in dispute only because most Americans find these symbols congenial. If they were not — if the Zion city government were to adopt a seal advertising its allegiance to the Prophet Mohammad or Sun Myung Moon or Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh — the obnoxious character of the act would be plainer.

But the fact that the religion being endorsed is that of the majority doesn't make the endorsement any more legitimate. Constitutional prohibitions are meant to prevent majorities from denying the rights of minorities. The purpose and effect of the seal are to certify Christianity, if not the Christian Catholic sect, as the preferred religion of Zion. It is a disparagement of those who believe differently, an insult to the Constitution and a blow to religious tolerance.

Our nuclear salvation

Previous generations of American school-agers have worried about girls and grades and pimples and job prospects in that order... Until the Sixties when they worried about conscription.

Now my own observation confirms a study conducted for the California State Legislature that "a major fear of young people is the possibility of nuclear war."

Typical comments from students were: "One of these days somebody is going to push it too far and wham!" "Most of my friends are as scared as I of what could happen."

"When people ask me what I wish for it takes no thought, no hesitation; I wish for world peace."

Sociologists cite the psychological impact of the nuclear war threat as a major factor in escalating school-age suicide.

Eleventh graders participating in this study were dominated by feelings of apprehension, frustration, despair, fear and hopelessness.

These factors do not excuse the campus drug cult, but they help to explain it.

It would be a cruel irony if the fear of nuclear war should become as damaging as nuclear war itself.

My generation ran scared from a terrible depression and will run scared forever.

For some of us, even when anxiety over economic insecurity makes no sense anymore, it is still there for a whole generation haunted by "the crash."

It will be a tragic waste if the present generation of school-agers worries itself sick over the wrong thing.

Nuclear war is the wrong thing. Awesome and awful as nuclear weapons are, it is their very awfulness which has deterred anybody from starting a major war for 40 years.

The modern world has never before been without a major war that long.

Moscow's Soviet mouthpiece, Pravda, recently said that the United States dropped atom bombs on Japan — not to defeat Japan — but to intimidate the Soviet Union.

All right. This is reason enough.

Young Americans, intellectually brilliant by all previous standards, need to refocus their perspective.

With all weapons of mass destruction themselves destroyed — there is no longer anything to deter any dictator from initiating a bloody bayonet war. And that kind of war our 6 percent of the planet's population could not win.

The equalizer weapons are not for our destruction, but for our deliverance.

A former Contra who lost the faith

By Don Graff

Edgar Chamorro doesn't think much of the contras.

They haven't been effective so far in shaking the Sandinista's control of Nicaragua and he doesn't think that's likely to change, even given more time and more American money.

Their numbers are greatly exaggerated. Instead of 23,000, the figure being put out in Washington, Chamorro estimates there are, at most, 6,000 effective fighters.

He especially doesn't like their methods, a legacy of early training under Argentine officers who taught the techniques of "death squads" and Argentina's own "dirty war."

Chamorro's knowledge of the contras is firsthand. He is a former leader, a member of the seven-member political directorate until he walked out in disgust in late 1984. He has been lobbying since for a change in what he sees as disastrously counterproductive American policy.

Still, the past remains very much with him. "When I was a contra..."

peppers his conversation. He still tends to refer to the contra organization as "we" and to operations in the present tense.

The contras' root problem, Chamorro says, is that they are artificial, a tool created by the United States and completely dependent upon the United States.

Their leaders are paid by the United States, travel with U.S. documents, use the facilities of the State Department, speak on behalf of U.S. policy and are, in effect, ambassadors of the United States.

They also function as a lobby, hiring public relations companies to influence American opinion, promoting themselves and denouncing the Sandinistas.

"You are the ones paying for this," says Chamorro. "All these contra leaders are paid by the United States to lobby Congress with your own money."

"They are told to say the money they are spending in a restaurant with a journalist or a congressman comes from a different pocket, from a private enterprise pocket, even Venezuela."

"CIA money! All of it!"

Chamorro, a one-time public relations professional, sees it as a marketing campaign by the administration.

"They've got a product, the contras," he says. "They are selling it to the consumers, to the voters, to Congress, to the American people. So they are doing a good marketing job, but for a bad product."

The campaign has an especially good sponsor, but Chamorro questions the president's willingness to publicly declare himself a contra.

"Mr. Reagan could be in better company than that," Chamorro says. "He doesn't belong to that group. That mentality is not American. I didn't see in the CIA people like the Argentinians who were such ideologically minded crusaders that they were willing to kill people who were suspected of being communist. Americans are not like that, and should not be like that."

It is not only what the contras do but what they don't do that is their problem. They have failed to convince most Nicaraguans, unhappy with Sandinista rule, that they offer a political alternative.

They have no message, Chamorro says.

"I never heard a contra in three years who asked in his talks or his speeches how we were going to improve Nicaraguan life. Never. Just how we were going to get back."

Almost as frequently as he refers to his time as a contra, Chamorro mentions his continuing opposition to the Sandinistas. But in fairness, he says, it has to be recognized that they are not all bad. He credits them with a genuine interest in improving education, health care and social conditions in Nicaragua.

And he admits to a sneaking admiration for another Sandinista accomplishment.

"I have to say that as a Nicaraguan what they are doing is making me proud," he says. "Here is this poor little country, and it has the government of the greatest power in the world hysterical."

Queen Elizabeth at 60 — superstar monarchy

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Gone is the empire upon which the sun never set and Britain has dwindled in power during her reign, but Queen Elizabeth II has propelled the British monarchy to the pinnacle of international superstardom.

As the queen celebrates her 60th birthday today, she remains at the top of the royal popularity polls, a symbol of continuity who has adroitly adapted Britain's 920-year-old monarchy to the nuclear and television age of the 1980s.

During her 34-year reign, the monarchy has been transformed from a mystery-shrouded national institution into a family of celebrities whose weddings, travels and antics are followed by millions around the globe.

A grandmother — with two of her four children married and a third, Prince Andrew, due to wed in the next royal extravaganza July 23 — the queen shows no signs of slowing down. She's been to Nepal, Australia and New Zealand this year and goes to China in the fall.

While the royal family is a popular institution, some quarters in Britain see no need for a monarchy in this day and age. These critics, who are a minority, contend that it is too much of a burden on taxpayers. In 1983, the last year for which figures are available, the government spent $34 million just on two palaces and royal travels.

Buckingham Palace has dismissed press speculation, which surfaces from time to time, that Elizabeth may abdicate so her 37-year-old son, Prince Charles, can become king. Abdication has not become a serious issue, although an opinion poll for The Mail on Sunday newspaper in late March indicated that 45 percent of the 981 Britons surveyed favored the queen's abdication before she turns 65.

This may reflect the growing popularity of Charles, who in recent years has been outspoken on a range of issues, including the plight of the poor in Britain's decaying inner cities.

His popularity has been enhanced by his wife, 24-year-old Diana, Princess of Wales, whose poise and glamour make her a modern-day symbol of a fairy-tale princess.

Their wedding July 29, 1981, was among the monarchy's most elaborate events and one of the biggest television spectacles in history — watched by an estimated 1 billion people in 70 countries.

The queen is a trim, brown-haired, 5-foot-2 woman who has regiments of horse cavalry to escort her carriage on state occasions, an immense collection of jewels and priceless art, and an attractive family of four children and four grandchildren.

Her three sons, Charles, Andrew and Edward, all seem to know how to fly airplanes, scuba-dive, parachute or command ships, and daughter Princess Anne, 35, is a onetime Olympic equestrian competitor and president of the Save the Children charity.

The queen was born in London on April 21, 1926, named Elizabeth Alexandra Mary. She was not expected to become queen, but that changed when she was 10 and her uncle, King Edward VIII, abdicated to marry American divorcee Wallis Simpson.

Elizabeth's father, the Duke of York, became King George VI, and since he had no sons, she as the elder daughter became first in line to the throne. When Elizabeth was 25, her father died of lung cancer and she immediately became queen on Feb. 6, 1952.

The decision to televise her coronation June 2, 1953, thrust the royal family into the international spotlight on a scale never before known. The spectacular ceremony in Westminster Abbey was seen by an estimated 300 million people worldwide.

Though the queen has virtually no political power, she meets the prime minister once a week when in London and must sign acts of Parliament to give them the force of law. She summons each prime minister-elect and formally directs him or her to form the next government.

River launch sinks; more than 120 bodies recovered

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — A river ferry believed to be carrying nearly 1,000 passengers capsized in a nighttime storm near this South Asian capital, and rescue officials said they had recovered 126 bodies.

The double-decker vessel sank in the Dhaleswari River 10 miles south of Dhaka on Sunday night. About 80 passengers swam to safety as the ship capsized about 100 yards from the Munshiganj River terminal.

An emergency control room set up to coordinate rescue and salvage operations told The Associated Press by telephone that 125 bodies had been recovered today from the ship's hull, and that one body was found floating in the river.

The control room said salvage operations were in progress, and that more bodies could be trapped inside the capsized ship. Control room workers estimated the number of passengers on the ferry at nearly 1,000.

The ferry was travelling from Dhaka to Barisal, 140 miles to the south, when it sank in a storm. But the exact cause of the accident was not immediately known.

The independent Bengali language newspaper The Sangbad said rescue operations were delayed because of insufficient lighting. The newspaper said that 20 of the people aboard the ferry who had swam to safety suffered injuries when they jumped overboard, and had been hospitalized.

In March 1985, a river ferry with 400 passengers sank near Dhaka after colliding with another boat, and 53 people were drowned.

In April 1984, 150 ferry boat passengers were killed in a collision, also near Dhaka.

Libyans assure Westerners they are safe from reprisals

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Officials freed a Roman Catholic priest and assured Westerners still living in Libya that they will be safe, sources said, in moves apparently aimed at preventing an exodus of foreign workers after the U.S. air strikes.

Church and government sources confirmed Sunday that local officials in the port city of Benghazi had released the head of the Libyan Catholic church, Bishop Giovanni Martinelli, and an Italian nun. They were taken away by armed men two weeks ago.

The sources, speaking on condition they not be identified, said the 44-year-old bishop, a Libyan of Italian origin, was freed late Saturday and was expected to return to Tripoli today.

Italian Embassy sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said three priests from Malta, the Philippines and Poland who were arrested along with the bishop also were expected to be released today.

Martinelli's arrest alarmed many of this predominantly Moslem country's 50,000 Catholics, as well as many Westerners. The reason for the detentions was not known, and no official announcement was made.

Diplomats from three embassies, speaking on condition they not be further identified, said on Sunday that they had been given assurances of Westerners' safety during weekend meetings with officials from the Libyan Foreign Ministry.

Officials from the ministry reportedly told the diplomats that there would be no reprisals against foreigners from the U.S. bombing raids last Tuesday, ordered by President Reagan to punish the government of Col. Muammar Khadafy for its alleged role in terrorism abroad.

More than 18,000 Westerners work in the oil and construction industries in Libya, including about 8,000 Italians and 5,000 Britons. An estimated 800 Americans remain in Libya despite U.S. government orders for them to leave.

Libya needs the expertise of those Westerners. The assurances offered by the government and the release of Martinelli apparently were aimed at convincing Westerners to stay.

A diplomat from a West European country said the Libyans assured diplomats that no effort would be made to prevent foreigners from leaving, but that those who remained would be welcome.

Despite the assurances, most of the estimated 50 foreign teachers and staff at Tripoli's Oil Company School, the former American School, were planning to leave, at least temporarily, said principal Perry Ferns, a Canadian.

Officials at some Western embassies said they had been advising their citizens to obtain exit permits so they could leave quickly if the situation in Tripoli deteriorated.

But the diplomats said plans for a mass evacuation of foreigners had been put aside, now that Tripoli airport has reopened and international flights resumed.

Late Sunday, Libyan state television monitored in London said Khadafy, who has declined to meet with Western reporters since the U.S. attack, held talks with a delegation from the Non-Aligned Movement, which arrived in Tripoli from New Delhi, India earlier in the day.

Foreign ministers of the 101-nation movement, meeting Sunday in New Delhi, condemned the U.S. bombing raids and sent the delegation to Tripoli to express support for Khadafy.

The delegation, which includes the foreign ministers of Cuba and Yugoslavia, will also fly to New York to register a protest at the United Nations.

Economic woes force Texas banks into sweeping changes

DALLAS (AP) — Energy and real estate woes are causing a revolution of sorts in Texas banking that is prompting wholesale changes in ownership, geographic market boundaries and banking laws, a growing number of bankers and analysts say.

Major Texas banks last week reported large losses or substantial declines in earnings for the first quarter as they fortified themselves to withstand the effects of sharply lower oil and gas prices.

The latest disclosures show that the combined total assets of RepublicBank Corp., MCorp, InterFirst Corp., Texas Commerce Bancshares, First City Bancorporation of Texas and Allied Bancshares fell about $4.7 billion to $108.2 billion between the first quarter of 1985 and the same period last year.

"There is a major restructuring under way that has been pressed on these banking companies by market conditions and their responses to those conditions," said James W. McDermott Jr., director of research at Keefe, Bruyette & Woods Inc. of New York.

"The energy recession hit just as the whole industry started a major restructuring," he said.

Just last week there were these reports concerning the dramatic drop in energy prices and its effect on Southwest banks:

— First City Bancorporation of Houston reported that it lost $232.4 million in the first quarter as it added $275 million to its reserve to cover possible loan losses. This was among the largest quarterly losses reported by a U.S. bank.

— MCorp of Dallas, the second-largest bank-holding company in Texas, reported a first-quarter loss of $119.9 million. MCorp added $219 million to its reserve to cover possible loan losses.

— In Oklahoma, two bank-holding companies reported mounting energy loan problems. First Oklahoma Bancorporation Inc. said it expects to report a $45 million first-quarter loss, and BancOklahoma reported that it doubled its loan-loss reserve to $65.3 million as troubled loans rose to $136.4 million.

Texas banks are simply reflecting the profound changes taking place on the state's economic landscape, economists and analysts say.

"When you have the kind of major change in a local economy as you have in Texas, you have to assume that will have major implications for institution like banks that reflect the economy," said J. Frederick Meinke, a banking analyst with E.F. Hutton Group Inc. in New York.

"It will put a lot of pressure and force a lot of unsought changes on the weaker banks," he said.

The industry is also hurt by an oversupply of banks in the state, bank executives say.

"We have 14,000 commercial banks and 6,000 savings and loans and a group of investment banking houses, and we do not need all of them," said Joseph R. Musolino, president of RepublicBank Dallas.

Part of the industry restructuring process is already under way in some major Texas banks.

Musolino said that RepublicBank is developing lending specialties in insurance, high-technology and communications.

Charles Pistor, chairman of the management committee at RepublicBank Corp., said recently his company is bullish on oil and sees prices rebounding in the next 18 to 24 months.

Cartel leaders enter 7th day of oil production, price talks

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC policy talks entered their seventh day today, and officials said it was unlikely the cartel would complete a comprehensive accord on ways to reverse the collapse of oil prices.

But at the close of Sunday's session, some oil ministers said they thought the group still could agree on production targets for the summer months that might lead to production restraints and higher prices.

Most members favor a production ceiling of 16.3 million barrels a day for July, August, and September, according to cartel sources who spoke on condition they not be identified. Current output is about 17 million barrels a day.

Javier Espinosa Teran, the chief Ecuadoran delegate, said he thought the current conference would end with a majority, or possibly even a unanimous, decision to set a production ceiling for summer.

Yet he said he saw little chance the ministers from the 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would settle the stickier, and far more important, question of how to divide any production total among members. Other sources also suggest it is unlikely that OPEC will agree this week on strict limits for each members' production — the key to reversing the oil price collapse.

Reacting in part to unrespected OPEC production, oil prices have fallen more than 50 percent since the first of the year, to a range of $12 to $15 a barrel.

Teran and other officials said the issue of production quotas for the individual members might not be tackled until OPEC's next regular conference, scheduled for June 25 in Yugoslavia.

Without agreement on how much oil each member should be allowed to produce, none would be likely to exercise the restraint necessary to keep the group's total production within the official limit.

The central split in OPEC's ranks during the current conference, which began last Tuesday, was between a faction led by Iran and another headed by Saudi Arabia.

The Iranians, joined by Libya and Algeria, argued for deep cuts in production in order to jolt the oil market and force a quick increase in prices.

The Saudis, with support from nine other members, contended that OPEC should keep its production near current levels and seek a gradual rise in prices, perhaps to a range of $16 to $18 a barrel.

Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, said after Sunday's meeting that the ministers had "a long, long way" to go before reaching agreement on a comprehensive production-sharing accord.

As of Sunday, 10 of the 13 member countries had indicated they would accept a proposal from OPEC's technical advisers to limit oil production in the July-September quarter to 16.3 million barrels daily and 17.3 million in the following quarter. The hold-out members were Algeria, Libya and Iran.

 The term 20/20 refers to the size letters which the average eye can read twenty feet away. In most standard vision testing, you read the familiar Snellen eye chart at a distance of 20 feet. The upper number of the fraction expresses this distance. The lower number identifies the size letters you were able to read at this distance. Thus 20/70 vision means that you are able to read at 20 feet the line which a normal eye can read at 70 feet. Often, this test is given by having you look into a machine which creates the same conditions optically. The results are roughly similar to those of the Snellen chart. However, parents should not be lulled into the impression that their child has perfect vision because he scores a 20/20 on this vision test. All it measures is how well or poorly the child sees at that distance. And that's all. Problems with near vision, eye coordination and focusing ability are among the many problems NOT discovered in this test. Only a professional eye examination will protect the priceless miracle of sight.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osri

There will be ample opportunity to improve your material position in the year ahead. But you must rely upon yourself and not on partnership arrangements to make things happen.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Handle special equipment sensitively today. If you're too impatient or careless, you might damage what you're working on as well as your tools. Major changes are ahead for Taurus in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your feelings might get wounded today because of the thoughtlessness of someone near and dear to you. Call it to this person's attention so it won't be repeated.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Merchandise you purchase today to beautify your surroundings may look better in the store than it will in your place. Make sure all items can be returned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today, be careful how you phrase your comments to a sensitive friend. Your pal is in a touchy frame of mind and could misinterpret your remarks.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You could be a shade too loose with your purse strings today. Be mindful of what you can spend on self-gratifying whims.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Usually you're very competent at managing others without ruffling their feathers, but today you might operate in a manner they'll find irritating.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Things aren't apt to work out as you desire if you try to manipulate others from behind the scenes today. The strings you pull will fray and snap.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be strong enough to say no if an unreasonable request is made of you by a friend today, especially if a loan is the issue.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Do not allow some egocentric reason become so important to you today that you feel it's necessary to dictate exactly what others should do.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Do not be coy or overly wordy if you are trying to interest others in an idea you're espousing today. Tell your story as simply as possible.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Little of value will be accomplished today if you attempt to work out a business problem with associates who are trying to enjoy themselves socially.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You must be firm regarding your demands when negotiating a matter of importance today or the agreement will end up slanted in the other fellow's favor.

Give landscape plants extra water

By JOE VanZANDT
County Extension Agent

PINE, CEDAR TREE CARE

Don't forget to give your landscape trees and shrubs extra water during our dry weather. We have had a lot of problems with a condition we call needle cast over the last several years. Good care — especially plenty of water — is essential during drought to maintain good, healthy trees.

If you have had needle cast problems now is the time to spray your trees with a good fungicide. Needle cast shows up as a yellow spot on individual needles which eventually turn brown and girdle the needle which dies from that point to the tips.

Needle cast is best prevented from spreading to new growth by a carefully timed spray program using a copper-based fungicide such as Kocide 101 or Benomyl or an organic fungicide such as Maneb or Zineb.

The first three applications are made in the spring at ten day intervals, starting when the new candles (needles) have emerged.

This protects the new needles through the summer. Two applications in September will be needed for winter protection.

This spray program may be needed for more than one year. Keep your trees well watered and if you have had past needle cast problems use the above spray schedule.

DRIP IRRIGATION CAN COMBAT DRY WEATHER

A drip irrigation system can be the answer to growing plenty of quality vegetables during dry weather.

Such a system applies water to the soil at the center of the row with great precision and economy. It's possible to reduce water usage in a garden by more than 50 percent with a well designed drip system.

Drip irrigation involves a system of plastic pipes with tiny openings called "emitters" which deliver water, drop by drop, into the soil at the base of plants along the row. The water soaks in immediately when the rate of irrigation is adjusted correctly. No water is wasted because there is neither flooding nor runoff.

Home garden drip systems operate at low pressure — 4 to 10 pounds per square inch of tubing. Most gardens quickly learn how often and how long to operate their drip systems to satisfy their plants' water needs.

Even when a drip system is on, the middles between rows are dry enough to walk on, permitting harvesting and other garden work during irrigation. On the other hand, sprinkler and furrow-irrigated gardens are too wet to walk in for a day or two after each irrigation.

Drip-irrigated plants are more productive, and water is not sprayed over the leaves as with sprinkler irrigation, thus reducing disease problems. Soil is not water logged as with furrow-irrigation, so more oxygen is available to plant roots at all times. The entire soil surface can be mulched without interfering with irrigation; this stops moisture loss by evaporation.

At the current rates for city water, savings in water cost alone can pay for a drip system in less than two growing seasons. A homeowner using furrow-irrigation on a 1,000 square foot garden twice weekly for a month in midsummer applies about 10,000 gallons of water. That amount could be cut in half with a drip irrigation system. Thus, over a full season of gardening, water savings can be substantial.

Drip irrigation system costs vary widely but are reasonable for the home gardener. A system can last for 4 to 10 years, depending on its care.

Dear Abby

Operation Dear Abby sets sail for Guantanamo Bay

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Your Operation Dear Abby was a wonderful morale booster for lonely and homesick Marines in Japan. It let thousands of U.S. Marines know that Americans back home really care about them. It also gave some stateside people an opportunity to learn something about military life overseas.

Abby, we here in Guantanamo Bay Naval Base wish that you would extend Operation Dear Abby to us. We are an extremely isolated installation in the Caribbean, and would love to hear from people in the states. Our base is the oldest American post on foreign soil, and the only U.S. base in a communist nation.

There are a lot of lonely Marines and sailors here. We have women here, too, the majority of whom are in the Navy.

Anyone wishing to correspond with a service person can address letters to me. I promise to see that the letters will get into the hands of someone who wants a pen pal. Mail from "home" keeps us going.

Thanks in advance from all of us stationed here.

OPERATION DEAR ABBY
LCPL STEVE WILLIAMS
CO. L MARSPT BN
NSGA BOX 41
FPO NEW YORK, N.Y. 09593

DEAR STEVE: You asked for it! (The Marines on Okinawa received more than 30,000 letters!)

OK, Steve, you are now included in Operation Dear Abby. Prepare to hear from boys, girls, men, women, moms, pops and grandparents. The nicest people in the world read Dear Abby.

DEAR ABBY: Can you stand one more letter about European eating practices?

Eighteen years ago, on the plane home from our first visit to Europe, I asked our 10-year-old son if he had learned anything in the three months we had spent traveling around Europe. He thought for a minute, then said, "Well, I learned that there are a lot of different ways to flush a toilet."

Then I asked him if he'd also learned that one way of flushing a toilet was just as good as another, and he said, "Sure, they all get the job done." So I told him that he had indeed learned something of value.

To those who think the American way of doing things is the best and/or the only way, I say: "Please don't be an Ugly American. When you travel abroad, keep an open mind, and if you still don't think the way they 'flush their toilets' is as efficient as ours, please keep your opinions to yourself and don't insult or ridicule them. It will make life much more pleasant for us all when we follow in your footsteps."

LaROCQUE DuBOSE, PHOENIX

DEAR MR. DuBOSE: Your son was wise at age 10. But then, he had a good teacher. Congratulations.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Auditorium to be named after Pampan

Following a major donation by Pampa's M.K. Brown Foundation to the Carson County Square House Museum's Educational Center Fund, museum officials announce that the auditorium within the Center is to be named after the late M.K. Brown.

The M.K. Brown Foundation is the second largest donor to the fund, according to a news release from the museum. The 200-capacity auditorium will be named M.K. Brown Auditorium, the release said. In 1903, M.K. Brown, a native of England, came to Pampa shortly after the Boer War as an associate with the White Deer Lands Company. The company was an important developer of the Texas Panhandle, owning major portions of Gray, Carson, Hemphill and Roberts counties with 650,000 acres in the syndicate. The syndicate was controlled by Prime Minister Lord Rosebury, members of the British parliament and Sir Andrew Kingsmill, Brown's uncle.

In 1915, Brown became a naturalized citizen. His myriad interests included music and all the arts. At the time of his death, he had organized a charitable foundation and endowed the M.K. Brown Range Life Series of the University of Texas.

"The gift and name of M.K. Brown on the Educational Center will be especially meaningful as the original Square House in the museum complex was on White Deer Lands and Mr. Brown and his friend, Englishman C.P. Buckler recalled many times staying in the range house which is now the historic house in the Square House Museum Complex," the news release states.

Trustees of the M.K. Brown Foundation are Bill W. Waters, chairman; David E. Holt, secretary-treasurer and Mrs. William Jarrel Smith, wife of the Foundation's first chairman, vice chairman.

Through Brown's and the donations of Senator and Mrs. Grady Hazelwood and Lawrence Hagy, the Educational Center Fund is now within $5,5957.76 of the projected costs. In addition to the building fund, a contingency fund of $35,000 is needed to break ground for the center.

The center is to be known as the Senator Grady and Andrine Hazlewood Educational Center, after the major donors. Members of pioneer area families, Senator Hazlewood has been associated with the Square House Museum since its inception. While representing this district, he was instrumental in writing and passing legislation for the protection and support of state museums and the creation of county museums outside the area of state funding.

The third donor, Hagy, recalls, along with his friends Stanley Marsh, Don Harrington and Jay Taylor, the early days of the oil boom and the trips in and out of Panhandle staying at the Ernest O. Thompson Hotel, the Panhandle Inn. The first plant and early leases of Hagy, Harrington and Marsh were in Carson County. In presenting this gift to the new Educational Building through the Amarillo Area Foundation, Hagy demonstrates his consistent support of the Square House Museum and its 100-year association with area history.

Jordan gives record jam but Celtics prevail

Bulls' star scores 63 points but Boston leads series, 2-0

By The Associated Press

Michael Jordan put on one of those performances that was hard to beat. But 63 points didn't prove an insurmountable object for the Boston Celtics.

"They can have the records as long as we get the wins," Boston's Jerry Sichting said following the Celtics' double-overtime 135-131 victory Sunday over the Chicago Bulls in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

Jordan's output set a single-game NBA playoff record, but the Celtics got 36 points from Larry Bird and some clutch baskets in the second overtime from Sichting for their clutch victory and a 2-0 lead in the best-of-five series.

"I'm not worried about the points," said Jordan, who had 49 in the Bulls' opening-game loss to the Celtics. "I'd give all the points back if we could win. We, as a team, played well. They just got the breaks at the right time."

In other games Sunday, Philadelphia evened its series with Washington with a 102-97 decision; Portland edged Denver 108-106 to tie that series 1-1, Milwaukee defeated New Jersey 111-97 for a 2-0 lead, and Dallas beat Utah 113-106 to take a 2-0 lead.

Celtics 135, Bulls 131
Jordan broke the record of 61 points set by Elgin Baylor of the Los Angeles Lakers in Boston on April 14, 1962. The overtime record was 50 points by Boston's Bob Cousy in a four-overtime game on March 21, 1953.

Jordan, who missed 64 regular-season games with a broken bone in his left foot, sent the game into overtime by hitting two free throws with no time remaining in regulation to make the score 116-116. But with three seconds left in the first overtime, Jordan missed a 15-footer to leave the score tied at 125.

With Chicago trailing 133-131 in the second overtime, Jordan had a chance to tie the game, but missed a jumper from the foul line with 30 seconds to play. Then Sichting, who finished with eight points, made two decisive field goals in the second overtime — including a jumper with 51 seconds left — to pull it out for Boston.

76ers 102, Bullets 97
Charles Barkley recorded 27 points and 20 rebounds to lead Philadelphia over Washington. Barkley scored 14 of his points in the fourth quarter to key a late rally for the 76ers, who trailed by seven points midway through the period.

Bucks 111, Nets 97
Terry Cummings scored 13 of his 28 points in the third quarter to pace Milwaukee over New Jersey.

Mike Gminski led the Nets with 28 points. Darryl Dawkins, the Nets' 6-foot-11 center who has been out with an injury, made his first appearance since March 9 and scored 10 points in 16 minutes.

RECORD JAM — The Chicago Bulls' Michael Jordan, here jamming home two points, scored an NBA playoff record 63 points Sunday against the Boston Celtics, but the Celtics won in double overtime, 135-131. Boston leads the best-of-five series, 2-0. (AP Laserphoto)

Aguirre battles back; Mavs taking 2-0 advantage to Utah

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks lead their best-of-five NBA playoff series against the Utah Jazz 2-0 because the wonders of modern medicine worked for Mark Aguirre but not for Adrian Dantley. Back spasms struck the high-scoring stars of both teams, but Utah's Dantley was hospitalized while Dallas' Aguirre was able to play Sunday night against the Jazz.

Aguirre, who was questionable right up to the tip-off, scored 27 points in a 113-106 victory over the Jazz.

"My back was stiff, but after the first quarter I got going and didn't think about it," Aguirre said. "I think everything is going to be all right. I was just hustling all the time out there."

Aguirre, who also had six rebounds and five assists, had nine points in the fourth period.

Dallas Coach Dick Motta said Aguirre was superb, bad back and all. "If he was 80 percent tonight, I wish he'd play 80 percent every night," Motta said. "He was into the game — rebounding, defense and he hit some big baskets for us at the end."

Dallas' Rolando Blackman, who had 22 points, admitted that Utah misses Dantley, the NBA's second-leading scorer.

"They are just a different team without Dantley," Blackman said. "This is a new beginning for them. When AD is out there, we know he is going to touch the ball at least 80 percent of the times they go down on offense."

Motta said the victory in the second game meant more than the first one, 101-93 on Friday night.

"The pressure game of this series was tonight," he said. "Now we've got to win one of our last three and we're a pretty good road team."

"It's not over though," Motta added. "We were behind 3-1 (when he coached Washington in a playoff series against Philadelphia) when I said my thing about the fat lady. If our players think it's over, we have a problem."

The series switches to Salt Lake City on Wednesday night, and Utah Coach Frank Layden said if the Mavs don't win they should be ashamed.

"We have to win or it is a start of a long vacation," said Layden. "I'll say it again, if Dallas does not win this they should go to Division Three."

The Utah players said the Dallas fans kept the Mavericks going. "Give this game to the Dallas fans," said Utah's Rickey Green. "The fans here are just great and really motivate the Mavericks."

Utah's Bobby Hansen agreed. "This is the loudest crowd I have ever heard in the NBA," he said. "I have to go back to my days in the Big Ten to remember crowds like this."

Lady Wildcats sweep past Dalhart for District 3-1A title

AMARILLO — It's given that Pampa has the best girls track team in the Panhandle, and now it's likely that Canadian girls are next in the elite line.

The Lady Wildcats turned in a strong overall performance and beat rugged Dalhart for the District 3-1A team track championship here Saturday. Canadian logged 162 points to the Lady Wolves' 132, and host River Road came in third.

First and second place finishers in each event qualified for the regional meet, to be held in two weeks.

In the boys division, Canadian's Rodney Boyd was his team's only field qualifier, as he placed second in the discus with a 147-1/4 toss.

Luke Thrasher won the 800 with a time of 2:04.86, narrowly edging Perryton's Gary Diercks, but surprisingly he was the last of the Wildcats' regional qualifiers.

That wasn't the case in the girls division, where the Lady Cats dominated tough competition.

Wendi Burns led the way, as she won the 100-meter hurdles, placed second in the long jump and triple jump, and anchored the Lady Cats winning 1600-meter relay (which also included Vickie Rivers, Gwen Waterfield and Kimberly McEntire).

McEntire continued her season-long unbeaten string in the 800, while Tracie Conn won the 100 and finished second in the 200.

Michelle Hankins placed second in the shot, and Canadian's 800- and 1600-meter relays qualified for regional.

KC gets Blue Jays' number

Major League Roundup
By The Associated Press

This year, it took the Kansas City Royals only six tries to beat the Toronto Blue Jays four times.

"I think it was the kind of series people expect when we play," Kansas City Manager Dick Howser said after the Royals beat the Blue Jays 6-4 Sunday and wound up the weekend series in Toronto with a pair of victories in three games.

The two teams that met in last season's American League playoffs have played six times in 1986, with Kansas City winning four of them. In the playoffs, the Royals rallied from a 3-1 deficit to win in seven games.

Frank White hit a three-run homer, capping a four-run seventh inning Sunday that enabled Kansas City to break a 2-2 tie.

In other AL games, California rallied past Minnesota 8-5, New York got past Milwaukee 5-4 in 10 innings, Baltimore bopped Texas 6-1, Oakland downed Seattle 9-3 and Boston beat Chicago 6-2. Cleveland at Detroit was rained out.

With the score tied 2-2, Jamie Quirk led off the Kansas City seventh with an infield single off reliever Dennis Lamp. Quirk moved to second on a sacrifice by Buddy Biancalana and scored on a single by Willie Wilson.

Wilson took third on the throw home and George Brett was intentionally walked. White then homered for a 6-2 lead.

Charlie Leibbrandt, 2-0, got the victory. Lamp lost his first decision of the season. The loss dropped Toronto to 5-7.

Orioles 6, Rangers 1
Eddie Murray continued his assault on Texas pitching, hitting a two-run homer and a single, while Storm Davis continued his mastery over Rangers' batters.

Davis pitched a four-hitter and won his first decision of the season. Davis, who struck out five and walked none, improved his career record against Texas to 8-0.

Angels 8, Twins 5
Brian Downing hit a three-run homer with one out in the ninth inning, capping a four-run rally that lifted California over visiting Minnesota.

Mets rip Philly; Astros win

New York Mets Manager Davey Johnson wanted to give George Foster a day off. And now, despite protestations, Johnson may have a decision to make.

On Saturday, Foster's outfield replacement, rookie Kevin Mitchell, singled, doubled and drove in a run in New York's 3-2 victory over Philadelphia. And on Sunday, sub Danny Heep hit a three-run homer to start the Mets to an 8-0 victory over the Phillies.

"I just wanted to give George a couple of days off to get in a lot of extra batting practice," Johnson said. "I don't want him worrying about the fans, but concentrating on the hitters. His timing has been a little off."

Foster, regularly booed by Mets fans, took the two days off in stride, and even Heep didn't really expect to move into a regular platoon with the Mets' $2 million man. Foster hits right-handed, Heep lefty.

Heep's homer came in the first inning, and Sid Fernandez and Roger McDowell teamed up on a two-hit shutout to give the Mets a sweep of the three-game series with the Phillies, who have lost four straight.

In the rest of the National League, Los Angeles defeated Atlanta 7-3, Houston downed Cincinnati 6-4, Montreal blanked St. Louis 2-0 and San Francisco beat San Diego 4-0. Pittsburgh at Chicago was suspended with the score tied 8-8 after 13 innings because of darkness.

Fernandez worked eight innings for the Mets, and McDowell pitched a perfect ninth.

Astros 6, Reds 4
Phil Garner and Alan Ashby homered for Houston in the fourth inning to erase a 3-1 Cincinnati lead. Garner's was a solo shot and Ashby's drove in two runs against Bill Gullickson.

Eric Davis hit a two-run homer for Cincinnati in the third inning off Jim Deshaies. Mike Madden worked three innings in relief of Deshaies, and Charlie Kerfeld finished up for his second save.

Dodgers 7, Braves 3
Los Angeles got off to a fast start with first-inning homers by Greg Brock and Mike Scioscia and broke a five-game losing streak by beating Atlanta. Bob Welch, 2-0, allowed nine hits, struck out eight and walked one in beating the Braves for the eighth straight time.

The Dodgers scored four times against Rick Mahler, 1-3, in the first inning.

Giants 4, Padres 0
Vida Blue won his 200th game, giving up five hits over five innings, and the Giants defeated San Diego despite getting only three hits themselves.

Marathon madness in Bean Town

BOSTON (AP)— Buoyed by a huge influx of money and, as a result, a strong field, the recently deflated Boston Marathon was being run today amidst a new air of excitement.

The 26-mile, 385-yard race, the oldest marathon in the world, had lost much of its luster in the last couple of years because of the stubborn refusal by the Boston Athletic Association, the race organizer, to award prize money.

Other, newer, less prestigious marathons had passed it on the popularity scale, and Boston was in jeopardy of being classified as just a "people's race."

But after the BAA decided last summer to fall in line with the other leading marathons and hand out prize money — under the trust fund guidelines of The Athletics Congress, the national governing body for track and field — the John Hancock Life Insurance Co. came riding to the rescue with a bundle of cash.

So, both the men's and women's winners were ready to collect $30,000, with $20,000 for second place, $15,000 for third, $12,000 for fourth and $10,000 for fifth. Bonuses for performance levels, course records and world-bests could bring each winner's total to $110,000.

The favorites were Rob de Castella of Australia, the 1983 world champion, and Ingrid Kristiansen of Norway, owner of the women's world best.

Both were first-time participants in the Boston Marathon, and like virtually all the other elite runners in the field, they would not have been competing had the BAA not changed its stance on amateurism.

"There were a number of circumstances which led us to look at the alternatives — whether to let the race stay as it was or to award participation money," said Len Luchner, the race chairman and a member of the BAA. "We decided to go for the prize money even before we had a sponsor."

Luchner said that the 11-member BAA "agonized a long time" before making its decision.

"We weren't used to the idea of prize money," he said. "It had been around for only a few years. But then the runners told us (in meetings with the BAA) that they wouldn't run Boston if there was no prize money."

Because of the lack of prize money, the quality of the race had decreased considerably in 1984 and 1985, and another poor field this time would virtually have drained the last vestige of prestige from this long-glorified event.

An attempt to award prize money in the race was made in 1982.

Ali's ghost haunted Holmes

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)— The ghost of Muhammad Ali stalked Larry Holmes right to the end. Ali always had this knack for saying and doing just the right thing at just the right time. Holmes did not.

Ali could insult you and make it sound like a compliment. "You're not as dumb as you look," he'd say with Don Ricklesque inflection. Holmes could say the same words and, somehow, they would come out differently.

Ali could charm you with a sideways glance, with the slightest slant of his eyebrow, with the most casual smile. He could rant, "I am the greatest," and almost make it sound humble instead of crass. He was a public person who thrived on his public persona.

Holmes envied that charisma that made Ali into a boxing cult hero, and he tried hard to emulate it. He never quite got the act down, though.

A thoroughly decent man, Holmes often still managed to get himself into hot water with his mouth, a mistake Ali rarely made.

You do not, for example, question the integrity of ring judges a week before you are to fight for your boxing life. You might not want members of that particular community angry at you under those circumstances.

Holmes, however, spoke out needlessly before the heavyweight championship rematch with Michael Spinks, talking about drunken judges holding the fates of fighters in their hands.

"I got a big mouth," he admitted later. The remarks required an apology. Just as his needless, bad-taste attack on Rocky Marciano had seven months before. Just as his cold-shoulder, no-interview posture with media friends who had been with him through most of his 13-year boxing odyssey did.

Holmes came into Saturday night's second Spinks fight determined to regain his title. He fought gallantly, brilliantly at times. And he lost a close, split decision. When it was over, given the opportunity to walk away with his head high, he again took the low road. He ripped the decision. He tried not to. But in the end, he could not. He thought he had won the fight. That gnawed at him and he couldn't resist. So he ripped.

"The decision showed I've been telling the truth," he said. "I had to knock Michael out. If I didn't, I couldn't win. I know the ins and outs of boxing. I know who does what and they don't like it."

There is no reason to believe that bad judging victimized Holmes.

He was in a close, tight fight. Two of the three judges thought Spinks had won. Only one thought Holmes had. The way to handle that is to accept the decision and walk away. Holmes could not.

Judging fights is a subjective art. Close decisions can go either way.

Did Holmes win Saturday night?

Perhaps. There were a number of ringsiders who believed that he had. Certainly he thought so.

Now, at age 36, with two straight losses and the prospect of no more seven-figure purses, Holmes insists he is retiring.

"This is it," he said. "I can't win no more. It's over. No more chasing ghosts. I can't get a fair shake because I've got a big mouth." The No. 1 ghost never had that problem.

Heritage Classic

Zoeller birdies 18 for title

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP)— Early last week, during a practice round, good friends Hubert Green and Fuzzy Zoeller were kidding each other, one-upping one another.

"Anybody can win one here," Green said of the deeply respected Harbour Town Golf Links. "But it takes a helluva player to win two."

Zoeller had won once on the tough little course with the tight fairways and tiny greens, winding through moss-dripping cypress, oak and pine down to the finishing holes on Calibogue Sound.

Green, of course, was one of that elite club of two-time Sea Pines Heritage Classic winners, a group which also included Hale Irwin, Johnny Miller and Tom Watson.

Zoeller found his answer Sunday with a 15-foot birdie putt on the 72nd hole that capped a comeback round of 71 and made him a one-shot winner in a five-man scramble to the finish.

It confirmed him, in Hubert's words, as "a helluva player," enabled him to join Calvin Peete as the only two-time winners on the PGA Tour this year, and provided him with a personal triumph over pain.

"I'm not the kind of guy who gives up," said Zoeller. "I like to compete. I like to win."

A former winner of the Masters and U.S. Open, Zoeller's career was in jeopardy when he was forced to undergo major back surgery in 1984. He came back from that with a victory in 1985.

Then he injured the back again in Hawaii this year, a couple of weeks after a victory at Pebble Beach. He plays only with the help of daily therapy, and only a couple of weeks ago stopped taking pain-killers. And he plays in constant pain, often unable to bend over to line up putts.

Zoeller, a two-stroke leader at the start of the final round, blew that when he drove into the woods on the first hole, "hit six miserable shots," and made double bogey.

He was three behind at the turn.

But a couple of birdies on the back put him back in a share of the lead and he still held that position at the 72nd hole.

Australian Greg Norman and Roger Maltbie already had finished and had their 7-under-par 277 totals on the board when Zoeller, Chip Beck and Jay Haas came to the final hole.

Norman, Maltbie and Beck tied for second, one stroke back.

Amarillo Chamber honor

Bay City's Smith top basketballer in Texas

By JON MARK BEILUE
Amarillo Globe-News

AMARILLO, Texas (AP)— Bay City's LaBradford Smith, named by the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce as Texas' outstanding high school basketball player of 1985-86, is already being hailed by many as the best high school player ever to come out the state.

"I'm biased, but I think he is," said Eddie Nelson of Bay City, Smith's coach. "He's the best high school player I've ever seen."

"If I had to compare him to anyone, it would be a little of Michael Jordan and Oscar Robertson. He's a combination of both. He can do the basics, and he can be flashy," he said.

The 6-4, 205-pound Smith is the Amarillo chamber's 24th annual recipient of the basketball award. The chamber recognizes the state's top players annually in six sports — football, basketball, track, baseball, golf and tennis.

Smith is the second junior to be honored in the current school year. In December, San Antonio Southwest quarterback Ty Detmer was the football winner.

The chamber's awards for the four other sports will be announced at a later date.

Jay Parker of Houston, who rates hundreds of college prospects across Texas for his recruiting and scouting service, called Smith "a cross between Isiah Thomas and Michael Jordan. He's exceptional to say the least."

Smith recently was named to the national first team by Parade Magazine — becoming the first Texas underclassman in 30 years to be so honored. The two-time all-state guard was one of four national finalists for the Gatorade Circle of Champions national high school Player of the Year award.

In three years with Smith as a starter, Bay City is 94-3, including the 4A state title in 1985. He first made a statewide impact as a sophomore in the state tournament semifinals with a "perfect" game against Seagoville in which he was 12 of 12 from the field and 5 of 5 from the free throw line.

He led Bay City to a 33-1 record last season. He averaged 25.2 points, 14 rebounds, and 8.3 assists despite averaging only 22 minutes a game because of the Black Cats' frequent blowout decisions. He also carries a 3.5

grade-point average in the classroom.

"And a 4.0 on the basketball court," Nelson said.

Smith also excels at baseball, where as a pitcher he has been clocked at 85 mph. He has high jumped 6 feet, 9 inches.

"LaBradford has tremendous talent. He's a great athlete with exceptional jumping ability. And he's so fundamentally sound," Nelson said. "There's no skill he doesn't have. That's what it comes down to."

Smith's two older sisters, Annette and Audry, played for the 1986 national champion Texas Lady Longhorns. He's been on the Black Cat bench since he was a 5-year-old water boy.

He was in the seventh grade when he dunked a basketball for the first time.

"When he was about that age, he said, 'Coach, I'm going to be a bad dude.' I said, 'OK, but you're going to have to prove it,'" Nelson said.

"At 6-4 and 205 pounds, he's a man among boys much of the time. And the thing is, he's just scratching the surface. There's no doubt in my mind he'll be the No. 1 player in America next year."

Nelson said Smith will announce 10 schools he's interested in after the completion of the baseball season. Next September, he'll trim that list to five, and take his visits before deciding.

"He's going to make some college coach very happy," Nelson said.

Pampa Merchants Classic

Nail bowls Stephens to win

Donny Nail defeated Roy Don Stephens, 223-170, Saturday to win the seventh annual Pampa Merchants Bowling Classic held at Harvester Lanes.

Nail was also the top qualifier going into the match game finals with a total of 1,965 for ten games. Stephens, the No. 5 qualifier, had to win three matches to reach the finals against Nail. Stephens defeated Rick McElliott, 179-167, Benny Horton, 177-170, and Buddy Epperson, 212-149.

Pampa Merchants donated $760 to the prize fund with $150 and a first-place plaque going to Nail. Donating merchants were Crossman Implement Co., Dean's Pharmacy, Dyer's Bar-B-Que, Harris Sporting Goods, Harvester Lanes, Scotty's Wine & Cheese Shoppe, Service Liquor No. 1, John Sparkman D.D.S., Stardust Supper Club, Sullins Plumb-ing and T-Shirts Plus.

Epperson finished behind Nail in the 10-game qualifying round with a 1,897, followed by Horton, 1,833; McElliott, 1,801, and Stephens, 1,794. Others who placed and received cash prizes and gift certificates were Howard Musgrave, sixth; Larry Mayo, seventh; Leon Harris, eighth; Ade Becker, ninth, and Greg Vanderlinden, tenth, who received two free meal tickets worth $20.

Bowlers also received $30 for each high game bowled in the 10-game qualifying round. Those bowlers and their high games were Rick McElliott, 233; Donny Nail, 235; Johnny Gilbert, 212; Howard Musgrave, 193; Buddy Epperson, 210; Ade Becker, 207; Benny Horton, 205; Larry Mayo, 197; Lonnie Loter, 233, and Russell Eakin, 239.

Graff victorious

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. (AP)— Top-seeded Steffi Graff won her second championship in as many weeks with a tie-breaker win Sunday over fellow West German Claudia Kohde-Kilsch in the SunKist Women's Tennis Association Championship.

In the doubles, Kohde-Kilsch and Czechoslovakia's Helena Sukova defeated Argentina's Gabriella Sabatini and France's Catherine Tanvier.

SUGAR SHAKEDOWN

Q: I know excess sugar in the diet is not a healthful practice, but what are the dangers?

A: In spite of the fact that our society is a sugar-lover's paradise, the dangers of excess sugar consumption still exist. First, it affects our dental health. Sugary foods coat the teeth with plaque, a bacteria that combines with sugar to form acids that attack the normal surface of the teeth, inviting tooth decay. Second, foods high in sugar are also often high in fats and calories. Third, a diet high in sugar will almost always be low in nutrition. Fourth, although refined sugar is not addictive, the body digests it rapidly, causing the blood sugar concentration to rise dramatically, then to drop below normal levels. As a result, the body craves more sugar.

The best alternative to processed sugar is fresh fruits and vegetables. They satisfy your sweet tooth, take longer to digest and provide nutrients and fiber to your diet. Officials say

Terrorist-proof border impossible

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A terrorist-proof border is virtually impossible because of limited manpower resources, say federal agents who are on the alert to intercept terrorists trying to enter the country.

Federal lawmen from Corpus Christi to Del Rio said they are being constantly updated with anti-terrorist intelligence from Washington in the wake of recent Libyan hostilities.

Passports, birth certificates and other immigration documents are being closely examined on the suspicion that a Middle Eastern terrorist likely will travel with forged or stolen papers, they said.

Silvestre Reyes, chief of U.S. Border Patrol's McAllen sector said his staff has its own intelligence network of paid undercover informants in Mexico to alert U.S. authorities if suspects arrive in Reynosa or other nearby Mexican departure points to seek passage to Texas by bypassing border crossings.

But he told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times that despite precautions, chances are great that a terrorist could slip through easily.

"The ones we're worried about are the ones we don't encounter, and those are the ones we all should be worried about," Reyes said. "Certainly it's no secret that we do not have the resources to maintain surveillance over the whole sector."

He noted that the border patrol is responsible for 280 river miles, but has only 230 agents for the whole sector, an area of 85,000 square miles.

"So by no stretch of the imagination do we have anywhere near the resources to do that job that we're expected to do," he said.

Agents in the McAllen sector have been in a state of heightened readiness since U.S. planes and warships departed Libya's contested Gulf of Sidra March 27 after striking Libyan patrol boats and bombing a coastal radar and anti-aircraft site, Reyes said.

Then last Monday, U.S. fighter-bombers attacked the Libyan mainland.

"The men are aware of the situation, and the incident of last Monday has increased our awareness of the problem of spotting terrorists coming through the border, but the border is just one aspect of it," he said.

Terrorists may attempt to enter illegally by more ways than just wading across the Rio Grande, said Richard M. Casillas, director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service's San Antonio district.

Casillas' district covers 78 Texas counties, San Antonio and Corpus Christi airports, the Port of Corpus Christi and border crossing points at Laredo, Eagle Pass and Del Rio.

Agents are frequently alerted to be on the lookout for suspects traveling with forged or stolen immigration papers at air, sea or land ports of entry, he said.

"I am concerned about my men. I'm also concerned about this: If a terroristic act should take place and it should develop that it came through our ports of entry, or Laredo, Eagle Pass, Del Rio or even Corpus Christi, every doggone politician is going to be throwing brickbats down in my direction and I know it."

He said he has only two agents to cover the Port of Corpus Christi and various docks along a 120-mile stretch of coast.

Fred Bustamante, assistant director for the Immigration Service's San Antonio district, said subordinates have been warned to act with extreme caution in dealing with individuals who may fit confidential Middle Eastern or Latin American terrorist "profiles," which detail the generic appearance and behavior of terrorists traveling incognito.

later released. The youngsters were in stable condition Sunday night in the Shannon pediatric unit, hospital officials said.

Crystal, 10, and Renee, 7, were unconscious when he found them. He drove them to Shannon West Texas Memorial Hospital, where they were treated for smoke inhalation and cuts suffered during their escape.

Budden himself was treated for smoke inhalation and cuts, and PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Richard Thomas, John Rubinstein, Lisa Eichorn and Carol Shelley starred in Shaw's "Arms and the Man," but the audience for the reopening production at the Pasadena Playhouse was as star-studded as the cast.

Among those at Saturday night's sellout were Robert Culp, John Lithgow, Carroll O'Connor, Stacy Keach, Frank Langella, Helen Slater, Lynn Redgrave, Maude Adams, Tina Louise and Zsa Zsa Gabor.

The 70-year-old playhouse, which had been closed since 1970 in a tax dispute, reopened after developer David Houk arranged $4.3 million in financing and a plan that ultimately will include shops and restaurants in the ornate, Spanish-style complex in this Los Angeles suburb.

Ryan accepted his offer to attend.

"My injuries are superficial and they'll heal," said Louganis, who won two gold medals at the 1984 Olympics. "I wish that that were the case with Ryan."

Ryan, a 14-year-old resident of nearby Kokomo, is a hemophiliac and contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome from a blood treatment. His illness was diagnosed in December 1984, and authorities kept him from attending school for all but one day this year until April 10, when a judge ruled there was no evidence to keep him out of classes.

ROAD TOWN British Virgin Islands (AP) — Britain has rejected a plan by this Caribbean colony to issue a postage stamp featuring singer Michael Jackson.

It was disappointed because the design did not include the royal insignia of Queen Elizabeth II, according to correspondence presented to the colony's legislative council last week by Chief Minister Cyril Romney.

"As the queen of each dependent territory it is Her Majesty's requirement that her portrait or the royal cypher should appear on all stamps and she takes a close personal interest in stamp proposals for the dependent territories and had recently confirmed that she would like to have the standards strictly adhered to," said a letter from Baroness Young, a minister of state in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Danny DeVito and his wife, actress Rhea Perlman, led more than 1,000 people, many pushing toddlers in strollers, in a march in support of public funding for child care.

The one-mile walk Sunday through the Westwood area near UCLA was sponsored by the California Children's Council, a nonprofit group whose aim is to educate the public in child-care services.

DeVito, star of "Romancing the Stone" and "Jewel of the Nile," and Ms. Perlman, who appears in NBC-TV's "Cheers," have two young daughters.

German emigrants flock to Texas

By The Associated Press

Germans were ripe for the news of Texas in the 1830s and 1840s. Their country had become densely populated, the political climate was stultifying and many had little hope for ambition, especially since there were few jobs available.

After hearing of rich potential on the Texas frontier and the vast lands here, mostly from letters of explorers and families who had ventured forth early on, hundreds of Germans gathered their families and provisions and boarded "fearsome crates," which brought them to North America.

The trips were hazardous. Many lost their lives on the journey or in crude settlements when they finally arrived.

As historian Glenn Lich tells it in his book, "The German Texans," by the early 1840s, several thousand Germans had survived the months-long trans-Atlantic voyages to new homes in the Republic of Texas.

German immigration to Texas entered a new phase in 1842, when five sovereign princes of 16 noblemen formed a society to promote German colonization in Texas. Lich writes that this poorly organized, badly underfinanced and uninformed society became known as the "Adelsverein."

The "Adelsverein" sent Prince Leiningen and Count Boos Walddeck to Texas to seek grants for extensive German settlement.

Prince Carl of Solms-Braunfels arrived in Galveston the next summer to prepare for the first shiploads of immigrants the next winter. He bought a tract on Matagorda Bay to use as a landing place from which the new arrivals could be supplied and organized for their journey to the interior. Then he purchased land for permanent settlement by the Guadalupe River where it breaks from the hills of the Balcones Escarpment.

Three shiploads of Germans arrived at Galveston in December 1844 and traveled down the coast to the new port that Prince Carl named Carlshafen (later known as Indianola).

Although these hundreds of weary and sick immigrants had to camp temporarily on the open beach in wet winter weather, they fared relatively well.

In March 1845, the prince led the first wagon train to a green woodland bordering the swift-running Comal River and established a town, naming it after his ancestral estate of Braunfels.

New Braunfels, the first colonial German village in Texas, changed quickly from a temporary settlement to a comfortable Old World town on the Texas frontier, Lich says. Teams of men and women worked together to build homes, a town church and a fortress, and then laid out the streets.

The following winter, when the second wave of colonists landed on the coast, conditions were quite different, Lich notes.

Funds from Germany for the settlement were depleted. Hostilities had broken out between the United States and Mexico. And the teamsters who had previously contracted to transport the new arrivals inland were conscripted to haul weapons and munitions.

Stranded on the coast in miserable shacks and dugouts, about 1,000 people died and hundreds more succumbed on the way inland. A daughter of Pastor Louis Cachand Ervendberg, first minister, recounted her parents' misery during this trip in 1846:

"They were on the road for a long time, and most of the people had some kind of fever or scurvy from poor food. Some had died in Indianola or were left behind too ill to travel; there were a lot who never lived to reach New Braunfels. It rained all the time, and that made it hard with the ox-carts sticking in the mud and the poor colonists, people who were used to a comfortable life back in Germany, wet and miserable."

"Then, when they were close enough to see the nice place Prince Solms had ready, there was another big disappointment. The Guadalupe River was so high it could not be crossed, and they had to camp at the old ford. I don't know how long they waited for the river to go down, but several more died there and were buried nearby."

Despite disease and death, New Braunfels grew steadily, Lich says.

When scientist Ferdinand Roemer first viewed the fledgling town in 1846, he predicted that it would grow to become a city of 12,000 inhabitants and that its fortunate locations would ensure success.

The Federal blockade of Confederate ports during the Civil War effectively halted immigration into Texas, Lich says. But after the war, the German belt extended across central Texas, absorbing many later immigrants.

A significant number of them settled in small German folk-lands scattered across wide areas of South, North, Central and Northwest Texas.

German Texans share a strong heritage, which they still celebrate at festivals and reunions.

THE Rawlings SPORTS CARAVAN

Rawlings
"The Mark Of A Pro."

There's a caravan headed for Holmes Gift Shoppe and Sports Center, 304 S. Cuyler.

Due to arrive May 13, the Rawlings Sports Caravan will be parked out front of the shoppe from 1 to 7 p.m. complete with bat- and glove-making demonstrations and the Rawlings Caravan Museum.

Ronnie Holmes said the Rawlings experts will personalize all wooden bats purchased that day and all ball gloves brought in or purchased. Glove repair will be offered at no charge.

In addition, the caravan features the sport museum, running continuous baseball movies and displaying early Rawlings gloves and uniforms.

One of the main attractions of the Rawlings Sports Caravan is Tony Amendola, a veteran bat-making technician in the caravan, a promotional mini-factory that tours the nation's sporting goods dealerships and baseball tournaments during the regular season after serving as a mobile service shop for Big Leaguers' equipment during spring training.

Using a lathe and 40-inch billets of white ash, Amendola, known as Rawlings' vagabond bat-maker, turns out bats quicker than you can say Jack Robinson. In 1985, at the age of 64, Amendola and the caravan traveled coast to coast, visiting more than 100 cities.

"I can make a bat in about 30 minutes," Amendola says. "But sometimes I'll take as long as an hour with the pros, calibrating it, making sure it weights exactly what they want. Satisfying the pros is the hardest part of the job. They are very exacting and consider the bat's grip the biggest thing."

Amendola knows many stars on a first-name basis, according to Tony Pironti, the vagabond batmaker's sidekick, who serves as the caravan's roving glove repairman.

"The man is a legend," Pironti maintains. "Down in spring training, it was unbelievable how everyone knew him. He walks into the Reds' clubhouse and Pete Rose doesn't shake Tony's hand. He hugs him!"

"When we visited Oakland, Dave Kingman grabbed Tony, got him in a head lock — you know, the way you'd do your brother — took off his hat and started rubbing Tony's bald head for luck."

Don't forget to mark that calendar May 13, 1 to 7 p.m., for the Rawlings Sports Caravan, making its second appearance in Pampa in as many years.

Meanwhile at Holmes Gift Shoppe and Sports Center, the Holmes family is continuing plenty of special deals to provide one-stop shopping for spring and summer sports enthusiasts of all ages and levels of experience.

The starting line-up includes uniforms, baseballs and softballs, gloves, bats, caps, shoes... the works!

Ronnie said all ball gloves are offered at 20 to 30 percent off throughout the baseball and softball seasons, with sizes available for youngsters, teenagers and "old pros."

Aluminum bats also are discounted at least 20 percent off throughout the season, with sizes and weights available for any baseball or softball enthusiast.

Boasting "the largest selection of sports shoes in the Texas Panhandle," Holmes Gift Shoppe and Sports Center is offering a choice of a free baseball cap or a free baseball undershirt with the purchase of baseball cleats, with a number of brands and varieties available.

With custom uniforms available from DeLong, and other uniforms available, too, Holmes offers stock lettering, applied at no extra charge. All custom artwork on uniforms is available at a minimal price.

And, for the youngsters, Holmes has authentic team jerseys available in all youth sizes. A free cap is yours for the taking with each purchase of a youth team jersey.
