Etheredge fails to win change of venue

BY PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Writer

Despite claims by seven witnesses that former Bethany Trust head Tom Etheredge would have a difficult time obtaining a fair trial in Gray County, a district judge denied Etheredge's motion for a change of venue Wednesday.

223rd District Judge Don Cain ruled without comment that Etheredge, 31, should stand trial in Gray County following a three-hour hearing. Cain said the case is set for the May 5 criminal case docket and other defense motions will be heard at that time.

Etheredge is charged with various counts of fraud, theft, securities violations and misapplication of investor funds. He left the area after Bethany Trust and Co. was shut down by state banking officials after the company failed to verify more than $11 million in assets, then eluded authorities for more than nine months.

Bethany Trust and Co. was said to owe investors in four states more than $1.3 million. Etheredge currently is in Gray County Jail with bonds totalling about $1.5 million. He has maintained through his attorneys that investors would have received their money back had the state not interfered.

During a break in Wednesday's proceedings, Etheredge told a Pampa News reporter outside the courtroom he feels news coverage of his plight has been slanted and spoke of "corruption in this county." He said it is apparent people are getting tired of hearing one side of the story.

"These things will come to light even more "when my innocence is proven," he said.

The conversation ended abruptly when Kenny Norris, Etheredge's court appointed attorney, emerged from the courtroom and told the reporter: "I don't want you talking to him. My client has a Fifth Amendment right."

Norris, of Perryton, attempted to prove that pre-trial publicity by newspapers, television and radio has prejudiced the population of Gray County to the extent that his client could not receive a fair trial. He seized on phrases used to describe his client such as "Bible-toting ex-convict," references in the media to Etheredge's previous criminal record and allegations raised in news accounts by Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton.

In addition, he said, each article in The Pampa News about the case appeared on the front page and most mentioned Etheredge's name in the headline. Twenty-two copies of articles published in the newspaper were admitted into evidence.

"The name 'Etheredge' has a newspaper-selling ability," he said. Norris also noted an attorney could not be found in Gray County to take the case.

Seven witnesses called by Norris said they believe Etheredge would have a difficult, if not impossible, time receiving a fair trial in Gray County. They said their opinions were based on prejudicial news accounts and conversations with acquaintances and several said Hamilton has tried the case in the media.

"He has more or less reflected that Tom is already guilty," said one witness, Welton L. Fain.

Several of the witnesses said they are friends of Etheredge's parents and several said they believe Etheredge is innocent.

"My mind's made up. I think probably he's innocent," witness Jack White said. He added he does not think the Etheredges could have raised a son "that wasn't a decent human being."

Another witness, D.V. Biggers, accused Hamilton of dealing in semantics and "little picky things" in questioning those testifying.

Others who testified they didn't think Etheredge could get a fair trial in Gray County were Ira

Big crowd anticipated for hearing

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans upset with proposed state rules for private schools converged on Austin for today's State Board of Education committee hearing.

"Private schools, including home schools, have flourished in Texas with minimal government regulation and have consistently turned out superior academic products," said W. Kirk McCord of Dallas, director of the Texas Home School Coalition.

McCord and several other groups opposed to the proposed rules held a Wednesday news conference at the Capitol. The groups planned a rally today before the committee's public hearing.

The proposed rules would set standards for teachers and curriculum in private and church schools. Current rules only require those schools to offer a course in citizenship.

The Texas Education Agency warned that the hearing, although moved to a University of Texas auditorium, would be crowded.

"Once the auditorium is filled, no one will be allowed in except for reporters with valid press credentials," the agency said in a release.

Many politicians, including GOP gubernatorial candidates Bill Clements and Kent Hance, are expected to attend the pre-hearing rally.

The Coalition for Religious Freedom said Wednesday the proposed rules are an attempt to "bring all private education under the control of the state."

"The right to educate our children according to the dictates of our faith is the most sacred and most basic of our freedoms. It is not a freedom granted to us by the laws of man, but a freedom ordained under the law of God," said Donald Sills, president of the National Coalition for Religious Freedom.

The Texas Home School Coalition sees the proposed rules as an effort to prosecute parents who choose to educate their children at home.

Handgun foes win a round

WASHINGTON (AP) — Handgun control forces won a major victory today when the House voted 232-185 to continue an 18-year-old ban on interstate sales of handguns.

The vote tacked on the amendment to a bill otherwise weakening the 1968 Gun Control Act. It was the first triumph in two days of debate on gun legislation for police and handgun control organizations.

On Wednesday, House handgun control advocates lost on the same issue, but that vote was on a larger package. Today, the issue was considered separately.

Forces of the National Rifle Association and allied gun groups have won virtually all the other provisions they sought to weaken the 1968 act.

A House-passed gun bill would go to the Senate, which last year approved a measure that is similar but not identical to the gun lobby's bill, sponsored by Rep. Harold L. Volkmer, D-Mo. Senators could accept the House version or send the issue to a conference.

Either way, Congress appears certain to make the first major changes in the 1968 law, which was passed after the assassinations of Martin Luther King Jr. and Robert F. Kennedy.

The retention of the interstate sales ban was proposed by Rep. William J. Hughes, D-N.J., sponsor of rival legislation to the Volkmer bill. Hughes' language deletes from the Volkmer measure a provision permitting sales of all firearms by a dealer in one state to customers from other states.

The Volkmer bill still would weaken the current law by allowing interstate sales of rifles and shotguns. But gun control and police groups have said all along that their major concern was with handguns.

U.S. carriers set to strike against Libya

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy today sent a second aircraft carrier to sea in the Mediterranean in case President Reagan decides to order a military strike against Libya, Pentagon sources said.

The Coral Sea sailed from Malaga, Spain, early this morning, Eastern time, and was steaming toward the Central Mediterranean.

But the sources, who demanded anonymity, said no orders had been issued for the Coral Sea and the America, which left port in Italy a day earlier, to reform a battle group.

The Coral Sea had been scheduled to end a six-month deployment and sail for the United States. But that carrier and the America, which had been scheduled to sail from Livorno, Italy, for Cannes, France, were changed, officials said Wednesday.

Military commanders say they must have at least two carriers in the Mediterranean to support any military operation against Libya, the sources said.

On Wednesday, the sources said "options are now being maintained" to reform a battle group and head for stations off the Libyan coast.

The disclosure of the Navy actions came as President Reagan was telling newspaper editors the United States is "not going to just sit here and hold still" in the wake of renewed terrorist attacks against Americans in Europe.

Reagan said Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy is "definitely a suspect" in the latest fatal bombings aboard a TWA jetliner over Greece and in a West Berlin nightclub.

The president refused to say what he plans to do, other than continue to gather evidence about the incidents and seek the support of European allies.

Shortly before the president's appearance, a senior administration official disclosed that U.S. intelligence agencies had learned Khadafy was encouraging his embassies to guide new terrorist attacks against the United States and that Reagan administration officials had agreed there must be retaliation.

The Pentagon, for its part, refused most of the day to discuss the status of the carrier Coral Sea, although Pentagon sources disclosed early Wednesday the ship had been told to scrap its plans to return home and remain in port.

Finally, on Wednesday night, the Pentagon issued a prepared statement confirming the Coral Sea would not be sailing for the United States anytime soon.

"The Coral Sea battle group, which was scheduled to end its routine deployment to the Mediterranean shortly, has been extended for an indefinite period to maintain the existing naval presence in the Mediterranean," the Defense Department said.

The Pentagon refused to elaborate further on the decision, saying only that the Defense Department wanted "to maintain a larger naval presence than would be provided by the (carrier) America battle group alone."

The Pentagon also declined to say when the Coral Sea might depart Malaga, but sources said that could happen as early as today.

The carrier America, meantime, left the port of Livorno, Italy, as scheduled Wednesday. That ship was told to remain under way at sea instead of heading toward a second port call in Cannes, France.

"It has become clear over the past 24 hours that we're going to keep our options open for the moment by keeping two carriers over there," said one source.

Pentagon keeping more of its weapons program secret

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon, battling Soviet spies on one flank and congressional budget-cutters on another, is keeping more and more of its weapons programs secret, a trend that critics say stifles debate on how the military spends its money.

About $22.5 billion out of a proposed fiscal year 1987 defense budget of $320.3 billion will go for classified weapons, secret research and intelligence programs for which no explanation is offered either the public or Congress beyond briefings restricted largely to senior senators and representatives.

The classified military budget was $4.6 billion out of $158 billion in total defense spending in fiscal 1981, which was authorized before Ronald Reagan took office. The calculations were made in a recent article in the weekly National Journal.

Pentagon and congressional officials refuse to estimate the cost of "black programs," which include a variety of "Stealth" bombers, fighters, helicopters, cruise missiles and other exotic hardware.

The most widely publicized of them is the Advanced Technology Bomber, which will use Stealth technology to hide from enemy radar. Among the others are an advanced Navy attack plane, a Stealth cruise missile, a Stealth helicopter code-named "grassblade" for the Army and a fighter reportedly built for the Air Force by Lockheed.

Other secret programs reportedly include Navy projects to develop more silent submarines, and an Army program to build anti-tactical missiles to hit short-range Soviet ballistic missiles, such as the SS-21 and SS-23.

One technique for hiding costs is to label the projects "special improvements," such as the HAVE program to incorporate Stealth technology into existing Air Force planes.

The administration says it keeps the weapons programs secret not to hide them from congressional scrutiny, but to avoid tipping the Soviets on the direction of U.S. military technology.

"Congress is fully informed on the so-called 'black programs,'" Pentagon spokesman Fred Hoffman said in a recent interview.

The chairmen, ranking minority members and senior staff of subcommittees dealing with military matters get classified briefings on defense budget secrets, and there have been closed hearings on some programs, according to Hoffman and congressional sources.

The tight rein on knowledge about the new weapons has aroused some congressional concern, however, prompting one House panel to complain in January about "the rapidly increasing size of the Air Force's so-called 'black' programs and the oversight of the programs."

Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the Oversight and Investigations subcommittee of the Committee on Energy and Commerce, is negotiating with the Pentagon to crack down on contractors whom he has accused of "mischarging, overcharging and, in some cases, engaging in outright illegal activities" on black programs.

A backer of the black programs, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, has hailed them as "tremendously successful in keeping information of unprecedented military value from the pages of our newspapers and the halls of various rumor mills in town."

Nuclear bomb test conducted after weather delays, protests

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A nuclear test was conducted in the Nevada desert just after dawn today following two days of weather delays and growing protests among peace groups.

The test, code-named Mighty Oak, went off without incident, said Energy Department spokesman Jack Campbell.

It was conducted 1300 feet underground in a tunnel honed in Rainier Mesa, 93 miles northwest of Las Vegas.

The test, put officially at less than 20 kilotons, was believed to have an explosive punch of about 1,300 pounds of TNT — ranking it among the smaller blasts at the sprawling test site.

It was described as a weapons effects test. Such tests are designed to determine the ability of U.S. space and military hardware to survive a nuclear blast.

The Soviet Union has carried out a unilateral test moratorium since Aug. 6, and there has been pressure in Congress for the United States to join in a test ban. The Reagan administration has said the Soviets imposed the moratorium because they had completed their tests. Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has said the Soviets would resume testing if the United States continues its tests.

The test had sparked three days of protests at the Nevada Test Site. Fourteen people were arrested on the site this week while 84 peace demonstrators were arrested at the gates to the site. All were charged with trespassing.

Campbell said no protesters were near ground zero where today's test was detonated.

Energy Department officials had warned that heavily armed guards were under orders to shoot under certain circumstances.

"Our guard force has standing orders," said DOE spokesman Dave Miller. "If your life is in danger you are authorized to shoot to kill. If there is an attempt to steal nuclear weapons you are authorized to shoot to kill."

A source in Washington who spoke on condition of anonymity said winds rather than protesters or political pressures were to blame for the two days of delays in conducting the test.

the jury panel is called and noted that jurors are instructed not to take into account news accounts.

"We have to trust people to do what they tell us they're able to do," the prosecutor said of potential jurors.

Hamilton said in his closing argument that Cain should adopt procedures to protect the defendant prior to the trial. He said publicity may have died down by the time the case is set for trial.

"Let's at least give it a shot," he said. "Set the case for trial in a couple months and see where we are then."

The prosecutor noted two capital murder cases have been tried in the Amarillo area recently despite extensive news coverage. Norris responded that events have a greater impact in smaller towns like Pampa.

Norris also called Pampa News Managing Editor Wally Simmons to the stand. Simmons testified the newspaper's circulation inside Gray County is over 7,000 copies daily and over 7,400 on Sunday. He said he did not know how many readers the newspaper reaches beyond the circulation figures.

"You'd have to determine how many people in a family read the newspaper," Simmons said.

Simmons also testified the paper made no attempt to prejudice the population and did attempt to contact Etheredge and other members of the Bethany Trust board of directors in order to learn their side of the story.

Following the hearing, Norris said he will begin investigatory work in preparation for trial.

"We lost Pearl Harbor, too," he said of Cain's ruling.

Etheredge's wife, Debbie, who also faces several charges of misapplication of fiduciary property but is out on bond, was in attendance at the hearing. Asked if she planned to request a change of venue like her husband she shook her head no and said, "You'll have to talk to my attorney, Jim Fling."

Fling, of Shamrock, could not be reached for comment.

Austin considers sanctuary plan

AUSTIN (AP) — As the Austin City Council prepared for a public hearing on a plan to make the city a sanctuary for political refugees from Central America, a federal official said such action is a sham.

Richard Casillas, district director for the federal Immigration and Naturalization Service, said he is considering "bringing up a load of (Central Americans) and dumping them on the City Council's door ... and then we'll see how big the city's heart really is."

GOP candidates hit hard at controversial issues

By The Associated Press

As the Republican gubernatorial primary race heats up, Kent Hance and Bill Clements are taking stands on the sanctuary movement, school regulation and other issues while fellow candidate Tom Loeffler is calling for an oil import fee.

Hance said he was "stunned" at the action of the Austin city council in calling a hearing on a proposed resolution to make the city a sanctuary for illegal aliens from Central America.

"The wrong signal is sent when the government of our capital city puts out a welcome mat for illegal aliens," Hance told a news conference. He said "once it happens here, it could happen throughout the state."

Clements said in a release he was "adamantly opposed" to the state increasing its control over private and church schools. Currently, the state only requires that private and church schools teach a course in citizenship.

The former governor, Hance and U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, the third GOP gubernatorial candidate, promised to appear at a Thursday morning rally before a hearing of a State Board of Education committee that will take up that issue.

U.S. Rep. Loeffler, in a Washington press conference Wednesday, called for an oil import fee and government purchases of domestic crude oil for the Strategic Petroleum Reserve.

Loeffler said the Reagan administration's free-market approach will not solve oil problems.

"It is not just a Texas problem. It is a national problem, a national security problem," said Loeffler, R-Hunt. "What I want to see is that we maintain an industry that is so vital to our country."

"The administration has been in opposition, but this isn't the first time that I have been on the opposite side of the administration, and time after time that I have taken them to task, we've won."

Loeffler said he was introducing legislation to establish a $5-a-barrel import tax on crude oil and $10-a-barrel tax on petroleum products. The import fee would be non-variable and there would be no exemptions for Mexico or Canada as under other similar proposals.

Loeffler's proposed legislation would also increase purchases for the Strategic Petroleum Reserve by 300,000 barrels per day, to 750 million barrels. The oil would be purchased from domestic "stripper" wells, which produce 10 barrels a day or less.

The reserve was established during the 1970s as a hedge against an oil embargo by exporting nations.

Meanwhile, Gov. Mark White, the top Democratic candidate answered questions Thursday about a statement made by political extremist Lyndon LaRouche that he was "very happy" with White's performance as governor.

"Maybe he's only half crazy," replied Ann Arnold, White's press secretary in response to LaRouche's statement.

On still another political angle, Clements told a luncheon of young Austin businessmen that White should call a special session of the Legislature to consider liability insurance problems.

Clements said he believed "the responsibility for educating children should rest squarely on the back of the parents. There is a false idea in some circles that good education requires professional, state-certified educators."

State Treasurer Ann Richards endorsed Dallas state Sen. Oscar Mauzy as a Democratic candidate for the Texas Supreme Court, saying "he's the kind of person you want on the Supreme Court."

She said he was responsible for the Code of Ethics for public officials and wrote the legislation that created the Commission on Judicial Conduct.

Elsewhere in Supreme Court races, a candidate said the refusal of two Texas Supreme Court justices to honor legislative subpoenas confuses the public and raises doubts about the state's entire judicial system.

"I think it casts a shadow long and dark across the entire Texas judiciary," said District Judge Nathan L. Hecht of Dallas.

Hecht wrote a letter to Chief Justice John L. Hill, urging high court cooperation with a House Judicial Affairs Committee investigation into the transfer of cases out of a San Antonio appeals court.

Jury finds Clifton principal guilty in wife's ratshot death

MERIDIAN, Texas (AP) — Former Clifton high school principal Joe D. Bryan has been sentenced to 99 years in prison after being convicted of fatally shooting his wife four times with a pistol loaded with ratshot.

Bryan, 45, was sentenced and fined a maximum of $10,000 by a state jury Wednesday. Free on $50,000 bond since his Oct. 23 arrest, he was taken to the Bosque County Jail for transfer to Texas Department of Corrections.

The earliest he will be eligible for parole is in 20 years.

Defense attorney Charles McDonald said he would appeal. "He still tells the whole world that he has not shown that lady anything but love," McDonald said of Bryan, who was at a conference in Austin around the time of the slaying.

Bryan showed no emotion when the verdict was read and appeared composed when testifying during the punishment phase of the trial. "By my oath to my Saviour and my God, I did not kill Mickey," Bryan said to jurors while asking for leniency during the punishment phase.

A juror, who asked to remain unidentified, later told the Waco Tribune-Herald that the panel believed all the circumstantial evidence and testimony considered together pointed to Bryan's guilt.

"There was no other evidence that pointed in another direction," she said. "All 11 of us agreed he was guilty."

Prosecutors argued that Bryan's private life did not match his public life, which was described as "Christian, caring and honest" by more than 30 character witnesses Tuesday.

Bryan had been suspended with pay as principal at Clifton High School pending his trial, but he resigned about two weeks ago when Clifton school board members decided against renewing his contract.

Mickey Bryan, 44, a fourth-grade teacher at Clifton Elementary, was shot three times in the face and once in the abdomen, all at close range, with ratshot pellets the morning of Oct. 15 in her Clifton bedroom. The murder weapon never was found, but investigators believe she was killed with Bryan's .38-caliber pistol, which he told them he kept loaded with ratshot on the bedstand.

A key piece of evidence against Bryan was a flashlight found in his car trunk. The flashlight was splattered with Group O blood, Mrs. Bryan's blood type, and embedded with specks of plastic similar to pieces of ratshot casing found at the murder scene.

Prosecutor Garry Lowellen referred to the flashlight during final arguments as proof that Bryan's car was at the murder scene.

A lab expert testified that a drop of blood was found on a pair of plastic gloves found in a box in the trunk of Bryan's car — the same box in which the flashlight was discovered.

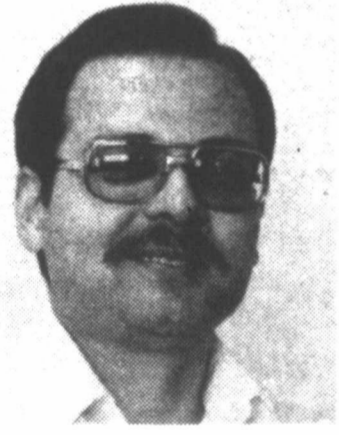

It was proven that Bryan was at a principal's conference in Austin Oct. 14, but prosecutors said he drove to Clifton early Oct. 15, killed his wife, and returned to Austin.

Rainy days and daydreams

Hanging around, nothing to do but frown. Rainy days and Mondays always get me down.

Yesterday was ushered in by that dreary, grayish light that filters the sun's gold and sky's blue from view on rainy morns.

Well, it wasn't exactly raining when I crawled out of bed around 7 a.m. But it looked very portentous for rain. And it seemed like it should be one of those days when you can peek out the window, see the leaden skies and just turn back over for a few more hours' sleep.

Life ain't always fair, however, and I had too many things to do. Besides, I've threatened Wally and Fred too many times that I might call in sick one day — I haven't missed a day yet because of illness here — and I knew they would recognize my cries of "wolf."

So I rolled out of bed — as well as you can "roll" out of a waterbed, anyway — and went about my business.

Normally, at work I can fairly well ignore what's happening weatherwise outside. I'm stuck back in a corner behind cubicle walls, so I isolate myself for most of the day ignorant of the sunny weather beckoning me to dream up an assignment at a nearby lake or unconcerned about whether I remembered to close windows at home in case it's raining.

But this week I've been substituting for Dee Dee while she's out of town. I've been spending most of my time at her desk, and that offers me a view between the editorial department partitions through the front windows.

And there the gray skies drifted across my vision yesterday, tempting me away from my work.

Ordinarily, it's the sunny blue skies that create dreams in my heads — lakes, rivers, mountain trails, private beaches, isolated South Seas islands or similar places where I can envision myself like Adam back in some Edenic state, maybe allowing a good friend or two, no more, for company.

But there's something different about a semi-drizzly day in spring. Rainy days in October and November are depressing, reminding us that bitterly cold and windy days will soon warn us of that barbed wire fence too near the North Pole, and that lake trips and park picnics will be abandoned for awhile.

Spring rains, however, offer a kind of cleansing. Though the sun is blotted momentarily, we know that winter snows — barring an unusual late-season blizzard, not unknown in the Panhandle — are gone, that warm days will dominate the weather ahead, that flowers and grass will follow April showers.

A cool day in early spring also suggests the enjoyment of perhaps getting together with family or a close friend for a bowl of hot chili and good conversation, saying goodbye to winter.

Such days as yesterday was also proffer summer's nearness, with vacations ahead, barbecue get-togethers at a lake, camping expeditions, lazy afternoons sunning in the park, the opening of the swimming pool, bicycle rides, family reunions to plan and other such vistas.

It was those kind of thoughts that darted through my mind yesterday as I gazed longingly at the gray skies and felt the cool air the few times I was able to step outside.

So, no, rainy days don't always get me down. Mondays, though? That's another column.

Committee sets showdown with Supreme Court

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — If subpoenaed Texas Supreme Court justices fail to show up to testify at a House committee hearing, the panel could cite them for contempt or force them to appear under arrest, a state lawmaker said.

State Rep. Frank Tejada said he hopes the House Committee on Judicial Affairs will not have to go to such lengths to get Associate Justices C.L. Ray and William Kilgarlin to testify at a Friday hearing.

The committee is investigating alleged improprieties by Ray and is looking into actions by two of Kilgarlin's briefing attorneys.

"It is my hope they will respond just like any other citizen," Tejada said Wednesday.

Ray and Kilgarlin earlier sent a letter to Tejada, who chairs the House committee, saying they would not honor subpoenas to testify.

In the letter, the associate justices suggested the investigation is politically motivated.

But Tejada, who is running against state Rep. Tommy Adkisson for a Senate seat, denied the charge.

"There are no politics involved," said Tejada, D-San Antonio. "I take my job and oath of office very seriously."

Tejada said the justices are not above the law and his committee is "on solid legal ground" in subpoenaing them.

Arguments by the justices that they are protected from such subpoenas because of the constitutional separation of powers are "a smoke screen, a red herring and (don't) hold water," Tejada said.

If the judges don't show up at the committee meeting, Tejada said they "could be held in contempt of the legislature."

Also, he said, "We as a committee could issue a writ of attachment and have them brought physically to the committee. Peace officers would be sent."

Tejada said he did not know what action he would recommend to the committee.

Neither Ray, Kilgarlin nor Chief Justice John Hill returned telephone calls from the Associated Press Wednesday. Randall "Buck" Wood, an attorney hired by Ray and Kilgarlin, also failed to return calls.

Tejada's committee is investigating allegations Ray engineered the transfer of two multi-million dollar cases from a San Antonio appeals court to other appellate courts.

Ray allegedly acted at the request of San Antonio lawyer Pat Maloney Sr., an attorney in the cases who contributed $10,000 to Ray's past campaign.

Tejada said the committee also is looking into allegations Ray solicited campaign funds from litigants in a case pending before the Texas Supreme Court.

Hill, who Tejada said also would be subpoenaed, has suggested an open discussion of the allegations at the Supreme Court offices.

But Tejada said such a session would not be acceptable.

"The public has a right to know and the public demands to know," Tejada said.

Wagon train hits halfway point

FORT HANCOCK, Texas (AP) — The Texas Wagon Train is rolling across the dusty plains of West Texas at the halfway mark of the statewide tour.

"We're exactly on schedule. We're out in West Texas and will be in El Paso on Saturday, train spokeswoman Lou Mallory said Wednesday.

The West Texas heat and dust hasn't been a problem, said Mallory, who joins the trail ride every weekend.

"They're pretty prepared," she said. "We've been generally leaving at the same time every day (8 a.m.). We travel between 15 and 30 miles a day."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Self-promotion still name of the game

Californian Sen. Pete Wilson is co-sponsoring a new bill in Congress, but you may not be able to read about it in congressional newsletters. What Wilson wants to do is cut off the flow of taxpayer dollars to mail those particular freebies, used by senators and representatives alike to tout themselves and their pet interests.

Rep. Wilson calls them thinly-disguised campaign literature, which is pretty much right on the money. But the timing of Wilson's action makes the bill appear to be a swipe at his California colleague, Democratic Sen. Alan Cranston, who is up for re-election this fall.

Cranston, according to a recent congressional study, is the biggest of the bigtime newsletter spenders — he forced the nation's taxpayers to foot a $1.6 million postage bill during the period between July and September 1985. Wilson himself has had trouble abstaining from free mailing — a mass mailing he sent out in February 1985 cost taxpayers about $1 million.

Wilson's bill may well be little more than a slap at Cranston because cutting off free postage for newsletters only scratches at the surface of a truly astonishing variety of taxpayer-financed congressional self-promotion.

The bill wouldn't end free congressional postage, just stipulate that it couldn't be used to mail the newsletters, which are also written and printed at taxpayer expense. And it wouldn't shut down the radio and broadcast studios that are provided to congressmen at taxpayer expense so they can send self-promotional clips disguised as "news" to stations back in their home districts.

The Senate Rules Committee has estimated that Congress will spend $144 million in postage for mass mailing this year, and Wilson estimates that unsolicited newsletters account for 75 percent of that figure.

Does this mean that taxpayers will save $108 million if the bill passes? Don't bet on it. If congressmen can't mail their newsletters, it's a sure bet they'll use the money to send out other types of self-promotional material that doesn't fit whatever definition of "newsletter" the bill embraces. Spending might even rise because newsletters are a reasonably cost-effective way of reaching a lot of people with the same message (leaving aside the worthiness of the message itself).

Wilson's bill comes at a time when Congress is loudly proclaiming its concern about deficits, and creates the appearance that the politicians are actually doing something to curb their excessive spending. They aren't. This bill, like so many others, does nothing to end the spendthrift ways of Congress. It does, however, give its sponsors an excuse to get their names in the news, if not in their newsletters.

That, after all, is the bottom line of self-promotion.

Greed among the elderly

When I testified before the Michigan House Appropriations Committee on the issue of a balanced-budget amendment to the U.S. Constitution, I expected to find nothing but lawyers and other economists before the panel. I was wrong. There was a representative of the American Association of Retired Persons offering testimony. That surprised me. It had not occurred to me that the AARP would have an opinion on the matter.

The AARP's spokesman told the committee that his group, which has 22 million members, was opposed to a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget. Their concern, he argued, was that such an amendment might result in a reduction in spending on programs aimed at America's older citizens.

The AARP is currently hard at work fighting the Reagan administration's fiscal-year 1987 budget. Because the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law has put pressure on Congress to control spending or face automatic across-the-board budget cuts, the AARP is trying to find ways to justify keeping $10 billion the President wants to cut from the federal budget in the area of Medicare, Social Security administration, federal housing for the elderly, nutrition projects and other programs. Their solution? Maintain spending on the programs they want and pay for it by raising taxes and spending less on defense than the President has requested.

On the few occasions when I have used this space to point out that even if the administration had succeeded in getting all it has requested for national defense — which, by the way, it has not — defense spending would still be below what it was — relative to Gross National Product — during the period 1954-1964, I have received letters from older readers complaining that too much was being spent on defense and not enough on programs for the elderly. Given the fact that the growth rate of spending for income transfers to the elderly — including Social Security, Civil Service Retirement, and Military Retirement — has dwarfed the growth rate in defense spending, the complaint from the senior-set surprised me. Now that the AARP is pushing for less spending for defense and more for the elderly in their fight against the Reagan budget, it is all clear. America's current crop of retired people are the first true children of the welfare state. And, as one should fully expect from a welfare state, they have absolutely no interest in the future of their country or of their fellow citizens. They are only interested in themselves and their growing share of the federal pie.

It's hard to talk about the elderly in terms such as greed and selfishness. If one is to believe what one hears and sees in the popular media, it's only the younger generation which is motivated by greed. That, after all, is what the media caricature of the so-called YUPPY generation is all about — their greed and selfishness. I've been a college professor for 21 and I've seen less greed and selfishness in younger people than I think I'm seeing in today's crop of welfare-bred older people. (Social Security is the centerpiece of the modern welfare state. Despite what many older people seem to want to believe, their monthly social security check does not come from some fund created by taxes extracted from their labor during their working years. It comes from the taxes extracted from the labor of today's younger working generation. It's a welfare check as sure as an AFDC recipient's check is a welfare check.)

As I look around and see how today's young people — especially young people in their 20's — are doing, it's hard not to conclude that they are not faring as well as their parents did at the same age. My own daughter, who is 28 years old, is, I believe, a fairly typical example.

My daughter is single, a college graduate, and a professional. Her weekly take-home pay is three times what mine was when I was her age. She doesn't own her own house. When I was her age I did. Her monthly rent is 3.5 times what I paid for a two-story colonial — including principle, interest, taxes and insurance. Considering that I was able to deduct taxes and interest in computing my income taxes, her real housing costs are actually more than 3.5 times what I had to pay. When I was her age I owned two cars. She owns one. My combined monthly payments for two cars in 1964 was $120. For one car she pays 2.3 times more — and she drives a Volkswagen Jetta. She's far from being poor, but it's going to take her a long time to live as well as I did — along with many others of my generation — at the same age as she is now.

When, if God wills, I reach age 65, I will receive more from Social Security than I paid in. That will not be true for my daughter's generation. Her generation is the one which is paying for the welfare checks being received by members of the AARP. Is it asking too much for today's older people to cooperate in reducing federal spending? Is it asking too much for today's over-65 age group to cooperate in assuring that our nation will have sufficient strength to maintain national defense? I don't think so.

Apparently the AARP and the people it represents don't believe that the elderly should be asked to give up a thing for future generations so obviously they won't agree with what I've said. But I still think it has to be said.

Dying dogs and economics

Julie Klug of Atlanta, Ga., had this 3-month-old puppy named Jessie, who was part Lhasa Apso and part who-knows.

A couple of Sundays ago, Jessie became sick. "She was fine at 5 o'clock," said Julie. "But by 11, my dog was very sick."

Jessie couldn't walk. She had gone blind. She was bleeding from the rectum.

Julie called her vet. Because of the hour, he referred her to the Animal Emergency Clinic, which operates overnight.

Mrs. Klug's sister-in-law took Jessie to the hospital. Here was the deal:

The hospital required a $30 deposit for the examination fee. Mrs. Klug's sister-in-law had the money.

But the vet on duty, Dr. Brian McKinley, also said, according to Mrs. Klug, he would have to have an additional $118 up front to begin treatment of the dog. Mrs. Klug's sister-in-law did not have much and neither did Mrs. Klug. We are not talking about high rollers here.

That's not the way McKinley remembers it, however.

"I asked Mrs. Klug by phone how much she wanted to pay and I told her I would see what I could do given the amount." McKinley said he had no recollection of a precise fee of $118.

"I didn't know if we could raise any more money that quickly," said Julie Klug, "so I asked what else I could do if I couldn't raise the money."

"The vet said I could come and get the puppy if I couldn't pay. I asked him if he thought the dog would make it through the night until I could get to my regular vet. He said he didn't think so."

Julie Klug hung up the phone and went searching for more cash. It wasn't long, however, until Dr. McKinley called her to say Jessie was dead.

"I asked him what she died of," said Mrs. Klug. "He said he didn't know."

Here is the vet's side: "It's easy for people to sit back and judge here," said Dr. McKinley. "But if there wasn't a prepayment policy, most people wouldn't pay if their pet later dies. People bring pets here and just abandon them."

"We have to have a prepayment policy. I love animals. That's why I'm a vet. I have a houseful of animals myself. This is not my policy. It's the hospital's policy."

Dr. Cecil Johnson was Jessie's regular vet. He said it was too late to do an autopsy on the dog. He thinks Jessie died of Parvo, an infectious disease.

"It's hard to collect an accounts receivable if an animal dies," he said. "I hate to charge when I lose an animal, but if you don't charge, it's almost an admission that you did something wrong."

"It is an unfortunate thing that economics play such a big part in veterinary medicine, but they do."

I asked him what he would have done had Jessie been brought to him.

"My feeling in an emergency situation," he said, "would be to stabilize the animal and get it out of pain without thought of money, then discuss economics."

Pick your own heavy here. All I know is that if a veterinarian wouldn't treat my sick dog because I didn't have the money, I would later pick out some opportunity to hit him in the mouth.

That's my opinion, and I'm sticking to it.

National boom misses some regions

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Although the conventional wisdom holds that the nation's economy is booming, acute regional recessions linked to the plight of particular industries are painfully apparent in almost every section of the country.

By far the best known and certainly the most widespread of those sectional economic dislocations is the severe financial crisis confronting many farmers in the Midwest.

In the Rocky Mountains, the collapse of oil prices and a slump in the mining industry have adversely affected the economy. Similarly, the Pacific Northwest has been devastated by the timber industry's profound difficulties.

The states bordering the Great Lakes continue to suffer along with the deeply troubled auto and steel industries. In North and South Carolina, as well as elsewhere in the Southeast, the textile industry has faltered badly.

Perhaps the only economic forecasting service to identify the phenomenon of regional recessions is Sindlinger & Co., Inc., a 32-year-old firm in Wallingford, Pa. that specializes in conducting surveys to measure consumer confidence.

According to Sindlinger, 28 of the 48 contiguous states already are in a recession while an additional three states are in a precarious "borderline" condition and two others are approaching "borderline" status.

When Sindlinger's data is transferred to a map of the nation, it produces a disturbing portrait of a country with a bifurcated economy. Most notable among the relatively few states not immediately threatened by recession are those where public opinion is heavily influenced, if not formulated.

They are California and the urban corridor that begins in southern New Hampshire and stretches from Boston through New York to northern Virginia.

Is it possible that a deep and wide economic decline has gone unnoticed by "bi-coastal" opinion-makers who regularly fly over but seldom visit the rest of the country?

There is some statistical evidence to suggest that indeed may be occurring. The business productivity rate, the principal measure of the nation's efficiency in producing goods and services, declined 0.2 percent during all of 1985.

Similarly, the gross national product grew at a sluggish 2.3 percent last year — substantially below the optimistic forecasts and slower than at any time since the recession year of 1982.

Especially striking about the regional recessions is the fact that international rather than domestic causes are the dominant contributing factors — further evidence of the extent to which this country has become integrated into the global economy.

Reagan calls Khadafy names, but isn't ready to pin terrorist bombings on Libyan strongman

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Reagan is calling Moammar Khadafy names but says he isn't yet ready to blame the Libyan strongman for the latest terrorist attacks on Americans.

"We're gathering evidence as fast as we can," Reagan told a nationally broadcast news conference Wednesday night. And he told a group of editors earlier in the day Khadafy "is definitely a suspect" in the fatal bombings aboard a TWA jetliner over Greece and in a West Berlin nightclub.

But he said, "We're continuing with our intelligence work and gathering evidence on these most recent attacks, and we're not ready yet to speak on that."

Reagan nonetheless called Khadafy "this mad dog of the Middle East," a line he said he got from a television news report. Vice President George Bush had used the "mad dog" description earlier in the day when speaking to American sailors aboard an aircraft carrier in the Gulf of Oman.

When a reporter quoted former President Jim my Carter as calling Khadafy a polecat, Reagan said, "Everyone is entitled to call him whatever animal they want, but I think he's more than a bad smell."

In American usage, a polecat is a skunk. Asked about reports that he already had decided to retaliate, Reagan said to answer that would be "like talking about battle plans or something" — which he doesn't discuss. But he said his policy has been "that if and when we could specifically identify someone responsible for one of these acts, we would respond."

If he can identify those responsible for the Berlin bombing, in which an American Army sergeant was killed and some 50 Americans were wounded, Reagan said, "then I think we respond."

Earlier in the day, Reagan told the American Society of Newspaper Editors the United States is "not going to just sit here and hold still" amid mounting threats against Americans.

Reagan said he isn't overlooking the possibility Khadafy might try to strike at targets inside the United States, adding, "We're going to be on the alert and on guard for anything he might do."

On other subjects raised at the news conference, the president:

—Said June "is just about out" as a date for his second summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, but that July is still a possibility. Or, he said, the two leaders could meet after the U.S. congressional elections in November.

—Defended Vice President George Bush against critics who charged he has strayed from the administration line by suggesting something must be done to stabilize world oil prices.

"I have made it a point to get exactly and specifically what he said," Reagan told reporters, "and I can't find myself quarreling with any of the remarks he's made."

The president continued to oppose intervention in the free market but said nations must be alert to efforts by one or more oil-producing countries to drive prices down, gain a monopoly, then push them back up.

—Said that "contrary to what some people think" his administration has been working constantly to win the release of six Americans kidnapped in Lebanon.

"The best I can say to you is that with all the information we have, it indicates that they are well," Reagan said, adding he "would hesitate to think that anything that we might do in retaliation" for the most recent terrorist acts would affect their well-being.

—Refused to discuss a report that American Stinger missiles had been covertly supplied to Angolan rebels, saying he would not want to tip their enemies to what weapons the rebels may or may not have.

—Said he hoped his administration could propose building a fourth shuttle to replace the Challenger, which was destroyed in an explosion Jan. 28. He also denied the White House had pressured the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to launch the ill-fated Challenger.

Reagan defends bush for statements on oil prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he and Vice President George Bush both believe the market should determine oil prices, despite Bush's statement that the cost of oil should not be permitted a "continued free fall."

Reagan's remarks at a news conference Wednesday night were his first public comment on Bush's controversial oil price declarations during the vice president's current tour of the Middle East.

"I have made a point to get exactly and specifically what he said. And I can't find myself quarreling with any of the remarks he's made," the president said.

While on his way to Saudi Arabia, Bush said of falling oil prices, "I think it is essential that we talk about stability and that we not just have a continued free fall like a parachutist jumping out without a parachute, and that's what essentially has happened to the price of crude oil in recent months."

He also said that while he would not seek a cut in Saudi oil production to drive prices back up, "Clearly I will be saying that stability in the market is a very important thing, and I will be selling very hard in terms of our own domestic interests and thus the interest of our national security."

Bush's remarks set off a surge in oil prices and prompted criticism in Congress. An administration official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said this week that the vice president "did cross the line enough to be misunderstood" and "made it look like we were trying to fix prices."

Reagan, however, said both he and Bush were saying "the free marketplace is the one, the answer to this."

He said the vice president also was making the point that "if we suddenly, however, have made it uneconomic to produce oil in our own country to the point that we have to go back to further imports, we have, among other things, endangered our own national security."

"This is all that he's talking about," the president said. "But we're saying the same thing."

Khadafy poses dilemma for the rattled western alliance

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

Whatever he has or hasn't done, Moammar Khadafy, unpredictable leader of an underdeveloped land, has managed to shake the superstructure of the Western alliance.

When the Western powers sit down in Tokyo next month for their annual summit, the desert nomad's son will be the invisible man, setting the agenda with his threats of worldwide anti-American terrorism.

Time and again since December, the United States and its West European allies have quarreled, discreetly but sharply, over what to do about the Libyan: Military reprisals? Economic penalties? Quiet diplomacy?

The Americans have pushed for firm retaliation, and the Europeans — with different interests, different views — have pushed back.

"We see that always, with these American economic embargoes, we are forced into it," a resentful West German diplomat said in a recent Bonn interview.

But Europeans sound frustrated, too.

A West German conservative, in a high-ranking security position, said he had no doubt Khadafy's government has its hands in Middle Eastern and European terrorism, and "we have to implement tangible measures, measures they really feel."

But, he added, "there is just no hard evidence, and it's hard to find."

The two officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, were among more than a dozen European specialists interviewed recently about international terrorism.

The interviews took place before last week's bombings of a TWA jetliner and a West Berlin nightclub packed with American GIs — attacks the U.S. administration links to Libya. On Wednesday, West Germany expelled two Libyan diplomats, but Bonn officials said their government was still unlikely to join in U.S. economic sanctions against Libya.

Their continued reluctance led Richard Burt, U.S. ambassador to Bonn, to criticize the West Europeans for an "overly parochial" attitude toward the terrorist threat. Less openly, the Americans were grumbling that the

AP News Analysis

West Europeans are worried more about their trade with Libya — $12 billion last year — than about security, an assertion some Europeans privately confirm.

When the Reagan administration cut off all U.S. commerce with Libya after last December's Rome-Vienna airport massacres, the Europeans did not go along.

When the U.S. 6th Fleet clashed with Libyan forces in the Gulf of Sidra last month, Italy, Greece and other U.S. partners in the Mediterranean counseled American restraint.

And when U.S. officials sought to tie last week's bombings to Libya, the NATO partners balked at joining the sharp-edged American rhetoric against Khadafy.

For years, the United States has alleged that Libya provides safe haven, money and arms for terrorists. Khadafy's close ties with radical Palestinian groups are unquestioned. But Washington has produced little concrete evidence — at least publicly — directly linking the Libyans to the attacks.

American officials say they have confidential information that makes the connection — reportedly intercepted Libyan radio messages. But Khadafy dared anyone to publish a message said to congratulate Libyan diplomats in East Germany for carrying out last weekend's Berlin bombing.

When the Americans presented such material to the Bonn government this week, the West Germans seemed unimpressed.

Italy has evidence of Libyan financial and logistical support for Palestinian terrorists, he said, "but not to the point to prove to us that Libya is behind their acts."

NOT SITTING STILL — President Reagan gestures during a news conference at the White House Wednesday night. Reagan said he is not going to "sit and hold still" amid mounting threats from Libya's Moammar Khadafy. (AP Laserphoto)

Two Army helicopters crash, eight killed

HINESVILLE, Ga. (AP)—Two Army helicopters crashed Wednesday night at Fort Stewart Army Base, killing all eight soldiers aboard, an Army spokesman said.

A CH-47-D helicopter, known as a Chinook, crashed in a remote area of the post about 9 p.m., killing all six people aboard, said Col. James Arnold.

An AH-1S helicopter, known as a Cobra, crashed and burned about the same time, killing both soldiers aboard, Arnold said.

The Chinook crashed in a wooded, swampy area near the edge of the base that is "very difficult to get into," said Arnold, adding that the helicopters were on routine missions.

"The crashes probably were related. They were very close to each other. They happened at the same time. But how they occurred we don't know," he said.

The identities of the eight soldiers, who were stationed at the post, were not immediately available, Arnold said.

A team from Fort Rucker, Ala., was to arrive Thursday morning to conduct the official Army investigation, Arnold said.

Waldheim's son is trying to dispel Nazi allegations

WASHINGTON (AP)—The son of former United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim is pleading his father's case with U.S. officials, attempting to put to rest allegations of wartime complicity with Nazis in atrocities against Yugoslav partisans.

Following a half-hour meeting Wednesday at the Justice Department, Gerhard Waldheim said his father "has an impeccable anti-Nazi record" and faced death if he had objected when drafted into the German army during World War II.

The 38-year-old Austrian banker is trying to persuade the United States not to place his father on an immigration "watch list" that would bar him from entering the country.

Kurt Waldheim, 67, is in the midst of an election campaign for president of Austria, his second bid for the presidency.

Waldheim served as U.N. chief for 10 years, but was blocked in his 1981 try for an unprecedented third term by China, which insisted on a Third World candidate and vetoed Waldheim during 16 inconclusive rounds of Security Council balloting.

His father's "credibility is definitely not ruined," Gerhard Waldheim told reporters. "We feel that we have clarified ... (the allegations) completely in Austria. The clarification ... in Austria has not gotten here."

The younger Waldheim's discussions were with Assistant Attorney General Stephen Trott, head of the criminal division, and Neal Sher, director of the department's Office of Special Investigations. OSI, which is part of the criminal division, will decide in the next week or so whether evidence of Waldheim's wartime activities is sufficient to warrant a ban on his entering the United States.

Gerhard Waldheim initiated the contact with the Justice Department and plans to remain in the United States for several days. He presented Trott and Sher with a 13-page, point-by-point rebuttal by his father of wartime documents from Yugoslavia which tie Waldheim to the massacre of Yugoslav partisans.

"Above all, my father hated war stories," Waldheim said when asked why his father omitted mention of his service in the Balkans in his recently published memoirs.

From the time his father was wounded on the Russian front in 1941, "the only thing he did were desk jobs, as an interpreter in southern Montenegro, then in Greece, as a staff officer at high command of the army in the Balkans."

Vietnamese turn over 21 sets of remains

HANOI, Vietnam (AP)—The communist government today turned over to the United States 21 sets of remains believed to be those of Americans missing since the Vietnam War.

Uniformed U.S. servicemen lined both sides of a C-141 cargo plane and saluted as the aluminum caskets were gently loaded into the aircraft's dark belly for the trip to Honolulu.

An American flag, folded in a tidy triangle, lay atop each casket.

Meeting with the Americans at Hanoi's Noi Bai International Airport, Vietnamese officials also handed over six identification tags and a small stack of identification cards of U.S. servicemen listed as missing in action, officials said.

Most of the tags and cards belonged with the 21 sets of remains, they said.

Hanoi also provided unspecified documentation on three other unidentified MIAs.

It was the fourth return of remains since March 1985, equal to the total number of times Vietnam turned over remains in the four previous years.

If Army laboratories in Honolulu are able to identify all 21 sets of remains as those of Americans, Hanoi over the past year will have repatriated a total of 56 sets of remains.

The U.S. Department of Defense has listed 1,792 American servicemen and civilians as missing in Vietnam.

Nguyen Can, acting head of the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry's North America desk, told reporters that 15 of the 21 sets of remains transferred today had been found in the north, and the others in the south.

Two races liven up Supreme Court election

By KIT FRIEDEN
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The traditionally low-key race for the Texas Supreme Court is livelier this year with appointed Justice Raul Gonzalez seeking to become the first Hispanic elected to statewide office and longtime state Sen. Oscar Mauzy challenging 18-year incumbent Sears McGee.

The May 3 primary will choose Democratic nominees for four of the nine seats on the bench and Republicans for three of those seats. The GOP has no candidates for the fourth seat.

Two of the most hotly contested races are in Place 1 where incumbent Democrat McGee is being challenged by Mauzy and two others in his party, and in Place 4, where Gonzalez, a Democrat appointed to the bench in 1984, is seeking election to the post.

Underlying both races is the issue of whether plaintiffs suing companies are winning too many cases and receiving excessive awards.

Gonzalez, 46, insists he can't be labeled. One of three opponents, former state Rep. Jay Gibson III, an Odessa lawyer, contends Gonzalez is supported by big business.

Before his appointment to the Supreme Court, Gonzalez served as a federal prosecutor, legal aid lawyer and appeals court judge.

He said his election would be important symbolically to Hispanics in Texas, but "I don't see myself as the Hispanic (candidate). I am an incumbent Supreme Court justice who happens to be a Hispanic."

Gonzalez has been declared "qualified," but did not get an outright endorsement by the Texas Supreme Court Justice Committee, a fledgling political action group.

Spokesman Bill Miller said the group espouses support for candidates who base their decisions on case history, rather than making decisions that amount to new law.

But critics such as Gibson and Mauzy claim it's comprised of big corporate lawyers and their friends. Gibson calls it "a sham organized by a handful of single issue lawyers" who Mauzy says are "the wimps, whiners and losers" in several court cases.

Although Gibson has sought to link Gonzalez to the group, Gonzalez said he doesn't "expect to get one dime" from the justice committee.

"One of the charges Mr. Gibson has been making to some is that I'm beholden to insurance groups," said Gonzalez, who said he authored an opinion which allows pre-judgment interest in personal injury cases — a move that encourages insurance companies to make quick settlements instead of "dragging their feet."

Wayne Massey, organization director for the state Republican Party, said he's "thoroughly convinced the Democratic Party is going to say no to Raul Gonzalez," whom he described as "very conservative." That offers the GOP a chance for inroads, Massey said.

Seeking the Republican nomination in that spot are Bill J. Stephens, a judge on the 5th District Court of Appeals, and John Bates, a Waco attorney.

Gonzalez, who doesn't see himself as conservative or liberal, said he has been a lifelong Democrat and has no plans to change.

Also seeking the Democratic nomination for Place 4 are Dallas lawyers John Humphreys and David Ivy.

In the Place 1 race, Mauzy, a 10-term senator from Dallas, is challenging McGee, a 68-year-old incumbent who Mauzy and others say is in poor health and unable to carry a full caseload.

McGee, however, insists he is in excellent health and that any claim to the contrary is "ridiculous."

Mauzy has had his own problems. Last fall, a statement was issued, saying he had gone to California for treatment of alcoholism.

"I recognize that I do have a problem with alcohol, I am dealing with that problem, and I intend to have the situation under control upon my return to Texas," he said in that statement.

Mauzy has since said the treatment worked and the alcoholism is under control.

Two other Democrats are seeking McGee's post. They are Shirley Butts, an appeals court judge from San Antonio, and Hugo Touchy, a state district judge from Houston.

If Ms. Butts were elected, she would be the first woman elected to the state Supreme Court, and she has been endorsed by the controversial Supreme Court Justice Committee.

But McGee considers Mauzy his toughest competition.

"I think he's a serious threat," said McGee, who said he plans to spend only about $25,000. Mauzy hopes to raise $1 million for his campaign.

"If the issue is the qualifications of the judge, I can't understand why anybody would look at my opponent," McGee said. "Mauzy has been a liberal legislative candidate ... He doesn't have any qualifications as a judge — none."

Mauzy countered that Supreme Court Chief Justice John Hill and incumbent Place 2 Justice Robert Campbell also did not have judicial experience when they were elected to the bench.

Republicans in the race are state District Judge Nathan Lincoln Hecht of Dallas and 5th Appeals Court Judge Charles Ben Howell of Dallas.

Howell has filed suit seeking to be allowed to run against unopposed Place 3 incumbent James Wallace, a Democrat. The State Supreme Court ruled that Howell improperly tried to switch to Place 3 after he had already filed for the Place 1 seat.

In the Place 2 race, Campbell, an incumbent Democrat elected to the court in 1978, has drawn fire from challenger Jim Braden, a justice on the 3rd Court of Appeals in Austin.

Brady said Campbell should withdraw from the race because he accepted a $10,000 campaign contribution from a Houston law firm shortly after writing an opinion in a case filed by the firm.

Campbell branded Brady's suggestion as nonsense, saying he took the money seven months after the case was decided.

The other candidates for Place 2 are Colin Kelly Kaufman, a San Antonio lawyer, and Ted Akin, a justice on the 5th Court of Appeals in Dallas who sought to withdraw from the race too late for his name to be removed from the ballot.

Since then, Akin says he has launched an aggressive campaign. "My decision to withdraw was based strictly on the fact that I was having difficulty raising money. I very much want to be a judge of the Texas Supreme Court and I am looking forward to the campaign," he said.

The Republican in the race is Nathan White Jr., a Plano lawyer.

Also up for election May 3 are three positions on the State Court of Criminal Appeals. Places 2 and 3 held by incumbents Michale McCormick and Marvin Teague, respectively, are unopposed.

In Place 1, incumbent Democrat Tom Davis is not seeking reelection. Four Democrats want his seat, Preston Dial Jr., a Seguin judge; M.P. "Rusty" Duncan III, a Denton lawyer; George Martinez, a Dallas lawyer, and Paul B. Reagan, a Temple lawyer.

Stonecutters proud of U.S. capitol work

ELLETTSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — A few years back, workmen cut a huge slab of limestone from the earth and sawed, shaped and carved it into a sign welcoming motorists to town.

The sign, carved by workmen at the local Bybee Stone Co., can be seen by motorists driving along Indiana 46: "Welcome to Ellettsville, Builders of American History."

Bybee workers are striving to live up to the words of the motto. During the last year they have succeeded admirably because it is their workmanship that is rejuvenating the face of the U.S. Capitol in Washington.

A blueprint of the Capitol's west face stretches across the wall in general manager Dan Bybee's office. He points to parts of the drawing, explaining the different types of stonework involved in the project.

"It felt good, especially when we got the contract — we were elated," Bybee said. "Now the novelty has kind of worn off. It's not just another job, but it is another job that has to get done."

That same no-nonsense attitude is evident in the shed, where the stone is cut, ground and hammered. The shed, an aluminum building the length of two football fields and 200 feet wide, is filled with workers and lots of Indiana limestone in all sizes and shapes. The place buzzes with the sounds of huge circular saws and electronic hammers and stone lathes.

Some of the workers look ghostly, their faces and clothes coated with the grayish-white limestone dust. Everyone is moving, busy with the work on one of the various projects currently on the drawing boards.

The company's quarry in Ellettsville, Bybee said, lies in the middle of the "limestone belt," which extends 30 miles across southern Indiana. The quarries made famous in the movie "Breaking Away" yield some of the finest limestone anywhere, he says.

Although the Bybee family has a quarry on the company premises, the stone for the Capitol is being brought in by railroad from the Independence Quarry just south of Bloomington.

Once the uncut stone is in Ellettsville, Bybee employees go to work. Large blocks are cut according to written specifications, while detail work is done by eye, Bybee said.

On a walking tour through the company's drafting shop, he points out pieces of the Capitol that were removed and shipped to Ellettsville so workers could accurately reproduce them.

"They give us a good size detail and we'll copy what they want us to copy out of stone — no matter what it is," Bybee said.

On a recent afternoon, stone carver Lester Boruff eyed a plaster cast of a detail block from the Capitol. In one of his hands he gripped a caliper, a tonglike device used to measure the width of stone, his fingers and forearm covered with limestone dust.

"I never thought I'd see the day when I'd work on the national Capitol," Boruff shouted over the din of machinery.

by bernice bede osyl

April 8, 1986

Life is going to take you off in an entirely new direction in the year ahead. You'll now have the courage to tackle challenges that previously intimidated you. ARIES (March 21-April 19) Beginning today, there will be improvements in conditions that affect an important personal interest. Stumbling blocks that have hampered you will be removed. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The secret wish you've been hoping for may soon be fulfilled. Don't give up on it now. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A progressive friend is going to turn you on to a new project that will capture your imagination. It's an area you've yet to explore. CANCER (June 21-July 22) You are now in a cycle where important career objectives can be achieved. You'll have to work hard for what you get, but your goals can be attained. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today, starting firm foundations for plans that affect not only the immediate, but what will be important to you a few weeks from now. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A joint venture could work out favorably for you at this time. Carefully examine financial proposals brought to you by people you trust. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Alliances you enter into during this cycle have promising potential. You'll be fortunate in partnership arrangements. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'll now start receiving material rewards that you're entitled to, but have thus far been denied. Keep producing at full speed. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Specific benefits will be gained through social contacts that you now have or will be soon making. It's to your advantage to get out and circulate. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today marks a time of endings and beginnings. Something that has caused you problems will now be replaced by something that is good. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your mental abilities are extremely acute today and any bright ideas you conceive should not be treated lightly. Your mind can make you money. PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) As of today, there will be a positive upturn in your financial trends. But you must be patient, and let matters gain momentum.

Handling aggressive people workshop scheduled at CCH

CANYON - The Continuing Education Program of West Texas State University's School of Nursing is sponsoring a series of workshops for Panhandle-area nurses during the month of April, including one at Pampa.

"Management of the Physically Aggressive Person" will include assessing physically threatening situations, learning to recognize verbal and non-verbal cues of persons who may become aggressive, and learning verbal and physical intervention with such persons.

The workshop will be presented in Pampa from 6 to 9 p.m. Monday in the Coronado Community Hospital classroom.

A session also is scheduled for 6 to 9 p.m. today at the First National Bank Community Room in Perryton.

Other remaining scheduled dates are 6 to 9 p.m. Monday, April 21, at the Dumas Memorial Hospital and Thursday, April 24, at the Shamrock Country Club.

Sessions have been held previously in Wellington and Borger.

Conducting the workshops is Deannah Alexander, RNC, MSN, a psychiatric instructor at WTSU's School of Nursing. She received her degrees from the University of Texas at Arlington and has been certified by the American Nurses' Association as a psychiatric-mental health nurse.

Alexander works part-time at St. Anthony's Life Enrichment Center and Hospice in Amarillo. She teaches in community health and liaison nursing, including classes on domestic violence, crises in families and communication skills.

Registration is $20 for health care providers and $10 for students at the door. Pre-registration fees are $16 for health care providers and $8 for students.

CEARP credits, continuing education units and TDH contact hours for EMS training are available through the workshop.

The workshop is open to RNs, LVNs, nursing students, nursing assistants, allied health personnel, EMS personnel, school teachers, social workers, law enforcement members and any interested persons who may encounter potentially violent individuals.

Participants will be practicing physical holds and blocks. Slacks and loose-fitting clothing are advised.

The local workshop is sponsored by WTSU School of Nursing Continuing Education in cooperation with Coronado Community Hospital.

For additional information or registration forms, contact Tedi Beckett at WTSU School of Nursing, 1-656-2441.

Antique Show and Sale this weekend

Proceeds will benefit student loan program

The Twentieth Century Cotillion Study Club will sponsor its 24th annual Antique Show and Sale this Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the M. K. Brown Auditorium in Pampa.

The show will open Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m.

All proceeds from the event will go to the Opportunity Plan, Inc., a student loan program based in Canyon which assists students in continuing their education past high school.

There are presently 88 students receiving aid through the Twentieth Century Cotillion division of OPI from the Panhandle area.

"Because this is a loan program, and not a scholarship program, the money is loaned to students and repaid," said Liliith Brainard, show chairman. "It is used over and over again by many people."

At present the OPI is maintaining a 98 percent repayment record. From a capital fund of $52,658.04, the fund has loaned a total of $277,019, meaning the money has turned over five times, Brainard noted.

"If you attended the first Antique Show and Sale, your money is still working," she said.

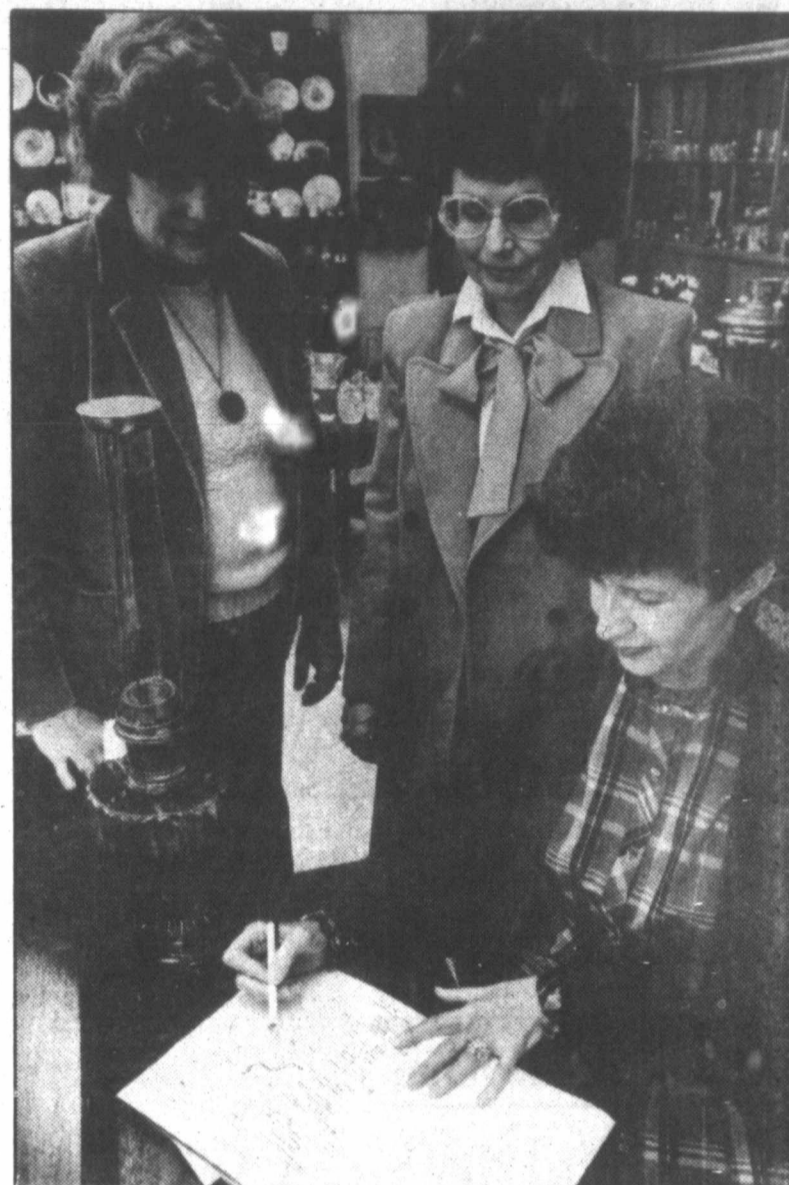

Dealers this year will be coming from six states, including Texas, Oklahoma, Arizona, Illinois, Indiana and Missouri. They will be bringing a variety of antiques such as cut glass, art glass, china, early Americana, nautical, oriental china and rugs, sterling, silver plate, coins, collectibles and fine furniture.

Dealers to be at the show include Jeanne's Attic, St. David, Ariz.; Fine Jewels, Wilmette, Ind.; Flower Bay Antiques, Muncie, Ind.; Jo Darce Antiques, Chesterfield, Mo.; Rocky's Ole' Time Shoppe, Chickasha, Okla.; Wilson's Coins, Rush Springs, Okla.; Rural Relics, Rush Springs, Okla.; and Colonial Antiques, Tulsa, Okla.

Others include Toby's Antiques, Odessa; Reynold's, Arlington; Curiosity Antique Shop, Amarillo; Den of Antiquity, Fort Worth, and Collectors' Corner, Pampa.

Brainard is serving as chairman for this year's show. Co-chairman is Berdena Neef, and Donna Burger is in charge of publicity.

Tickets are $2 and will be available at the door. Children in strollers will be admitted free; older ones will be charged.

MAKING DECISIONS - Shirley Jensen, seated, of Collectors' Corner confers with Liliith Brainard, left, and Berdena Neef, chairman and co-chairman, over what items to take to the Antique Show and Sale this coming weekend. ## Antique dolls to be shown

The personal collection of antique dolls, toys and toy furniture will be displayed by Carolyn Copeland during the Gray County Sesquicentennial celebration Monday, April 21, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the M. K. Brown Auditorium in Pampa.

The collection has never been displayed before. Copeland has done extensive research on the items, and informative labels will be placed by each item.

The dolls date back 150 years, but most are from the 1890 period when the Germans and French were competing for the American market, Copeland said.

"Some of the dolls have heads made by one German firm and the body by another," she said.

Copeland will display an original bisque doll beside a current reproduction to show the difference in the dolls. The dolls, attired in elaborate costumes with beaded trims, will be displayed in a hand-crafted cradle and artistically designed rocker.

"We are hoping that this exhibit will be of interest to the children attending the celebration," Copeland said.

Lone Star Ballet plans celebration

AMARILLO - The Lone Star Ballet will celebrate its 10th birthday with "A Gala Night of Stars" at 8 p.m. April 18 and 19 in the Amarillo Civic Center Auditorium.

The celebration will bring together the enthusiasm and talents of dancers from the local company and guest performers from New York, Canada and Utah, all under the direction of Neil Hess.

"Dance of every variety will be performed by Amarillo's finest and many former residents who now dance in America's major companies," Hess said.

He invited area residents to attend the 10th birthday celebration and the conclusion of the 1985-1986 season.

Ticket prices are $18, $12 and $6 with a $1 discount for children under 12 and senior citizens over 65. Groups of 10 and more are entitled to a 10 percent discount through the Lone Star Ballet office only.

Tickets may be purchased at all Amarillo Hasting's locations, the Lone Star Ballet Office at 1000 S. Polk, and the "Texas" office in Canyon.

For more information, call the ballet office at 372-2463.

Dear Abby

Adoptive parents object to comments of others

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are about to adopt a baby in the near future. When we tell friends and family this, the response is invariably the same: "Oh, that is wonderful! But I am sure you will have your own baby right after you receive the adopted one." This comment is absolutely devastating to prospective adoptive parents.

We understand that people mean well and are trying to say something supportive, but there are two reasons why this particular statement should never be made:

1. The subtle implication is that adopted babies are not as good as "your own," meaning one you bore yourself. My wife and I have many fears and apprehensions about adoption, the raising of an adopted child, and how that child will be viewed by others. This insensitive comment brings all of our fears to the surface.

2. Second, and even more important, friends and family often do not consider that the mother in question may not ever be able to bear a child of her own. My wife has been through many miscarriages, a tubal pregnancy, multiple surgeries, and she may never be able to bear our own child. We have many friends with similar tragic infertility problems and where the woman has no tubes, ovaries or uterus. Imagine the effect of this comment on them!

Please tell your readers that adoptive parents need to be reassured that their child is just as valued as the one they had hoped to bear themselves. Also, please avoid thoughtless and insensitive comments about "having your own" or "getting pregnant soon." They are brutal. I am a surgeon at a prominent medical school, but sign me ...

are trained on me. I walked into a store the other day and was immediately confronted with myself on TV, and a large message that said, "Smile, You're on Video Camera. Shoplifters Will Be Prosecuted With Videotaped Evidence."

Abby, I will never set foot in that store again!

Am I abnormal for feeling uncomfortable for having every move I make recorded and shown on a TV screen? Do other people feel as I do, and what do you think of this idea?

MRS. L.M.S.,

MECHANICSVILLE, MD.

DEAR MRS. S.: I think it's a shame this method of discouraging shoplifting is used, but look at it this way: Although it is an invasion of privacy, stores that use this method are able to offer their merchandise at a lower cost because they will have fewer shoplifters. And shoplifters cost you and me money!

...

DEAR ABBY: I have a small but important problem. Our school's big dance is coming up. It's the only dance of the year so it's a big deal. I like to carry a purse with me in case I need money to call someone, or if I need to reapply eye makeup. What do I do with my purse when I dance? Give it to my friend? Put it down and risk losing it? Should I shove the stuff in my pocket and forget the purse? Or dance with the purse on my shoulder?

R. IN LEVERETT, MASS.

DEAR R.: Carry the absolute minimum, and shove it in your pocket.

50th Masters tees off today

Ballesteros, Langer put problems aside

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — European champions Seve Ballesteros and Bernhard Langer want to set aside their other problems for a few days and concentrate on only one thing — the Masters golf tournament.

Ballesteros is under a one-year suspension for making too few appearances on the Professional Golfers Association Tour last year. Langer has to curtail his American schedule because of U.S. tax laws limiting the number of days a foreigner can work in this country without being required to pay taxes on worldwide earnings.

Both have won this major championship and both are confident they can win it again.

The 50th Masters opened today on the 6,905-yard, par-72 Augusta National Golf Club course with an international field of 88.

"I know this course as good as my house," said Ballesteros, the dashing Spaniard who won this event in 1980 and 1983.

"I feel very good," he said. "I'm very strong physically and mentally. I'm ready to win."

Langer, the defending champion, had complained of fatigue after appearing in 11 of the first 13 tournaments on this year's tour, but he took off last week.

"I feel a lot better now," he said. "My confidence level is pretty high. I really feel I'm here this year to win the tournament. That's my goal. I don't see any reason why I shouldn't be up there on Sunday."

If the West German is able to repeat as the champion, he would be only the second player in Masters history to do it. Jack Nicklaus includes among his record five Masters crowns two in succession in 1965 and 1966.

"I think it is just a coincidence," Langer said of the failure of others to repeat.

Ballesteros drew his suspension for playing in only nine tournaments. PGA Tour rules require participation in 15 tournaments to retain membership.

"They have too many rules," Ballesteros said. "It's more difficult to follow the PGA rules than to win the Masters."

Asked if he had any U.S. tax problems, Ballesteros quipped:

"I have no problems with taxes. I haven't made any money."

The biggest question mark concerning Ballesteros in the Masters is how he will play after not being in competition for a while.

He said he expects no problem with that.

Ballesteros said he would like to be able to play eight tournaments in America because he also must play 15 events on the European tour. If he had to play 15 in the United States as well, he said, he would be forced to play too much in a season.

Langer said it was easy for a foreigner to play 15 tournaments in the 182-day limit under the old tax law, but it is virtually impossible to do it in 122 days, the new limit under the revised tax code.

Foreigner golfers have always had to pay U.S. taxes on money earned in this country.

Langer said he believed the PGA Tour would revise its rule requiring 15 tournaments so that foreign players could retain their PGA membership.

He expects to play 14 tournaments this year within the 122-day limit.

Asked his reaction should he, like Ballesteros, lose PGA Tour membership for not playing 15 tournaments, Langer said, "I would feel that I'd been kind of cheated."

Girls still unbeaten

Versatile performances propelled Pampa squads to victory in TOT track meet

Solid all-around performances in both the track and field events propelled the Pampa boys and girls to the championship of their own invitational last week.

The Lady Harvesters, unbeaten after five meets, piled up 143 points to leave second-place Dalhart far behind with 77. The Harvesters compiled 200 points and had a 75-point spread over their nearest rival, Perryton.

The Lady Harvesters won only four of the 15 events, but placed in ten of them.

Pampa Coach Gary Cornelsen was pleased with the performances of the Brown girls, Courtney and Yolanda. Courtney won the 100-meter dash and anchored the 800 and 1600-meter relay teams to victories.

"Courtney ran well all day long," Cornelsen said. "She really looked strong in the relays."

Yolanda also had a busy day. She ran on the 800-relay team and placed third in the 100. In the field events, she placed second in the long jump and third in the triple jump.

"Yolanda jumped well. Her long jump was her best of the season," Cornelsen said.

In the discus, sophomore Sandra Farrah set a new school record with a winning throw of 130-

1½. "I thought all of our throwers did well again," Cornelsen said.

Andrea Hopkins, a junior, was third in both the shot and discus.

Sophomore Tanya Lidy lost her first 200-meter race this season when she was nipped at the tape by Dalhart's Sharon Hudson. Hudson's time, 23.9 was the second fastest in the state. Lidy was timed at 24.1, her fastest ever which broke her own school-held record.

In the boys' division, the Harvesters won seven events and placed in all but two.

We had a good day in the distance races and the field events," Cornelsen said. "Most of our field people are juniors, so it's going to be nice to have them back."

Billy Butler, a sophomore, won the high jump and placed second in the long jump. Shawn Greene, a junior, won the discus, and junior Derrick Smith placed third in the shot.

Winners in the track events were Robert Perez, 3200; Brandon Bard, 800; Mark Williams, 800 IM hurdles and Willie Jacobs, 1600. The 440-relay team (Donovan Lewis, Lance Ripple, Mark Williams, Gary Jernigan) also came in first. Cornelsen said he was pleased with the progress of freshman Jason Garren, who was second in the 300 IM hurdles and fourth in the pole vault.

It was the second meet victory for the Pampa boys, who had opened the season by winning the Amarillo Relays.

The Lady Harvesters are enroute to a second unbeaten track season, not counting the state meet in which they finished fifth a year ago. The Pampa girls have not lost in five meets and close out the regular season Saturday at the Panhandle meet. The Pampa boys compete in a meet Saturday at Dumas.

"These are both going to be tough meets. We'll be going against 4A and 5A schools.

Pampa listings on this week's Amarillo Globe-News track honor roll are as follows:

Holmes apologizes to Nevada fight judges

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Former heavyweight champion Larry Holmes, admitting that "maybe I got a big mouth," apologized for claiming Nevada fight judges drank before bouts and accepted payoffs.

But Holmes said Wednesday that the matter isn't relevant anyway because he plans to take the judges out of his April 19 rematch against champion Michael Spinks by ending the fight before its 15-round limit.

"It has to be a knockout. Either they carry me out or they carry Michael out," Holmes said. "The only thing on my mind is to take Michael Spinks out."

Nevada State Athletic Commission members called on Holmes to apologize at a pre-fight press conference Wednesday or face a hearing on whether he should be licensed for his fight against Spinks.

Holmes didn't admit making the disparaging comments, aired in a television interview last week, but said he wanted to apologize and put the matter behind him.

"Maybe I talk too much, maybe I got a big mouth," he said. "But I'm sorry if I offended the commission."

ors at a recent Tae Kwon Do tournament in Clovis, N.M. Front row from left are: Aleatha McMullen, girls Blue-Green, first in sparring, second in forms and weapons; Shila McMullen, peewee Blue-Green, first in forms and sparring, second in weapons; Destry James, junior White, third in sparring; (back row) Tom Thompson, junior Blue-Green, first in forms, sparring and weapons; and Shannon James, men's White, third in sparring. AMARILLO—Pampa's Leather-N-Lace Riding Club dominated the Valley Riding Club's Open Playday here last weekend.

Leather-N-Lace's Tanner Winkler won the all around trophy and took high point honors in the Mini PeeWee Boys Division, winning firsts in poles, barrels, pylons, flags and two-man relay. Jeremy Winkler, in the PeeWee Boys Division, won a second in pylons and a third in barrels.

Billy Klapper won the high point trophy in the Senior Mens Division, winning firsts in poles, barrels, pylons and flags and a second in two-man relay, along with Keith Winkler.

Roberta Klapper won firsts in pylons and two-man relay and a second in poles in the Senior Womens Division.

Leather-N-Lace will sponsor an Open Playday Sunday at the Pampa Rodeo Arena.

Several top high school basketball recruits have signed national letters-of-intent with Southwest Conference schools, including Tennessee's all-time leading high school scorer.

Texas Tech secured the signatures of two top Texas prospects Wednesday, the first day of the late signing period.

The Red Raiders signed 6-3 Lamesa guard Jerry Mason and 6-6 forward James Johnson of Tyler, Mason, who verbally committed to the team two weeks ago, was described by Texas Tech Coach Gerald Myers as "the best player to come out of West Texas in the last five years."

Johnson was a Class 5A All-State player from John Tyler High School.

The Razorbacks lured the most sought-after prospects, nabbing Cannon Whitby of Obion County, Tenn., on Wednesday after signing Mario Credit of Kansas City, Kan. and Ron Huery of Whitehaven, Tenn. during the early signing period in November.

Whitby, a 6-foot guard, set state scoring records for a single season with 1,536 points and for a career with 3,479 points. He averaged 39.4 points this season — third best in the country.

Phillip McKellar, a 6-6 stand-out from North Little Rock North-east, said he would sign with Arkansas on Thursday.

Darrell McArthur, a 6-3 guard from Silsbee High School, signed with the University of Houston.

Pat Foster, who recently replaced the retiring Guy Lewis, said he is not expecting to sign any other prospects this week.

University of Texas officials announced Wednesday the signing of Russell Green, a 6-5½ player from Florence, S.C., and community college players David Cones, a 6-10 center from McLennan in Waco, and Derrick Shelton, a 6-1 guard from Ellsworth (Iowa).

During the early signing period, the Longhorns signed George Muller, a 7-1 center from Huber Heights, Ohio, and Travis Mays, a 6-1 guard from Ocala, Fla.

Texas likely will sign one or two more players soon, said Doug Smith of the UT sports information office.

In women's basketball, Texas women's coach Jody Conradt Wednesday signed her fifth recruit, 5-8 guard Lyssa McBride of Clear Creek High School in Houston.

McBride, a two-time all-state selection by the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches, averaged 18.8 points per game this year and led her team to a 28-4 record and area play-off berth. She averaged 17.5 points as a junior, when Clear Creek advanced to the regional semifinals. She has received all-regional honors twice, is a three-time all-district choice and was MVP of District 245A this year, as well as Greater Houston Area MVP. McBride also is an A student and a candidate for academic all-state honors.

Conradt signed four athletes during the early signing period in November, including all-state forward Marie Pesch of Bovina and Aaron Farris of Arlington Heights High School in Fort Worth. Texas' NCAA championship team compiled a perfect 34-0 record this season.

Baylor coach Gene Iba said signing Houston Clear Lake guard Michael Hobbs will give the Bears "quality" depth on a team returning all five starters next season.

Hobbs, 6-3, who transferred from Corpus Christi Carroll High School, averaged 20 points this season for Clear Lake. "In my opinion, Michael is one of the top three guards in the state," Iba said. "We feel good about the players coming back next year, but we wanted quality young people behind them and Michael definitely fits this mold."

Because of recent NCAA sanctions against its program, Baylor was limited to only two scholarships this recruiting season.

SMU announced that Roderick Hampton, a 6-3½ point guard from Dallas Kimball High School, and Adrian Caldwell, a 6-8 center from Navarro Junior College in Corsicana, signed letters-of-intent.

Hampton averaged 15 points and 10 assists this season, leading the Kimball Knights to a 31-4 record and the Class 5A state finals.

Caldwell, a graduate of West Oso High School in Corpus Christi, averaged 10 points and 12 rebounds per game for Navarro Junior College this season.

Blue Jays trim Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP)—Toronto's Doyle Alexander and ace reliever Tom Henke made the Texas Rangers wish they had kept them.

Alexander came home to get his 150th major league victory and Henke, who spent three years with the Rangers, was magnificent in relief in a 3-1 victory on Wednesday night.

The 35-year-old Alexander, a resident of Arlington, scattered seven hits and was on the way to his 14th major league shutout until Pete O'Brien tagged him for a ninth inning homer.

White: maybe he's only half crazy

AUSTIN (AP) — Democratic arch-conservative Lyndon LaRouche had a few nice words for Gov. Mark White, but the governor wasn't much impressed. "The governor said, 'Maybe he's only half crazy,'" reported Ann Arnold, White's press secretary, after LaRouche praised the job White has been doing. "During a Wednesday news conference at the National Press Club in Washington, LaRouche spent most of his time denouncing various government officials. He then was pressed to name some U.S. political leaders he liked. 'I think Cap Weinberger's (U.S. defense secretary) doing a magnificent job considering the circumstances he's been in. 'I'm very happy with the performance of Gov. White of Texas,'" LaRouche replied. LaRouche did not explain what he admired about either man. But Harley Schlanger of Houston, a congressional candidate and the southwest coordinator of LaRouche's National Democratic Policy Committee, said LaRouche likes White's proposal for a tariff on imported oil. "Although the Reagan administration appears to have discounted White's plan, Schlanger said, 'Fortunately, White has stuck to his guns on this. That's why LaRouche is saying flattering things about him. 'We're trying to build national support for this (tariff) idea. White is absolutely right on this,'" Schlanger said. White, a Democrat, is seeking re-election this year. He faces five other candidates in the May 3 primary, although most party activists consider the opposition only token. As White moved away from LaRouche's praise, one of his Republican opponents tried to link them. "Birds of a feather flock together," GOP candidate Kent Hance said when asked about LaRouche's comment. An unsuccessful presidential candidate three times, LaRouche is a former communist and former socialist who has become increasingly conservative in recent years. His political organization has received considerable attention since his supporters in Illinois won the Democratic nominations for lieutenant governor and secretary of state over the protest of Democratic Party regulars, including gubernatorial nominee Adlai Stevenson III. Earlier this week, Texas Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle said LaRouche's politics are "dark and deceitful" and warned local Democrats to be wary of candidates espousing his right-wing beliefs. Some 18,000 Texas

Democratic Party activists have received letters identifying the 200 LaRouche candidates running in local and state races.

That invincible consumer

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The American consumer seems invincible. Deep in debt, with savings relatively low, and with the economy growing at a rate economists call sluggish, consumers nevertheless remain in high spirits, convinced that better times are coming. The like of it has seldom been seen before, and some oldtimers in the economic fraternity tend to be mystified. With installment loan repayments taking 19 percent of take-home pay, a record, and with the savings rate down to 4 percent of incomes — compared to a long-term 6 percent — why should people have big plans for homes, cars and vacations? A new factor — net worth and cash flow — has been introduced into the picture and for the time being seems to be dominant, providing not only a sense of confidence but enabling the confidence to be translated into action. The three big contributors to net worth and cash flow are a surging stock market, lower oil prices and falling home mortgage rates. The result: consumers are better off by billions of dollars even if incomes aren't rising strongly.

Merrill Lynch economists, who are forecasting a strong pickup in consumer spending and a sharp increase in economic expansion in the second half of the year, note that household net worth jumped 12 percent in just the past year. This higher net worth is much more easily translated into spending power than it was a few years ago, as anyone holding a bank credit card knows. No application forms; no long waits. Instead, cardholders have lines of credit. In the past 12 months, the ML economists estimate, the stock market alone has added more than $500 billion to household net worth, even if that net worth has been reduced some by the impact of falling interest rates. And there is more good news to come. ML estimates that falling gasoline and heating-oil prices will reduce consumer spending on energy products $25 billion this year. And less money spent on energy means more to spend on other things. A similar affect is likely as mortgage rates fall. Households are now able to add big, tax-free dollars to their pocketbooks by means of refinancing. ML estimates the impact on cash flow this year to be $5 billion to $10 billion.

Austin newspaper wins open meetings suit against school

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court held Wednesday that the Austin school board violated the Open Meetings Act by failing to give adequate notice of what it would talk about in executive sessions. The Austin American-Statesman claimed the school board posted agendas for executive sessions saying merely that "personnel," "litigation," and "real estate matters" would be discussed. "The board did not provide full and adequate notice, particularly where the subject slated for discussion was one of special interest to the public," said the Supreme Court opinion written by Justice Robert M. Campbell. "Selection of a new school superintendent is not in the same category as ordinary personnel matters — and a label like 'personnel' fails as a description of the subject." "Similarly, a major desegregation lawsuit which has occupied the board's time for a number of years, and those effects will be felt for years to come, is not in the same category as the more common 'litigation' which a school board may expect to face. Certainly, a school board is not expected to disclose its litigation strategy, but it cannot totally conceal that a pending desegregation lawsuit shall be discussed," the opinion said. However, the Supreme Court agreed with the Austin Court of Appeals in ruling against the newspaper's claim that final decisions to solicit bids on sale of surplus school property and another to release names of candidates for superintendent were made in executive session. The Supreme Court also said it agreed with the civil appeals court there was no evidence to support the newspaper's claim that the final selection of a superintendent occurred in a closed session. The unanimous Supreme Court decision had the effect of reversing the Austin Court of Appeals in part and affirming it in part.

STANDING GUARD — A security guard at Kennedy Space Center stands guard near the space shuttle Challenger's main engine bell Wednesday. The media was shown the wreckage of Challenger for the first time, following the January 28th explosion which took the lives of all seven astronauts. (AP Laserphoto)

Experts report

Astronauts probably died when spacecraft began breaking up

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Challenger's crew cabin survived the shuttle breakup and nine-mile plunge to the ocean, but the seven astronauts probably died the instant the spacecraft began falling apart, experts believe.

A federal safety investigator told reporters Wednesday that the nose section containing the cabin broke cleanly away from the rest of the spacecraft and was intact until it struck the ocean surface, shattered and sank.

The crew probably died when the orbiter was subjected to very high g. forces as it was tearing apart, said a source close to the investigation of the Jan. 28 explosion who spoke on condition of anonymity.

He said the orbiter was jerked violently to one side after a booster rocket broke loose at its lower joint and swiveled, turning its flame onto the external fuel tank, freeing its liquid propellants to mix into a raging fireball.

Since it was not known the precise point this occurred, it raises a question whether the astronauts lived one or two seconds, long enough to know something terrible was happening.

Even if the crew had survived the violent maneuver — a slim chance — gravity and aerodynamic forces from the first cabin tumble would have killed them, the source said.

When the orbiter's nose section "struck the water, it had some mass inside; that mass was the crew module," said Terry Armentrout, director of the National Transportation Safety Board's bureau of accident investigation.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration called on the board the day after the accident to help it learn the cause.

Submarines or divers still have not found the lower segment of the right solid rocket booster containing the joint that leaked a flame, causing the explosion. Investigators are considering several theories on why the flame escaped.

"We want every part of that right solid rocket booster we can get," Armentrout said. "The segment with the joint would be a very important piece of evidence."

Eight chunks of the right rocket were brought into port Tuesday night by the salvage ship Stena Workhorse, but none contained the joint.

Armentrout said aerodynamic forces rather than an explosion caused most of the initial breakup of Challenger and that the 140-to 180-mph impact with the water did the rest of the damage.

There was a fireball rather than a large explosion and the cloud of smoke and flame resulted from the flames that flashed when liquid oxygen and liquid hydrogen propellant mixed after the huge external fuel tank ruptured, he said.

"There was evidence of explosion visually, but the explosion of the entire shuttle is not something we're seeing," he said. "The external tank did not explode. With all its potential, it would have been a much greater fireball."

Armentrout talked with reporters as he led them through two hangars where the shuttle debris has been laid out over 4-foot-square grids.

It was the first public viewing of the debris.

Most pieces were small, but in the hangar where the orbiter chunks are being examined there were large sections of the fuselage, the cargo bay doors and the right wing. There was a stench of dead marine life from barnacles and other sea creatures that attached to the debris.

In a nearby hangar are parts of the external tank, two of the three main engine nozzles and the two forward segments of the booster rockets. Some of the tank parts are huge rectangular slabs measuring 10 to 25 feet on a side.

Acid fog in major farm area

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Acid fog, sometimes harsh enough to harm plant leaves and irritate lungs, has appeared in the San Joaquin Valley, one of the nation's prime farm areas, researchers say.

But they say pollution controls are reducing the danger.

"At present, there is a close balance between emissions of ammonia and acidic compounds in the valley during air stagnation episodes," said Daniel Jacob, a Harvard University atmospheric chemist and main author of a study financed by California's Air Resources Board.

How hazardous the acid fog may be to people, crops and buildings is still a question, and the board is looking for answers in a four-year, $18 million research program, spokesman Bill Sessa said.

Meanwhile, said Jacob, shifts in the balance between acidic compounds and airborne ammonia, which neutralizes the acid, "could lead to a serious, widespread acid fog problem in the southern end of the San Joaquin Valley" during winter air inversion periods.

Acid fog, acid rain and dry acid fallout are created when nitrogen oxide and sulfur dioxide pollutants from fossil-fuel combustion undergo chemical reactions in the air to form nitric and sulfuric acids.

Acid fog can be up to 100 times stronger than acid rain and more than 10 times stronger than vinegar.

In the southern San Joaquin, in fertile Kern County, acid-forming pollutants are produced largely by oil-burning steam boilers used to inject steam underground to ease crude oil extraction and from vehicle exhausts, said Jacob.
