Surge in terrorism starts taking shape

surge in terrorism anticipated by the Reagan administration after the U.S. bombing of Libya took shape today with the murders of three kidnap victims in Lebanon, an attempt to put explosives aboard an Israeli airliner in London and fire bombs thrown at a U.S. Marine post in Tunisia.

In Khartoum, the U.S. Embassy announced today the evacuation of some 200 dependents of mission employees and other personnel from Sudan, apparently because of Libyan threats against American targets.

The announcement came after an embassy employee was shot in the head in Khartoum late Tuesday and thousands of people on Wednesday burned American flags and shouted slogans to protest the U.S. bombing raid on Libya

An embassy statement did not name specifically Libya, Sudan's neighbor to the northwest, but apparently referred to Col. Moammar Khadafy's government, as no other neighboring nation has threatened attacks on U.S. interests. Libya called for attacks on American interests worldwide after the air raid.

In Libya, Khadafy was reported alive but possibly wounded in the bombing raid on his headquarters Monday night. Administration officials sifting through intelligence reports said there were indications he had left Tripoli, the capital, and had gone into the desert amid reports of fighting within the military.

Three bodies were found in the mountains east of Beirut with a note nearby that said one was a CIA agent and two were British intelligence officers killed in retaliation for the U.S. bombing of Libya, the Moslem Voice of the Nation radio reported from Beirut. However, they were all later identified at British

The British government supported the U.S. action punishing Libya for the April 5 bombing of a Berlin nightclub and permitted U.S. Air Force bombers based in Britain to participate in the raid.

In London, a woman trying to board an El Al jetliner was arrested after she was found to be carrying was police said were explosives. Authorities were hunting a male companion of Middle reports of mutiny at the Tarku-Eastern appearance.

And in Tunis, Tunisia, the headquarters of the Palestine Liberation Organization, two Molotov cocktails were tossed from a passing car at the residence of Marine guards stationed at the U.S. Embassy. No one was injured; a nearby auto was burned.

Meanwhile, a congressional source said intelligence reports indicated that foes of Khadafy had returned to Tripoli. Sources in both the administration and Congress, speaking on condition of anonymity, said there was known to be friction between the army and Khadafy's headquarters guard.

ABC News, quoting U.S. intelligence sources, said there were nah army base, south of Tripoli. The network said there were reports that Libyan air strikes were used against Libyan army units.

However, the network said there was no indication any particular group had moved to seize Khadafy appeared on Libyan television Wednesday night, condemning the United States for its attack and telling Americans, We will not kill your children.

The Libyan leader's adopted baby daughter was reported killed in the raid. There had been speculation, because Khadafy had not appeared publicly since the attack that he might have been killed or left the country.

Merchants told that renovation helps

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

Merchants shouldn't think their buildings are so unattractive that they can't be helped, Main Street Program architect Dick Ryan said during a luncheon with local residents Wednesday in the Biarritz Club.

Nearly any building that is still useable can be improved in its appearance by some design work, he claimed 'A good paint job can do wonders," Ryan said, as can a little masonry work

His job is to assist merchants in the downtown business area of Pampa to improve the appearances of their buildings and to help with renovation and rehabilitation projects.

Ryan will be visiting Pampa about once a month to meet with local downtown businesses to come up with design concepts, drawings and suggestions for enhancing the appearance of the downtown buildings. His work is part of the services offered by the Main Street Program aimed at revitalizing the downtown business sector

'A building is an investment," he said, and that investment needs maintenance to keep up its worth.

For the economics of a business sector in a city, it is better to use existing buildings and renovate them rather than to let them deteriorate and remain vacant, Ryan explained. A huge rebuilding project costs more money without necessarily accomplishing any more from a business standpoint

"The streets and the utilities are already there," he noted. Renovating buildings and putting them to use keeps money coming in and maintains a tax base, he stated.

Ryan, who has been with the Main Street Program for more than four years, said he and others on the staff look at 500 buildings a year in Main Street cities throughout the state, preparing 300 drawings.

Design encompasses a lot of things," he said, more than just drawing a new concept for a building

"It doesn't matter how much money you have in your buildings if trash detracts from their appearance." Ryan stated. He voiced support for

Terrorists kill three Britons

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) Three bodies found on a mountain highway east of Beirut today were identified by an Irish diplomat as those of three Britons kidnapped in Lebanon.

A senior Druse militia source quoted an anonymous caller as saving the three men were killed in retaliation for the Britishsupported U.S. attack on Libya. John Rowan, first secrettary of the Irish Embassy in Beirut, made the identification soon after the bodies were brought from the mountains to the American University hospital in Beirut.

These are Padfield, Collett and Douglas," Rowan told reporters as he emerged from the morgue, a reference to British writer Alec Collett, 64, and teachers Leigh Douglas, 34, and Philip Padfield, 40. Rowan knew all three men.

A note found near the bodies claimed the three were a CIA agent and two British intelligence officers, the Moslem Voice of the Nation radio reported. The note reportedly attacked Britain's "direct support" for the U.S. raids Tuesday. The F-111 fighter bombers that attacked Tripoli and Benghazi flew from U.S. bases in Britain.

Druse sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the three victims each were shot once in the head and their bloodstained bodies were found on a tree-lined highway near Roweisat al-Sofar. Militiamen wrapped the faces of the victims in white bandages as a sign of mourning, and the bodies were taken to a hospital morgue at Bhamdoun, the sources said. International Red Cross officials transported the bodies to Beirut.

Shortly after the bodies were found, witnesses said British television cameraman John McCarthy, 30, was kidnapped along the highway to Beirut airport with his Lebanese driver

Witnesses said McCarthy and the driver were intercepted by a carload of four gunmen. Two of the gunmen got in their car and drove off with them.

Three other people in a second ear driving in convoy with McCarthy were not threatened or harmed, said the witnesses, who refused to be identified.

McCarthy, of Barnet, North London, arrived in Beirut March He works for the Londonbased Worldwide Television News agency and was heading to the airport to fly to London when he disappeared.

The Druse official said the three bodies were found after an anonymous person claiming to speak for a group calling itself the Arab Revolutionary Cells telephoned the Druse Voice of the Mountain radio to say the three were slain in retaliation for the Tuesday raid.

Bullock sees big revenue losses

Local entities to feel oil price pinch

AUSTIN (AP) - Local governments in virtually every part of the state will feel the effects of the oil price decrease when they start to collect property taxes in 1987, according to Comptroller Bob Bullock

Cities, counties and school districts may feel the revenue loss more than state government, Bullock said Wednesday.

Bullock has already warned state officials that oil price fluctuations, with spot market prices dropping from $26 a barrel to $13 a barrel, would cost the state $1.3 billion in projected revenue.

'As big as that impact might seem, it could appear small next year when hundreds of Texas cities, counties, school districts and other local governments face the possibility of dramatic reductions in their local tax bases because lower oil prices have cut the taxable value of oil and natural gas deposits," the report said.

The report said if oil is selling for $17 per barrel or less on January 1987, the taxable value of the state's oil and natural gas reserves could drop by between 30 and 50 percent of their current value.

"A 50 percent drop from the 1984 value levels would cut the tax base of local governments by as much as $43 billion," Bullock's office said.

That scenario could leave local governments with the choice of cutting their spending to match the revenue losses or raising taxes — or both

"The drop will, in one stroke, wipe out a major portion of the tax base — and the ability to raise taxes - of many local governments," Bullock's report said.

The comptroller said the effect of the rapid decline and oil and gas prices will not hit local governments immediately because the property values used to finance their operations for 1986-87 were set on Jan. 1 of this year, before the major price declines.

The lower propety tax values will show up on tax rolls developed after Jan. 1, 1987. These values will be used to collect taxes in the fall of 1987 and early 1988 to finance local government operations until May 1988.

Bullock's report gave an example of how many local government might be affected.

Audu said OPEC technical advisers would meet later today to come up with recommendations on a pricing and production

Balkacem Nabi, Algeria's oil minister, told reporters some cartel members are not ready to cut production as a means of ending the oil price slump.

Asked to identify the central point of contention in the closed-loor talks, he replied, "Price war or no price war."

He was referring to the assertion by several OPEC nations, including his own, that Saudi Arabia was striving to drive oil prices even lower in a bid to force non-OPEC oil producers to cut heir production,

Pampa, White Deer schools pick officers

Officers for the Pampa High School Student Council were announced earlier this week by sponsor Bill Potts.

Meanwhile White Deer High School students have elected their class and student body officers and cheerleaders and Miami High School cheerleaders for 1986-87 have been selected.

President of the Pampa Student Council is Joel Farina. Vice president is Shawn Green. Brandon Bard and Heidi Sims are involved in a run-off for secretary while Angela Gibson was elected treasurer.

Jim Harris was elected Parliamentarian and Cindy Epperly was elected chaplain.

In White Deer, Mark McKay was elected student body president. Ladd Lafferty was elected vice president. Vicki Swenson, secretary and Jackie Rogers, treasurer. Class representatives are seniors Keith Tice, JoLyn Russell, Mike Bradley and Staci Thompson; juniors, Tish Grainge, Craig Davis, Raymond Burditt and Ruth Hinds; sophomores, Brandy Burns, Julie Gortmaker, Jill Immell and Stacy McConnell.

Officers for the senior class are president Tice, vice president Swenson, secretary Dana Walden treasurer Francine Matheny and reporter Randy Kotara. Junior class officers are President Mark Greene, vice president, Ben Rapstine, secretary Monica Vigil, treasurer Sharri Daniels and reporter Leslie Stiles. Sophomore officers are Lee Barrett, Cyndi Parks, Lori Paul, Toby Barnett and Kelly

Miami approves letters in drama

MIAMI - Most high school kids get their letter sweaters in football and track, but the Miami School trustees want to make sure the speech and drama students get credit too.

At their regular meeting Monday, trustees agreed to allow students participating in speech and drama events to earn "letters' for their work. Superintendent Allan Dinsmore explained that the students earn letters by qualifying for Regional University Interscholastic League competi-

Two students — Christie Searl, first in prose, and Tracye Stauff, second in poetry - advanced to Regionals in UIL Speech competion in March. Cast members of the school's regional alternate one-act play, Greater Tuna also earn letters. Credit will also go to cast members who were named to all-star casts, honorable mention or best actor or actress at the district and regional competitions. Honored cast members at regionals were Jennifer Signs and Tracy Morris, All Star Cast and Gerry Anderson, honorable mention.

the efforts of Clean Pampa, Inc., in anti-litter and antitrash programs.

The Main Street architects also look at sidewalks, landscaping and parks in the downtown areas, he noted. They also view the rear of the buildings and alleyways, Ryan said, adding that they also can be made attractive.

But the main thing we spend our time on is the buildings," he said.

Attractive, well-designed and well-maintained buildings attract people to a shopping area, Ryan claimed, noting that is one of the main goals of the Main Street Project in Pampa.

Showing a number of slides, Ryan discussed various aspects which detract from a building's appearance and offered suggestions for alleviating the problems.

A major factor in the deterioration of many buildings is water, he stated. "Roofs are designed to shed water, not to hold it." Building owners and lessees should look at the roofs and find ways to improve drainage from the roofs.

Parapet walls standing above roofs, for example, deteriorate faster because of exposure on three sides. Cracks also cause a problem; water can get into them and cause damage by freezing and expanding in winter.

The location of downspouts is also a factor to be considered, Ryan said. Misplaced downspouts creating improper drainage can lead to erosion and discoloring of building material. Drainage holes should be placed properly to carry the most water off the roofs, and they should be checked regularly to insure they don't get clogged by trash and debris

Such factors may seem minor, he said, but improper planning and maintenance can lead to major problems in later years. 'The most expedient thing is not always the best" in undertaking repairs and design, Ryan said. "Just do things right the first time, and you anymore. Mortar should be checked won't have to worry about it carefully for signs of deterioration, for example, he said. Also, efforts should be made to avoid areas of buildings that can get overly wet without drying properly. "If there's green stuff growing on your building, something's wrong," he stated.

Ryan advised building owners to make certain to hire quality contractors and workers. "Cheap labor" is not always the least costly in the long run, he said.

Merchants also should avoid sandblasting bricks to remove paint. The sand is abrasive, making the bricks more porous and more susceptible to the erosive factors of water. Chemicals are now available for paint-stripping operations, he noted, without causing the problems resulting from sandblasting.

In addition to suggesting repairs, Ryan said the Main Street architects use their special knowledge to help with design elements.

'We try to work with what's in the building and accent what's there," he explained.

Sometimes this involves looking at historic photographs to aim at restoration« projects in keeping with the original building design con-

Sixth body found in Rio Grande

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — After the discovery of six bodies of young women in or near the Rio Grande in the past month, authorities are warning women to stay clear of the river at night.

Detective Sgt. Jimmy Apodaca of the police department in Juarez -El Paso's sister city across the Mexican border — said a body discovered on Wednesday had been in the body for some time.

We don't know who she is at this time," he said. Apodaca said the condition of the body found Wednesday made it difficult to tell the age of the woman, the cause of death, or whether she had been sexually assaulted. She was wearing slacks and a blouse.

Francisco Flores, head of an investigative group of the Mexican state judicial police, said Juarez law enforcement officers have begun combing the river with 30 men from 11 p.m. to 5 a.m. daily in an 'Operation Rio Bravo.'

'We're warning girls not to hang out at the river at night," he said. Four of the women found were raped and strangled. In another case, police say a woman drowned in the river, and foul play is not sus-

The woman was described as being in her early 20s, about 100 pounds, 5 feet 5 inches with long, black hair. She had on only a black brassiere when the body was recovered. The three Juarez victims were also found wearing only bras.

Aguirre said, "There's a good possibility that at least three (of the deaths) are related. Whether one person is involved is hard to tell," Aguirre said.

He said the deaths of the two women found Saturday near Juarez and the woman found March 25 in Franklin Canal may be related. Flores said, "We think the (three) cases are related to one perpetrator, but there's still doubt about that,"

Republican says White is getting a 'bad rap'

By The Associated Press

Republican legislator spoke up for Democratic Gov. Mark White. saying the governor is getting a "bad rap" on the education reform

Meanwhile, Republican Tom Loeffler, seeking his party's nomination to run against White in November has unleashed a new round of television ads, touting the values of hard work.

State Rep. Gary Thompson, R-Abilene, said the reforms as the state's best chance to become first rate in education, speaking to the Abilene Kiwanis Club. Thompson, a former Democrat, is resigning his seat in June to join the Texas Teacher Retirement System

We were headed for a permanent second-rate status as a state if we did not do our best to turn the situation around in Austin. Thompson, head of Abilene Christian University's government department, said when he began teaching 25 years ago, the state was headed for a "prolonged catastrophe" because of the quality of educa-

"The governor is really getting a bad rap on this," he said. "To hear many of the teachers, the governor is the one who passed House Bill

The legislator also said higher taxes could be a must next year when the Legislature convenes. "The people who are talking about 'no new taxes' are talking nonsense." he said. The most prominent candidate using the "no new taxes" slogan is former Gov. Bill Clements, whom Thompson supported in 1982 for governor when the legislator was a Democrat. 'It seems to me some form of taxes is going to have to be levied to get us through the monetary problems we have," he said of the state's $1.3 billion shortfall

Loeffler is running three new spots in television commercials featuring his longhorn cattle. In one of the spots, Loeffler is shown walking across a cattle pasture on his Hill Country ranch near Mason. Loeffler talks about the "lesson of the soil" and the value of hard work These are values that Mark White and his crowd seem to have lost sight of," Loeffler says. The three commercials end with the tag line, 'Tom Loeffler - The man who will beat Mark White.

The theme will be used in all of Loeffler's commercials between now and the May 3 GOP primary, his campaign officials said. The two other GOP hopefuls, Kent Hance and former Gov. Bill

Clements, plan to start new commercials within the next five days. Hance has two new spots that will air Monday. One focuses on his opposition to illegal aliens and the other on his economic development plan and the creation of new jobs in Texas, said his press spokesman

Governor says 'no' to sanctuary tag

AUSTIN (AP) — While Austin officials consider a proposal to declare the city a sanctuary for Central American refugees, Gov. Mark White says Texas cities should keep out of immigration

The Austin City Council scheduled a second hearing today on the proposed sanctuary resolution. If approved, Austin would become the first city in Texas to take such action. But White said the decision isn't up to cities since immigration policy is a matter for the federal government. "For cities or states to interject themselves in this area is counter-productive," White said in an interview

'For us to set up a 'miniimmigration service' in every city, I think, is not appropriate," the governor added.

The City Council last week heard four hours of public testimony on the resolution that is backed by Mayor Frank Cooksey. The council postponed a decision on the plan, but a majority of council members have indicated they support it.

Some 18 cities nationwide have declared themselves sanctuaries for political refugees.

GATESVILLE, Texas (AP) -A former Copperas Cove police officer accused of sexually assaulting a 14-year-old boy was on the verge of pleading guilty for a lighter sentence when the jury returned with a guilty verdict.

President Reagan, for once, took a fairly decisive step in finally going after a base of terrorism in Libya.

details yet to say I have no reservations about his decision to send jets and bombs against the terrorist foothold. But I'm sure there will be others — probably in this space tomorrow — who will express definite

For years I've been reading the news accounts and watching the television footage of the senseless destruction wrought by fanatics who feel the only way to send their message to the world is to kill a number of innocents

And while I may have some sympathy with their feelings of having been wronged in the world or of having some right to make a statement, terrorism involving innocent bystanders leaves me cold.

I'm reminded of a B.C. strip I have up on my cubicle wall, in which one of the characters reads a definition from Wiley's Dictionary: 'terrorist, n., a no-good, godforsaken, evil-minded, hell-bent, worthless, vicious, sleazy, slimy, wicked, worm-brained, lousy, rotten, stinking . . ." Wiley, seeing the stunned look on the other character's face, remarks, "I lost my objectivity on that one.

Well, that kind of sums up my feelings. I detest cowardly and unheroic terrorism. And that's what it is when it involves placement of a bomb in a restaurant or disco or airplane with the terrorist fleeing the scene. There's nothing to be proud of in such actions.

Nor do suicide missions — such as driving a truck up to a barracks to explode on contact with hard walls — move me to admiration. I have no respect for those unwilling to see the consequences of their lunacy. What bothers me most about such acts of terrorism is not the destruction, though that's terrible, I admit. Nor is it the fanaticism that drives men, women and even children to wantonly kill others, though I find that also horrible

Instead, it's the indifference toward others that underlie the actions that disturbs me, that leaves me shaking my head in wonderment.

I'm one who believes we are all brothers and sisters, sons and daughters of the same progenitor, sharers in the right to hope for peace and freedom in the world, members of the same species no matter what our skin color. In short, I believe in the family of man. And while some of us may lose our birthrights through our acts of disharmony with others, still we're family members. And like family members, we can hate each other at times because we care and feel and disagree, and at times that hate will cause us to strike out. But still there's that family blood When we forget those family ties, that commonality we are share, then indifference creeps in. And before long we're not talking about people, about brothers and sisters. Instead, we're thinking of types or categories or objects or "animals."

And it's that indifference that, I believe, has led to the greater sins than wars created in the name of religion or politics or desires to extend national borders. Hate at least has warmth, feeling — but indifference is unfeeling, cold.

It was indifference that caused many Germans to ignore the smoke from burning crematoriums, too many Americans to turn their heads when fellow Americans with a yellow skin were herded into "protectionary" camps, expansionists to move into lands conveniently emptied of those with a red skin, sheeted figures in hiding to laugh at those with black skins hanging from a limb, white foreigners to claim God's support for delegating native blacks to second-class status in their original homelands

It's indifference that ignores fellow humans by resorting to such disparaging terms as nigger, kike, wop, spick, gooks, geeks, honky and so on, terms whose utterance make me cringe, words that I find hard even to type out. Though perhaps initially uttered in innocence, their repetition leads the objects of the terms from perception as

And when a person becomes a type, it's only a step toward placing a person in a category, and then only another step toward considering a person as only an object, no longer a fellow human.

There has to be something cold and uncaring in a being who can kill innocent fathers and mothers and babies and then claim it as a victory. Or a thief who can kill someone merely for a few dollars from a cash register.

It's horrible when soldiers have to kill each other because of disputes created by opposing leaders. It's even more horrible when civilians are killed by bombs or shells or bullets guided or misguided by

And it's beyond comprehension to me how anyone can deliberately set about to kill others who are not even engaged in a battle, those without a right to at least defend themselves. Such a person has left humanity, has yielded any birthright, has lost any claim to sympathy. So, I almost cheer at Reagan's decision to attack the terrorist bases.

Instead, I found a chill along my spine when I heard someone in a radio broadcast supporting Reagan's actions and remarking we should "nuke them until they glow in the dark."

Terrorism is bad, cruel, heartless. But a nuclear bomb is indifference in its most fearful form - so far, anyway. I shudder to think what we may yet devise in the name of defensive protection or offensive prevention, especially when it's touted as a means to save humanity. There can't be much humanity in such weapons, and even less humanity in actually wanting to use them.

Acquino's actions cause for concern

One may be entitled to hope that the Philippines are not in the process of trading a grasping autocrat for a one-party government. President Corazon Aquino seems like such a nice woman, and it would be tragic if she were unable or unwilling to deliver on the promise implicit in her election that the country would be freed of some of the impositions placed on it during the long rule of Ferdinand Marcos.

Nonetheless, it is difficult not to be wary of a leader who sweeps away the National Assembly and appoints a committee rather than an elected body to write a new constitution — particularly when the plan sets no timetable for scheduling new elections or adopting a new constitution. She may consider such a step — which gives her far more formal power than Marcos had under the martial law he imposed in 1972 — a necessary and temporary expedient on the road to greater freedom. One would like to give her the benefit of the doubt.

"Absolute power is like a knife," said one Philippine political strategist who still trusts Mrs. Aquino. "In the hands of a surgeon, it is a life-giver. In the hands of a cruel person, it is tool of murder.

deeper and more ancient wisdom was expressed in the last century by the historial Lord Acton, reknowned in his day as the most learned man in England. "Power corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely." Little has occurred in the 20th century to invalidate that insight.

One may hope that Aquino turns out to be the exception that proves the rule. One waits the outcome with a certain amount of trepida-

new look at El Salvador

What a difference a year makes. At this point in 1985, Jose Napoleon Duarte was the king of the hill in El Salvador. Elected president 10 months earlier, he led his Christian Democratic Party to an upset victory in parliamentary elections, ousting a right-wing majority that had blocked implementation of his program of much-needed reforms. Hailed as a genuine democrat and the best hope for finding a way out of the bloody impasse of El Salvador's civil war, he had the backing of the support of the Salvadoran military. That was then. You don't hear so much about El Salvador these days. Barring an occasional headline incident, such as the murder of American servicemen on a downtown street or a pitched battle with rebel troops on the outskirts of the capital, its problems have been overshadowed by those of Nicaragua.

U.S. government and the grudging

That may be just as well from the standpoint of a lot of the people trying to deal with them, including Duarte. The king's position is considerably less commanding these days.

Duarte's record during the past year is largely one of unfulfilled promise and promises.

He had pledged to curb abuses by military and police personnel be-lieved primarily responsible for some 50,000 deaths and disappearances during six years of civil war. He said he would investigate political killings and bring known perpetrators to justice. He promised economic and social reforms, and to pursue a peaceful settlement rather than military

He has not delivered. The guilty have not been brought to justice. Death squads are active again, with mutilated bodies turning up on the capital's streets. An Amnesty International report earlier this year charged that "government agents routinely torture prisoners in their custody, conduct 'disappearances' and commit political killings in attempts to eliminate opposition to the government." The dialogue with the rebel leadership initiated in October 1984 has been allowed to die. War, not broad reforms to address the longstanding causes of El Salvador's conflict, has become the first priority of Duarte's administration. War has, in fact, become the country's leading industry, as measured by U.S. aid. Some half billion dollars a year is now being pumped into the economy by Washington.

That, in fact, stands as Duarte's one unqualified success. He has proved to be the man, as his military allies anticipated, who could get Congress to ante up without complaint.

But to what purpose? The rebels have been prevented from winning, but they are far from being defeated. They have shifted to a strategy of low-intensity warfare, prepared, according to reports, to carry on for years if necessary. Once active largely in the eastern part of the country, they are now present in force in 12 of El Salvador's 14 provinces

Duarte's ineffectiveness as president has raised questions again about Duarte the politician. He is seen as a better campaigner than an administrator. There has long been suspicion that he is more interested in the presidency's prestige than its power, that he is driven more by ambition than by principle.

True, the kidnapping of his daughter by the rebels last year was an emotional blow from which he is said to be not yet fully recovered. But his program and public support began to erode before that drama.

That public support continues to slip. Labor unions have staged protest demonstrations, raising the question of whether Duarte can even complete his term, which runs to 1989.

And that leads to an even more discouraging question: Given El Salvador's continuing agony, does it really

The register is the first thing you see. It is a register of the dead. The Vietnam dead.

You look through the book for the name you want to see remembered on the memorial wall. The register gives you the location of each name. They are in chronological order of when each person died.

On one end, where the names of the early dead are located, the wall is low, and as the war years reach their peak it raises. It gets lower again as the war begins to wind down.

The wall is staggering in its simplicity. Names, names and more names. Over 50,000 of them are etched for eternity.

You notice many names with "Jr." behind them, and you reason these were the first-born sons of their families, the post-World War II's Baby Boomers.

People stand and stare. Some are staring at the name of somebody they still love. Others, perhaps, are just curious.

They see a name, they wonder what the face looked like that went with the name. They wonder if there are grieving parents, if there is a grieving widow somewhere.

A woman and a girl-child have flowers in their hands. They go to the row where their name is located and place the flowers below the name. An older couple stares at the wall. Then, they turn and walk away, his arm around her shoulder. You guess they were there to see the name I look for two names myself. I look for Tim Rembert Wyatt was a fraternity brother. We called him "Wally Walrus." He smiled a lot. I found both names on the wall. Once they were living, breathing people, now they're names written on a wall of dead. I felt guilty looking at those names. Why them and not me? This wasn't my daddy's war. This was my war. These were my contemporaries.

They fought and died. I lucked out. We have put Vietnam behind us now. Today we have Lebanon, Libya and Central America. But thank God, this thing, this monument is here. Maybe before we commit ourselves to another unwinnable war, realizing it's unwinnable only after we've spent 50,000 American lives, someone who can prevent such a thing will visit this monument and take notice of the names and feel their ghosts.

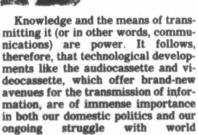

The ghosts are there. Believe me, they are

Potential of videotapes in politics

communism It is estimated that a third of all American families now own a videocassette recorder, and that half will do so within a year. Mostly, of course, these are used to play rented movie tapes or to record desired programs for viewing at more convenient times. But potentially these machines offer political organizations a matchless opportunity to put their message before target groups without dilution or rebuttal. Currently, direct mail and radio or TV commercials are the only means of putting one's case before the voters without running it through the filter of our heavily liberal media, and both are regularly used to the point of saturation.

For the moment the limiting factor, as far as videocassettes are concerned (and they are, of course, vastly more riveting than mere audio), is cost. Even very large production or-ders could not be filled for less than several dollars per cassette - obviously far too expensive for any candidate to send broadside to his constituency. But such a figure is well within the reach of even small organizations. which can buy such a cassette and play it on a borrowed VCR to a meet-- even a meeting held in a private home.

That is exactly what California conservatives are doing this year, in aid of their campaign to defeat ultraliberal Chief Justice Rose Bird of the California Supreme Court in her bid for re-election. A group called the Law and Order Campaign Committee has sold 2,000 copies of an anti-Bird videotape at $15 apiece, and these are being shown at political gatherings, meetings and parties all over the

One can only speculate how a similar videotape, widely deployed in the close battle over ratification of the Panama Canal treaties, might have affected the outcome of that struggle. Certainly, as a veteran of the Draft Goldwater Campaign of the early 1960s, I know that the availability of such a weapon of communication would have been absolutely galvanizing. There were literally thousands of small but dedicated groups of Goldwater fans all over the country who could have been mobilized effectively by such a means. (Of course, he won the nomination anyway, and I am not suggesting that even a videotape could have changed the election

Even more interesting is the potential of such cassettes for clandestine use behind the Iron Curtain. Here the chief problem would be smuggling the relatively bulky VCRs themselves into communist areas. Once that was accomplished, however, the audience for cassettes depicting life in the Free World would be huge — and the peril to a hermetically closed communist society would be enormous. (Imagine the welcome such a message would receive among the resistance groups in Poland today!)

Audiocassettes, which are smaller and require far less bulky equipment to play than videocassettes, are another fascinating option for use behind the Iron Curtain. Once the small playback machines were widely distributed, tapes could be delivered on a regular basis and listened to in strict privacy or in small groups, beyond all possibility of jamming by Comrade Gorbachev's transmitters.

U.S. accuses Soviets of wasting six months since 'fireside' summ

By BARRY SCHWEID AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Reagan administration, stung by cancellation of summit planning talks, lashed out at the Soviet Union for a lack of progress in easing superpower tensions and bitterly condemned the Kremlin for failing to avert the bombing of a West Berlin nightclub.

'They have wasted six months since the summit," the State Department said in a sharply worded statement Wednesday that blamed Moscow for not maintaining the momentum begun at President Reagan's meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev last November.

In a separate but related blast, the department said the Soviets had been warned Libyans were planning an assault in the German city and could have stopped them from carrying it out.

It virtually blamed Moscow for the April 5 discotheque bombing in which an American soldier and a Turkish woman were killed and hundreds wounded. Reagan, saying there was irrefutable evidence linking Libya to the attack, had U.S. warplanes bomb Tripoli and Benghazi on Monday in "selfdefense" against terrorism.

"We urged the Soviets and East Germans to restrain the Libyans," the State Department said. "Had they done so, this entire cycle of events would have been avoided."

The department said the Soviets were advised March 27, in Washington and in Berlin, that there was evidence indicating Libyans in East Germany planned actions against U.S. "interests and citizens" in the German city.

The statement said the United States had kept Moscow informed of its concerns at every stage leading up to Monday's bombing of Libya and "requested their assistance.

The department criticized the Soviets for supplying Libya with anti-aircraft missiles and said the United States had warned Moscow the missiles "might encourage (Col. Moammar) Khadafy to take risks which would force us to respond. This, in fact, turned out to be the case.

The United States and the Soviets had agreed to step up their dialogue with a May 14-16 meeting here between Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

The idea was to try to fix a date and arrange the agenda for a second Reagan-Gorbachev summit meeting to be held in Washington either in July or after the U.S. congressional elections in November.

But the Soviets responded

Tuesday to the American attack on Libya by denouncing it as a 'criminal action' and canceling Shevardnadze's visit.

Against this backdrop, Reagan heard conflicting views Wednesday from his senior advisers on whether to keep U.S. nuclear missiles within limits of the 1979 SALT II treaty.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the president did not make a decision at the hourlong meeting. Another U.S. official, who demanded anonymity, said Reagan was expected to decide the treaty question by the weekend.

Shultz and veteran adviser Paul H. Nitze urged him at the meeting not to exceed the unratified treaty's ceiling on missiles when a new Trident nuclear submarine begins sea trials next month, the official said.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, CIA Director William Casey, arms control director Kenneth Adelman and senior adviser Edward Rowny all counseled him to add the submarine's 24 missiles without destroying older launchers in response to allegations of Soviet violations of the treaty.

"It was a chance for everybody to air his views," the official said. "Historically, Reagan never expresses his position until he hears

White House struggled to hide decision to raid Libya

By MICHAEL PUTZEL AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP)- "The biggest problem of a free democracy is that you can't do very many things secretly," one White House aide observed this week after the surprise bombing raid against Libya.

This administration, despite President Reagan's constant complaints to the contrary, has been more effective than most in cutting off the flow of information about the president's work behind closed doors.

Nevertheless, much was known about White House intentions leading up to the attack it-

Reagan reiterated his willingness to retaliate for terrorist acts against Americans if he could determine responsibility. And U.S. officials spoke openly of the even disclosed, almost a week before the air raid, that Reagan's key advisers were agreed that he should take military action to punish the perpetrators of the April 5 disco bombing. They even noted that Reagan's hard-line aides had been joined by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, who in the past had opposed retaliatory raids out of concern for the innocent and the long-range effects of such a policy.

The officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said no time or targets had been selected. although Reagan himself has since told USA Today he knew on April 9 — five days before the attack - when and where the strikes would occur. He said he was careful not to say so as he answered a myriad of questions aircraft carriers were canceling port calls and returning to stations in the Mediterranean.

Their movements were used in the days to come as an indicator of Reagan's intentions, but observers were misled when the flattops seemed to be in a holding pattern off Sicily. The big ships actually moved in under cover of darkness to take up stations off Libya just before the attack

By the end of the week, members of Congress were complaining the administration wasn't keeping them informed of developments, and several warned that the president was required by the War Powers Act to consult Congress before attacking Libya,

Republicans use tactical gamble in an effort to win Contra aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republicans, who in a surprise move voted to block President Reagan's proposed $100 million in assistance for the Nicaraguan rebels, expressed confidence they can revive the package later.

Democrats, however, predict the GOP lawmakers will lose the tactical gamble they have taken, and say they will likely approve a different version of the aid containing restrictions the president opposes.

In a surprise move, Republicans joined Democrats Wednesday in approving an amendment that basically eliminated all $100 million President Reagan wants for the Contras fighting Nicaragua's leftist government.

The Republican tactic prevented the House from voting on a proposal by Kep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., which would have granted Reagan his $100 million package, but delayed spending $75 million of it for at least three months while peace talks were tried to end the Central American struggle

Instead, by a 361-66 vote, the House passed an amendment by Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., which would replace Reagan's program with a package of $27 million in aid to Central American refugees and $2 million in help to the so-called Contadora Latin nations trying to mediate a peaceful solution.

On the vote, 184 Democrats were joined by 177 Republicans. Only one Republican, Rep. Willis Gradison of Ohio, voted to keep the Reagan plan alive.

The parliamentary maneuvering came because Democrats hold a 252-182 edge in the chamber, with one seat vacant.

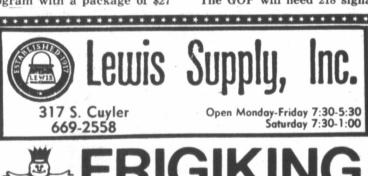

Last month, after the House voted 222-210 against Reagan's package, House Democratic leaders promised to bring it up again this month but to attach it to an unrelated bill making $1.7 billion in various appropriations. The Republican-controlled Senate later narrowly approved a modified Contra package. But Reagan has threatened to veto the spending bill if it passes and he comptained Wednesday that Republicans were being denied a vote on a free-standing Contra package because of "a back-door parliamentary man-

Inflexible prices can be very costly

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — It pays these days to look at more than the brand name when you drive up to a gasoline pump, because some retailers are observing the laws of supply and demand while others

Some, that is, are lowering the retail price of their product to adjust I to the falling cost of oil, and others are not. And customers who aren't a aware of the game — and many are not — are the poorer for it.

The gasoline pump isn't the only place where the game is played. Bank card credit also remains extraordinarilly costly, even though the cost to banks of the money they lend has been cut sharply. And health care services continue to rise out of proportion to the general level of inflation

Long explanations are offered for the phenomenon of prices that just won't fall, but wise consumers and behavioral psychologists suspect that one reason is that people don't expect decreases and have trouble adjusting to them.

For that they can hardly be blamed, because you must search back more than three decades to 1955 before finding a year in which prices in general declined. The trend has been up, and so have expectations of

The result is that for a usually brief period, some merchants can earn a windfall by maintaining prices where they are while their own

The deep and widespread interest-rate decline is still not reflected in the credit cards of many banks, which continue to charge between 15 percent and 20 percent, the same rates charged three or four years ago. In some instances, the true rates are even higher because of the addition of annual fees.

Asked to explain the reasons why, several large banks have insisted that consumer credit is an expensive business, one involving big expenses for paper, postage and data system operators.

While the explanation appears plausible, it creates the mystery of why the same banks compete for new card customers. And the answer often given is that in a world of deregulation banks need customers for their other services

Pricing inflexibility seems to be inherent in the vending machine business, where prices sometimes rise by huge percentages, and where there hasn't been a price decline since a penny bought what a dime does today

In areas where housing prices have surged, especially along the corridor between Boston and Washington, D.C., brokers are still inclined to charge 6 percent on a sale, although this means a windfall

Republicans urged to seek political gains from drop in crude oil price

WASHINGTON (AP) - Except for those in oil-producing states, Republicans could benefit from a political windfall if the plunge in gasoline prices can be linked to the GOP administration, the House Republican Research Committee says in a memor-

Party members in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana "will make do with mixed messages as glad tidings overall are offset by turmoil in certain communities and key industries.

The March 19 memorandum, titled "A GOP Windfall: The Oil Price Plunge and How to Talk About It," offered members tips for telling voters how the oil price decline benefits them and how Reagan is responsible for those

"I hope the Republican Party doesn't take it on itself to do everything it can to make that a partis in issue," said Republican Rep. Joe Barton, whose East Texas district is coming off an oil

"Because in our state and Louisiana and Oklahoma, it needs to be a non-partisan issue and everybody pull together for the good of our area," he said.

Barton, a freshman whose reelection race is targeted by Democrats, has gone against the Republican congressional tide by favoring an oil import tax.

"I'm on the right side and I don't think it's going to be an issue for me," said Barton.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) -The government cannot force farmers to brand cows on the face as part of its $1.8 billion dairy herd reduction program because it's long been public policy to avoid unnecessary cruelty, a judge says.

U.S. District Judge Michael Telesca on Wednesday changed his April 4 temporary restraining order against the branding requirement to a preliminary iniunction, pending an as-yetunscheduled trial.

The ruling does not prevent the U.S. Department of Agriculture attorney Shalom Brilliant.

Gramm favors measures to support the banking industry and tax incentives for oil producers instead, an approach also endorsed by other GOP members of the Texas delegation.

"What themes can help constituents to link their savings to our policy?" the memorandum asked, then gave some suggestions, including "free markets earn their keep," "it's another tax cut," and "the expansion gets a second wind."

"Broadly defined," the memorandum said, "the Carter-Democratic approach of red tape, price controls and weak foreign policy led to gas lines, price hikes and economic stagnation. The Reagan Era has, in every way, produced the opposite."

Looking after untouched woods

CHARLOTTE, Vt. (AP) - New England's woods have been clear-cut by man many times over. Even in the remote northern forests near Canada, the stands of trees are almost all second and third generation timber

Oak has been sought for shipbuilding, hemlock for tanning, hardwoods for furniture, and spruce and fir for paper-making. Wind, insects, fire and lightning have been less discriminating, toppling all species.

But roughly two dozen New England forest stands such as Williams Woods, a 65-acre parcel in this Champlain Valley town, have survived untouched over the centuries.

These are virgin forests, and conservancy groups in the region are beginning to take notice. Studies on the original forests have been recently completed in Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine, and state officials and environmentalists are contacting andowners or are buying the

"These trees are history books, and we are just starting to learn how to read them," said Marc Desmeules, an ecologist with the Vermont chapter of the Nature Conservancy, a nationwide land trust group. "If we really want to understand how forests work, we need to have completely undisturbed forests.

While efforts to locate and preserve virgin forests in the West have been going on for generations, environmentalists in the Northeast are just beginning to study them.

"We're 50 years behind the times to go out and identify them," said Charles Cogbill, who has done an extensive inventory of old-growth forests in Maine.

Virgin, or old-growth, forests in the West may include trees older than 5,000 years, but the oldest trees in the more densely peopled Northeast are believed to be slightly over 500 years. That is

Curator to narrate style show

JO ANNE ARASIM

Jo Anne Arasim, curator of textiles for Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum in Canyon is to be the narrator for the antique fashion shows scheduled for the Sesquicentennial celebration, April 21, at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

The first showing is to be from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m. in the Heritage Room of M.K. Brown. The remaining three shows are set for 5 p.m., 5:30 p.m. and 6:15 p.m. during the Taste of Texas Barbecue in the auditorium's Heritage Room. Dresses from the 1890s, the 1920s and 1940s from Pampan Bette Bates' collection are to be featured in the 15-minute programs. The following local women will be modeling the attire -Bates, Angela Spearman, Sue Fatheree, Julia Dawkins, Kim Breazille, Ervine Dunn, Penny Sumner, Holly Burger, Gena Chandler, Glennette Goode and Frankie Smith.

Arasim says that she will emphasize in her narration how women of this area learned about fashion trends and how worldwide trends affected clothes the Panhanele women wore.

Ara: im has attended the Uni versity of Alaska and Michigan State University where she received a bachelor of arts degree in anthropology. She has undertaken graduate studies at the University of Denver, Colo., and Michigan State University.

She has been employed as curator of textiles for the Canyon museum for the past six years. As textiles curator Arasim identifies, conserves, restors and exhibits the textile materials of the museum. She supervises the preparation of exhibits for the Hall of Historic Fashion and supervises staff and coordinates volunteer activities. In addition, Arasim helps develop and present educational programs including special education programs for handicapped audiences. She also prepares conservation of textile materials in cooperation with the staff of the Texas Conservation

Prior to working for the Canyon museum, Arasim served as museum director and curator of anthropology at the Wilderness Park Museum in El Paso.

I am not a poor housekeeper, but I have to fight to keep the Sunday paper an extra day if I didn't finish reading it. Christmas morning Harry sat with a garbage bag while presents were being opened so the boxes and wrapping paper could be discarded immediately. ("Hand the trash to Daddy, then you may open another present.") Christmas card envelopes with addresses I needed were thrown out while the mail was being opened.

When Harry and I were dating, I teased him because he did his laundry every day. He explained that if anything happened to him, he didn't want anyone to find a pair of dirty socks in his apartment! I thought he was kidding; now I know he was

'Dear Abby' celebrates 30th year

NEW YORK - Who is read by approximately 80 million men, women and children, and appears in more than 1,200 newspapers worldwide?

Who has become an American tradition with her humor, compassion and 30 productive years of hard work?

Abigail Van Buren. "Dear Abby" to you.

This month, Dear Abby marks her 30th anniversary as a nationally syndicated columnist. Universal Press Syndicate President John P. McMeel succinctly characterized her success when he said, "Dear Abby is consistently voted the 'most read' column in the newspapers in which she appears. Her sincerity and compassion have clearly endeared her to millions of readers of all ages and made her the premier advice columnist writing

"People haven't changed," said Abby when asked about her readers. "The problems are the same but the people are much more open. Thirty years ago I heard from few men. Men were expected to handle everything themselves, asking for help was a weakness. No more. My mail still runs two women writers to every man, however. Ages run from youngsters who can barely write to the very elderly.

Abby started her career at the age of 37 when she called the editor of the San Francisco Chronicle to criticize the advice column currently appearing. He casually invited her to stop by "sometime" for an interview. He was surprised when she turned up the

Summer business looks feature crispness, style

By Florence De Santis

Except for that small group of faddists who pursue relentlessly every avant-garde trend, most women prefer their summer clothes to be simple. cool and unlikely to wilt.

This is particularly true of women who spend their summers at work. Leisure clothes are for weekends and vacations, while the need for a good business wardrobe goes right on.

Some designers create business clothes in color groups to liven basi-cally easy, simple lines. Using cottonblend ottoman, with its finely ribbed surface, Eleanor Brenner starts with a lightweight lavender trench coat for all-weather good looks. Its puffed-elbow sleeves and oversize epaulets give it a new look.

A variety of pieces, in lavender or green for mix and match, go with the coat. These include a dashingly easy jacquard jacket, various casual tops that can be tucked in for the office or worn knotted in front for weekend, and a choice of skirts, pants and

At Chanel, the summer wardrobe coat comes in black-and-white houndstooth check lightweight wool, with big, rounded shoulders and loose cut. This is especially good as a travel coat or a coverup for clothes in black, white and red. Anne Klein likes the softness of cream wool in a wideshouldered coat with loose sleeves and a dramatically big notched-lapel

Nothing looks crisper when the weather warms up than a suit, especially if it's in linen and an easy cut. Elliot Lauren uses random-striped beige linen for a jacket that eases down the figure to well over the hips. It has an equally long, open collar and push-up sieeves. The side-buttoned skirt looks slim but is also eased. Kasper's suit for A.S.L. combines the long, collarless jacket with low double-breasting. The navy box check on beige jacket accompanies an airy navy skirt that is panel-pleated in

In easy-care fabrics, light-color suits can be worn even in cities. Devon uses a slubbed raw-silk look in a delicious peachy pink for its softly tailored loose blazer and welt-seamed skirt that releases pleats above the hem. Harve Benard's beige version widens the shoulders with tucked sleeve tops.

Saberhagen wins first game

By The Associated Press

"You can't pitch much bet-ter than that," Kansas City Manager Dick Hower said. He was talking about his own

Bret Saberhagen, but he could easily have been referring to Ron Romanick of the California Angels

Both Saberhagen and Romanick pitched two-hitters Wednesday night to lead their teams to victories - Kansas City beating Boston's Al Nipper 1-0 and Romanick stopping the Seattle Mariners 4-0.

In other American League games on Wednesday, Minnesota defeated Oakland 7-5 in 10 innings and Chicago downed Detroit 10-4. Three other games — Baltimore at Toronto, Texas at Milwaukee and New York at Cleveland were postponed by inclement weather. Saberhagen, who last year became the youngest pitcher to win the Cy Young Award in the AL, faced just 29 batters, striking out six and walking just one The only Boston hits were singles by Tony Armas with two out in the second and Don Baylor leading off the fifth. Neither advanced beyond first. Nipper was almost as good as Saberhagen, allowing just five hits. But one was Steve Balboni's second homer of the season to lead off the second. the only run Saberhagen needed. Last season Balboni had only two hits at Fenway Park.

In the California-Seattle game, Romanick lost his perfect game by walking the very first batter, the first of five in the game. And, with two down in the sixth, Ivan Calderon's single broke up the no-hit bid. But the California right-hander didn't mind. "It's my best game ever, as far as keeping my stuff through nine innings goes," Romanick said. "I was a real pitcher out there.

Gorman Thomas got Seattle's second hit, a one-out single in the ninth.

Romanick is now 2-0 as he tries to erase the memory of the second half of 1985. After going 13-4 before the All-Star break, he won only one game after July.

White Sox 10, Tigers 4

Ron Kittle had a three-run homer and a sacrifice fly, while Carlton Fisk also homered as Chicago overpowered Detroit at Comiskey Park.

"I don't care if I was 1-for-13," said Kittle. "I didn't consider myself in a slump. I hadn't swung at a bad pitch all season.

The triumph was only the second in eight games for the

Lakers get no respect

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) -As they begin the playoffs in defense of their NBA title, the Los Angeles Lakers are wondering why they aren't getting much re-

"Last year, it was 'Will Boston repeat?" starting guard Byron Scott of the Lakers said. "Now, it's 'Will Boston win the title?' It's erything is turned around in Boston's favor.'

The Lakers open defense of their crown tonight, facing the San Antonio Spurs at the Forum in the opener of a best-of-five first-round playoff series. The second game, also at the Forum, will be played Saturday after-not 'Will the Lakers repeat?' Ev-

"The (Boston) Celtics have already, in so many words, dethroned us," Coach Pat Riley of the Lakers said. "They're already planning the coronation back in Boston Garden. So be it.

"Teams are always blowing their horns about how they are going to beat us. They're knocking on the door, we're hearing them coming, it's going to be their year, all those things." Said guard Earvin "Magic"

Johnson: "All those other teams who say they can beat us will have to come through us to get where they want to go. Since I've been here, this team has not gotten any respect.

"I love the position we're in," Johnson added. "I've always loved being the underdog. We could win 70 games and it would be the same. They just don't respect the Lakers. It don't matter to me, though. We'll do our thing out on the court.'

The Lakers had a 62-20 record during the just-completed regular season, the same record they had during the 1984-85 campaign. They are trying to become the first NBA team to repeat as champions since the Celtics did the trick in 1969.

Los Angeles' record was the best in the NBA's Western Conference while the Celtics, who lost to the Lakers in six games in %ast spring's Championship Series, had a 67-15 regular-season mark, the best record in the Eastern Conference.

'Even though I think we may not have played our best basketball on a consistent basis (during the regular season), we always found a way to win," Riley said "This is the trademark of a veteran team, this one in particular.

"I don't think there's any doubt we're ready ... and I'm talking about winning the championship.'

Los Angeles won four of its five regular-season games against San Antonio. The Spurs had a 35-47 regular-season record, worst in their history. But that hasn't dampened their optimism.

"I think that San Antonio is the last team the Lakers wanted to meet in the opening round," center Artis Gilmore of the Spurs said. "We play them real well."

Gilmore was one of many San Antonio players sidelined because of injuries during the regular season. But the Spurs enter the playoffs as well off physically as they've been in some time.

The third game of the series will be played at San Antonio next Wednesday night. A fourth game, if needed, would be played at San-Antonio on Friday night, April 25. If a fifth game is needed, it would be played at the Forum on Sunday afternoon, April 27.

Pampa tennis teams enter district tourney action

The Pampa High tennis squads compete in the District 1-4A tournament Friday and Saturday at the Canyon High School courts.

First-round play starts at 9 a.m. Friday with the winners advancing to the semi-finals and finals Saturday. Canyon is the defending district champion.

Pampa is coming off a 10-6 loss Tuesday to Amarillo High. Winning matches matches for Pampa were Andrea Adcock, and Salil Mohan in singles and Reagan Eddins-Matt Walsh, Bernard Avandanio-Eric Hallerburg in doubles. Miss Adcock defeated Kate Williams, 6-1, 6-1, and Lisa Hand, 6-1, 6-3. Mohan won over Dharmesh Patel, 6-2, 6-3, but lost to Rob Palmer, 6-7, 3-6. Mohan, who is Pampa's top-seeded player, missed a month of tennis because of double pneumonia.

Pampa participated in the Amarillo Relays last weekend. Miss Adcock in singles and Stephanie Trollinger and Kellye Welborn in doubles were the only Pampa players advancing past the first two rounds.

Miss Adcock, a sophomore downed Macy Bray of Midland, 6-3, 6-4, in first-round action, and then won over Stacy Hill of Levelland, 6-1, 6-7, 6-2. Miss Adcock lost to Michelle King of Canyon, 3-6, 3-6, in the quarterfinals.

Trollinger and Welborn defeated Heather Coleman and Inge White of Midland Lee, 6-2, 6-3, in the first round of girls' doubles. They then got past Norma Guzman and Shannon Shepard of Amarillo Caprock, 6-3, 6-2, before falling to Cindy Trekell and D'Lane Peeples, 6-0, 6-1.

Sooners tackled by 48

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — As many as five University of Oklahoma football recruits could be withheld from competing this fall as a result of Proposition 48. Sooner recruiting coordinator Scott Hill says

Proposition 48 goes into effect in the fall and requires that freshman athletes meet minimum standards in grade point average for core curriculum courses. They also must meet minimum guidelines on either the American College Test or Scholastic Aptitude Tes. Hill said Wednesday that one recruit, running back Nelson Pearson of Lubbock, Texas, will been sent to Navarro County Junior College in Corsicana, Texas. The other four have satisfactory grades to enroll in school but have not done well enough in test scores to be eligible to play or practice, he said.

The four recruits in question are lineman Tracy Gordon of Pocola; running back Fred Gunter of Willingboro, N.J.; wide receiver Jeffrey Jackson of Houston; and lineman Darrel Kirby of Orlando, Fla.

Gunter reportedly covers 40 yards in 4.3 seconds, and scored 16 touchdowns as a senior. Jackson has run 100 yards in 9.5 seconds and the 40 in 4.3. Gordon had 152 tackles as a senior, all but 47 unassisted.

Hill said the only other questionable recruits from this year's recruiting class were quarterback Bernard Hall of Detroit and guard Nigel Clay of Fontana, Calif. It appears both have met the eligibility requirements, Hill

Rockets favored over Kings as NBA playoffs tip off tonight

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston's Robert Reid still can recall the bitter taste of defeat after the Rockets' abrupt departure from the NBA playoffs last season.

"It was like you ate a 24-day old watermelon and couldn't wait to get it our of your mouth," said eid. "I started the next Monday tting ready for this season."

The Rockets, who were upset by Utah in the first round of last year's playoffs, will again be favorites tonight when they host the Sacramento Kings in the first game of their best-of-five games first-round series.

This year the Rockets aren't wearing their favorite's role as comfortably.

"We have to be very careful and have the killer instinct," said center Akeem Olajuwon. "But I feel better about this year. We have one more year of experience for each player."

Olajuwon and 7-4 Ralph Sampson, the Rockets' Twin Towers, will be the focus of the Kings' concerns but Reid could be the key to Houston's success.

Reid will start at point guard instead of his customary sixth man role because Allen Leavell is still recovering from a wrist injury suffered April 3.

"Everyone knows when Ralph and Akeem are in the game, they'll kill you so it's up to me to _ a big game.

get the ball to them where they need it," Reid said.

Reid was stunned by the Rockets' early departure from the playoffs last year. He started lifting weights the next day and has been an integral part of the Rockets' success this season in winning the Midwest Division.

"He's playing the way I anticipated he would play before I got the job," Rockets Coach Bill Fitch said.

Sacramento Coach Phil Johnson says the Kings must try to contain the Twin Towers and not let any other Rockets break open the game. "We're not going to be able to stop Sampson and we're not going to stop Olajuwon, no one's been able to stop them all season," Johnson said. "You've got to hold those guys to their average.

The second game of the series is scheduled in The Summit Saturday at 7 p.m. CST.

Games three and four are scheduled in Sacramento Tuesday and Thursday and a fifth game would be played in Houston on April 26.

'The other thing you have to do is not let their bench beat you,' Johnson said. "You can't let some guy who doesn't normally have big games come in and have

Olajuwon finished eighth in the league with a 23.5 scoring average anad Sampson was fifth in rebounds with an 11.1 per game

'Our points will come from me getting our offense into the flow and feeding it to the guys who'll make the points," Reid said.

Kings center LaSalle Thompson will have to contend with the Twin Towers.

"With Akeem, you've got to double team him and hope he misses some shots," Thompson said. "And if you don't box him off the boards, you're dead. That's what we have to do, the trouble is, we don't always do it." Thompson averaged 12.8 points this season and 9.6 rebounds. "My offense has picked up, but I'm proudest of my defense and the improvement in my passing game," Thompson said. "My mental game is much better too." Kings forward Otis Thorpe will be paired against Sampson, On offense, you've got to take it right at Ralph and not be intimidated by his height," said Thorpe, 6-10.

Reagan congratulates Lady Longhorns

WASHINGTON (AP) — The University of Texas Lady Longhorns, who went undefeated through the season to capture the national women's basketball championship, received congratulations from President Reagan

Wednesday in a private meeting in the Oval Office.

The Louisville Cardinals, winners of the men's collegiate championship, also were congratulated.

Texas won the women's title by
