Reagan maintains summit allies united against terrorism

TOKYO (AP) — President Reagan said today that he and his summit allies privately explored all "possible tools or weapons" for waging a joint battle against terrorism but decided it would not be helpful to publicly reveal what steps might be taken.

Reagan denied he was planning another military strike against Libya's Col. Moammar Khadafy, saying of a published report to that effect: "No one was more surprised to hear that I was planning that than I was, because I'm not planning that."

He insisted, however, despite less supportive statements from his summit colleagues, that the allies now have formed "a united front" and "will act together with regard to opposing terrorism, to isolate those states that provide support for terrorism, to isolate them and make them pariahs on the world scene and even, if possible, isolate them from their own people."

Reagan summed up the Tokyo summit at a news conference before heading home after a 13-day, 22,000 mile journey through the Far East, the longest of his presidency. The 13-hour time difference made it available for live broadcast in prime time on American television Tuesday night.

He called the seven-nation summit of industrial democracies a "triumph in Tokyo" and predicted it will lead to concerted action against terrorism and closer coordination of international economic policy.

Pressed repeatedly to explain what specific counter-terrorism measures the summit leaders had agreed upon, Reagan said, "We discussed at great length specific actions and all."

"But the (public) statement was one to simply say that we together will decide upon what is appropriate, depending on the acts, what is the most effective thing to do in the instance of further terror incidents, and we didn't think that it was perhaps useful to put all of that into a public statement telling the terrorists exactly what it was we intended to do."

Asked if there were "secret agreements" on economic sanctions or military actions, Reagan said, "We are going to treat with it on a united front. ...

We discussed all the things that could be seen as possible tools or weapons in this war against terrorism, but we didn't feel that this was something that you put down in a plan."

When a terrorist incident occurs in the future, he said, "we all come together and say, 'Now, what are the things here that we think are the most effective to use?'"

Asked to comment on French and Japanese statements that the summit communique on terrorism is not binding on the individual partners, Reagan said, "As far as I know, seven heads of state agreed ... that we're in this all together."

That doesn't mean, he said, that any country is precluded from taking unilateral action.

Sweeping tax changes win panel's okay

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee today approved the most sweeping tax changes in a generation, adopting a hard-fought plan that repeals deductions for most Individual Retirement Accounts and reduces many popular write-offs while slashing the top individual tax rate almost in half.

The bill would tax about 80 percent of workers at a 15 percent rate and remove an estimated 6 million low-income families from the income-tax rolls altogether. The individual tax cut would average 6.2 percent; those making between $30,000 and $40,000 would get 5 percent; at incomes above $200,000 the reduction would be 4.7 percent.

Capital gains and most IRAs would lose their tax benefits. Corporate taxes would rise by about $100 billion over five years and well-to-do investors and profitable companies would lose some of the shelters that have allowed them to reduce their tax burdens to little or nothing.

Three hours before the committee passed the bill unanimously, President Reagan said from Tokyo that he found the emerging product far superior to the plan passed by the House last December.

Deputy Treasury Secretary Richard Darman praised Chairman Bob Packwood, R-Ore., "for your bold tax-reform proposal" and said that while the administration has some reservations, the bill is "a major step toward achieving meaningful tax reform."

Packwood, who revived the bill after it had been picked to pieces by the committee, was given a standing ovation after the final vote shortly after midnight. "A historic effort," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

But the 20-0 vote masks deep concerns among committee members about major parts of the bill. After a wearying 22-day battle, some members indicated they were happy to put off further attempts to amend the measure until it reaches the Senate floor, probably sometime in June.

During the interim, interests that would feel the bite of the bill are likely to make their feelings known to senators. These range from middle-income families who would lose their deductions for IRAs, to Wall Street, unhappy about losing preferential tax treatment of capital gains, to the real estate lobby, which would be hit hard by the anti-shelter crackdown.

The legislation would reduce significantly the tax rate applied to most people's income. A typical family of four could earn up to about $42,000 before the top rate of 27 percent took effect; income below that level would be taxed at the only other rate, 15 percent. The present top rate is 50 percent.

The top corporate tax rate, now 46 percent, would drop to 33 percent. Corporations would lose the 10 percent investment credit and several tax privileges but would gain a depreciation system that is more generous than present law.

One of the hottest issues in the bill is the provision denying most workers a deduction for contributions to an IRA — a benefit claimed by about 28 million families. Only workers not covered by a company pension plan could deposit up to $2,000 in an IRA and pay no tax on the deposit or interest it earns until the money is withdrawn.

The millions of workers who are covered by a company plan would be able to contribute $2,000 a year to an IRA — but only after paying tax on the contribution.

Perjury trial testimony ends

A jury was scheduled to decide this morning whether or not a defendant lied under oath in an earlier trial when he said he had never been a police informant.

Both sides rested Tuesday afternoon in the perjury trial involving Randy Williams.

Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton argued that Williams lied in an attempt to discredit a state's witness in February, 1985, when he told a jury trying Gary Buchanan on drug charges that he had never been an informant for the Pampa Police Department. Buchanan was later found guilty and sentenced to 12 years in prison.

Hamilton presented three witnesses, including Pampa Police Officer and former undercover agent Danny Lance, who said he had worked with Williams in trying to make some drug cases in exchange for having several tickets against Carla Williams, then the defendant's wife, dropped. He said those tickets have been dropped.

Lance is the witness Williams is alleged to have attempted to discredit in the earlier trial.

Williams' attorney, Richard Ladd, attempted to show that his client's testimony was made out of fear for his safety and that of his family and that it did not affect the outcome of the case. He presented no witnesses.

Hamilton said the question is not whether Williams' allegedly false testimony affected the trial's outcome but whether it could have. He noted that an undercover agent's credibility is crucial in drug cases because it is generally his word against several defense witnesses.

"When you attack the credibility of a state's witness, that's material because it could affect the outcome of (the proceedings)," the prosecutor said.

They'll be removed

Groom council debates speed bumps

BY CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

GROOM — Speed bumps will soon be removed from a city street, despite protests from council member Bobby Babcock and resident Donna Burton.

At their regular meeting Tuesday, council members voted 3-2 to remove two speed bumps on Wilkerson at its intersection with Third Street.

Council members Jerry Thornton and Bill Homer said they wanted the bumps removed because they are hard on vehicles and because drivers would just do their speeding on other city streets.

Babcock argued that the speed bumps are needed because other means for traffic control — stop signs, dips or yield signs — do not work without adequate law enforcement to back them up.

Burton said she was just concerned with the children and declared that she'd like to have speed bumps "on every street in town."

"I'd put one on my street," Burton said.

"We tried yield signs, stop signs and we resorted to speed bumps as a final alternative," explained Babcock.

But Homer argued that the speed bumps merely diverted traffic from where four children lived "to where there are 19 kids."

"The street was put there to drive on," Homer said, adding that the traffic and speeding can be curbed with stronger enforcement of the city's speeding ordinance.

Groom has no town marshal or municipal judge. Although two Texas Department of Public Safety officers live in town, they take care of the Interstate 40 traffic, leaving much of the responsibility for local law enforcement to Carson County Deputy Sheriff Jerry Gaines. And council members charge that Gaines is not adequately enforcing the local traffic laws.

Babcock declared that traffic signs do no good if there is no enforcement of them.

"If you can show me that law enforcement officers will do the job, I'll help you take the speed bumps out," Burton said.

Gaines, a former city council member said "there's only so much one person can do. I enforce what I see."

"I haven't noticed speeding being much of a problem."

DPS trooper Gary Davis said the state can and has enforced local traffic ordinances, but they're "on 1-40 90 percent of the time."

"If people see a traffic violation, they can file charges with the justice of the peace, just like we can," he said. "But they don't do it."

"We can hire a city marshal," Babcock said. "But that's going to cause more problems."

In an April, 1985, non-binding referendum, Groom voters rejected by a vote of 114 to 103, a city proposal to install speed bumps

Community building remodeling near

Plans have been announced for remodeling construction to begin on the community building project of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce Foundation.

Speaking at the Pampa Chamber of Commerce luncheon meeting Tuesday, foundation president Ed Myatt said, "We're about to start the project."

Myatt said construction on the building, located at the northeast corner of Kingsmill and Ballard, will begin about June 1.

Only the ground floor of the two-story structure will be remodeled at this time, providing about 10,000 square feet of space in the 20,000 square foot building.

The building will house offices for the Chamber plus several other non-profit organizations using the rent-free office space.

Myatt said plans also call for kitchen facilities and a dining room seating 180 to 190 people.

Other remodeling will have to wait until later because of a shortage of funds. The money raised by the foundation will go toward the purchase of the existing building, remodeling construction and maintenance needs.

The community building "will be important to the community, the Chamber and other organizations," he said.

Myatt said the foundation is still in need of support and "a little more" in funds.

Myatt also made notice that the foundation is not associated with the Chamber, though it had used its name in forming the foundation for the building project.

"It was a mistake" to have named it so, he said, since the foundation is not part of the Chamber nor does the Chamber direct the foundation's operations.

Myatt said anyone having any question or complaint about the foundation should take it up with him or other foundation officers and directors, not with the Chamber officials.

The community building also is designed to provide meeting places for club meetings, seminars, wedding and anniversary receptions, small conventions and other community activities.

The original plan was to build or purchase a structure with 10,000 square feet of space. But the availability of the existing building offers double that amount of space, foundation officials have noted.

Myatt said the facilities may be in use by October if the remodeling work moves along well enough to permit operations in the building by then.

at heavily traveled intersections. They also rejected, 132 to 72, a proposal to establish a municipal court and hire a city marshal.

"We got a problem," said new city council member John Eschle. "We drive too fast on the city streets. We have to decide if we want the speed bumps on every street in town or find another way to handle the speeding."

Eschle said the options would be to enlist the help of the DPS officers "or get a better county sheriff."

Another traffic problem council members tried to solve was parking at the city park during summer baseball games.

A Groom resident wrote the city expressing concern that cars parked in the roads during the city baseball games and the traffic might endanger children who were playing in the park, located across Third Street from Groom School. He suggested installing a flashing signal or making sure law enforcement officers enforce the speed limit in the area.

City council members shared the resident's concern, noting that part of the problem stems from people watching the games from their cars. They agreed to solve the congestion and safety problem by setting up portable bleachers during the games, restricting parking to the school parking lot across the street and setting up a temporary stop sign on Third Street.

Council members also approved a summer program which the city conducts in conjunction with the school and the Lions' Club. Under the program, each entity pays a pro-rata share of $1,388 for operation of the swimming pool, located at the school, the little league and the baseball park.

According to Britten, the three entities have budgeted $4,800 for the summer program. Of that, $2,250 goes for operation of the swimming pool, $850 for the little league, $500 for repair of the baseball park, $500 for utilities and $700 for lights. The program directors decided that parents bear all expenses for the All-Star little league game, to be held at the end of the summer.

Pampa resident's condition critical

An 81-year-old Pampa man remains in critical condition in the intensive care unit at Northwest Texas Hospital after being treated for head and internal injuries sustained in a two-car collision Tuesday.

William Carl Rankin of 1617 Charles, was transported to Amarillo Tuesday by Pampa Medical Services. His wife Mary Nell Rankin, 81, is in good condition at Coronado Hospital.

According to Pampa police reports, a 1971 Ford, driven by William Rankin and a 1984 Chevrolet, driven by Cecil Newman, 2239 Christine, collided at the intersection of 25th and Charles.

Energy conservation topic at chamber members' lunch

By LARRY HOLLIS
 Staff Writer

People who are not looking for energy-saving alternatives are only continuing waste and hurting conservation efforts, a Southwestern Public Service official said.

Addressing the Pampa Chamber of Commerce monthly membership luncheon Tuesday, Ronnie Edwards of the SPS Utilization Division Department in Amarillo showed a short film entitled "Chickenpower: A Fowl Look at Energy."

Featuring the famed San Diego Chicken, the film showed ways in which electrical energy and petroleum products are consumed and offered means of conserving energy.

Before the energy crisis of the mid-1970s, people were using energy to make life easier and more comfortable without giving much thought about the energy running out.

The film depicted such items as lights, alarm clocks, radios, television sets, carving knives, stoves, blenders, toasters, coffee makers, thermostat-controlled heaters and others that use electrical energy and, indirectly, the petroleum products used to provide electricity. Cars were featured as the main petroleum-consuming equipment used by most people.

Widespread use of such items consumed huge amounts of energy, causing many people to consider energy alternatives after the 1970s crisis and the higher fuel costs that resulted.

The film depicted three principles involved which have led to the present high prices for energy.

The first is "price is language." A market economy uses prices to tell us what to do. Prices simply give us information: lower prices tell us to use more; higher prices tell us to use less and conserve.

But when prices are held down by law, they give us false information, the film claimed. When prices are kept artificially low, consumers tend to buy more than producers can provide.

The second principle is supply and demand. When production costs rise but prices don't, less is produced since "no one can keep operating long at a loss."

When supplies are down and prices rise, shortages may occur, the film claimed.

Such principles were involved in actions leading to the energy crisis and the current higher prices.

The third principle — choice of alternatives — is now involved in how people should guide their use of energy.

In the transportation area, for example, people may consider cheaper forms: using buses and trains instead of cars, walking, hitchhiking, car pooling and more fuel efficient vehicles. All have some drawbacks for the independent lifestyle many of us have become accustomed to, but they do help to cut petroleum use.

In homes, energy-saving alternatives include wood burning stoves, better insulation, double-paned windows, a lower thermostat setting in winter and a higher one in summer, open windows for cooling, and the use of solar energy methods.

The film noted that higher prices encourage energy conservation methods and a search for better alternatives in energy use.

After the film, Edwards said residents need to look at the structures of their homes for energy-saving solutions.

"We can make an alternative lifestyle for ourselves" in better conserving energy, he stated.

During the luncheon, Chamber President Bill Duncan recognized the award-winners in the recently completed 1986 membership drive, a successful effort which brought more than 90 new members into the chamber, he said.

The luncheon at the Coronado Inn was sponsored by Archie's Aluminum Fab and owner, Archie Maness.

Loeffler says oil prices helped defeat

By The Associated Press

Voters were more interested in the souring state economy than in politics, a trend that spelled doom for the Tom Loeffler GOP gubernatorial campaign, Loeffler says.

But Loeffler said Tuesday he has no regrets about the primary campaign as he begins today to help Republican nominee Bill Clements in Clements' bid to unseat Democratic Gov. Mark White.

He said he wasn't surprised by the outcome of Saturday's balloting, which gave Clements 58 percent of the Republican primary vote, leaving him with 22 percent and former Congressman Kent Hance with 20 percent.

"From February, when the price of oil started dropping, people lost interest in the race. They turned to the economy, and to the fear of the unknown," he told the San Angelo Standard-Times.

"It was everywhere. It was obvious in raising money — that was extremely difficult, and I had to spend a lot of time doing it," he added. "It was obvious in the coffee shops. People weren't talking about political situations. They wanted to talk about the economy."

Loeffler noted that "the ability to gain the attention of the electorate became more and more difficult, and that was true for all three of us."

Loeffler was elected to the 21st District seat in the U.S. House in 1978 after serving as legislative counsel to then-U.S. Sen. John Tower, in the Ford White House and from January through July of 1977 as a counsel and lobbyist for the multinational conglomerate Tenneco.

He winds up his congressional service as the third-ranking member of the House Republican leadership.

He likely would have advanced in House leadership had he stayed in Congress but, he said, "I have no regrets whatsoever. I made a very clear and conscious decision that it was time to return to Texas — for the children in particular."

In other political developments Tuesday, Ed Walsh predicted his runoff race with San Antonio District Judge Roy Barrera Jr. for the GOP nomination for attorney general would be "a showdown on qualifications."

Walsh predicted he would win June 7 "and we can begin the real job beating Jim Mattox."

Walsh, former Williamson County district attorney, said in a statement he expected the runoff to be free from mudslinging but centered on a tough, issue-oriented campaign.

"I am better qualified than my opponent, I have a proven record as a law and order prosecutor, and I've done much more than merely referee the fight against crime," Walsh said. "I've been down in the trenches doing the work."

Mattox's report due today on Lucas tales

AUSTIN (AP) — Self-proclaimed killer Henry Lee Lucas duped lawmen with bogus tales of slayings, and some of those confessions were used to close murder cases that should still be open, according to a report from Attorney General Jim Mattox.

The report, however, does not directly criticize the handling of the Lucas investigation by a Texas Rangers task force, a Mattox spokesman said Tuesday.

"It's going to say sort of the same thing we've been saying — that while Lucas was running around confessing to all these murders, those who had custody of Lucas did not do anything to stop Lucas' hoax of false confessions," press secretary Elna Christopher said of the report to be made public today.

"We found no evidence to prove that any member of law enforcement in Texas deliberately tried to bring about this scheme of deception," Ms. Christopher said.

"We think a lot of these people got real wrapped up in this and were true believers that Henry Lee Lucas was the worst mass murderer in U.S. history," she added.

Mattox entered the Lucas inquiry in early 1985, and in January, he said his investigation would show that "a great miscarriage of justice took place, and it brought about a level of disrespect for our criminal justice system."

Ms. Christopher said the "miscarriage" occurred not because Lucas was charged with murders he did not commit, but because killers have remained free after lawmen closed the books on murder cases based on his confessions.

After he was arrested for the slaying of his teen-age girlfriend, Lucas claimed that he and an acquaintance committed more than 300 killings in several states.

Lucas, however, has recanted all but three of the confessions. The attorney general's report contains a chronology of Lucas' whereabouts to show that he could not have been in many places where he said he killed people.

Lucas received the death penalty in 1984 for the so-called "Orange Socks" case involving the murder of an unidentified female hitchhiker near Georgetown.

Convicted killers get last minute reprieves

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Two Texas death row inmates who were to be executed this week, one of them early today, won reprieves from federal courts.

Johnny Paul Penry, who turned 30 Monday, already was moved to the cell in preparation for the scheduled execution when he was told of the stay from U.S. District Judge William M. Steger of Tyler on Tuesday.

"He was relieved," Department of Corrections spokesman Charles Brown said of Penry, who received the death sentence for the 1979 rape-slaying of a Livingston woman in her home.

"He then was asking a lot of questions about the legal aspects of his case," Brown said.

Robert Streetman, sentenced to die by lethal injection early Thursday for the shooting death and robbery of a Kountze woman in 1982, was granted a stay Tuesday evening by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, said court clerk Gilbert Ganucheau.

Streetman had been awaiting transfer from the Ellis Unit, home of the death row, to the Walls Unit, where executions are carried out. Penry and Streetman were among at least nine convicted killers scheduled for death this month.

On Monday, the state Court of Criminal Appeals voted 7-2 to deny Penry a stay, sending his case to the federal courts.

Curtis Mason, a corrections department attorney appointed to handle Penry's case, said his request for a stay was based on broad issues, including his contention that Penry is mentally retarded.

"He has roughly the mentality of a 9- or 10-year-old," Mason said. "It would be cruel and unusual punishment to hold someone of that age group to the death penalty."

Penry, born in Comanche County, Okla., was convicted of the Oct. 25, 1979 death of Pamela Carpenter, 22. About three months before her death, Penry was paroled after serving two years of a five-year prison term for rape.

Measles outbreak sparks mass inoculation

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — About 2,400 teen-agers — the entire student body at Hanks High School — were to be vaccinated today to put a stop to a measles outbreak, officials say.

As of Tuesday, 24 cases of rubeola, also known as red measles and 10-day measles, had been confirmed at the east El Paso school, City-County Health District spokesman Salvador Balcorta said.

"We don't want another Eastwood," Balcorta said. A 1981 measles outbreak resulted in 63 cases at Eastwood High School and 225 citywide.

Hard to roast 'Uncle Walter'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The biggest joke at a celebrity "roast" of venerated CBS anchorman Walter Cronkite was that it was hard to come up with nasty jokes about good ol' "Uncle Walter."

"I'm taking the easy way out," said talk show host Dick Cavett. "I'm going to use all the jokes I used at the Mother Teresa roast."

About 300 people attended the $1,000-a-plate dinner Tuesday night to help pay for a Walter Cronkite Chair in the communications school at the University of Texas at Austin, which Cronkite, 69, attended.

Composer Marvin Hamlisch sang "The Way We Were," substituting as lyrics Cronkite's sign-off phrase, "That's the way it is."

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Ford Worth, said he always thought that "if God were to speak out loud to me, he would sound something like Walter Cronkite."

Even sharp-tongued political satirist Mark Russell had praise. "For many years, you were No. 1 — and you never owned a blow dryer," he said.

Humorist Andy Rooney insisted that "these people not finding anything negative to say about you don't know you as well as I do," then complained for three minutes that he was only given three minutes to make fun of Cronkite's faults.

The roast was emceed by former National Democratic Party Chairman Robert Strauss of Dallas, who began the proceedings by ceremoniously unveiling the Cronkite "chair" — a red velvet and gold-leaf throne. When Cronkite sat on it, a ring of tiny white lights lit up above his head in a halo.

Wish list of one mother

God couldn't have blessed me with two more wonderful children. If I had been able to fill out a request slip for my children, I couldn't have chosen better. And they're as different as night and day, not only in looks, but temperament as well.

Angel is "night" — my dark hair, her dad's brown eyes and swarthy skin. Davy is "day" — blonde like his dad with my green eyes and lighter skin coloring. Angel is quick as lightning, her thoughts and actions speeding ahead of everyone else. Davy is quiet, slow and deliberate. Though he doesn't say a lot, he misses little of what's going on.

I'm so proud to be their mother. Sometimes it's almost overwhelming to think of the task I have in bringing them up. They're such good kids. They have so much potential. I hope I'm worthy.

Today I want to give Davy and Angel my wish list for Mother's Day.

Dear Kids: So you'll know in advance, this is what I wish for you two. If you can give me these things, not necessarily all of them by Sunday, but some time during your lifetime, I'll feel I'll have been successful in my job as your mother.

Angel, I wish for you to live up to your potential. You have a marvelous learning capability. Combine that with your innate drive for success plus your sensitivity and compassion for others and you cannot help but go far. Never stop asking questions, though you may have a hard time finding answers. Don't give up. If the question can be asked, the answer must be there. I must admit, though, some of your questions may need to be referred to the Highest Authority. You certainly have a knack for getting beyond me.

I hope someday you'll learn, Angel, that physical beauty is an ephemeral thing. Like a butterfly, physical beauty only lasts for a season. Don't depend on it for your sense of self-worth, for it will only let you down. Instead, cultivate an inner beauty that shines through your face. This beauty can never be marred by the years. It's like gold which time never tarnishes but instead burnishes into a bright glow. Inner beauty is built on good thoughts, faith and love for others. I know you have it within you. I pray that you will make full use of it.

Angel, face each day not with the expectation of what it will bring for you, but rather what you can do with it. Take each hard time that comes to you, not as a blow to bring you to your knees, but as a learning experience to strengthen you as fire strengthens steel. Don't be afraid of anything, for life can do to you only what you allow it to.

Davy, my protected one. For almost a year I watched you suffer, fearful that any moment you would be snatched away from me, helpless in my inability to make you well. We were lucky, though. Things were not as serious as we feared. You recovered and became a strong and sturdy young boy.

You're a little bulldozer, Davy, running headlong into every situation, as your many scars attest. I hope that as you grow older you will gain the confidence to face life with that same determination, tempered with liberal use of your common sense.

Davy, you have a tremendous amount of inner strength, especially to have faced your illnesses when you were little with such fortitude and cheerfulness. Your delightful sense of humor can be a source of power to you as you approach your life. Don't let problems and time dull your zestful way of living. Allow your sense of humor to mature, but always hang on to it. It will stand you in good stead, no matter the situation.

Believe in yourself, Davy, as I believe in you. I encourage you to not be afraid to try new things, to accept challenges, to do the best you can do in every situation. No one demands that you be perfect, only that you do what you know in your heart is your best.

Most of all, Davy and Angel, I pray that you will build a close relationship with your Creator. Where I have failed, you can depend on Him to never do so. Where I have fallen short, you can depend on Him to give even more. He will always be there for you when you need Him, though I may not. You can trust Him in all things.

Children, if you can do this for me, if you will even try, then you'll have given your mother a Mother's Day gift that cannot be equaled. I love you.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Pouring it down foreign-aid sewer

Since 1946, the U.S. government has spent more than $146 billion on non-military aid to foreign countries. Since 1980, in stark contrast to its carefully orchestrated public relations campaign depicting its devotion to reducing the size of government, the Reagan administration has steadily increased the amounts of these gifts.

In 1985 alone, the tab for non-military foreign aid came to more than $10 billion. Yet, according to a recent study released by the Cato Institute, for all the good this largess has done us — or anyone else we might have any respectable reason for trying to help — we might as well have poured all those billions of dollar down the nearest sewer.

Policy analyst James Bovard, who wrote the study, says that Food for Peace, which absorbs about a fifth of all foreign-aid dollars we spend each year, "is probably our most harmful foreign aid program." It is supposed to help feed hungry foreigners in the short run and help them improve their agriculture productivity so they can better feed themselves in the long run.

Instead, the program has created famine and starvation worldwide. In those countries where the free-food has actually reached the people for whom it was intended, it has discouraged local farmers from increasing their production and in many cases has put them out of business altogether. Why try to grow food for sale when Uncle Sam across the sea will give it to you for nothing. Indeed, under those circumstances, why even bother to grow enough food for yourself? Why not join the rest of your countrymen and sign up as a permanent dependent on the international dole?

In many countries, however, the food never reaches the hungry in the first place. A 1984 report from the U.S. Agency for International Development (AID) cites the case of the Congo, which sold the free food it received in order to buy a small-arms factory from Italy. Other AID officials have accused the Ethiopian government of selling donated food to buy Soviet weaponry. And two years ago, the government of Mauritius used its free food to stock luxury hotels that catered to foreign tourists.

Not that our aid to other countries has done much better. As Bovard points out, "American foreign-aid rhetoric has stressed the need to develop business and private enterprise in the Third World," but in fact "almost all AID private-sector funds are channeled directly or indirectly through the recipient country's government." The result is that if the money ever reaches private business at all, it reaches only those private business that have political clout, so that what we gain is not free markets, but "crony capitalism" — money distributed to the friends and relatives of politicians.

Most import, since virtually all foreign aid money goes to foreign governments, its principal effect is to strengthen governments and make things easier for them, while simultaneously weakening their citizenry and making them all the more dependent on politicians.

In effect, our foreign aid promotes the exact opposite of what we like to think are the values on which our own nation is built. If our government really wants to help people abroad, it should do so by adopting the same policy that always works best at helping its own citizens at home. It should leave them alone.

Attack on jury system

The Supreme Court's ruling last week that blacks may not be systematically excluded from juries in criminal cases looks at first glance like an irreproachable blow against racial discrimination. But looks deceive. This decision is actually a theoretical mess, an attack on the existing jury system and an invitation to fruitless litigation.

Peremptory challenges are a tradition in American courts. They allow both prosecutors and defense lawyers to veto a given number of jurors for no reason, beyond a suspicion that they will be unsympathetic to the lawyer's case. These are different from challenges for cause, which are used to exclude jurors who for some identifiable reason — say, an acquaintance with the defendant — are likely to be biased.

It's no secret that peremptory challenges often are used to bar jurors of a particular race. A prosecutor trying to convict a black man for assaulting a white man generally will try to get a white jury. He may also veto Jews, Quakers and socialists — anyone whose background suggests a natural sympathy for the defendant. The defense lawyer, however, will tend to use his against affluent whites. No group is protected.

Letting factors like these intrude into the choosing of juries may seem illegitimate. But the only reason for peremptory challenges is to let each side bar some jurors for reasons that are not legitimate — since, if they were, they would justify challenges for cause.

The Supreme Court nonetheless says that although lawyers may use peremptory challenges for all sorts of unsavory purposes, they may not use them to exclude blacks purely because of their race. If a defendant can make a persuasive case that a prosecutor has tried to do that, says the Court, "the burden shifts to the state to come forward with a neutral explanation for challenging black jurors."

This makes a hash of the practice. Realizing the contradiction, the Court hastened to add that "though this requirement imposes a limitation in some cases on the full peremptory character of the historic challenge, we emphasize that the prosecutor's explanation need not rise to the level justifying exercise of a challenge for cause." You don't need a reason, counselor, but you do need a reason.

So what will rationalize vetoing a black juror? Even the dimmest prosecutor will be able to find an irrelevant excuse, which is to say a "neutral explanation," for any particular juror — his mustache, his necktie, his demeanor. All dubious, but all "neutral explanations" that fall short of justifying a challenge for cause. If pretexts like these will pass muster, the Supreme Court's ruling won't mean much.

If they won't, on the other hand, the decision will practically eviscerate peremptory challenges by making it impossible to use them against blacks without a sound reason — in which case, of course, they aren't needed. If blacks are given special protection, who will be next? Women? Catholics? The elderly? The handicapped? Once the courts begin to circumscribe peremptory challenges, there is no logical place to stop, short of requiring fixed quotas for every jury.

The inevitable result is a plague of new legal squabbling. No self-respecting attorney defending a black client will ever let his opponent veto a black juror without lodging strenuous objections, further protracting the already time-consuming process of picking juries. If the objections are overruled, the defense is bound to use the exclusion to appeal for the reversal of any unfavorable verdict.

Figuring out what is forbidden and what is allowed will require years of complicated litigation. The courts will get to spend a lot of time settling disputes about the unknowable motives of prosecutors.

There is a good case to be made for limiting or abolishing peremptory challenges, which would solve the problem addressed here. But that's a question for legislators, not judges. Making the use of these challenges into a constitutional case may or may not protect black defendants, but it will certainly complicate the job of our already overburdened criminal courts.

Harnessing nuclear giant

The secrecy imposed by a dictatorship has advantages and disadvantages.

The Soviet Union does not advertise its mistakes.

Moscow's throttled media reports only what it is allowed to report.

Compare what happened in Chernobyl to what happened at our Three Mile Island and we made much to-do over almost nothing.

Yet, the watchdog media is a significant factor in keeping our safety people on their toes.

Russia is said to be phasing out the kind of antiquated nuclear plant which sprang a leak but downwind nations are urging the Soviet to open its civilian nuclear plants to international inspection.

With lives at stake in Scandinavia and in Europe, depending on which way the wind's blowing, those nations believe they have a right to insist on international safety inspection.

Technology is presently available to build an inherently safe nuclear reactor. And we did it.

One of the most important power advances of recent years was developed by our own Argonne National Laboratory — a reactor cooled by liquid metal.

A major component of the Integral Fast Reactor consists of thousands of gallons of molten sodium. Inherent protection against overheating.

Further, the new metallic fuel enhances cooling.

The technology I have described has been demonstrated at Argonne-West in Idaho over the past 21 years.

Last year, an effort was made to simulate a nuclear accident, to test the built-in safety feature of this reactor.

Pumps that circulate coolant were shut down. Back-up emergency systems were turned off. What happened? Nothing.

Even under these extreme circumstances, the core did not overheat.

The test was repeated six times with unerring success.

Americans are sometimes impatient with the time-consuming repetitive testing which is required of any new concept.

The other extreme, however, is the casual manner in which the U.S.S.R. has built 28 nuclear plants with outdated graphite technology, without even containment structures.

If any good came out of this tragedy, it is that Europe has closed ranks with us in demanding international cooperation in harnessing a giant that's bigger than all of us.

We're traveling with unsavory crowd

By Don Graff

Australia parted company with the United States last year.

It became the 28th country to abolish the death penalty completely when the state of New South Wales joined the rest of the federation in renouncing capital punishment.

That leaves the United States as one of the very few democracies in which the state kills citizens in the name of law and order. We'll miss Australia. The rest of our company is not very savory — Iran, Vietnam, South Africa, the Soviet Union, that crowd.

In addition to the 28 countries that have now sworn off legalized murder in any circumstance, another 18 reserve it for extraordinary offenses such as crime during wartime. And in some 50 countries in which the penalty remains on the books, there have been no executions since 1980.

Most of our closest allies have either totally abolished or sharply limited capital punishment. Those in Europe are signatories of a treaty, signed by 14 countries, that took effect last year. It prohibits the death penalty for peacetime offenses.

This data comes from Amnesty International, which keeps track of the grim statistics in connection with its ongoing campaign to abolish capital punishment. The human rights organization argues that the penalty is a cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment that not only has no special deterrent value, but can encourage a climate of violence and disrespect for human life.

Back to the statistics, there were fewer reported executions worldwide during 1985 than in the previous year — 1,125 as against 1,513. But such documented figures, according to Amnesty, don't tell the whole story. The true totals are believed to be considerably higher because many governments either do not publicly announce or deliberately conceal executions.

Iran, for example, tops the documented list with 470. But many more Iranians, including those summarily executed in prison, are believed to have been put to death without trial and with no report of the event. The documented total of 135 for China, where 40 offenses are capital and people can be executed for such crimes as forming a "reactionary secret society," is also believed to be on the low side.

In all, 44 countries reported executions during the year. Others with relatively high counts included South Africa, with 137 confirmed; Pakistan, at least 57, and Saudi Arabia, at least 45.

The United States was not in that class. The various jurisdictions in this country which retain the penalty fried, gassed or poisoned only 18 human beings during the year. That was down from 21 in 1984, something of a surprise to penalty opponents who early on had been dreading a possible bloodbath during the year. Amnesty, analyzing the building backlog on Death Row, had feared the year's total conceivably could approach 60.

The annual figure had been building since Gary Gilmore went before a Utah firing squad in 1977. His death ended a 10-year moratorium on executions in this country that began when the Supreme Court questioned state laws governing capital punishment. The constitutionality issue is still being argued in the courts, but various versions of the death penalty are now back on the books of 38 states.

There is great variance in application, however. Florida and Texas lead in numbers of executions. Florida also has the most crowded death row. At the beginning of 1985, more than 200 prisoners were waiting to be killed. At the other extreme, Washington, also a penalty state, counted just four.

Meanwhile, the pause in the mounting execution rate may be only temporary. The population of death row continues to climb, exceeding 1,600 at the end of 1985, up some 200 for the year.

That bloodbath may still be coming.

Chief government critics are excluded from Shultz talks

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The two most prominent critics of the South Korean government were excluded from a meeting with Secretary of State George Shultz, who came here today with a ringing endorsement of President Chun Doo-hwan and criticism of "violent confrontations" with the government.

Kim Dae-Jung, the opposition candidate in the last free and open election, in 1971, and Kim Young-Sam, the permanent adviser to the opposition New Korea Democratic party, were not invited to have breakfast with Shultz on Thursday.

"The Kims are not leaders of their party," Shultz said on the way here from Tokyo, where he attended the seven-nation summit meeting of industrial democracies. However, Shultz said they were invited to meet with Assistant Secretary of State Gaston Sigur but had declined.

"I have a limited amount of time," Shultz said, explaining his refusal to meet with the two critics. He said the purpose of the breakfast was to meet with government and opposition leaders with "diversity."

Shultz said other opposition leaders, as well as supporters of President Chun, will meet with him as he attempts to solicit a variety of opinions on the political situation in South Korea.

Lee Min-Woo, president of the New Korea Democrats, and Kim Dong Yong, the minority floor leader, were among those invited.

Shultz was sent to South Korea by President Reagan to report on the anti-terrorism declaration and the monetary and trade decisions taken at the Tokyo summit. He was scheduled to meet twice with Foreign Minister Lee Won-kyung in a 24-hour visit that will be followed by a stop in Manila for talks with Philippine President Corazon Aquino and Vice President Salvador Laurel.

In an airborne news conference, Shultz said South Korea's economic prosperity was "breathtaking" and that the government was doing a "terrific job" in maintaining security along the border with communist North Korea despite "tensions" along the demilitarized zone.

Against this backdrop, Shultz said, Chun "has set out the objective of moving toward a democratic form of government."

Shultz cited Chun's decision to step down, the scheduling of elections for 1988 and freedom of assembly.

"All this is part of a process of motion in institutions, which we think is very desirable," Shultz said.

However, he said, the evolution requires "an element of stability" and "the violent confrontations such as we've seen is not a contribution to that."

He said the United States stands for an evolution with peaceful change. In South Korea, Shultz said, "I think it's moving pretty fast. It takes a little time to build a tradition. I didn't say the situation is perfect. I said it was moving impressively."

Anti-government violence has erupted on campuses through the spring. In recent weeks violence followed rallies held by the political opposition to push its campaign for changes in the constitution centering on election procedures.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III was sent to Peking for talks with Chinese officials today and Thursday. These are the annual economic discussions held in alternate years in Washington and the Chinese capital.

W. Allan Wallis, the under-secretary of state for economic affairs, was dispatched to Singapore for talks Thursday and Friday with officials of Indonesia, the Philippines, Malaysia, Thailand, Brunei and Singapore. He will go on to Australia afterward to brief Prime Minister Bob Hawke on the economic summit.

Iraqi jets bomb Tehran

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraqi warplanes today bombed the Iranian capital of Tehran, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported.

The news agency, in its initial bulletin, said downtown Tehran was hit, and that a thick pall of black smoke covered the vicinity of the capital's oil refinery.

In a subsequent dispatch IRNA said the Iraqi warplanes struck at 11:10 a.m. (3:40 a.m. EDT) and that Tehran radio sounded an air raid alert.

"Soon afterwards the situation returned to normal," the agency said. It said nothing about casualties or damage.

This was the first Iraqi air raid on Tehran since last summer when the Persian Gulf nations engaged in protracted retaliatory air raids and missile attacks against each other's main cities.

A Bahrain-based Japanese oil executive, in contact with his company representative in Tehran, told The Associated Press the refinery was set ablaze in the raid.

"But we do not have any details as to the precise extent of damage or casualties. Life in the rest of Tehran appeared normal," said the executive, who spoke on condition he not be further identified.

Reagan facing another House defeat on Saudi arms sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House appears virtually certain to follow the lead of the Senate in rejecting President Reagan's planned $354 million sale of air, ground and ship-based missiles to Saudi Arabia.

The 73-22 vote against the sale in the Republican-controlled Senate Tuesday night was six votes more than the 67 votes that would be needed to override an expected presidential veto if all 100 senators voted. House members opposed to selling Saudi Arabia more U.S. weapons are hoping for an equally strong showing.

At a news conference in Tokyo, where he was attending the economic summit meeting, Reagan was asked about the Senate's action.

His reply: "Well, let them just wait until the old man gets home and see what happens to it."

White House spokesman Edward Djerejian said later Reagan "definitely" would veto the Saudi arms sale rejection and the administration's legislative strategists do not believe Congress can muster the necessary votes to override.

Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., who has organized House opposition to the sale, said Monday that 233 members had joined in sponsoring a resolution of disapproval and that many more than that say they will vote for it.

The president has pledged a veto on grounds that a continued U.S. military supply relationship with Saudi Arabia is essential if the United States is to retain its influence among moderate Arab states.

Supporters of the administration in the Senate were led by Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. They contend the sale would pose no threat to the security of Israel and should go forward because of the security interests the United States has in preserving the stability of moderate Arab states in a region rich in oil reserves.

But even Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., made clear he was "not at all certain that this is the right sale to the right country at the right time." However, Dole said he would vote against the resolution of disapproval knowing that if the U.S. forbids the missile sale, the Saudis will buy them elsewhere and "we will have accomplished nothing except to forfeit whatever influence we have."

SPEAKS ON NUCLEAR ACCIDENT — Boris Shcherbina, chairman of the governmental commission investigating the Chernobyl nuclear power station accident, speaks at a news conference in Moscow Tuesday. The commission is investigating measures to overcome the effects of the accident and its causes. (AP Laserphoto)

Officials defend their accident response, reveal more details

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union says the situation around the Chernobyl power plant is "disquieting" more than a week and a half after a nuclear disaster, and reportedly has asked West Germany for specialized earth-moving equipment to clean up the site.

Soviet officials held their first news conference on the April 26 nuclear disaster Tuesday, but they offered little new information. They gave conflicting figures on casualties and the amount of radiation emitted by the crippled reactor 80 miles north of Kiev.

The six senior Soviet officials brushed off Western complaints about slow reporting of limited information on the accident at the Ukrainian plant, which spewed an invisible cloud of radiation over Europe.

Small amounts of the radiation also have reached the United States, Canada, and Japan.

None of officials, including the top nuclear energy official and the head of a government inquiry, said whether the fire was extinguished in the reactor's graphite core. A report in the Communist Party daily Pravda earlier Tuesday suggested it was still burning or smoldering.

Boris Y. Shcherbina, a deputy premier heading the inquiry, said authorities have not determined the accident's cause, but a chemical explosion was "most probable."

Shcherbina said the accident occurred at 1:23 a.m. on April 26, the first official mention of a precise time, but that those living near the plant were not evacuated for another 36 hours because plant workers underestimated the severity of the incident.

Tass, the official news agency, filed a dispatch from the Kiev region Tuesday, saying, "Although the situation remains disquieting, there are no grounds for unwarranted skepticism."

Everyone evacuated from an 18-mile zone around the plant were given "special decontamination treatment," it said. "According to official medical information, there are no health risks for the absolute majority of evacuees."

The Soviets say two people died during the accident, one from burns and one who has hit by falling debris.

In Bonn, West German Interior Ministry sources said Soviet officials had asked to buy or rent remote-controlled earth-moving machines for use in cleanup work at the Chernobyl plant.

Gregory Revenko, the Communist Party chief in the Kiev region, told Tass that many farmers did not want to leave the Chernobyl areas, and that officials had to persuade several of them.

Revenko said specialists were testing crops, soil, water and air around Kiev, a city of 2.4 million people.

The Tass report did not say whether citizens had been advised about health precautions. But a Canadian diplomat in Moscow said two Canadian students who arrived Monday from Kiev had heard radio warnings against bathing or fishing in the Dnieper River, which passes through the city and is fed by the Pripyat and Uzh rivers that run close to the Chernobyl plant.

A government official has said about 49,000 people were evacuated, including the 25,000 in the plant town of Pripyat.

Revenko said 1,100 buses in a column 12 miles long took people out of the danger area. He said Pripyat was evacuated in two hours and 20 minutes.

Andranik M. Petrosyants, head of the state Atomic Energy Committee, said at the news conference that a shield including 4,000 tons of sand was thrown over the reactor.

Petrosyants said radiation in neighboring countries increased "about five times" because of the accident.

Milk monitored for radiation

AUSTIN (AP) — Milk samples from here and Fort Worth were sent to Alabama for testing to determine whether radiation from the nuclear reactor plant accident in the Soviet Union has spread to Texas pastureland, officials said.

More samples will be taken twice a week until further orders from the Environmental Protection Agency, which activated the Pasteurized Milk Sampling Network Monday after radioactivity was detected high above the nation's western coast, said Ed Bailey of the Texas Department of Health's bureau of radiation control.

"It is not very likely that there will be significant quantities (of radiation) — in other words quantities that would result in milk in the U.S. going above the protective guidelines," Bailey said Tuesday.

He said air samples reported Tuesday to the state's three ground stations in Midland, Austin and Tyler, have been analyzed and do not show any unusual activity. The EPA has released statements saying ground stations across the nation do not show any increased radioactivity, he said.

Preliminary results from the milk sample may be ready at the EPA lab in Montgomery, Ala., by today if there is evidence of contamination, he said.

If any radioactivity is found, laboratory analysis may be able to trace its origins, he said, adding that milk found to be contaminated with radiation would be destroyed or held, perhaps being converted to cheese, until iodine levels dissipated.

The EPA maximum standard for iodine 131 in milk is one 10-trillionth of a liter, he said.

"If you found iodine you could pretty much say it came from the reactor accident," he said. "There's not normally large amounts of iodine around in the atmosphere."

In Sweden, milk samples tested above guidelines after a cloud of radioactive gas spread across much of Europe after the reactor caught fire at Chernobyl on April 26.

Bailey said some of the radioactive gas is believed to have seeped into the Gulf jet stream. He said the EPA activated the milk monitoring program because of concern that rain-fall could introduce the radioactive matter into the food chain.

Bailey, a division director of the bureau of radiation control, said this is not the first time the milk testing program has been activated.

Chernobyl causes radioactive fallout in West, political fallout in capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — As radiation from the Chernobyl nuclear disaster was measured on American soil for the first time, federal officials on Capitol Hill debated the safety of U.S. commercial and weapons production reactors.

The first radioactive rain from the April 26 Soviet nuclear accident detectable in the United States fell in the Pacific Northwest on Monday, officials said Tuesday. They said the concentrations discovered in Richland, Wash., and Portland, Ore., were far too small to require special precautions.

Additional areas of the northern United States should receive small amounts of the radioactive rain, but the fallout would cause no health problems, officials said.

In preparation for a hearing today on the safety of nuclear power plants in this country, the staff of the House subcommittee on energy conservation and power told subcommittee Chairman Edward Markey that for political reasons, the Department of Energy has shut out federal, state and local authorities from emergency planning near DOE nuclear plants.

"Our key finding is that DOE has taken action to establish exclusive domain over offsite emergency preparedness for political."

The subcommittee staff said it was unclear if national security concerns would warrant treating public health and safety around the defense facilities differently from around commercial plants. It also questioned DOE's expertise and objectivity in evaluating the public safety risk near its plants.

Americans, finding better prices, are drinking more milk

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers are getting some price breaks at dairy counters, and that apparently has helped boost the consumption of milk by Americans, the Agriculture Department says.

According to the department's Economic Research Service, this year's commercial use of milk is expected to increase another 2 percent to 4 percent from a record use of 131 billion pounds in 1985.

Meanwhile, the government's whole-herd buyout program aimed at sending 1.55 million dairy cows, heifers and calves to market, two-thirds of them this spring and summer, is expected to halt the upward spiral in overall milk production.

"Retail dairy prices are expected to decline slightly, and real per capita income is expected to rise, implying a larger drop in real prices than in most recent years," the report said.

Milk production rose to a record of 143.7 billion pounds in 1985, up 6 percent from 1984.

Prices received by dairy farmers for all milk delivered to plants and dealers during 1985 averaged $12.73 per 100 pounds, down 72 cents from 1984, the report said. During the first quarter of 1986, farmers received an average of $12.37 per hundred-weight.

The government's consumer price index for dairy products in February was down from a year earlier by less than 1 percent, but retail prices "likely will drift lower through mid-1986," the report said.

Wholesale prices probably will stiffen in late 1986, indicating some increase in consumer dairy prices. Even so, retail prices of milk and other dairy products may average slightly below last year.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says the Soviet Union has bought an additional 100,000 metric tons of U.S. corn — about 3.94 million bushels — for delivery through Sept. 30.

Two weeks ago, the Soviets resumed buying U.S. grain on a significant scale after a three-month absence from the market, although soybeans were ordered during that period. Historically, Moscow has bought grain in spurts, sometimes every day or so for a while before staying out of the market for two or three months.

Officials said Tuesday the latest sales were reported to USDA by private exporters as required by law. No prices or other details were disclosed.

The department says the latest estimated price of corn is about $2.28 per bushel at the farm. A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat.

Thus, the latest sales would have an estimated farm value of about $9 million.

Under a five-year agreement, which began its third year last Oct. 1, the Soviet Union is committed to buy at least 9 million tons of wheat and corn annually. At least 4 million tons of that must be wheat and 4 million tons corn.

So far, the Soviets have bought nearly 6.4 million tons of corn and 152,600 tons of wheat for delivery in 1985-86. Sales in 1984-85 were a record of more than 18.6 million tons, including 15.8 million tons of corn and 2.9 million tons of wheat. The Soviets fell 1.1 million tons short of the 4-million-ton wheat commitment last year.

Under the agreement, the Soviet Union can buy up to 12 million tons of grain annually, but if more than that is wanted the United States must be consulted. Approval was given for the Soviets to buy 22 million tons in 1984-85, and the same amount has been cleared for 1985-86.

In addition to corn and wheat, the Soviets have bought 1.5 million tons of soybeans for delivery through Sept. 30.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commercial honey producers and importers will vote May 19-31 in a referendum to decide whether to finance a national research, promotion and consumer information program.

The Agriculture Department said Tuesday that ballots will be available at local offices of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. Ballots also are being mailed to all known honey importers.

Anyone who produced or imported more than 6,000 pounds of honey in 1984, and currently produces or imports honey, may vote in the referendum, officials said.

If approved by at least two-thirds of those voting, annual assessments would be levied to finance the program.

Fourth network will open with Joan Rivers on late night show

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Joan Rivers is taking on former boss Johnny Carson next fall in the opening assault of Fox Broadcasting Co.'s new fourth network. NBC immediately canceled her remaining scheduled appearances as his substitute.

The caustic comedian, whose show, "Late Night Starring Joan Rivers," will make its debut in the fall, had been a permanent substitute host for Carson's "The Tonight Show" on NBC for the past three years.

She was to be host two more weeks before her NBC contract expires July 19.

But she will be replaced the week of June 2 by comedian Gary Shandling and the week of July 14 by another host who has yet to be selected, said Gene Walsh, vice president of publicity for NBC's West Coast operations.

"We wish her well," said Walsh, who added that Carson learned of plans for the late-night competition from the news media.

Barry Diller, chairman of Fox Inc., said Tuesday that prime-time programming on the new service will start in March 1987. The new network springs from the purchase and consolidation by Rupert Murdoch of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Studios and six former Metromedia television stations.

Miss Rivers appeared at a news conference Tuesday with Diller and other Fox executives.

"I want to thank NBC a thousand times. I am grateful to NBC for the three years I had on 'The Tonight Show,' but they should thank me, too. My ratings were good. And they were better than the regular host," she said.

Miss Rivers said she talked by telephone to Grant Tinker, chairman of NBC, and to Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC entertainment. "I called Johnny Carson twice, but he would not take my call," she said.

Carson's last major talk-show competition came from the syndicated "Thicke of the Night" in 1983. The program, which starred Canadian singer-comedian Alan Thicke and was produced by former NBC president Fred Silverman, failed in the ratings.

Great-Grandmother still selling "Highlights" after 40 years

By BOB WIELAND
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — In an age of multi-million dollar giveaways and other high-pressure magazine sales gimmicks, Elizabeth Whitlow relies on her friendly telephone pitch to sell Highlights For Children.

"I guess you'd call me a low pressure salesman," says Mrs. Whitlow, who has represented the educational magazine for the 40 years it's been around.

And, at 87, she is willing to take the time required to make the sale.

"At my age, all I have is time," she says.

Unlike salespeople who are just interested in getting the order and running," Ms. Whitlow says she would rather take the time to get to know her customers.

She tells the story about a man from Sherman who called to thank her for making a sales call to his wife.

"She was a little down and appreciated talking to somebody," she said.

A former high school English teacher, Mrs. Whitlow put her two sons through Oklahoma University by selling Highlights. She has seven grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren, but refers to all her young subscribers as "my little boys and girls."

Some subscribers even send her pictures and letters. Mrs. Whitlow responds with personal notes with their statements.

The magazine includes fiction and nonfiction stories for children, craft projects, hidden pictures and other games and "Goofus and Gallant," a popular comic strip depicting two boys whose differing behavior is used to draw morals on everyday situations.

Since Mrs. Whitlow has been selling the magazine for so long, she now is calling on parents whose parents had bought Highlights from her.

Her leads come from postcards pulled from complimentary copies of the magazine provided to doctors and dentists for their waiting rooms.

And she does a good job, with about 100 sales a month.

"I set myself a quota and never rest until I get it," she explains.

Reid Romer, national director of sales at the Highlights for Children, Inc., headquarters in Columbus, Ohio, says Mrs. Whitlow is the oldest of the company's 180 field representatives.

However, he says her output is "tremendously consistent — unbelievably, in fact."

Mrs. Whitlow's territory covers much of North Texas plus parts of Oklahoma and New Mexico.

Highlights, which has a circulation of about two million and doesn't accept advertising, prefers its representatives to call on potential subscribers in person, but Romer is willing to let Mrs. Whitlow use the phone.

"We kind of bend the rules because she can't get out much," he says.

Mrs. Whitlow has been driving for 70 years and still has a valid license.

For years, she traveled in East Texas with her dog, "living in Holiday Inns, selling Highlights and having a wonderful time."

But now she uses her car only for trips to the store and doesn't get onto the freeways.

So she uses the telephone to make her sales.

"The only thing that doesn't wear out is my voice," she says.

Mrs. Whitlow lives alone in an apartment with her 13-year-old miniature poodle, Muffin. But she doesn't mind the solitude since she has her job.

"I would almost pay them to let me work," she says, unable to comprehend other elderly people who would rather "take it easy."

"I don't want to go into a nursing home," she says. "I hope I just sit here on the divan selling Highlights when a heart attack takes me."

Her goal is to stick around at least until the year 2001, when she would be 102.

"I believe the good Lord has left me here to help parents get good reading material for their children," she says.

Pollution threat feared from development around Galveston Bay

AUSTIN (AP) — Several development projects around Galveston Bay should be delayed until a thorough study can be made of possible environmental damage, five state agencies say.

Galveston Bay is one of the most incredible and irreplaceable natural resources of our state," Paul Hopkins, chairman of the Texas Water Commission, said in asking the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers for the delay.

"The state of Texas is entitled to a full disclosure of the effects these projects may have on Galveston Bay before, rather than after, the projects are finalized," said Richard Morrison, a member of the Parks and Wildlife Commission.

Also asking for the environmental impact study were the Texas Department of Agriculture, General Land Office and the attorney general's office.

The bay — which accommodates both commercial fishing and tourism — supports $3 billion annually in business activity for the Houston-Galveston area, said Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

"The Galveston Bay system is too unique and too valuable to risk tampering, without full evaluation of the risks," Hightower said.

According to the Department of Parks and Wildlife, several projects are being proposed for the bay area.

In a letter to Col. Gordon Clarke, commander of the Corps' Galveston district, Parks and Wildlife chairman Edwin L. Cox Jr. raised concern about possible damage from several proposed reservoirs; enlargements of the Houston, Texas City and Galveston ship channels; dredging of the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway and other major development work that would disturb wetlands or the bay.

Individually, the projects "may result in significant detrimental impacts on the bay system ... Together, (the projects) have the potential to cause even more serious, cumulative environmental damage," the letter said.

In a separate letter to the Corps, Attorney General Jim Mattox argued that an environmental study is justified to "protect the long-term health and productivity of one of Texas' most important natural resources."

Efforts are underway to restore Everglades

EDITOR'S NOTE — Shrimp in Florida Bay, tomatoes in Homestead and the water flowing from a tap in a Palm Beach penthouse all are affected by the Everglades, the vast river of grass that was drained by land developers. Now efforts are under way to restore much of the big swamp to its natural state and avoid an environmental disaster.

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer

EVERGLADES NATIONAL PARK, Fla. (AP)—Draining the grassy waters of the Everglades made the dream of Florida living come true for millions of people. Now, the state is trying to turn back the tide of its history to prevent a nightmare — a people-packed desert.

The Indians here first called it Pahayokee, the grassy river. The Spaniards here next didn't venture too far into the expanse of sticking grass, unusual trees and strange animals, leaving a blank on their maps marked "Lagoon of the Holy Spirit."

The Englishmen who came later saw it as an infinite version of the areas back home that lay between forests. They called it the Everglades.

Americans, having in their nation's first 100 years fanned out West across the Appalachians, the Mississippi and the Rockies, looked at the flat marshland and saw a new frontier, homes to be built, millions to be made.

The first large-scale drainage in South Florida was carried out in 1881-94 in lands just north of the Everglades. Brash Florida Gov. Napoleon Bonaparte Broward in 1905 promised that the wilderness would be tamed into "The Empire of the Everglades."

The dikes and levees that drained lands and controlled floods, the manure-dropping cattle herds and fertilizer-fed crops, and the canal-front homes and towering condominiums that followed over the next 70 years did more than enable South Florida to become a boom land. They slowly but surely disrupted the delicate, 4,000-year-old Everglades water system.

Florida Gov. Bob Graham, a child of Everglades development, in 1983 declared that change must come again. This time, going backward.

"I believe it's very much in the range of reality, if you could have taken a satellite picture of the Everglades in 1900, take one in 1983, and then take one in 2000, the 2000 picture will look more like the 1900 than now," Graham said in an interview.

"At stake is sustaining the population that exists today. You now have a population of 4 million-plus who would be endangered if the Everglades system fails.

"The good news is that there's no reason for it to fail. We started soon enough to begin to stop any further scars and to heal over some of the wounds already inflicted."

For some people, Graham's goal is as bold as that of Broward 80 years ago.

His six-point program involves buying up lands to create a buffer zone around the sensitive wetlands, rebuilding a major highway, restoring natural water flows through the Everglades National Park, saving the estimated 30 Florida panthers, thinning while preserving the Everglades deer herd, and returning a channeled river to its original meanders, a project never before attempted.

"You can't put nature back the way it was, but you can use technology to make the system act more like nature was," says Tilford C. Creel, a former Army engineer who is now deputy director of the South Florida Water Management District, a powerful regional body whose name, superseding an Everglades Drainage District and a Flood Control District, indicates the changes that have begun in Florida.

But environmentalists such as Marjory Stoneman Douglas, who chronicled the "River of Grass" in a 1947 book, say the program isn't comprehensive enough. It will take decades to carry out, and the first years will be largely spent on experimentation.

Man is only now learning the true complexity of the Everglades system: that the river of grass is the chief filter of South Florida's drinking water; that Lake Okeechobee, the nation's second-largest interior lake and Florida's main reservoir, must be kept clean; that the water feeding it from the north must be filtered; that the disappearances of endangered species have a rippling, disruptive reaction in nature's food chain, that shrimp in Florida Bay, tomatoes in Homestead and the water flowing from a tap in a Palm Beach penthouse all are affected by the Everglades.

"It's very complicated. The more we learn, the more we realize we have to learn," said Pat Tolle, publicist for the 1.4-million-acre national park, carved out of nearly half of the original Everglades in a well-intended but incomplete 1947 federal preservation effort.

The new program must overcome scattered but powerful opposition: dairy farmers, winter vegetable growers, sugarcane growers and emotional homeowners worried about increased flooding that seems certain to follow as drained lands are returned to their natural state. It must buck Reagan administration policy that has generally been for developing — not buying — land and the overall national budget-cutting sentiment.

The momentum for the project must be passed from political leader to political leader, starting next year. Graham, having served the maximum eight years as governor, is running for U.S. senator in November.

The program's price tag is hard to project, but it seems likely it will exceed $100 million; from $13 million to build special underpass crossings for panthers and other animals in the conversion of the state's Alligator Alley highway to Interstate 75, to anywhere from $25 million to $90 million to restore much of the Kissimmee River, north of Lake Okeechobee, to its original winding path.

Florida officials say federal cooperation has been uneven, but they're seeing signs of increased interest.

WORDS TO GROW BY:
If you grow your strawberries in a container such as a strawberry jar you need to rotate the container a quarter turn every few days. The reason for this is strawberries do their best in full sun and will produce the good flavor and red color you expect in a sunny environment. You should notice the plants will grow uniform and evenly, produce ripe, red berries if you turn the container.

Past revived in 'The First Texas Cook Book'

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Lifestyles Editor

My favorite recipe is the one my mother has for egg noodles, one that had been passed down through her family for generations. It's not that I like the egg noodles that much, it's the wording of the recipe I love... "half an eggshell of milk, pinch of salt, dab of butter." Reading that recipe is the closest I've come to talking to my ancestors.

Now a cook book of recipes just like that one has been released by Eakin Press, The First Texas Cook Book. Those who cherish the past, who are fascinated how women a century ago could provide good meals without all the modern conveniences we have today, or those who just love good down-home cooking would probably enjoy this book, a collection of recipes first published in 1883 by the Ladies Association of the First Presbyterian Church of Houston. This latest publication is a collector's volume printed for the Texas Sesquicentennial.

The cook book, identified as a "thorough treatise on the art of cookery" holds 721 recipes and 80 household aids from the early 1880s.

The First Texas Cookbook is a facsimile of the original, containing the same typographical errors as the first hand-set copy. Recipes were spelled receipts and egg yolks were spelled egg yelks.

These women were free with the eggs and the butter in all their recipes. Practical and thrifty, these cooks had recipes using all types of meat from old chickens to calf heads.

Names and expressions used in the recipes are like a whiff of lavender drifting up from the past — "Kiss Pudding," "A Nice Plain Plum Pudding," "Very Nice Way to Poach Eggs — a tumbler of milk, two gills of flour, a piece of butter the size of a walnut..."

One recipe for cornfield peas suggest the first step to "go to the pea patch early in the morning and gather the peas, take them home in a split basket." The writer admonishes, "take them in the left hand and gouge them out with your right thumb until it gets sore, then reverse hands. Look the pea well in the eye to see its color..."

Included are helpful hints for households of more than a century ago such as remedies for bed bugs and mildew on preserves, how to crystallize grass and the cure for chronic diarrhoea. On contributor suggests "assafoetida and whiskey for whooping cough, asthma, catarrh, croup, measles and all nervous disorders."

In the 1880 census, Houston had a population of 16,513 and probably had reached close to 20,000 by the time this book was first published.

First Presbyterian Church of Houston, organized in 1839, was located on the north side of Capitol Avenue between Main and Travis streets. The Rev. E.D. Junkin was in his third year of 13 years as pastor of the church in 1883 when the ladies association published their cook book.

Here's a recipe for Peach Cobbler submitted by Mrs. J.R. Hutchison.

Make pastry same as for pie, line a deep dish with it. Peel peaches and cut them in quarters; fill up the dish; put in one cup water; put top crust on and bake. When done, take top crust off, and place in dish in which it will be served; add to peaches two cups sugar, one cut butter and nutmeg to taste; pour peaches on crust in dish, take out bottom crust and place on top, sprinkle with sugar.

Or try this recipe for Corn Batter cakes from Mrs. E.D. Junkin which also considers the cook's feelings:

"One pint cornmeal, three-fourths pint of flour, one even teaspoon of soda, one teaspoon of salt, one and a half quarts of sweet milk, two or three eggs. Have a very hot griddle, and grease with a piece of fat midding. Keep the cook in good humor, have a hat fire, and turn quickly. One quart of water can be substituted in scarcity of milk."

Economical French Dish could probably be adapted for use today with few substitutions.

"Few of us care for cold meat any length of time, but we can make a delicious dish out of slices of cold beef or mutton. Take a deep baking dish, slice your meat thin and cut off the grizzled edges, put a layer in the dish, dust over pepper, salt and sifted sweet marjoram or sage, or if liked, a chopped onion. Fill your dish half full in this manner, then add the cold gravy left from the roast, taking off every particle of fat; turn in half a teacup of catsup or a quantity of canned or fresh, ripe tomatoes. Fill the dish nearly full with boiling water and put a plate over it, right side down; this keeps all the flavor in the dish. Bake two hours in the oven; mash some potatoes with butter, or cream and salt, make with it a high wall around the edge of a heated platter, beat up an egg, and brush over the wall and brown in oven, then turn the meat and gravy inside the platter and serve."

Under Miscellaneous Receipts you can find out how to clean kid gloves: "First see that your hands are clean, then put on your gloves and wash them as though you were washing your hand, in a basin of turpentine, until quite clean. Hang up where they will be well aired," or a sure cockroach destroyer: "Sprinkle finely powdered borax into the crevices and about the hot water pipes where roaches inhabit. To make it effectual, its use should be continued for several weeks, renewing it every few days. It will not fail."

To wash hair: "Sage tea is one of the best washings and dressings for the head. The hair should be carefully brushed and braided in two firm braids, then the roots rubbed with a sponge dipped in lukewarm sage tea, after which the braids can be washed and dried with a towel. This preserves the color of the hair and keeps the scalp clean."

Nutritious carrot cake roll

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

When we looked through "Rodale's Sensational Desserts" by Joan Bingham and Delores Riccio (Rodale), we found a cake-roll recipe that called for ingredients many cooks like to use. Grated carrot is added to a sponge-cake batter made with honey and whole wheat flour.

CARROT CAKE ROLL
1-3rd cup all-purpose flour
1-3rd cup whole wheat flour
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
3 large eggs, separated
1/2 cup honey
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
2 large carrots, coarsely grated (1 cup loosely packed)
1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar

Filling, see recipe
Grease a 15 1/2-by 10 1/2-inch jelly roll pan; line with wax paper and grease again; set aside. Combine all-purpose and whole wheat flours, cornstarch, baking powder and cinnamon. With an electric mixer at high speed beat egg yolks until thick and lemon-colored — about 5 minutes. Slowly beat in honey, lemon rind and vanilla extract. Stir in reserved flour mixture just until blended. Stir in carrots. In another bowl with clean beater blades beat egg whites until foamy. Sprinkle with cream of tartar. Beat until stiff but not dry. Stir about one quarter of the egg whites into the carrot mixture. Fold in remaining egg whites. Spoon onto prepared pan, smoothing the top. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted into the center comes out clean — 12 to 15 minutes. Loosen edges with a sharp knife; turn out onto a kitchen towel sprinkled lightly with confectioners' sugar. Gently peel off wax paper. Roll up cake from the narrow end with the towel inside the cake; set aside until cool. To fill, unroll and spread with the filling to within 1/2-inch from edge of cake. Using the towel to aid rolling, roll up from the narrow end of cake. Place on a serving plate. Adapted from "Rodale's Sensational Desserts" by Joan Bingham and Delores Riccio (Rodale).

CARROT CAKE ROLL — You can use a cream-cheese filling or one of whipped cream.

Filling: Beat together 1 cup softened cream cheese, 2 tablespoons honey, and 1/2 teaspoon vanilla until fluffy; stir in 1/2 cup chopped raisins.

Tomato fans will love the microwave

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

There is one given when preparing any recipe, whether it is in a microwave, on top of a range or in a standard oven: It is easy to add more time when an item is undercooked, but nothing can be done with overcooked foods.

MICROWAVE COOKING

When using a microwave, check the food shortly before the cooking time is to expire. If more time is needed, add cooking time in 15- to 30-second bursts until the food is done.

Tomato fanciers will be surprised at the results of "baking" a stuffed tomato in the microwave. This version has a crunchy stuffing that includes peanuts.

CRUNCH TOMATOES
4 large ripe tomatoes
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1 cup crushed dry bread crumbs
1/4 teaspoon poultry seasoning
1/2 teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons butter, cut in pieces

1/2 cup chopped roasted peanuts

Remove stem end of tomatoes and scoop out center pulp and seeds. Place tomatoes in 8-inch-by-8-inch square baking dish. Set aside.

Combine butter and onion in 1-quart casserole dish. Cover and microwave 2 1/2 to 3 1/2 minutes on High or until onions are transparent. Stir in bread crumbs, poultry seasoning and pepper. Mix well. Spoon stuffing mixture into tomatoes. Dot with remaining butter. Cover. Microwave 3 to 4 minutes on High or until skin begins to break and tomatoes are heated through. Sprinkle roasted peanuts on top. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 4 servings.

Acquaintances commit more than half reported rapes

By DEE DEE LARAMORE
Lifestyles Editor

She softly shuts the door behind her, leaning back against it as she silently wills her quaking legs to stop. She hears the footsteps of her date as he walks back to his car, whistling. The door shuts, the engine roars to life. She watches as the car's headlights cast dancing shadows across the ceiling as her date drives away.

A sigh wells up from the depths of her soul as she walks to her bathroom. She undresses quickly, throwing her rumpled clothing to the floor, and slips into the steaming water. She scrubs and scrubs, but can't seem to get the dirty feeling off.

Later she's curled up in her bed, wrapped in a big robe and blanket. She stares at the wall and finally she cries. I never wanted it to be this way, a child wails inside her. She had liked her boyfriend. She had enjoyed their dates together. She had even considered a more serious relationship. Tonight changed all that.

Maybe she shouldn't have shared that beer with him. Maybe she shouldn't have let him take her parking in the dark secluded place. Maybe she should have fought harder when he forced himself on her. Maybe she didn't make it clear enough to him that she did not want to have sex with him. Maybe he didn't hear her when she said she was a virgin and wanted to stay that way. Maybe now her life is ruined...

"One out of four women can expect to be sexually assaulted in her lifetime," says Judy Warner, director of the Tralee Crisis Center. "Women of all ages, races,

Women who might otherwise react assertively to the same situation with a stranger, may be quite passive with a date...

—Py Bateman

both rich and poor, are all potential victims.

"And it's not just strangers in dark alleys who rape women," she adds. "More than one-half of all victims had seen their rapist before and about one-half of all assaults take place in the victim's home!"

This week, May 4-10, has been proclaimed Sexual Assault Awareness Week in Texas by Governor Mark White. Public awareness of acquaintance rape is to be the focus of this year's observance, according to the sponsoring agencies, the Texas Association Against Sexual Assault, Inc. (TAASA) and the Texas Department of Health (TDH).

Well over half of the rapes reported in the United States are committed by someone the victim knows — a husband, boyfriend, relative, friend of a friend, brief acquaintance, date, neighbor, fellow worker. Yet myths about this type of rape prevail, causing victims to be afraid to report the assault to anyone. People, including the victim herself, often see the attack as her fault. Probably the strongest myth is that date rape is an act of passion, not violence.

"Coercion is coercion," says Jo Potter, a rape volunteer for Tralee Crisis Center, "whether it's with a bottle (of alcoholic beverage), the threat of 'if you love me...' or the unspoken threat that 'I won't call you again, if you don't.'"

Anger, power, dominance and control — not sexual frustration — motivates date rape just as it does rape by a stranger, according to information released by TAASA and TDH. Some rapists prefer to know their victims. They are able to trap them in a vulnerable position without scaring them initially. Rapists may have access to certain information about their intended victims, where they live, who they live with, their routines. Some rapists use the same philosophy and manipulations as a confidence man. They gain the trust of their victim, then use it to isolate and violate her.

They have three advantages — their victim's trust, her unwillingness to offend and what they know about her.

Victims have the added disadvantage of not realizing the danger they're in until it's too late.

Py Bateman, founder of Alternatives to Fear, an organization focusing on prevention and avoidance of rape, lists intrusion, desensitization and isolation as the three stages of acquaintance rape.

During the intrusion stage, Bateman says the offender may touch the victim against her will, look at her for a long time or talk about personal subjects. He's not usually threatening at this point, he just makes his intended victim uncomfortable. He's testing her out.

He then switches to the desensitization stage, Bateman says, when he senses that she is used to his intrusions. She drops her guard and accepts his behavior as natural for him. She tries to push aside her uneasiness.

Then he gets her alone, Bateman explains. She may have been raised to be polite and accept the preferences of her date. She may not want to hurt his feelings. She has learned to suppress her feelings and fears. Women who might otherwise react more strongly to the same situation with a stranger, may be quite passive with a date, Bateman says.

Women should watch out for the man who doesn't listen or chooses to ignore their limits, says the TAASA and TDH. This is a sign that he does not consider consent for physical intimacy important. If he gets angry when limits are set, he may feel he cannot let women tell him no. He may be trying to make them more afraid by repeatedly ignoring their 'nos.'

Victims of date rape often cannot understand or see why it happened. They may have been told that they led the rapist to do it, that they asked for it. The rapist may apologize, sending them into a long list of rationalizations. They may feel that since they've had sex with the rapist before, they have no right to report the rape. They may feel they had used poor judgment in a situation.

Poor judgment is not a "rapeable" offense, asserts the sponsoring agencies.

Most importantly, TDH and TAASA say that sexual assault is motivated by violence, not sexual desire.

"Rape is an assault with a sexual organ used as a weapon," says Warner. "Women don't ask to be raped any more than a man with an expensive suit asks to be mugged."

For more information about how sexual assault can be stopped, contact the Tralee Crisis Center, 669-1788.

Dear Abby

Dad's tales of hard times are hard for teen to take

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old girl. I don't want to be disrespectful to parents, but I am tired of hearing how easy the kids of today have it.

Every summer my father tells me how lucky I am to have air conditioning. He says when he was my age, he didn't even have a fan in the house. Every winter he reminds me that he walked 10 miles to school in below-zero weather in three feet of snow.

Abby, why can't parents accept the fact that life has become easier with every generation because of the progress we've made? New things are being invented all the time to improve the quality of life, so why should parents try to make us feel guilty because we have it better than they did?

Sometimes I think they don't want us to have it so good. If each generation didn't improve on the one before, we'd still be living in caves, running around in loincloths, and our vocabularies would consist of two words, "Ooga, ooga."

TIRED TEEN

DEAR TIRED: It may comfort you to know that every generation of teens has had to listen to their parents tell them how rough they had it.

And with the passing of time, the walk to school grew longer, the winters got colder and the snow got deeper.

DEAR ABBY: I've heard of this happening in other families, but I never thought it would happen to me. Maybe if you print this advice, it will help others: Don't tell anyone where you keep your jewelry — not even family members.

A piece of jewelry was stolen from me. The missing piece was of both sentimental and monetary value. Several suspicious acts led me to suspect a family member, so I hired a private investigator. Two sets of fingerprints were found on the container where my jewelry was kept — mine and someone else's. It was relatively easy to get the fingerprints of the suspect. My suspicions were confirmed when they matched the prints on the container.

The record of the theft — and it was a theft — is complete with all the information: name, dates, fingerprints, etc. It is in safekeeping and only a designated person will have access to it. I would never break up a family over a piece of jewelry, no matter how valuable. I have mixed feelings now that I have the evidence, but if you print this, perhaps the guilty party will return it to the container from which it was stolen. If mine is not returned, it may bring back other pieces of jewelry to their rightful owners.

If you print this and my jewelry is returned, you'll be the first to know. And that's a promise.

NO NAME, NO CITY, NO STATE

DEAR NO: I wish you luck. Now, let's see what happens.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter signed "Annoyed Canadian" in the Nassau Daily Tribune. The Canadian was annoyed because Americans know so little about his country.

Here in the Bahamas we are only 50 miles off the south Florida coast; we are a prime vacation spot and cater to over a million visitors each year — mostly from the United States.

You would be surprised at some of the comments we hear: "How come you speak English so well? We expected you to speak a kind of broken Spanish." "When did you stop wearing grass skirts and living in tree houses?" "Why, you're actually driving cars and you dress the way we dress!"

Here in the Bahamas we realize that no harm is meant — these people simply don't know any better — so we simply grin and bear it.

The year ahead is full of exceptional promise, especially in creative areas. Don't let your gifts and talents go unused.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're entering a favorable cycle for ventures you originate. Although there will be others involved, you'll be the one who orchestrates the major moves. Know where your advantages lie in your work or career during the year ahead. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, Box 1848, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A situation you've devoted considerable effort and imagination to is going to pay off, regardless of how circumstances appear now.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Three friends are about to play major roles in your personal affairs. Although their efforts will be unrelated, they'll produce a positive, collective impact.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Opportunities that have been denied you where your work or career are concerned will soon be forthcoming. Keep doing the best job you possibly can.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Plans you formulate today should be vigorously pursued. The concepts you envision will have far-reaching favorable effects.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A big change is about to take place that will produce additional financial advantages for you. Look for new ways to put your money to work.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Partnership arrangements will hold great promise for you over the coming weeks. One in particular will produce sizable mutual benefits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A number of interesting career developments are in the offing for you. This could be the period when you get the raise or advancement you've been seeking.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Conditions look bright in the romance department. If you're already in love, it's going to get better; if you're presently unattached, you won't be for long.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) A matter you've been anxious about will have a desirable ending. This will pave the way for something of considerable promise in the future.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Ingenious new twists are going to eclipse your plans. These new ideas will bring you the success you've been hoping for.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Fresh life will be breathed into your financial affairs beginning today. Start scouting for ways to increase your holdings.

NBA Playoffs

Celtics take no prisoners

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The Boston Celtics gave no quarter to the Atlanta Hawks in the third quarter.

Kevin McHale scored 16 points as the Celtics outscored the Hawks 36-6 in the third period Tuesday night en route to a 132-99 victory that knocked Atlanta out of the playoffs. The six points by the Hawks was the fewest in any quarter in NBA playoff history, breaking the previous low of eight by the Los Angeles Lakers against Milwaukee in 1972.

"We were running and they were all confused," said McHale, who finished with 25 points. "We looked at them. They just looked like a punch-drunk sailor."

"We just lost our concentration," Atlanta Coach Mike Fratello said. While Boston closed out its Eastern Conference semifinal with a 4-1 victory over the Hawks, the Lakers and Houston took 3-2 leads in the Western Conference semifinals. Los Angeles edged Dallas 116-113 and Houston routed Denver 131-103.

The Celtics now await the winner of the Philadelphia-Milwaukee series, which is tied 2-2 going into tonight's game at Milwaukee. On Thursday, the Lakers are at Dallas and Houston at Denver for the sixth games of those series.

Boston had a fairly comfortable 78-61 advantage with 5½ minutes left in the third quarter. Then came the 24-0 streak, making it 102-61 at the end of the third period.

It was 66-55 at halftime as Larry Bird scored 24 of his game-high 36.

"It was great effort on the defensive end. That's where the money is," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "I can't recall if I've seen a quarter like that. It had to be 20 years ago."

Rockets 131, Nuggets 103

Houston also used a big quarter to fuel its victory over Denver.

In the second period, the Rockets outscored the Nuggets 40-20 for a 72-46 halftime bulge. Houston got big games from its Twin Towers front line of Akeem Olajuwon and Ralph Sampson. The 7-0 Olajuwon had 36 points and 19 rebounds and Sampson 33 points and 17 rebounds.

The Rockets' victory extended Denver's Summit losing streak to nine. The Nuggets haven't won a game in Houston since April 11, 1984.

In the pivotal second period, Denver hit only seven of 27 shots.

Lakers 116, Mavericks 113

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 34 points, including a critical hook shot with nine seconds remaining, and Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 29 points and 14 assists for defending champion Los Angeles against Dallas.

"We took care of business," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "The ball seemed a little heavy at the free throw line for Dallas, and I'll bet it gets heavier Thursday night (in Game 6)."

Sports Forum and Agin 'Um WARREN HASSE

ESPN, THAT OUTSTANDING sports television network, calls its coverage of the National Hockey League playoffs the "Road to the Cup".

When I was a kid growing up in Wisconsin, I thought that road was US 12-16, both of which were federal highways that ran right past my front door. When Dad could get me to mow the lawn during those short summers, the grass clippings fell on those highways, and during the winter, they ran right past two local winter-time sports spots and connected with a third.

It was only three blocks to the high school playground which would be flooded by the fire department and turned into a community ice skating rink, lighted and fun. Four blocks the other direction was a natural arena, Feine's Pond, a city-block sized summertime fishing hole, nestled in a wooded area, which became another more private skating area in the dead of winter-time, and where we learned about hockey.

Those experiences, coupled with listening to Chicago Blackhawks matches, whetted a strong interest in that most exciting, demanding and physical of all sports. And good old US 12 and 16 ran almost to the door of Chicago Stadium, home of the Hawks, 225 miles distant. It was a long way to hitch-hike for 2½ hours of thrills, watching your heroes like Mush March, Bill Mosienko and Cully Dahlstrom from the cheap-seat second balcony, one small cumulus cloud below Heaven, and obviously the inspiration for the Hit Parade's No. 1 tune, Stairway to the Stars. Those heroes were to be followed by brother sets, Max, Doug and Reg Bentley, and later Bobby Hull and brother Dennis, complimented by Stan Makita and the Espósito brothers tangling with those Bobby Orr-led Boston bullies.

It wasn't easy to hitch-hike that distance very often in mid-winter, so other plans were devised for Sunday night games. An acquaintanceship with semi-truck drivers aided both directions when schedules were compatible. And by leaving the Stadium late in the final period, I could catch either a Greyhound bus or the Milwaukee Road "milk train", both of which got me home before 6 a.m., allowing some sleeping time in preparation for Monday morning school.

Regular season games were fun, but Stanley Cup Playoff time was really special. The NHL hadn't expanded yet. There were only two Canadian teams, Toronto and Montreal, along with four American entries, Detroit, Boston, New York Rangers and the Hawks. So it became a case of trying to keep Lord Stanley's trophy south of the border, generally a very difficult chore.

The beautiful silver trophy pre-dates even the Davis Cup of tennis fame. It was purchased for $48 by Lord Stanley of Preston, one of Canada's many Governor Generals, and now symbolizes professional hockey's world supremacy as it sits atop the several layers of silver bands containing team names and rosters of its winners.

The Cup has had an interesting history, too. It was lost for several years in a basement, another time left on a Montreal streetcorner. It has been used for everything from a champagne bowl to chamber pot. Losers have refused to turn it over to the victors. One irate clubowner threatened to throw it into the middle of a Northern Ontario lake, while another did toss it into a frozen-over Ottawa canal, from whence it was recovered, lightly damaged but intact.

I happened to be present at the Stadium for one of the many unusual instances to beset the Cup. As I entered for the Playoff contest between the Hawks and Montreal, the magnificent trophy was on display in the lobby, just off West Madison street. Fans gathered around the huge glass case which protected the symbol of the title the Hawks were attempting to defend. After oohing and aahing over its exquisite engraving, reading the lists of hockey legends that comprised the winning teams, the fans climbed the dirty, almost ladder-like steps to their seats and settled down for the combat.

Too many fights, penalties and game delays mandated I leave shortly before game's end if I was to catch one of my modes of transportation home. And as I disgustedly headed down the stairs and into the lobby, I noted glass all around...and Heaven forbid, the Stanley Cup was gone! Where it had stood so majestically 2½ hours earlier there was now only emptiness, guarded by security people.

I was to learn the next day that an over-zealous, over-imbibing Canadian fan had found his own way to get the Cup back to Canada. Fearing that the Blackhawks would be more than his beloved puck-pushers could handle, and unable to bear seeing that Canadian national treasure retained in America, he had broken open the case, grabbed the tall, heavy trophy, and staggered out the front entrance. A block down West Madison Street a group of Chicago's Finest grabbed him, transporting the would-be Canadian hero and The Cup both to downtown headquarters.

Canada tried to steal the Stanley Cup that night. And for the hockey fans who have been watching ESPN's wonderful coverage, it looks like Calgary will move it to Canada honestly this season. The only gratifying thing about it all is that the Flames are coached by a man who led the U. of Wisconsin to the NCAA hockey championship a few seasons back, Badger Bob Johnson. He knows that US 12-16 ran by his rink at the UW campus.

Now designated I-90-94, they don't run to Calgary...so I guess it's not the Road to the Cup.

Dumas defeats Harvesters

DUMAS — District 1-4A champion Dumas held off the Pampa Harvesters for an 11-8 win in baseball action Tuesday.

Dumas, which had already clinched the district crown going into the game, finished the regular season with a 13-9-1 overall record. In district play, the Demons were 10-2. Dumas last won a district championship in 1974.

With one game remaining, the Harvesters are 5-18 overall and 2-9 in district play.

Dumas took a 4-0 lead in the first inning and Pampa bounced back to knot the score with four runs in the third. Grant Gambelin single scored two runs in the top of the fourth to give Pampa a 6-4 advantage, but the Demons tied things at 6-all with two runs of their own in the bottom of the fourth.

Dumas added four more runs in the fifth and another in the sixth. Pampa's Chad McDougall hit a solo homer in the sixth and the Harvesters added their final run in the seventh on a Dumas error.

Dumas pounded out 15 hits while Pampa had seven. Gambelin and Glen Pruitt had two hits each to lead Pampa.

Eric Appel was the winning pitcher while starter Bret Mitchell took the loss.

Pampa closes its season Saturday at Lubbock Dunbar. Game-time is 1 p.m. The Panthers have clinched a tie for the district runner-up spot.

In other district games Tuesday, Canyon defeated Borger, 8-5, and Dunbar pounded Level-land, 14-2.

Rangers trim Tigers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas Rangers rookie Pete Incaviglia came into the league with big expectations, but so far it has been a little bit of a struggle.

Going into Tuesday night's game against the Detroit Tigers, he was hitting only .200 with no game-winning RBI.

But although he had only one hit against the Tigers, Incaviglia made it count, slamming a two-run homer in the sixth to propel the Rangers to a 4-2 victory and get his first major-league game-winning RBI.

Incaviglia's towering home run over the left field wall, his fifth of the season, scored Pete O'Brien and gave the Rangers a 3-2 lead. Scott Fletcher scored earlier in the inning on a triple and an Alan Trammell throwing error.

"It's only 25 games into the season," Incaviglia said. "But all I'm interested in doing is helping the ball club."

USFL holds its draft

NEW YORK (AP)—A draft is, by its very nature, an expression of hope—that the future is secure, that life will somehow be better.

It was perhaps fitting, then, that the Baltimore Stars, the defending champions but a team without a stadium or a head coach for now, picked running back Napoleon McCallum of Navy in the third round of the United States Football League's draft Tuesday.

McCallum won't be available until he completes his five-year military commitment.

It was perhaps fitting, too, that when USFL Commissioner Harry Usher opened the draft in the relative silence of a ballroom at the Grand Hyatt Hotel, he was speaking not so much to the teams' representatives in the room as to players across the country.

"We're here to stay," Usher said. "We need assistance from what's going to start next Monday," namely, the trial in U.S. District Court on the USFL's $1.32 billion antitrust suit against the National Football League.

"To the players and their agents, I say, what if ...?"

He paused. "What if ...?" He paused again. "What if we get the relief we are seeking?" "What if ...? What if ...? Then you may be dealing with THE league," Usher said.

The silence in the room at the start of the draft was in stark contrast to the electricity in the air a week ago at the NFL's glitzy production, when the Tampa Bay Buccaneers formally made Auburn tailback Bo Jackson that league's No. 1 choice.

There was cheering from the hundreds of spectators mashed into the balcony at the Marriott Marquis when NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle introduced Jackson.

When Usher read the name of Iowa tackle Mike Haight off an index card as the USFL's No. 1 choice, by the Orlando Renegades, there was a murmur as seven other aides spoke to their teams' headquarters.

The few journalists present noted Haight's name.

At the rear of the room, one spectator, who said he had just wandered in from the hallway and picked up a free newspaper compliments of the league, looked up for a moment, then turned his attention back to the classified ads.

Later, Haight was interviewed—for about four minutes via a speaker phone in a conversation from what he called "my little Iowa City apartment."

It was then that he found out the NFL's New York Jets, who had made him their first-round choice a week ago, had waived Marvin Powell, their five-time All-Pro tackle.

"If they're cutting him, it must mean they're making room for someone else," he said.

Gone fishin'

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

SEYMOUR, Texas (AP) — America is alive and well and guzzling beer, tossing horseshoes, racing boats and fishing for bass and carp on a choppy, windswept lake in West Texas.

Just ask Daryl Zeller of Abilene, a computer company representative.

At midmorning Monday, Zeller, wearing a suit and tie and a profoundly quizzical look, stood at the locked door of a darkened Seymour bank and wondered aloud:

"Where is everybody?"

At that moment, the town square, the heartbeat of this city of 4,000, was deserted and silent.

"Gone fishin'," replied a stranger.

"I don't believe this; there's no one here," said Zeller.

"Believe it," said the stranger.

"I guess we ought to join 'em," laughed Zeller.

"Going to," said the stranger.

Zeller scuttled his plans to visit his two banking clients in Seymour and headed off toward Wichita Falls, saying: "I think it's really pretty neat that they do something like this."

Before leaving town, the stranger stuck a quarter in a pay phone and it was gobbled up without a sound.

On Gone Fishin' Day in Seymour, even the telephones don't work.

Seymour traces its fish day celebration back 60 years, when Lake Kemp was opened north of town on land owned and totally surrounded by the Waggoner Ranch, a 535,000-acre spread that covers parts of four counties, enormous even by Texas standards.

That first fishing season began on May 1, and for years the folks in Seymour headed to the lake each year on that date.

"The merchants finally decided that if everybody was going to go fishing they'd just shut down and go too," Mayor Charles Sessions told a stranger to the Lake Kemp festivities.

He said it was the merchants who also decreed that the holiday be celebrated on the first Monday in May.

"Enough people got together and decided they'd just shut down the town," added Jimmy Vita, an auto parts dealer who was directing the lakeside activities Monday.

The activities included bass and carp fishing, raft and boat races, a horseshoe pitching contest, a fish fry and some really serious beer drinking.

"We're cooking 360 pounds of fish filets and 50 pounds of red beans," said Vita, who is hardly a novice at this gone fishing business.

"I've probably been out here 35 years, since I was old enough to walk," he smiled. "It's kinda unique. Not many towns have their own holiday."

Marilyn McClung, manager of the sponsoring Seymour Chamber of Commerce, described the affair fondly as a cross between a dream and a nightmare, the latter because it takes so much planning and cooperation.

"It takes everyone in town to put on fish day," she said, "and people come from Amarillo, Lubbock, Abilene, Wichita Falls and everywhere else within a 200-mile radius."

Some great sage, probably W.C. Fields, once said that anything worth doing was worth doing to excess, and the good folks of Seymour were quick to adopt that philosophy.

Gone Fishin' Day now begins on Saturday with arts and craft shows, selection of big and little Miss Lake Kemps and a nighttime street dance, with music provided this year by a group called Country Gold from nearby Munday.

The festivities move to the lake on Sunday for the start of fishing, boating, skiing and volleyball contests.

On Monday, everybody closes shop and most head to Kemp for the finale.

One who didn't was Neva Elliott, a postal employe, who was stopped on an empty street and asked why it was she hadn't gone fishin'.

"The mail must go through," she replied grandly, then added: "I guess I might as well be working. It's a little too windy to be fishing and I can't throw horseshoes."

At the Baylor Drug Store, owner Paul Hoge was busy laying carpet and insisting he wasn't really open: "I don't think anybody's open. We're here only because of this remodeling."

The one car on the square was parked outside the Farmers Home Administration office where Rayleen Pittcock, an employe for 32 years, explained that the sorehead federal government did not recognize Gone Fishin' Day as a legal holiday.

But did she personally endorse it?

"Of course. Wholeheartedly. By all means."

Justice refuses meeting on Waldheim

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department turned down a second request by 15 Democrats on the House Judiciary Committee to meet with Attorney General Edwin Meese on the status of Kurt Waldheim.

The rejection came in a letter to House Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J.

"It's an offense to the institution of the House when the attorney general stonewalls the Judiciary Committee," responded Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., one of the 15 lawmakers.
