Railroad traffic resumes after derailment cleared

Railroad traffic on the Santa Fe Railway was back to normal today after clean-up operations from a train derailment just west of Pampa early Sunday morning.

The derailment occurred shortly after 5 a.m. Sunday when 12 cars of an eastbound Santa Fe train headed for Kansas City left the tracks east of the Highway 60 and Price Road intersection, according to Randy Merrick, special agent for Santa Fe.

Clyde Jeffus, assistant to the general manager with the Santa Fe Amarillo district office, said this morning that the 12 derailed cars were multi-level auto racks. All were empty, he said.

Both Merrick and Jeffus said no one was injured in the accident.

A Santa Fe spokesman at the scene Sunday said no one could even speculate as to the cause of the accident yet.

Jeffus said there was no estimate of damages and no determination of the cause this morning, but he expected some findings to be ready sometime this afternoon or Tuesday morning.

Mike Ditmore, who lives at 936 S. Dwight, near the scene of the derailment, said the crash woke him up around 5:30 a.m. Sunday. "I don't know if it's my imagination or not, but the last few nights, they'd (railroad cars) hit a certain spot in the tracks and just pop," he said at the scene Sunday.

According to a witness, the 12 derailed cars also apparently knocked against at least three black tanker cars that were parked on tracks alongside the derailment, causing the tankers to leave their tracks.

Santa Fe personnel spent Sunday clearing the wreckage from the tracks. They replaced 30-foot lengths of track and laid gravel ballast between the tracks and ties along the railroad tracks in the damaged section.

Santa Fe security personnel remained on the scene to keep people away from the derailment area.

Jeffus said the workmen expedited rail service on the main line by using a side track, with service open by 4 p.m. Sunday. The north track was open by 8 p.m. and the south track by 10 p.m., he said.

The accident Sunday morning followed another incident Saturday night at the Highway 60 and Price Road crossover.

The safety arms which block traffic during a train crossing came down and locked. Department of Public Safety troopers directed traffic through the arms until Santa Fe personnel repaired the arms for normal operation.

INSPECTING DAMAGES - A Santa Fe railroad employee steps over a track to inspect damages to one of 12 multi-level auto racks that derailed Sunday morning along Highway 60 just west of the city. No injuries occurred in the accident. Santa Fe personnel had all the tracks back to normal service by 10 p.m. Sunday. (Staff photo by Terry Ford)

City commission will discuss ordinances at Tuesday session

The Pampa City Commission will consider five proposed ordinances arising from recommendations of the Traffic Commission during its regular meeting at 6 p.m. Tuesday.

The first ordinance concerns the removal of traffic signals and installation of appropriate traffic control signs at five intersections in or near the downtown area.

The intersections are located at Ballard and Kingsmill, Ballard and Francis, Francis and Frost, Francis and West, and Somerville and Kingsmill.

The second ordinance proposes the installation of yield signs at the intersections of Decatur and Wells, Decatur and Dwight, Decatur and Christy, and Jorden and Lefors.

Another ordinance is relative to the maximum speed limits on West Kentucky Street from Price Road to Hobart. The Traffic Commission has recommended the maximum speed on Kentucky from Hobart west to Price Road be 35 miles an hour, and from Price Road to the west corporate limits of the city be 40 miles an hour.

A fourth proposed ordinance recommends the creation of a one-way alley behind and adjacent to the First Baptist Church between Kingsmill and Francis streets.

The final recommended traffic ordinance would expand the hours for designated school zones in the morning from 8 to 9:30 a.m. to 7:30 to 9:30 a.m.

All five traffic ordinances will receive their first reading Tuesday.

In other matters Tuesday evening, commissioners will consider:

- a resolution concerning a change order relative to the rehabilitation project at City Hall;
- first readings of ordinances adopting the Southern Standard Plumbing Code and the Southern Standard Gas Code;
- approval of two accounts payable.

Commissioners also have scheduled an executive session to discuss real estate matters.

Tax reform will pass, officials say, but extent of changes unknown

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic and Republican leaders predict Congress will pass a tax reform bill this year, but other observers say Americans shouldn't count their tax savings yet.

Some officials said Sunday the tax overhaul measure endorsed by a Senate committee last week could boost revenues, at least the first year.

Treasury Secretary James Baker said the administration believes the Senate "bill is revenue neutral over the entire budget period" — meaning it would neither increase nor decrease revenues — although "the effect will be an increase in the first year."

President Reagan, who on Saturday endorsed the Senate version of the bill, has vowed to veto any tax increase, so backers of the bill have taken pains to describe it as revenue neutral.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said, "We are all against tax increase. But you can't tell precisely over a five-year period (whether) it's revenue neutral. Some years, you might have a little bulge, a little surplus. Over the period it's neutral."

Dole and Baker, appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press," echoed Reagan's enthusiasm for the Senate version.

A House-Senate conference committee would work out the differences between a House bill passed last December and one that was unanimously endorsed last week by the Senate Finance Committee and is expected to pass the full Senate.

Both bills would reduce tax rates for most Americans while eliminating most tax shelters and raising business taxes.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the main author of the House tax reform measure, said reaching agreement with the Senate won't be easy.

But, "There is an agreement among members that tax reform is going to pass, and that people will be investing their dollars based on good business practices as opposed to hiding them from the government," Rostenkowski said on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley."

The No. 2 official at the Treasury Department, Richard Darman, predicted that the Senate bill could boost government revenues by stimulating economic growth.

Lake McClellan on county commission agenda

Gray County Commissioners will discuss whether the county should proceed with efforts to acquire property surrounding Lake McClellan when they meet at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday.

County Judge Carl Kennedy said a request was made by Rep. Beau Boulter's office through Precinct Three Commissioner Gerald Wright to put the item back on the court's agenda. Boulter is considering legislation that would enable the county to take over operation of Lake McClellan recreational site from the federal government.

In other action, the commissioners are scheduled to consider:

- a letter from Northwest

Texas Hospital concerning the Women, Infants and Children (WIC) program.

- a letter from Panhandle Community Services regarding participation in the commodity distribution program.

ONE WAY — Mark Parker of Allen, Okla., passes through downtown Pampa last week during his cross-country journey to point out the "one way" to salvation. Parker says he is making the trip with an 80-pound hand-constructed wooden cross to win souls. (Staff photo by Terry Ford.)

Traveler takes up his cross

PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Writer

Mark Parker takes seriously the Bible's command to take up one's cross and follow the Lord.

The self-described "street preacher" passed through Pampa on Thursday and Friday bearing a modified 80-pound wooden cross on a cross-country trip he says is a mission of obedience designed to win souls.

A native of Youngstown, Ohio, who now resides in eastern Oklahoma, Parker answers with one word when asked about the reason for his trip.

"Jesus."

"For me it's obedience, personally," he adds later. "Secondly, to win souls for Christ. I'd like to start a revolution for Jesus."

Parker's cross — he constructed it himself — is 12 feet high and six feet wide. His yoke is made a bit lighter by a small tire affixed to the bottom. A sleeping bag and thermos are also attached for the times when he must sleep out in the open.

Parker began the trip in June, 1985, in Elizabeth City, N.C., and took the winter off at his home near Ada, Okla. When the weather turned warm he again took up his cross and is proceeding toward Oceanside, Calif.

However, Parker said he is "in no bondage" to that destination and will turn another direction if so instructed by his Maker. He was proceeding down I-40 on Thursday, he said, when he was told to turn north toward Pampa.

"If the Lord says 'Go south tomorrow,' I'll go south," he explained, adding he has no doubts about completing his mission. "If I was out here trying to do this in the flesh, there's no way. It's got to be the Holy Spirit of God."

He said he prefers talking to people one-on-one but has spoken at several churches along his route. He claims to have won two souls that he knows of since leaving Ada but adds the trip would be successful if he won only one.

One thing Parker says one thing the trip is definitely not designed to do is draw attention to himself.

"Print more about the Lord than you do me, if you will," he instructs a reporter. "I want to lift up His name instead of mine."

Parker said neither he nor his wife were overly receptive to the idea three-and-one-half years ago when the Lord first spoke to him about making the trip. He was working as a mechanic at the time and for a period of about two years sought "much confirmation from the Lord."

He said his wife joins him occasionally on the trip.

Since leaving North Carolina, Parker said he has had several minor "run-ins" with the law. He said Pampa police watched him closely Thursday night but did not attempt to speak with him.

"I wish they had," he said. Parker said he was enslaved to drugs and alcohol before he was "delivered."

"I was born to be wasted. I couldn't have quit those things," he said. "There's a reality in the Jesus I serve."

Parker said he was raised a Lutheran but now serves "just Jesus' church." Many so-called men of God, he said, are more concerned about being "right instead of righteous."

"I would say I'm interdenominational," he said. "I believe the Bible. I try not to get doctrinally wound up because you can get in arguments that way and that defeats my purpose."

Shultz hits proposed spending cuts

WASHINGTON (AP)—Returning from a 17-day Asia trip, Secretary of State George P. Shultz today was ready to take on Congress over contemplated cuts in U.S. programs overseas that he said would result in "a tragedy for national security interests."

Shultz said a projected reduction of a half-billion dollars in anti-terrorist measures proposed by the Reagan administration might expose embassies to terrorist attacks.

In that event, Shultz said, he would tell Congress "I'm not derelict in my duty, you're derelict in your duty because you would not appropriate the money."

The White House has proposed a budget of $22.6 billion for the State Department for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1. This includes $1.4 billion to enhance security measures at U.S. embassies to protect American diplomats and other workers against terrorism.

The Senate and the House Budget Committees have sharply reduced the department's appropriation to $17.8 billion and left it to the administration to make allocations for individual programs.

The issue is still to be decided by a Congressional conference committee. Asked on his flight home if his campaign to reverse the budget-cutting would succeed, Shultz said, "I'm going to increase the chances by screaming about it."

He seemed especially perturbed about the lack of support for measures to improve the safety of U.S. embassy personnel.

"A lot of these people out around all over the world have threats to their lives continuously," Shultz said. "It's not a nice life."

He said he planned to meet with members of Congress this week and had telephoned Rep. William Gray, D-Pa., the chairman of the House Budget Committee, last week from Manila.

"I think what is being perpetrated here is a tragedy for U.S. national security interests," Shultz said. "It's not a good thing for the United States of America to do this."

Shultz said if the House Budget Committee's approach prevailed, the United States would face the prospect of "withdrawing from the world" and stifling a strong foreign policy.

Lefors will hold public meeting Thursday

LEFORS - The City of Lefors will hold a public hearing at 7 p.m. Thursday, May 15, at the Lefors Civic Center to discuss the city's housing and community development needs.

The city is planning to file an application with the Texas Department of Community Affairs (TDCA) for a Texas Community Development Program (TCDP) grant.

The application must be filed on or before June 16. Mayor J. W. Franks said all Lefors citizens are encouraged to attend the public hearing and present their views to the city. Written comments will be accepted by the city up until the time the application is submitted to TDCA.

A second public hearing will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday, May 22, to discuss the details of the application which the city is planning to submit to TDCA.

Mayor Franks said citizens are also encouraged to attend this hearing to learn about the activities which the city will include in its TCDP proposal.

The goal and objectives of the TCDP program is the development of viable communities through various projects.

Projects may aim at providing decent housing and a suitable living environment and by expanding economic opportunities. Other aims are to improve public facilities to meet basic human needs, to improve housing conditions, to expand economic opportunities that create or retain jobs and to provide assistance and public facilities to eliminate conditions hazardous to the public health and/or an emergency nature.

For further information on the TCDP program, contact Franks at 835-2200.

Handicapped or other individuals who might have trouble in attending the public hearings should contact the City Hall to arrange for special assistance.

Gas hike unprecedented, analyst says

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Higher oil costs have pushed up gas prices after a five-month plunge and more retail hikes loom as the summer motoring season shifts into overdrive, an industry analyst says.

The weekend upswing of 2.33 cents a gallon brought the new 50-state average to 92.29 cents a gallon, analyst Dan Lundberg said Sunday.

"This Mother's Day increase reflects an earlier-than-usual price boost normally associated with Memorial Day," said Lundberg, adding that the early price jump was unprecedented.

"Crude oil prices broke at a $15-a-barrel level, the highest price in three months. Retail gasoline moved swiftly upward as well. This development ends an uninterrupted retail decline of 31 cents a gallon since last December. It bottomed out two weeks ago at an overall average for all grades at 89.96 cents a gallon."

Wholesale cost increases were steeper, rising 3.38 cents a gallon, and that may add another penny a gallon to retail costs in the near future, he said.

Nevertheless Lundberg, who conducts a semi-weekly survey of gasoline prices nationwide, said this year's May prices remain about 30 cents a gallon lower than last year's prices.

"But as Memorial Day approaches," he said, "the increase, if seasonally true to form, could bring on another 4- to 5-cent increase, especially pressured by the nation's exceptionally low inventory of gasoline stocks."

Six area students place in state Class A and AAA UIL contests

AUSTIN — Groom High School Junior Jami Duke wanted to win the State University Interscholastic League poetry contest this year, but she had to settle for First Place in Feature Writing instead.

Miss Duke leads six area high school students who placed in the State UIL Class A and AAA academic, journalism and speech contests. There were no area high school students represented in Class AA and AAAA State contests.

In addition to Jami, three Groom students placed in the Class A State contest. Junior Jannah Ruthardt placed fifth in typing and will return to Austin this week-end to run the 1600 meters in the Class A 1 State Track Meet. Senior Melissa Fields placed fourth in Spelling, and Tim Case placed ninth in calculator application.

Also winning at the Class A contest were Mobeette Junior Diane Moffett, eighth in typing and Kelson honor senior Lacy Buckingham, fifth in calculator application. Shelly Jones of Canadian placed fifth in newswriting in the Class AAA contest. Groom High School journalism sponsor Janet Lamb, who reported the state results for The Pampa News was unable to report on Lefors junior Norman Howard, a state qualifier in science.

Although this makes the second visit to Austin for Duke, it is not necessarily the first place finish she was hoping for.

"I wanted to win in poetry. That's really my thing," said Duke, who placed fourth in poetry in the 1985 State finals. This year, she got as far as the Regional contest in poetry.

In the feature writing competition, Duke was given a half hour to interview her subject — actress and area TV anchorwoman Kathy Cronkite, Walter's daughter — and one hour to write a feature about her. The features are judged on the quality of the lead, whether the story is written in a logical order and the presentation and accuracy of the facts.

"I didn't finish it," Duke admitted. "I didn't think I did very good because they called time before I could write a conclusion."

DEBBIE OWENS

Dispatcher officer of day

Debbie Owens, today's Pampa Police Department officer of the day, has been employed as a clerk and dispatcher by the department since May 21, 1985.

A May, 1982 graduate of Longview High School, she has just completed a child psychology course through Clarendon College, where she also is currently enrolled in emergency medical technician classes. She has also attended law enforcement classes through Frank Phillips College in Borger.

Owens is a Sunday school teacher at Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ for the five-year-olds.

Owens' job involves typing officer's reports, filing cards, dispatching and, in the daytime, serving the public by finding reports.

She says her favorite part of the job is the people she works with.

Clean-up is continuing in Ward 4

By BOB HART
Pampa City Manager

The Clean-Up campaign is continuing.

Again, we'll be working in Ward 4 for the duration of this week. The other wards will be done in the latter part of May and through the month of June.

Once again I would like to remind you that everyone is welcome to dump free at the city landfill throughout the month of May. This would be a good time to do some spring cleaning and dispose of any unwanted items that may have accumulated around your home.

With the dry weather that we have been experiencing, we are receiving increased reports on spiders coming into the homes.

I want to mention in particular the brown recluse spider, also known as the fiddleback spider. The brown recluse is the most dangerous of all North American spiders.

The spider itself has a relatively harmless appearance and is about the size of a quarter. It is small, hairless and shy; its legs are long and its body is small and smooth. It spins a loosely formed nondescript gray web in undisturbed areas, both indoors and out.

The color of the brown recluse ranges from light yellowish to dark brown with older specimens being almost black. The brown recluse's most distinctive physical features are its six eyes arranged in a semi-circle of three pairs on the front of the head and the fiddle-shaped marking on its back.

The brown recluse venom is not too different from snake venom. It is mostly enzyme protein which destroys tissue and lead to inflammation.

The steps generally given to avoid the brown recluse include: be careful around the spider's outdoor habitats such as rocks; frequently clean closets, cellars and attics; shake out clothing and bedding before use; remove collections of papers in unused boxes; thoroughly clean beneath and behind furniture; clean webs from living and storing areas; and use a water hose to wash off outside areas, especially under the roof and eaves.

If you find what you think might be a brown recluse on your skin or clothes, don't swat it; brush it off gently.

If you have any questions about the spider, please call Sandy Burns at the Animal Shelter at 669-6149.

TEXAS/REGIONAL

Chief justice calls for appointing Texas judges

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court said that because of excessive political contributions to judges seeking political office he now favors something he once vigorously opposed — the appointment of state judges.

"The appearance of impropriety has become the dominant problem, resulting in a loss of public confidence in the independence of our judiciary, and we must change it," Chief Justice John Hill said Saturday.

Excessive campaign contributions have tainted judicial elections beyond repair, he said.

Saying the problem had been brought on mainly by recent disclosures about the politicization of the courts, Hill proposed establishing 16 panels to suggest possible judges to the governor.

Under Hill's plan, the gubernatorial appointments would stand for periodic votes of confidence.

"Above all else, judges must be independent and uncompromisingly honest," he told St. Mary's University School of Law graduates in a commencement speech.

"But it is becoming increasingly difficult for the public to have confidence that those basic principles are our guiding light when they see the vast amount of special interest money being poured into judicial races, particularly Supreme Court races," he said.

"I see no effective way out of this debilitating situation other than by appointing our judges followed by retention election, and I am declaring today my willingness to lead an effort to bring about this change," Hill said.

Hill said it was only recently that he began to consider the merits of altering the system of partisan elections used in Texas since the present constitution was adopted 110 years ago.

"Frankly, up until I became chief judge I opposed such a plan," he said. "If anyone had told me two years ago that I would now be advocating such a plan, I would have responded that they were very wrong."

Hill, a Democrat, was elected in 1984 and joined the court in January 1985. He previously had served for five years as state attorney general, abandoning that office in 1978 to wage an unsuccessful gubernatorial race against Republican Bill Clements.

Hill said his proposal was based on a 1984 plan — authored by a committee headed by attorney Don Dean of Amarillo — that was submitted to, but never endorsed by, the state bar's board of directors.

Similar plans, he said, have been debated since the end of World War II and are modeled after the Missouri Plan of judicial appointments, which has been endorsed by the American Bar Association and is used in a number of states.

Under Hill's proposal, a geographically, politically and ethnically balanced 15-member committee — with members appointed by a variety of officials — would suggest five nominees for each appellate judgeship, and the governor would be obligated to pick one.

Similar panels in the state's nine judicial districts and six largest counties would forward to the governor similar lists of five for each court vacancy in their area, Hill said.

Then, at the next general election after their appointment, the judges' names would appear on the ballot next to a question asking if they should be retained in office.

Under his plan, judges retained would serve for a period Hill did not specify before standing for another confidence vote.

Teacher stress causes appraisal delay

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas teachers have enough trouble without beginning classroom appraisals this September, the State Board of Education has decided.

After long hot arguments Saturday, and one reversal of votes, the 15-member appointed board decided 7-6 to postpone making evaluations of their work from this September until the spring of 1987.

The 15-member board was appointed by Gov. Mark White after the 1984 special legislative session did away with the previous elected board, which included one from each congress-sional district. Supporters of the move to delay recording classroom evaluations of teachers said it would relieve the stress teachers have been under the school reform provisions, including the recent statewide reading and writing test.

"This is an emergency situation," said board member Carolyn Crawford, Beaumont. The board first rejected, 6-7, then approved, 7-6, the plan proposed by Ms. Crawford and Katherine Raines, Cleburne, to delay appraising teachers' work four times a year to see if they deserve additional pay and prestige. The "career ladder" system was mandated by the 1984 reform act, with lucky teachers getting $2,000 raises for each step they advance.

The vote provides that the first part of the 1986-87 school year will be considered a "formative" period to let teachers get accustomed to being judged by administrators and trained appraisers. Scores for consideration on the "career ladder" will not begin until 1987.

"Teachers are just now recovering from the literacy tests, which caused a great deal of stress," said Ms. Raines. "They really don't understand the law on these appraisals."

On Thursday, the board heard results of a statewide competency test that showed 96.7 percent of Texas current teachers passing. The board was told that 6,579 teachers failed the test, including 6 percent of the Hispanic teachers, 18.4 percent of the black teachers, and 1.1 percent of the white teachers.

"The law calls for a balanced appraisal of the teacher throughout the year," said Rebecca Canning of Waco. "If you cut it just to the spring semester that really will put the pressure on."

"We will be setting a national precedent with these statewide appraisals," said William McBride, San Antonio. "Many teachers are misinformed what these appraisals will be."

Education Commissioner William Kirby said the delay in recording scores on appraisals would mean that local school boards could use the appraisals this fall to guide them for contract renewals, but it would be spring before any teacher qualifications would apply to the career ladder.

Efforts of member Jack Strong, Longview, to bring up the issue of forcing local districts to take immediate action on failing students failed when he got a 5-5 vote.

"This means it will not be effective this September," Strong said.

Ms. Raines asked for a delay on the proposal until the June meeting, saying it was "an extensive change. We should defer any action until we first have a public hearing."

Strong scheduled a 2-hour public hearing before the June board meeting.

Sesquicentennial profits fall short of expectations

DALLAS (AP) — Bootleg souvenirs, a souring state economy and dragged heels on the Texas Sesquicentennial Commission have contributed to an abysmal failure in meeting revenue targets for the birthday celebration, officials say.

The commission, which the Legislature established in 1979 to be a moneymaker, has collected only $420,000 out of an anticipated $6 million to $20 million in revenue, they said.

The poor financial showing could cause the loss of millions of dollars in anticipated public and private grants for art projects throughout the state, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

Revenue projections — based on estimates of every person in the state buying $25 worth of sesquicentennial products — were the work of some state legislators, as well as two former executive directors of the Sesquicentennial Commission — Lynn Nabers, who resigned in February, and Randy Lee, who resigned in August 1985.

The commission was reorganized after Lee's resignation, following growing dissatisfaction among Gov. Mark White and commission members over the slow progress in planning.

"We did get a late start on things, and it's unfortunate, because I know we've disappointed some people," said Patrick Terry, named executive director in February after serving since August as the commission's deputy director.

"But I believe the projections we were saddled with were not very well thought out," he added.

Revenues from souvenirs and money raised through corporate sponsorship were to be a boon for the state. Optimistic estimates in 1985 had envisioned up to $20 million in profit.

But as of May 1, after 16 months of sales, the more than 760 sanctioned products have produced only about $302,000 in royalties. About $118,000 in corporate donations have also been received.

Because of the shortfall, officials have had to scrap a planned national television ad campaign, and a slick $1 million guidebook to sesquicentennial events was scaled down to an $80,000 black-and-white listing of more than 8,000 events.

In addition, the commission has had to slash its budget, staff, telephone system and promotional newsletters, officials said.

Commission officials have said recently they will manage to raise $1.5 million from all sources before the sesquicentennial year is out.

Terry noted that $400 million worth of merchandise would have to be sold if the commission were to meet its initial projected revenue of $20 million. The commission gets 10 percent of the wholesale price as a royalty.

But state Rep. Ralph Wallace, D-Houston, chairman of a House committee that oversees the sesquicentennial budget, said he still believes the revenues could have reached that high, and said it's not too late to get at least $5 million.

"In the past, the commission has not demonstrated any expertise or knowledge in marketing," Wallace said. "They sanctioned products before they had a marketing plan. They've been dragging their feet."

Terry, who acknowledged there had been marketing problems at the commission's outset, said the group stopped sanctioning products in October, feeling that they had already flooded the market.

Wallace said he believed bootleg products sold by non-sanctioned vendors have accounted for as much, if not more, money than merchandise for which the commission receives royalties.

So far, Terry said, the commission has secured three temporary restraining orders stopping sales of bootleg merchandise.

Officials added that Texas' oil-swamped economy is hurting the effort too — White has made an across-the-board cut of 13 percent in state agencies' budgets that have forced cutbacks in marketing efforts.

Top graduates named at Lefors High School

LEFORS — Amy Goldsmith and Melissa Stubbs have been named valedictorian and salutatorian of the 1986 Lefors High School Graduating Class.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Goldsmith, Amy graduates with a 93 point grade average. She is active in choir and tennis, the editor of the high school yearbook, and was awarded the Daughters of the American Revolution Good Citizenship Award this year. As a senior, she won Who's Who awards in English, history and choir. After high school, she plans to attend Frank Phillips College in Borger, but she has not decided on a major.

Melissa Stubbs, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stubbs, graduates with a 90.12 grade average. She was the president of the student council, the senior class treasurer, a regional qualifier in tennis and was the photographer for the high school yearbook. She was also active in basketball. She has not yet selected a college or a major.

Mayor and council members weather Borger recall vote

BORGER, Texas (AP) — The mayor and two City Council members have weathered a recall election that was prompted by a $1.5 million court judgment this Panhandle city is still facing over a fatal police shooting.

Voters rejected by a 2-to-1 margin Saturday a recall that would have turned Mayor Frank Selfridge, Mayor Pro-Tem Judy Flanders and councilman Bill Slaybaugh out of office.

The election was ordered amidst a furor in Borger over whether the council could have avoided the $1.5 million suit judgment by making a $500,000 out-of-court settlement that would have been covered by Borger's insurance plan.

"I'm elated of course. They are saying they have confidence in the present council," Selfridge said after the election, adding that he was not surprised by the margin of victory.

Out of 2,214 votes cast, Self-ridge held his office by a 1,458 to 753 margin. Ms. Flanders by 1,472 to 735 and Slaybaugh by 1,467 to 739.

Mary Ward, who ran as one of the replacement candidates said, "I'm glad there was a good turnout, but I'm disappointed with the results. We'll wait and see how it turns out in court."

Ms. Ward is a member of Citizens for Honest City Government, a group formed by three women that called for the election in a petition circulated in February.

The controversy centers on a suit brought by the family of 6666 Ranch Foreman James Grandstaff after he was shot to death by law enforcement officers who thought he was a fugitive they had chased onto the ranch.

Grandstaff's family took the city to court and was awarded $1.4 million in damages by U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson in Amarillo.

Having fun with photography

Many Pampa residents know of the joys of working with young people on various projects, whether it is sports, 4-H activities or some other activity.

For me it is an opportunity to both pass on my knowledge in photography and to learn, along with the young people, other ways of taking pictures and the thrill of capturing on film one's impression of a particular scene.

These activities presently involve helping Joseph Neil, adviser to Pampa's Photography Explorer Post 410, with projects of the Boy Scouts Explorer Post.

While I am officially listed in the dual capacity of Scout coordinator and committee chairman, involvement with the Explorers also means working with the Post members, boys and girls between 14 and 21 years of age, making suggestions and answering questions.

I don't claim to know everything there is to know about photography, especially in the field of color work. People who have been professionally involved in photography for many years will tell you they learn something new every time they pick up a camera. Most of my experience has been in the area of black and white photography involved in newspaper work.

But, the basic principles are the same, whether they are used in taking black and white or colored photographs. The photographer, if good photographs are to result, must know about proper lighting, depth of field, aperture settings and the numerous other factors which go into the making of outstanding pictures.

The joy of watching as a young person grasps some important point was brought to me recently on a late afternoon trip I made with my 14-year-old son David as he was beginning to use one of my 35 mm. cameras.

We had stopped in an area near Bowers City about 30 minutes before sundown and I noticed a large, weather tree stump. As he followed my directions to walk around the stump several times, observing the effect of the side lighting on the numerous rings in the stump, David's eyes suddenly brightened and he told me he understood what I had been telling him. His resultant picture proved he had grasped how the position of lighting can enhance a picture.

On this same outing he took several pictures of canyons, with the landscape lighted by the setting sun with the contours highlighted by light and shadows.

That is the aim of Explorer Post 410 — to instill the basic principles of good photography while having a good time.

Because of the pressure of time this column is being written prior to the Post's Sunday afternoon field trip to Lake Meredith. The northeast side of the lake was chosen as the photography site by the young people because of the wide choice of photography scenes such as water, trees and bluffs. Hopefully, each of the young photographers will be successful in capturing a scenic view for his or her collection of pictures. Who knows, even the adults may come up with some outstanding photographs.

As part of the field trip, the young people will also enjoy a lake-side picnic, thanks to local merchants who donated the buns, weiners, condiments, sodas and other ingredients to the Explorer Post.

Sunday's picture-taking outing is only one of many field trips planned by the Explorers in coming months. Each trip will be to a different area, offering the young people a variety of scenery on which to experiment with various picture ideas.

While it is preferable that each Explorer have her or his own camera, it is not required. Neil reports that hopefully Post 410 will soon have several cameras available for members to use until they are able to obtain their own.

Membership in Photography Explorer Post 410 costs only $3.50 per year, the annual membership fee for the Boy Scouts of America. In September the annual membership will become $4 annually.

The local Photography Explorer Post is sponsored by Clarendon College - Pampa Center. Meetings are held at the college at 7 p.m. on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month.

So if you are a young person between 14 and 21 and want to learn more about taking pictures, come to this Tuesday's meeting and learn more about Exploring with a camera. Or if you know someone in that age group who is interested learning more about photography encourage them to come to the meetings.

See you at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the cafeteria at Clarendon College - Pampa Center.

PARENT'S ATTITUDE VITAL

Ten-year-old Johnnie had trouble seeing the blackboard. He did poorly at little league baseball. He couldn't focus on the moving ball. An eye examination indicated that Johnnie needed corrective glasses for seeing at a distance. Johnnie came home with Mom wearing his first pair of glasses. As they entered the front door, Johnnie's father was obvious about his disappointment. This negative attitude can be devastating to the self-esteem of a youngster.

The greatest problems encountered with children who wear glasses originate from parents - not children. Children are quite willing and sometimes even eager to wear glasses. They are quick to understand that glasses will allow them better vision and this gives them an easier time at school and at play. The idea that there is something wrong is usually picked up from their parents.

Advice: Try not to express disappointment in your child's presence if glasses are indicated. For the sake of the child, try to be positive about the visual benefits glasses will afford.

More laws are not liability answer

The Reagan administration recently did what politicians are so wont to do. It proposed a legislative Band-Aid for a situation that may or may not be a genuine problem — and for which the Band-Aid proposed may or may not be a solution.

Reacting to what they described as the liability insurance crisis, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and Attorney General Edwin Meese proposed limiting the liability of private manufacturers, placing a cap on the amount of non-economic damages a jury can award and limiting lawyers' contingency fees.

But what many see as a pabulum with liability law — the increasing size of damage awards and the increasing cost of insurance — is not so much a problem with the tort system as it is a problem of society's definition of individual responsibility.

The tort system is the process in which injuries inflicted by one person against another are compensated. But just as courts have expanded the definition of personal injuries — allowing plaintiffs to recover damages from others for accidents almost entirely of their own making — so, too, have the lawmakers. In fact, it's hard to say just which side started the ball rolling.

Legislative tort law has expanded drastically in recent years, with lawmakers requiring companies to design products not only with their respective uses in mind, but also their potential misuses. Now it has come to the point where, if a product does not specifically warn against a misuse that results in injury — no matter how far-fetched — lawyers often rush in and the jury often tends to side with the injured party.

Ass Baldrige and Meese point out, all this is costing the consumer plenty.

Granted, liability isn't just a problem of laws, but of interpretation as well. Abuse, alteration or misuse of a product should be a sound defense in product liability cases. Often they aren't.

Take the case of a 41-year-old body builder who entered a footrace with a refrigerator strapped on his back. During the race, one of the straps broke and he was injured. Later he sued the manufacturers of both the refrigerator and the strap, and a jury awarded him $1 million — even though, clearly, both products were not intended for this sort of use. Responsibility for the accident belonged to the man who entered the race.

The way to address such problems is to reconsider our definitions of liability and individual responsibility, not to write more tort laws, even the kind Baldrige and Meese propose.

Supply-siders riding high

Back when the supply-side movement for lower tax rates was getting started, it was hard to believe it would ever amount to much. By Washington standards, it was too radical, growing not out of pressing political needs but abstract and somewhat avant-garde economic theory. In the halls of government, the movement was consigned to ridicule or oblivion.

Today, however, the supply-siders' victory is almost complete. The evidence is contained in the Senate Finance Committee's tax reform bill.

Five years ago, it was an achievement to get the maximum tax rate on individual income reduced from 70 percent to 50. This bill, constructed by a senator who used to say he liked the tax code just as it was, slashes the latter rate by almost half, to a startling 27 percent. With just two brackets, the lower one subject to a 15 percent rate, it stops just short of the ultimate supply-side scheme, a flat-rate tax.

This bill reflects the ascendancy of the once-ridiculed notion that a robust economy depends on a tax code that preserves the incentive for people to work and invest. In practice, that means low marginal rates. Besides lowering personal rates, it cuts the top corporate rate from 46 percent to 33.

To keep total revenue from falling, the lower rates have to be made up by measures to broaden the tax base. In the Finance Committee bill, as in the previous incarnations of tax reform, that translates into fewer tax breaks for individuals and corporations, and a higher overall burden for business. Fair enough. What's not so fair is that the changes in deductions go into effect six months before the rates are cut — an underhanded tax increase.

As an effort to make the tax code simpler and fairer, the bill has plenty of flaws. It preserves the tax-free status of employee fringe benefits like health and life insurance, keeps the deduction for most state and local taxes and leaves an array of government benefits untaxed. On the corporate side, it imposes a 20 percent minimum tax to prevent businesses from taking full advantage of unwise tax breaks that the committee has carefully protected.

The bill also reverses the trend toward a consumption-based tax code. The major change is ending tax-deductible contributions to individual retirement accounts or anyone covered by a company pension plan. This might be excused on populist grounds except for the decision to keep the exclusion for 401(k) plans, which differ from IRAs mainly in that their funds may be withdrawn for purposes besides retirement and that they require company sponsorship. IRAs may be used most by the well-to-do, but at least they are available to everyone.

But the senators did muster the nerve to close or at least narrow a few deserving loopholes, by eliminating the deduction for state and local sales taxes, restricting personal interest deductions, scrapping the investment tax credit and limit deductions for business meals and entertainment to 80 percent of their cost.

In attacking one especially dubious tax break, the preferential rate on capital gains, however, the committee committed an even worse error. It failed to allow for the effects of inflation, so that some people will have to pay taxes on what are really capital losses. If the value of a property rises 25 percent between its purchase and its sale, while the price level rises 50 percent, the owner loses money. But his 25 percent "gain" will be taxed.

For the unjustified tax breaks that remain, the senators provided a partial remedy — the low top rate. A deduction that once reduced the taxpayer's liability by 50 cents on the dollar would now cut it by just 27 cents. This diminishes the incentive of taxpayers to use these deductions and the revenue loss when they are used. A low rate is the next best thing to repeal.

By approving such a drastic cut in the top tax rate, the committee covered a multitude of sins. The bill would do much to discourage wasteful tax dodges and to promote work and investment, thus expanding the economy's productive potential. The result will benefit not just supply-siders but everyone.

No more bayonet wars

Robert Orben said it: "The American air attack on Libya was my kind of war. It was so short that Bob Hope had to turn back in mid-flight."

But was it a good idea? Did it accomplish its purpose of throttling terrorism?

A Monday morning quarterback can almost always find parts of the game plan to criticize.

It is to the credit of our joint chief chairman and his strategists that this mission was just about textbook perfect.

All designated targets were hit.

And despite the loss of one aircraft and mechanical problems with seven others, the hundred planes were over unfamiliar territory at night for 13 minutes and did what they were supposed to do.

So aside from the degree to which this raid deterred future terrorist activity, it did accomplish two significant objectives:

It justified the high-tech weapons which demonstrably limited American casualties, and it validated collaboration among our military services. Navy-Air Force planning, liaison, communication and execution were our best yet!

Moscow's immediate response was predictable: "The summit meeting with the American President is off!"

But after a week in which nobody seemed to care whether it was on or off, the Kremlin relented and decided to maybe go ahead with the summit meeting after all.

France, blustered by criticism for refusing to cooperate with our mission, had second thoughts.

Now Mitterrand said we should have been tougher; that if we want to launch an all-out attack on Khadafi, then France will hold our coat.

Britain's Maggie Thatcher, though criticized in Parliament for helping us, nonetheless won a vote of confidence on the subject.

So militarily and politically, the mission was a success.

Smart munitions played a major role in our Libyan raid — harm and strike missiles that ride enemy radar beams to their targets, jamming devices which tricked Libyan electronic equipment, bombs with laser guidance which can "read" the terrain.

Our most advanced technology demonstrated maturity. It works!

Vietnam will have been our last bayonet war.

That is quite enough for any one mission to accomplish.

Communism could start melting down

By Ben Wattenberg

I exaggerate, but consider what would happen if Ralph Nader and Jane Fonda were unleashed upon the societies of Eastern Europe.

That will not happen. But when — literally and figuratively — all the dust from the Chernobyl nuclear disaster settles, it is plausible that its most important political impact may occur in the Soviet satellite countries and will take the form of a huge boost for what in the West would be called "the consumer/environmental" movement. As politicians all over the free world have come to understand, that is not a movement to be trifled with, even if its claims are often exaggerated.

Now, it is true that the communist countries have been relatively successful in putting down political dissent. Most of their subjugated peoples would surely like a free press, free labor unions and free politics. Some courageous few in totalitarian countries will stand up and dissent publicly when such rights are denied. But, as we have learned, the number of dissidents who will defy the state on these issues is small. After all, the punishment can be imprisonment or death. Most people will go along to get along, even while hating their governments.

So for 40 years now, Western strategists have wondered how, when and if the peoples of the captive nations of Eastern Europe would ever break the yoke of communism.

Comes now the nuclear plant disaster. This is not a matter of "mere" free politics, free press, free unions. This concerns the health and survival of mothers and babies in countries adjacent to the Soviet Union. In Poland particularly, it is feared that the Chernobyl accident may cause a significant increase in cancer deaths. And the Polish government, unlike the Russian, has publicized some of the dangers.

Now, the nations of Eastern Europe already have some nascent environmental and consumer movements. For example, in East Germany there is an anti-nuclear action group closely linked to the Lutheran church. There is a small anti-nuclear and anti-pollution group active in Hungary. And, of course, in Poland, Solidarity was always more than just a union; it was an umbrella for a variety of citizens' rights groups that included labor, agriculture, academic and consumer.

Consider this situation against the backdrop of what is now the current state of the global nuclear power industry. No new plants are scheduled in the United States. We have 101 operating plants. Of the 27 plants still under construction, the great majority are close to completion, with billions of dollars of rate-payers' monies sunk into them. Chernobyl will activate the U.S. anti-nuke movement, but there is not much left to fight about. (I hasten to add that in my judgment, nuclear power on the U.S./West European models is still the safest form of power generation there is.)

Roughly the same situation — completion or near-completion of nuclear plants — exists in Western Europe and Japan.

Interestingly, the next big expansion of nuclear power had been scheduled for — where? — Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union!

Will there be protests in these lands where protest can lead to jail or worse? I'll wager there will be. Do not underestimate the power of a mother who fears for her child's health — even in a totalitarian society.

Will the East European governments abandon the huge sums already poured into these plants? Will they snub the Soviet Union? Will they fight the mothers in the streets?

Stay tuned. This may be a situation that is without parallel.

There have been scenarios drawn for the final stages of communism. But I don't think anyone ever figured it would come about through the melting down of the state.

Bits of history

On May 12, 1949, the Berlin Blockade ended as the Soviet Union announced the reopening of East German land routes that had been closed almost a year earlier in an attempt to isolate West Berlin.

Paper reports

Supreme Court members used lawyers' private plane

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Texas Supreme Court Associate Justice G.L. Ray, his wife and other members of the court used the private plane of four Houston lawyers to do more than $10,000 worth of traveling during a six-month period, the San Antonio Light reported Sunday.

The flights, which took the justices and Mrs. Ray on trips throughout the state, were not reported by Ray or any other justice as campaign contributions in records filed with the secretary of state, the newspaper said.

The justices were never billed for the service, according to the Light.

The flights were noted in records maintained by Longhorn Express Co. Inc. of Houston.

During the time of the 1984 private plane travel, Ray was running for re-election and involved in a fight with Fort Worth lawyer Shelby Sharpe to retain the Democratic nomination for his high court bench.

A woman who answered the telephone at Ray's Austin residence Sunday told The Associated Press he could not come to the phone. The Light said it was unable to reach Ray for comment on whether the trips were campaign-related.

Ray and Associate Justice William Kilgarlin have been named in connection with several allegations of improper conduct during testimony before a House committee investigating Supreme Court justices.

In testimony last month before the House Committee on Judicial Affairs, former Supreme Court briefing attorneys related instances in which Ray and Kilgarlin may have improperly provided confidential information concerning the status of cases to attorneys involved in those cases.

Ray was the only justice whose name appeared on flight records, but other entries in the log book referred to "Supreme Court justices" or the "Supreme Court" riding on the plane, the Light reported.

The six flights, which originated at Houston's Hobby Airport with frequent stops in Austin, took place shortly after one of Longhorn's owners, W. James Kronzer, won a motion for rehearing he presented to the court in a lucrative personal injury case resulting from an airplane crash.

The decision, written by Ray, was precedent-setting, court briefing attorneys said. They said it opened the door for plaintiffs to recover damages from a defendant in an accident even though the defendant was found not at fault in prior cases brought by others who were involved in the same accident.

Longhorn — a partnership of prominent Houston attorneys including Kronzer, Ronald D. Krist, G.P. Hardy III and R. Gary Stephens — was formed in 1984 with the purchase of a fleet Cessna 461 Golden Eagle.

Hardy, who regularly brings cases before the Supreme Court, said the plane was used for the "business and pleasure" of its owners.

Though Hardy was named in the flight records with Ray on at least two occasions, he said he couldn't recall the trips with Ray or any other justice but said he would "allow the (flight) logs to speak for themselves."

Former Longhorn pilot David DeGlandon said he remembered Ray, his wife and other justices, who he declined to name, as passengers on the aircraft during April, June and October 1984.

For each of the flights, records show the cost of the service was billed to members of the partnership and not to the individual justices, the Light reported.

"I don't see anything on Earth wrong with it," Hardy said. "If he (Ray) was on the airplane with me, it was because I consider Judge Ray a friend. I'm sure he was my guest, if he flew with me. I never ask a guest to pay for a flight."

"Why should there be anything wrong with having a judge, senator, legislator, farmer or an accountant as a guest on an airplane?" he said.

Hardy said that his relationship with the judge has neither won him nor his law firm any special favors from the court.

The trips were made despite the past warnings leveled by then-Supreme Court Chief Justice Jack Pope, who had condemned private-plane travel at the expense of attorneys who regularly appeared in court, the Light said.

In recent testimony before the House committee investigating court justices, Pope said he never approved of private-plane travel unless it involved transportation to or from "official state bar functions."

Current Supreme Court Chief Justice John Hill, after a Saturday speech in San Antonio where he called for statewide reform in judicial selection, said he is against attorneys providing private-plane travel to justices.

"Since we are on a limited budget, it's been a problem getting back and forth to state bar-related functions," Hill said. "I prefer not to ride on lawyers' planes."

The $152,000 airplane, which accommodates eight passengers, was painted burnt orange and white — the University of Texas' colors — and logged more than 17.5 hours of flying time with either the justices or Mrs. Ray aboard at a cost of about $600 per hour.

The corporation was dissolved last month, and the plane has since been re-sold to its original owner, Joel Guinn, also of Houston. Associate Justices Franklin Spears, Robert M. Campbell and Kilgarlin said they never used the plane and denied having any knowledge of the corporation.

The remaining justices, Ted Z. Robertson, Sears McGee and James P. Wallace, all of whom were members of the court in 1984, either declined or were unavailable for comment, the Light reported.

"I've never heard of it (Longhorn)," Campbell said, "and I've never been a passenger on that plane. You know, private planes are just as common as automobiles today, but the chief justice (Pope) said one time that there would be no private plane travel. I learned my lesson."

Spears said he had never been approached by Longhorn or its agents.

"Is that that orange plane?" Spears asked. "If I was on that plane, I would have noticed. I have absolutely no knowledge of it. I never even heard of an orange plane until a couple of weeks ago."

Spears, who said he has reported all campaign-related private plane travel in financial disclosure records, added he has, at times, refused offers of private plane travel made by attorneys.

"I have turned down trips on airplanes when I knew they (attorneys) had or were going to have cases pending," he said. "But I didn't always know certain attorneys had cases pending when I got on an airplane."

Kilgarlin said, "I'm darn sure I would have remembered if I'd been on a burnt orange and white airplane. I don't know anything about it."

Kronzer, considered one of the top appellate court attorneys in the state and whose firm has won millions of dollars in cases decided by the Supreme Court, said he "had no personal knowledge" that justices were being transported on the plane once owned by his partnership.

"Each one of the four persons (partners) had every right to do what they wanted," he said.

GAO puts Deaver conflict-of-interest case before House subcommittee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House aide Michael Deaver was instrumental in selecting a new U.S. ambassador to Canada before he started a multi-million dollar lobbying company that numbered the Ottawa government among its clients, according to a published report.

The Washington Times, quoting current and former administration officials in today's editions, said Deaver worked with State Department officials to replace ambassador Paul H. Robinson Jr., a Reagan appointee, with someone more acceptable to the Canadian government.

In the spring of 1985, Deaver, who currently is under investigation for possible conflict-of-interest violations — including his lobbying efforts on behalf of Canada — helped persuade President Reagan to "sign-off" on the nomination of Thomas M.T. Niles to replace Robinson, the newspaper said.

Niles, a 24-year State Department veteran, had been serving as deputy to Richard R. Burt, then assistant secretary of state for European and Canadian affairs. Burt had recommended Niles for the post, according to the newspaper.

From 1983 to May 1985, when he left the White House, Deaver headed a three-man committee that selected ambassadorial nominees.

Some Canadian officials disliked Robinson's pro-Reagan stand and his criticisms of Canada for spending too little on defense and for support of NATO.

At a House hearing today the General Accounting Office was giving details of its recommendation that the Justice Department investigate Deaver for possible conflict-of-interest law violations, an official at the congressional watchdog agency said.

James Hinchman, the GAO's associate general counsel, was giving written testimony of the agency's Deaver investigation before the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on oversight and investigations, according to GAO spokeswoman Patricia Moran.

The panel has been looking at Deaver's lobbying on behalf of Canada since last Dec. 10 at the request of its chairman, Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich.

Moran said the GAO will tell House members the agency is turning the case over to the Justice Department. The only reason the agency would make such a referral is if it found evidence of possible violations of post-employment conflict-of-interest laws, she said.

Those laws prohibit former top federal officials from lobbying on issues in which they were personally and substantially involved for two years and from lobbying their old agencies for one year.

Government officials also are barred from negotiating with future employers while participating in matters that could affect those employers.

Deaver, 48, the former White House deputy chief of staff who is a close friend of President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, has denied doing anything illegal in running a multi-million dollar lobbying firm he started a year ago.

The tables may be turning on Texas 'raiders'

DALLAS (AP) — With trouble in the oil patch and the budget problems they're bringing, the academic allure of the Lone Star State has dampened considerably — which could leave the state short of qualified scholars.

In the early 1980s — with state-supported institutions elsewhere on their economic knees — recruiters at Texas A&M University and the University of Texas at Austin were making national names for themselves as "formidable raiders," in the words of one California educator.

But the satchels full of oil money that Texas universities once used to lure other states' top faculty are drying up.

"It's going to happen," said Carl Erdman, associate dean of engineering at Texas A&M. "We're in a position now, with reduced budgets and every indication of further cuts, where we will see the very best young people being drawn out of here back to the Snow Belt."

"It's happening some now," Erdman said. "But it will be happening more and more in the next two or three years."

The problem, Erdman and others say, is that state-supported universities in the Midwest and Northeast are starting to climb out of protracted budget difficulties just as Texas universities seem to be sliding in.

Eyebrows shot up in academic circles nationally early last year when word got around that Texas' Legislative Budget Board was calling for a 26 percent cut in the state's higher education appropriations for 1986-87.

Even though that never materialized — the Legislature eventually agreed on cuts of only about 2 percent — the fact they were discussed at all raised serious questions about Texas' commitment to higher education, university officials say.

Since then, crude oil prices plunged by 50 percent, leading to budget-shortfall predictions of as much as $1.3 billion for the current biennium and prompting Gov. Mark White to urge universities and other state agencies to cut general-revenue budgets by 13 percent.

The University of Texas System responded with $91 million in cuts — about 7.5 percent — and regents and university officials lament that the fat is gone and only bone remains for cutting.

But given the impact that oil and gas prices have on state tax revenues, it's a good bet that the cutting isn't finished, said Frank Graydon, budget director for the UT system.

"I think we are going to have two or three biennia that are going to be belt-tightening sessions," Graydon said. "We'd better get ready."

If that's the case, officials say, Texas universities will be hard-pressed not only to maintain their recruiting success of the recent past, but also to hold onto the gains they've made.

"The Midwest and the Northeast went through this five years ago," said A&M Provost Gordon Eaton. "The shoe is now on the other foot."

Already, the gloomy prospects have cramped the recruiting style at A&M, where Eaton said more candidates have turned down offers in the past six months than in the five previous years combined.

So far this year, two "superstar" scholars have pulled out of the running for key positions in A&M's College of Engineering because of "concerns that the state is not serious about supporting higher education," Erdman said.

UT-Austin officials, however, say the state's economic condition has not dramatically hampered recruiting efforts — at least not in the short run. But luring faculty away from other states was easier when Texas enjoyed a healthy economy.

Now, "the reverse is true," said Robert Boyer, dean of the College of Natural Sciences at UT-Austin. "Now we're finding ourselves a little more vulnerable."

Super Dream Pill

Guaranteed Weight Loss

Eat Your Favorite Foods

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH — According to the latest review of customers' files, here's what some people are saying about the remarkable Dream Pill System for guaranteed weight loss:

"I lost 25 lbs. with a 30 day supply."
Mrs. J.N.S., Ft. Payne, Alabama
"Losing 1 lb. per day."
Mr. J.G., Pineville, Kentucky
"Your Dream Pill is working for me. I'm ordering another supply."
Mrs. G.W., Fort Gay, West Virginia
"I have been on Dream Pill for one month and feel great...have lost 27 lbs."
Mr. A.D., Anadarko, Oklahoma

The System's Dream Pill combines the natural substances L-arginine and L-ornithine which can stimulate the body's production of growth hormone. Dr. Robert Harris, a specialist in nutritional medicine in Stafford Springs, Connecticut, was recently quoted as explaining: "Growth Hormone may be what's responsible for allowing teenagers to down thousands of calories in hamburgers and other foods and still be thin as a rail."

"Growth Hormone is present in people up through the teenage years, then slowly diminishes with age. But L-arginine and L-ornithine make the body 'think' it belongs to a teenager again, allowing adults to eat [their favorite foods] — and still be thin and wiry."

Life Extension Authors Confirm Results

Durk Pearson and Sandy Shaw, graduates of MIT and UCLA respectively, introduced these miracle substances to the public in their runaway best selling book, Life Extension. They discovered the weight-loss effects by accident. Sandy fell and broke her foot and started taking L-arginine because of its well-known healing qualities. Much to her amazement Sandy lost 25 pounds of fat and put on 5 pounds of firm-toned muscle in six weeks. According to Durk's calculations, the pill caused Sandy to lose 400 times as much fat as she would otherwise have lost — without dieting!

Loss Weight 24 Hours A Day

One beautiful thing about the Dream Pill System is the ease with which it works. The pounds melt away 24 hours a day. You wake up every morning, slimmer, happier and feeling younger. The best time to take the pills is just before you go to bed at night. That way, the pounds melt away even as you sleep. You wake up every morning, slimmer, happier and feeling younger!

Pravda: party officials punished for lapses during Chernobyl disaster

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party has disciplined three employees of the Chernobyl nuclear power plant for supplying insufficient information on the disaster there or failing to tend fully to evacuees, the party newspaper Pravda said today.

The measures announced in Pravda were the first known disciplinary action resulting from the April 26 explosion and fire at the Ukrainian atomic power station that spewed a cloud of radiation over much of Europe.

On Sunday, officials in charge at the accident site, 80 miles north of the Ukrainian capital of Kiev, said the worst danger had passed, and that they were working to encase the fire-damaged reactor in concrete to prevent any pollution of ground water.

Reporting from the town of Polesk, temporary home to some of the 92,000 people reported removed from the officially designated "danger zone" around Chernobyl, Pravda said three party members who worked at the plant had been punished.

One official identified only as A. Shapoval was expelled from party ranks for "indifference and shirking his duties" to evacuees, Pravda said.

Another man, A. Sichkarenko, received an official reprimand entered in his party membership record for the same neglect of duty, while a third official, A. Gubski, was given a lesser reprimand for failing to give timely and accurate information on the disaster.

Party disciplinary measures do not preclude criminal prosecution. Speeches at the recent Communist Party congress stressed that party officials in the future would be more liable to criminal as well as party punishment for misdeeds.

Pravda did not say when the disciplinary measures were taken. Deputy Premier Boris N. Shcherbina, head of a government investigatory commission, first said last Tuesday that plant workers had initially underestimated the magnitude of the accident.

There has been no public indication so far that higher-ranking officials, such as ministers, top scientists or senior Ukrainian party officials, might be punished in connection with the disaster.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev has yet to say a word in public about the accident or the handling of its aftermath, which has drawn strong foreign criticism and damaged his desired image of peacemaker and campaigner for nuclear disarmament.

However, two top Kremlin officials, Communist Party Central Committee Secretary Yegor K.

Ligachev and Soviet Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov, visited the disaster area May 2.

After that visit, the evacuated zone was expanded from six miles to 18 miles, and measures were announced to care for evacuees and to warn the 2.4 million residents of Kiev, the Soviet Union's third-largest city, of potential radiation hazards.

Forest fire appears to have outsmarted firefighters again

HAMPSTEAD, N.C. (AP) — A stubborn week-old forest blaze the firefighters thought they had whipped appeared to have eluded them again today although they burned thousands of acres in its path in an effort to head it off.

"I wish I had never become optimistic in the first place," Tom Hegele, a spokesman for the state Division of Forest Resources, said shortly after he learned the blaze seemed to have slipped through fire lines just before midnight Sunday.

The fire has blackened 70,000 acres of coastal North Carolina and more than 5,000 people have been asked to evacuate, but so far the fire has destroyed only two small buildings.

One death has been blamed on the blaze, that of a man who died of a heart attack while fighting it, but officials said about 30 people, mostly firefighters, were treated at the scene Sunday for smoke inhalation, and cuts and bruises.

Anticipating the direction of afternoon sea breezes Sunday, helicopter pilots dropped chemicals and weary firefighters worked on the ground to burn 5,000 to 10,000 acres with the hope they would leave the fire with no place to go.

But the optimism was dampened when winds increased and a fire broke out on the north boundary while firefighters were trying to place a fire line there, Hegele said.

Before the late Sunday night outbreak, Hegele and other officials said they thought they had finally gotten the upper hand on the fire. "We have broken the head and we hope to have it contained by (Monday)," Tommy Thompson, incident commander for the N.C. Division of Forest Resources, had said before the late-night setback.

A backfire was started Sunday afternoon on the northwest side of the fire. Some 2½ hours later, Thompson said, the head of the large fire and the backfire ran together.

Without the intentional burn, Thompson had said, "we'd probably have a 10,000-acre fire out of control."

Chrystal Stowe, a spokeswoman for the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, said about 5,000 people were asked to leave.

Idaho ranchers brace for locust war

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Vivid memories of grasshoppers advancing in mile-wide hordes have Idaho farmers and ranchers keeping one eye on the sky and the other on their thermometers these days.

They are hoping a cool, wet May destroys many of the pests that consumed millions of dollars in crops and feed during a ravenous rampage last summer. But even if it doesn't, they say they are ready to spray the pests into submission.

"It looks pretty bad right now," farmer and plant pathologist Terry Miller said last week. "There's a lot of grasshoppers out there on the desert, and they're already slowly moving onto cultivated land. I'm sure hoping something happens biologically as far as control because if it doesn't, we could be in for something as bad as last year, if not worse."

"You can reach down with a hand and pick up seven or eight of them already," said alfalfa grower Roy LaSalle.

The summer of 1985 marked the worst grasshopper infestation Idaho had seen in three decades. Some estimates placed the grasshopper damage at over $11 million. The devastation was so bad that some farmers set illegal range fires to destroy the pests.

The most intensive aerial spraying program ever undertaken in the state was finally launched early last June, delayed several critical weeks by money and organizational problems. Fifty-three days later the squadron of spray planes that at one time included half a dozen military tankers had covered 6.5 million acres at a cost of $12 million.

While the kill from last year's spraying was 90 percent, the number of grasshoppers surviving was still massive.

China to launch two American satellites

PEKING (AP) — China will launch two U.S. communications satellites with its Long March 3 rockets, the official English-language China Daily reported today.

Teresat Inc., based in Houston, Texas, and China Great Wall Industry Corp., a division of China's Astronautics Ministry, have signed a memorandum of agreement on the launching, the newspaper said.

It did not say when the document was signed.

The two satellites will be carried by the three-stage Long March 3 from China's launching center in Xichang, Sichuan province. They were recovered from faulty orbits in 1984 by the U.S. space shuttle Discovery, the China Daily said.

The first satellite will be launched no later than December 1987, the report quotes Teresat President Henry A. Schwartz as saying. It did not say how much Teresat will pay for the service.

The first satellite will be put into orbit for business communications in the United States and the second will be placed over the Pacific Ocean for air traffic communications, the newspaper said.

China has launched 17 of its own satellites and first offered launching services to foreign customers in October.

The Swedish satellite reportedly will cost about $4 million to launch. The state-run news agency Xinhua has said China's service will cost at least 15 percent less than the prevailing international rate.

Independent sector unhappy about tax proposals

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Because the charitable deduction for income tax itemizers survived the Senate Finance Committee's surgical knife, a misimpression seems to have been created that charities are happy with the new tax proposals.

They aren't, and their determination to do something about it suggests how difficult it is to cut anything from the income tax laws. It carries another suggestion, too — that a big battle still lies ahead.

Brian O'Connell put it succinctly and bluntly, stating his organization "will embrace nothing less than a Senate tax bill that includes a full and permanent charitable deduction for all taxpayers."

O'Connell is president of Independent Sector, so called because it represents 600 organizations that consider themselves somewhere in between the two big economic sectors, the government and private sectors.

Such organizations — not-for-profit charitable and philanthropic entities that depend on giving and volunteering — often handle responsibilities that might otherwise become government obligations, such as health and welfare.

As O'Connell assesses the situation, the Senate proposal would narrow support for these organizations by $12 billion annually.

He's willing to accept half that. How, he asks, can you be against lower taxes, even if it means a giver who used to be in the 50 percent tax bracket would have less incentive to give when the tax break is only 27 percent?

But, he declares, the Independent Sector isn't going to accept the loss of the other half — at least not without a fight.

Under the Senate committee plan, itemizers, or those who file long-form tax returns, would continue to have the opportunity to deduct their contributions, as before. But short-form users would be granted no such deductions.

Thus, O'Connell points out, those modest-income Americans who use the short form, and who contributed $25 billion to charity in 1985, no longer will be able to deduct their charitable contributions.

The rough relationship between Carter, Reagan

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's no reason to expect Jimmy Carter to like Ronald Reagan but he might want to consider leaving Amy out of it.

Carter tried once before, using Amy to make a point against Reagan and it was a political faux pas.

Now he's done it again. This time the former president was criticizing the U.S. bombing of Libya. Carter was one of the few politicians who chose to second-guess the raid.

His former vice president, Walter F. Mondale, supported Reagan's decision to bomb Libya. Mondale, who ran against Reagan in 1984, said he believed the U.S. action might prod European democracies into greater cooperation to combat terrorism.

When Mondale was asked about Carter's position on Libya, the former vice president said

An AP News Analysis

simply, "I disagree with him."

Carter argues that the Reagan administration's preoccupation with Col. Moammar Khadafy had transformed the Libyan leader from an outcast to a hero. On that point, he'd find plenty of support among politicians and many experts on the Middle East and terrorism.

The former president describes Khadafy as "an abominable person," and said, "There's no doubt in my mind that Khadafy has plotted and carried out terrorist acts against innocent people, the same as murder."

But Khadafy's 15-month-old daughter was said to have been killed in the bombing raid and that set Carter thinking about his own daughter.

"If 17 years ago someone had killed Amy it would have been the worst blow that could be delivered to me," said the former president. "I would have sworn as long as my life existed, I would retaliate."

Was he suggesting that retaliation by Khadafy would be justified? It sounded that way.

Amy was a week past her 13th birthday as the 1980 presidential campaign entered its final days and her father, the incumbent, was battling Reagan's challenge. The two men debated on Oct. 28 and a key issue was arms control.

In response to a question about the SALT II treaty which Carter supported and Reagan opposed, the Democratic president said, "I had a conversation with my daughter Amy the other day before I came here to ask her what the most important issue was. She said nuclear weaponry...and the control of nuclear arms."

No doubt Carter thought the reference to his daughter would strike a sympathetic chord with parents across the nation. Instead, many in the audience appeared more to wonder if Carter really had been discussing his priorities with a daughter just entering her teens.

Drop in oil prices expected to help farmers, USDA says

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barbed wire prices haven't dropped, but a gallon of heavy duty motor oil has, and gasoline prices are way down as farmers plow and plant their fields this spring.

Overall, says the Agriculture Department, prices for items used by farmers to produce crops and livestock were down 5.2 percent last month from year-earlier levels. Much of the decline was due to the big drop in oil prices.

According to the April report issued recently by the department's Agricultural Statistics Board, bulk gasoline delivered to the farm averaged 84.4 cents a gallon nationally, down from $1.15 a year ago. Diesel fuel, at 70.4 cents a gallon, was down from 96.7 cents, and LP gas was 67 cents a gallon, compared with 73.3 cents in April 1985.

The decline in production costs is expected to help many farmers improve their cash flow this season, perhaps meaning the difference between survival and bankruptcy, according to department economists. For livestock feeders, lower grain costs may help improve their margins.

But the big-picture economics take a back seat when farmers who have the cash or credit look at price tags on the things they need. Some items, according to the April report, are lower than a year ago, others about the same.

Some examples:
—A new battery for the truck or tractor costs an average of $57.90 for the heavy duty model, down from $60.30 a year ago.

—Rear tractor tires, 18.4-38, six ply, were $404 each, compared with the year-earlier $417.

—Two-point galvanized barbed wire, at $34.30 for an 80-rod spool, was unchanged.

—A 20-rod roll of 39-inch woven wire fence, was $84.40 per roll, down from $86.60 a year ago.

—Steel line posts were $2.60 each, down from $2.72.

—Baler twine, at $19.10 per 40-pound bale, was down a dime from a year ago.

—Eight-penny nails were 64 cents per pound, compared with 65.2 cents last year.

Looking at some of the big-cost items, the report showed four-wheel-drive tractors in the range of 170 horsepower to 240 horsepower averaged $79,500 this spring, only $200 less than they were a year ago.

The smaller, two-wheel drive models, however, showed a greater decline. Tractors in the range of 110 horsepower to 129 horsepower were listed at an average of $39,000 each, compared with a year-earlier price of $41,000.

But some of the tractor-drawn equipment is more expensive this season. Plows are more costly, for example, with a seven-bottom model averaging $9,840 each, up $40. An 18-foot chisel plow at $6,190 was up from $5,800.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty-eight states have qualified under Agriculture Department rules as being free of bovine tuberculosis, a persistent disease of cattle.

Iowa is the latest on the list, a recognition that can come only after a state has been free of the disease for a minimum of five years, and on its compliance with cooperative state and federal TB eradication programs.

Others on the list include: Alaska, Arizona, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Indiana, Kansas, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont and Wyoming.

Bert W. Hawkins, head of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said cattle producers should not become complacent about bovine tuberculosis.

Last year, he said, the disease was found in 30 herds, the most reported since 1976. From 1980 until 1984, an average of only 10 infected herds was found each year.

Three states — North Carolina, Virginia and New Mexico — lost their USDA accreditation last year as being free of bovine tuberculosis. A state loses its accreditation if two or more infected herds are found within its borders within a four-year period.

attend summer camp can bring their families for a tour. A drawing for a one-week campership will be held at the open house. Only those attending will be eligible. Directions to the camp are available at the Council office.

"Six Flags Over Texas" is the theme of resident camp for July 13-19. Girls will spend a day in France, Spain, Mexico, Texas and the Confederate States through food, crafts and special programs presented each day. Features of the week include a Mexican party, a rodeo, a chili cookoff, a shoebox float parade and a bull fight.

"Cibola Heritage" is to be resident camp theme for July 20-26.

Activities for the week include pie fights, luaus, special swim events and taffy pulls, all activities from past camps. Units will also plan and stage a carnival.

Both weeks feature archery, crafts and swimming, as well as learning about the out-of-doors.

Day camps are usually five days, four to five hours a day, and are conducted outdoors. Girls hike, learn about wildlife and plants, cook outside and learn camping skills. Many area towns in the Quivira Council participate in the day camps.

Girls who have completed kindergarten through grade 12 may attend day camps. Girls who have completed first grade through grade 12 may attend resident camp for one or two weeks. Girls do not have to be a member of the Girl Scout program to attend camp.

For more information on the Council's day camps or resident camps, may call the Council office at 689-6862.

Dear Abby

Fact-finding scholar casts a nay against voting story

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I would like to comment about the letter from an Alabama reader who gave examples of "how one vote changed history." His purpose, to encourage voting, was a good one, but most of his facts were wrong.

He said: "In 1645, one vote gave Oliver Cromwell control of England."

Wrong! In 1645, Oliver Cromwell became leader of the New Model (Puritan) Army, but not of England, which was then in the midst of a civil war. He didn't establish his own government until 1649 — and then did so in part by expelling opponents from Parliament. It wasn't primarily votes but strong leadership and military force that established his control.

He said: "In 1649, one vote caused King Charles of England to be executed."

Wrong! In 1649, King Charles I of England was executed — but not as a result of a one-vote margin. Cromwell's soldiers excluded the moderate majority from the House of Commons and shut down the pro-royalist House of Lords entirely; a newly established revolutionary tribunal then tried the king and overwhelmingly condemned him to death.

He stated: "In 1845, one vote brought Texas into the Union."

Wrong! In 1845, the U.S. Senate passed the convention annexing Texas by two votes (27-25), not one; and it entered into force only after ratification by the Texas Congress and voters.

He stated: "In 1876, one vote changed France from a monarchy to a republic."

Wrong! In 1876, France was not a monarchy; it had become a republic in 1875, by a larger margin. (Its empire had ended in 1870; previous monarchies ended in 1830 and 1848.)

He stated: "In 1923, one vote gave Adolf Hitler leadership of the Nazi Party."

Wrong! Hitler acquired dictatorial control of the Nazi Party in 1921, not 1923, and by a party congress vote of 553-1 — not exactly a one-vote margin.

Abby, if your Alabama correspondent wanted his argument to be effective, he should have checked his facts.

LOUISE E. HOFFMAN, Ph.D.

DEAR DR. HOFFMAN: I was hesitant to publish his letter without checking his facts, but he seemed so cotton pickin' sure, I didn't question his sources. My fault, not his.

DEAR ABBY: You've had a lot of letters about adopted children in your column lately. I'd like to add to it.

After I was born, my mother was not able to have any more children, so she and my father adopted a 5-day-old boy. (I am also a boy.) In their determination to make their adopted son feel as loved and wanted as their natural child (me), they went overboard. I heard that "Jimmy" was their "chosen" child, which made me think that when I was born they had to take what they got — but Jimmy was special, so they "chose" him.

I grew up feeling inferior and less wanted than my little brother. I felt that I had to prove my worthiness by being competitive with him. I wanted to love him, but it was hard when he was given preferential treatment and told he was their "special, chosen child." I know my parents loved me, too — but it took a lot of understanding, not to mention several years with a psychoanalyst, to straighten my head out.

Print this. It may help other well-meaning parents.

Hospital opens CARE line

Today begins Coronado Community Hospital's implementation of CARE, a way to guarantee patient satisfaction with hospital services, says a press release from the hospital.

CARE line (ext. 123) is a 24-hour telephone number any patient, visitor, medical staff member or employee, may use to report a concern, according to the release. Within 24 hours, hospital officials say a CARE representative investigates and documents the call. If the quality of any hospital service is found to be dissatisfactory, the patient receives a "fit" or credit, the release says. "In our history of service to the people of Gray County and the area, Coronado Community Hospital has built a strong reputation as a caring facility," says Administrator Norman Knox. "The CARE program is our commitment to our patients that we will continue to strive for the best possible patient care at all times."

The release says that all hospital services are guaranteed under the program except in a situation where a patient had to wait while more seriously ill patients are treated. CARE does not guarantee the results of a patient's medical care or the services given by physicians, dentists and other health care providers, the release states.

Each patient is visited by Nancy Paronto, director of volunteers, or Linda Haynes, director of public relations, who explain the program. All complaints are investigated and documented by Haynes who coordinates the program.

WONDER OF WALKING

Q: I'm in a slump. The in-between times of winter and spring wear at my spirit. I eat more and exercise less; and I'm depressed. Any suggestions?

A: Take a walk! Nothing rejuvenates the body like a brisk walk in the fresh air. You eliminate the pain, the sweat and the risks of high-intensity exercising, while reaping many of the benefits. Rapid walking is a great aerobic exercise. It increases lung power, strengthens the heart, improves circulation, strengthens bones and aids in weight loss. Walking is also an effective stress reliever and increases your feelings of well-being while helping decrease your appetite. Studies show those who walk or jog are less often depressed than those who don't. Walking is simple; it's inexpensive; and it's one of the few exercises that doesn't inhibit conversation. If you are someone who has a difficult time exercising, don your walking shoes, call a friend, take a walk and feel renewed. For more ideas, contact your local Diet Center at

Milwaukee bucks Philly jinx; Celtics next

By JEFF MAYERS
AP Sports Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — With the Philadelphia jinx now out of the way, the Milwaukee Bucks will seek to work some magic in the next round of the playoffs against the NBA's winningest team.

But the Bucks have yet to succeed this season against the Boston Celtics, who finished with a 67-15 record and defeated Milwaukee in all five regular-season meetings.

Still, Milwaukee forward Terry Cummings is thinking positively.

"We're going to go in there expecting to win. We can't afford to have any emotional letdowns," Cummings said after scoring 27 points in the Bucks' 113-112 victory over the 76ers Sunday to advance to the Eastern Conference finals. "It's the only way to think. You can't go in there thinking otherwise."

Boston should be well-rested for Tuesday's Game 1 in the Boston Garden after it eliminated Atlanta in Game 5 of their series last Tuesday. The Bucks, however, endured a bruising seven-game series with Philadelphia and guard Sidney Moncrief, the soul of the team, is still hobbling on an injured left heel.

The Bucks won all three games against Philadelphia when Moncrief played and managed just one victory without him.

"It's still day to day," Moncrief, who scored 23 points in 35 minutes Sunday, said of his status for the Boston series. "I didn't reinjure it playing (Sunday). That's a positive sign."

"We're a little bruised up," Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson said. "But we won't hurt as much (today) as we would have if we had lost."

But Moncrief said it will be difficult to erase the memory of losing four of five playoff matchups with Philadelphia, including last year's four-game sweep.

"It's in the past. All we can deal with is 1986," he said. "But I don't think people are going to forget the years prior to 1986."

Although Cummings said the jinx didn't apply to this year's squad — "this team is different" — he admitted the win was sweet.

"I think it's something our team will relish for many years to come," he said.

"I've been waiting four years for it to happen," Milwaukee forward Paul Pressey added.

Nelson said Sunday's victory was the F:IN I ever had" because the Bucks came out on top of an emotional, hard-fought series.

"You can put on top of that our beating Philly and winning the seventh game of a seven-game series for the first time," Nelson said.

Julius Erving took the 76ers' last shot, a short jumper with three seconds remaining, but missed. Players from both teams were scrambling for the ball as time ran out.

"I had the open shot and it was not a bad shot to have in that situation," Erving, who scored 17 points, said. "It was a shot that we would ask for if we were in that situation again."

Cummings, who played most of the game with a dislocated finger on his left hand, said the first thing he did after Erving's shot was to make sure Charles Barkley didn't get the rebound. Barkley had 18 points and 12 rebounds, well below his play-off averages of 25.6 and 16.1.

"We got a good shot with Charles going to the basket," Philadelphia Coach Matt Guokas said. "It's going to be very physical the last few seconds. They took advantage of it."

Craig Hodges had 24 points for Milwaukee, including the winning basket on a goaltending call against Barkley with 29 seconds left.

The 76ers, down by nine early in the third quarter and trailing by as many as eight in the fourth quarter, rallied for a 106-104 lead with 3:20 remaining on a dunk by Barkley. The lead seasawed until the final minute.

Moncrief, fouled by Erving, converted two foul shots with 53 seconds left, giving the Bucks a 111-110 lead.

Barkley made a field goal with 40 seconds left, giving Philadelphia a 112-111 advantage. Then Barkley was called for goaltending and Milwaukee had a 113-112 lead.

Sedale Threatt led Philadelphia with 28 points, while Maurice Cheeks added 22.

Sunday's game marked the final NBA contest for Philadelphia forward Bobby Jones as the former North Carolina player announced he would retire at the end of the season.

Rose raps Gooden with loss

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The Cincinnati Reds talked about winning, and then player-manager Pete Rose showed them how to do it against perhaps the best pitcher in baseball.

Rose lined a three-run single off Dwight Gooden in the second inning and the Reds, with the worst record in the major leagues, hung on to beat the New York Mets 3-2 Sunday.

The loss was the first of the season for Gooden, 5-1, and ended the seven-game winning streak of the Mets, whose 20-5 record is the best in the majors.

"He's a lion, not a lamb," Rose said of Gooden, the 1985 National League Cy Young winner. "But he doesn't throw it so hard that it can't be hit."

Prior to the game, Rose told his players to hold a meeting to discuss their dismal 7-19 start. Rose excused himself from the get-together.

"I wanted the players to talk things over without anybody from the front office there, so they could say anything they want," Rose said. "I couldn't begin to tell you what happened at it. But they came out of it with a positive attitude."

Gooden lasted just five innings and gave up eight hits. It marked the first time he had not pitched at least eight innings this season, and was his shortest outing since last Aug. 15 against Philadelphia.

In other NL games Sunday, Montreal held off Los Angeles 4-3, St. Louis edged San Francisco 4-3, Pittsburgh beat Houston 4-3 in 12 innings, Philadelphia defeated Atlanta 2-1 and Chicago pounded San Diego 9-5.

Expos 4, Dodgers 3

Montreal left fielder Tim Lincecum fielded Bill Madlock's single and threw out Steve Sax at the plate for the final out of the game, enabling the Expos to win their eighth straight game.

Raines also extended his hitting streak to 15 games with two hits, including an RBI single during a three-run second.

Cardinals 4, Giants 3

Willie McGee trotted home from third base after San Francisco center fielder Dan Gladden collided with left fielder Candy Maldonado after catching pinch-hitter Tito Landrum's short fly ball in the eighth inning.

With one out in the eighth, McGee singled and took third on a single by Clint Hurdle. Landrum, batting for Andy Van Slyke, hit a blooper that Gladden caught, but tumbled to the turf after colliding with Maldonado.

The visiting Giants, who tied the game in the eighth on Chili Davis' RBI single, made five errors, three by rookie second baseman Rob Thompson.

Pirates 4, Astros 3

Bill Almon hit an inside-the-park home run with one out in the 12th inning, leading Pittsburgh and reliever Jose DeLeon over Houston.

Almon hit a sinking liner to right field off Charles Kerfeld, 3-1, that Terry Puhl tried to shoestring. The ball skipped into the corner and Puhl fell trying to retrieve it, allowing Almon to score standing up.

DeLeon, making his first appearance in the majors since going 2-19 last season, shut out the Astros on one hit over the last 3 2-3 innings.

Phillies 2, Braves 1

Ron Roenicke's RBI single with two outs in ninth inning gave Philadelphia and Steve Bedrosian the victory over Atlanta. Roenicke singled home Von Hayes, who led off the ninth with a double against Craig McMurry, 1-2.

Steve Carlton started for the visiting Phillies and pitched five shutout innings on three hits. The left-hander, who has won only once in six decisions this season, left with back spasms.

Cubs 9, Padres 5

Bob Dernier hit a tie-run double in the seventh inning that gave Chicago an 8-5 lead, and then stole home as the Cubs beat San Diego.

Davey Lopes hit his first home run of the season and winning pitcher Steve Trout contributed a two-run single at Wrigley Field.

Noah wins T of C title

NEW YORK (AP) — Three years ago, Yannick Noah scored his greatest tennis triumph and Guillermo Vilas suffered his worst defeat.

Noah was the toast of his homeland, the first Frenchman in 37 years to win the French Open. At the same time, Vilas was handed a one-year suspension and a $20,000 fine by the Men's International Professional Tennis Council for allegedly accepting an illegal $60,000 guarantee to play in Rotterdam, the Netherlands.

Victory and defeat, however, treated the two the same until Sunday, when they met in the finals of the $615,000 Shearson Lehman Brothers Tournament of Champions.

Noah's fellow countrymen overwhelmed him with adulations, so he moved from France to New York where, he says, he can walk the streets and ride the subway in anonymity.

Vilas successfully challenged the suspension, but found his will and skills had wilted under the pressure of fighting the MIPTC penalties.

But Sunday's battle on the clay courts at the West Side Tennis Club showed that two have returned to the top of their games.

"I feel confident now, much more than I did last year," Noah said after pounding out a 7-6, 6-0 triumph over the 33-year-old Vilas.

Against Vilas, Noah played superbly, whether trading high-arcing groundstrokes from the baseline with heavy topspin, or knocking off sharply angled volleys at the net. He didn't lose his service once in the match, and finished up with nine aces — three in the second game of the second set.

The victory was worth $80,000 to Noah, while Vilas collected $40,000.

Vilas, who ousted four seeded players to reach the final of this 64-man Grand Prix event, battled Noah evenly through the first set, struggling at times, but managing to hold serve, even staving off a set point in the 10th game.

Reggie Jackson gave it his best shot — and then his best trot.

"It was something special for me," Jackson said after his 536th career home run Sunday helped the California Angels beat the Milwaukee Brewers 5-1. "I wanted to remember the whole time. I guess I ran a tape recorder in my own mind: The pitch, how I left home plate, how I went around the base, how I touched home plate and people's hands I shook."

With the home run, Jackson not only moved into a tie for sixth place on baseball's all-time list, he joined a boyhood hero in the process: Mickey Mantle.

In other American League games Sunday, Chicago beat Cleveland 6-4; Baltimore edged Kansas City 4-3; Detroit stopped Minnesota 4-1; Texas took a double-header from New York 6-3 and 9-1; Boston turned back Oakland 6-5, and Toronto stopped Seattle 4-3.

Angels 5, Brewers 1

Jackson's solo homer with one out in the fifth, his sixth of the season, was his first since April 25 and gave the Angels a 4-1 lead. The blast left Jackson tied with Mantle and 37 behind Harmon Killebrew, who is fifth on the list.

White Sox 5, Indians 4

Tim Lincecum's infield hit drove home the winning run in the eighth inning as Chicago beat Cleveland and completed a sweep of a three-game series from the Indians.

Before losing three straight to Chicago, the Indians had won 10 games in a row.

Orioles 4, Royals 3

Rick Dempsey snapped out of a slump with a grand slam home run in the fifth inning, powering the Orioles over the Royals.

The defeat was the fifth in six games for Kansas City's defending world champions, 12-16, while the Orioles won a second straight decision for the first time since April 20.

Tigers 4, Twins 1

Dan Petry pitched a four-hitter and got home run support from Lance Parrish and Pat Sheridan in the second inning to beat Minnesota and snap a four-game losing streak.

After giving up a leadoff single to Randy Bush in the second, Petry, 3-2, went five innings without giving up a hit before Steve Lombardozzi broke his shutout with a home run in the seventh, extending his hitting streak to 12 games.

Rangers 6-9, Yankees 3-1

Oddibe McDowell hit a two-run homer and Scott Fletcher scored two runs, leading the Rangers over the Yankees in the first

Jackson hits 536th home run game of their double-header.

Mike Mason, 2-0, who scattered five hits and struck out three in 6 1-3 innings, was the winner with relief help from Greg Harris, who gained his sixth save. Loser Joe Niekro, 4-1, gave up nine hits in six innings.

Jose Guzman, winning for the first time since opening night, pitched seven strong innings to help Texas win the nightcap. The Rangers put the second game away with seven runs in the fourth inning, as Pete Incaviglia got two doubles to tie a major-league record.

Red Sox 6, A's 5

Rich Gedman went 4-for-4 and Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd and two relievers combined on a seven-hitter as the Red Sox survived four Oakland home runs to beat the A's.

In winning their fifth straight game, the Red Sox handed Moose Haas his first loss of the year.

Blue Jays 4, Mariners 3

Jimmy Key and Mark Eichhorn combined on a six-hitter and Damaso Garcia drove in three runs to help the Blue Jays beat the Mariners.

Key, 1-3, who entered the game with a 13.05 earned run average, walked two and struck out four. His longest previous outing of the season had been 5 1-3 innings and opposition batters were batting .367 against him before Sunday.

Lakers must cross Texas to repeat

By JOHN NADEL
AP Sports Writer

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — If the Los Angeles Lakers are going to become the first team in 17 years to repeat as NBA champions, they'll have to get through the entire state of Texas to do so.

So far, it's two Texas teams down and one to go.

The Lakers began defense of their title by overwhelming the San Antonio Spurs, winning three straight games decisively in a best-of-5 series. Then, they struggled past the Dallas Mavericks 4-2 in a best-of-7 series.

Now, Los Angeles is taking on the Houston Rockets and their "Twin Towers" in the best-of-7 Western Conference finals. The Lakers got off to a good start in the series, breezing to a 119-107 triumph in Saturday's opener.

"That's 22 of the last 25 (the Lakers have won over the Rockets) over the last three years," Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley said. "They play the kind of game we like. They run."

While the hopes of the Rockets would seem to hinge upon the effectiveness of their big men, it could be the backcourt that makes or breaks them against the Lakers.

Following Saturday's game, the opinion was expressed on both sides that the play of the guards had a lot to do with the outcome.

"They weren't able to get the job done in the backcourt," Los Angeles center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said. "They didn't get enough points out of their guards. Our guard play was definitely better than their guard play. I think that was the key."

"We did not have a guy out there to take charge," Houston Coach Bill Fitch said. "Some of the passing that we did, we normally don't do in games."

"No doubt about it, they're the world champs and they played very well. If we don't play better, it's going to be over in a hurry... (but) we're not going to panic, having lost one ballgame."

Abdul-Jabbar, at 39 the oldest player in the NBA, scored a game-high 31 points, but starting Los Angeles guards Earvin "Magic" Johnson and Byron Scott also played major roles, scoring 26 and 18 points, respectively. In Johnson, the Lakers definitely have a player who takes charge. The 6-foot-9 point guard had a game-high 18 assists as he triggered the devastating Los Angeles fast break.

"Houston is fun," Johnson said. "You know they're going to run. They like to run and that's what we're going to do. It should be fun."

It wasn't much fun for the Rockets.

Houston's starting guards, Robert Reid and Lewis Lloyd, combined for only 12 points and 12 assists Saturday.

"It just seemed like, as individuals, we didn't have that inner drive today," Reid said. "We have to come out in the first quarter with as much drive as possible and take it from there."

The Rockets will get their next opportunity Tuesday night in Game 2 of the best-of-7 series. The third and fourth games will be played at Houston next Friday night and Sunday.

Houston's "Twin Towers," 7-0 Akeem Olatuwon and 7-4 Ralph Sampson, had 28 and 19 points, respectively. Olatuwon also had a game-high 16 rebounds, but it wasn't nearly enough.

Reserve guard Mitchell Wiggins scored a career-playoff high 24 points for Houston in the opener, but many of those points came in the fourth quarter, after the issue had been decided.

The Lakers took the lead for good by outscoring the Rockets 15-7 in the final 4:26 of the first half to go ahead 64-58 at halftime. It was 94-82 after three quarters and the Rockets weren't closer than eight points after that.

The Lakers are attempting to become the first team to win consecutive NBA championships since the Boston Celtics in 1968 and 1969.

Sixers win lottery; Mavs pick seventh

NEW YORK (AP) — As far as Dallas Mavericks general manager Norm Sonju was concerned, the 1986 NBA draft could have been held a couple of hours earlier.

It was conducted at halftime of Sunday's NBA playoff game between Milwaukee and Philadelphia, but commissioner David Stern went through a dress rehearsal earlier and guess who ended up with the No. 1 pick when it didn't count?

The Mavericks. "That means we'll wind up with No. 7 for sure when we do it for real," Sonju predicted.

He was right. When the envelope drawn out of the drum for the seventh, or worst, lottery spot was opened, the logo inside was that of the Dallas Mavericks.

Dallas was less fortunate than the two other playoff teams in the lottery, which was set up to give the seven non-playoff teams the cream of the nation's collegiate basketball crop.

The Philadelphia 76ers, thanks to a 1979 trade of Joe Bryant to the Clippers, were in the lottery and emerged with the No. 1 pick. The Boston Celtics, who traded Gerald Henderson to Seattle two years ago for the Sonics' 1986 first-round pick, finished second.

Sonju said as soon as the draft ended that the Mavericks might try to bundle the No. 7 selection with another player in an attempt to trade for a current NBA player.

"We are going to look at our options. We will see if we are going to use the pick ourselves or use it to get an existing player through a trade," Sonju told the Dallas Morning News.

If the Mavs hold onto the choice, he said, they likely will use it to fill what he said is Dallas' No. 1 weakness — a backup to shooting guard Rolando Blackman. Dallas went last season with a rotation of Blackman and point guards Derek Harper and Brad Davis.

He mentioned Johnny Dawkins of Duke, Ron Harper of Miami (Ohio), Dell Curry of Virginia Tech, Mo Martin of St. Joseph's (Pa.) and Dwayne "Pearl" Washington of Syracuse as possibilities.

The Mavericks missed out on their hopes of getting the No. 1 draft pick in either 1983 or 1984, when Ralph Sampson and Akeem Olatuwon were available. Last year, they held Cleveland's No. 1 pick, as they did this year, but the Cavaliers disappointed by making the playoffs, thus denying Dallas a spot in the lottery that featured Patrick Ewing as the top prize.

Cleveland obliged this year — but the prize, even if the Mavericks got the first pick, was not a Sampson, Olatuwon or Ewing. At best, the Mavericks could have gotten North Carolina forward-center Brad Daugherty, who Sonju admitted was somewhat of a soft player who projects as a 6-11 forward.

"I'm not going to say I wouldn't have wanted the No. 1 pick," Sonju said. "But we can't look back. We will play with the hand we were dealt. We have built solidly through the years, and we will look to take advantage of this pick."

Dallas got the pick, Bill Robinson and a 1983 No. 1 pick that was turned into Harper in a 1980 deal with Cleveland for Richard Washington and Jerome Whitehead.

With the decisions by North Carolina State sophomore center Chris Washburn and Memphis State junior center William Bedford to turn pro early, the draft is much deeper and the No. 7 pick looks much better than it did two weeks ago, Sonju said.

Lloyd holds off Rinaldi for Virginia Slims championship

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd learned in the $150,000 Virginia Slims of Houston tennis tournament that she's capable of surging to big leads and losing them just as quickly.

Lloyd's latest lesson came Sunday, when she played top-form and off-form all in the same match before beating Kathy Rinaldi 6-4, 2-6, 6-4 for the $30,000 first prize in singles.

"I seem to get leads and then let players get back in the matches," Lloyd said. "At 4-1 (in the third set) I shouldn't have let her back. When you get a lead, you want to relax."

Lloyd was broken in the first game of the match but then allowed Rinaldi to win only two points over the next four games for a 4-1 lead. Then Rinaldi surged and it took a service break by Lloyd in the 10th game to win the first set.

Rinaldi, 19, charged back and took the only set she's ever won in 15 career sets against Lloyd. Rinaldi is now 0-7 in matches.

"It hurts" losing to Lloyd, she said. "But I can't complain. I played a good match today. I'll just keep trying. You always think you have to do something extra against Chris so I just tried to go out and play my game and slug it out."

Lloyd, winning her fifth tournament of the year, also surged and faltered against Laura Gildemeister in a 6-7, 6-0, 6-0 semifinal. But she's leaving town pleased with her week's performance.

"I feel I'm playing better than when I was 25 even though I was ranked No. 1 in the world then," said Lloyd, now ranked No. 2. "These tournaments are getting tougher. There used to be three or four top players and then a big gap. Now the top 15 are real tough."

Lloyd, 31, had enough to handle with Rinaldi and the steamy 88-degree temperatures that left the Westside Tennis Club's center court simmering after heavy rains on Saturday.

"It was an up-and-down match," Lloyd said. "It was hot and it was the first day match I've had. Kathy hits a lot of balls back and the heat really gets to you."

Rinaldi took advantage of Lloyd's erratic serve in the second set with breaks in the third, fifth and seventh games.

Rinaldi, second seeded, overcame a double fault that forced her to break point in the eighth game, but she hit a winner and Lloyd hit two errors to give Rinaldi the set.

Yet Rinaldi knew the match wasn't over. "You can never count Chris out," Rinaldi said. "She's just playing better all the time. It's a challenge for us to play against her and to learn from her."

Rinaldi faltered at the start of the decisive third set, winning only three points in the first three games and falling behind 3-0.

Lloyd, of Boca Raton, Fla., took a 4-1 lead after the lengthy fifth game that went to seven deuces, and she had to escape from five break points.

"I felt the points were going well at that point and that I had a chance," Rinaldi said.

Rinaldi, of Gainesville, Fla., broke back in the seventh game at love and held to tie the match.

Crampton logs seniors victory

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Some said Bruce Crampton couldn't return to winning form after an eight-year retirement from professional golf.

He proved them wrong Sunday by shooting a 4-under-par 68 and capturing the $37,500 first prize in the Benson & Hedges Invitational Seniors PGA tournament.

Crampton sewed up the victory on the 17th green when he dropped a 25-foot putt that finished off runnerup Bob Charles, who came in second, two strokes back.

Crampton, who spent eight years in the oil and gas business in Dallas before returning to pro golf last year, finished the 54-hole tournament with a 14-under par 202.

"There were some who doubted I could get back into winning caliber," Crampton said. "I've always said when it's your turn to win, you can aim at a tree and it'll go through."

The two P's, "patience and perseverance," helped him seal the victory, he said.

Charles, who took a two-shot lead into the final round of the $250,000 tournament, shot an even-par 72 on the final day to finish at 204. Doug Sanders, Gary Player and Dale Douglass, who was the first-round leader, tied for third, three strokes further back at 207, nine under for the three-day tournament.

Crampton and Charles were nip and tuck on the Dominion Country Club golf course until the 16th hole, when Charles missed a 4-foot putt that enabled Crampton to take a one-stroke lead.

Then, on the 17th, Crampton sank his 17-foot birdie putt while Charles missed a three-foot putt for a bogey.

"I said on the green that you don't win golf tournaments without luck. I was very fortunate. I played well, but I didn't hit as well as I have the past couple of days," he said.

RESTAURANT DRIVE-AWAY — Traffic lights had to be held up, as did motorists, for a time Sunday while workers moved this 35-year-old restaurant building from a busy in-

Sesquicentennial longhorn is found, but he's injured

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M veterinarians are hoping that Texas USA, the state's 1,524-pound Sesquicentennial mascot bull, won't have to be put to sleep because of a broken back he suffered last week.

The animal, which has a Texas-shaped mark on its forehead, was reported missing last Wednesday on a ranch where he had been kept near Jacksboro, about 60 miles northwest of Fort Worth. He was found on the ranch Saturday, injured and unable to move.

The bull, a red-and-white longhorn with horns that measure more than five feet from tip to tip, was moved to the Texas A&M large animal clinic here for treatment.

Dr. Jan Cornick, a veterinarian at the clinic, said the animal had fractured his back and was unable to walk because his hind legs were paralyzed.

"We're just keeping him on supportive therapy and making sure he is eating and drinking," she said.

The bull was to undergo X-rays on his back today that will determine whether the famous animal would have to be put to sleep, she said.

"He is a very much-loved animal, and we certainly won't jump to that unless it becomes our only alternative," Ms. Cornick said.

She said the bull may have fallen or been involved in a fight. She added that large bulls sometimes receive such injuries during breeding, and that the injury probably occurred the day he disappeared.

The bull, on loan from a Nebraska woman in honor of the Texas Sesquicentennial, was being cared for by Larry Smith on his 297-acre ranch in Jack County.

Texas USA's disappearance had sparked an intensive ground and air search of a 25-mile area around the ranch, Smith said.

"He really isn't in any pain," Ms. Cornick said. "He's very bright and alert. All his vital signs are normal — his heart rate and breathing rate. But it's just too early for us to tell."

The veterinarian said the bull has a large bruise on his back, which may indicate some misaligned vertebrae. But she said that in spite of it all, Texas USA is in good shape.

"He's a tough cookie," she said.

Talk show host in airport fight

NEW YORK (AP) — Phil Donahue, who deftly handles a variety of sensitive issues on his syndicated television talk show, brawled in an airport terminal with a man who shouted abuse at him and his wife, authorities said.

The fist fight in LaGuardia Airport's central terminal broke out Sunday after the man, a supporter of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche, shouted that Donahue and his wife, actress Marlo Thomas, "ought to be murdered," said Port Authority Police Officer Mitchell Kaufman.

Donahue responded, the two began shouting and the fight began, Kaufman said.

The incident occurred as Donahue and Ms. Thomas were at the airport to catch a flight to Boston where Ms. Thomas received an award Sunday night for her work against nuclear arms.

"I thought about it on the plane. And you know, if we have to have war, let it be man-to-man and fist-to-fist," Donahue said when he arrived at the dinner. "What this technology does is make it impossible to be brave. If you drop a bomb on my neighborhood, I can't prove that I'm tough."

Donahue and Ms. Thomas were walking through the terminal about 12:15 p.m. EDT when the man yelled, "Donahue and his wife ought to be murdered," police said.

"The fists were flying," said Kaufman. "Several officers responded, and they had to pull them apart."

The protester was identified as William Ferguson Jr., 44, of Ridgefield, N.J., a member of the International Caucus of Labor Committees, said Port Authority spokesman Leon Katz. The caucus is a pro-nuclear group affiliated with LaRouche.

Ms. Thomas and Pulitzer Prize-winning author Alice Walker received the Helen M. Caldicott Leadership Award Sunday night at a ball sponsored by the Women's Action for Nuclear Disarmament.

"I've known my husband for nine years and I've never seen anything like that," Ms. Thomas said at a news conference before the ball. "I am proud to say my husband did not throw the first punch."

An Associated Press reporter who was in the terminal said Donahue's face was bruised and the other man was taken away in handcuffs after the fight.

Both men filed harassment complaints against each other.

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — Pianist Vladimir Horowitz, who last performed in Germany in 1932, was a smash hit here on his first stop in the West following his triumphant return to the Soviet Union.

He brought some 1,800 people to their feet before playing a single note Sunday.

The 81-year-old Horowitz, a U.S. citizen, played here after performing in his Russian homeland for the first time since leaving 60 years ago.

LINCOLN, Ill. (AP) — Columnist Ann Landers

received an honorary degree from Lincoln College, then told graduating students to be kind to others.

Many depressed and troubled people look normal, but thoughtful words or harsh looks can send them to the depths of despair, she told about 130 associate degree recipients and their parents, friends and teachers on Saturday.

Ms. Landers, 67, whose real name is Eppie Lederer, said in an interview later that she differs with Nancy Reagan over the subject of abortion.

The columnist described her own stance as "free choice," not pro-abortion. Mrs. Reagan is strongly against abortion.

"I do not think it's perfectly OK to have a child out of wedlock," or live together before marriage or engage lightly in premarital sex, Ms. Landers also said.

TURIN, Italy (AP) — Tenor Luciano Pavarotti raised about $300,000 for cancer research with a benefit concert before about 6,000 people.

They packed into Turin Sports Palace Sunday to hear him perform a series of his favorite opera triumphs with the orchestra of the RAI television network.

The audience gave the renowned tenor several loud ovations and even threw lilies on stage after he sang "Mamma."

Townpeople want Superfund money so waste treatment can continue

NASHUA, N.H. (AP) — Looming like a giant erector set over expensive houses scattered among maple trees and vegetable gardens, America's first Superfund plant pumps poisoned water from the ground and makes it safe to drink.

But the state-of-the-art Gilson Road plant may have to shut down this summer if Congress fails to approve permanent funding for Superfund, the Environmental Protection Agency's effort to clean up 840 especially polluted sites around the country. Gilson Road is the furthest along in treatment of all the sites on the list, said Chester Janowski, the EPA project officer for the plant.

House and Senate conferees have been wrangling for nearly three months about two separate versions of a Superfund bill, with environmentalists around the country growing increasingly dismayed at the deadlock.

In Nashua, to the 3,000 families who live within a mile of an old sand and gravel pit where chemicals were illegally dumped, it makes no sense that the federal government has spent $10.5 million toward cleaning up Gilson Road, half of that to build the plant, and now would simply shut things down. The plant began operating only last month.

"I defy anyone, even the president of the United States, to tell me I don't have a problem in my backyard," said Prudy Piechota, whose 8-year-old daughter, Beth Ann, attends second grade at the Main Dunstable Elementary School, just over a half-mile from the plant. "This is the chemical age. If we don't do something about it now, there will be a bigger problem later."

"This is too important just to horse around with," added Elizabeth MacDonald, who also has a daughter in the second grade. "Why give the money to build without a commitment to finish the job?"

The Gilson Road plant, perched atop 20 acres of plowed-under refuse and 130 million gallons of contaminated water, was built of sheet metal and bolts; it's meant to operate for two years and then be torn down.

The interior is a web of color-coded pipes: gray for dirty water, blue for drinkable water, yellow for steam, green for air, brown for sludge, orange for fuel oil, red and clear for the sulfuric acid and lime used to treat the pollution.

It looks like nothing else in this suburban section, but residents welcome the safety it promises.

The neighborhood, known variously as South Nashua, Ward 5, Gilson Road or any of several names of local housing developments, was not long ago a pine forest. It still feels oddly isolated from the rest of this city of 73,000 people.

No emergency ever occurred here as with the evacuation of pregnant women and children from the poisoned Love Canal section of Niagara Falls, N.Y. No one is known to have fallen ill because of chemicals in the water.

Although the chemicals were known or suspected to cause cancer and liver and kidney diseases in laboratory animals, no health studies were run because nobody was sick, EPA officials said in recent interviews.

But residents remember the odors that gave headaches to some of the 900 retirees who live in the three local trailer parks. Officials of New Hampshire and Massachusetts worry the contamination could leak into the Nashua and Merrimack rivers, sources of drinking water for downstream cities such as Lawrence, Lowell and Methuen, Mass. And everyone knows the site was considered bad enough to make the Superfund list.

Editor leaves job to clear suspect

MOUNT PLEASANT, Texas (AP) — Although a jury convicted Calvin Loyd Padgett of murder in one of the 1982 slayings of three Pizza Hut employees, an East Texas newsman wants to prove otherwise and has left his job to do so.

Charley Harrist, managing editor of The Steel Country Bee, a weekly newspaper in Daingerfield, took a leave of absence to prove Padgett, 31, is innocent.

Four years ago this week, the Pizza Hut employees were shot, stabbed and bludgeoned to death in a late night robbery. Padgett was convicted of one of the murders and still faces capital murder charges for the other two.

Although he initially gave police conflicting confessions to the crime, Padgett now insists he is innocent.

Harrist said, "I hate to admit it, but 'obsession' is probably a fair word to use. There is not a day that goes by that I don't work on the case. At night, when I lie down, my mind rolls with thoughts about it."

The killers entered the restaurant shortly after 11 p.m. on May 10, 1982. Assistant manager George Dwain Landrum, 42, was shot in the back and severely beaten. Howard Leroy McClafflin, 25, the cook, was shot in the head. Waitress Shirley O'Brier Thompson, 24, was shot, stabbed repeatedly, and beaten with a claw hammer. The hammer was left embedded in her skull. The killers stole $1,100.

Despite the jury's verdict, Harrist has spent weekends pursuing leads all over Texas and Oklahoma and spends many evenings re-reading the nine-volume transcript of Padgett's trial.

"I've questioned my own motives. I don't know what keeps driving me. So many good friends have asked me," Harrist told The Dallas Morning News. "Deep down inside, I'm convinced he didn't do it. There are too many inconsistencies, too many unanswered questions for me to walk away from it."

Harrist's investigation uncovered enough quirks in the Pizza Hut case to persuade Texas Ranger Capt. G.W. Burks to begin re-examining the case late last year.

"Robbery was supposed to be the motive, but we had three people brutally slain. I doubt that you would shoot, stab, and hit people in the head in a routine armed robbery," Burks said.

However, authorities note that Padgett has repeatedly failed lie-detector tests about his involvement in the crime. He has two previous convictions for armed robbery, including one for which he was sentenced to life in prison in Oklahoma.

State prosecutors believe Padgett and three juvenile relatives — a 15-year-old half brother, a 13-year-old cousin and a 12-year-old cousin — committed the crime. But Harrist contends the age of the juveniles is one of the illogical parts of the state's case.

"If you ever see photographs of the crime scene, you will have a hard time believing people that young could be involved," he said. "And Calvin was 27 years old at the time. Why would he go pull a robbery with three kids?" Harrist said.

Also, Harrist said, a woman told him she saw Padgett as late as 6 p.m. on the day of the crime 210 miles from Mount Pleasant in Heaton, Okla. And work records show he was back on the job the following morning.

Additionally, Harrist said, all four suspects were living in different cities. Harrist believes Padgett's half-brother was involved in the crime, but not the others. He is convinced someone who knew the victims was involved.

"They would never have opened the door for anybody unless they knew them," he said. "Investigators found a bloody knife on a shelf out of sight, in the place where that knife always was kept. Whoever used that knife knew it was up there, they put it back where it belonged."

Harrist also believes the savagery of the crime contradicts the robbery motive.
