County celebrates

Sesquicentennial activities attract thousands

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

Monday's Gray County Sesquicentennial celebration was more than just the 150th commemoration of San Jacinto Day.

It was the musky smell of lye soap mingling with the tempting aroma of slow-cooking barbecue.

It was the drone of bagpipes followed by girls named Martinez, Cox, Ingle and Thomas performing Polish folk dances.

It was classical trumpet and flute teaming with down-home West Texas fiddling.

It was old Panhandle pioneers reminiscing over early Gray County photos while children nervously giggled at an American Bison.

It was the chatter of 3,000 to 4,000 area residents packing the auditorium, foyer and Heritage Room of the M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Activities began at 10 a.m. as Gray County pioneers and people who worked on the mammoth Gray County History Book gathered for coffee and memories. Joe Shelton, a 97-year-old Pampa resident, was presented a pewter plate for being the oldest pioneer present at the celebration. A native of south Gray County, he worked with the Pampa school system for many years. His parents were the first couple to be wed in Gray County.

While Girl Scouts served soft drinks, doughnuts and candy from their concession stand in the heritage room, celebrators listened to music ranging from classical trumpet pieces performed by Pampa High School

Prices plunge

Consumer costs falling at fastest pace in 36 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — A record plunge in gasoline costs last month pushed consumer prices down 0.4 percent, matching the February fall and the steepest back-to-back declines in more than 36 years, the government said today.

For the first three months of the year, consumer prices fell at an annual rate of 1.9 percent, the best quarterly performance since 1954.

Prices have not fallen for two months running since 1965 and have not fallen at such a steep pace since matching 0.4 percent declines in December 1949 and January 1950.

Most of the March decline was attributed to a record 12 percent fall in gasoline prices, more than double the 5.9 percent February drop.

Gasoline prices are tumbling because of the worldwide slump in oil prices. Oil on the spot market is now selling for $12-$13 per barrel, less than half the cost just six months ago.

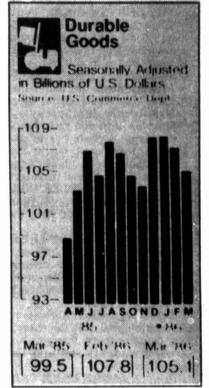

six months ago.

Gasoline prices at the pump have already fallen well below $1 per gallon for all grades in much of the country. These prices, last seen in 1979, represent a 27 percent drop from the peak prices of March 1981.

Economists say they expect that gasoline costs will probably post further declines in April and May before leveling off.

"We expect the consumer price decline for April to be similar to March, a big drop with energy prices by far the biggest factor," said Donald Ratajczak, head of the economic forecasting unit at Georgia State University. "We think consumer energy prices will bottom out by the end of June. We don't see them continuing to collapse."

Reflecting the sharp drop in crude oil prices, the average cost of all energy commodities declined at a remarkable annual rate of 52.3 percent in the first three months of the year.

Home heating oil costs were down 6.5 percent last month after an a record 11.5 percent February decline and were also 27 percent below their peak, set in April 1981.

Natural gas prices fell 0.7 percent; electricity costs were off 0.5

Food prices, which fell a sharp 0.6 percent in February, edged upward 0.1 percent last month.

upward 0.1 percent last month. Beef, pork and poultry prices all declined while prices for fresh vegetables rose 0.3 percent.

If the overall March decline held for 12 months, the annual rate would be 5.4 percent, the Labor Department said. For all of 1985, consumer prices posted a 3.8 percent increase.

Mrs. Khadafy says she'd kill American pilot

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — The wife of Col. Moammar Khadafy wiped a tear from her eye and vowed that if she ever finds the American pilot who bombed her house, "I will kill him myself."

"When I see what happened to my children and people here I will do my best to fight these terrorist actions," said Safia Khadafy, leaning against a crutch and sitting in a chair before her bomb-shattered two-story home.

Libyan authorities say the Khadafys' 15-monthold adopted daughter, Hana, was fatally injured in the bombing raid, and that two other sons — Kamis, age 3, and 4-year-old Seph al-Arab — were wounded.

"If I get the pilot of that airplane, I will kill him myself," Mrs. Khadafy told reporters Monday night during an appearance arranged by the government at the Bab al-Aziya military compound. Reporters were not allowed to ask her questions.

Reporters were not allowed to ask ner questions. Two of her sons stood behind Mrs. Khadafy as she railed against President Reagan and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher for the April 15 bombing raid. F-111 fighter-bombers based in Britain were used in the aerial attack, which U.S. officials described as a blow against Libyansponsored international terrorism.

She introduced the two boys as Sadiq, 13, and Sephal al-Salim, 14, whose arm was bandaged.

Mrs. Khadafy's appearance was part of a campaign to stir up sympathy for Libya and portray it as the victim of unprovoked superpower aggres-

When reporters returned to their hotel after seeing Mrs. Khadafy, Libyan Information Ministry officials handed out color photographs of a young girl they said was Hana.

One of the pictures showed a smiling Khadafy seated on a couch and holding the child. The caption in English read: "You adopted me. Reagan assassinated me."

In another picture the plump-cheeked little girl,

Mrs. Khadafy faces reporters wearing a frilly white dress, stared at the camera above a caption reading: "Kids should never forget my killers, Reagan and Thatcher." During her appearance, Mrs. Khadafy, wearing a red dress and black sequined cape, said her husband is not a terrorist.

"If I thought he was a terrorist, I would not stay with him and have children with him," said Mrs. Khadafy, speaking in Arabic.

A government interpreter translated her remarks into English.

"Moammar Khadafy is a human being and he has adopted children without parents. Moammar Khadafy is for the peace," she said.

After her statements she hobbled into an auto and was driven away with her sons.

Before they left, Khadafy's son Sephal al-Salim said of the U.S. warplanes: "I don't think they hit other military targets. They tried to concentrate on that haves?"

Most Pampa Filipinos say wealth obsessed Marcoses

BY PAUL PINKHAM Staff Writer

Most members of Pampa's Filipino community paint a picture of Ferdinand and Imelda Marcos as a despotic couple obsessed with keeping up appearances, almost to the point of hilarity.

Appearances like mansions built for visiting dignitaries but never used, palm trees transplanted along the routes of those same dignitaries or giving government workers a third of a day's wages and the day off to attend a pro-Marcos rally were all par for the course in the Marcos regime, they say.

"It is something beyond the sensibilities of Americans to grasp. It's bizarre," says Fred Vernal, a metallurgist with IRI Corp. "He has built projects — big enormous projects — not for the people but for their own megalomaniac sense of accomplishment."

Vernal told about an arts center, now standing idle, that Mrs. Marcos wanted built in Manila in order to host a film festival in 1982. Forty workers died when the roof collapsed during construction, but Mrs. Marcos, angry that the building would not be ready in time for her festival, ordered concrete poured over their bodies and construction to continue, he said.

"There are countless examples of this. They are great showoffs," Vernal said. "In all of this poverty, she was thinking about these projects that don't do anything to the people but only to their ego."

Several local Filipinos mentioned an extravagant palace built especially for a visit by the pope — a mansion the pope refused to use because it was too lavish.

"He's got a lot of facilities that are not necessarily beneficial to the people," said Vernal's brother Olan, a one-time supporter of Marcos.

"I believed in him myself. I believed that he could have had the chance of leading us to a better life."

Other extravagant buildings mentioned include a mountain mansion that was never used because running water could not be piped up to it and a mecca built exclusively for the wedding of a Marcos daughter.

Teresita Grabato, a local physician, said the Marcos' obsession with appearances sometimes bordered on the absurd. Whenever dignitaries would visit, she said, freshlypainted temporary walls would be set up to hide slum areas and plants would be re-planted along the visitor's route to create the impression of a tropical paradise.

"It's really outrageous. All the expenses they used to create this facade is really abhorrent, knowing how many people are without food," she said. "They spend money for appearances but not for the people."

Al Domingo, a former employee of the Philippine Central Bank, said, "We were paid to attend his rallies."

Government workers were given the day off from work, 30 pesos and pro-Marcos t-shirts to attend and cheer the president in what Domingo called "mostly bullshit rallies."

Glenda Guerrero, who recently returned from the Philippines and was there during elections, disagreed with much of the criticism levelled at the former leader. She said her father represents 4,000 farmers, "the poorest of the poor," in the Ilocos region (Marcos' home region) and those farmers received aid from the Marcos regime.

"Marcos released them from the bondage of the soil," she said. "At that point, Marcos is the liberator of the poor."

Guerrero, who was a civilian nurse in an armed forces medical center, said the Philippine people benefited from such Marcos projects as the Heart Center for Asia. Social welfare programs made medical treatment accessible to the poor, she said.

As for Mrs. Marcos' nowfamous shoe collection, Guerrero said many were gifts, probably from shoe manufacturers to her as a First Lady and former beau-

"She's a person who never throws anything away," Guerrero said.

She conceded the Marcoses were extravagant but added that

Pampa police officers probably wish they'd worn their galoshes to work this morning. Most of them had to slosh to their offices through water that covered most of the police headquarters floor after a city jail inmate allegedly stuffed paper down a toilet and turned the water on, flooding the department.

Sgt. Charlie Love said he left to take some papers to the garage at about 7 a.m. and when he returned, the department floor was

'It must've opened the floodgates because at 7 there wasn't a rop out here," Love said.

Police Chief J.J. Ryzman complained of cold and wet feet by 8:30 a.m., thanks to the flood coupled with a hole in one of his shoes. The chief said it did not take too much detective work to locate the alleged perpetrator since Love followed the trail of water to the "drunk tank," where there was only one prisoner.

Standing accused is James D. Reed, 19, 1105 Juniper, who was arrested earlier this morning on charges of possessing less than two ounces of marijuana. Ryzman, damp socks obviously foremost in his mind, said criminal mischief charges were being prepared against reed in connection with the flood.

Celebration a success.

Valedictorian Carol Morgan, flutist Katrina Hildebrandt, old time piano playing by Kathleen Anderson and the Jack Shelby fiddlers. Other Heritage Room performers included the teen-age Midnight Image country-western band, Polish folk dances by students of Linda Germany's School of Dance in White Deer and Jeanne Willingham's Little Texas Darlings.

The Heritage Room festivities were capped by a fashion show depicting seven generations of Gray County fashions. The fashion show was presented by Bette Bates and Jo Anne Arasim.

Decorations from Saturday's Cadillac Ball still festooned the Heritage Room and parts of the foyer. Victorianstyle red lights hung from the ceiling and maps of Texas dominated by big Yellow Roses — lined the walls. One Texas map was hung backwards, prompting Heritage room diners to remark: "The West Texas wind flipped it over." "That's a Texas Aggie Texas."

The foyer was packed with other historic displays. Jennifer Rapstine of White Deer carefully applied hot dye to eggs as she demonstrated intricate Slavic egg decorating. The Taste of Texas Barbecue tempted more than 1,650 diners to the Heritage Room at 5 p.m. Cobb Britten of Groom prepared the barbecue beef.

A pageant saluting Gray County history capped the day's festivities. Produced by Area Community Theater Inc., the pageant featured portrayals of historic Gray County characters, including a portrayal of a young bride who later became Joe Shelton's mother, a buffalo hunter and a soldier from Fort Elliott. The play also included vignettes of Gray County history, the first election and early oil activity. spliced between skits of their modern-day counterparts. Among the performers in

The pageant also featured a choir of Gray County fourth graders, under the direction of Wanetta Hill.

Kennedy, Birkes and attorney Don Lane dedicated a historical marker denoting the 1852 exploration of the Red River. The historical marker is located five miles south of Pampa on Highway 70.

Filipinos comment was their right as heads of state. 'While I was eating dried fish, they were eating caviar," Olan Vernal challenged

'She's entitled to eat caviar. She's the wife of the president of the Philippines," replied Guer-

Guerrero blames the Marcos downfall on officials in the Marcos regime.

"It's Marcos' people that abused his power," she said. That's why he's destroyed."

Vernal admitted Marcos may have done the country some good during his early years but the economy deteriorated after that. The actions of the past few years erased the good Marcos may have done, he said.

'In other words, he just blew it." he said.

He spoke of a unique element of the Philippine culture, called "utang na loob," which constitutes an indebtedness for favor and which Marcos used to his advantage when making political appointments. Appointees could not challenge Marcos if they wanted to, he said, making the president free to issue decrees with the stroke of a pen" and guaranteeing the continuation of the Marcos regime.

Grabato said Marcos capitalized on Western fears about communism to silence his critics and the press, justify martial law, forestall free elections and further his own "vision of being a dictator." She accused him of infiltrating communist meetings with his own people and spearheading bombing missions to this end.

"We cannot deny there was communism in the Philippines but it was just localized to a few provinces," she said.

Fred Vernal said Marcos was unwittingly the communists' "most successful recruiter." He said Marcos drove many Filipinos into communism by his system of land reform that gave land not to the people that worked it but to Marcos political cronies. Grabato's husband Rene, also a Pampa physician, said it may take some time for the Philippine economy to recover from Marcos' "plundering." He said per capita income was one of the highest in Southeast Asia when Marcos came to power.

Grabato said he is relieved it did not take a bloody revolution to oust Marcos but added: "It's time for change. I'd like our country to be democratic instead of a dictatorship.

Guerrero said she is not confident of the executive prowess of Marcos' successor, Corazon Aquino. She said Aquino was not even able to say at first what kind of government she will establish: democratic, de facto or revolutionary. 'What does she know at all?"

Guerrero asked. "She's not even a civil servant. Asked if Aquino can restore democracy to the Philippines, Oran Vernal could express only hope that she will. 'I hope she does, that's all I can say. I guess she's the only hope,' he said. But, he added: "I'd rather have a dumb president than a wise one who would steal from my pocket.'

Schlumberger profits off sharply

By The Associated Press

The nation's biggest oilfield services company, Schlumberger Ltd., reported its firstquarter profit dropped 51 percent from a year ago because of a general decline in business.

For the same period, Amoco Corp., the nation's fifth-largest oil concern, said Monday it posted a drop of 30 percent, attributing it to plummeting oil prices. Bucking the trend, Ashland Oil said its profit for its latest quarter more than doubled. New York-based Schlumberger said its first-quarter net income came to $148 million, or 51 cents a share, compared with $303.5 million, or $1.01 a share, a year earlier. Schlumberger's revenue fell 5.9 percent to $1.59 billion from $1.69 billion

Chairman Michel Vaillaud said the drop in net income was due primarily to a general decline in oilfield services activity and to continuing losses at its Fairchild

Semiconductor unit. Amoco, which is based in Chicago, said its net earnings for the three months ended March 31 came to $331 million, or $1.28 a share, compared with $473 million, or $1.76 a share, in the same period a year ago.

Amoco's revenue fell 15.7 percent to $5.9 billion from $7 billion. Richard M. Morrow, chairman and chief executive officer, said the erosion in earnings was due to the plummeting price of crude oil and a decline in the volume of petroleum sales. However, he said, higher profits from chemical operations and improved results for refining, marketing and transportation operations helped boost earnings. Co., the 14th-largest oil company, Warren Shimmerlik, an oil industry analyst in New York with errill Lynch & Co., said Amoco's performance was expected.

Shimmerlik noted that the price of crude oil is about half what it was at the start of the quarter.

"For a company to be able to get through that in decent shape is a tribute to the long-term management," he said. "Not many of us could survive that kind of a haircut.'

Ashland Oil Inc., with headquarters in Ashland, Ky., said net income for its fiscal second quarter ended March 31 came to $39 million, or $1.12 a share, compared with $14 million, or 22 cents a share, in the same period a year

Ashland's revenue was flat at $1.8 billion.

Lawmakersworry about insurance

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas lawmakers' concern about taxes and spending in 1987 will be followed closely by their worries over proposed insurance-law changes, top spokesmen for statewide consumer groups say.

Soaring prices of sometimes scarce liability insurance has forced the insurance "crisis" to the second position on the issues ballot, the consumers' association officials said

But "questions about the growing costs and availability of insurance should not result in solutions which deprive consumers of important rights and put profits before human health and safety," Carol Barger, Southwest director of the Consumers Union, told a news

"Simply accepting the rhetoric of the industry, that an increase in lawsuits is causing the problem, will not only leave us in the same bind, it could seriously limit some of the major court protections many consumers need," said Rebecca Lightsey, representing the Alliance for Legal and Insurance Eguity.

A House-Senate committee had been holding hearings for several months on insurance problems before making recommendations to the 1987 session.

"We have indications that this committee is looking seriously at recommending limitation of consumer rights in liability litigation," Ms. Barger said.

"We know the insurance lobby is lined up to try to limit liability (damages that may be recovered in court suits)," said Ms. Lightsey. "They claim the so-called crisis is caused by too many suits being filed, but we can find no statistics to back up their claims."

Ms. Barger said another important issue faced by legislators are proposals to deregulate banking and allow interstate operation of banks.

She said Consumers Union was not against interstate banking, "but we want stronger disclosure laws and more safeguards to provide more protection for the average customer, particularly the low-income customer.

Another issue that will require continued vigilance by consumers in 1987 will be protecting homes from foreclosure through proposed mortgage law changes, Ms. Light-

Gov. Mark White's request that tion of new construction on the campuses would be delayed until after the next meeting of the Legislature in 1987. Clymer said emergency construction would be allowed.

Schools now requesting approval of new construction include Texas Tech, Southwest Texas State, Stephen F. Austin, Texas A&M, Texas A&I and the University of Houston.

Even schools with private funding will be prevented from building because of the increased cost of maintenance, Clymer said.

State records show that during the past five years, utility bills at state colleges and universities have increased from $77 million to $173 million. The cost per student increased from $293 to $646.

Baptist says gambling isn't the way for officials to solve state's budget crisis

By The Associated Press

Legalized gambling would be an immoral legislative response to the projected shortfall in state revenue, an associate of a Texas Baptist organization says.

'All issues ultimately are moral if you look deep enough," Weston Ware, an associate with the Christian Life Commission of the Baptist General Convention of Texas, said Monday. "It is a moral issue if the state chooses to make victims out of its citizens."

Ware was speaking in Beaumont to leaders of the Golden Triangle Baptist Association, summarizing the work of the commission in the 69th Legislature in 1985 and what legislators might propose in 1987.

The Christian Life Commission is the public policy agency of the Baptist General Convention of Texas, Ware said, adding that the agency chooses the issues on the basis of public policies good for all Texans.

'Texas is facing a $1.3 billion shortfall in this biennium," he said, and some economic forecasters have said that the state could fall $2 billion to $4 billion short in the biennium after that.

'Therefore, there will be great pressure on legislators to secure funds in any way possible," he

But legalized pari-mutuel gambling and a state lottery would lead to more compulsive gamblers, an increase in organized crime and a diminished respect for the law, Ware said.

"The state becomes a superbookie," he said.

In other political developments Monday, GOP gubernatorial candidate Kent Hance resurrected the issue that he used in the race for the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination in 1984 with a new television ad pledging to combat illegal immigration.

The commercial will be featured in 16 markets as Hance's campaign spends more than $550,000 on televison ads between now and the May 3 primary, campaign officials said. 'It's time to draw the line at the border on illegal aliens," Hance says in the ad. "As governor, I'll fight illegal immigration and I'll protect our Texas border."

taking Texans' jobs, crowding schools, driving up crime rates and raising taxes

In 1984, when Hance was engaged in a three-way race for the Democratic Senate nomination, he earned a spot in the runoff election after keying on illegal immigration during the last three weeks of the campaign.

Hance ultimately lost to former state Sen. Lloyd Doggett, and he switched parties in 1985. Recent opinion polls show him running even with Rep. Tom Loeffler, but both men trail former Gov. Bill Clements among Texans who say they plan to vote in the GOP

Nelson said Hance also will air a new ad keying on unemployment and the oil price slide.

Hance's campaign will spend a total of about $1 million on TV ads before the primary election, Nelson said. A week of ads aired in March, and a three-week blitz leading up to the primary cur-The ad says illegal aliens are rently is underway, he said.

The driver of the pickup, a compact Chevrolet, "was burned so badly you can't tell if it's male or female." said Fort Worth Fire Department spokesman Tommy

The tanker driver, Cellos J. Anderson Jr., of Fort Worth, escaped with minor injuries but "he's pretty rattled," a firefighter said.

Foam trucks from the Fort Worth Fire Department and the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport were dispatched, and some of the roaring flames were doused with foam, officials said.

Thousands gather for two-day celebration

SAN JACINTO STATE PARK. Texas (AP) — About 100,000 people trooped to the San Jacinto Battleground over two days to join the festivities commemorating the 150th anniversary of Texas' independence from Mexico

More than 21,000 people attended an afternoon ceremony Monday led by Vice President George Bush and Gov. Mark White. Standing in the shadow of the San Jacinto monument, they bowed their heads in tribute to the heroes who fought for freedom on the same land 150 years

"Freedom — that was what it was all about — freedom,'' said former congresswoman Barbara Jordan. "The battle marked the ending of an era of repression, and the beginning of a new friendship between Texans and Mexicans. In 18 minutes the battle on April

The "Star of Light" fireworks display above the monument took place while simultaneous fireworks flared in Austin, Corpus Christi, Waco, Dallas, Lubbock, El Paso, Longview, Beaumont and Brownsville.

"It's a proud day to be a Tex an," Bush said. "Today we re member when 150 years ago, 83! men in Sam Houston's army charged across the open field a San Jacinto and charged into his

Recorded for posterity

Yes, that was a picture of me on the front page of the paper Sunday, and I hope I never have to go through that again See, I was in the Pampa Sesquicentennial Show Monday and I played a pioneer woman who was talking about how hard life is in the eastern Panhandle, where there isn't even a Red Lobster or a Wendy's. The editor needed a local Sesquicentennial picture for the paper and the play director obliged by having cast members pose in costume. Since I was one of the few cast members in costume, I was plunked into position before I could protest.

The trouble is, having newspaper staff members pose for such photos does not jive with our policy against self-promotion. After all, there are hundreds of young ladies in Pampa who could have posed for that picture without having me do it. As a result, the boss didn't exactly stand up and give me a hug for posing for the picture.

But that was not the main reason I detested having my picture made. Just look at it. I'm so skinny. My nose is too big. My mouth just hangs open, making me look like an embicile. And there's that horrible overbite that thousands of dollars of orthodontia didn't correct. I could just see it now. One look at the front page and my mug ends up as a training target for somebody's new puppy. Still, the whole experience has given me an insight into why most of us don't like to have our pictures taken. Photographers hear the excuses all the time:

'Oh, do I have to be in the picture?"

"They always make my mouth-nose-eyes-ears-teeth too big."

"I just don't take good pictures."

"I'm going to look just awful." The photographers brush off the comments with "don't worry about it, you look fine

And the subjects usually do look fine. It's just that, in our own mind's eye, we'd like to see themselves as looking better.

Vanity. That's what it amounts to.

Our reaction to our own picture is similar to our reaction when we hear our own voices on tape. It just doesn't sound the same. When we talk, we hear the sounds inside our heads. The voice vibrations don't come in through our ears' canals and hit our ear drums or cochleas the same way it hits other people's.

The voice I hear on tape or in an echo seems more low-pitched than the voice I hear bouncing around inside my skull. My "real" voice sounds like I'm stumbling over my words, as if my tongue is too big for my mouth. Everyone else's voice sounds just right, why does the tape recorder have to change my voice? It's a wonder I was even accepted into speech class or in the school choir with a voice like that.

Vocal vanity Or is it?

When we see our own pictures or hear our own voices, we hardly ever blame the photographer or the recorder. Instead we blame ourselves because we really dont think we look or sound or walk or act as good as we'd like to look. We know it, but we don't want anyone else to know it. And we certainly don't want a picture or a tape recorder to prove it to anybody.

We just don't want to record our insecurity for posterity.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Conspiracy against consumer continues

A $100-million class-action lawsuit accusing three major grocery chains of conspiring to raise milk prices collapsed recently amid an admission from one of the plaintiffs' lawyers that "We did not have definite proof that they were, in fact, guilty. Probably it (the conspiracy) didn't exist. How odd it is that an unprovable allegation of a conspiracy among business firms to artificially inflate milk prices can lead to such sound, fury and litigation, whereas an utterly provable, open and successful conspiracy by the government to do the same thing elicits mostly yawns and murmurs that you can't fight city

Dairy price supports, paid for with money extracted forcibly from U.S. taxpayers, have stimulated the production of more dairy products than would be likely in a free market for decades. Prices of dairy products (and revenues of big dairy farmers) have been kept artificially high through the promise of government to purchase enough "surplus" products to manipulate prices - again at taxpayer expense. One result, of course, is that dairy products cost more than they would without government interference, a circumstance that most directly injures low-income Americans.

The latest twist in this bizarre program is that the government wants to subsidize the slaughter of nearly a million dairy cows — to "stabilize the market" after cruelly branding the cows on the face so no "mistakes" whereby they might escape slaughter, will be permitted to occur. Government programs, of course, destabilized the market in the first place, and cattlemen and now complaining — justifiably so — that the dairy cow slaughter will destabilize the beef market.

Thus the familiar pattern: one government program distorts one section of the market, "requiring another government program to "correct" the first distortion, but leading inevitably to yet another distortion. And taxpayers pay the bills for the whole charade while consumers pay artificially high prices.

Where' the bright ambitious lawver suit to overturn this conspiracy against consumers?

City claims another victim

NEW YORK - She wrote in the copybook that she hoped the top door was open. Then she walked down the five flights of stairs and went across the street to the 14-story public housing building and took the elevator to the top. The door to the roof was open. She walked out to the railing and looked down at the rectangular plot of grass running alongside the building. Her name was Valeria Polasek and, at 39, she felt her life was in shreds. She jumped into the spring air and made no sound until she hit the

That she could loathe life this much said everything about life in the city of New York at this time. There are streets of gold and when the gold ends, so many alleys of agony begin. Civic duty consists only of polishing the gold.

On 112th Street in East Harlem yesterday, the poor gathered to look at the dead body in the afternoon. Children from Our Lady Queen of Angels School, which is the next building, ran out and lined the chain-link fence. The smallest ones stood on playground climbing bars so they

On the other side of the street, a man Valeria lived with off and on, Samuel Rosario, 48, was walking to the barbershop. He stopped to look at Tito, the superintendent of Rosario's building, came running across the street to him. "That's Valeria," he said.

"How do you know?" Rosario said. "I looked.

Tito led Rosario across the street and onto the grass plot. A cop stood by the body, which had a white cloth over the face. He pulled the white cloth off the face and Rosario looked. Valeria's dead face was placid.

Rosario said nothing. He stood with Tito and watched the cop cover the face again.

Now, Rosario and Tito walked slowly away from the body and back across the street and went up the five flights to Rosario's apartment. A Catholic priest, the Rev. Raymond Hand, now walked in.

"Why did she go across the street to jump?" Rosario was asked.

"Because of this," Rosario said. He went to the Kitchen and thumped a crossbar. "She could not do it from here.

"When was she here last?" Rosario was asked.

"She was not here Saturday night. I don't know where she went. She was here yesterday. She was going to the clinic.'

"Four times I gave her mouth-to-mouth resuscitation right here on this floor," Tito said. "What was the matter with her?"

"She went to the methadone clinic," Rosario

"An addict?"

crowd now was larger.

Tito shrugged. "Around here? Around here all you have is drugs.

"All they do for her is give her pills," Rosario said. "They give her pills and tell her to go home. That is how they treat you at a clinic. Now a woman, Helen Hernandez, came in, speaking excitedly. She said she would stay with Rosario. The priest went back to the street with Tito. The body still had not been moved and the

"See up there?" Tito said. He pointed across to a high floor of the project. "The windows covered with white? That's where it comes from. I tell everybody, the police, the narcotics, the housing police. Nobody does anything. They sell all over the street.'

"They're right next to the school," I said to Tito. The kids from Our Lady Queen of Angels School now were packed against the fence so they could see the body.

"What do they care, schoolkids?" Tito said. "You should see it here on lunch break. They go in there and they sell to anybody. They sell to the kids; what do they care? They sell to the priests if they could."

Tito and Father Hand talked about funeral services while they waited for the ambulance to come and take the body away. They were standing on an empty lot that ran up the backs of house on the next street. The priest said that the lot and the houses were owned by the city and he was trying to get somebody in government interested in building on the lot and rehabilitating the houses, but nothing ever happens. "Nobody in this city is interested in the poor," he said. 'There is no heart left in this city. Only money."

Earlier yesterday, I had been looking at papers dealing with a housing discussion in the city, in which a builder had given $130,000 to politicians, and all involved say the $130,000 most certainly wasn't a bribe and that all involved are honest, and therefore city land on the golden West Side goes into ugly brick boxes that bring riches to developers. This is the business of city government at this time.

The business of the poor is to stand on 112th Street and stare at the body of Valeria Polasek. a victim of her city, who ended her young life on a spring day when she was supposed to hope, but could not.

MAUI, Hawaii -- Many Americans currently are trying to decide where to take their next vacation since Europe is now out. If you go to Europe, there is the distinct possi-faster than a terrorist attack - not even losing your Travelers' Checks or having an emergency root canal by an Italian dentist can compare. Allow me to suggest taking your next vacation in Hawaii. That is exactly what many of your fellow American travelers are going to do and is what I am doing. As the captain of the sailboat I chartered for four hours here in Maui said, "We're looking forward to our busiest summer in years. Who is brave enough to go anywhere outside the United States any more? If you already have been to Hawaii, go back. The scenery is still there, the lovely weather is still intact and the rate airlines are charging these days, you likely can get a fare about the same as what Greyhound charges between Bucksnort, Tenn., and Paducah, Ky. If you've never been to Hawaii, you owe it to yourself to go. It is one of God's greatest efforts. I honestly would like to stay here and start a new life for myself as a cabana boy at one of the pools (You make $25 a day and all the bikinis you can see, but I have to go home soon to check on my

1. Don't waste much time in Honolulu. Honolulu is a big city with lots of traffic. Go to Maui. It's a 20-minute flight. Maui is where people are sent when heaven is overbooked. 2. Do stay in Honolulu long enough to visit Pearl Harbor. While visiting, if 3,000 or 4,000 Japanese tourists show up with cameras, stick your tongue out at them and tell them to take a picture of that.

3. If you are visiting Maui and somebody tries to sell you tickets aboard the "Windjammer" for a "sunset dinner cruise" at $150 for four, don't go. The alleged open bar is a bunch of fruit punch, you have to eat your prime rib off your lap, the baked potato will fall on the deck and a lot of fat women will get up and try to learn how to hula.

4. There is a place on Maui that delivers Xrated movies and a VCR. I certainly didn't take part in such a thing, but I thought you would like to know about it.

5. Do not change your watch while in Hawaii. There's a five-hour difference with the East Coast and if you don't change your watch, you won't feel guilty about having your first drink at

6. Go to the Hyatt in Maui for breakfast. There is a bird in a cage there that can "meow" just like a cat, the food is tremendous and no fat ladies try to learn to hula while you're eating.

7. Take your golf clubs. The wind blows very hard on Maui and when it's behind you, you can hit a 9-iron as far as you usually hit your 4-iron. Refrain from standing near cliffs.

8. Charter a sailboat and go look for whales. Learn to scuba dive. Buy some Maui potato chips. Gorge yourself on fresh pineapple. Get a tan. Find your dogs a good new home before you leave, just in case.

Reagan wants to take up the Libya issue at Tokyo summit

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan says he "can't see any justification" for France's refusal to permit U.S. warplanes to fly over French territory en route to Libya but hopes to discuss the issue at the Tokyo summit next month "to see what we can work out together."

Reagan's harsh criticism followed reports that French President François Mitterrand told a U.S. envoy he would support the U.S. attack only if it were strong enough to be aimed at overthrowing Libyan strongman Moammar

Without naming Mitterrand, Reagan said some U.S. allies suggested a coordinated, "all-out" attack to force a change in Khadafy's policy of encouraging and aiding international terrorism.

In an interview with The Associated Press and other news agencies Monday, the president said the suggestions were "that we look seriously together at real major action" against Libya.

Published reports have said Ambassador Vernon Walters brought such a message from Mitterrand. Walters was in Paris to inform the French president and Premier Jacques Chirac of U.S. intentions shortly before last

"We found that some of them were suggesting that — not that the arswer be nothing of that kind but that we look seriously at, together, real major action against Libya," Reagan said. "Some of them suggested that ... if we were going to resort to force, that then perhaps it should be a wider-based and a more all-out effort to change the Libyan

Walters consulted with leaders in Great Britain, West Germany, France, Italy and Spain between April 11 and April 15. The bombing raid occurred early on the morning of April 15, Libyan time.

In related developments Monday, the Reagan administration praised the decision by Common Market nations to cut the staffs at Libyan embassies to the minimum and limit the movement of Libyan diplomats to help curb

"They send a clear message to Khadafy that the Europeans, like the United States, will not tolerate this scourge," State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb told a briefing.

Kalb also said the U.S. government has not determined whether Libya was responsible for the death of Peter Kilburn, an American who was found dead last week with two Britons in Lebanon. A note on the bodies said the three had been executed by the Arab Revolutionary Cells in retaliation for the U.S. air raid

The blame, said Kalb, "lies with the people who took these men hostage in the first place, and killed them, not with the people or the nations who are victims of terrorism."

In his interview, Reagan also said he worries whenever his wife Nancy "goes around the block" but that neither he nor the first lady has considered canceling her plan to travel separately to Malaysia and Thailand while he is in Asia.

Reagan said he is sorry if the U.S. attack against Libya killed children and innocent civilians.

Asked if he regretted that Khadafy's children were among the casualties, the president said, You regret any time children or innocent people are wounded or killed. ... On the other hand, I was equally sorry about a little baby that was blown out the side of an airplane and fell 15,000 feet to its death, along with his mother and grandmother.

Capone's secrets stay secret

CHICAGO (AP) - No bones, no bombs, no booze, no bullion. A mysterious vault linked to gangland czar "Scarface" Al Capone kept faith with a long line of mobsters brought in for questioning by telling nobody nothin'.

Thus ended a months-long, million-dollar adventure climaxed by the opening on live television Monday night of the vault at the Lexington Hotel.

Capone, who liked his spats pearl gray, his pajamas silk, his machine guns in working order and his associates silent, probably would have approved.

'It's always a disappointment when you don't find what you've been looking for for four months. .. I always thought there would be bones," said John Joslyn, coproducer of the two-hour "The Mystery Of Al Capone's Vaults." Excavators instead found what appeared to be several empty bottles of Prohibition-era "bathtub gin" and an old porcelain sign reading "Adams Express Co."

"I wonder if I can get a deposit on a 60-year-old bottle," said breathless TV host Geraldo Rivera

The discovery came before a worldwide TV audience and special agent Dennis Sansone of the Internal Revenue Service, which didn't want to miss a shot at collecting its due from one of the nation's most notorious tax Rediscovery of the chamber prompted the IRS to file a lien last year, seeking more than $800,000 in taxes, including penalties and interest.

A crew of about 30 workers, explosives experts and a small bulldozer taken apart and then reassembled in the hotel basement worked for nearly two hours to get at the secrets some believed Capone had sealed in a vault 125 feet long, 8 feet high and 8 feet

Capone moved into the hotel in 1928 and for the next seven years maintained his South Side head-is honeycombed with secret passages and tunnels. He left Chicago in 1932 to begin an eight-year stretch in federal prison for income-tax evasion. He died in Miami in 1947.

Speculation on what Capone left behind ranged from the bones of rivals to bags of money.

The work crew pulled down a ,000-pound concrete wall covering the vault's opening, used explosives to blast through a second wall, and moved enough dirt to fill two hours of television time.

They, along with Rivera, found an empty 12-foot-deep chamber concealing yet another wall.

That structure appeared to be a retaining wall designed to stop the flow of Lake Michigan to allow the hotel's construction, said Dennis Komac, an explosives expert hired by the program.

Joslyn said producers would decide later whether to continue

West Berlin officials say suspect brother of man arrested in Britain

BERLIN (AP) — A Palestinian arrested in connection with the nightclub bombing that killed an American soldier has been identified as the brother of a man accused in Britain of trying to bomb an Israeli airliner, West Berlin officials said today.

The suspect in the April 5 bombing of a discotheque in West Berlin, who was arrested Friday, was identified by Justice Ministry spokesman Walter Neuhaus as Ahmed Nawaf Mansur Hasi. The nighclub bombing in West Berlin killed a 21-year-old U.S. Army sergeant and a 28-year-old Turkish woman, and injured 230 others, 63 of them Americans. U.S. officials have said they had proof that Libya was responsible for the attack, and in retaliation U.S. warplanes attacked Libya last Tuesday. Neuhaus said the suspect in the Berlin bombing is the 36-year-old brother of a man identified by Scotland Yard as Nezar Hindawi. who was to appear in a London court today in connection with last week's attempted bombing of an El Al airliner.

A West German security source told The Associated Press on Monday that the arrest of the disco bombing suspect "came through the London case."

'It seems to be a hot tip that the two cases are connected, but we are still investigating this," said the source, who spoke Monday on condition of anonymity.

Neuhaus said Hasi was born in Jordan and has been living in the Tempelhof area of West Berlin, where police arrested him.

Hasi can be held indefinitely until police decide whether to press charges. Hindawi, 35, also was arrested on Friday, a day after his Irish girlfriend was stopped by El Al security guards at Heathrow Airport as she tried to board a Tel Aviv-bound jumbo jet with a bomb hidden in her bag. Scotland Yard said thewoman did not know she was carrying a bomb. and she was released after police questioned her.

West Berlin sources who declined to be identified said Monday they suspect the surnames of the two men differed on their identity documents because the papers carried by the man in London may be false.

Manfred Ganschow, the West Berlin police official heading the investigation into the bombing, said the man arrested in Berlin had an identification card saying he was a "stateless Palestinian Ganschow said the man was formally booked Sunday after about 100 witnesses to the bombing saw him in police lineups.

It was the first arrest reported in the investigation by a special 100-member commission of West Berlin and U.S. military police.

The Hamburg-based Bild newspaper said the Palestinian was carrying sketches of nightclubs, restaurants and other West Berlin spots popular with Americans when he was

Reagan will scuttle two submarines to heed SALT treaty, sources say

WASHINGTON (AP) - Presi- Reagan was sending two envoys trials May 20. Its 24 missiles sion, will order the destruction of two U.S. nuclear submarines to keep the United States within the limits of the controversial 1979 SALT II treaty with the Soviet Union, two U.S. officials said.

This will clear the way for a new Trident submarine with 24 missiles to begin sea trials next month without undercutting the unratified accord. "He's going that extra mile," an official, who demanded anonymity, said

He said the two Poseidon submarines, with 16 multiplewarhead missiles each, would be taken out of the U.S. nuclear fleet promptly and then destroyed over the next six months.

However, Reagan also has concluded it would be "militarily beneficial" to allow the treaty limits to be exceeded as new nuclear weapons become available toward the end of the year, another official said. But, the official said, if the Soviets comply with the treaty, the limits will be maintained. In two reports to Congress, the president has accused the Soviets of violating the agreement and other arms control accords. The accusations have been denied repeatedly by Moscow, which suggests changes in Soviet practices or in Reagan's interpretation of them are unlikely.

Also, the official said, the president intends to accelerate weapons programs not covered by the Strategic Arms Limitation The decision, contained in a memorandum, was described as 'tentative' in the sense that

Bomb explodes inside compound

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) - A bomb tossed from a passing car exploded inside the compound of the U.S. Consulate in the southern Thai city of Songkhla early today, officials said. No injuries were reported.

Mayor Prachoti Ekuru said he suspected the bombers were a group of eight to 10 pro-Libyan Moslems who recently arrived in Songkhla "for sabotage."

The group, from nearby Narathiwat province, included Thais and foreigners, Prachoti said without giving details.

The U.S. total of multiplewarhead missiles now stands at 1,198, just two below the limit set in the treaty signed by then-President Carter and the late Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev in

It was the last major arms control agreement by the two superpowers, setting limits on various categories of long-range nuclear weapons. Reagan denounced the pact in his campaign for the presidency in 1980 as "fatally flawed." In office, however, he promised the United States would not "undercut" its provisions provided the Soviets also observed the treaty.

The Trident is due to begin sea above the ceiling of 1,200 missiles with multiple warheads set by the 1979 treaty unless older missiles were destroyed.

Most of the president's advisers, including Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, urged him to permit the U.S. total to surpass the ceiling as a response to alleged Soviet violations.

pending what the Soviets do.

Only two senior advisers,

Secretary of State George Shultz and Paul H. Nitze, recommended the United States maintain its policy of not undercutting the treaty. Reagan came down on their side, taking the same position he did last year when he ordered a Poseidon dismantled before another Trident went to sea. Deputy charged with abducting his ex-wife TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — A Bowie County Sheriff's deputy was suspended from his job and charged with aggravated kidnapping after his ex-wife was abducted and left bound and gagged in a wooded area, police say.

David Caudle, 35, was released Monday on $30,000 bond, Bowie County Sheriff Thomas Hodge

Caudle is accused of stopping the car of his ex-wife, Linda Caudle, 31, just after midnight Sunday, forcing her into his patrol car and driving her to a wooded area where he left her bound and gagged, Wake Village Police Chief Daryl Clifton said.

After working her legs free, Ms. Caudle told officers, she walked to a road, where a motorist picked her up and gave her a ride to the Oak Manor Nursing Home where she works as a licensed vocational nurse.

She was treated for minor injuries to her shoulder and released from a Texarkana hospital, Hodge said.

After Ms. Caudle signed complaints against her former husband, warrants were issued for his arrest. Caudle turned himself in, and records show he was arrested at the Bi-State Justice Building later Monday morning.

'After charges were filed and bond was set, Mr. Caudle was suspended without pay," Hodge told the Texarkana Gazette.

The case was turned over to Wake Village police because that's where the Ms. Caudle says

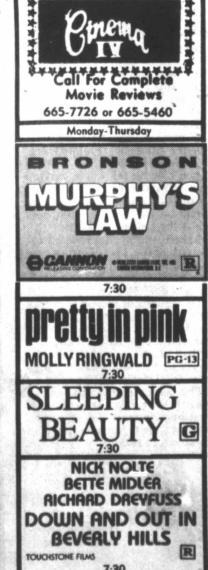

Caudle has worked at the sheriff's office since April 15, 1985. He had been a patrolman with the Texarkana, Texas, police from April 1978 through January 1985, Hodge said.

The Caudles' divorce, their second from each other, was finalized last Wednesday, Bowie County court records show. The couple first divorced in November 1979, but remarried in November 1982.

too political for White House meeting, aide says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas was not among the states represented by governors meeting today with President Reagan because Democrat Mark White would "probably misuse" the meeting for political purposes, says a White House aide.

Reagan is scheduled to meet with governors from Oklahoma, West Virginia and Wyoming. Although White wanted to come, too, he was not invited because of 'a recognition that someone who has taken a political approach to this subject from the beginning would probably misuse this forum," presidential assistant Mitch Daniels said Monday.

White, who is running for reelection, said when the attendees at the meeting were announced last week that he thought it was a "mistake" to exclude a governor from a large oil state but that the president already well knew his position on the issue.

"I am very pleased that the president is meeting with some of the oil-producing states," White said. "And if they will listen to the governors that are going up there, then I'm very hopeful we'll see action out of the administra-

Other Democrats, though, said the White House was "playing politics" by excluding White.

White has asked Reagan to impose an oil import fee to stabilize oil prices, which have dropped by as much as two-thirds from last year's level due to an OPECinduced glut on the world market. Reagan opposes import fees.

Daniels said the meeting was limited to the two Democrats and a Republican from different regions because "we thought that it would be a more useful meeting if it were small and if, frankly, it were composed of people who would take a constructive rather than a purely political approach to the problem.

Daniels said the meeting was requested by Nigh, also a Democrat, but White "tried hard to in-

Americans evacuate West Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Ten Americans who had remained in west Beirut despite the threat of kidnapping by Islamic extremists evacuated the Moslem sector of the city today under heavy guard by militiamen and police.

The Americans joined dozens of Britons and other Westerners who fled Moslem west Beirut over the weekend because of the threat of kidnappings by terrorists seeking to avenge the U.S. air strike on Libva a week ago.

Police said Christian and Moslem militia snipers held their fire as two buses carrying the Americans and six jeeploads of police rolled past the Green Line and into Christian east Beirut.

The policemen escorted the Americans through east Beirut to the American Embassy in the Christian suburb of Aukar, 12 miles north of the capital.

Druse militiamen escorted the convoy on the 15-minute drive through west Beirut. They kept the doors of their cars open during the trip, and kept their fingers ready on the triggers of the Kalashnikov rifles they thrust through the door opening. Drivers blared their horns.

The evacuation began at first light today when the Americans, some of them in tears, began assembling at the former U.S. consulate in west Beirut's Ein Mreisseh seaside boulevard.

At least three evacuees were professors at the American University. Another worked at the French-run College Protestant Francais, and one at the Rashideen International Language Center, a privately owned institute. The rest refused to talk to reporters. 'Terrible,'' said AUB politicial science professor Philip Grant, 45, of Santa Barbara, Calif., when asked how he felt about leaving west Beirut. The grim-faced Grant said he did not think he would return to the Moslem sector of the Lebanese capital.

Asked whether he hated west Beirut after last Thursday's slaying of an one American and two British captives, he said, "Yes, I do."

The exodus of Westerners was touched off by the slaying last week of kidnapped American librarian Peter Kilburn and two British teachers, and the abduction of British television cameraman John McCarthy.

The American community, which once numbered in thousands in west Beirut, began leaving after Lebanon's civil war broke out in 1975.

Nigh, who with White co-hosted a meeting of oil state governors in Dallas last week, said he wanted White at the meeting.

"I know of no other governor more concerned about the light of the oil and gas industry than Mark White," Nigh said. "It would be appropriate that he be cularly since Texas produces almost one-third of the nation's

"I think it is an insult to the people of Texas," said Democratic National Committee spokesman Terry Michael.

"It's really outrageous that the administration has decided to play politics with the economic well-being of people who have lost their jobs because of a crisis that has affected Texas as much or more than any other state," he said. "It's not even logical, it's not rational to exclude the chief executive from those talks. There's no way it can be justified."

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said it was a "mistake" for the White House to seek "partisan advantage in this fashion."

But Texas Republican Party Chairman George Strake said White "has proven that what he wants to do is embarrass the president."

"I don't know why he (White) wasn't invited. I'm just saying it doesn't make me think we're not getting a fair hearing by not hav-ing him there,'' Strake said. Daniels said "Texas' voice will be heard" when Rep. Bill Archer, R-Houston, and other House members meet with Reagan on energy issues. Their meeting is scheduled for today, also.

Major banks cut prime rate to 8.5 percent

NEW YORK (AP) - Broad sectors of the economy - from large borrowers to consumers should benefit from the reduction of the prime lending rate by the nation's top 10 banks to its lowest level in nearly eight years, analysts say.

Monday's half-point reduction pushed the prime rate, a benchmark used in figuring interest rates on loans to banks' biggest customers, to 8.5 percent.

Economists said the prime rate cut reduces business costs, which combined with low inflation and the falling value of the dollar in foreign exchange could help nurture a long-awaited economic re-

"The first impact of that will be higher profits, but then it could show up in lower (consumer) prices," said James E. Annable. chief economist for First Chicago

The prime rate cuts were made three days after the Federal Reserve Board lowered its discount rate — the interest it charges on loans to commercial banks from 7 percent to 6.5 percent.

Chase Manhattan Bank of New York, the nation's third largest bank, opened the latest round of reductions. That was followed by the rest of the top 10. The last time the major banks set their prime at 8.5 percent was in June 1978.

Interest rates in the credit markets already have fallen to levels not seen since the late 1970s, largely because of the sharp drop in world oil prices, which is expected to keep inflation subdued.

The continuing drop in open market interest rates has reduced the banks' cost of borrowing money, enabling them to cut their prime rate and other lending rates without sacrificing their profit margins.

FOR FALL, an example of Howard Wolfe's skirt-jacket combinations.

Designer to preview fall styles here

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Lifestyles Editor

To most of us, it's just barely getting warm enough to start thinking about spring clothes, but fashion designers are thinking way ahead. They're already previewing their fall lines.

Pampans can get a glimpse of one designer's line, The Howard Wolfe collection, Wednesday and Thursday, from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. at Behrman's in downtown Pampa.

And we have something to look forward to this fall, if what we hear from Howard Wolfe representatives is true. We can look for lots of deep, rich primary colors and much more feminine look, says Robert Wolfe, president of the firm his father, Howard Wolfe, began in Dallas 40 years ago. "There's an emphasis on cotton, cotton prints and lots of florals," the younger Wolfe says. And he says the collection will feature the new shaped jackets in the long and short variety. His line also continues the popular full, long skirts and cotton, easy-to-wear dresses.

"We like color," he says. "We never begin a story without color. There'll be deep and rich primary colors. And we're basing a lot in white "Clothes are more feminine than they've been in the past — more ladylike," he adds.

Howard Wolfe is to give an "extensive presentation" of exclusive prints they've designed," Wolfe says. "We'll have a lot of transitional cottons with a feeling of 'Out of Africa.' We call it the "Explorer Group."

A group in deep burgandy and green wool flannel is also included in the fall preview, he says. Denims continue to be featured for casual wear. But here, Howard Wolfe has brought something new to the denim scene.

Johnathon Hoenscheidt, head designer for Howard Wolfe, says he has had the mills the company has used to make their denim taken the yarns used for the denim and knitted them into sweaters. "They'll fade right along with the jeans," he says.

Hoenscheidt characterizes the fall line as "very fun, very forward." Clothing styles range to fit every figure, from the tightly fitted to the "loose, casual approach." Silhouettes are long, he says. A very large coat "in one-size fits all" is made to coordinate with all the fall clothes, he Colors range from the demure khakis of the Explorer group to a starburst plaid in very light cotton, he says. Brightly colored shirts in red, yello, and indigo go with the many different skirts and pants. An extra wide, 3-inch, natural belt accentuates the waistline.

"We have khaki, red, witner white, black, checks and stripes, denims and tweeds. There's a variety to carry our customer through her entire wardrobe," according to the designer. "It's a fresh look for Howard Wolfe."

Robert Wolfe says Howard wolfe was one of the first in Dallas to bring innovative fashion design to the west. "It's encouraging to see that it's all made in Texas," he adds.

Museum hosts quilt exhibit premiere

Selected from more than 3,500 quilts discovered in two-year, 27-city search across the state, the historic textiles are to be displayed through June 8.

In conjunction with the show's opening at 3 p.m., Suzanne Yabsley, author of Texas Quilts, Texas Women, will lecture on quilting in Texas. Yabsley, originally from Anton, is a quilter and writer. She has published widely on quilting as well as on a variety of topics. The lecture is to be conducted in the second floor Audio-visual Gallery. Also at 3 p.m., a preview reception begins in the Galleries of Art.

The museum's premiere opening culminates the week-long celebration of Texas Quilt Appreciation Week commemorating the Texas Sesquicentennial. On March 13, Governor Mark White officially proclaimed April 18-27 as a time for the state's citizens to "honor quilt makers of Texas" past, her present and her future."

Sponsored by the Texas Sesquicentennial Quilt Association, the "Lone Stars," exhibit officially opens Texas Quilt Appreciation Week. Sixty-two historic quilts will be unveiled in the Rotunda of the State Capitol Building and will remain there through San Jacinto Day, April 21, said JoAnne Arasim, curator of textiles.

Then a shortened version of "Lone Stars" will make its traveling debut at the Panhandle-Plains Museum, she said, adding that this is the exhibit's first stop on an 18-month tour of Texas

"Thre Panhandle quilts were selected to be part of the traveling 'Lone Stars' display," Arasim said. "Rose of Sharon Variation' is one of them. It won top honors at the Museum Quilt Roundup Day in March 1985 and dates from 1845-1860. It's owned by Iris O'Rear of St. Vrain, N.M. 'Four Season Sampler,' dating from 1932, is owned by June McMeans of Amarillo, and 'Diamond Back Rattlesnake,' dating from 1880 is owned by Margaret Brock of Dalhart. Each of these quilts were selected from 198 entrants in the Museum's 1985 Quilt Roundup competition. Six other Panhandle quilts are part of the main 'Lone Stars' exhibit,' she added.

"The exhibit was created to honor Texas quiltmakers, who practiced a time-honored craft and made it an individual expression of experiences," said Arasim. "The artistic aspect of quilting allowed women to express themselves in a time period when women's self-expression was not encouraged. Plus, they didn't have time to write, paint or indulge in those types of activities. Quilting allowed them to be practical and creative at the same time," she noted.

The historical and artistic aspects are both an important part of the "Lone Stars" presentation. Bruce Harman, the museum's curator of art, says quiltmakers are now being recognized for their use of design and color. "While created in a completely different context, century-old quilts are now being compared with the works of such recent painters as Josef Albers, Morris Louis, and Kenneth Noland.

"In addition to design, the most striking feature of this exhibit's quilts is their use of color. Every possible color combination seems to have been used. While 'Diamond Back Rattlesnake' was done in muted, subtle shades, 'Stars and Stripes' is a riot of bright blues and rade." he said bright blues and reds," he said.

Much attention has been focused on American folk art, and quilts are some of the most inventive and dramatic examples of this art form. "Four Seasons," for example, magnificently expresses a quilter's sensitivity to color, form and composition. "It's a work of great charm and visual strength," Hartman explained.

Quilt designs are often based on traditional patterns, and the function of quilts has been utilitarian. But endless variations and innovations establish quiltmaking as one of America's richest artistic traditions, he noted.

DEAR FRAN AND PATTY: Your husbands apparently used the axiom that the best defense is a strong offense, and it worked. Too bad you "ex-private eyes" didn't realize that "one picture is worth 10,000 words." Next time, take a camera along.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old boy who reads your column every day and I really enjoy it. But I have spotted something in your solutions that bothers me. Ninety percent of the time you tell your readers to get some kind of counseling.

In one letter a couple was having trouble with their sex life. Of course you told them to see a marriage counselor. Come on, Abby, they wrote to you for advice. I'm sure anyone could have told them to go find a counselor.

Don't get me wrong, some of your answers are great, but when you say, "See a counselor," you are passing the buck.

DEAR J.A.S.: I realize that I often recommend counseling, but believe me, I'm not passing the buck. I wouldn't presume to offer an instant solution to a problem that requires many sessions with a counselor or psychotherapist. Some readers tell me only one side of it; a trained counselor is able to probe the situation in depth.

Please read on:

DEAR ABBY: Please don't apologize for recommending counseling so often. You may sound like a "broken record" and some people accuse you of using it as a cop-out, but believe me, I am on your side. I am a 20-year-old university student who wrote to you because I was having some heavy problems I couldn't handle. You told me that counseling was my only hope and suggested I go to the counseling center at the university. (I knew it was there, but never got up the nerve to go.) After I got your letter, I walked into the counseling center and was given an appointment with a very compassionate man who has helped me enormously. After only two visits I feel so much better about myself. All I needed was someone I could be totally honest with.

I'm sure other universities offer the same service—and it's free for students. So keep telling people to get counseling, Abby. It's not a cop-out. I used to think so, but not anymore.

OCCASIONAL FURNITURE
There are times when rooms are furnished nicely - but they lack "something special", some special pieces of furniture that not only make a room look outstanding but also serve a needed purpose.

That's what so-called occasional furniture can do for you. And by occasional furniture we mean things like curios, etageres, bookcases, secretaries, consoles, portable bars, cabinets, odd chests and any number of other pieces.

This kind of furniture can be a wonderful addition to a room from both a beauty and a practical standpoint.

On the beauty side, such a piece can bring a decorator touch to a room and provide attractive variety. On the practical side, a piece of occasional furniture can work hard for you serving a useful function.

Rob de Castella had to fight off little more than a heavy-set young spectator who got in his way. Ingrid Kristiansen's biggest challenge came from a queasy stomach

If competition was absent from Monday's Boston Marathon, big names and big money made up for it.

'The tradition of Boston is still there," said four-time winner Bill Rodgers, who, at age 38, finished a stunning fourth in his 14th Boston Marathon. "It's good to see it come back. The race has been raised to a new level. It's a spectacular event.

And de Castella and Kristiansen, the favorites and two of the greatest marathoners of the decade, ran spectacular races.

De Castella, an Australian with a drooping mustache, conquered the hills and valleys along the testing 26-mile, 385-yard route in a course record of 2 hours, 7 minutes and 51 seconds, the thirdfastest marathon of all time.

Kristiansen, a Norwegian, perservered despite a painful abdomen to post a time of 2:24:55, second-fastest Boston Marathon by a woman and the ninth-best ever by a woman.

Kentucky Derby favorite...Snow Chief.

Consecutive victories make Snow Chief Derby favorite

By DICK JOYCE AP Sports Writer

Just by skipping the final major prep races, the stock of Snow Chief has jumped for the May 3 Kentucky Derby.

The colt will go into the first leg of the Triple Crown for 3year-olds with almost a month's rest from competitive racing and seemingly with little to fear from the cast of challengers

Snow Chief, who has won $1.7 million, became the Derby future-book favorite after con-Camino Real Derby at Bay Meadows, the Florida Derby at Gulfstream Park and the Santa Anita Derby April 6.

Badger Land, the second early Derby pick, also is resting on his laurels after winning the April 5 Flamingo at Hialeah in impressive fashion. But he was second to Snow Chief in both the El Camino and Florida Derby earlier this

No 3-year-old has asserted himself enough since their long layoffs to change things. To keep his mind on business, Snow Chief worked a mile in 1:38 2-5 Sunday between races at Santa Anita.

"He flies the last three furlongs," jockey Alex Solis said. 'We finished very strong." Last Saturday's Wood was regarded as having the best field among last Saturday's four 11/8-mile prep races — an eighth of a mile shorter than the Derby grind.

But the Wood tarnished the image of Mogambo although he'll still go in the Derby — and sent Tasso to the barn for a rest after suffering cuts on his left hind leg during dale announced Sunday that Tasso, who placed fourth, would skip the Derby because of the cuts.

Both were considered the East's leading contenders for the Derby.

The Wood winner, Broad Brush, completed the distance in 1:50 3-5, struggling over the last eighth of a mile in 14 2-5 seconds, a half-length in front of Mogambo. He carried the Derby weight of 126 pounds, as did the remainder of the Wood field.

trainer Richard Small hesitant about committing his Maryland-bred to the Derby.

Mogambo, the Gotham winner April 5, has yet to win two races in a row, but Leroy Jolley is sending the colt to Louisville because "he has shown to me he now can handle the distance and carry the weight."

Saturday's other Derby prep winners were Fobby Forbes in the Garden State Stakes, Ver-Derby and Rampage in the Arkansas Derby.

As of Sunday, only Fobby Forbes and Vernon Castle were set for the Derby from those races.

The leading challenger to Snow Chief may yet come from Thursday's Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland, which is expected to draw a field of 10.

Snow Chief figures to be the strongest Derby favorite since Spectacular Bid in 1979 unless some colt turns in a spectacular performance in the Blue

Middle school track record broken

DUMAS — Doug Budd set a new Pampa Middle School record in the 300 low hurdles during a track and field meet at Dumas last weekend.

Budd, an eighth grader, ran a 42.29 in the hurdles event to take first place. Budd also won the 110 high hurdles with a time of 17.49: Both of Pampa's 1600 and 3200 relay teams came in first.

The Pampa eighth graders came in second in the meet.

Pampa was sixth in the seventh-grade division. The Pampa teams compete in

WERE FIGHTING FOR YOUR LIFE

with Legends golf Bolt unhap

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Tommy Bolt and Sam Snead are plotting to show some younger members of the Legends of Golf, like Arnold Palmer and Gary Player, a thing or two.

Bolt, 70, became unhappy recently when he found the Legends pairings system would allow younger players to team up, increasing their chances of winning the $100,000 first prize.

"You can't put two 50-year-old guys together," said Bolt. "They should pair a guy in his 50s with a guy in his 60s. But nobody realizes it when they are 50 (the minimum age)." Bolt's dissatisfaction surfaced last year when he learned that Palmer, then 55, would be paired with Legends rookie Player for the 1986 tournament.

"It's not right," Bolt said. Bolt will attempt to get even by teaming up with Sam Snead, 73, beginning Thursday at the Onion Creek Club. Snead played with rookie Lee

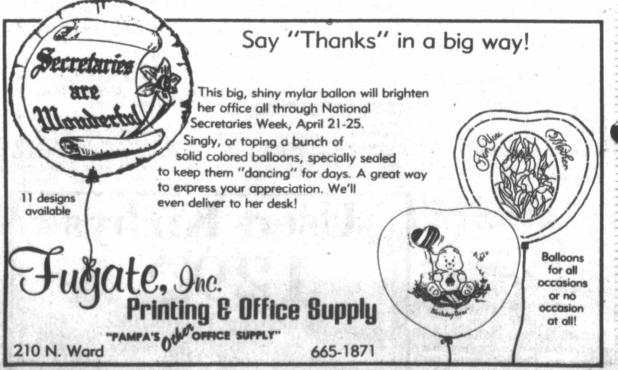

Elder last year, but was dropped by Elder in favor of rookie Chi Chi Rodriguez. "We've got a chance to win," said Bolt, despite the fact that neither he nor Snead are regulars on the seniors tour. "It's not a long course (6,356 yards)."

Pairings are made by the players, sometimes with assistance from Fred Raphael, the tournament's creator. Occasionally they are made at Raphael's urging.

'Basically, the way it works is that when I invite players, I encourage them to pick the guys they want to play with," Raphael said. "Sometimes guys don't know who to play with and I match them up. This year, for example, Art Wall and Al Balding were looking for someone."

Surprising Giants in first

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON AP Sports Writer

Good chili is supposed to be hot like Chili Davis. After batting just .151 with nary an extra-base hit through San Francisco's first 11 games, Davis has hit three home runs in the last two contests, including a pair in Monday night's 5-1 triumph over the Los Angeles Dodgers. The surprising Giants, 9-4, thus moved into first place in the National League West, one-half game ahead of Houston, and the team that won only seven games last April and finished last with a

62-100 record is five games over

.500 for the first time since June 4,

"I'm hitting the ball hard again and it feels good," Davis said. "We're starting to believe we can win and that we're supposed to win."

In the only other NL games, New York came from behind three times to nip Pittsburgh 6-5 and Atlanta bombed Houston 8-2. The St. Louis-Chicago game was postponed because of a forecast of snow.

Davis homered to lead off the Giants' second against Rick Honeycutt. In the fourth, Jeffrey Leonard got a leadoff single and Davis hit his second home run. The Giants added a run in the fourth on Rob Thompson's single and Jose Uribe's double and Thompson had an RBI single in the sixth

That was more than enough support for Roger Mason, who pitched a three-hitter as the Dodgers suffered their 10th defeat in 14 games. Ken Landreaux's fourth-inning homer produced their only run.

Mets 6, Pirates 5

The Mets' game was coming from behind in extending their winning streak to four games. They did it three times, capped by a two-run rally against Pat Clements and Jim Winn in the ninth inning on Len Dykstra's single, a sacrifice, Tim Teufel's game-tying double and Gary Carter's RBI single.

Jim Morrison and Mike Brown homered for the Pirates, who blew leads of 2-0, 4-2 and 5-4 and had their five-game winning streak snapped. Carter hit a tworun homer off Larry McWilliams in the third inning to wipe out Pittsburgh's first lead and Ray Knight hit a two-run shot off Cecilio Guante in the eighth.

Braves 8, Astros 2

Glenn Hubbard hit a three-run homer in the second inning and Bob Horner added a two-run blast in the third as Joe Johnson scattered eight hits in outpitching strikeout king Nolan Ryan. Six of the nine hits Ryan yielded before leaving in the fourth inning went for extra bases. Rafael Ramirez drove in Atlanta's final three runs with a pair of doubles.

"I've seen him (Ryan) have better nights," said Horner. "He's a great pitcher with a great career. That wasn't typical Nolan Ryan out there."

Ryan wasn't happy about anything. "If I had to rate all the ballparks in the National League, this one (Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium) would be among my least favorite," he said. "I can't recall any outstanding game I've

Pirates sue Dave Parker

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Dave Parker, whose weight ballooned and batting average dropped after he signed a record contract in 1979, is being sued by the Pittsburgh Pirates in a possibly precedent-setting court case resulting from his former use of cocaine.

The Pirates, who adopted the slogan "The New Bucs: We Play Hardball" when new owners took control this season, apparently believe the motto should fit the team off the field as well as on it.

Pirates President Malcolm "Mac" Prine, announcing the suit Monday in a brief news conference, charged the All-Star outfielder breached the five-year contract by failing to reveal his cocaine use.

The lawsuit attempts to block $5.3 million in deferred payments owed Parker, who is scheduled to receive a $944,445 payment in January 1988 and regular monthly payments of nearly $20,000 for the subsequent 20 years. The first action of its kind filed by a major league baseball team against a player, the suit, if successful, could set a precedent in the future negotiating of contracts. Many players now have deferred payment clauses in their contracts.

The Pirates apparently are basing the suit on a clause in the 15-page contract in which Parker certified he had "no physical or mental defects known to him ... which would prevent or impair performance of his services.

Parker, reached at his Cincinnati home shortly after the suit was announced, said, "I don't know anything about it. None of those people have called me, so I can't really comment until I know about it."

After a team workout Monday afternoon at Riverfront Stadium, Parker told the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette: "Oh man, this is just another hurdle, another hurdle

I've got to leap. Why don't they just leave me alone?

Chuck Berry, a member the Pittsburgh law firm that represents Parker, said: "Obviously, our position is the money is still

"He has already played during the years in question and for each one of those years he played, a certain amount of dollars were credited to a deferred compensation fund. Yes, he played; yes, he earned that," said Berry.

The lawsuit contends the Pirates were unaware of Parker's cocaine use until the trial of convicted cocaine dealer Curtis Strong last September. Parker, who admitted buying cocaine from Strong, testified he often used cocaine with other players because it once was "the 'in' thing to do."

After signing the contract, Parker "stole fewer bases, his fielding ability significantly deteriorated and he generally failed to perform up to the level achived by him prior to 1979," according to the suit.

"Also of significance, he failed to keep himself in good physical condition, with his weight ballooning at times to in excess of 280 pounds, a result of which he became injury-prone."

The Pirates will make no effort to recover the estimated $2,125,000 already paid Parker. His base salary for each of the five seasons was $300,000 and he also was to receive a $625,000 signing bonus in a total package worth more than $7.4 million.

Bowling roundup

DALLAS — "I enjoy bowling and coming to the tournaments, but I never thought I would do this good. I'm very proud of myself."

That was the statement of Lucy Arebalo of Pampa after she took the lead with a 575 series in Class D singles after the fourth week of competition in the Texas Women's Bowling Association Tournament. Tammy Hill, also of Pampa, had just moved into first place the weekend before with her 544 series. Hill is second in singles and third in Class D allevents with a 1,524 series.

Hill and Kathy Haiduk stand third in Class C doubles with a

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Federal agencies along the border have been issued a profile to help them detect possible terrorists attempting to enter the United States, authorities say.

"We know there's been an increase of trafficking in the Middle East of false and stolen passports," said Duke Austin, an Immigration and Naturalization Service spokesman in Washington. "It's easy, for example, for a Libyan to get a Moroccan passport."

The profile includes a list of Middle Eastern countries that have "historically fostered terrorism against the United States and the world," said Au-

The INS, U.S. Border Patrol and U.S. Customs officials have been told to look more closely at people bearing passports from those countries, which Austin declined to name.

Officials were reluctant to disclose precise information contained in the profiles. However, Austin said the profiles do not contain physical descriptions of likely terrorists.

"All terrorists don't look alike," said Austin. "I wish it were that easy." Terrorists trying to enter the country would probably have a physical appearance that would let them blend in with the rest of the population, said Larry Richardson, chief Border Patrol agent for the El Paso district.

The agencies have taken no particular measures and agents at the border do not have special training for dealing with suspected terrorists. Customs inspectors use the same techniques employed in spotting drug smugglers. said Ruben Saenz chief Customs inspector for the El Paso district.

'We look at their luggage. Is it expensive? Where was it made? Does it go with the type of person, the amount of clothes? Does it go with the length of stay?" Saenz said. "It's a matter of asking questions until they (inspectors) are satisfied."

At the same time, local heads of federal agencies acknowlege it is difficult to deter terrorists from crossing the border, either through Mexico of Canada.

"If you're talking about terroristproof as in waterproof — to make an impregnable barrier — I think that's unrealistic," said John J. Ingham, INS deputy district director in Buffalo, N.Y., which monitors the 4,139-mile U.S.-Canada border.

We see a lot of people who don't need specific documentation — unlike the Mexican border — so we look for the impostors, the false passports and such.

Federal agencies have complained in the past that it's easy even for illegal aliens to wade across the Rio Grande or walk across the border because of insufficient manpower to guard the vast, empty spaces of the Southwest.

"The best we can do is be alert to the possibility of terrorist activity," said Richardson. "An unarmed terrorist, someone handled routinely, would have a lot of odds in his favor.

Passports, birth certificates and visas are being checked more thorour hly, said Al Giugni, INS district director in El Paso.

"We did not beef up the staff," Giugni said. "We just apprised all the agents, all the inspectors that because of this threat they should be on the lookout.'

Intelligence on possible terrorist movements is shared by the three agencies, which work closely with their Mexican counterparts and U.S. police and sheriff's departments.

However, it's probable that a terrorist would shun ports of entry, where federal officials would scrutinize documents, said Giugni.

'Because of the ease with which people can enter ... a person who wanted to enter would have a better chance of doing it between the points" of normal entry, he said.

Border agencies have been aware of the terrorist threat for some time, said John Miller, public affairs specialist for the U.S. Customs Service Pacific Region.

"We've been looking for terrorists and collecting information on that type of activity since the Marine barracks incident in Beirut," said Miller. He was refering to the October 1983 bombing attack that killed 241 members of the Marine peacekeeping force in Lebanon.

The Treasury Enforcement Communication System, with headquarters in San Diego, is a huge computer file used by border agents around the country, Miller said. The file contains information that lets Customs agents check for drug smugglers, alien smugglers and terrorists.

Interest charges on bank credit cards averages 19.37 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bank credit cards carry an average interest rate of 19.37 percent, but consumers can find rates below 18 percent in at least 51 financial institutions, according to a congressman who says banks are charging too much.

Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said Monday banks pay an average 9.24 percent for their funds, making the markup for credit cards greater than 100 percent.

Credit card interest rates could have been more than 4 points lower if banks made the same profit on the cards that they earned on other types of loans, Schumer told a news conference

The nation's 71.6 million card holders could have saved an average of $41.26 in 1985 at the lower rates, he said, adding that credit card interest should be dropping like other interest

Kirk Willison, a spokesman for the American Bankers Association, said credit cards are "much more than a loan'' to consumers, and the interest should be considered a service charge. Customers get cash advances, monthly statements that can be used for tax purposes and a way of producing identification, he said Willison said credit card rates have remained stable between 17 percent and 19 percent since the early 1970s.

When the prime rate was 20 percent some five years ago, credit card rates were 18 percent, he said.

But Schumer commented, "Everywhere you look, interest rates are falling except for credit cards. Banks have been overcharging customers for their cards — a markup of more than 100 percent. Competition is not working."

The lawmaker said banks made a $3.6 billion net profit before taxes on their credit card business in 1985, and profits on bank cards were 5.37 percent - more than five times the average profit made by the banking industry on overall lending.

Schumer said he compiled the information from research conducted by the Federal Reserve Board and the Nilson Report, a credit card industry newsletter. Schumer said he is introducing a bill that would force financial institutions to disclose their credit card interest rates, annual fees and grace periods in any applications and mail solicitations. He previously sponsored legislation for a credit card cap, but acknowledged there is not enough support for passage.

Schumer said his list of 51 banks charging less than 18 percent does not include all such banks in the country with these rates

Pentagon believes air raid on Libya proved high tech benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — When U.S. Air Force and Navy bombers raided Libyan targets last week, they were flying a mission that probably wouldn't have been attempted five years ago.

And by pulling it off with the loss of just one aircraft, Pentagon officials believe they struck a different kind of blow at home — demonstrating to congressional critics the United States' military punch is more potent because of the embrace of high technology.

They believe this because for all the complaints about skyrocketing arms costs, last week's bombing raids depended upon sophisticated, expensive weaponry. And there is evidence to suggest that weaponry helped limit U.S. casualties "Operation El Dorado Canyon" was not without its problems. Five of the 18 F-111 bombers and two of the 14 A-6 attack jets sent on the mission never dropped a bomb because of mechanical or other unexplained problems.

The strike also was clearly less than "surgical," given some extensive damage that occurred in civilian areas. Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims has acknowledged that damage to at least one of the five targets was not what had been hoped. And Defense Department sources said the one F-111 that failed to return may well have been struck by Libyan anti-aircraft

Nonetheless, five different targets were struck by surprise, simultaneously, at 2 a.m. (Libya time), and damage was inflicted at all five sites, Sims noted last week.

Five years ago, Air Force officials said Monday, the F-111s could not have mounted the same type of attack. Known by the rather inglorious nickname of Aardvark, the F-111 was last built in 1976. But in 1981, the service began retrofitting the plane with a new infrared targeting and laser-guidance combing system.

Known as Pave Tack, the system is built by the Ford Aerospace & Communications Corp. for $1.3 million per copy. The Navy deployed a similar system, known as TRAM (Target Recognition Attack Multisensor) and built by Hughes Aircraft, on carrier-based A-6 planes for the first time in 1980.

The significance of the computerized TRAM and Pave Tack systems, officials explained, is that it allows jet aircraft to maintain high speeds while bombing close to the ground — at

The F-111s flew more than 2,700 miles one way before roaring in off the Mediterranean Sea less than 500 feet high at 575 miles per hour — or well more than nine miles per minute

Supreme Court will decide if AIDS victims can be considered handicapped, protected against discrimination

CRACKERS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid growing fears over the spread of AIDS, the Supreme Court is planning to decide whether public schools and other federal aid recipients may discriminate against those with contagious diseases.

The justices on Monday set the stage for a ruling next year to determine whether a carrier of a contagious disease — including the AIDS virus — may be considered a "handicapped" person protected by federal law against discrimination.

In a case involving a Florida school teacher, the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in 1985 that the federal law banning discrimination against the handicapped applies to contagious diseases.

In most states, the issue of who bears the burden of proof in such cases has remained cloudy under state laws.

Court, Nassau County, Fla., school officials said the appeals court decision could have "disastrous consequences." AIDS—or aquired immune de-

AIDS—or aquired immune deficiency syndrome— is a viral disease that can kill its victims by destroying their immune system and leaving them vulnerable to other diseases.

The Center for Disease Control in Atlanta said this month that 18,070 cases of AIDS have been reported nationwide and that 9,591 of those people had died. No one has recovered from the disease.

The Florida case involves a woman, Gene H. Arline, who was diagnosed as having tuberculosis, an infectious respiratory dis-

She was fired as a third grade teacher by the Nassau County school board and she sued in federal court.

In 1983, a federal judge threw out the suit. But the 11th Circuit court reinstated it last Sept. 30. In other actions Monday, the court:

—Let stand a federal law exposing buyers of child pornography to stiff criminal penalties. The justices rejected the appeal of an Alabama man sentenced to 10 years in a federal penitentiary for receiving in the mail a booklet depicting children engaged in sexually explicit conduct.

—Said it will use a case from Missouri to decide whether states must pay unemployment benefits to women who are not reinstated in their jobs after taking maternity leaves.

—Agreed to hear arguments in the case of a Florida woman denied unemployment benefits after she was fired for refusing to work on her Sabbath.

—Voted to decide whether the federal government may label as "political propaganda" three Canadian movies on acid rain and nuclear war.

—Let stand the criminal conviction of U.S. District Judge Harry E. Claiborne, the first sitting federal judge ordered to prison. Claiborne, 68, now faces the start of a two-year prison sentence for filing false tax returns. If he does not resign, he also faces a possible move to have him impeached.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a victory for the news media, ruled Monday that anyone who sues for libel has the burden of proving the defamatory statement is false.

In a 5-to-4 decision in a case involving The Philadelphia Inquirer, the court strengthened protection against libel suits in cases where a so-called "private individual" — rather than a public figure — sues a news organization.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, writing for the court, said, "We hold that, at least where a newspaper publishes speech of public concern, a private-figure plaintiff cannot recover damages without also showing that the statements at issue are false."

In a dissenting opinion, Justice John Paul Stevens said the ruling is "pernicious" because the only publishers "who will benefit from today's decision are those who act negligently or maliciously."

act negligently or maliciously."
Today's ruling settled an issue

For a private citizen to win a libel suit, the law has always required that the allegedly libelous statement be found false and made negligently. Truth is an absolute defense.

But before Monday, the court had not said whether the Constitution's guarantee of free speech places the burden of proving truth or falsity in such cases

21 Libyans detained in Britain

LONDON (AP) — Police arrested 21 Libyans in a series of raids early today, including a pilot who threatened to form an anti-American suicide squad. The Home Office said they would be expelled from the country as a matter of national security.

The Home Office said the Libyans were suspected of involvement in "student revolutionary activities," but did not elaborate.

The Libyans, almost all of whom are university students, were arrested in England, Wales and Scotland, said the Home Office, which is responsible for Britain's police. Five of them were arrested in London, it said.

were arrested in London, it said.
All of the 21 detainees had been been under surveillance, said the British domestic news agency Press Association.

The Libyans were detained a day after the 12 Common Market members, with Britain leading the way, decided to clamp down on Libyan trade and diplomatic representation in Western Europe.

Last month, after the confrontation between the United States and Libya in the Gulf of Sidra, Tripoli Radio broadcast a telephone call from Masaoud in which he said he and his Libyan classmates in Britain were offering themselves as "suicide squads against America and its arrogance."

British authorities reacted by ordering the Libyan cadets, who are being trained to fly for Libyan Arab Airlines, to be barred from flying solo.

Masaoud was the only one of the estimated 250 Libyan aviation, engineering and technical trainees in Britain to be arrested, the Home Office said.

the Home Office said.
Libya has criticized Britain bitterly for allowing U.S. F-111 bombers based in Britain to be used in the U.S. air strike on Libya last Tuesday Britain was the only member of the 12-nation Common Market to publicly approve of the raid.

A Home Office statement said the move against the 21 came as the result of information about their involvement in "Libyan student revolutionary activities in the United Kingdom" and said their deportation was "conducive to the public good in the interests of national security."

Britain severed diplomatic relations with Libya in April 1984, after gunfire directed from the Libyan embassy at a crowd of demonstrating opponents of Col. Moammar Khadafy killed London policewoman Yvonne Fletcher.

In 1983, 28,500 Libyan nationals were admitted to Britain.
