Lady Harvesters take Austin by storm

A dark day at city hall

Friday afternoons at City Hall are often a busy time for city employees as they complete tasks for the week. But this past Friday afternoon was more hectic and confused than usual after electrical power, water and telephone service were interrupted.

Workers on the rehabilitation projects at City Hall were busily engaged in tearing up the concrete and trees at the north end for landscaping projects early Friday afternoon when employees in the building suddenly found themselves in the dark.

Apparently, workers had inadvertently cut through power and water lines to City Hall, causing a loss of electricity and water and interrupting phone service.

Crews from the city, Southwestern Public Service and Bell Telephone converged on the scene to begin repair efforts while employees inside the building were trying to cope with the unusual Friday afternoon experience.

Police communications were interrupted intermittently. Lights went on and off. Municipal Court employees found themselves unable to make change for persons coming in to pay fines when the electric cash register wouldn't open. Residents could call in to City Hall, but city personnel couldn't call out. Even the soft

Lady Harvesters celebrate state track championship

AUSTIN—The State Capital has been engulfed in a cloud since Thursday night. Humidity held at 100 percent for 48 straight hours. And the creeks are swollen.

Late Friday night, from somewhere in the dark, hot mist outside Memorial Stadium the sweet soul voice of Marvin Gay drifted from a car radio.

Sunshine on a Cloudy Day. Pampa has its Lady Harvesters.

There're something special. They're the best in the whole state.

Anyone of the 35,000 fans who saw Pampa win the Class 4A girls state track championship Friday will not forget the Lady Harvesters anytime soon.

Their 4A title was the only classification championship decided Friday, so the Lady Harvesters took the day and kept it.

Pampa's march to the state championship was so stirring and dramatic that the Memorial Stadium crowd rose with a deafening thunder as the PA announcer yelled over and over:

"Here comes Pampa!"
"Here comes the Green and Gold."

Every hair on the back of your neck stood on its end. Chills crept up your spine.

How horrifying it must have been for the Lady Harvesters' opponents to hear, race after race, that thunderous roar and the inevitable, "Here comes Pampa!"

Sandee Stokes, Andrea Hopkins, Schivon Parker, Tanya Lidy, Laquita, Yolanda and Courtney Brown were the main excitement of Friday's meet—hotter than Austin.

In all, the Lady Harvesters brought home 15 medals, five of them gold, and the most important trophy of all.

"Pampa's taken Austin by storm!" the PA man finally said.

Courtney crashed to the track after winning the silver in the 100. But harder than that was the tug on your throat when you saw her later, limping on her mother's shoulder headed to rejoin her teammates.

And later, when they stood up in the lights, grinning broadly with tears glistening in their eyes—their coaches like proud fathers on wedding day—and giggling like schoolgirls on top of the world.

There's no measuring the effect these Lady Harvesters have had on girls athletics at Pampa High School, except to say that it's been profound.

Pampa never really had an accomplished girls' athletic program until these girls came along, and a lot of people told them they couldn't do what they've done.

They had only one goal this year. Nothing mattered but winning state.

Football teams go unbeaten, but in track it is almost unheard of. Yet that's what the Lady Harvesters did this spring. Week after week, they won and got better.

Pampa's girls are somebody now. They will be talked about around the state, and at home, where little girls will want to be the next Sandee or Tonya.

For what they made was the greatest moment in the history of Pampa girls athletics.

Friday was steamy and wilting, but Pampa would not.

Austin was gray, but the Lady Harvesters were golden.

Officials seek explanation for school hostage scheme

COKEVILLE, Wyo. (AP)—Authorities in three states struggled Saturday to unravel the twisted thinking that led a man and his wife to take an entire elementary school hostage in a $300 million ransom scheme that went fatally awry.

Gov. Ed Herschler said he hoped the government would help provide medical and psychiatric aid to the 150 students and teachers who spent a terrified Friday afternoon watching David and Doris Young try to carry out the plot.

Young shot himself 2½ hours after the takeover of Cokeville Elementary School began, when a homemade gasoline bomb exploded in his wife's hands, killing her instantly and burning scores of the hostages.

Seventy-eight people suffered second-degree burns and music teacher John Miller was shot in the shoulder while trying to escape down a hallway.

Fourteen people remained hospitalized Saturday, one student in critical condition and another in serious condition. Miller was reported in good condition.

Explanations for the Youngs' behavior were sought Saturday in Tucson, Ariz., where the couple most recently lived, and in nearby Idaho and southwestern Wyoming.

The emerging portrait was of a man who loved guns and "still thought he lived in the Wild West," said Cokeville Mayor John Dayton, who once hired and fired Young as marshal for this isolated town of 500.

"On his day off, he'd wear a six-shooter on his hip and tie it with a thong like the old boys used to do," Dayton said. "I think he was a little off his rocker when we hired him and I think he steadily got worse."

Young was marshal for about six months in 1979, then was fired for not doing his duty and for dating his future wife, Doris, while still married to another woman, Dayton said.

Dayton described Young as "very quiet, very hard to talk to."

The Youngs were both in their late 40s, said Lincoln County Sheriff Deb Wolfley.

Three people who were traveling with the Youngs but apparently refused to participate in the school takeover were being questioned Saturday, Wolfley said.

"They swear up and down they didn't know what he (Young) had in mind and we tend to believe them," the sheriff said.

The Youngs took a small arsenal with them in a wire cart when they entered the school—three gas bombs, nine handguns and four rifles, Wolfley said.

75 years behind the baton

Longtime Pampa band directors announce retirements

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

After amassing more than 75 years of school band directing between them, Joe DiCosimo and Sam Watson are ready to hang up their batons.

DiCosimo has directed Pampa pre-teens for more than 31 years as band director of the Pampa Junior High School and later the Pampa Middle School. Watson taught band beginners for 13 years at Pampa elementary schools and before that, led high school bands at Spearman, Springlake, Wildorado and Phillips to top division ratings. Watson's wife Helen, an aide at the Middle School, is also retiring.

A reception for the Watsons will be held at 2 p.m. today at the Pampa High School Band Room.

To DiCosimo, the decision to retire came almost at the last minute, after Watson's reception had already been planned. Several band boosters who attended the annual band banquet Friday expressed surprise at his decision.

"I felt it was time I retired," he said. "I've been teaching for 35 years, and I decided I wanted to take more time to be with my family."

Pampa High School Band Director Charles Johnson called DiCosimo "the master teacher," and said that many music teachers in the area would agree.

DiCosimo started directing school bands almost as soon as he finished serving in the South Pacific during World War II, where he noted he had very little time for music.

He spent four years teaching music and directing bands at elementary schools and high schools in El Paso for four years. Then he came to Pampa to teach junior high school students and he's been a fixture here ever since.

Some of the parents of current sixth, seventh and eighth graders were under his direction. That was back when the junior high school was located at the corner of Cuyler and Foster—where the First National Bank is now. He continued leading the young musicians when the school was moved to 2401 N. Charles and became Robert E. Lee school in the mid 1950s and when it became Pampa Middle School in 1978.

Although the locations, musical styles and fashions have changed, the size, reputation and temperament of the young Pampa bands have remained the same over the years since he came to Pampa in 1955. The red Patriot uniforms the band kids wear date to the time when the school was still known as Robert E. Lee school.

There have been changes from the "block" style of marching to precision marching, but, he said, "we try to enforce the fundamentals."

DiCosimo is the transition between the beginners who first pick up horns in Watson's fifth-grade music classes and Johnson's top-ranked Pride of Pampa high school band. His bands have produced 67 First Division, or superior, ratings in district marching, concert and sight-reading contests, but DiCosimo doesn't recall exactly which years. Nor would he say which bands have been the best.

Still, the middle school band director has depended on Watson to supply him with a good stock of sixth-grade musicians, usually from 90 to 110 per year from the six elementary schools.

"I've always admired Sam," DiCosimo said, adding that he's known Watson when he taught high school bands in the area. "He always had excellent bands. He's won a lot of Sweepstakes awards."

Watson admitted that after 13 years of teaching at the six schools, he's getting tired. Arthritis makes it painful for him to get around, he added.

But there's another reason Watson is retiring this year — he's tired of the "reforms" of House Bill 72.

"The emphasis of HB 72 is against extracurricular activities," he said. "The kids area afraid to become in-involved because they're afraid of flunking."

Watson has no definite plans for his retirement. He said he'll do some boating and travelling.

Like DiCosimo, Watson began teaching shortly after serving in World War II. But his tour of duty did enable him to keep up with his music. This was during the height of the Big Band era when his instruments, clarinet and saxophone, were popular.

"I played in service bands, and when we had a layover, we'd find some kind of work," he said.

"I started in piano, but I didn't take to piano, so I learned the clarinet," he added. "And I never wanted to teach anything else."

Watson said that with almost no exceptions the children he's taught here have never played a musical instrument before. Although the elementary students do not go to contests, high school bands under Watson's direction have earned more than 20 sweepstakes awards.

Watson praised the way DiCosimo works with his kids to prepare them for the high school band.

"It's been nice working with Joe," he said. "He's a very entertaining person to be around. He's a fine person and he does a fine job."

DiCosimo returns the compliment.

"Sam does a real fine job teaching the kids the fundamentals and basics," he said. "Each grade level gets more advanced."

Cocaine smuggling expected to rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — The amount of cocaine smuggled into the United States threatens to more than double this year, while marijuana imports are expected to drop by almost a third, according to U.S. Customs Service estimates released Saturday by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

Bentsen, D-Texas, said Customs estimates that 275,000 pounds of cocaine will be brought into the country in 1986, compared with 130,000 pounds in 1985. Marijuana smuggling, meanwhile, is expected to drop to an estimated 22 million pounds, compared with 30.6 million pounds last year.

Customs spokesman Jim Mahan said the turnaround is a matter of economics.

"By the time cocaine hits the street, it's going to go for about, say, $135,000 a pound, vs. $600 or $700 a pound for marijuana," Mahan said. "So in order to get $135,000 worth of marijuana, you're going to have to have an awful lot of space."

Another reason for the lower marijuana figure, Mahan said, is "an awful lot of marijuana is being grown in the U.S. now, and a higher quality of marijuana."

Heroin smuggling is expected to increase somewhat, from about 10,000 pounds in 1985 to 13,050 pounds in 1986, according to the Customs estimates.

In a new development, Bentsen said, much of the cocaine — about 18 percent, or about 50,000 pounds — is expected to come from Mexico, which does not even produce the drug, most of which comes from South America.

Mahan said Mexico "has become a prime trans-shipment point for cocaine coming from Colombia."

Customs expects Mexico to be the import point for 35 percent of the heroin in 1986.

drink machines weren't working, creating a problem for thirsty personnel.

Matters got a little more confused when some official apparently told workers to take the rest of the day off, leaving department heads to have to go out and round them up again to complete work assignments still needed to be done for the day.

At least it broke up the usual routines and provided topics and anecdotes for enlivening the conversation in the halls and offices.

Power and water service were restored by 4 p.m., and work got back to a semblance of normality.

One employee was initially excited by the prospect of finally being able to get a drink of water. But when the faucet dispensed water with a slightly yellowish cast, she decided she could wait until she got home.

Some property owners due appraisal notices

Certain property owners will receive valuation notices from the Gray County Appraisal District on the proposed value of their property, according to Chief Appraiser Charles Buzzard.

Buzzard said if a property owner rendered property, the appraisal district is required to send a notice of the proposed value placed on the property. He said that most of the renditions received by his office were on business personal property. Property owners have the option of rendering their real estate.

Next, if the property owner re-modeled his property or built any new structure, a notice will be sent if the proposed value is $1,000 or more than last year's value. And notices are also sent to new businesses or mobile homes moved into the district as of Jan. 1.

Buzzard said a taxpayer who wants to lodge a protest of a proposed value must file a written notice of protest with the appraisal review board by June 30. Hearings begin July 7. Official forms are available at the appraisal office.

"But a letter from the property owner is acceptable as a notice, if the notice identifies the property owner and the property which is the subject of the protest and indicates dissatisfaction with some decision or action of the appraisal office," he said.

A pamphlet explaining how to prepare and present an appeal is available from the appraisal district office.

Water work slated

City of Pampa crews will be working on the aqueduct water line Tuesday, starting at the Westside Church of Christ on Kentucky west to the water plant.

Residents in that area will not have water service on that day for approximately eight hours.

Those having any questions should contact the city water office at 665-1602.

JOHN GOES

John Goes named officer of day

Saturday's Pampa police officer of the day was John Goes, who has been on the force since April, 1981.

Goes moved to Stephens County, Texas, in 1952. He moved to Gray County a year later and later that same year came to Pampa.

He graduated from Pampa High School in 1963 and, after going to the military, majored in marketing at West Texas State University in Canyon. He returned to Pampa after leaving college.

Goes is currently serving the department as a senior patrolman. In addition to patrol and some supervisory duties, he also serves as police department photographer, an important job in terms of crime and accident scenes, evidence preservation, fingerprinting, record-keeping and public relations.

In addition to the photographic work at the police department, Goes operates an independent photographic business in Pampa. He is a member of the chamber of commerce, the Gray County Historical Commission and Zion Lutheran Church.

Texas twisters cause no injuries

By MICHELLE LOCKE
 Associated Press Writer

Thunderstorms pounded the state for another day Saturday, sending tornadoes into Central Texas that ripped off barn roofs and downed trees but caused no injuries, authorities said.

The heavy storms forced the Southwest Conference to postpone until Sunday the final day of tournament baseball play in College Station and grounded GOP gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements' campaign plane in Dallas.

Tornadoes also were sighted over South Texas Saturday afternoon, but officials there reported that none of them touched ground.

At about 3:15 p.m., a tornado ripped off barn roofs and blew over a tree in Bastrop County. Pea-sized hail was reported in the northern part of the county near Austin, and high winds downed several tree limbs on the State Capitol grounds, officials said.

In Fort Bend County southwest of Houston, a resident reported seeing two twister tails moving toward the southwest, said Lynn Garrett, sheriff's office dispatcher. But she said there were no reports of damage.

High winds, believed to be a tornado, hit the business district of Killeen in Central Texas, lifting the roof off a cement mixing company and damaging fire department vehicles across the street, officials said.

No injuries were reported. Bill Cave, captain of Killeen Fire Department, said a funnel cloud dropped down in front of the station shortly before 10:45 a.m. Several trees were uprooted and power lines were pulled down, he said.

Suspect arrested in Rio Grande murders

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A man living in a tiny room in a bathhouse in the redlight district of El Paso's sister city of Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, has been blamed by police for the deaths of at least three of seven women who were strangled and thrown into the Rio Grande last month.

The El Paso Times reported Saturday that the man was described by other residents of the bathhouse as a "passive" man who didn't work, used drugs, and was visited often by prostitutes in his tiny room.

The man, who arrived in Juarez six months ago from the Pacific coast state of Michoacan, is currently in prison awaiting trial in the beating death of a man whose body was found next door to the bathhouse on April 17, the Times said.

Charges are also being prepared against the man in the deaths of the three women, after clothing belonging to two of them was identified Thursday in the man's room by the victims' fathers, the newspaper said.

Authorities on both sides of the Rio Grande became alarmed when the bodies of seven women were found in the river between Feb. 22 to April 18. At least four of the women had been raped and strangled.

"There are plenty of incidents in (the man's) conduct that demonstrates we are dealing with a psychopath and drug addict," said Francisco Flores, an investigator with the State Judicial Police in Juarez.

The man, in his early 20s, was arrested April 17 and charged with the beating death of Martin Gallardo. Gallardo's body was found in a parking lot next door to the Delicias bathhouse.

Several residents of the bathhouse told the Times on Friday that they heard fighting and the sound of blows in the man's tiny cubicle on the night of Gallardo's death.

When the man was arrested April 17, police found blood in his 4-by-10-foot cubicle, said police investigator Flores and Idalia Gonzalez, a desk clerk at the bathhouse.

Francisco Silva Simental, manager of the bath-house, said he identified one of the river victims as a prostitute who had been staying with the man a few days before her death.

Simental said he identified the body of Laura Elena "Nora" Rodriguez, who was found April 8 in the Rio Grande.

Flores said investigators had first believed Rodriguez's death might have been an accidental drowning because she had not been sexually assaulted.

But clothing belonging to Rodriguez was also identified in the man's room, the walls of which are covered with photos of naked women.

On Thursday, the fathers of two other river victims travelled to Juarez and identified their daughters' clothing in the man's room, Flores said.

The two bodies of the victims — identified as 13-year-old Valentina Rodriguez Rosas and 18-year-old Nicolasa Flores Gonzales — were discovered April 12 in the Rio Grande. Autopsy reports indicated that both women had been raped and strangled early that morning.

Flores said the fathers of the two teen-agers came from San Francisco de Borja, a ranching community near Chihuahua City. The two girls had traveled to Juarez seeking work. Flores said the fathers saw their daughters' pictures in a Mexican crime magazine.

Flores said he believed the man and another man had agreed to help the girls cross the river into El Paso, where the girls planned to seek work. "He would find his victims in different ways. Sometimes offering to help them find work, or offering them marijunana," Flores said.

At the time of the man's arrest, police found five grams of cocaine and a small quantity of marijuana.

"He was a vagrant and a drug dealer," Flores said.

Silva, the manager of the bathhouse, said the man once locked a woman in his room for more than 10 days. The woman survived on tap water and some food in the room, but never tried to get out until a friend of the man's unlocked the door.

Federal farm programs face bigger cuts in 1987

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Spending cuts in federal farm programs this year pale in comparison to what may be in store for 1987, says the chief economist at the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

This year's 4.3 percent across-the-board cuts would "seem like nothing," said Robert Thompson, the USDA's assistant secretary for economics, who lectured at Texas A&M University Friday.

Another year of budget cuts mandated by Gramm-Rudman legislation, he said, and "we'd be cutting to the bone."

Thompson said USDA's best estimate is that the bill will require another 8 to 12 percent cut next year, which could make it difficult to maintain some of the farm programs provided for in the 1985 Farm Bill.

But if Congress can reach a budget compromise that will meet the deficit reduction target of $144 billion next year, agriculture would fare a lot better, he said.

"Surely, Congress will restore extension and agriculture programs and take more from defense," he said.

Gramm-Rudman this year requires a 4.3 percent cut from every office of every USDA agency.

USDA's deficiency payments to farmers will be 4.3 percent lower than the advertised rate, as will its loan rates, Thompson said.

The dairy industry's powerful lobby pushed special legislation through Congress that exempts dairy support programs from Gramm-Rudman, Thompson said. Instead of cuts, the dairy industry is assessing itself an extra 12 cents per hundredweight to be put into its own support program.

Tobacco producers have asked for that same assessment alternative, but Congress is unlikely to agree because of the public outcry against tobacco subsidies, Thompson said.

Thompson said he doubted whether the dairy herd liquidation program would do much to relieve the great supply and demand imbalance.

"Until we end the open-ended commitment to buy butter, cheese and (milk) powder, I doubt we'll ever get dairy imbalance under control," he said.

Thompson said it is difficult to rationalize how a free-market oriented administration can maintain such a high level of farm subsidies, projected at $24 billion this year.

"The irony of ironies is that this government, which wanted to get out of agriculture, is probably in deeper than ever before," he said.

A plea to drivers, parents

This is a plea to all motorists out there. Please, please drive carefully and watch out for small children now that school is almost out.

In the past two weeks or so, two youngsters have been hit by cars in Pampa. One is a friend of mine and apparently escaped without serious injury after he was hit while riding his bicycle.

The other is a three-year-old girl, currently in an Amarillo hospital with a skull fracture after she was hit on South Nelson Street. I was on the scene at that one and it was not a pretty sight.

I'm praying that she'll be all right. I'm also praying for the driver of that vehicle who was obviously badly shaken by what had happened. She told the police several children ran out in front of her car and she never saw the little girl.

I would not presume to try to assign blame for either of these accidents as I saw neither one happen. And, to me, it's far more important for us all to try to prevent such occurrences from happening in the future.

Parents, for the sake of their young lives, teach your young children about playing near the street and about being careful and watchful whenever walking along or crossing city streets. Safety cannot be stressed enough.

Drivers, realize that the potential is always there in residential areas for youngsters to dart out in front of you. Be ready.

I took defensive driving in high school (it was required then), and one of the first things they teach you in that course is to always be prepared for the worst. So what if the other guy is wrong. Rightness or wrongness doesn't matter much after he's run the stop sign and plowed into the driver's side of your car.

The same principle can be applied to all the parties involved whenever children are playing near neighborhood streets. The kids should be taught to be ready for the worst — that driver we all love to hate that goes clipping along a side street at some ungodly speed.

And drivers should be constantly on the lookout for some kid who hasn't been taught enough about safety, even if it means being five minutes late — or leaving five minutes early — for church.

A colleague tells me she has an acquaintance who doesn't read my columns anymore because he feels I'm not liberal enough.

Notwithstanding the fact that being too conservative in this part of the country probably qualifies me for membership in the good Rev. Falwell's organization, I see a danger in the American pastime of trying to classify everyone into some neat, pre-conceived liberal-conservative category.

Politics were created to serve man, not the other way around but, sadly, that's what seems to be happening in our country as candidates (and voters) must agree with some pre-ordained party platform or risk being called a maverick (or worse).

Why can't a concern for the poor, for peace, for human rights mix with traditional Middle American values and a desire to put an end to government spending misadventures? Because the major political parties tell us they can't?

That's what The Party in Russia does, for crying out loud!

Many thanks to the folks in Lefors for inviting Dan, Cathy and myself to your awards banquet last week. And I'm sure I can speak for all three of us when I say we all felt truly honored by your presentation to us.

To this journalist, recognition by his readers, his public, means more than any award he could possibly win.

Reb, Santa among wagon train riders

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A Confederate soldier and a prairie version of Santa Claus are among the sights and sounds of the Sesquicentennial Wagon Train rumbling across the state.

The sight of wagoner Jim Saylor dressed in creased Confederate Army uniform, peering from under the canvas cape of his Conestoga wagon, brings a glimpse of Gettysburg to the High Plains.

And Macy L. Nelson, a 64-year-old former submarine machinist, adds a festive note with his red T-shirt and red floppy hat.

"I've been playing Santa Claus from the beginning of the trip and can't wait to see the light in the kids' eyes when they see me running down the road," says Nelson, who joined the Sesquicentennial Wagon Train in Sulphur Springs in January.

As part of the Sesquicentennial wagon train tracking across the state, Saylor's wagon has been voted "Most Authentic" more than a dozen times.

"I became a Civil War buff in 1963 when I was a part of a reenactment of a battle near Fredricksburg, Md.," says Saylor, an aviation machinist from New Windsor, Md. "Most folks here know me as Confederate Jim."

Saylor is a founding member of the First Calvary Company in Maryland, an organization dedicated to studying and recreating famous Civil War battles.

"I've fired everything from muskets to cannons," he said, adjusting the brim of a cowboy spotted with dime-sized replicas of Civil War medals.

"The great thing about those battles and this wagon train is that you're living the history and that's something no book can ever do for you."

Saylor estimates the wagon was built in the mid-1700s. The Ohio woman he bought it from said the wagon had been in her family for 150 years.

It was used to transport one year's worth of groceries from Baltimore, Md., to their village 10 miles south of Gettysburg.

Its shell of yellow pine hasn't been changed much since then, Saylor said, pointing to the hand-crafted metal hasps and pins that hold the planks in place.

This isn't Saylor's first trip on a wagon train. He toured in the 50-state Bicentennial Wagon Train in 1976.

"After that I was hooked," says Saylor, who plans to leave the wagon train in Turkey. He joined up near San Angelo.

According to Nelson, his son and daughter, Gaylon and Glenda, would install a phone in his mule-drawn wagon if they thought it would work.

But since they can't stretch a phone line from Sulphur Springs to Fort Worth, the geographical bookends of the train tour, Nelson does the next best thing.

"Every day I talk into my tape recorder and tell them what's happening on the train — who is riding with me and what the weather is like," he said. "My fondest memory of the trip was in San Diego, when my sister met me there after traveling from San Diego, California.

"First off, there was about a half-mile of school children lining the streets, shining their faces at me and screaming for Santa to wave at them, and at the end of the line was my sister."

DIURETICS
Diuretics are commonly referred to as "water pills." They act on the kidneys, causing them to eliminate excess water and salt from the body through urine. For almost 20 years, oral diuretics have been a mainstay in the treatment of high blood pressure. They help control high blood pressure while keeping prescribed medication and the number of undesired effects to a minimum. Diuretics can help control high blood pressure but cannot cure it. They also are used to treat the retention of fluid in the body caused by illnesses such as heart, liver or kidney disease, or by taking steroids.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Lake control could be good or harmful

The effort by Gray County to take control of Lake McClellan and assume the responsibility for operating the facility is an action that has the potential to benefit citizens of this area and, at the same time, develop into a prime example of the proper role of government in a free society.

But it could also evolve into a perfect example of what government should not do. It all depends on which direction the county takes if it does get control of the lake and recreation area.

Here's what we mean. If anticipated legislation is successful in having the property transferred from the U.S. Forestry Service to Gray County, there should be no cost to the taxpayer. Once Gray County is given control, it could use funds from the various access fees to pay for improving the lake and the recreation area.

That would mean the people who actually use the facility would be voluntarily paying for its upkeep and those who didn't use it wouldn't be forced to support it with their tax dollars. That is the only moral way a government entity can operate anything, and that would be the proper direction for Gray County to take if it does get control of the lake.

But there is also an improper route that could be taken. If the county were to use general tax revenues to improve the lake or operate the recreation area, that would be as wrong as spending funds for a public golf course, as it has been requested to do. The county government would be forcing some citizens to help pay for other citizens' recreation — and that's not right.

It would be equally wrong for the county to make a profit from operating the recreation area if access fees did produce that much revenue. That would mean people who use the area would be paying a recreation tax to support other activities they might not favor. If the revenue from fees turned out to be more than the operating costs, then the fees should be lowered.

If the county's effort to get the lake is successful and it charts a course which calls for spending only the amount of money the facility generates on improvements, then it will no doubt have the support and gratitude of most citizens, including ours. But if it decided to start spending taxpayers' money on the lake, considerable opposition would be certain. And it would be justified.

Pendleton shouldn't quit

Clarence Pendleton has been under siege ever since President Reagan appointed him chairman of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. Pendleton earned the disfavor of civil rights and feminist groups by his opposition to race and sex quotas. Last month he roused more anger by urging a one-year suspension of race and sex federal set-aside programs that mandate 10 or 15 percent of contracts go to government-approved groups.

As I see it Pendleton is against the institutionalization of South African type "job reservation" laws. These laws mandate employment percentages by race. Pendleton's opponents, many of whom are also opponents of South Africa, aren't against racist job reservation in principle. Their beef is a matter of implementation, i.e., who decides how many of what race get what jobs?

In recent months Pendleton has been attacked by "friends." Commissioner John Bunzel, also a Reagan appointee, has called for Pendleton to resign. Bunzel, an intellectual, thinks Pendleton's style is too flamboyant. William Raspberry backed Bunzel in his Washington Post column, "Pendleton Has Made Himself Useless," citing Pendleton, along with Dr. Thomas Sowell and yours truly, as being "impolitic" in our language.

Raspberry has either forgotten previous attacks or he holds us accountable to white standards of behavior.

In 1981, Thomas I. Atkins, general counsel of the NAACP, in reference to speculation about Sowell's appointment to HUD, said: "He would play the same kind of role which historically the house niggers played for the plantation owners..." That same year black columnist Carl Rowan wrote: "...Vidkun Quisling, in his collaboration with the Nazis, surely did not do as much damage to the Norwegians as Sowell is doing to the most helpless blacks."

Columnist Tom Braden wrote in 1983: "He's (Walter Williams) the modern equivalent to old Keokuk, the defeated Indian warchief who toured the country, receiving money and praise for telling white people...they were treating the Indians wise and well." George E. Jordan, in a plagiarized column for the Cleveland Plain Dealer said: "Williams is a butter-tongued apologist for the new oppressors of the most helpless black Americans."

Benjamin Hooks, director of the NAACP, in a 1985 reference to blacks in Reagan's administration, "(They are) worse than mercenaries...dupes or fools."

These are a mere sample of the more recent attacks on those who challenge the conventional wisdom on race. Raspberry knew about the attacks but didn't censure their authors, as he does Pendleton, for being "loose-lipped" and "dialogue-killing." Obviously, there are different standards applied to Raspberry's definition of impolitic.

If media attacks were Pendleton's only problem, we all could just sit back and enjoy the sport because he's a pretty good match for the opposition. His real problem, however, lies with the spineless members of the Reagan administration, Republican congressmen, and GOP officials who are waffling in the support of his and Equal Employment Opportunity Commissioner Clarence Thomas' efforts to repeal job reservation laws in America.

White House Press Secretary Larry Speakes suggested the administration does not support Pendleton's view on reserving certain contract percentages by race and sex. "Practical" members of the Republican party have called Pendleton a liability.

I urge Penny not to resign. He should wait for a letter from Reagan saying: "Dear Mr. Pendleton: You are fired because of your lack of support for America's enlightened job reservation laws."

Today in history

Today is Sunday, May 18, the 138th day of 1986. There are 227 days left in the year. This is Pentecost.

Today's highlight in history: On May 18, 1980, Washington's Mount St. Helens exploded. The blast took 1,300 feet off the top of the volcano, left 57 people dead or missing, devastated 150 square miles of forest and blew an ash cloud around the world.

On this date: Ten years ago: President Gerald R. Ford defeated Ronald Reagan in the Michigan Republican primary; California Gov. Edmund G. "Jerry" Brown Jr. defeated Jimmy Carter in the Maryland Democratic primary.

Five years ago: On his birthday, Pope John Paul II was moved from intensive care as he continued to recover from an assassination attempt. Author William Saroyan died in Fresno, Calif., at age 72.

Learning from mistakes

Harmon Wages — former professional football player, former television sportscaster, recent inmate — was sitting alone, with only a soft drink for company at the bar in a restaurant in Atlanta, Ga., one day last week.

He looked well for a man who had just completed a 90-day jail term after a conviction for possession of cocaine. He was tan. He was dressed sharply.

He was in the restaurant to meet Bob Neal, sportscaster for Ted Turner's WTBS, a cable TV SuperStation in Atlanta, for lunch. He and Neal are friends. Wages wanted to talk to Neal about what on earth he's going to do now to make a living.

Harmon Wages, handsome, blond, Charmin' Harmon, was a football star at the University of Florida. He played a number of years with the Atlanta Falcons.

Then, he became a local sportscaster, and it really didn't matter what he said on his broadcasts, he would get an audience anyway. The ladies love his looks. The men admired an ex-jock who got to be on the tube every night.

Harmon's world caved in, however. He had quit his Atlanta job and moved to Chicago to seek work there and to move in with his girlfriend, a Chicago newswoman.

But the man came down on him. They tried to put Wages away for an even longer stretch than he got. They tried to prove he was a cocaine dealer. They failed. Harmon got off lightly with 90 days for possession.

Got off lightly, I said. Forget I said that. Harmon lost his girlfriend, and he has, at least temporarily, lost the opportunity to work in his chosen field.

"I also almost lost one of my best friends — my cat," Harmon was saying. "Just before I had to go to jail, my cat got sick. I've had that cat for years. I thought, 'What else can happen to me? I'm about to go to jail and my cat is dying.'"

The only good news is Harmon's cat pulled through.

Harmon Wages wants to go back to work.

"I love television," he said.

But, what if nobody is interested in hiring you? After all, how would it look for a convicted cocaine user to be on the telly at night so all the little kids can see him and figure there's nothing wrong with using cocaine?

"I want to go back to work," Harmon said. "I'm not a close friend of Harmon Wages. I've taken plenty of shots at him in this column. But I like the man, and I like what he has done."

What he has done is apologize to the people for his past actions. What he has done is take his punishment. What he wants is another chance.

"A lot of people realize I am sorry for what I did," he said. "My mail tells me that. I just can't believe people have been so nice to me as they have. They tell me they want to see me back on TV, but I haven't heard from anybody about a job."

A little lady, probably in her 70s, walked past the table where Wages was sitting. She recognized him, then stuck out her hand and said, "Welcome back to the human race."

We all make mistakes. Some of us suffer for them, and then learn from them. Harmon Wages is an example of that.

I think the public would applaud any television station with the guts to put a reformed Harmon Wages back on the air.

Anybody out there tuned in?

Welfare recipients pay high price

We hear a lot about how much the various government welfare programs cost the taxpayers of this country. But there is another cost that's rarely mentioned; one that most of us, perhaps, are not even aware of: the price paid by many of those who receive welfare.

I was reminded of that by an Associated Press story about an Iowa farm wife whose family had just started receiving food stamps. The woman said she was ashamed at first and shopped only at night when there was no danger of bumping into her friends. If anyone she knew happened to come into the store, she'd pay for her purchase with a check instead of taking a chance that someone would see her using food stamps.

The story went on to say that many farmers in the Midwest could qualify for food stamps, but some won't apply because they want to avoid the stigma of welfare.

But what happened to the woman? She said she eventually overcame her reluctance to let anyone know she receives food stamps and now cheerfully shops in the presence of friends and neighbors without that feeling of shame.

That is not an unusual development.

I have known a number of people like that woman in the story. Pride kept them from applying for food stamps or other forms of welfare, even though they qualified under the existing guidelines. Some felt it would be humiliating for their children to accept free or reduced-priced school lunches, so they didn't apply for them, either. Others I have known were even reluctant to ask for unemployment benefits when they lost their job. They simply set out to find another one.

But something happened to some of these people.

They eventually swallowed their pride and applied for one form of welfare or the other. After that it became easier.

Within a few months, these once-proud, self-reliant individuals were unabashedly joining the crowds feeding at the government trough, going after and getting a variety of other handouts. And suddenly they didn't feel a bit bad about doing it. They came to believe that they had a "right" to those benefits that are paid for by others. The moral fabric that once made them reluctant to seek welfare came unraveled.

The welfare programs we have established in this country can, indeed, satisfy a number of our physical needs. They can provide food for our stomachs, clothes for our backs and money for our pockets.

But these things don't come free. The cost to the people who pay for them is measured in money. But those who receive them often lose something, I think, that may be much more important.

They lose whatever it was that gave them that feeling of shame.

The nickname stuck to 'Big Foot' Wallace

Among the rag-tag army of Texas Rangers and soldiers of fortune harassing the Mexicans here along the Rio Grande in this year of 1842 is Big Foot Wallace—a man with a mean reputation. William A. Wallace, 6 feet 2 inches tall and 240 pounds, claims he wears only a 9½ size shoe. He got the name Big Foot while living in Austin when he was accused of stealing his neighbor's horses. The neighbor followed the thief's footprints until they stopped at Wallace's yard. Wallace cleared himself by putting one of his own moccasins inside the imprint of the thief's. The thief's moccasins were a good two inches larger and belonged to a notorious Indian named Big Foot. Wallace has stalked the Indian many times, but with no luck. Despite his innocence, the nickname stuck. Wallace came to Texas from Virginia in 1837 to avenge the deaths of his two brothers who were murdered after the battle in Goliad. Although he's never been married, Big Foot is no loner. His concern for his community leads him to ride with the Texas Rangers who sweep across the prairies, protecting the settlers. Big Foot automatically thinks if it isn't Indians causing trouble, it'll be the Mexicans, whom he considers a strategic and crafty lot. Their language, religion and politics are unfamiliar and most Americans cannot sympathize with their neighbors to the south. In the past few months there have been several skirmishes between Texan and Mexican troops along the border. This has prompted President Sam Houston to send out General Somerville and these troops which Big Foot has joined. Most believe the fighting is caused by increasing talk of the United States' plans to annex the Republic. Things start out well enough for Somerville's troops with the capture of Laredo. But then the unruly men set to plundering the town. When General Somerville makes them return the goods, they revolt; 200 men desert and 500 ignore Somerville's orders. He declares the mission aborted and marches home.

However, 300 men (including Wallace), stay for more action. They march into Mier, an adobe town in northern Mexico. But with their leader injured, the rabble becomes disorganized and are surrounded by Mexicans. They vote to surrender to the Mexicans. The Mexicans march them across the desert. Some try to escape and become lost, some eat insects, others drink their own urine and die, and still others dig into the ground searching for some moist earth to soothe their swollen tongues. Santa Anna orders the rest of the prisoners to be executed but relents due to the protests of American and British ministers. Instead they are to be killed in a strategic fashion. A container filled with 150 white beans and 17 black beans is set down and each prisoner draws a bean. If it's a white bean, he is taken prisoner; if it's black, he is executed. One out of every ten men will be shot. Crafty Big Foot notices the black ones have been poured over the whites, so he "dips deep," and survives. He and the rest of the survivors return to Texas, but the repercussions from the Mier Expedition will be felt for a long time. Some feel the action may even be a strong impetus for a future war with Mexico.

Letters to the editor

No to golf course

Dear Editor,
Any argument for a golf course funded by taxpayers is absurd and meaningless. Absurd because why can't anyone go before our county commissioners court and ask for a handout?
My daughter loves horses. She would spend all her time on a horse if we could afford to buy and feed one. Why doesn't the county buy and maintain a stable of horses for her? After all, we pay taxes.
My son is obsessed with computers and all their software, and flying a helicopter is his ultimate dream. I can't afford the computer he wants, much less a helicopter. So why can't the county furnish him one and buy a helicopter so he can live his dream. His father pays taxes, so why should his request not be considered? Is a golfer more important than my daughter or son?
Were I to go before our Republican county commissioners court and request the above, I would be laughed out and possibly thrown out of the building. But why should not letters be sent out to all taxpayers requesting their opinion about my family's desires. Are they any less than a golfer?
What we in Gray County are witnessing is an example of political "cronyism" as only politicians can practice it.
Mr. Epperson's arguments for a public funded golf course are meaningless since only a few of us (or them) would actually benefit directly from such a business. Those that need less always seem to benefit the most.
Mr. County Judge, Mr. Commissioners, you did not build the former county hospital with your own hands and your own money, so why are you taking credit for the surplus funds from the sale of that hospital? And, if Mr. Rice did, why can't he help Mr. Epperson build a golf course? (In political ads Mr. Rice takes credit for the county surplus funds.)
Does this letter seem absurd? Perhaps, but not any more than our county officials, who are self-proclaimed Republican conservatives, yet give time and effort—paid for buy guess who—to the idea of all county taxpayers building a golf course for a favored few.
In case I don't get that letter asking my opinion, Mr. Kennedy, Mr. Rice, Mr. Simmons and company, my answer is No! No! No!

apparently well-cared for dogs, one a large black long-haired dog, the other a medium sized white dog. Not actually seeing what happened, I will only have to imagine the chain of events. Apparently the two dogs were old friends. I'll explain why in a minute. No telling how long the two dogs had run and played that morning, but as they were crossing the street a car ran over and killed the black dog. Whether it was an unavoidable accident or an act of sheer carelessness, I can't say. But apparently the person driving the car didn't care enough to even stop and check on the dog for it was still laying in the middle of the street where the accident occurred. As I drove by on the opposite side of the street, this scene unfolded. The white dog was standing over the motionless body of the black dog. It was barking slightly and pawing at its motionless friends as if to rouse him to continue their journey. When this failed to spur his friend to move, the white dog turned, took a few steps as if to leave. He thought better of it and returned to his lifeless friend and tried once more to goad him to mobility. When this failed the second time, he dropped his head, slowly turned and blindly stepped in front of an oncoming car. He was more fortunate than his friend for the driver of this car cared and did avoid hitting the white dog. I was told later that day that a long-haired white dog was being chased by an animal control person a few blocks from the scene of the original accident. I will have to check the animal control shelter and see if the white dog is there.

This has bothered me all day. Why do some people not care. Anyone that loves animals as I do and are around them at all should know that they have feelings and a great aptitude for love and affection, for both people and other animals, especially those of their own kind. If we could only tap their minds, we would be astounded of what feeling they have. Sometimes I feel their intelligence and understanding of what is right or wrong far exceeds the human race in many ways. P.S. I checked and the white dog was not in the animal shelter the next day.

Cover this town

To the editor,
I was surprised and also disappointed on May 4, 1986, to see that The Pampa News preferred to run a story about out of town activities instead of a local happening. Pampa Art Club had their Spring Tea and Show and was given "2 lines on page 30" in Friday's paper. You did send someone out two weeks before to take pictures and we know you have been given the needed information. So we wonder why we were set aside. It seems a local newspaper should support the town in which it is located.

Help appreciated

To the editor,
We wish to express our appreciation to the people who responded to our appeal for a freezer. Also to thank The Pampa News for printing our story of the loss of food and old freezer. We are very grateful for the two freezers we received from to very generous families. It is reassuring to know these people have thought of others and shared with them. We say "thank you" to both families and The Pampa News.

Freedom Newspapers columnist, libertarian author LeFevre dies

Libertarian author and long-time Freedom Newspapers columnist Robert LeFevre Of Orange, Calif., died Tuesday. He was 74. LeFevre, whose columns appeared periodically in The Pampa News for years until he stopped writing them last year, is remembered for his numerous columns on libertarian ideals and, nationally, for his books and treatises on the subject. He died in a motel room in Flagstaff, Ariz., the apparent victim of an early morning emphysema attack, said his wife, Loy LeFevre. The couple had been driving back to their Santa Ana home from a trip to South Carolina, she said. Since the 1950s, he had been a leading exponent of libertarianism — which advocates an end to government regulation and interference in the marketplace — LeFevre lectured and wrote extensively on the virtues of the

Flying dinosaur replica crashes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $700,000 flying replica of a giant pterodactyl, making its first public performance with more than 100 news cameras watching, turned a flip-flop today in its early moments of free flight and crashed unceremoniously to the ground. "Now we know what happened to the dinosaurs," said a colonel at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland, where the demonstration was held. The pterodactyl, built for a starring role in a new large screen movie "On the Wing," for the Smithsonian's Air and Space Museum was towed for 2,000 feet with a high speed winch. At that point, on schedule, a rudder dropped off and the tow line was released. The pterodactyl, did a 360 degree turn and headed for the tarmac. It seemed to right itself for a moment, then took the plunge. A small blue parachute, designed for such disasters, popped out but it was too late. The creature's long neck was broken. "The head, which controls the yaw, seemed to deflect in the right turn so it acted like a speed brake slowing it down," said Steve Fitch.

free-market system. LeFevre is best known among libertarians for founding Freedom College in 1957. He used the Colorado Springs, Colo., institute as a base for his lectures on economics, history and philosophy from a libertarian perspective. According to Mrs. LeFevre, Freedom College — by then renamed Rampart College — flourished in 1965 when heavy rains devastated the school. His libertarian beliefs precluded LeFevre from accepting government money to help rebuild the facility, she said. LeFevre re-established the school in Santa Ana in 1968, she said, where hundreds of Orange County residents and others were first exposed to the libertarian philosophy. "He changed a lot of lives," said Roy Childs, a former editor of Libertarian Review who attended Rampart lectures in the late '60s and later returned as an instructor. "He was the inspiration for my own career. He taught the nature of truth, morality, government, history, and our own possibilities as free men and women. He left us all with a wide-eyed enthusiasm." Rampart College came to a halt in 1975, when LeFevre stopped lecturing actively. LeFevre's wife said. In 1980, an admirer of LeFevre — Larry Samuels — established the Rampart Institute, a libertarian think tank, to carry on his work.

"He was a very energetic man," Samuels said. "Someone who would bend over backwards to help you. An intellectual who had the common touch in getting his ideas across." Harry Hoiles, longtime friend and part of the family that founded the Freedom Newspaper chain, called LeFevre "a great teacher — he made history come alive." Hoiles, who was publisher of the Colorado Springs Gazette Telegraph when LeFevre was an editor there in the 1960s, helped him establish Freedom College and sent numerous Freedom Newspapers employees to its two-week seminar. Freedom Newspapers — including The Pampa News — still espouse a libertarian philosophy in their editorial pages. At the time of his death, his wife said, LeFevre had just completed two books on libertarianism — "Fundamentals of Liberty," a book version of his famed Freedom lectures, and "Cosmos," a libertarian treatise in science-fiction form. LeFevre also had recently completed a collaboration with author Karl Watner on his life story. Samuels said Rampart Institute now is working to raise money to publish "Fundamentals of Liberty." Mr. LeFevre was to be cremated Friday and his ashes scattered at sea, his wife said, in accordance with his wishes.

THE HOUSE OF GOD

"These things write I unto thee, hoping to come unto thee shortly; but if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how men ought to behave themselves in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth" (1 Timothy 3:14-15.) Beyond question the word "house" here means the family or household. Paul leaves no doubt as to what the "house of God" is for he declares it to be the "church of the living God."

Isaiah's prophecy (Isaiah 2:2-4) speaks of "the Lord's house" being established in Jerusalem in the "last days." In the days of Isaiah, the Israelite nation was God's family or God's house, upon this earth. But the prophet was not speaking of something which was in existence then, but rather something in the future. Therefore we know he did not have reference to the nation of Israel, the Jews, when he spoke of "the Lord's house." Certainly, he must have had reference to "the church of the living God" which Paul says is the "house of God."

The family relationship is dependent upon a definite kinship between the members of the family. There is a bond recognized by all which ties the family together. This is especially true in regard to God's family, the church. Those who have been baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of their sins (Acts 2:38) have been baptized into Christ (Galatians 3:27); into the one body, the church (1 Corinthians 12:13); into the death of Christ (Romans 6:3-4) and therefore are in the relationship known as "the house of God."

When the apostle Peter began preaching on that first Pentecost after the resurrection of Christ from the dead (Acts 2:14) he told those Jews there in Jerusalem that those were the "last days." And so the place was right and the time was right according to Acts 2. The thing which resulted from those people being saved was also right for the church came into existence on that day and has existed ever since unto this very day and will exist throughout eternity (Daniel 2:44.)

Shawn Davis gets top DECA awards

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Pampa High School senior Shawn Davis received two top honors last week at the annual Employer-Employee Banquet presented by the Pampa Chapter of Distributive Education Clubs of America.

Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Davis, was named DECA Student of the Year and also received the $1,000 DECA Scholarship Award at the banquet held Thursday night at First Christian Church.

Presenting the top student award, DECA advisor Leta Olson said, "I never asked this student to do something for me that it wasn't done."

She said Davis came early, stayed late and gave his assistance willingly.

Employed at Hawkins TV and Video, Davis won first place at area and state competition in service station retailing and petroleum marketing and competed at the national DECA convention in Atlanta, Ga., his second year at the national level.

Olson explained a number of criteria are used in selecting the DECA Student of the Year. "Several years ago a point system was devised for selection of a student who contributed in an outstanding way to the overall DECA program," she said.

"The student must have served our chapter as an officer, competed in contest, have a good grade average, supported the chapter activities and have excellent employer ratings," Olson said.

In addition, the student must have fulfilled his or her responsibilities and been a good student and worker, she said.

Brent Stephens, chairman of the DECA Advisory Committee, presented the scholarship to Davis.

"This is a special scholarship," Stephens claimed. He explained that the scholarship was established by DECA students who used their own resources to set up the fund several years ago and who formulated the criteria to be used in selecting the winner. The recipient is chosen by the advisory committee.

"It's really an honor as a member of the advisory board to serve in the selection" of the scholarship recipient, Stephens stated.

Receiving special mention at the banquet were nine DECA students who won honors in area and state competition.

In February, 10 DECA students from Pampa attended an area leadership conference and contest in Amarillo, with nine winning awards there. The Pampa chapter won the overall trophy award for having more winners at area than any other school in the Texas Panhandle, Olson said.

"We're proud of all the students," she stated.

Eight of the nine students also competed in state events at Houston in March, with two going on to national competition in Atlanta in April.

In addition to Davis, the other national competitor was Karla Stout, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benny Stout. A junior employed at Dunlap's, Stout won first place in general marketing in area and state.

DECA President Shannon Churchman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Churchman, won second place at area in apparel and accessories. She was able to compete at Houston as an alternate, becoming a state finalist. She is employed at Dunlap's.

Another Dunlap's employee, Michele Wallace won first place in advertising and display at area and competed at state. A junior, she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Stevens.

Senior Steve Cook, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stan Cook, won first place in area in finance and credit and competed in Houston. He works at Hub's Booterie.

Also competing at state, junior Tiffany Bynum gained first in restaurant management at area. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Monte Kempf, she is employed at Harvie's Burgers and Shakes.

Another area first place winner is Julie Rogers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Rogers. Employed at Wal-Mart, she also competed at state in entrepreneurship. The other state competitor is Brent Thomas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Thomas. Working at Kinney Shoes, Thomas won an area first place in the apparel and accessories written event.

Senior Juan Soto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Pablo Soto, helped the local chapter win the area overall trophy by winning third place in food marketing. He works at Nicky Britten's.

Olson presented a special award to Travis Lively Jr. of Pampa Hardware Co., who has employed at least one DECA student each year since the program started in 1964. "That's a pretty good record," she stated.

Lively wasn't able to attend the banquet since he was busy engraving plaques and trophies for Friday's Harvester Band banquet, Olson explained.

Accepting the award for him was James Winkleblack, Lively's first DECA student in September, 1964.

"We had the hardest time back then convincing him that he needed a student," Winkleblack recalled. But Lively learned to appreciate the students and has since employed about 30 DECA students in the past 21 years, he said.

Olson also presented special awards to Dunlap's and K-Mart for having employed DECA students five years in a row "without a break."

"When you have employers like that, you can't go wrong," she said, expressing her appreciation for the businesses in town that have always been willing to help in finding a student a job.

Recognized for their assistance in helping students prepare for contests were Rick Clark, Al Redmond, C. L. Barbaree, L. T. Johnson and Mrs. Kim Hackett. Darrell Nordeen was honored for a newspaper advertisement from Celanese Chemical Co. recognizing DECA students during National DECA Week.

Davis and Cook made a special presentation to Benny Stout for his assistance as a chaperon at the state convention.

Also recognized by the students Thursday were the members of the advisory board, parents and employers who helped with the DECA dance, all employers of DECA students in the past year, and news reporter Larry Hollis.

Members of the advisory committee in the past year in addition to Stephens are Mary Summers, Benny and Marcia Stout, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Churchman, Hub Homer, Jim Dudley, Gordon Bird, Rutley Chalk, Louise Fletcher and Martin Amlung.

Assisting with the dance were Mr. and Mrs. Stan Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Free, Mr. and Mrs. John Earl, Mrs. Phyllis Harden, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Sprinkle, Penny Summers, Hub Homer, Mr. and Mrs. John Pontious, Mike Lopez and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Bird.

Cafeteria chain changes with times

DALLAS (AP) — When Wyatt Cafeterias regional vice president Kenneth Nutt was given jurisdiction over the company's very first cafeteria, a 40-year-old neighborhood landmark, he made the mistake of trying to straighten out the mixed-up chairs.

"There were high-backed chairs mixed with low-backed chairs," he said.

But some of the cafeteria's mainstay elderly customers, long accustomed to sitting at a favorite table in a favorite chair, revolted.

And Nutt had to mix the chairs all up again.

Looking around approvingly at the dining room of the new updated Wyatt's location, Nutt said, "These chairs are all the same, so we won't have that problem."

Wyatt Cafeterias is changing along with the Lakewood neighborhood where the first cafeteria began 40 years ago — the precursor of a privately held chain of 122 units with annual sales of almost $200 million.

It claims to be the largest privately held cafeteria company in the country.

Nellie Feggett gets ready to celebrate new location

The first Wyatt's location closed this month and relocated across the street into a Yuppie-style shopping center in the old Lakewood neighborhood that has attracted so many young professionals.

"After 40 years, even a person starts wearing out," quipped Wyatt Chairman Lynn Packer.

The dated red-and-black decor of the original has been replaced by the soft turquoise and beige of the new.

Nellie Feggett, who worked in the old cafeteria for all of its 40 years, says some of Wyatt's long-time customers are set in their ways and were bothered by the closing.

"A few of them are sad to see it shut down. The other ones say it's so pretty over there (at the new location)," said Ms. Feggett, who's served as hostess at both the old and new Lakewood locations.

It's her job to make sure things run smoothly, which includes seeing that certain strong-minded regulars get their favorite tables each day if possible.

In the early days, customers' trays were carried to their tables for them, a practice not totally abandoned even now, if there are customers who need help, Ms. Feggett said.

While the quality of food remains high, she said, the variety has changed as much as the neighborhood the Lakewood Wyatt's serves.

"We just have all sorts of things. I can't even start to name them," she said.

Packer says the selection covers from 15 to 18 different salads, 10 to 12 entrees, up to 18 vegetables and 15 to 20 desserts.

He declines to name his own personal favorite:

"If I were quoted, my doctor would say I'm supposed to be on a low calorie diet."

Packer and Wyatt President James Muns are sons-in-law of R.S. Bell, who founded the chain with Earle Wyatt.

Although the cafeteria chain as it's known today was started in 1946, the company began in 1931 as Wyatt Food Stores, which first offered barbecue sandwiches and cornbread along with the groceries.

Bolstered by government contracts to feed workers at defense plants during World War II, the Wyatt chain finally sold its food stores in 1955, Packer said. The buyer, Kroger Co., used the stores as a base to enter the Dallas market.

Over the years, Wyatt Cafeterias expanded beyond Texas into a nine-state operation, mostly in the Southwest and West.

"The key to our success has been being able to feed the masses and at the same time presenting ourselves to each individual customer as somebody special and giving them quality (and a low price)," Packer said. "Some have referred to it as the super-market of the restaurants."

He said the average ticket at Wyatt's is $4.20.

Despite the advent of fast food, Packer says the cafeteria business is doing well, particularly at Wyatt's. "We have had 18 years of increased sales and profits," he said.

But he considers every place that serves food to be a competitor.

"I think a good popcorn stand is a competitor," he said.

"If we want to go out to eat and it snows or rains and we eat at home, that meal's gone forever. If you decide to buy a new dress and it snows or rains, you're still going to buy a new dress," he said, illustrating the difficulty of the food service business.

But despite all the new trends in the food business, Packer says, "We still pride ourselves in just serving good basic quality food."

Airlines start selling security

NEW YORK (AP) — Faced with a stunning decline in overseas business because of fears about terrorism, two U.S. trans-Atlantic airlines have reversed their strategy and started touting security precautions as a marketing tactic.

This past week the parent company of Pan American World Airways, which plans to serve 32 European cities this summer, more than any other U.S. airline, announced formation of what it called an elite, highly visible security force to protect passengers and crew.

American Airlines, which serves six European destinations, said it was intensifying security procedures by requiring passport information when making trans-Atlantic reservations, X-ray screening or hand-inspection of all checked bags, use of a questionnaire about checked bags at all U.S. cities, and detailed inspections of all aircraft prior to departure.

Both airlines have added a $5 surcharge per passenger to help defray the cost of the increased security programs.

"We will put into operation a program that will involve the most highly trained detection experts and the most sophisticated equipment to screen passengers, employees, baggage, airport facilities and aircraft at Pan Am locations around the world," C. Edward Acker, chairman and chief executive officer of Pan Am Corp., said in announcing the strategy change.

Acker also said the service would be sold to other airlines. The approach of attempting to hide the dangers of air travel, he said, "is no longer acceptable, as it does not recognize today's realities."

In contrast, Trans World Airlines has been quietly instituting added security, spokeswoman Sally C. McElwreath said. TWA also has imposed a $5 surcharge, but does not plan to publicize its anti-terrorist steps, she said.

"Maybe we made a mistake by not blowing our horn about it," she said. "But we believe it's somewhat negative marketing. You do have to reassure the public, but not talk about it."

Travel agents, which book 70 percent of airline tickets, are divided over whether advertising anti-terrorist security will help. Some say it only scares more passengers away, informs would-be terrorists about obstacles and will have little immediate effect.

"I think the problem is that it may be a little bit late," said Joel Wechsler, owner of Federal Travel Service in Boston. "People who cancel their reservations to Europe probably have made other plans by now."

Citizens Bank top-rated

Citizens Bank and Trust Co. has received a top ranking for 1986 from a national bank analysis firm.

The Pampa bank gained an A rating from Sheshunoff and Co. in Austin.

Notification of the rating was made in a letter from Alex Sheshunoff to Robert Wilson, Citizens Bank president.

"As you know, Sheshunoff & Company is the leading bank analysis firm in the country," Sheshunoff writes. "... Your bank's rating is an A, making your bank one of the best rated in the country."

The Sheshunoff Ratings are published in The Bank Ratings of All U.S. Banks 1986. Ratings are based on the same objective criteria bankers use to evaluate their own bank and other banks, Sheshunoff notes.

"We have weighted these factors to reflect the level of importance given each factor by bank presidents in the Sheshunoff Annual Survey on Bank Safety and Soundness," Sheshunoff writes.

"I would like to congratulate you and your senior management on a job well done," he adds. "I hope you are having another excellent year."

Wilson said, "We are glad to have gotten the rating," adding it "underlines the strength of Pampa's financial institutions."

Brown Foundation gets Golden Nail

The M.K. Brown Foundation was one of the recent recipients of the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce's Golden Nail Awards, which are presented to individuals and organizations in recognition of their support of the arts in the Panhandle.

The Foundation's award was given in recognition of a recent contribution to the Carson County Square House Museum in Panhandle. Chairman Bill Waters accepted the award for the foundation in a ceremony at the Sheraton Hotel. It was nominated for the honor by the Amarillo Symphony and the Panhandle museum.

The Brown Foundation, which supports a vast number of charitable causes throughout the Panhandle, was chartered in 1960, named for its founder and benefactor Montagu Kingsmill Brown.

Brown was a native of England who came to this country shortly after serving in the Boer War. He was employed by the White Deer Land Company in Pampa in 1903 and lived here until his death in 1964.

Brown became a naturalized citizen of the United States in 1915. His generosity and philanthropy became widely known. His myriad of interests encompassed music and all the arts.

Foremost among the activities of the Foundation, to which he left the bulk of his estate, was the building of the M.K. Brown Memorial Civic Auditorium for the city of Pampa free of any cost to the city.

While Brown was the author of the Foundation and the plan for its activities, it remained for Wm. Jarrel Smith, his longtime friend and lawyer, to conceive the idea of his vehicle for philanthropy. Smith served as the secretary-treasurer and principal manager of the Foundation from its inception until his death in 1974.

Brown's lawyers, Wm. Jarrell Smith, Arthur M. Teed, Thos. L. Wade and Bill Waters became trustees of the Foundation.

Present trustees, in addition to Waters, are Mrs. Wm. Jarrel Smith, vice chairman, and David E. Holt, secretary-treasurer. Among the other recipients of the Golden Nail Awards were Mrs. Don D. Harrington and T. Boone Pickens.

Soviets admit to panic at Chernobyl

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet media reported for the first time Saturday that some workers at the Chernobyl nuclear plant panicked and deserted during the accident, and said they were being disciplined.

Deputy Premier Ivan Silaev told a television interviewer that the crippled reactor's temperature has dropped to 392 degrees Fahrenheit. It was reported at 572 degrees eight days ago.

"We are calm today, and confident there will be no relapse, or any increase in temperature," Silaev said. He said he saw miners tunneling under the reactor to make a shaft that will be filled with concrete to prevent radiation from seeping into the ground.

Silaev emphasized "the heroism of our Soviet man" toiling to clean up after the April 26 explosion and fire in the reactor, 80 miles north of Kiev.

By contrast, the weekly magazine Ogonyok quoted Grigory Revenko, head of the Communist Party in the Kiev region, as saying he could not hide the fact that "there were cases of people deserting, panicking and trying to pin the blame on others" after the accident.

"A sharp examination of each individual is being carried out," he said. "We have already got rid of a few people, including people in leadership positions. They have parted with their party (membership) tickets."

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda reported Monday that three party members were punished for underestimating the scope of the accident and bungling the subsequent evacuation of nearby residents.

The youth newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda said Saturday that Yuri Zagalsky, a construction worker at the reactor and a leader of the Communist Party's youth branch, Komsomol, disappeared on the night of the accident and did not appear for days afterwards.

"He didn't help at the work camp" set up for evacuees, it said. "He was busy with personal matters."

Zagalsky was dismissed from his post in the Komsomol and probably will be expelled, the paper said. Komsomol membership is a vital stepping stone to membership in the regular party.

The paper said Galina Lupy, a Komsomol member in charge of the plant's food department, panicked and went to stay with relatives. It said she had to be summoned back by telegram nine days later, but did not say if she was being punished.

Of the three party members Pravda earlier said were punished, one was expelled from the party and the two others were given official reprimands. The paper said they may face criminal prosecution.

Also Saturday, Lev P. Feoktistov, a scientist and deputy director of the State Committee on the Use of Atomic Energy, appeared on the current affairs television program, "Studio Nine," giving Soviet television viewers their first detailed report on radiation released by the accident.

Feoktistov said the accident's effects could not be compared to those of a nuclear bomb, and insisted that radiation levels were not dangerous in Kiev, the Soviet Union's third-largest city with 2.4 million residents.

An American doctor who was treating victims of the accident indicated Friday that 13 people had died, including two killed in the initial explosion and 11 who later died of radiation exposure. He said that altogether 299 people were hospitalized with injuries.

Dr. Robert Gale of the University of California at Los Angeles returned home late Friday but said he planned to return to the Soviet Union soon.

"We believe we can rescue a substantial number (of victims)," Gale told reporters at an airport news conference in Los Angeles.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev said Wednesday night in a television speech that the accident began with a power surge and a sudden buildup of hydrogen as the No. 4 reactor was being shut down for routine maintenance.

Blix said the Soviets have agreed to cooperate in the agency's investigation.

Pakistan repels Afghan jets

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Two U.S.-made Pakistani F-16 fighter jets shot down an attacking Afghan MiG-21 inside Pakistani airspace, damaged a second and chased off two others, local government officials said.

Pakistan's forces along the mountainous border between the two central Asian nations were placed on full alert, the officials said.

The Foreign Ministry issued a brief statement on the air engagement near the border town of Parachinar and warned Afghanistan's Soviet-backed communist government to halt such attacks or face the consequences.

Meanwhile, guerrilla officials said hundreds of elite Soviet and Afghan commandos on Saturday attacked rebel bases in south-eastern Afghanistan, within 25 miles of Parachinar, and that both sides suffered heavy losses.

The commandos were backed by Afghan and Soviet jets and helicopters, said the rebel officials, based in the Pakistani border city of Peshawar. An estimated 115,000 Soviet troops in Afghanistan help the Kabul government fight Pakistan-supported Moslem rebels.

Government officials in Parachinar told The Associated Press by telephone that four Afghan MiG-21s roared across the border just after dawn and were diving on targets east of the town when they were met by two F-16s.

Two of the Afghan jets immediately raced back into Afghan airspace as the Pakistani jets homed in on the other two, the officials said.

One of the Afghan planes was hit by a missile fired by an F-16 and exploded and the other was seen trailing smoke but managed to escape, they said.

"We saw a flame in the sky and we heard the thunder of jets and then there was a blast," said Abdul Ghaffar Khan, assistant political agent in Parachinar.

It was the first time Pakistan reported downing an Afghan plane.

Lady Harvesters win 4A state track meet

FINISHING FIRST — Pampa sophomore Tanya Lidy (far right) is just inches from carrying the baton across the finish line in the 400-meter relay. Lidy, along with relay team members Yolanda Brown, Courtney Brown and Sandee Stokes won the event with a time of 47.8 in the Class 4A girls' state track meet. (Staff Photo by Dan Murray)

Nobody does it better.
Makes me feel sad for the rest.
Nobody does it half as good as you.
Baby, you're the best
—Carly Simon

BY DAN MURRAY
Sports Writer

AUSTIN—With Panhandle determination and Pampa style, the greatest Lady Harvesters track team ever took a muggy, gray Austin Friday and turned it to gold.

Today Pampa is the Texas Class 4A girls track champion because seven girls on a mission came into a Memorial Stadium sauna and reached the only goal they've had.

The Lady Harvesters piled up 78 points to Brenham's 72 in a grueling duel that wasn't decided until the final 200 meters of the climactic 1600-meter relay.

Pampa's battle with Brenham was a torrid, steamed affair, for a lesser finish in any single event by the Lady Harvesters would have meant losing the championship.

That didn't happen on Pampa's day in the vanished sun and 35,000 people stood and cheered as Tonya Lidy crossed the finish line and the Lady Harvesters became state champions.

Pampa entered the 1600 relay, the final event of the meet, leading Brenham 62-52, and knowing it needed a medal to win state. Brenham broke to a huge lead, followed by Sweetwater and Stephenville. Behind the legs of Sandee Stokes, LaQuita Brown and Schivon Parker, Lidy got the baton in fifth place. She began making up ground immediately.

Lidy took over third with 150 meters to go and came around the final turn like a bullet.

"Here comes Pampa on the inside," the PA announcer belted. "It's the Green and Gold. Look Out. Here comes Pampa."

Austin roared and Lidy charged relentlessly home, beating Stephenville for second by .7 seconds and finishing in 3:56.0 to the crowd's cheers.

"Pampa's taken Austin by storm," the PA announcer said. Then there were hugs, squeals, and tears as the Lady Harvesters only began to realize what they'd just done.

"Fifth last year, first this year!" they screamed in unison. That was their only goal. Anything less than a state championship and the Lady Harvesters wouldn't have been happy.

Last year's fifth-place finish here was the only track meet Pampa has lost since 1984, and the Lady Harvesters vowed then not to let it happen again.

"Our only goal was to win state," Stokes, the senior, said. "We won because of hard work, determination and we're not quitters."

That showed on the face of Courtney Brown, who suffered a back spasm finishing second in the 100 and tumbled in pain to the track. She had to be carried off the field on a stretcher.

An hour later, she was standing shakily on the infield smiling, with tears welling in her eyes. "This is wonderful," she whispered. The Lady Harvesters never had to work harder for that moment.

The day began in an early-morning mist with Stokes in the long jump. She leaped 18-0 on her final jump to win fourth place and four points, while Stephenville gave Pampa a break and passed Brenham for first.

Then, in a wet discus ring across San Jacinto Drive, junior Andrea Hopkins uncorked a school record throw of 131-1 on her first attempt. It won her a silver medal.

That left Pampa with 12 points after the field events, and coach Gary Cornelsen optimistic.

"Andrea broke the school record on her first throw. She feels pretty good about that," he said.

"If we can jump on 'em in the sprint relay we'll already have more points than we got last year," he said.

The Lady Harvesters didn't let Cornelsen down. Stokes, Courtney and Yolanda Brown and Lidy ripped off a 47.8 in the sprint relay, edging Wharton and Fort Worth Poly for first.

Lidy's teammates didn't know the order of finish until she greeted them on the infield after the race and held up her finger signaling No. 1. They jumped and squealed.

Courtney Brown was next up in the 100-meter dash, and in Lane 1 she ran a 12.1 behind Wharton's Lois Royster for a silver medal.

Brown suffered a back spasm as she crossed the finish line and crashed to the track. She was carried off on a stretcher, but later, with her mother's help, rejoined her teammates.

When Pampa won a bronze medal in the 800 relay with Stokes, Yolanda, Laquita and Lidy running a 1:43.0 and barely nipping Bay City, the state championship was in sight.

Lidy brought it 200 meters closer when she won that event, burying the field as she raced down the far stretch in 24.2.

Then it was a matter of winning a medal in the 1600 meter relay, and the Lady Harvesters did. It was time to let it sink in.

"This is the ultimate feeling. Agghhh!" Coach Mike Lopez said. "They had to fight for it and they did, and now they're undefeated. You think back on the cold weather and hard work and this just caps it."

"I hope Pampa realizes what it's got. These are great kids and Pampa has someone to look up to."

It was the Lady Harvesters' first ever state title, and Cornelsen said, "I still don't think they realize what they've done."

At least they know what they went through to do it. "We missed our prom," they said simultaneously. "The practice and the cold..."

Then squeals and a million words at once. The Lady Harvesters planned for their return to Pampa, screamed loudly and with glee:

"Party! Party! Party!" As champions.

Smith, Burns claim the gold

BY DAN MURRAY
Staff Writer

AUSTIN—Quietly, away from the Memorial Stadium oval, Miami's Lanece Lisenby and Wheeler's Richard Smith went about their business Friday.

Lisenby went to work at 9 a.m. in the far end zone's long jump pit, while Smith strode to the discus field and waited.

With the final jump of 17-7/8, Lisenby owned the girls Class 1A gold medal, with only Paradise's Johna Tackel left to jump.

Tackel hit a good jump and Lisenby watched the measurement apprehensively: 17-11/4. Tackel ran and hugged her coach. Lisenby frowned then shrugged.

"I can go 18 but I didn't," the Miami senior said. "I'm not going to worry about that I didn't take home the gold. There's nothing I can do about it now."

Lisenby still had two events to go and the silver medal in her pocket.

One of what proved to be several rain delays held up Wheeler's Smith scheduled 5 p.m. start in the discus. He waited nervously for the start.

"I'm nervous man," he said. "I wish they'd hurry up. The state championship's mine to take home. I can just feel it."

His moment comes, and Smith hurls his first throw 156-0. He claps his hands loudly, clinches his fist above his head and whoops.

"I liked that one," he says.

No one throws within seven feet on his effort and Smith later "busts" one 159-9. The gold medal is his.

Canadian's Kim McEntire, just a freshman, turned in a valiant performance Saturday in Class AAA girls 800 meters, finishing third against the state record pace.

Wheeler's Dickie Salyer finished fifth in the Class A boys' long jump with a leap of 20-11. Enick Williams of Milano won it with a jump of 23-1/4.

Miami's Lisenby scratched repeatedly in the girls triple jump and failed to finish in the top six, but she was the favorite in Saturday's 400 meters.

Groom's Darron Echle, who with his sister, Erin, made up the only brother-sister team at this year's meet, finished seventh in Class 1A boys' 800 meters, completed in a pelting rainstorm.

The events scheduled for Saturday afternoon were postponed by a heavy rainstorm. Late Saturday, UIL officials were still trying to decide if they'd be completed Saturday night or postponed until another day.

Saturday afternoon after the rains cleared, Canadian's Windi Burns won the 100 meter hurdles in her second classification in two years. Burns won last year at Claude and Saturday did it for Canadian.

Running in Lane 7, Burns took the lead by the 40 meter mark and ran a flawless race to the finish for a 14.9 and nother gold medal.

WARREN HASSE

THE QUESTION OF WHETHER the taxpayers should fund a municipal golf course is a testy one, and has become a political golfball. The game, which started out with the Chamber of Commerce and the City pulling the cart now finds the County Commission playing caddy, and trying to figure out which club to hit. And that selection is not simple.

To get some help, the ultimate wisdom has been to poll the folks who would be primarily responsible for paying, you and me. And we really don't have much information to assist with our shot selection.

We've tried to listen objectively, and sought some additional input from the most knowledgeable source in the county, which surprisingly, none of the three aforementioned have resourced. To help you get started, and hopefully opening your mind to further questions, here are some thoughts and arguments, facts and figures, attested and unattested.

Yes, a municipal course, open to the public would be wonderful. It might be helpful to a small degree in attracting business and industry. It certainly would keep many local golfers from having to go out of town, in the absence of an inability to obtain permission to play at either of the city's two local courses, currently private. It would be very helpful for families and beginning golfers and for school programs.

A hardworking group which has been pushing for the course for a couple of years has stated it has secured offers of donated labor and equipment, and outright financial contributions (reportedly in the neighborhood of $100,000) to assist in construction. Two different land locations are presumably available, both very handy to the community. Such a facility would presumably attract other golfers from surrounding areas to Pampa, and result in additional revenue dollars.

And there is always the argument that local governments assist all other sports enthusiasts, but provide nothing for golfers. There are swimming pools, tennis courts, softball diamonds, the rodeo arena, parks and playgrounds, all supported by tax dollars and to benefit very small, specialized groups of enthusiasts. But nothing for golfers.

We went to Hart Warren, recently retired professional at the Pampa Country Club, who for 30 years in that job, has had his hand on the pulse of the golfers of the Panhandle, and the costs of the sport, more so than any other single local resource. As past two-term president of the North Texas Professional Golfers Association, and a man who has made his living off the sport and its participants, he would naturally want greater and greater involvement. But he also laid out some items of concern.

PGA research shows, that like a gas station or fast food restaurant, some population numbers are needed. A minimum of 10,000 population for every 9 holes, and Pampa currently has 27 holes between the PCC and Celanese. The National Golf Foundation, which uses annual national survey to compile a long list of publications for use by the sports' specialists, says the national average cost of a single golf hole last year was $35,000. And for it's new, additional nine holes, Tascosa Country Club in Amarillo is spending $900,000, which figures $100,000 per hole.

Again, according to Warren, there are a maximum of 280 golfing days per year here, and a municipal course needs an average of 100 rounds per day to pay its way, a figure unreachd by any area courses other than Amarillo's Ross Rogers, which still gets a huge city tax dollar subsidy. As a minimum fee of $5 per round, and an unlikely 100 rounds per day over 280-weather allowable playing days, this would result in only $140,000 revenue from golf alone.

In addition to building the course, an additional $80-100,000 worth of tractors, mowers, etc., simply for maintenance would be needed. A sprinkler system would run about $350,000, minus whatever donated labor and materials. Then you add in employees, utilities, general maintenance, and the costs mount.

There is the question of what detrimental effect a tax-subsidized municipal course would have on the current two private layouts. Would it siphon off enough golfers to force financial difficulties on them, resulting in three courses, all of them struggling to survive? Would the PCC suffer severely enough to lose membership? Drop services? Lose the major tournaments which attract outside golfers, such as the Tri-State Seniors and Top O Texas events? And would a very standard PCC be, in fact, detrimental to the continual search for additional business and industry?

A little overview of various courses around the Panhandle show most are subsidized by either taxes or a grandfather industry. Some were built by land developers to attract homesite construction. One has to ask if those pushing so hard for a muni course here have personal benefits beyond simply a place to play golf. The PGA reports courses going bankrupt all over. Kleburg County, in the heart of a rich, populous area (involving another Celanese operation) is one that is suffering severely, having lost $225,000 the last two years on a golf operation.

Alternatives? Few, and not favorable. Corporations which run golf courses don't build them, they take over when the original investor goes under. Will a developer be interested for a housing addition, such as resulted in Hunsley Hills at Canyon, a still struggling operation?

Or has anyone with official connection with the three major groups...City, County and C of C sat down with Celanese's New York management to see if some plan could be worked out to make the current 9-hole company course a public-private course, eventually to be expanded to 18 holes with help in the form of equipment and tax breaks?

How good a course do we want? Clubhouse facilities? Practice areas? Yearly memberships? Cars? Watered fairways? Professional on duty? Lights? These are just a few thoughts, pieces of information to help with decision-making and provoking other questions. And we suggest that before any group decides to commit taxpayer dollars it study long, hard, and thoroughly with expert advice from folks who have Pampa and golf first and foremost, guys like Hart Warren and Johnny Austin, his predecessor and Pampa native, and Richard Ellis, another Pampa native who works with such operations around the Southwest daily.

I, too, would like a municipal course. But much must be weighed into the decision, including the cost of a possible takeover of Lake McClellan to save it from complete extinction, a new jail facility which will soon be mandated by governmental agencies, and who knows what else. Where does a completely new golf course fit into the priority list?

Pampa's Hansen part of record team in Okie run

When opportunity knocked, Chris Hansen of Pampa answered... and in record-breaking fashion.

Hansen, one of the top marathon runners in the panhandle, was part of a four-man team (Can-Tex Express) that set a new record in winning the 19th annual Okie Relays held Saturday. The 31-year old Hansen teamed with Hector Rios, 18, of Liberal, Kans. Kirk Kear, 18, of Perryton and Tim Robinson, 29, of Garden City, Kans. to win the 45-mile race in three hours, 41 minutes and 53 seconds, breaking the old record by nine minutes. The second-place team finished in three hours, 48 minutes and 30 seconds.

Hansen, who was third individually with a time of 58:02, was a last-minute entry in the race. Hansen said he received a call Thursday from a team that had lost two of their runners and he was asked to fill in.

"I jumped at the chance. We then got Robinson, who is a real good runner."

Rios won the marathon with a time of 53:03 while Kear was second at 57:02. Robinson was fourth at 53:46.

"We had a good tailwind and it was rainy and real cool, but those are ideal conditions," Hansen said.

It was Hansen's first time to enter the relays, which started at the Kansas line at Elkhart and went across Oklahoma to the Texas line to Texhoma.

"You can bet I'll be back next year," Hansen added.

Snow Chief wins Preakness Stakes

BALTIMORE (AP) — Snow Chief, a major disappointment in the Kentucky Derby, redeemed himself Saturday when he overtook pacesetter Groovy on the final turn and coasted to victory in the $534,400 Preakness Stakes at Pimlico.

Kentucky Derby winner Ferdinand finished second, four lengths back, ending veteran jockey Bill Shoemaker's quest for his first Triple Crown triumph.

Broad Brush was third in the field of seven 3-year-olds.

Groovy, who had set the early pace in the Derby before folding and finishing last, again had the lead going into the final turn with Snow Chief stalking him most of the way.

Jockey Alex Solis, a 20-year-old riding in his first Preakness, guided the California-bred Snow Chief over the 1 1/2 miles in 1:54.45, more than a second off the Preakness record.

Following Broad Brush came Badger Land, Miracle Wood, Groovy and Clear Choice.

Snow Chief, who folded on the far turn in the May 3 Derby following a blistering early pace and finished 11th in a 16-horse field, had no trouble Saturday in 86-degree weather.

The son of Reflected Glory-Miss Snowflake had gone into the Derby with five straight victories, including the Florida and Santa Anita derbies, and had become the youngest equine millionaire in history.

The victory in the 111th Preakness was worth $411,900 and raised Snow Chief's earnings to $2,130,940.

Snow Chief returned $7.20, $4.80 and $3.60 to his backers. Ferdinand paid $4.80 and $3.20 and Broad Brush was $3 to show.

Ferdinand, despite his Derby victory, was sent off as the third choice behind the favored D. Wayne Lukas entry of Badger Land and Clear Choice and second-choice Snow Chief.

Mel Stute, trainer of Snow Chief, said, "Today, he vindicated my judgment. I knew he could run this good."

Stute had said before the race that he did not plan to run Snow Chief in the June 7 Belmont Stakes, the third leg of thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown. Instead, he was pointing the horse to the Memorial Day Jersey Derby at Garden State Park.

Surprising Rockets put Lakers on ropes

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets pushed around the defending NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers pretty good and that made Lakers' guard Magic Johnson angry.

"Not too many people have taken it to us and they have," Johnson said after the Rockets won 117-109 Friday night and took a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

"We've got to control the boards. They were attacking and we were backing up."

"I haven't seen our team react like this before. I've never seen our team let another team have three or four rebounds on one play," he continued.

Johnson said it was clear what had to be done: "We've got to put our hard hats on now and go to work."

The series resumes Sunday, at 2:30 p.m. EDT, in The Summit, where another Houston victory would put the Lakers within one game of elimination.

The Lakers have not missed an NBA championship series since they were eliminated in 1981 by the Rockets, nor in that time have they ever trailed a series 2-1.

Johnson's wrath centered around Houston forward Akeem Olajuwon, who scored 40 points, grabbed 12 rebounds and led the Rockets' second half victory surge Friday night.

"I'm upset because they got so many second shots, that's why they had 12 more shots than we did," Johnson said. "That shows they were more aggressive."

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 33 points to lead the Lakers but he could manage only four rebounds against Olajuwon and his Twin Tower mate Ralph Sampson.

"He's tough but we all have a job to do," Johnson said of Olajuwon. "You can't let a man with that much ability get a shot and then the rebound for another shot."

The Rockets out-rebounded the Lakers 45-34 overall and held a 20-10 edge in offensive boards.

Sampson, who finished with 18 points, got the Rockets going early after they missed their first six shots and Los Angeles jumped to an 8-0 lead.

The Rockets held a 60-59 half-time lead and the Lakers emerged from a ruggedly played third quarter for a 91-90 lead going into the final period.

But Lewis Lloyd, who finished with 26 points, hit the first two baskets of the fourth quarter and the Rockets never trailed again, although Los Angeles tied the game four times.

"That third quarter was a pure work of art," Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley said. "Both teams were battling and wouldn't let the other team get away. The game was fiercely competitive.

"We've never been down 2-1 in a playoff the last four years so we've got to come back now and even this thing up."

Rockets guard Robert Reid does not intend to let his team relax, despite its two-game winning streak.

"LA isn't on the brink (of losing the series), they are at least 20 feet away," Reid said. "But I think they do take us seriously. We're more than a sparring match. It means that we have worked hard and our game plan has worked.

"We'll just keep running and running and running."

Jabbar, 39, expects another physical game Sunday.

"We have a tough job ahead and to get it done is going to be uphill but we've been there before," Jabbar said.

Rookie leads BoSox past Rangers

BOSTON (AP)—Rey Quinones hit a pair of run-scoring doubles in his major-league debut and the Boston Red Sox rode a six-run second inning Saturday for an 8-2 victory over the Texas Rangers. Quinones, a shortstop called up from Pawtucket of the International League a few hours earlier, doubled off the left-field wall in his first at-bat, keying the big second inning. Winner Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 4-3, gave up nine hits, including Larry Parrish's two-run homer in the sixth. Don Slaught of the Rangers was hit in the face by a pitch from Boyd in the fourth inning. Slaught was carried off the field on a stretcher and was bleeding from face but was conscious. He was taken a hospital for treatment. Quinones, who scored in the second inning on Marty Barrett's single, walked on four pitches in the fourth. He then hit an RBI double in the sixth and later scored on a passed ball by Darrell Porter.

Charlie Hough, 2-1, was tagged for six hits and six runs in failing to get through the second. Jim Rice started the Boston second with a double and Don Baylor was hit by a pitch. Tony Armas popped out, but Rich Gedman singled home Rice. Ed Romero delivered an RBI single and Quinones doubled, driving home Gedman. Barrett then lined a two-run single to center and Evans followed with an RBI double to center.

Valentine gets contract extension

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP)—Texas Rangers Manager Bobby Valentine, in his first full year at the helm of the American League club, says he and General Manager Tom Grieve have something in common besides new contract extensions. "We have a common goal. That's to produce a winner in Texas," Valentine said Friday after signing an agreement to manage the team through 1989.

Financial terms of the contracts were not disclosed. Valentine, previously a coach with the New York Mets, was named manager on May 16, 1985, after Doug Rader was fired. Grieve was appointed vice president and general manager in September 1984 following the dismissal of Joe Klein, while Stone assumed his duties in November 1983.

Prior to joining the Rangers, Stone held a top-level management position with the Western Co. of North America, Chiles' oil-field drilling company in Fort Worth. "I'm very happy. There had been reports I was going to be offered a new contract, but it didn't happen until last night on the plane flying here from Detroit," Valentine said.

Celtics rally past Bucks to take 3-0 series lead

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Kevin McHale scored 29 points and Robert Parish 28, and the Boston Celtics outscored Milwaukee 25-10 in the first 10 minutes of the fourth quarter Saturday to beat the Bucks 111-107 and take a 3-0 lead in their best-of-seven NBA semifinal playoff series.

The Celtics built a 107-97 lead with 2:12 left on a three-point goal by Larry Bird, who finished with 19 points. The Bucks pulled to within 108-105 with 42 seconds left on a basket by Craig Hodges, but two free throws by Danny Ainge and another by McHale sewed up the victory.

serve guard Jerry Sichting were involved in a scuffle at 10:17, but they were quickly separated and Cummings was called for an offensive foul.

Game 4 is scheduled for Sunday in the Milwaukee Arena, and a victory by the Celtics would send them into the NBA finals against the winner of the Houston-Los Angeles Lakers Western Conference finals, which the Rockets lead 2-1.

The Celtics, down 60-53 at half-time, made the first four points of the third period to narrow the gap to 60-57. But Terry Cummings scored nine points in a 15-5 streak as the Bucks took a 75-62 lead with 6:39 remaining in the third period, their largest lead of the game.

The Celtics took their first lead of the game, 94-92, on a jump shot by Bird with 7:48 remaining, then built the 107-97 margin as the Bucks went four minutes without a point.

The Celtics, trailing by 13 points midway through the third quarter, closed the gap to five entering the fourth quarter as McHale and Parish, Boston's two big men, wore down the Bucks inside.

The Celtics rallied, but the Bucks held an 87-82 edge entering the fourth period.

Three foul shots by Alton Lister and a three-point goal by Paul Pressey narrowed the deficit to 107-103 with 1:06 remaining.

Boston began the period with an 8-3 spurt to tie the game 90-90 with 8:47 left. Cummings and re-

Sidney Moncrief, who missed Game 1 of the series with an injured left heel, played his second consecutive game, scoring 15 of his 19 first-half points in the first quarter as Milwaukee took a 35-32 lead.

Moncrief finished with 24 points and Cummings led the Bucks with 27.

Once the field is completed, a rainstorm could work to the benefit of Simon, 52, trying to become the oldest driver ever to start the 500.

If rain washes out qualifying after the field is full, those already qualified would start the race, but if positions remained open at the official close of time trials — 7 p.m. EDT Sunday — another round of qualifying would be held on the next clear day.

Voters will make final decisions in 10 runoff races

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas voters will make their final decisions on Democratic and Republican nominees for the 1987 Legislature in June 7 runoff elections.

Two hot Democratic runoff races will complete the party's slate for the state Senate.

There are six Democratic runoff contests and two Republican runoffs for the Texas House.

However, the real makeup of the 1987 Legislature will not be known until after the Nov. 4 general election when Democrats and Republicans will tangle in seven Senate races and 45 House races.

The June 7 vote in District 21 will decide whether state Rep. William Hall or Judy Zaffirini, both of Laredo, will be the Democratic nominee to face former state Rep. Bennie Bock, a New Braunfels Republican, in November. Ms. Zaffirini, vice chairman of the Texas Democratic Party, got about 44 percent of the vote on May 3 in a four-candidate race to Hall's 35 percent.

The other Senate runoff pits state Rep. Jesse Oliver against former Rep. Eddie Bernice Johnson, both of Dallas, in District 23. Oliver got 36.3 percent in the May primary while Ms. Johnson got 36 percent.

The Democratic nominee will face Republican Darrell Castillo of Dallas.

The closest runoff race resulting from May voting was for District 32, where Jane Lack of Victoria got 43 percent of the vote. A local canvass of results put Jack Whitlow of Refugio into the runoff by a single vote over Rex Easley Jr. of Victoria, reversing Easley's single-vote victory from unofficial returns.

The winner meets Republican Steve Holzheuser of Victoria.

Two incumbents will be fighting for their jobs in two other Democratic runoff races. In District 20, Rep. Jerry Clark of Buna is challenged by W.L. Pate Jr., Beaumont. There is no Republican candidate in November.

Rep. Paul Ragsdale, Dallas, faces Fred Blair, also of Dallas, in District 110. Ragsdale had 35 percent of the vote in May and Blair 33 percent in a three-candidate race. There is no Republican opponent.

The other Democratic House runoffs include:

Greg Golden of Whitesboro against Curtis Lee Seidits Jr. of Sherman in District 62. The winner meets Mary Ann Pittman, Van Alstyne, in November. Brenda Christian of Dallas is in a runoff contest with Jerald Larry of Dallas, with the winner meeting Republican Robert Beckles of Dallas in District 111.

In District 119, Jerry Beauchamp, San Antonio, meets Charles P. Jones, San Antonio. There is no Republican candidate.

The two Republican runoffs: Herman Botard of Houston against John Culbertson, also of Houston, in District 125. There is no Democrat candidate.

Richard Bianchi of Kingwood opposing Dan Shelly, Crosby. There is no Democratic candidate in District 127.

Republicans with famous names fighting

DALLAS (AP) — A dance hall operator and a schoolteacher who both well known names are dueling for their party's nomination in the Republican runoff race for land commissioner.

Candidate M.D. Anderson Jr., who did not spend any money campaigning, almost won the May primary outright, taking 47.3 percent of the vote. He faces Grady Yarbrough in the June 7 runoff. Yarbrough took 27.2 percent of the May vote.

George Collis, a McKinney land surveyor, finished third.

Anderson, 36, is a former city councilman of Seven Points, a small town about 50 miles southeast of Dallas. Yarbrough, 48, teaches government and health at John Tyler High School in Tyler.

Incumbent Democrat Garry Mauro, who was unopposed in the primary, says Anderson is capitalizing on the popularity of the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston.

But Anderson credits his success to a "word of mouth" campaign waged by a network of Republican contacts and said his full name, Marion Dudley Anderson Jr., is too lengthy to run on a ballot.

Yarbrough said the similarity of his name to former U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough may have helped him, but added "I'm not apologizing for my name. I've had it for 48 years."

Yarbrough, who holds a real estate certificate and has been a school counselor and assistant principal, said his goals for the commissioner's office are to take a more active role in the state's educational system, something he said Mauro has neglected.

Anderson said he would take the approach of a "hard-working self-made businessman" to the land commissioner's office if elected.

Mauro, elected in 1982, touts his record of increasing the number of loans to veterans from 1,200 per year when he took office to about 5,000 annually over the last three years.

He said he also has launched a veterans housing program and a loan program for home improvements.

The General Land Office administers leases on state lands and processes the income into various state funds, reviews the environmental impact of all activities on state lands and also oversees the veterans' land program.

Pouland endorses Sharp for Railroad Commission

DALLAS (AP) — Two Democrats will square off in a June 7 runoff for nomination to the Railroad Commission, but a third Democrat — the state party chairman — became a third player without appearing on a ballot.

State party chairman Bob Slagle ruled this week that P.S. "Sam" Ervin could not list himself on the ballot with the nickname "Sam." Sam Ervin was the name of the late senator from North Carolina who headed a U.S. Senate committee investigation into the Watergate break-in.

"I've got to run against a dead U.S. senator," state Sen. John Sharp had quipped after the May election that put him into the runoff against P.S. Ervin, a Dallas oil and natural gas consultant P.S.

In the Republican runoff, John Thomas Henderson, an Austin real estate broker, will battle state Rep. Milton E. Fox.

After the May 3 election, Sharp said P.S. Ervin — whose real name is Percy Sprother — could have grabbed about 20 percent of the Democratic vote because of voters' confusion about his name.

But Dallas lawyer John Pouland, who finished third in the primary and endorsed Sharp in the runoff, said he couldn't criticize Ervin for listing himself on the ballot as Sam.

"That's smart politics," said Pouland. "I should have run as John Kennedy Pouland."

Sharp, got 414,023 votes, or 45.2 percent of the vote, while Ervin got 20.5 percent. Pouland finished third by about 4,000 votes in the four-way race, getting 20 percent.

Austin attorney William MacNaughton ran last with 14.2 percent.

Pouland waged a bitter campaign against Sharp in the primary. But he said the Victoria lawmaker is a better candidate than Ervin.

"I disagree with Sharp about half the time," said Pouland. "I disagree with Ervin all the time."

Pouland was southwest coordinator for Gary Hart's presidential campaign.

Candidates for both parties face runoffs on June 7, with the winner of each meeting in November to battle for election to the little-known state agency.

The race for the seat on the oldest state agency, created in 1891, was the only one in which an incumbent was not running.

Henderson, who grabbed 29.9 percent of the Republican vote, outpolled Fox by about 15,000 votes. Fox, a petroleum engineer, received 25.8 percent.

State Rep. Ed Emmett, in third place, had 25 percent of the vote. Ralph E. Hoelscher, a Miles farmer and rancher, was last with 19.1 percent.

Roving peacock never had it so good

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — A doctor's office is an unlikely place for a love affair to develop, but nobody bothered to tell Henry P. that.

But then again, Henry P. has always been known as a rather strange old bird. The "P" stands for peacock.

Nobody knows exactly where Henry, as he is affectionately called by his new friends, came from. He just "flew in" one day a few weeks ago and made the courtyard of a Nacogdoches doctors' building his home.

The folks at the medical building believe one reason Henry has stayed around as long as he has is because of an infatuation. Nobody has told Henry yet that the object of his affections, a huge wild turkey inside one of the medical building offices, is stuffed.

Jo Spurlin first spotted Henry one weekend while she was cleaning one of the medical offices.

"I looked up and saw this shadow come over at first," she said. "I looked up again and did a double-take and there he was."

Ms. Spurlin said Henry spent about three hours in the office building courtyard "prancing around and looking at his reflection in the glass windows that line the back of the offices."

The second day Henry showed up at the medical building, the love affair began.

Henry is well-fed and well-groomed, spending a lot of his time preening — no doubt to make himself presentable for his new love. Except for a rather frustrating love life, Henry P. never had it so good.

Knife & Fork Club sets table for 1986-87 schedule

Even as the 1986 Top O' Texas Knife & Fork Club year closes, plans are already underway for the 1986-87 season. New officers have been elected and the lineup of entertaining speakers for next year's dinners have been set. Members are urged to get their renewals in so they won't miss out on next year's speakers.

New officers for 1986-87 are Lillith Brainard, president; Melvin Dennis, vice president, and Helen Wagoner, secretary - treasurer.

On Sept. 11, Bert Wells will return to the club with a different program, Please Listen, In Chinese!. Bob Mantzke will speak on Oct. 9 on the topic Stand Up & Laugh!. Joan Johanson will talk about Feeling Good on Nov. 11. In 1987, Richard E. Shank will discuss Lightning Rods, Canaries and Other Frauds I've Known on Feb. 17, and Pat Quesnel will close the season on April 7 with his speech Conquest at Sea.

BERT WELLS, left, a professor, emcee, radio and television personality, speaks seriously with a humorous touch. He makes his listeners laugh, inspires them and entertains them with ballads. Members may remember his speech two years ago, May You Never Reach Your Goal.

BOB MANTZKE, left, in addition to his refreshing and personable speeches, Mantzke has a voice with quality and timbre enough to qualify for opera, which in fact he has done. He connects this talent with his acting ability for an enjoyable evening of entertainment.

JOAN JOHANSON, right, entertains with a motivational program pointing out the value of keeping a sense of humor, learning to laugh at problems and getting the most enjoyment out of life.

RICHARD SHANK, left, has put together an interesting, yet humorous, talk about his experiences as special agent and assistant Attorney General for Kansas. While serving as a special agent, Shank made 550 speeches explaining fraud and the role of the attorney's general's office in combatting it.

PAT QUESNEL, right, is the first person to row solo across the Pacific Ocean from U.S. Mainland to Hawaii. He tells of his epic journey — how he survived when a freighter in mid-ocean ran over and damaged his dory, plus his encounters with 30-foot-plus waves, sharks, savage gales, and bitter cold.

Students rate products in consumer science fair

ROCK ISLAND, Ill. (AP) — What cereal stays crunchier in milk? And which dog food tastes best to dogs? Students at Ridge-wood School investigated those and other consumer questions at a version of the elementary school science fair.

The consumer fair was developed by science teacher Don Nelson as an alternative to the traditional science fair. Ribbons are awarded deserving projects, he said, but the emphasis is on an enjoyable learning experience. "We talk about what consumers would be interested in finding out, like what ice cream tastes best, cost and quality," Nelson said of the preliminary project work. Then students "select one aspect — for instance, what cereal stays crunchier in milk or what hair spray holds the longest time — and then design an experiment to test that question."

At the consumer fair, students' projects detail the procedure used in the experiment, the data collected and their conclusions, Nelson said.

He said the fair was a way to reinforce learning about the scientific method, while using everyday items.

The question of which dog food dogs prefer was researched with the help of family pets that served as testers, he said. Students placed several dog foods in front of the canines and recorded which one the dog went for first.

Pictures of the pets were included in the project display.

Random sampling and "blind" taste tests were popular consumer fair projects, said Nelson.

"We had a taste test of lemon-lime sodas," he said, "and a very popular project was the 'which chewing gum holds flavor for the longest time?'"

One group of students tested which toothpaste cleaned the best, with the help of an unusual prop. Nelson said "Uncle Harry's choppers," a family heirloom, served as the experimental vehicle for testing the toothpastes.

Another group of students tested which facial tissue was the strongest by devising a "sneeze machine," Nelson said. A piece of piping was used, and students imitated sneezing through the tube.

There were about 26 questions researched at this year's consumer fair, including which orange juice has the most pulp and which toilet paper is most absorbent.

The consumer fair idea has many educational benefits, Nelson said.

"We talk about the appeals used by advertisers... It's important that we as adults give them (students) an idea about how to spend money wisely. The point is that products can be compared and consumers can make their own decisions."

Participants sought for Chautauqua celebration

By LARRY HOLLIS
Senior Writer

Though Labor Day is still about 3½ months away, participants are already being sought for the fifth annual Chautauqua in Central Park.

Committee members for the event, sponsored by the Pampa Fine Arts Association, are already busy with preparations for the activities that have attracted thousands of Pampa area residents in the past four years.

Highlighting arts, crafts, games, entertainment and food, the 1986 Chautauqua will be held Sept. 1, again in Central Park, to offer family-oriented activities for the last summer holiday.

Serving as co-chairmen for the Chautauqua Committee this year are Faustina Curry and Jean Murtishaw, with nine subcommittees formed to help with the plans.

Entry forms are now available from either of the co-chairmen.

This year Chautauqua has acquired a post office box for communications; those who want entry forms may also write to Chautauqua, P.O. Box 2094, Pampa, TX 79066.

Deadline for reserving spaces for the Chautauqua event is July 1, with deposit. No entries will be accepted after July 1.

Murtishaw said committee members are working to streamline the management of Chautauqua.

"We want Chautauqua to be an arts and crafts and educational experience," she said.

One of the changes will be the use of color codes and symbols for categories of entries, Murtishaw said.

Artists and craftsmen, for example, will have the color green and the symbol of an artist's palette, she explained.

Others are: exhibits and displays, blue, a blue ribbon; Animal Fair, tan, a rabbit; food, gold, a star; children's area, cherry, a kite; and the stage, yellow, a spotlight.

The color coding and symbols will aid better in planning for locations in the park for the participants and in helping those who attend to locate specific booths, displays and other entries.

Chautauqua is a family-oriented event to promote the fine arts in a place "where people can spend the day for a minimum amount of money, meet craftsmen, watch, visit, participate, learn new things and have fun as a family," Murtishaw said.

To better meet that aim, the committee has formulated a set of guidelines under which organizations can participate and keep the spirit of the family-oriented festival.

"These guidelines are to help Chautauqua be more organized and manageable," she stated. "We realize that these may not be agreeable to everyone, but we feel they are needed."

Hours for Chautauqua will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. No late setups or early departures are asked of all participants to insure a quality festival for the entire day as publicized, Murtishaw explained.

A non-refundable deposit of $10 will insure an organization or craftsman a place in Chautauqua. The only exceptions to the deposit requirement are demonstrations only, special educational displays and the petting zoo. Entry forms will be required of all participants, however.

At the end of the day, between 5 and 6 p.m., 10 percent of gross sales will be collected. Those who do not check out at the end of the day will not be asked to participate again.

The only exception to the sales percentage requirement is for display and sales by artists and craftsmen to encourage more participation, Murtishaw said.

Because Chautauqua is sponsored by a non-profit organization, any money in excess of operating expenses is used to improve

Central Park with trees, bridges, the stage, benches and other items.

Non-profit organizations selling items other than food must pay 10 percent of sales. This includes such sales as travel tickets and cookbooks, for example. But selling memberships for an organization does not require a percentage.

Special educational displays are those that provide a learning or educational experience, such as an oil and gas display, Pampa Medical Services or the National Guard unit.

The Animal Fair section will contain the Petting Zoo, pony and wagon rides, and other animal exhibits presented in an educational manner.

The food section will contain the pancake breakfast plus 20 individual booths, with no duplication of food or drink. Food booth participants from the previous year are entitled to return with their product. After those slots are filled, any remaining food booths will be filled on a first come, first served basis.

The children's area will feature arts and/or a fun experience for children at a reasonable charge or at no charge.

Entertainment for the entire day to enhance the level of the arts presented at the festival will take place on the stage.

Those having any questions should contact Murtishaw, Curry or one of the other committee members.

Serving as subcommittee chairmen are Mary Slaymaker, food; Brenda and Danny Tucker and Linda and Bobby Nowell, children's area; Susan Dunigan and Pam Zemanck, artists and craftsmen; and Karen Cory, exhibits and displays.

Others are Sandy Burns and Jackie Denham, Animal Fair; Brenda and Lee Cornelison, information booth; Lyn Moulton, city liaison; Danny Parkerson, stage; and Lee Cornelison, special events.

Asparagus seen as money crop

EAST MOLINE, Ill. (AP) — A year ago, Dean and Joline Oswald of Kewanee accepted an invitation from Rock Island County extension adviser Carl Cantaluppi to participate in an asparagus project.

After buying enough crowns to plant an acre of their land, Oswald, the extension adviser in Henry County, and his wife and a handful of other participants are harvesting their first asparagus crops this spring.

Other participants are establishing their first beds in hopes of reaping financial rewards a year from now.

The rewards can be great, said John Pendleton, a Lawrence, Kan., farmer and specialist in asparagus production who spoke recently at an all-day seminar on the crop at the Rock Island County Farm Bureau building.

Pendleton, who with his father operates a 1,000-acre spread in northeastern Kansas, said he had found his best moneymaking crop on the 10 acres he planted in asparagus.

The Pendletons, who raise corn, soybeans, milo, wheat and hay, as well as marketing about 300 head of cattle a year, hope to expand their asparagus field by three acres this season.

Their hybrid asparagus plants yield about 6,000 pounds per acre, 75 percent of which is marketed to customers who pick their own spears and pay $1 a pound.

For Horticulture: constant care important

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent

Gardeners may go to a great deal of trouble to make sure the soil is properly prepared, correct fertilizer nutrients added and rows constructed exactly as directed.

They may use plants or seeds of adapted varieties, seed at the proper depth and adhere to correct cultural techniques. Then if Mother Nature cooperates, gardening success seems certain. Yet even with such preparation, the gardening effort can still go wrong.

Gardening is very similar to life — if you're going to be successful, you have to put forth a daily effort. Many gardeners literally kill themselves with the initial physical part of gardening. When they return to the garden — 3 months later — they are disappointed to find little, if any produce. Successful gardening is a continuous process.

Thinning vegetables is one of the most important follow-up activities. Most gardeners use more seed than necessary for a good plant stand. This is a good idea since some of the seed may not germinate and grow. These extra seeds will insure enough plants.

However, having too many plants in an area is as bad, if not worse, than having too few. Plant thinning or removal is necessary to insure a successful garden. There is only so much plant food in the soil, and you must decide whether you want many unproductive, crowded plants or a few properly spaced, maximum-producing plants. Properly spaced plants also make insect and disease control easier.

It's difficult to destroy the plants one has worked so hard to grow. But remember, it is for their good as well as yours.

To make the job less painful, try a periodic thinning process. For example, if snap beans are to be thinned to 4 inches between plants, thin the small plants until they are 2 inches apart. Then allow the remaining plants to grow until they begin to crowd. At that stage, complete the thinning process so that plants are the recommended 4 inches apart. This system helps avoid replanting if you initially thinned your plants to 4 inches apart and a cutworm, dog or bird thinned them to 8 or 12 inches apart!

When removing larger plants, use a knife to cut the stem at ground level. This thins the plant population effectively and does not damage root systems of the remaining vegetables as pulling out unnecessary plants will do.

Size of mature vegetables dictates distance between plants. For instance, larger growing vegetables such as broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower, cucumber, eggplant, cantaloupe, okra, squash and tomato require 12 to 24 inches or more between plants. Smaller growing vegetables such as beans, beets, carrots, lettuce, onions, southern peas, spinach and turnips require only 1 to 4 inches between plants. Cultural techniques such as caging or staking also influence spacing of larger plants.

Thinning is just one followup activity to insure gardening success. Others, such as weed control, watering, insect and disease control and properly timed harvesting, make the early efforts of garden preparation pay off later. BES ARE NECESSARY problems in the garden. And it's true that insects can be a real problem. Some insects, but not all of them, are harmful. It's been estimated that less than 5 percent of the known insects are harmful to man or his food crops. The rest either pose no known threat or are considered beneficial.

As a matter of fact, it can be a real problem not having some insects in your garden. Bees are a good example. As bees collect nectar and pollen, they visit flowers and carry out one of the most important acts in nature — pollination. Pollination is the transfer of pollen from the anther of the flower to the stigma. This process must be carried out before fruit set will occur.

Just how important is pollination to your vegetable garden? For the common vine crops such as cucumbers, squash, cantaloupes, watermelons and pumpkins, pollinating insects is essential because these crops have separate male and female flowers. Without bees or pollinating insects of some type, pollen transfer does not normally occur. The result is nothing to eat from your vine crops.

So, if you've grown vine crops in the past and had them bloom but not set any fruit, chances are the problem was no pollination. Putting a hive of bees in the middle of your garden may not be practical. But one thing you can do is avoid spraying your garden for damaging insects during the morning when honeybees are most active.

Look out for damaging insects; however, also be aware that some insects are there to do a very important job.

Disabling accident leads to degree

Editor's Note: Brenda Clason is the daughter of Pampan Bina Shaw. A 1969 graduate of Pampa High School, she suffered serious back injuries when a truck crashed through her house. The following article about Clason's struggle to earn a degree is a reprint from the Saturday Oklahoman & Times. Since the article was written, Clason did receive her degree and was able to stand and accept it. She has now also traded her wheelchair for a walker.

By ANN DeFRANGE

Every student who walks across a stage at this weekend's college graduation ceremonies has a story. For each of them, there were times of struggle and satisfaction and of families and friends who stood with them.

For some, the strip to accept a diploma depended on a few small steps. For others, it was thousands of miles.

Brenda Clason had two goals that were to culminate with (the recent) graduation ceremonies at Rose State College. She wanted her diploma, and she wanted to walk across the stage to accept it.

Clason, 35, attended college briefly after she finished high school, but with marriage and two children, she had no intention of returning. That changed after a semi-trailer truck crashed through the walls of her house seven years ago, leaving her with serious spinal injuries.

"I didn't want to do anything. I felt like I had to do something with my life or get into a depressed state," Clason said. "I had to have a goal to reach."

Clason wanted to work, but a rehabilitation counselor advised a part-time college schedule first. She chose word processing because it didn't require she stand up. Funding was found for tuition, books and transportation.

Clason spent much of her time at Rose in a wheelchair, and some of it in the hospital. Professors worked with her, she said, including one who gave her private lectures after she returned from the hospital. Her husband and children, ages 11 and 16, helped her study, especially when her medication fogged her concentration. "They're real proud of me," she said.

"I didn't think I would like learning as much as I have," she said. She has a 3.8 grade point average.

With a degree and her own computer, she plans to start a home-based secretarial service after graduation.

Some specialists have told her the wheelchair is permanent, that her back will degenerate rather than improve. She tells them otherwise.

Clason has been attending a spinal pain clinic and four months ago promised she would walk to receive her diploma. She can now manage a few steps, so she preserved them for a special time the night of graduation. Her plan was to be pushed to the stage, stand and accept her diploma before she had to sit back down.

The diploma she'll have the rest of her life. The wheelchair, she insists, is temporary.

Peeking At Pampa

Banquets and more banquets, parties, trips and then Mother's Day... there's a lot to recap.

Dancers by the dozens danced until midnight at the Pampa Country Club last Friday. A few of those who tripped the light fantastic were Paulette and Malcolm Hinkle, Mary and Eddie Duenkel, Carolyn and Dale Kessel, Melinda and Keith Stowers, Margaret Spearman and John Reneau, Joyce and Gerald Rasco, Nita and Tommy Hill, Lavona and Gary Dalton, Flo and Neal Quattlebaum, April and Dob Hudson, Carolyn and Chuck Quarles, Barbara and Don Evans, Marilyn Imel, Janice and David Miller, Sandy and John Osborne, Jane and David McDaniell. Sharon and David Martinal hosted a pre-dance party.

Guests included Sheila and Paul Walker, Father Ron McCrary of Lubbock, Cindy and Rick Harris, Nancy and Jerry Whitten, Beverly and Dr. Keith Teague, Irmi and Tom Byrd.

ALL DRESSED UP and somewhere to go described members, moms and daughters of Rho Eta chapter of Beta Sigma Phi when they held their annual Mother-Daughter covered dish luncheon at the First United Methodist Church. Cathy Scribner, social chairman, Brenda Lyles and Starla Tracy brought it together. An original game by Scribner, "How Well Do You Know Your Mom" revealed how much and how little they really knew about their moms!

Majunta and Forrest Hills had five daughters and their families for Mother's Day: Stephanie Hartman and her four of Happy; GERALYN Kleffman, two, Oklahoma City; Dietta Pope and three; Wendy Reeve, three; and Majunta Jr. McKean, four boys. A houseful of fun!

Here's what some bursts of snickering and hearty laughter at a downtown lunch counter early last week was all about: the First United Methodist Church choir Banquet. Laughter began and continued when Rochelle Lacy appeared in clothes beneath the dignity of a garage sale and sang a couple of songs. Then followed a ladies' fashion show with male models, emceed by Gordon Bird, also a model.

RAFTERS SHOOK when Joe Wheeley, R.H. Dyson, Bob Johnson, Ken Lemons, and Don Lehman appeared in full regalia. Doug Carmichael and Bill Hite, dressed in heels, blonde wigs and CHOIR ROBES nearly brought the house down when they auditioned for membership in the choir! Yes, there are pictures! Receiving Golden Egg awards for boners of the year were Dorothy Miller, Bird and Karen Cory. Mary McDaniell was named 1986 choir person of the year.

To accommodate the crowd, extra chairs were added to the 450 set up for the All Sports banquet on May 5. Club president Mike Clark presided. John McGrath provided dinner music. John Stevens gave the invocation. Doing decorating honors of gold butterflies, flower arrangements, streamers and ribbons were Gayle and Kenneth Steward, Diane Bowden, Marilyn Imel, Cecilia Perez, cheerleaders, Dietta and Jerry Pope and dear Jo Love, who again shared her know-how, zip and enthusiasm. Lots of pretty girls and handsome young men attended. We have much to praise in our Pampa students.

YOUNG PEOPLE from First United Methodist Church harked their free car wash from one end of West Foster to the other last Saturday. Moms and dads who joined the students in washing 231 motorcycles, vans, suburbans, trucks and plain autos were Marilyn and Paul Brown, Sarah and Joe Wheeley, chairman, Sylvia and Sam Porter, Drs. Diane and Fred Simmons, Belinda and Mark Elms, Kay and Lloyd Harvey, Kathy Winborne, Debra and Doug Cook and Kay Adams. There's a summer tour in the offing.

Dads of Hi-Land Christian Church showed their ladies how special they were by cooking and serving a Mother-Daughter banquet, complete with table decorations and a salad bar last Saturday evening. Cook-waiters were Jerry Jenkins, minister; Dan Long, Harold Haines, Dwight Brown, Roy Willingham, Jerry Ferrell, Larry Cross, Don Zumbstein, Dr. Fred Elston, Phi Drake, Luther Thomas and Carl Summers. Haines created an artistic centerpiece with celery stalks and peeled, dyed and carved potatoes. Chris Wells, a beloved senior member, read an oft requested original poem on mothers that he had written decades ago. The cook-waiters sang a song, too.

CONGRATULATIONS TO Carol (Mrs. Bill) Fulcher, who was named Central Baptist's Mother of the Year. Moms and babies born this past year were introduced and each baby received a Bible from the Rev. Norman Rushing, pastor. Congratulations to Kim and Craig Snell on the birth of a little boy, Kyle Chandler.

Debbie Douglas, LVN in outpatient services, was named employee of the month at Coronado Community Hospital. Congrats, Debbie!

Ruth, Bob and Reid Steger attended graduation ceremonies at Texas A&M last Saturday. Their son and brother Richard received his degree in civil engineering. What a wonderful Mother's Day present for Ruth! Rosie and Ed Myatt returned from a vacation trip to San Francisco.

Danny Parkerson served as a judge in Oklahoma City for the state scholarship pageant.

DON'T YOU KNOW Marge Lemons and Laura Lehman had a fun-filled two days in Dallas before Ken and Don joined them for a Dallas weekend?

Belated birthday wishes to Lillith Brainard. There was a lunch and a gift from the Saturday ladies lunch-for-lunch group Helen Hogan, Jimmie Kay Williams, Mary Ann Nace, Georgia Mack and Ruby McWhorter.

Patsy McKnerney visited her sister Lorena Baker at Lindsey, Okla., and brought her to Pampa for an extended visit.

Special recognition goes to Randal B. Adcock, son of Ruby and Robert and a student at Amarillo College with a 4.0 grade average. Randal progressed four grade levels during one term. This remarkable young man, majoring in instrumentation, has been remodeling, updating an old house in his spare time. Keep up the good work!

Father Gary Sides will say a special mass to honor all fifth, eighth grade and senior graduates at St. Vincent's Catholic Church this morning at 10. A covered dish brunch will follow. See you next week! KATIE

Dear Abby

Recycled wedding gift creates a family stink

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My brother's daughter (I'll call her Melanie) sent us an invitation to her wedding, which was to take place last June (1985). We were unable to attend, but my husband and I sent her an expensive gift.

Around the middle of May (of last year) my brother called to tell us the wedding had been called off, and he asked if we wanted our wedding gift back. I said yes we did, and he promised to pass the information on to Melanie. Well, it's been nearly a year and we still don't have that gift.

Here's the big problem: Last winter Melanie's sister, Judy, sent us an announcement of her marriage, which took place in Las Vegas. We immediately sent word to Melanie asking her to send the wedding gift she received from us to her sister who was really married. Then we wrote a letter of congratulations to Judy telling her to expect our gift soon.

As of today we have not heard a word from either Melanie or Judy.

Should we write to Judy and ask her if she ever received our wedding gift? If she says no, should we contact Melanie and remind her again to send Judy the gift? Or should we contact my brother and ask him to handle it?

DISGUSTED AUNT

DEAR AUNT: Melanie should have returned your gift as soon as the wedding was called off. Failing to do so showed very poor taste. But your asking her to hand over the gift to her more deserving sister showed equally poor taste.

If you want to give Judy a wedding gift, forget the one you gave Melanie, and buy one for Judy. Don't ask your brother to run interference for you. He must have enough headaches.

DEAR ABBY: Can you advise me as to the difference between borrowing and begging?

We have a good neighbor who has "borrowed" everything from the proverbial cup of sugar to kindling. Among things borrowed from us are garbage bags, hair combs, six eggs, a quart of milk, bread, garden tools, a tire pump and shampoo. Nothing was returned except the garden tools, and we had to go and get them ourselves.

I have always thought that when people borrowed things they returned them. Since we are senior citizens and these neighbors are young, I'm wondering if the younger generation may not know the difference between begging and borrowing.

My question: What can I say that will not hurt the feelings of the children who are always sent to do the borrowing?

BORED WITH BORROWERS

DEAR BORED: The next time a child is sent to "borrow" something, don't be sharp, simply say, "Not right now, but please have your mother call me." And when she calls, tell her that when one borrows something there is an expressed or implied intention of returning the same or the equivalent. Some good people need to be reminded.

DEAR ABBY: I can't resist adding my two cents in answer to "Wedding Ruined," because a child's voice could be heard throughout the ceremony, and God forbid, was "forever recorded on the video."

Abby, since when is a child's voice an irritant? Couples today make such a production of their weddings, they lose sight of what it's all about.

My husband's brother and his fiancée planned one such "production." On the eve of their wedding, the bride-to-be announced that our 3-week-old son would not be welcome at the wedding. The ensuing controversy led to the cancellation of the wedding.

JOAN S.

DEAR JOAN: Some people welcome children everywhere and some do not. It's neither right nor wrong; it's a matter of personal preference.

Calling a wedding off on the eve before is costly, inconvenient and embarrassing, but if this could occur because the groom's brother and his wife were asked not to bring their 3-week-old child to the wedding, then perhaps it's just as well that the wedding was canceled.

Musicians bring back Waco's big-band tradition

By BOB DARDEN
Waco Tribune-Herald

WACO, Texas (AP)—Waco has a deep and abiding Big Band tradition. Under the tutelage of legendary band director Kyke Skinner, young Waco musicians once fanned out across the country to meet the needs of Big Bands everywhere.

Forty years later, an intriguing combination of old-timers and new-timers have gathered together to re-create that sound. They call themselves the Waco Jazz Orchestra.

Mike Jacobson, assistant professor of music and director of jazz studies at Baylor University, heads up the new WJO, with an assist from Dave Hibbard from the McLennan Community College music department, and says the enthusiasm and skill of the players invigorates him each week.

"In the eight months since we've been rehearsing, I've been impressed with the caliber of musicians locally. There's an outstanding soloist on just about every instrument," he said.

Jacobson said Wacoans Thomas Riggs, Bill Haskett, Al Newman and Hibbard began discussing the idea of a community jazz orchestra last year. At first the informal group met at a hotel. When that was eventually closed to them, they approached Baylor. The university made the orchestra part of its Continuing Education Program, offering it as a not-for-credit class.

The group rehearses from 1 to 3 p.m. Sundays in the band hall at Waco Hall on the Baylor campus.

"We've got about 30 regulars in the band," Jacobson said, "and they range from music professors to accountants to housewives to students at Baylor and MCC."

The standard instrumentation for a Big Band is a four-piece rhythm section, five trombones, five trumpets and five saxes (some of whom double on other wind instruments).

"Right now we've got more musicians than the standard Big Band instrumentation, which means we do a little rotating of personnel," Jacobson said. "It's really too big for one band, but not quite big enough for two yet."

Being a community band, some players are more proficient than others. But Jacobson says he likes it that way.

"We've got everything from professional musicians down to people where music is their avocation and they want to keep their chops in shape — but have no other outlet. The organization is open to anybody who wants to come and participate. If we get enough for a second band, we'll probably break up by proficiency, but we're not going to discourage anybody from coming."

Presently, the band has about 30 tunes in its active repertoire, with 10 of those being prepared for upcoming concerts.

Baylor and MCC, along with donations from individuals within the band, have provided the charts for these songs. The continuing education course costs $15 per semester, which helps pay for sheet music.

The WJO repertoire includes standard Big Band numbers in addition to some original arrangements and songs provided by the band's musicians. Jacobson said the WJO goals include performance opportunities and providing an outlet for talented local arrangers and writers.

"We do standard tunes like Duke Ellington's 'It Don't Mean a Thing If Ain't Got That Swing' (arranged by former Wacoan Charles Burleson), 'September Song,' a couple of Latin things like 'Speak Low' and more contemporary charts like 'Fat Mama's revenge,' which we got from the Dallas Jazz Orchestra," Jacobson said.

As the band continues to grow, Jacobson said they may set up a staggered rehearsal schedule for musicians who can't come on Sunday afternoon. He also wants to make it more active in the community.

"I've enjoyed it from the beginning. It's a different type of outlet for me," said Jacobson, who attended Arizona State and Indiana University and is working on his doctorate from Indiana. He taught jazz and saxophone at Mansfield University for 10 years before coming to Baylor in the fall of 1985. He's also performed in bands backing Lou Rawls, Sammy Davis Jr., the Temptations and even Liberace.

"It's gratifying to get out in the community," he said. "I've really enjoyed the musicians I've met. Everybody in the band really wants to be there, especially since there are no financial rewards that come with playing with the WJO."

University professionals invent a new board game

By TERRY TATE
Denton Record-Chronicle

DENTON, Texas (AP) — They did it all, the four of them — devised the more than 4,000 questions; made the rules; subcontracted with card printers and box, chip and dice makers; stored, packaged and, two years later, marketed, the finished product "Uncommon Sense: the Remarkable Word Game."

"We did it primarily for the fun of it, secondarily for the profit," said Brenda Peterson of Euleus.

There is no use denying the profit motive, she said. The others — Betty Ohler of Carrollton, Pat Bulla of Carrollton and Judi Faurot of Euleus — agreed, or, at least, didn't make an effort to disagree. The three women are speech pathologists in the division of communication disorders at North Texas State University. Mrs. Peterson is an audiologist in the same division.

"They've been friends for nearly 14 years. They began working on the game project in 1984. During spring breaks, holidays, summer vacations and other spare time, they plotted the idea of a word game. As the idea emerged into tangibility, they retreated to Mrs. Ohler's lake home, took a pair of dice, taped directions on the six sides; took playing cards, taped questions and answers on the backs, and played.

It was their first game. Today, for $29.95, "Uncommon Sense" has sold through mail order in half the United States. In Denton, it is on the shelves of three bookstores. The 10-pound box — packed tediously by the women, with poker chips, cards and dice in the home of Mrs. Faurot — has been shipped as far away as Korea and Switzerland.

Each of the 1,408 cards contains three possible questions and answers — 176 cards in each of eight categories. Depending on the roll of the dice, you could be asked to choose a correctly spelled word, identify who said a famous quotation or translate a foreign phrase.

In the category "Rhyme Time," for example, a card reads: "1. Two, one-syllable words meaning throat inspection." Answer: "Neck check." "2. Two, two-syllable words meaning don't ever cut." Answer: "Never sever." "3. Two, one-syllable words meaning escargot path." Answer: "Snail Trail."

Contestants get chips for right answers. "We tried to put in a lot of yes and no questions and things people know a lot about," said Mrs. Bulla.

However, one reaction to the game was critical. One person said, "You must be a bunch of fiends to make up questions like that."

Cost for the enterprise? Even if they sell their inventory of 2,000 games, they say, they don't expect to break even at $29.95 a game.

Thank you...

Gray County voters, for your vote of confidence at the Republican primary election. I ask for your continued support in the November general election.

Crops, rangeland still suffering from lack of moisture

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP)—While some light to locally heavy rain, winds and hail pounded parts of Texas earlier this week, much of west and south Texas continues very dry, with crops and rangelands suffering from lack of moisture.

In some Winter Garden and Hill Country counties near San Antonio, about 4,000 acres of corn and cotton were knocked down by sporadic thunderstorms and small hail. The frontal system also caught about 300 acres of freshly-clipped, field-bagged onions in wet fields.

Most of the crops are expected to recover, but onions may rot as a result of the water, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Peaches in central Texas also suffered some hail damage. Early peach varieties are ripening rapidly in Gillespie County, and harvesting of early peaches is under way in East Texas, where a short crop is expected, Carpenter added. Across much of the state, pecans are in the bloom to nutlet stages.

The Russian wheat aphid, which made its first U.S. appearance across the Texas South Plains in March, has now been confirmed in 54 counties of the state, as well as in four other states.

The aphids are dispersed primarily by winds, and winged adults can be borne hundreds of miles in a short time, noted Carpenter. Besides the aphid, the wheat crop yield potential also has been reduced by other damaging insects, dry conditions, hail in some areas and rust.

While recent rains have improved ranges and crop potentials over eastern and central portions of the state, western and southern counties continue dry.

Many cattlemen in south and southwest counties and the Coastal Bend area also are still feeding hay to their herds due to poor grazing conditions. Other ranchers are burning prickly pear cactus to feed their cattle.

Across the state, many vegetable crops are making good progress with early varieties of squash, beans, potatoes and onions being harvested. Home gardeners, however, report some insect and disease problems.

Dryland grain sorghum potential continues to decline in many southern counties from lack of moisture. In the Rio Grande Valley, sugarcane has a good yield potential with heavy irrigation. The melon harvest is reaching its peak, with fair demand reported. Normal citrus grove care continues with insect control efforts under way where the fruit set justifies the cost.

Reports from district Extension directors noted these conditions:

PANHANDLE: Some dryland wheat is turning color, but yield prospects are only fair due to short moisture conditions. Corn and sugar beets are off to a good start and cotton planting is under way. Rangelands and pastures need rain.

SOUTH PLAINS: Planting of irrigated fields continue, but most producers of dryland crops are waiting on rain before planting. Wheat has headed and is turning color, and sorghum is being planted.

ROLLING PLAINS: Some small patches of wheat have been harvested but other fields are too wet for field activity. About 60 percent of stocker cattle in the district have been sold with most producers reported to be losing money. Peanut planting is under way in Hall and Motley counties.

NORTH CENTRAL: Some replanting of grain sorghum is under way in areas damaged by hail several weeks ago. Additional rain and high winds were reported over part of the district last weekend. Some hay crops are being baled. Crop conditions are excellent to good.

NORTHEAST: Most field crops are in good condition generally. Disease pressure is increasing as wheat matures, however. Cattle are in excellent condition and pastures are providing ample grazing.

FAR WEST: Rangelands are under severe drought stress, and livestock are in poor to fair condition with supplemental feeding continuing since last fall. In Crockett County, the Emergency Board has requested implementation of the emergency feed program. Heavy irrigation of onions is continuing.

WEST CENTRAL: All agricultural segments are still suffering from drought conditions although some scattered rains were received last weekend. Most crops are short and ranges are in poor condition. Some drought sales of cattle continue with markets generally poor. Early peach varieties are ripening in Gillespie County.

CENTRAL: Peanut planting is active and wheat harvesting has started. Heavy thrip populations are reported in cotton, and southern coud'as of the district also report that pecan nut casebearer egg lay is heavy.

EAST: Early corn is tasseling and the crop generally is in good condition. Pastures are improving after recent rains, and hay crops will be cut soon. Soybean plantings look good, and vegetables are making considerable progress. Some early peaches are being harvested but the crop is expected to be short.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Recent rains have given a boost to ranges and pastures and filled stock ponds. The oat crop is being harvested, along with early peach varieties. Garden insects are reported to be a problem in some counties. Pecans have set fruit.

UPPER COAST: First sorghum has headed in the area, and some producers are treating for sugarcane aphids and greenbugs. Montgomery County and some other areas received good rains over the weekend. Pastures are improving and cattle are in good condition, but prices are poor. Home gardens are doing well.

COASTAL BEND: Pastures and ranges need rain, but many crops are holding their own despite continuing dry conditions. Much of the cotton has squared and 50 percent of the grain has headed. Early peaches are starting to ripen and pecans are being ppayed for casebearers. Home gardens are producing a variety of vegetables. Most ranchers are continuing to feed hay. Cattle prices are down.

SOUTHWEST: Harvesting of wheat, squash and onions has resumed following rain in some areas, but onion prices are depressed. About 4,000 acres of corn and cotton were downed by hail and rain, which also caught some 300 acres of bagged onions in wet fields. Pastures are improving where rain was received.

SOUTH: Continuing dry conditions are reducing dryland grain yield potentials, and ranges need rain. Corn is in the silk stage, cotton is square and sorghum is heading, with heavy irrigation water demands. The melon crop is reaching its peak with fair demand reported. Some cabbage is being marketed and sugarcane has good potential yield with heavy water demand.

Rosy outlook seen for rice farmers seen as provisions of 1985 farm bill loan repayment provision takes effect

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—A new analysis by the Agriculture Department says the outlook for rice farmers is much rosier than it was last year before Congress passed the Food Security Act.

"Before the bill was signed, U.S. rice exports had plunged, largely because of the widening gap between U.S. and world prices," the department's Economic Research Service said Wednesday.

The new farm law, however, allows U.S. prices to drift lower so as to be competitive with world prices. Incomes of rice farmers are protected through a marketing loan arrangement which effectively reduces the government's price floor or loan rate.

Under the marketing loan system, growers can repay government loans at less than face value if the world price is lower than the loan rate. Also, target prices—which are used to compute direct "deficiency payments" to farmers when market prices are low—are frozen for 1986-87 and then will be lowered gradually over the next four years.

The marketing loan provision went into effect April 15, and U.S.

rice prices began dropping, the report said.

"Because of this provision, exports are expected to pick up during the remainder of the 1985-86 marketing year and to increase by 20 million hundredweight in 1986-87, a big step towards regaining export market share lost in the early 1980s," the report said.

Rice exports in 1986-87 are expected to be around 75 million hundredweight, up from 55 million hundredweight this year. The 1986 rice harvest could yield around 130 million hundredweight, compared with 136 million in 1985, according to USDA's tentative projections.

"The marketing loan program has given U.S. exporters an opportunity to regain commercial markets such as Western EUROPE, Saudi Arabia and South Africa," the report said. "The lower prices also make it possible to sell U.S. rice in new markets such as Brazil and Papua New Guinea."

Rice prices at the farm in 1986-87 are forecast to be in the range of $6.75 and $7.75 per hundredweight, or close to the loan rate of $7.20, the report said.

WASHINGTON (AP) R A sampling of the major dairy states by the Agriculture Department shows that milk production last month continued to run above year-earlier levels.

The department's Agricultural Statistics Board said April output in 21 major milk-producing states totaled 10.7 billion pounds, up 5 percent from a year earlier. The states account for about 85 percent of the total U.S. milk production.

Total U.S. milk production figures for all states will be issued quarterly instead of each month as before. The cutback was forced by "fund limitations," the report said Wednesday.

Milk production rose to a record of 143.7 billion pounds in calendar 1985. The department says it is difficult to forecast 1986 production because of the wholeherd buyout program that went into effect April 1.

Under the dairy buyout plan, 1.55 million dairy cows, heifers and calves have been contracted by producers to be sold over an 18-month period to help trim milk output. About two-thirds of those are scheduled to be marketed for slaughter or export this spring and summer.

In April, according to the latest report, milk cows in the major dairy states averaged 9.21 million head, 1 percent fewer than in March. However, production in April rose 8 pounds per cow to an average of 1,162 pounds during the month.

WASHINGTON (AP) 03 r9 paid for not working on Memorial Day after all, rather than being furloughed without pay to help the Agriculture Department cope with spending cuts.

Nancy Robinson of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service said Wednesday that notices were sent to the agency's regional offices to cancel plans for furloughing inspectors on Memorial Day.

However, she said the agency has not canceled its plan to furlough inspectors on two other holidays this year, July 4 and Labor Day. That plan remains in effect, at least until the Office of Personnel Management and the General Accounting Office settle a dispute over the propriety of furloughing the workers without pay.

Under the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law, USDA was required to trim spending by about $1.26 billion in the fiscal year that began last Oct. 1. The inspection agency's share was put at $15.6 million, with most savings accomplished by cutbacks in employment and other measures.

The plan to furlough inspectors without pay on the three holidays would have saved about $3 million. With Memorial Day canceled, Ms. Robinson said the agency will have to trim elsewhere.

Meanwhile, a supplemental appropriations bill pending in Congress includes more than $3 million of additional funds to keep the inspection program on an even keel the rest of this fiscal year.

WHEAT FIELD DAY

The Annual Wheat Field Day at the USDA Research Laboratory at Bushland, Texas will be held on Thursday, May 22. Tours and exhibits will be available starting at 1:00 p.m. Visitors taking tours will see irrigated and dryland small grain varieties and hybrids, cropping systems, no- and reduced tillage systems, water conservation practices and terrace systems. The Russian Wheat Aphid and other pests will be discussed. Activities will be coordinated by Dr. Kenneth Porter, TAES Small Grain Breeder at Bushland.

FISH POND FIELD DAY

On Wednesday, May 21, a Fish Pond Field Day will be held in Gray County. Everyone interested in learning more about Fish Pond Management should meet at the Courthouse Annex at 5:15 p.m. on May 21. The group will then travel to the farm pond belonging to Curley Brown, about 10 miles east of Pampa.

The program discussion will be led by James Davis, Extension Fisheries Specialist, College Station, Texas. Dr. Davis plans to discuss methods for improving and maintaining farm fish ponds. The presentation will be at the pond site to demonstrate various pond management practices.

The Field Day is sponsored by the Gray County Soil and Water Conservation District, Soil Conservation Service and Gray County Extension Office.

GRAY COUNTY WHEAT-BARLEY TOUR

A local wheat-barley field tour will be held Tuesday, May 27. The group will meet in front of the Courthouse Annex at 1:15 p.m. and then travel to the Earl Smith Farm on the south side of Highway 60, three miles east of Pampa. Participants will view 13 wheat varieties and 7 barley varieties. On hand to discuss small grain diseases and insects will be Dr. Robert Berry, Extension Plant Pathologist, and Dr. Carl Patrick, Extension Entomologist.

We have noticed some strange, unexplained things with some of Earl's wheat this spring. It has been infected with the Russian Wheat Aphid for one thing, wheat streak mosaic virus has been identified in the wheat variety plots and then there may possibly be something else.

I think we can all learn a little more about diseases and insects and see some definite variety differences. I am seeing something affecting these varieties that presently is unexplained. Samples have been submitted to Texas A&M and hopefully we will have some answers by the field day, May 27.

MID-YEAR CROP-LIVESTOCK REPORTS

The Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service will begin contacting farmers and ranchers across the state in mid-May for 1986 crop acreages and mid-year livestock inventories.

State Statistician Dennis Findley emphasized that information from these surveys will help producers adjust their production and marketing plans for 1986. "Good marketing requires good information and advanced planning. Information from these surveys will provide Texas producers with solid facts and figures they can use when making their marketing plans.

"There are many economic uncertainties facing agriculture," Findley added, "and accurate, reliable figures will give producers a chance to make sound production and marketing decisions during the coming year."

Results of the confidential interviews, conducted by mail or in person by field enumerators, will be published in June and July.

To reduce survey costs, Findley is urging farmers and ranchers to return the mailed questionnaires as soon as possible. The reported information will be combined for state and county estimates.

Annual county estimates are published for livestock, dairy, poultry, cotton, field crops, small grains, fruits and pecans, vegetables, and cash receipts from the sale of farm products.

Goblin Market

Exotic, erotic, mystical poem inspires off-Broadway musical

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Last June, two women sat in coffee shops along Broadway and envisioned goblin men, forbidden fruit and two Victorian sisters, the exotic and erotic ingredients of a mystical 19th-century poem.

Before the lunch crowds arrived, Polly Pen and Peggy Harmon would revise and refine Goblin Market, their musical based on a long, narrative poem that Christina Rossetti wrote in 1859.

Today, Goblin Market is an off-Broadway success. Critics enthusiastically greeted the 70-minute musical last October when it was first performed for a limited engagement at the tiny Vineyard Theater. Now, with its original cast of Ann Morrison and Terri Klausner intact, the show has resurfaced in a larger theater, the Circle in the Square Downtown.

For Pen and Harmon, Goblin Market is a triumph of hard work, persistence and good luck. For one thing, the original would seem to be an unlikely source of musical theater.

"I first was introduced to the poem at Ithaca College by my English professor. He took a class to read it out loud," says the 32-year-old Pen. "I was enchanted and began to read it every Halloween with friends."

The poem tells of two sisters, Lizzie and Laura, and their adventures in an enchanted glen with mysterious goblin merchants who entice them to buy their exotic fruit.

Pen and Harmon, who met through mutual friends, began working on Goblin Market in 1982. The first thing they did was type out the poem and then break it down in terms of what was narrative and what was dialogue. It was only then that they decided on a very loose arrangement of scenes.

The creation of the musical proceeded in bits and pieces. Both women were busy with other projects. Both are actresses, and Harmon is currently appearing in the Broadway musical Big River, a job she's had for more than a year. Pen is also a musician and would leave town for assignments.

"We'd have six months off where we wouldn't work on the show at all. Then we'd get back together and work very intensely on it for a month or two," says Harmon.

Goblin Market was adapted by both Pen and Harmon and has music mostly by Pen, but the women have also included music by other composers including Brahms and Charles Ives.

"It intrigued me — whether I could get by with combining my music with Brahms and Ives. That takes gall!" Pen says.

"When we started writing, we had more interpolated pieces. Gradually we began throwing out some of the other people's work and having Polly write more of the material," Harmon adds.

The authors set the musical in a nursery and told the story in flashback. Two women, dressed in mourning clothes, return to their childhood home and relive those fanciful adventures with the goblin men, which is the basis of the original poem.

The first reading of the show was done last spring at the urging of Douglas Aibel, artistic director of the theater program at the Vineyard Theater. The audience response was enthusiastic and the two authors realized that the musical would have a broader appeal than they originally thought.

The Vineyard requested some revisions and the two began their work last summer, sitting in those Broadway coffee shops near the Eugene O'Neill Theater where Harmon was appearing in Big River.

At the Vineyard, director Andre Enotte and the two actresses currently in the show — Morrison and Klausner — were recruited. The two stars have strong musical comedy backgrounds, Morrison appearing on Broadway in Merrily We Roll Along and Klausner in Evita and Sophisticated Ladies.

Pen says she always was "a closet composer" while growing up in Chicago. She was a child actor, and in the early 1970s was in the original production of Grease at Kingston Mines in Chicago, before moving to New York.

Harmon, also 32, grew up in Boston where her father was a minister and attended Brown University in Providence, R.I. She arrived in New York some nine years ago to act. Goblin Market is her first effort at writing.

Diverse cast to play roles in 'Appointment With Death'

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

It takes a diverse cast to play the variety of roles in the ACT I community theater production of Agatha Christie's Appointment With Death.

But director Kayla Richerson has found such a variety, with players ranging from stage veterans to first timers.

The mystery will be presented June 13-15 at the M. K. Brown auditorium.

Set at in the Middle East, the play is about the way a family deals with a domineering mother.

The mother, Mrs. Boynton, is played by Sandy Crosswhite, who makes her debut in a major ACT I production. In September, she performed in a special ACT I one act, The Street of Good Friends, for the Panhellenic Club. She works at St. Matthew's Episcopal Day School.

Her husband, NTS Communications manager Rick Crosswhite, plays a police inspector who investigates the mysterious goings-on at an archaeological site. Crosswhite is no stranger to the ACT I stage, having led in Blithe Spirit last year and Mary, Mary earlier this season. He made his ACT I debut in the 1985 season production of Wait Until Dark and played the villain in the ACT I Chautauqua melodrama.

Mrs. Boynton's tormented daughter Ginevra is played by JoDalene Brantley, another familiar ACT I face. She will also be the assistant director. She has been in several productions including Wait Until Dark. She and her husband have one daughter.

The two Boynton sons, Raymond and Lennox, are played by Kent Godfrey and Curtis Haynes. A theater graduate of Lon Morris College in Jacksonville, Godfrey has worked in amateur and professional productions in Houston. He is currently employed at Lights and Sights. He directed the previous production of Same Time, Next Year. Curtis is a mail carrier with the Pampa U.S. Post office and is making his ACT I debut here.

Lennox's wife and Mrs. Boynton's nurse, Nadine, is played by almost-newcomer Deborah Lawrence. Lawrence had two roles in the Gray County Sesquicentennial Pageant and was active in the Lamar Full Gospel Assembly Caraway Street players. A homemaker, she and her husband have one daughter and a cat.

Becky Cook, who plays Raymond's love interest Dr. Sarah King, also has a cat, a 20½-pound Himalayan attack cat named Blue Boy. Miss Cook works for dentist Dr. Joe Pieratt. This is her first appearance on a Pampa stage.

Dr. Gerard, a French psychiatrist, is played by Jasper native Frank "Bud" Behannon. An employee of Texaco, he has played in Mary, Mary, Wait Until Dark and Witness for the Prosecution.

The play also boasts a host of humorous characters. Rochelle Lacy plays strong-willed Parliament member Lady Westholme. A Pampa High School history teacher, Lacy directed Blithe Spirit as well as more than 60 student productions at Berger, Pampa and the old Lee Junior High in Pampa. She has a B.F.A. in theater from the University of Texas and is now working on her M.A. degree in history.

Peggy Hunter plays the Welsh widow Amabel Pryce. She is the manager of Sammons Communications and has performed in Street of Good Friends and Mary, Mary. Before moving to Pampa in 1981, she lived in Bristol, Tenn., where she was active with the Dogwood Players.

Scotsman Mr. Higgs is played by Danny Cowan, classified display manager for The Pampa News. Cowan has performed in the Chautauqua melodrama and other roles. He is active in the choir of Hilland Christian Church.

Aissa, an Arab tour guide and con man, is played by White Deer resident Randy Malone. He is an agent for American National Insurance. An army veteran, he claims to have no acting experience.

Also in the cast are Al Hall, Gus Shaver, John McKeon and Cathy Spaulding.

In pursuit of 'high-concept' movies

By FRANK SANELEO

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — A few years ago, writer-director Jim Brooks was complaining about the trouble he had trying to sell his script for "Terms of Endearment."

Every major studio in Hollywood had turned him down because he couldn't shoehorn his screenplay into a single high-concept sentence.

In Agent-talk, a high-concept movie is one you can describe in a simple, declarative sentence. Some of Hollywood's biggest hits have started as a high-concept line.

Remember these blockbusters? "Shark terrorizes resort community." "Youth battles evil empire in outer space." "Muscular vet refights Vietnam War."

If you didn't guess "Jaws," "Star Wars" and "Rambo," respectively, then you are not a moviegoer.

If you identified the movies correctly, you might want to indulge in a little parlor game. The rules are simple — so simple, in fact, that anyone can play without a board, dice or playing cards.

Gather a bunch of movie lovers who are tired of playing Trivial Pursuit. The purpose of the game is to boil down classic film plots into a simple declarative sentence. One player names a movie, and the next player has to transform the film into a high concept. If the sentence includes two verbs — that's not a simple, declarative sentence — players lose a turn. Truly sadistic players can penalize losers by denying them next Sunday's local arts & leisure section.

Those who can describe a movie without using a verb at all can take another turn. Big wheel players can arrange among themselves for valuable prizes to be awarded to winners.

Here are some "starter concepts" to get your game rolling:

- "Gone With the Wind" — South-

ELIZABETH TAYLOR and Richard Burton in "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?": Just another Hollywood fun couple.

- "The Lion in Winter" — King checkmates queen.
- "Fiddler on the Roof" — Pogroms receive musical treatment.
- "Ben Hur" — Chariots of Fire. (No verb! Suggested prize: Attend this year's Cannes film festival with Rambo for bodyguard.)
- "The Bells of St. Mary's" — Asexual priest falls for asexual nun.
- "Easy Rider" — Coupla white guys riding around talking and tripping. (Ooops! Three verbs. Forfeit one turn or one year's subscription to Film Comment.)
- "Lawrence of Arabia" — Weird Brit hangs out with men in white robes.
- "Casablanca" — World War II interferences with true romance.
- "Dr. Zhivago" — Russian Revolution interferes with another true romance.
- "Wizard Of Oz" — Dog lover hallucinates.
- "My Fair Lady" — Flower girl learns grammar the hard way.
- "Whatever Happened to Baby Jane?" — Sibling rivalry degenerates.
- "Funny Girl" — Ugly duckling turns into ugly canary.
- "The Sound of Music" — Nun fights Nazis with saccharin.
- "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" — Fun couple kisses and cracks up. (Ooops! Two verbs. Penalty: Attend 48-hour Jerry Lewis Movie Marathon.)

Ludlum fans will enjoy new novel

THE BOURNE SUPREMACY. By Robert Ludlum. Random House. 597 Pages. $19.95.

Jason Bourne returns. The news should terrify his enemies and throw Robert Ludlum fans into paroxysms of joy.

Bourne careens through the best-selling author's latest, "The Bourne Supremacy," with a cunning and destructiveness that would put the devil to shame. Even the sanctified body of Mao Tse-tung in a Peking mausoleum cannot stand in his way.

Bourne, who was first introduced in Ludlum's 1980 best seller, "The Bourne Identity," is perhaps the most psychologically complex character Ludlum has created to date.

Born David Webb, he was once a gentle Far Eastern scholar living in Vietnam with his Vietnamese wife and children. He became a changed man, however, when his family was killed while at play by what was believed to be a North Vietnamese fighter plane. Out of rage and despair, he became a CIA guerrilla fighter in the Vietnam War.

He so excelled in his job that the U.S. government gave him a unique assignment: pose as a mythical super-terrorist, Jason Bourne, to draw out and trap Carlos the Jackal, the most deadly assassin in Europe.

Before he accomplished his mission, however, he was injured and became amnesiac. At the end of "Identity," Webb-Bourne was being nursed back to health by his Canadian fiancée, and was looking forward to a peaceful and private life.

Davis pays on lawsuit

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — T. Cullen Davis has transferred land worth $314,000 as partial settlement of a lawsuit filed by a man who claims the Fort Worth industrialist was responsible for a shooting spree 10 years ago that wounded him and left him paralyzed, the Dallas Morning News reported today.

Davis signed papers transferring about 70 acres of land in southwest Tarrant County to Gus Gavrel Jr. and the law firm of Gavrel's attorney, the newspaper said. The transfer comes three weeks after the $15 million dollar lawsuit was settled out of court.

A person familiar with the details of the settlement said Davis also agreed to make a cash payment in addition to transferring the land, the Dallas newspaper said. The amount of the cash payment has not been disclosed.

Gavrel's suit stems from the 1976 shootings at Davis' $6 million mansion. Davis' 12-year-old stepdaughter Andrea Lee Wilborn and Stan Farr, a companion of Davis' estranged wife Priscilla Davis, were killed. Mrs. Davis and Gavrel were wounded.

Gavrel, 31, was shot in the abdomen and still carries the bullet that came to rest near his spinal cord. Mrs. Davis recovered from her injuries.

Davis was tried twice for murder, with the first ending in a mistrial and the second in acquittal. He has denied any involvement in the shooting spree.

Gavrel's lawsuit was settled April 3. All records in the case were sealed and participants pledged not to reveal how the dispute was resolved.

On April 28, Davis signed a warranty deed transferring the property to Gavrel and to the law firm of Gavrel's attorney, Grover Swift. The papers were filed in Tarrant County this week.
