County hikes taxes, holds surplus

By PAUL PINKHAM Senior Staff Writer

A 4-cent county tax hike and raises for Gray County employees were made official Friday over the objections of one county commissioner, who said the county should use surplus funds to avert the tax

Commissioners reached their decision Friday night, following a four-hour meeting that featured pleas from taxpayers, county agencies and county employees, all looking for a piece of the $4.35 million budgetary pie

Some were luckier than others: All county employees, including elected officials, received a $50-per-month raise despite the objections of Commissioner

Jim Greene, who said not many taxpayers have had raises this year. The raises will cost the county about $77,000 in 1988.

Earlier, commissioners rejected a move by Commissioner Ted Simmons to eliminate the raises for elected officeholders. Greene. Commissioner O.L. Presley and County Judge Carl Kennedy voted against Simmons' motion. Commissioner Gerald Wright joined Simmons in voting for the motion.

■ The county's three justices of the peace fared even better, receiving raises of $315 per month, bringing their monthly salaries to about $1,750. The unanimous decision rescinded action taken only Tuesday, in which Precint 2 Justice of the Peace Wayne Roberts had his salary cut by $315 to bring it in line with the other two justices

Those raises will cost taxpayers an additional $6,360

Roberts had been earning more because, prior to Jan. 1, he was handling work in two precincts.

■ The county's two public libraries had funding restored to previous levels -$6,700 in Pampa and $2,500 in McLean after library spokesmen claimed they would lose state funding without the additional county funds. The unanimous vote overrode action Tuesday, in which commissioners cut the library funding in half.

Dan Snider, Pampa librarian, indicated that the libraries might have to begin charging for out-of-town library cards without the additional funding

Pampa Family Services will receive up to $15,000 in 1988 to replace lost state funding: Commissioners unanimously approved the request by psychologist Bin Gilbert, after Judge Kennedy said the county could be required to transport probationers in need of mental health services to Amarillo, Clarendon or Perryton, if the Pampa center were to close.

Commissioners unanimously agreed to give the Alanreed-McLean Area Museum $2,000, much to the delight of a group of McLean citizens in attendance. The money was marked to support both the museum and library. The group included McLean Mayor George Green.

The tax increase puts the county's tax rate at 25.6 cents per $100 valuation, up 4 cents from the 21.6-cent rate taxpayers See COUNTY, Page 3

Teen-age suspect released to mom

By PAUL PINKHAM Senior Staff Writer

A youth who left Pampa in his stepfather's company truck the same morning the stepfather was shot to death was released to his mother Friday after refusing to answer any questions posed by police.

N. Mike Patterson, 16, 533 N. Doyle St., left with his mother. Norma Underwood of Midland, late Friday afternoon, still facing allegations of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle but leaving police with few clues in the early Wednesday shooting Police found the body of Edward Allan Patterson, 37, inside the mobile home he shared with his stepson at Dovle Street and Montagu Avenue. Patterson had been shot numerous times in the head.

The body was found by the elder Patterson's supervisor. Earl Tarbet of Enron Corp., who stopped by the trailer about 2 p.m. Wednesday to find out why Patterson hadn't shown up for work. Tarbet said Patterson's company truck was missing from the driveway

The stepson was taken into custody about five hours later in Monahans, after police spotted him driving the truck. He had checked into a Monahans motel about 3 p.m. Wednesday.

He was returned to Pampa on Friday but refused to answer any questions on the advice of his attorney, Jim Bobo of Odessa, police Lt. Roy Denman said Friday afternoon

Denman said police were forced to release Patterson to his mother, a kindergarten teacher, because there was not enough evidence to hold him.

Denman, who is heading the investigation into the elder Patterson's death, said he has no other

Police are waiting for the results of tests on physical evidence from the Federal Bureau of Investigation lab in Washington. Denman said. Possible evidence includes a half dozen weapons taken by police from inside the trailer.

Chad troops drive into Libya

N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) -Chadian troops drove into Libyan territory Saturday and destroyed the air and ground base at Matan as Sarra in Libya's southeast, Chad's military command reported.

Hours earlier, officials in Chad and the Chadian Embassy in Paris had said Chadian troops repulsed a Libyan ground offensive against the town of Ounianga-Kebir in northern Chad. The officials said the troops were pursuing the Libyans north from

The French news agency Agence France-Presse said Western intelligence services in N'Diamena confirmed the taking of Matan as Sarra by the Chadian

In Paris, the French Defense Ministry said it had no information about the fighting.

JANA, in a dispatch monitored in Egypt, said, "At the time the Libyan Arab armed forces adhered to stopping the raids in Chadian lands ... hostile forces exploited this stance and carried out an attack 300 kilometers (186 miles) inside the Libyan Arab lands in a bid to attack the civilian Sarra airport used for communications between the great Jamahirya (Libya) and Africa.' A spokesman for Chad's military command said the Libyan base was "entirely in the hands" of Chadian troops. He spoke of the base's "total destruction," and said Libyan casualties were "very heavy." He said casualty figures would be provided later.

Maps show that Matan as Sarra is about 60 miles north of the border with Chad.

Ounianga-Kebir is 60 miles south of the contested Aouzou Strip between Chad and Libya and in the flat desert between the Tibesti Mountain range to the west and the Ennedi Mountains in

DPS predicts 42 will die on Texas highways

By The Associated Press

Eight people had died on Texas highways by early Saturday afternoon of the Labor Day weekend, officials said.

Texas Department of Public Safety officials predict the Labor Day weekend traffic death toll will reach 42. The official counting period began at 6 p.m. Friday and continues through midnight Monday, said DPS spokesman David Wells.

Ronnie Lee Fowell, 34, of San Augustine, died at about 6:25 p.m. Friday after the vehicle he was driving went off Texas Highway 147 and overturned, Wells said

An unidentified male pedestrian, believed to about 50, died at about 9:25 p.m. after he was struck by two vehicles on Texas Highway 358 in Corpus Christi. Wells said the pedestrian was crossing the road when he was struck.

Robert Romaniello, 19, of Lawndale, Calif., was killed at about 9:30 p.m. He was a passenger in a two-vehicle collision on Interstate 10 about 4 miles east of Winnie in Jefferson County. Two others were injured, Wells said.

Charles Edward Dickens, 57, Livingston, died after two-vehicle broadside collision at 10 p.m. on U.S. Highway 190 about 10 miles east of Livingston. Dickens was a passenger in a car was involved in a collision with a pickup, Wells said. Two others were injured.

Scott Lane Blanton, 18, of Georgetown, died at 10:10 p.m. Friday as a passenger in a vehicle that rolled over on Farm-to-Market-Road 971 about 2 miles northeast of Georgetown. Wells said two others were injured

Miguel V. Jutierrez, 26, of Dallas, a pedestrian, was killed at about 11:29 p.m. when he was struck by a vehicle on North Central Expwy

Yolanda R. Zamora, 35, of Garland, was killed as a passenger in a onevehicle accident at 2:30 a.m. Saturday in Mesquite. The car was eastbound on Interstate 30 and became airborne after striking a guard rail on the ramp to southbound Interstate 635, Wells said.

David Timothy Hill, 20, of Gladewater, died at about 5 a.m. Saturday when the pickup he was driving was involved in a collision with a tractor-trailer on North Loop 485 in Gladewater, Wells said.

The toll predicted this year is slightly lower than the 48 deaths reported for the 78-hour holiday period in 1986.

Last year, 38 of the 51 Labor Day traffic deaths were the result of accidents in which drunken driving was a factor, Leo Gossett, DPS director, said earlier

To beef up traffic-law enforcement, Gossett said the DPS will assign additional state troopers to the highways during the Labor Day weekend.

Richard Fatheree, former Pampa High School student body president, will return to his hometown as main speaker for the Pampa United Way campaign kickoff luncheon on Tuesday, Sept. 15.

The luncheon, to be held at M.K. Brown Auditorium's Heritage Room, will also serve as the first monthly membership meet-ing for the Pampa Chamber of Commerce following the summer

Currently employed with Williams-Dwyer Co. of Wichita Falls, Fatheree was born in Pampa and graduated from Pampa High School in 1965. He is a 1971 graudate of Texas Tech University and has resided in Wichita Falls for the past 10 years.

Fatheree has been involved in the Wichita Falls United Way campaign for the past several years in various capacities, including serving as fund raising drive chairman.

He served as a loaned executive in 1980 and was Pacesetter chairman in 1981. He worked with the Volunteer Firms A Division in 1982 and served as loaned executive chairman in 1983.

Fatheree served as campaign chairman in 1984. The goal was set at $1,750,938. The goal was exceeded with a collection of $1,754,003.

He has served as a member of the United Way board of directors, chairman of the speakers bureau and a volunteer in 1985, 1986 and 1987. The Wichita Falls United Way has set a goal of $1.8

have been paying for two years. The increase is the first in county taxes in three years.

With the new rate, the owner of a $50,000 home who paid $108 in county taxes during 1987 will pay $128 in 1988. Judge Kennedy noted that the increase for most Pampa homeowners will be even more substantial because home values have risen this year

The budget also will be partially funded by nearly $570,000 from the county's $4.7 million surplus, left over from the sale of Highland General Hospital. Commissioner Greene recommended spending an additional $336,000 from the Highland fund in order to keep the tax rate at 21.6 cents.

"That surplus is taxpayers" money," Greene said, in voting against the tax hike.

Greene's fellow commissioners disagreed. They said the surplus might be needed to bail the county out next year and for needed improvements to the county jail and courthouse

About $300,000 of the surplus already has been earmarked for a public golf course, approved by voters last spring

"If we're in trouble now, we'll be in double trouble next year. Commissioner Presley said.

In addition to the McLean contingent, several Pampa taxpayers also showed up at the meeting to voice their opinions.

W.A. Morgan, 1938 Evergreen St., urged commissioners to support the libraries but complained about raises for elected officials, particularly the commissioners. Morgan said commissioners work roughly 30 percent of the time but earn more than $20,000 a

He said that equates to a fulltime salary of more than $60,000. Ray Velasquez, owner of Little Mexico Restaurant on Craven Avenue, also complained about the raises and $14,000 allocated Tuesday to the county's four senior citizen centers. But Velasquez praised commissioners for cutting other private agencies out of the budget, such as Tralee Crisis Center for Women Inc.

Velasquez said commissioners should fund only those items that benefit all citizens

Tralee had requested $15,000, but commissioners chose Tuesday not to fund the battered women and children's shelter, at all. Friday, Greene asked where Tralee's clients in Pampa would go if the shelter were to close.

"They'll go exactly where they've been going — right back home in a few days," Simmons replied. "Daddy sobers up, and everything's all right.

Simmons said he doesn't think funding Tralee, and some other private agencies, is a proper role for county government. He estimated that more than 90 percent of women who come to the shelter for help return to their husbands in a few days.

Judge Kennedy noted most of the private agencies pleading for continued financial support had been funded out of federal revenue sharing money. The federal program has been discontinued by Congress.

"Other people received these funds, but they didn't choose to use it that way, and today, they don't have people staked out in their budget meetings, because they never helped them in the first place," Kennedy said. "Today, we're sort of the bad guys."

In other budgetary action Friday, commissioners ordered officeholders not to fill vacancies without commissioners' authorization. A moratorium also was placed on conference travel by county employees, unless mandated by the state or authorized by commissioners

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

U.S. ships protect foreign economies

For another example of the muddle that Reagan administration foreign policy has become, look to the Persian Gulf. The United States has assembled more than 20 ships there, our largest armada since the Viet-nam war. But for what purpose?

Not to punish the Ayatollah Khomeini for his strikes against Gulf shipping. Within hours, if the administration wanted to, it could destroy the ayatollah's entire air force and navy and severely hurt his army.

Not to encourage the ayatollah to work for peace, either Within the past few months America has stri either. Within the past few months America has stupidly tilted toward Iraq. Certainly, we should not side with the ayatollah, whose recent murderous rampage in Mecca, Saudia Arabia, confirms the pathological character of his regime. But the Iraq of dictator Saddam Hussein is no peaceful nation, either. It started the war; it probably has used poison gas attacks against Iran; and in 1984 in began the strikes against third-party oil tankers. Iraq only wants peace now because it might lose the war.

Not to protect American economic interests. Little American oil comes from the gulf. True enough, a dislocation of mideast oil supplies would jack up world oil prices, costing America more. But former Navy Secretary John Lehman estimates that America's commitment to keeping Mideast oil flowing costs U.S. taxpayers $40 billion a year. Even another major oil crisis, something not likely, wouldn't cost that much.

Not to counter Soviet naval moves in the Gulf. That certainly is a big concern, which could be met by stationing several ships, but not an armada, to protect our interests. It now appears that Kuwaiti requests for Soviet protection were bluffs that, in turn, led to the current American reflagging and over-protection.

Far from advancing peace or American interests, our current gulf policy is achieving the opposite. While oil-rich Kuwait gladly has accepted our free protection, Iran is being driven to seek support from the

The ayatollah recently signed an accord with Moscow to build oil pipelines and highways between Iran

America should quit playing this no-win geopolitical game. We should become, again, neutral in the Iran-Iraq war. That policy worked fairly well — except for Ollie North's shipments of arms to Iran — for seven years. It should not have been abandoned. And we should cease using our Navy as free rent-acops for the Persian Gulf oil lanes. Persian Gulf oil states can easily afford to hire their own protection by tacking a sur-charge on the oil they sell. Or Japan and Western Europe could protect the oil shipments headed for their shores. As things now stand, American taxpayers pay to protect oil destined to fuel the economies of our chief competitors. It's time our rich allies grew up and protected their own interests. America should cut the red, white, and blue apron strings extending to the Persian Gulf.

Minimum wage protects unions

Within the next several months Congress will decide whether to enact the Kennedy-Hawkins proposal to increase the minimum wage to $4.65 an hour. Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., describes the proposed increase as "essential to the very poorest of our workers," because it would "ensure full-time workers get the wage that keeps them out of poverty.

Kennedy's claim is balderdash. If the minimum wage was an anti-poverty weapon, we could save foreign aid money. Just tell poor countries like Ethiopia and Bangladesh to increase minimum wages and their workers would get a wage that would keep them out of poverty. Such advice would be recognized as nonsense, even by Kennedy. If the minimum wage can't eliminate poverty in Ethiopia and Bangladesh, it can't do it here.

Raising the minimum wage cuts off the bottom rungs of the economic ladder. It has the effect of a law saying: If you are so unfortunate that you can only produce $2 worth of value an hour, you're not worthy of a job. No employer is likely to pay $4.65 an hour, plus mandated fringes like Social Security, to a person who only produces $2 an hour worth of value. The brunt of the minimum wage law is borne by low-skilled workers, mostly teen-agers, particularly black teen-agers. Another layer of American lowskilled jobs will go the way of theatre ushers and gas station attendants. Yet another layer will go overseas where labor is cheaper.

Guess who's going to support the Kennedy-Hawkins bill? Labor unions will support it. They'll be joined by clergymen, civil rights organizations, and the Black Congressional Caucas, to name a few. Just to prove politics breeds strange bedfellows, let me cite some quotes from their fellow minimum wage supporters: "While definite exclusion of the Natives from the more remunerative jobs has not been urged upon us, the same result would follow a certain use of the powers of the Wage Board ... The method would be to fix a minimum rate for an occupation or craft so high that no Native would be likely to be employed." Those were the sentiments of South Africa's Economic and Wage Commission back in 1925.

More recently, George Beetge, secretary of South Africa's White Building Workers Union, said, "There is no job reservation left in the building industry, and in the circumstances I support the rate for the job (minimum wages) as the second best way of protecting our white artisans." Tom Murray, head of the Boilermakers Union, said, "Job reservation is a dead duck, therefore the only protection is a policy of the rate for the job (minimum wage).

The minimum wage law has found staunch South African support because it is a valuable tool for charlatans, scoundrels and racists everywhere. In 1909, the American Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen called for wage regulation as a way of eliminating black firemen. Racist sentiments were behind the legislative support of the 1931 Davis-Bacon Act, which is still on the books. Supporters of the Kennedy-Hawkins bill may not be racists, but they share the same general interests and engage in the same strategy as South Africa's racists.

If we ask Kennedy and co-sponsor Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., about this, they'd profess no racist intentions. Great! People who think intentions determine effects belong to the class who think the Law of Gravity might have a different effect on the person who stumbles off the Empire State Building than on the person who is pushed. The Law of Gravity, like the Law of Supply and Demand, is an equal opportunity law. Being hurt in the name of good doesn't feel any better than being hurt in the name of evil.

DISTINGUISHED SCHOLARS PROVE BEARS DON'T "YELLOW RAIN" IN THE WOODS.

Drink cold beer at my funeral

Here's a grim sort of question to ask, I suppose, but I'm going to ask it anyway: Have you ever given any serious thought as to what you would like done at your funeral? Most of us haven't because we don't want to think about such things, and that's why most of the funerals I've been to seem inappropriate for the guest of honor. A sad-faced minister reads a few words of scripture, the blind girl sings, and everybody goes home except the dearly departed. I don't want something like that to happen to me. I have, for instance, set aside a few bucks for a wake in my honor. I want cold beer and barbecue to be served, and I don't want any crying or carrying on. I also want somebody to come in and sing a few of my favorite songs like Jerry Lee Lewis's

"What Made Milwaukee Famous Has Made a Fool Out of Me," and Hank Williams Jr.'s moving "Born to Boogie."

The reason I'm broaching this subject today is because of a newspaper clip a reader sent me from Memphis regarding a suit filed against a funeral home for totally botching the funeral of a Missouri woman a year ago. The same sort of thing could happen to you or me if we don't prepare ahead of time.

The family of this woman hired a funeral home after her death. After the services at the church, the funeral procession began a 30-mile trip to the burial spot. According to the suit, the funeral home's flower van had to drop out of the procession because of a broken muffler.

A few miles later, the hearse had to stop for gas. After that, the suit said the hearse drove at a fast rate of speed making it difficult for the other cars in the procession to keep up.

In the meantime, the flower van had its muffler repaired and rushed to the burial site. It came over the hill near the cemetery and plied, "Volleyball."

rear-ended the hearse

The casket was damaged in the collision, and it could not be removed from the hearse until its doors were pried open. The hearse driver was taken to a hospital, and the family of the deceased had to stand around an hour until the services could be continued. Nothing like being late to your own funeral.

and nothing like that is going to happen to me. Besides the wake, I want at least two sets of jumper cables at my funeral in case the hearse comes up with a dead, if you'll excuse the expression, battery I also have instructed that I not be sent away wearing a tie. I want nobody commenting, 'Don't he look natural," when they peer at my remains, and I want the free beer at the wake stopped at 8 p.m., after which there will be a cash bar I've discussed all this with my stepbrother, radio legend Ludlow Porch, who has promised all my directives will be carried out in case I go before him.

In case he goes before me, I asked Ludlow what he wanted played at his funeral. After several moments of deep thought, Ludlow re-

Don't delay beneficial science

Strobel is clearly no mean scholar himself. One of the nation's premier plant pathologists, the Montana State University researcher has spent recent years stalking a cure for Dutch

His anti-establishment credentials are equally sound. Rather than permit government regulations to delay valuable research for a year, he spurned the rules and injected 14 elms with a strain of genetically engineered bacterium that can help kill the disease.

Galileo would have been proud. His own nemesis, the Vatican, rarely elevated bureaucratic hauteur to the high art practiced by the Environmental Protection Agency. As Strobel noted, he had little choice in the deadening face of delay: "We can sit and talk about Dutch elm disease or we can do something about it." So now, where are the hosannas for his devotion to knowledge? Why is Strobel in trouble not only with the government, but with his university and, alas, even with some of his colleagues?

Don't believe for a moment that the reason stems from experimental risk. The risk is minimal, and most seasoned scientists will say so. Despite profound public ignorance of bioengineering (and consequent unease), most experiments currently involve little or no danger. Sometimes they merely short-circuit decades of plant and animal breeding, the process through which humans have manipulated species for centuries. Unfortunately, our society has become one in which even the most fanciful risks are now taken seriously, to the point of harnessing science to a post. Would penicillin ever have been introduced, for example, had it been forced to vault the fearsome line of obstacles since erected by the Food and Drug Administration? Even if the answer is yes, how many lives would have been lost before the drug received final approval?

Regulation itself is not the problem. European countries, which routinely introduce life-saving drugs years before they arrive on American shelves, control the manufacture and sale of such substances, too. All nations regulate nuclear power, for that matter, yet few manage to ensure such maddening delays as the United States. Does anyone seriously think nuclear plants in France or Japan are less safe than ours?

Our caution is double-edged, too, infecting both administrative agencies and the courts. As a result, only in America could a modern-day Luddite like Jeremy Rifkin so effectively stifle innovation and progress.

Although he lacks scientific background, Rifkin is quoted regularly by major media outlets on bioengineering issues. The reason: His non-profit foundation monitors such research with monkish zeal, filing lawsuits aimed at smothering it with more governmental oversight.

Shockingly, Rifkin discounts virtually all Western scientific achievement, as revealed in his bizarre 1983 book "Algeny":

"We have advanced on the world, swept across the great landscapes, leaving our mark in granite and stone, iron and steel ... for millennia we left a legacy of death, when in fact the only living legacy that we can ever leave is the endowment we never

When the media, government officials and courts can take seriously a man who could write those words, no wonder genuine pathfinders like Gary Strobel, impatient with the rules, conclude they must strike out on their

I have never written a complaint letter before, but when I got The Pampa News Tuesday afternoon, and it had a front-page picture of a Thayer, Kan., boy participating in a kids rodeo at Thayer, I decided it was time for one.

I'm sure if he had asked an adult instead of a young boy, I'm sure he would have been more than happy to give him a program.

I sure hope the people from Thayer, Kan., buy The Pampa News to help pay your wages. Thank you for the support.

Store raised price in deal for couch

To the editor:

It is always interesting when new people come to town. Everyone checks them out.

In my first conversation with the new Salvation Army captain, Bob Clemons, he informed me he was here "to make money!"

Said Clemons: "The last captain lost money." When I looked at the prices on the used clothing and furniture in the Salvation Army thrift store, I was rather shocked.

We have been acquainted with some of the previous captains, but none like this

We have always bought furniture from the Salvation Army. I recently was quoted a price of $20 on a couch in the store. The couch had a hole in it and was stained under the cusinions. I told store employees that I would get $20 cash and return Saturday to pick up the couch.

I called Saturday morning and told the captain about purchasing the couch.

He said he didn't even have a couch of that description, as all were hide-a-beds, certainly not for

I told the captain I would come down and show him the couch. My husband and two young men came in behind me to get the couch. The captain was gone, and his friend told me in no uncertain manner that he didn't think the captain was going to sell the couch to me for $20.

When the captain came in, he said he had no such couch. I took him over to it, and he said the price was $64!

The captain finally said he would take $32, half-

If we had money, I would buy newer furniture, but all I had was a $20 so we left.

On the way home on the Amarillo highway, I thought of a used furniture dealer with a small shop. We stopped there. The dealer had a small green couch with no holes and wanted $25 for it. I told him my story, and he dropped the price to $20. The dealer helped load the couch and tie it down. We put couch in our rent house For all these years I thought the Army was a non-profit organization.

All furniture, clothing, etc., is given to the Army to be sold and given at prices people can afford. We and others have given much to them for years.

Frisbee isn't just any flying saucer

To the editor:

I am writing regarding a June 21 Pampa News article, "Junior-Senior Olympics bridges generation gap," because I am concerned about the misuse of one of our company's registered trademarks

FRISBEE® is a registered trademark of Wham-O for flying discs and not a common name.

Over the years, Wham-O literally has spent millions of dollars on this product category and to promote our FRISBEE® trademark. Of necessity, we have to watch the uses of our trademark very carefully

Please understand that we do not wish to be unduly difficult in this matter, since we believe that the mistake was not intentional on your part. It would be appreciated if you would advise your staff writers that when using the word FRISBEE to follow it with the * symbol and the common name, flying saucer or flying disc. We realize that it may be difficult for you to add the * mark after the word "FRISBEE." Therefore, we ask you to capitalize "FRISBEE," at least, and add the common name, disc. For example, "FRISBEE disc."

We appreciate your understanding and thank you in advance for respecting our request.

Stuart B. Schneck

general counsel KRANSCO San Francisco

EDITOR'S NOTE: In the story you mention, Frisbee was capitalized in the middle of a sentence, indicating a proper noun and respect for your trademark. The Associated Press Stylebook, this newspaper's bible on use of the language, has a separate listing for Frisbee: "A trademark for a plastic disk thrown as a toy. Use Frisbee disk for the trademarked version and flying disk for other generic versions." The Stylebook does not call for using all capital letters or the * symbol.

By the way, congratulations on the success of your product. Your company so successfully cornered the market that Americans now use "Frisbee" to name any flying disk toy, much the way they use "Kleenex" when referring to any brand of facial tissue, "Coke" to describe any soft drink, and "Band-Aid," for any small bandage. "Yo-yo" and "hula-hoop" also are successful products whose brand names became somewhat generic terms and commonly identify any such products.

Texas guest columnist

KERRVILLE (AP) — I suppose there's a lot of things that terrorize us these days.

Threat of nuclear war, rampant crime in the streets and the Ayatollah all stimulate rounds of hand-wringing these days.

To me, there's no worse tool of terrorism than the telephone. My feelings toward the device invented by Alexander Graham Bell those many decades back has gone 180 degrees since the days of my youth.

As a teen-ager, my parents would have to yank me off the receiver to break the link with my friends. A telephone ring always seemed to promise, in those days, something was happening - especially outside the house and the range of parents.

No such affection exists today. As an editor, my phone calls usually take one of two directions. Callers can be seeking news coverage or giving a news tip. Either of those are essential to the newspaper's health.

The other is the complaint.

That also is useful in straightening out mistakes or providing a reader's perspective that we hadn't considered before those kind of calls in other professions. It's often the same. When people complain, they don't stop at correcting a wrong — there has to be wholesale bloodletting as well.

After a day when my ears have been melted in the shape of a receiver, the last thing I need when I get home is the nocturnal solicitor trying to sell me a new roof or siding.

It could be worse. A few Kerrville residents were taken by a telephone scam that had them shelling out money for nonexistent electronics.

Those phone cheats are truly deserving of the real scorchers — not the 8-5 hired hands.

Telephones are a marvelous invention. In the hands of some, however, they become an experience in torture.

Fires char more timber

By ROGER PETTERSON Associated Press Writer

Firefighters made some progress Saturday against the largest of the forest and brush fires that have charred more than 900 square miles in the West, and soldiers and federal workers were given crash courses to join the battle.

A California brewery converted its canning line from beer to water to provide drinking water for some of the more than 20,000 firefighters at work. Crews were stretched so thin that no one was fighting dozens of fires in northern California.

Fire suppression costs in Oregon and California are running between $4 million and $5 million a day, said Dana Bornheim of the Boise Interagency Fire Center in Idaho, which coordinates state and federal efforts in the West.

'In the past four days, more people and supplies have been committed to Western fires than in any other four-day period in our records," Bornheim said Friday.

The burned area in California had grown to 440,000 acres by Saturday and 104,000 acres were burned in Oregon. About 31,000 acres had burned in Idaho. Other fires were in Washington, Arizona, Montana, South Dakota and Wyoming, bringing the total acreage to about 588,000 for the week, although several of those had been contained or

There were still "about 600 to 900 fires burning at the present time" in California on Saturday, said Mike Milosch, a spokesman for the U.S. Forest

Abducted heir buried in box; three charged

KANKAKEE, Ill. (AP) - The nephew of a prominent newspaper publisher died in a kidnap attempt after he was buried alive in a homemade wooden box by his abductors, who were demanding $1 million ransom, police said Saturday.

Three suspects were in custody and more were being sought in the carefully planned kidnap, said Kankakee Police Chief Timothy O. Nugent Stephen B. Small's body was found Friday night in a box buried three feet deep in sand southeast of Kankakee, authorities said. Kankakee County coroner James Orrison said the kidnappers made provisions for air, water and light, but Small probably suffocated or had a heart attack.

Nugent said the suspects would be charged with aggravated kidnapping and murder.

Nugent identified the suspects as Daniel J. Edwards, 30, and Nancy Rish, 26, both of nearby Bourbonnais, and Kent Allain, 33, of Kankakee, about 60 miles south of Chicago. Nugent said "a few" more arrests were expected, but he declined to be spe-

"They planned it," said Deputy Chief Robert Pepin. "It wasn't a case of 'Today we're going to do it'. They built a box. They put a ventilation system in. They knew a little bit about where he was

Authorities planned to charge the three suspects on Tuesday when courts opened again after the Labor Day holiday, Nugent said.

Small, 39, was part of a family that headed a broadcasting company and the nephew of the late Len H. Small, who was president of Small Newspapers Inc. and editor and publisher of The Daily Journal of Kankakee. Small's great-grandfather was Len Small, governor of Illinois from 1921 to 1929.

Small apparently was lured three blocks from his home early Wednesday morning to a building he was renovating. He received a telephone call from someone who identified himself as a policeman and said the building, designed by architect Frank Lloyd Wright, had been forcibly entered, Nugent said. Small's wife, Nancy, was called about 3:30 a.m. and told her husband was being held for a $1 million ransom, Nugent said. The caller said Mrs. Small would find her husband "in a box" if the ransom was not paid, said a police

ST. LOUIS (AP) - Police interviewed survivors and combed the city Saturday for two armed robbers who may have posed as cleaners to get into a closed grocery store where they killed five employees and wounded two others

Two employees of the National Supermarket store, working in a back room, escaped injury by climbing onto the roof, police said. After the gunmen fled in a car, the two called down to a woman on the street to telephone

The robbers entered the store shortly after 11 p.m. Friday, about an hour after it had closed, said Capt. Charles McCrary, who is heading a 17-officer investigating squad.

"Possibly the security guard may have let them in thinking they were cleaners," McCrary said. He said the men held the seven employees at gunpoint near the service desk at the front of the store and took an undetermined amount of cash.

"Then they were all directed to lie down on the floor and they were shot," McCrary said.

Four of the victims died at the scene and a fifth died a short time later at a nearby hospital, McCrary said. They were identified as Rose Brown, 49, head cashier; Kenneth Bass, 27, a cleaning man; Michael Beam, 34, a stock manager; Michael Marr, 16, a bag boy; and David Spahn, 27, a security guard.

The assistant store manager, Harold Meyer, 30, and Richard Fortson, 32, a service manager, also were shot. Meyer was in critical but stable condition and Fortson in serious but stable condition, police said, but they would not disclose the name of the hos-dominantly black neighborhood north of downtown.

Hundreds of people gathered Friday night outside police lines to watch through the windows secured by chain-link fence as investigators videotaped the crime scene.

On Saturday, the store remained closed. Neighbors and would-be shoppers gathered outside on the sidewalk and in the parking lot.

Joyce Mack said she was attending services at the Kossuth Church of God in Christ behind the grocery store when the shootings occurred.

'We didn't hear anything,'' she said. "It's a quiet little store. "Everybody in there was friendly. I've never known it to be robbed. I've heard of purse snatchings, but never known it to be robbed." "I've come up here at night and shopped by myself and nothing ever happened," said Johnnie Faulkner. She said she lived in the neighborhood and knew several of the victims. Based on interviews with the survivors and the workers who climbed onto the roof, police issued partial descriptions of the robbers and two cars that may have been involved but they had no suspects in mind, McCrary

"We have no independent witnesses to give us additional information, so we're just going to have to use old-fashioned police work," he said. Officers in the city were conducting a "grid search" with each unit assigned to comb a specific area.

A spokesman for the National Supermarket chain said the company was offering a $10,000 reward for information leading to an arrest and conviction in the shootings

Conducting a United Way fuildraising drive involves more than just selecting a drive chairman and letting him do all the work.

Any successful drive depends on a number of dedicated workers willing to get out and coordinate the efforts of the various volunteers who solicit donations from corporations, businesses and individuals.

Duane Harp, 1987 drive chairman, has named nine division chairmen to help him conduct this year's drive.

The campaign has set a goal of $296,000 to fund the 14 local health and human service agencies assisted by the Pampa United Wav

The division leaders, forming the cabinet of advisers under the chairman's direction, represent a wide cross-section of business and professional backgrounds.

Serving as chairman of the Major Firms Division is Don Babcock, First National Bank president. Co-chairmen of the Public Division are Scott Hahn, Gray County treasurer, and Jane Steele, assistant superintendent of curriculum resources for Pampa public schools.

Coordinating the Professional Division workers are Blake Wilson, manager of Brooks Wilson & Co. CPA, and Curt Beck, retired Cabot Corp. official. Retired Celanese Chemical Co. official W.A. Morgan and Security Federal Savings and Loan Association Assistant Vice President Jimmie Clark are co-chairing the Commercial Division.

Rounding out the drive cabinet are Special Gifts Division cochairmen Carol Cofer, administrative secretary for IRI International, and Bill Harris, vice president of Heritage Ford.

A Pampa High School graduate, Babcock attended Texas Tech University and the University of Oklahoma. He serves as a deacon at First Baptist Church. Babcock is a member of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce board of directors, the board of trustees for Wayland Baptist University and the advisory board for Clarendon College.

"I think it's time we put our economic problems behind us and begin to have a positive outlook and meet our goal this year in a rapid manner," Babcock said of the United Way drive.

Hahn received his business degree from Texas Tech and has completed graduate work in business. An elder at First Presbyterian Church, he serves as coordinator for the senior high youth group. He is a member of the church choir and a past Sunday School teacher.

He serves on the board of directors for Genesis House and is vice president of the local Boy Scout council.

Hahn said he believes the Pampa United Way is "a way for all citizens of Pampa to help those less fortunate.'

Pampa High School graduate Steele earned her bachelor's degree at West Texas State University in Canyon and received her master's degree at Stephen F. Austin University at Nacogdoches, where she also completed post-graduate work.

Steele is a member of First United Methodist Church and a member of the Pampa Fine Arts Association. She serves on the board of directors of the Pampa Community Concert Association and the Education Committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce

"I strongly support the United Way and the organizations it contributes to," Steele said, adding that the United Way efforts are "very worthwhile."

Wilson gained his bachelor's degree in business administration and accounting from the University of Texas at Austin. A member of the First Presbyterian Church, he is president of the Pampa Sunrise Rotary Club and serves as treasurer of Genesis

"In a time when the United Way needs the most through a united effort from businesses and employees, Pampa will meet the Wilson said. need."

Beck earned his bachelor's and master's degrees in chemical engineering from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he also received a certificate of continuing education.

A member of the First Presbyterian Church, he is president of the Tralee Crisis Center advisory board and serves on the boards for the Pampa Community Concert Association and the Salvation Army. A Pampa Chamber of Commerce director, Beck also is treasurer of the Pampa Foundation for Outdoor Art.

"I've worked with the United Way for about 15 years," Beck said, adding that it "has always been a pleasant experience at how generous Pampans can be even in times of economic adversity.'

The United Way "gives Pampans the opportunity to supply and fund their own charitable needs, rather than rely on the government to meet these needs," Beck said.

"Dub" Morgan received degrees in economics and engineering from West Texas and Texas Tech universities. Another First Presbyterian member, Morgan is on the board of directors for Genesis House and Clean Pampa Inc. A member of the Downtown Kiwanis Club, he also helps with Meals on Wheels and Good Samaritan Christian Services.

"I have been involved with United Way drives for over 25 years," Morgan said. "I feel the United Way drive acts as a unifying effort in the community when there are several hundred volunteers working toward a common, worthwhile course.

Most Pampans are sympathetic for those using the United Way services and are usually generous in their support," he said. "I would encourage all Pam-pans to visit the participating agencies and observe first-hand the results of their gifts," Morgan added

Clark, who also is serving as assistant drive chairman with Harp, attended West Texas State University and the Pampa Center of Clarendon College. As assistant chairman, Clark is in training to serve as drive chairman next year.

A Sunday School teacher at First Baptist Church, Clark is on the board of the Gray County Association for Retarded Citizens and serves as cochairman of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce Membership Committee.

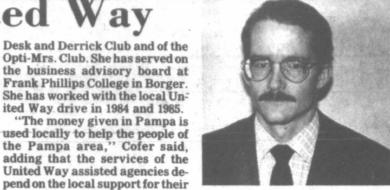

He has served as a volunteer in previous United Way campaigns and does youth work through the Pampa Optimist Club programs.

"The Pampa United Way is a tremendous effort by the community to help meet the monetary needs of a number of service organizations," Clark said.

"It's the best way to say, 'I care, I'll give a helping hand.' There's no better tool available to meet the overall needs of the community than through the United Way," Clark added.

Oil slips on gulf peace report

NEW YORK (AP) - Oil prices slipped lower in response to a report that Iran may be interested in negotiating an end to its war with Iraq in the Persian Gulf.

At the United Nations Friday, Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar said Iran has agreed to discuss with him implementation of a U.N. plan to end the Iran-Iraq war. He said he will travel next week to both combatant nations to discuss the idea.

The news hit the market early in the afternoon, and analysts said it stirred a wave of selling after a session that had been otherwise sleepy heading into the three-day holi-

On the the New York Mercantile Exchange, which will be closed Monday, contracts for October delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, closed at $19.32 per 42-gallon barrel, down 18 cents from Thursday.

Among refined products, October contracts for wholesale unleaded gasoline settled at 50.17 cents per gallon, down 0.22 cent from Thursday, while wholesale heating oil closed at 51.83 cents per gallon, down 0.37

Madison Galbraith, senior energy specialist for Merrill Lynch Energy Futures, said the U.N. news was bearish for short-term prices because a peace agreement "would allow immediate shipment of oil from Iran and Iraq in the Persian Gulf without any interruptions

In a market already concerned about reports that members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are producing up to 3 million barrels a day more than the world needs, such new shipments could only add to the glut, pushing prices down.

Friday's close capped a string of sessions in which the market, after several weeks of wide swings, generally settled on a range of about $19 to $20 per barrel for crude, analysts

Rising to a peak at $22.39 per barrel on July 17, prices then went into a sharp decline, closing as low as $18.60 on Aug. 24. The curve then turned upward to settle at current levels in the mid-$19 range.

The original runup had come amid weeks of speculation that Persian Gulf tensions might explode with an incident leading to restrictions on oil shipments to consumer na-

As those worries gradually dissipated, the market's attention shifted to reports that OPEC members were exceeding production

Amoco Co. inaugurates oil recovery

DENVER CITY (AP) - Amoco Production Co. has inaugurated a new multimillion-dollar carbon dioxide removal plant designed to coax more oil out of underground fields.

The plant, 70 miles southwest of Lubbock, will process hydrocarbon gas already separated from crude at a rate of 80 million cubic feet of carbon dioxide gas per day, Amoco spokesman Greg Clock.

It is estimated that 90 percent of the gas stream coming into the plant will be carbon dioxide from injection wells at about 5,100 feet in the Wasson field San Andres formation.

Over the next several days, Amoco will bring gas through the plant's various systems to ensure the final product meets specifications. The project is expected to extend the life of the 7,840-acre field into the 21st century

Clock would not disclose the cost of building the project, but said Friday that several hundred producing and injection wells already are working.

Thirty full-time Amoco employees will operate the tertiary treatment plant, which will extract about 3,000 barrels of natural gas liquids and 14 tons of sulfur from hydrocarbon gas per day, he said.

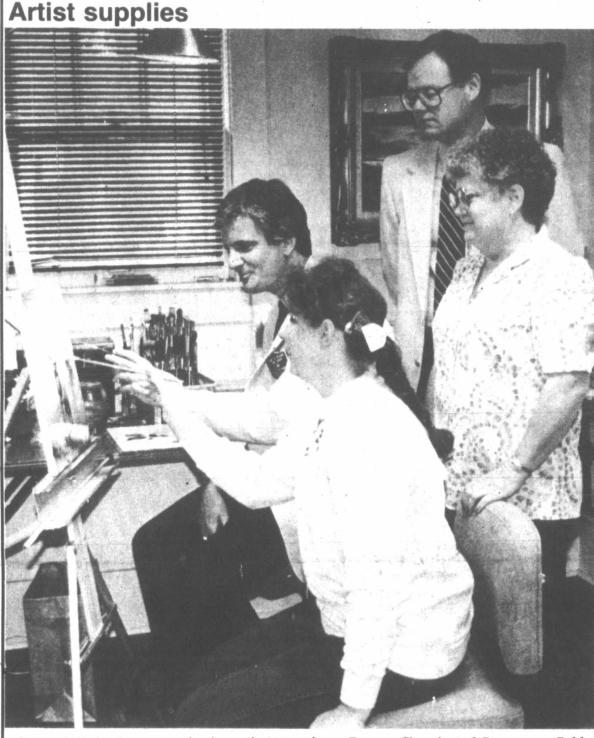

Wasson field, which has undergone a third stage of carbon dioxide recovery since 1984, was discovered in 1936.

Amoco said carbon dioxide gas fed by pipelines from New Mexico and Colorado into the field is separated at the plant and reinjected for use in "coaxing more oil out of the reservoir," Clock

Currently, Amoco is working to expand its Mallet carbon dioxide removal plant, which serves three units in Slaughter field, 40 miles northeast of Denver City. That plant, in Hockley County, was completed in 1985.

Savings institutions comply with probe

DALLAS (AP) — Restoring public confidence in Texas' ailing savings and loans by providing a federal grand jury with numerous records is taking a lot of time and costing a bundle of money, state thrift executives

Tom Wageman, president and chairman of Sunbelt Savings Association, estimates it will cost his thrift between $30,000 and $60,000 to supply information for the special task force investigating fraud and mismanagement at Texas S&Ls A task force — which includes officials from the U.S. Justice Department, the FBI and the Internal Revenue Service — has filed subpoenas for records on more 400 individuals from more than 30 institutions. 'It creates an unusual demand for absolutely meticulous performance," Wageman said of the subpoenas. "You have a duty to tomer to safeguard and protect his privacy. You can't give them the wrong records.'

Many of the people on the subpoena list are information sources and not being investigated, said Dallas attorney Ernest Figari Jr.

The S&L's only are reimbursed for incidental cost, such as copying, The Dallas Morning News reported

But Russ Cobler, San Antonio Savings executive vice president said the cost is necessary to regain the trust of the public. "Right now public confidence in financial institutions in Texas is probably at the lowest level it has ever been. We hope this is the first step in restoring that confidence," he said. San Antonio Savings oversees operations at Vernon Savings and Loan Association and two other troubled thrifts under control of a Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.

San Antonio Savings has not received any subpoenas, Cobler said.

Paul Ott, newly elected president at Western Federal Savings Association, said the FSLIC now is asking him to provide original documents, not copies. "Whether they ask for copies or originals we still have to make a copy." he said. "We have had to shift some people around to do the work.

The search for information about problem S&Ls is also causing liability risks for law firms that have represented the thrifts on a day-to-day basis.

The Dallas legal firm Jenkens & Gilchrist was named in a civil lawsuit after the collapse of two thrifts it represented.

Jenkens & Gilchrist and 48 of its former and current partners are accused of malpractice in the FSLIC suit.

Ryan shuts out Pirates

HOUSTON (AP) - Some of the wildness of his youth came back to Houston Astros pitcher Nolan Ryan, but he says it was only wild enough to get the job done.

Ryan struggled early in Friday night's 2-0 victory over Pittsburgh, walking four over the first four innings, but he finished with six strikeouts to regain the National League lead over teammate Mike Scott.

"For allowing only two hits, it was a struggle," Ryan said. "I was wild in the strike zone and had no control of my pitches. I was just wild enough to be effective.

Ryan, 6-14, who often had control problems in his earlier years, set a major league record for most strikeouts in a season by a pitcher at least 40 years old.

BOSTON (AP) - Junior quarterback Mike Power threw for three touchdowns and fullback Jim Turner ran for two more Saturday in a 38-20 Boston College opening game victory over Texas Christian.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Michael Timpson ran 63 yards for a touchdown with a punt return and Blair Thomas turned a screen pass into a 67-yard score as 11th-ranked Penn State beat Bowling Green 45-19 on Saturday for Coach Joe Paterno's 200th college football vic-

Penn State, the defending national champion, fell behind 7-3 in the first period of its 1987 opener, but rallied for four touchdowns in the second period to take a comfortable 31-16 lead at halftime. Penn State unleashed a big-play attack in extending the longest major-college winning streak to 13 games and its regularseason winning string to 23.

Paterno, with a 200-44-2 record in 22 years at Penn State, is the ninth major-college coach to win 200 games.

Sooners overpower N

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) - Backup quarterback Charles Thompson rushed for three touchdowns and threw for another Saturday as top-ranked Oklahoma defeated North Texas State 69-14 in a college football season opener.

Thompson, a second-year freshman, scored on runs of 7, 4 and 1 yards and hit split end Carl Cabbiness on a 20-yard touchdown pass. Thompson relieved starter Jamelle Holieway midway through the second quarter after the Sooners had taken a 35-0 lead, then played all but two series after intermission.

Oklahoma's All-America tight end Keith Jackson caught three passes for 95 yards, including a 45-varder for a touchdown. He also had a 24-yard catch on a third-and-14 play that kept alive another scoring drive.

The Sooners had their way early and often against the NCAA Division I-AA Eagles. Oklahoma safety David Vickers intercepted a Bron Breal pass on the first play of the game and returned it 29 yards to the North Texas 5. Two plays later, fullback Lydell Carr scored the first of his two touchdowns.

On Oklahoma's next play from scrimmage, halfback Patrick Collins raced 67 yards down the left sideline for a touchdown, giving the Sooners 14 points in 45 seconds of possession time.

The defense also got into the scoring when linebacker Dante Jones stripped the ball from halfback Darrin Gollins and ran 58 yards for a touchdown in the first period.

North Texas scored its first touchdown with 45 seconds left in the first half when Collins went in from the 2-yard line.

thoughts concerning King Football for 1987

A FEW THOUGHTS ON football from dressing room bulletin boards.

President John F. Kennedy: "I sometimes wonder whether those of us who love football fully appreciate it's great lessons: that dedication, discipline, and teamwork are necessary to success. We take for granted that the players will spare no sacrifice to become alert, strong, and skilled. That they will give their best on the field. This is as it should be and we must never expect less. But I am extremely anxious that its implications not be lost on us.'

KING FOOTBALL Eleven warriors of the gridiron

Bidding for the spotlight, for power and fame. Ordeals now settled in King Football's court.

Thrill the vast millions, this peer of all sport. Blocking and tackling, the kick and the pass. Win for each gridder the heart Each man is a cog in this human machine, Striving to play a fair game, and clean. Autumn winds blow and we chill to the bone. But football has come for a brief three-months loan. Stadium rooters, both student and grad.

Smile when we win; when we lose become sad One adverse break and the cause may be lost; One little slip and the goal line is crossed:

One muffed punt and the game may be done One complete pass and the game may be won! All this makes football exciting to all

CANADIAN - The Canadian Wildcats proved Saturday night why they have a leg up on the competition in the District 2-2A

All one needs do is look at the final score: Canadian 28, White Deer 6.

The Wildcat offense controlled the ball for much of the game. Their attack was not just limited to one athlete, but the performance of senior running back Jeff Kirkland sure did help Kirkland carried the ball 21 times for 139 yards, scored one touchdown on the ground and another by air.

"We have to have his type of running for us to be a threat to anybody," Wildcats head coach Paul Wilson said. "He really ran well against them.

Kirkland's long run of the game was for 43 yards which also resulted in the 'Cats first touchdown with 6:57 left in the first Senior running back Jim David Cook also added to Canadian's offensive punch scoring on a 13vard jaunt 31/2 minutes later.

Also showing promise on the ground was senior Vic Perrin who rushed six times for 45 yards for a 7.5 yard average.

It was clear going into the second quarter who was in control of the football game as White Deer's defense showed signs of tiring after spending the majority of the game on the field.

The Wildcats shuttled quarterbacks on every series with Wayne Hand coming out the possible frontrunner.

Hand connected with Kirkland with 9:00 in the third quarter for a 43-yard score. On the evening, Hand completed four of five for 86

Canadian's final score came from sophomore Brandon Wheeler

Wheeler, recently called up from junior varsity, barreled in from the four-yard line just nine seconds into the final quarter.

The Bucks sole score of the game came in the second quarter. Quarterback Bart Thomas leaped three vertical feet over Wildcat defenders from 2-yards out to bring the score to 14-6.

"Bart did a super job," White Deer head coach Windy Williams said. "He just led our football

Thomas rushed eight times for 48 yards. Through the air, he completed three of four for 20 yards. Senior fullback Lance Cross, meanwhile, led all Buck ground gainers, rushing for 48 yards on five carries.

Although Canadian held White Deer to just 192 total yards, Wilson said the defense is still sus-

Shamrock shuts out McLean

By JIMMY PATTERSON Sports Writer

McLEAN — John Terry rushed for 191 yards and scored two touchdowns to help the Shamrock Irish to a 42-0 thrashing of the McLean Tigers Friday night.

When the final gun had sounded, the Irish had picked up 353 yard rushing and held the Tigers of McLean to only 56 rushing yards.

Through the air, Shamrock picked up 74 yards compared with 32 for McLean.

McLean suffered through much bad luck as they were able to manage only 88 yards in total

"I thought we played a real credible game til the end of the third quarter when the roof fell in," first year McLean head coach George Watson said Shamrock, on the other hand, could do little wrong and it could have been worse.

Terry, the Irish quarterback, had three touchdowns called back after penalties. "We were real sluggish the first half, Shamrock head coach Buck Buchanan said. "McLean smelled the blood for awhile but in the second half we were able to put it all together.

Shamrock struck for only one first-half touchdown - a six yard Ruben Garza-to-Cody Gregg pass with 6:12 remaining in the opening quarter. The Irish were silenced in the second but struck loud and hard in the third scoring 23 of their 42

Garza provided the first of the second-half scoring on a three yard quarterback keeper. Gregg and Randy Pusina then trapped McLean in the end zone for a two-point safety to run the score to 16-0. It was all offense the rest of the way

Terry added to the damage in the third, returning a Tiger punt 56 yards for the score.

Eddie Garza put the Irish ahead 29-0 with 2:00 left in the third quarter on a 17-yard run and Quintin Brown added another six with a three yard run late in the fourth.

With just three seconds left on the clock, Terry scored the second of his two touchdowns on a 30

"It was a real physical ball game," Buchanan said. "I don't take anything away from them. Their kids wanted to win real bad.

Shamrock's John Terry (24) steps on and over downed McLean defender Jim Anderson.

"I wasn't disappointed because I thought we played a good game," Watson said. "I have to pleased. We are strictly in a learning situation and we learned a lot Friday night.

Shamrock, 1-0, may find themselves in a type of learning situation this Friday night as they host

AMARILLO - The Wheeler Mustangs have a reputation to uphold.

Aside from their winning tradition, the Mustangs are ranked No. 5 in one poll and No.11 in yet another. And those are statewide rankings.

That's a tough bill to live up to. But Wheeler lived up to its preseason ranking Friday night by squashing Amarillo Highland Park 35-0.

Senior running back Grayson Benson led the Mustang ground attack, racing 215 yards on 21 carries for two touchdowns.

"Grayson had a real good football game." Wheeler head coach Preston Smith said. "He played well both offensively and defensively. Benson's scores were both on the ground - for 19 yards in the first quarter and 21 yards in the third. Wheeler's other three scores came from junior fullback Bubba Smith. Despite a nagging ankle injury, Smith scored on runs of two, five and two yards and gained a total of 60 yards on nine carries.

Despite the shellacking by Wheeler, Coach Smith expressed that there is definite room for improvement in his young squad.

'We probably didn't look as sharp as we have in other seasons at this point," Smith said. "We had a lot of penalties (15 for 135 yards) which kept us from putting the ball game away earlier. We're a young football team and we need to get better.

The Mustang defense held Highland Park to 133 yards on the ground and zero yards passing. Highland Park not only failed to penetrate the Wheeler 20-yard line, but they also did not make it across the midfield until late in the game when Wheeler substitutes had been inserted.

With that sort of effort, you'd think Smith would be pleased with the play of his defense. Not ex-

"Defensively, we weren't as dominating," Smith said. "But we did get past that first game, that Murphy's Law aspect where if anything can go wrong it will. We got over that despite our penalties and we got that important first win under our

One other bright aspect for Wheeler was the play of sophomore quarterback Shawn Bradstreet. Before this season, Bradstreet had never played a down of varsity football, but on this Friday night, showed that he is first string calibre. Bradstreet completed five of 16 passes for 63 yards. He also ran for a touchdown which was called back due to one of the Mustangs' many

Florida State went ahead 7-0 on McManus' 11yard pass to Ronnie Lewis, who caught the deflected pass in the corner of the end zone.

Williams scored from the two and Gray responded with a 3-yard run for a 13-13 tie before the Seminoles pulled away with a 17-point second Derek Schmidt became Florida State's career scoring leader with 279 points when he kicked a 44-yard field goal for 16-13 Seminoles lead.

Warriors topple Cotton Center

By JIMMY PATTERSON Sports Writer

MIAMI - Miami head coach Currie McWilliams is hoping that injuries are all in the past for the Warriors.

McWilliams totaled the damage from Friday night's Miami victory over Cotton Center:

"At one time (Friday) night we had an end playing quarterback, a linebacker playing fullback, a fullback playing tailback and a freshman playing end.

"It looked like a Chinese fire drill the way we were shuttling them in and out of there," he added.

The three major injuries did not hurt the Warriors on the scoreboard, though, as they baisted Cotton Center

The flurry of injuries were all to Warrior ankles and hampered tailback Shane Bridwell, fullback Steven Anderson and quarterback Rhett Daugherty.

Bridwell and Daugherty were affected late in the first quarter and both returned in the fourth for more action.

Although injured, Bridwell lived up to his preseason billing as Miami's main offensive weapon.

Bridwell scored five touchdowns - three by land, one by air and one by kickoff return.

When the totals were in, Bridwell had rushed for 113 yards on 13 attempts with his biggest gainer at 48 yards. The 6-1 senior also pulled in two passes for 21 yards.

The Warriors struck early when Bridwell sprinted 48 yards to put Miami up 6-0 with just 59 seconds gone in the first quarter.

On the ensuing kickoff, Chad Breeding delivered a fierce hit to Cotton Center's Les Atchley. Atchley fumbled and Miami recovered on their own eight yard line and drove it in for another score.

Bridwell again — this time on the run from eight yards out. Shane Fields nailed the point after for a 14-0 lead.

Bridwell added another six with just 10 seconds remain ing in the first and following the points after, Miami held a commanding 22-0 lead.

Miami's Shane Bridwell (48) gives the high-five to teammate Chad Breeding (20) after Bridwell scored the Warriors' second first-quarter touchdown.

The two teams then waged a see-saw battle as four touchdowns were scored in just over 90 seconds in the third quarter.

Cotton Center, who suited up only nine players for the game, drew to within 22-13 in the third on a one-yard run

With 7:32 left in the third quarter, Bridwell caught a hett Daugherty pass from 13 yards out which put the Warriors on top 29-0, a lead they would never lose

Miami then kicked off to Cotton Center and Atchley proceeded to run 70 yards for the score.

Same song second verse: Cotton Center kicked off and Bridwell ran it back for a 70yard score.

The two teams traded touchdowns again in the fourth, including a two yard run by Miami's Brock

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) - Auburn quarterback Jeff Burger passed for 269 yards and two touchdowns Saturday as the No. 5 Tigers romped past unranked Texas 31-3 in a college football season opener.

The victory by the Tigers of the Southeastern Conference spoiled the debut of Texas Coach David McWilliams, who was hired by the Southwest Conference school after last year's 5-6 record, the Longhorn's first losing season in 30 years.

Auburn, its newly expanded stadium holding an estimated 80,000 fans, relied on Burger's arm as the fifth-year senior completed touchdown passes of 22 yards to Vincent Harris and 49 yards to Alexander Wright and made key completions that set up all the other points.

The Texas offense, centered on the passing of quarterback Bret Stafford and the electrifying runs of Eric Metcalf, was stifled by an aggressive Auburn defense near the Tiger end zone.

Auburn, capitalizing on an interception by Alvin Briggs and a fumble recovery by Robert Goff, scored the first two times it had the ball. Reggie Ware got the first touchdown on a 1-yard run and Harris the second on a pass from Texas closed the gap to 14-3 on Wayne Clements' 35-yard field goal, but Auburn pulled away in the second half.

CLARENDON - The name of a motel along U.S. 287 here summed up what coaches didn't say about Groom's 14-0 break over Clarendon — It'll Do

The two teams spent the game showing off their defense, keeping the game slow and the scores Groom Coach Terry Coffee said Clarendon's defense confused his Tigers by pulling off a variety of plays. 'They did some things we didn't see in any of in the scrimmages," Coffee said. "We had too many miscues.

But Tiger fullback Richard Koetting soon managed to figure it out as he gained 47 of his 82 rushing yards in the first quarter.

After bringing the Tiger offense to the one-yard line at 1:45 remaining in the first quarter, Koetting popped across the line, giving Groom its first six points. Vincent Meaker kicked the score to 7-0 at the end of the first quarter.

The two teams held each other at bay for the next two scoreless quarters.

Koetting broke through again in the fourth quarter, boring holes in the Broncho defense and quarter yards.

The Tigers kept edging toward their goal line, but they couldn't quite do anything about it until the final minute of play. At 50 seconds left, five yards from the goal line, quarterback Bruce Thornton tossed the football four vards to wingback Michael Rose. who dived for six more points.

Meaker kicked the final point which granted Groom a 14 point shutout for its season opener.

Coffee said the firm defense led to the Tiger turnaround at the end of the third quarter.

'We blocked punts and got them in the hole," he said.

"On the whole, our defense was Tony Homer and end Travis Homer as top defenders.

The Tiger defense held the Broncho rushing game to 39 yards while the Groom offense tallied 141 total rushing yards. But, with only four passing yards — all in the fourth quarter Groom was out thrown by Clarendon which gained 91. Still, said new Clarendon head coach Hulon Kirkland, the Bron-

Texas Wrap-up

Upsets abound in first weekend

By CHARLES RICHARDS Associated Press Writer

Houston Stratford had only 53 total yards to 307 for Fort Bend Willowridge, the No. 2-ranked team in Class 5A, but two big defensive plays enabled Stratford to pull off one of the biggest upsets of the first weekend of the 1987 Texas high school football season.

Trailing 6-0, Stratford's Doug Jamison recovered a fumbled punt attempt in the end zone with less than six minutes left in Friday night's game. That gave Stratford a 7-6 edge, and linebacker Ken Walton returned an interception nine yards to the Willowridge 41 to set up Doug Albright's 22-yard touchdown run with 3:30 remaining for the 14-6 final score.

The No. 2 teams in Classes 4A and 3A also were upset victims Friday night. Gregory-Portland, of 4A, was beaten 10-6 by Corpus Christi Carroll, and Pittsburg, of 3A, lost to Mount Pleasant 17-13.

Aldine MacArthur, atop the 5A rankings, shut out Lamar Consolidated 24-0; Jasper, No. 1 in 4A, beat Lufkin 13-7; Cuero, the kingpin in 3A, thumped Rice Consolidated 65-0; Refugio, the 2A top team, blanked Sinton 20-0; and Bremond, ranked No. 1 in 1A, defeated China Spring 26-20.

There was little joy in New Caney on Friday night. The Eagles lost on the road to Katy Mayde Creek, 40-6, running their streak of consecutive losses to 41 games, tying Beeville for the Class 5A record. New Caney has lost 49 of its last 50 games. The state record is held by Kountze, a Class 3A team, which once lost 53 straight games.

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) - Israeli warplanes dive-bombed Palestinian guerrilla bases in south Lebanon on Saturday, killing 41 people and wounding 60 in the deadliest of 22 Israeli air raids in Lebanon this year.

The raids, on the Jewish Sabbath, were unprecedented.

Most of the casualties were Palestinian guerrillas who fell when the jets launched a second raid while the fighting men were evacuating victims of the first attack, a police spokesman said.

The bases were devastated. Hospitals appealed for urgent blood donations to cope with the influx of casualties.

Israel radio said the jets struck at bases serving as headquarters and departure points for attacks against Israeli targets and caught the guerrillas by surprise.

The air strikes came one day after Israel announced its forces captured an Arab guerrilla trained by Syria for a suicide mission against Israeli troops in southern Lebanon.

At least four Israeli jet fighters carried out three dive-bombing sorties in 10 minutes against five Palestinian guerrilla bases on the eastern and southern edges of Sidon, said the police spokesman.

He spoke on condition of anonymity in keeping with regulations. The port city of Sidon, south Lebanon's provincial capital, is 25 miles south of Beirut.

Three of the targeted bases were manned by guerrillas from Fatah, the mainstream faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization headed by PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat, said a police spokesman.

One base belonged to George Habash's Marxist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, and the other was an office for Palestinian terrorist Abu Nidal's Fatah-Revolutionary Council group, said the spokesman.

Under police regulations, the spokesman could not be further identified.

Fatah's two coastal bases in banana groves south of Sidon and a Fatah base on the western edge of the adjacent Ein el-Hilweh refugee camp took the brunt of the air attacks, he said.

He reported that three people were killed and 10 wounded at the Popular Front and Fatah-Revolutionary Council bases at Ein el-Hilweh, which has a population of 60,000 refugees.

The spokesman said most of the casualties came when the jets launched a second divebombing attack on Fatah's two coastal bases.

seeks gulf cease-fire

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) -U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar will travel to Iran and Iraq to seek a cease-fire in the Persian Gulf war, where the stakes were raised by the first reported firing of the Silkworm missile.

Iraq, meanwhile, said its warplanes rocketed a large vessel off the Iranian coast in a predawn raid Saturday, the 21st ship reportedly hit in eight straight day of attacks since the so-called tanker war resumed after a 45day lull

The anti-ship Silkworm missile, apparently fired by Iran, exploded Friday in Kuwaiti waters at the north end of the gulf, two miles from tankers that were loading oil for a U.S.-escorted voyage south through the waterway

The incident represented the first known use of the Chinesebuilt Silkworm, which has a 50mile range, in the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war. The Faw Peninsula. which Iran captured from Iraq in February 1986, is within that

Unlike the machine guns, small cannon and rockets that have long been fired at tankers in the gulf, missiles such as the Silkworm are capable of seriously damaging and even sinking the largest tankers in the waterway.

Asked about the incident, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said: "We continue to be concerned about the Silkworms, particularly as they threaten United States naval escorts and U.S.-flagged vessels in the gulf." His comment came in Santa Barbara, Calif., where the president is vacationing.

Meanwhile, a third American warship joined a convoy of three Kuwaiti tankers steaming through the gulf on Friday as a precaution, and the group was moving southward without incident, U.S. officials said in Washington.

At the United Nations in New York. Perez de Cuellar said Friday that Iran agreed to receive him next week on a mediation mission to Iran and Iraq.

He said the Security Council, which authorized his trip, would ask that a truce be observed during his visit.

The council passed a cease-fire resolution unanimously July 20. Iraq has accepted it, but Iran has given no definitive answer.

The sensation of Chautauqua.

It may seem impossible to cram so many experiences in an area as small as Pampa's Central Park. But the Pampa Fine Arts Association is going to do it again - for the sixth year in a row - at their annual Labor Day Chautauqua celebra-

Pampa's annual end-of-summer wingding is a throwback to the original Chautauqua inspirational tent shows of the early 20th century. Named for a series of annual festivals held at Lake Chautauqua, N.Y., these shows drew nearly 40 million Americans in 10,000 towns every summer before World War I put an end to such romanticism.

In what Teddy Roosevelt called "the most American thing about America," Chautauquas were intended to educate the middle class masses with lecturers and opera divas. But with brass bands, magicians, Hawaiian crooners and pretty girls galore, the masses couldn't help but have fun while they were learning.

Pampa's Chautauqua follows that tradition and

Q: My son likes to take leftovers and prepared foods back to college with him after a weekend at home. It's a three-hour drive. How can he transport these cooked foods safely?

A: Traveling with food takes careful planning. Otherwise, on a three-hour drive, food poisoning bacteria can multiply in the food.

Since it would be difficult to keep foods hot enough to be safe for that period, the best plan is to completely cool cooked foods in the refrigerator before he leaves. Divide quantities into smaller, shallow containers for fast cooling. Then pack a cooler with an ice source and the thoroughly cold foods.

Freezing foods prior to travel is also an option. Keep the cooler in the passenger area of the car in warm weather. When your son arrives, caution him to quickly store his "care packages" in the refrigerator.

Q: There's a small refrigerator in my office. Lots of people bring in lunches so it gets crowded. It usually feels warm in there. How can I tell if the refrigerator is keeping my ham sandwiches cold enough to stay safe? A: The colder food is kept, the

Q: I'm a traveling salesperson and often don't have time to stop for lunch, so I take my "brown bag" in the car. Last week I got very sick with a stomach flu after eating my roast beef sandwich. Could this have been food

A: Quite possibly. The symptoms of foodborne illness are often mild to severe nausea. vomiting, diarrhea, headaches and body aches.

Bacteria introduced onto meat while you were preparing your lunch could have grown to dangerous levels while the sandwich was unrefrigerated. Since food poisoning bacteria grow well at room temperatures, meat and poultry products shouldn't stay at room temperature or above for a car, even on a cool day, get quite high.

The next time you take meat, poultry or egg sandwiches with you, put them in a cooler or insulated bag. Pack the cooler with an ice source - frozen juice or a can also keep a sandwich cold.

A: Just follow these guidelines for a safe and tasty lunch for your on-the-go youngster:

Keep everything clean. Wash your hands, utensils and counter tops before fixing the lunch.

It's important that meat and poultry products stay cold to avoid bacterial growth. Packaged lunch meat would be safe if frozen ahead of time and packed with something cold. To provide a disposable beverage, try freezing the no-refrigeration-needed juice that comes in a small carton. It will act as a block of ice to keep sandwich cold.

A firm, coarse-textured bread like whole wheat, rye or pumpernickel stands up well to freezing and rough handling. Also, pita is fun and a sturdy filling container.

Avoid meat- or egg-based salads, sandwich spreads and home-cooked meats.

Canned meats in small indi vidual containers are a good choice, as are individually wrapped shelf-stable cheeses.

■ The old standby, peanut butter and jelly, is a safe choice, but tends to get squashed.

4-H VOLUNTEERS The new 4-H year is about to start, and the 4-H program offers unlimited opportunities for volunteers to help young people learn and develop.

4-H is the youth development program of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. It focuses on needs, interests and concerns of boys and girls in third grade to 19 years of age.

Its aim is to help young people develop through practical learning experiences such as preparing a nutritious meal, building bookshelves or growing a vegetable garden.

Since young people do not develop their skills and attitudes overnight, they need and seek guidance from 4-H volunteers who can help them probe the "why" as well as show them "how to do it."

Helping youth develop, however, requires different kinds of leadership. For those who prefer to work primarily with youth, 4-H offers leadership roles related to the organization, project or activity aspects of a 4-H group. While the organization leader guides the overall operation of a 4-H group, project and activity leaders help boys and girls learn by involving them in a specific project, such as clothing, auto repair and bicycle safety, and related activities such as safety clinics, exhibits and local tours. These leaders may in turn be assisted by junior and teen leaders who work closely with an adult or teen advisor.

Volunteers who prefer to work primarily with adults also have a wide range of choices. A 4-H project or activity chairman helps other leaders with a specific project or activity.

A 4-H recruiter seeks out youth and adults interested in becoming 4-H members or leaders, then allows the 4-H organizer to help the new group get started.

Volunteers are also assisted by the 4-H trainer, who helps train other leaders in the area, and by the 4-H resource person, who secures special materials or people from the community.

If you are interested in young people, want to share your talents and hobbies, and enjoy meeting other adults with your same interests, consider being a 4-H volunteer.

BRIDAL BOUQUETS Sherry

Sometimes the terms used in discussing wedding gowns can be baffling. There is special terminology for the cut of a sleeve, the silhouette of the dress, the neckline. Here is a basic guide to the language of fabric: FABRICATIONS

Taffeta is a smooth, glossy fabric with plenty of body, more often found in full-skirted styles than in clinging ones. Moire is a silk täffeta that, when seen in the light, has subtly shimmering effect, like deep concentric scallops throughout the fabric.

Brocade is a heavy fabric with a woven and raised design in the same color.

Very lightweight fabrics, usually used for overlays, include chiffon, sheer and woven from silk or rayon (can be soft or stiff); organza, sheer and crisp; and tulle, a finely-meshed net that can be made from a variety of fibers.

Popular lace fabrica include Alencon, made of heavy thread on net; Chantilly, usually floral in design on a lace background, using fine thread; Schiffli, a delicate floral embroidery usually machinemade. Eyelet is not technically a lace but may have similar uses for trim or overakirts; it is an open pattern made usually in cotton.

The best ways to kill trees

By JOE VanZANDT County Extension Agent HOW TO KILL LANDSCAPE TREES

Past experiences and observations have indicated that years of excellent tree growth can be lost in a single season through neglect. Invariably we get calls too late and can only say, "Yes, it is dead," or it is too late to save the tree.

The following topics are written facetiously. They do illustrate many causes of common tree problems. Unfortunately, humans contribute to the majority of these trees.

IGNORE YOUR TREES

Now that they are obviously growing well, it is time to kick back and forget about them. Concentrate on other high priority problems

In the meantime, insects and diseases may run rampant and seriously damage the trees. Healthy tree growth can become an abundant feeding ground for insects. Seen any caterpillars or bagworms lately? The cool, damp weather is conducive to a number of plant diseases also.

Avoid this problem by inspecting tree trunks, shoots and leaves at least once a week. If you are unfamiliar with a problem, contact someone knowledgeable that can recommend a control. Initiate controls before the damage becomes irreparable.

USE A NYLON STRING TRIMMER

When the grass gets around the trunk of your tree, trim it back neatly with your power string trimmer. Be sure to get right up next to the trunk and remove as much tree bark as possible in the process. This will effectively cut the tree's "blood vessels" that transport food from the leaves to the roots.

The roots starve for a few days or weeks after each trimming, depending on how good a job was done with the string trimmer. The wounded bark and cambium area around the base of the tree also serves as an ideal entry port for crown gall and other nasties.

Or if you prefer, you can keep trees healthy by maintaining a reasonable space between the trimmer line and the trunk. Hand trim any remaining grass blades next to the tree trunk.

Be sure that anyone trimming around your trees realizes the potential damage that can be done by knocking the bark off the trunk. Reputable, well-trained grounds maintenance firms will not allow their crews to damage trees with string trimmers. SUBSCRIBE TO THE

DOUBLE-UP FERTILIZER PHILOSOPHY

If guidelines indicate a fertilizer rate of 10 pounds per tree, then apply 20 to 30 pounds because it will surely do two to three times as much good.

For Horticulture

Be sure and apply the double to triple rate right up next to the trunk so that fertilizer burn is maximized on large-diameter conductive roots. Repeat this fertilizer dosage often

Try to time applications with marginal leaf burns and terminal shoot die-back. Compare fertilizer bills and tonnages with your neighbor for a feeling of righteous achievement.

Or you can encourage a good growth and a healthy green leaf color with adequate amounts of fertilizer. Each inch of tree trunk diameter needs 1.5 pounds of 21-0-0 (ammonium sulfate) each growing season.

A 10-inch diameter tree will benefit from 15 pounds of 21-0-0 scattered at the dripline each year. The total of 15 pounds can be split into more than one application. Apply 5 pounds around April 1, 5 pounds in mid-May and 5 pounds in late June. QUIT WATERING

Surely the trees have had enough water for this summer. The roots are certain to have grown to "deep water" so you can forgo additional irrigations this growing season.

Actually, your landscape trees will need good, thorough watering at some point this growing season. Roots don't grow to water, they grow with water.

Always concentrate tree irrigations at the dripline, not the trunk of the tree. Rainfalls of .5 inch or more provide significant amounts of water to landscape shade trees. Lesser amounts of rainfall are really not very beneficial unless they are received at one- to two-day intervals.

Begin irrigating your trees withing 10 days of the last significant rainfall. Use slow soaking waterings of several hours during dry periods.

LEAVE DEAD WOOD IN YOUR TREES

We all know that any type of summer pruning will cause a tree to "bleed to death.

For this reason, it is best to let visibly dead limbs from the great freeze stay in the tree until this winter. Then this winter, when it is most difficult to determine healthy limbs from dead limbs, we can severely top the tree and add insult to injury.

The truth is that corrective summer pruning, especially dead limb removal, is essential to tree health. Dead limbs encourage borer attacks. Borers can be difficult to eradicate and can cause severe injury to trees. Removing dead wood is a good borer preventive

Dead limbs should be cut back to healthy tissue. If at all possible, remove limbs at their junction with other limbs.

This thinning out approach to pruning reduces the number of limb stubs left in the tree and promotes an attractively shaped, healthy shade tree.

ATTACK WEEDS WITH INDUSTRIAL-STRENGTH WEED KILLERS

All this rain has produced the best crop of weeds in many years. After weeds have grown to waist height, find the strongest herbicide possible to eliminate weeds around trees and in the alley.

Seek out an oilfield friend that has access to soil-active herbicides used to keep oil patch pads free of weeds. If you don't know someone in the petroleum industry, be sure and purchase any herbicide containing large amounts of bromacil, prometon, hexazinone, dicamba or picloram.

Don't calculate herbicide rates based on square footage treated. Dump at least four good glugs in the 3-gallon pump-up sprayer and proceed to decimate those weeds. Give the alley a double dose to keep it weed free all summer

It is sad but true that each year thousands of Texas trees are critically damaged from indiscriminate herbicide use. There are literally hundreds of weed killers on the market today. Most have specific labelled usages for good reasons.

Using herbicides in circumstances other than those listed on the product label is a violation of federal law and an open invitation to killing your trees and quite possibly your neighbor's trees across the fence or alley.

Backyard fences and alleys are no deterrent to tree root growth. The soil-active weed killer you apply can be picked up by trees 150 feet away, depending upon the size of the tree and its root spread. Never use the above herbicides around desirable trees.

GOOD TIME TO CUT FIREWOOD

Now is a good time to cut firewood for next winter. Firewood produces more heat and less creosote if it has "aged" or "seasoned" for six months prior to burning.

Fresh cut, or green, wood may weigh two to three tons per cord. The heat value of that green wood is reduced by its moisture content. The amount of water in the wood varies by species. Ash typically contains about half as much water; hickory, two-thirds; and oak, about three-fourths.

Burned green, this wood cannot produce its potential heat because some of the heat of combustion must be used to eliminate the water. Aging firewood allows this moisture to gradually escape before burning, using the sun's energy to eliminate the water.

It takes as much as a year for split and stacked firewood to reach a stable "air-dry" condition and, although the wood still retains about one-fifth its weight in water, its heat value is considered to have reached its practical maximum.

Firewood is generally marketed by the cord (a stack 4 feet by 4 feet by 8 feet) and usually hauled by the pickup load (onefourth to one-half cord). Since the wood's heat value depends on weight, buyers should prefer the heavier species such as oak, hickory and ash.

Other characteristics which might be considered important for firewood include cost, aroma, smoke, ease of ignition, tendency to spark, burning time or intensity, and ease of splitting.

Chainsaw safety should be top priority. A chainsaw is the most dangerous piece of equipment most people ever handle. Use all available safety equipment, maintain the saw properly, and follow safe operating procedures.

It doesn't take much firewood cutting to figure out that a cord requires many more small trees than large ones. Two dozen 6-inch diameter trees will cut a cord. while only a dozen 8-inch ones will do. Three 13-inch trees could provide the same amount of wood, or just two of 16-inch diameter.

Plan to cut or buy your firewood early, so that it will be ready to burn once the winter season sets in.

Pampans start school year, wrap up summer activities

September signifies the beginning of a new month, a new school year and a long list of activities. The list of activities for the past week or so reads like this.

First of all, we must rearrange a few words of an item in last week's column. Members of administration of Coronado Hospital gave a FREE car wash to employees who had paid their pledges of last fall - or season to United Way. In spite of oodles of fun mingled with hard work, cars looked professionally cleaned.

Let me tell you about one of Pampa High School's new teachers. Cathy Carter, who is the daughter of Linda Haynes of Coronado Hospital administration and Sam. Cathy, who did her practice teaching in English and history last year in Pampa High School, was chosen outstanding student teacher last spring by West Texas State University's Education Program. Welcome aboard, Cathy! Her husband is with the DPS.

Employees of Cabot Carbon Plant enjoyed Family Night at the Optihist Club recently. At the 50s dance, best male costume went to Mike Soukup, best female to LaWanna Kirby. First place jitterbuggers were Brenda and Jim Humphrey, followed by Rochelle and Calvin Lacy.

Norma and Frank Slagle attended the "Hotter Than Hell Hundred Bike-a-thon" in Wichita Falls last weekend as innocent spectators who wished mightily for their own bikes. Their daughter, Medina Baggerman, rode the 100-K or 64 miles. It was WF's sixth annual ride, with over 12,000 bicycles involved, many with two and three riders per. Imagine the sound of more than 12,000 bicycles whirring away!

About 60 members of Beta Sigma Phi attended the kickoff luncheon last Saturday at the Pampa Club. City Council President Donna Caldwell presided. Entertainment was a style show, emceed by Rochelle Lacy. Classy, beautiful models were Vickie Hayes, Cheryl Harris, Lisa Crossman, Betty Gann, Charlotte Willett, Sue Garner, Theresa Conner and Toni Howard. BSP members balance social activities with lots of community ser-

And a warm Pampa "Welcome!!" to Pam Barton, wife of Bruce, Chamber of Commerce head. Daughters Courtney, 2, and Stacy, who will enter the second grade, swelled the family count to four. Pam, an RN, took some college courses at Georgetown, which explains the delay of her arrival in Pampa.

Doris Friend has lots to share about her summer trip to Germany to visit her daughter and son-in-law. Ask her for pictures and interesting stories.

Faraway travels took Norma and Bill McBee on a Caribbean Cruise ... Katy and Joe Cree spent two weeks touring Italy and one week in London ... Mike and Bob Keagy did their own thing on a self-guided tour of Ireland ... Jim Moyer and his daughter went all by themselves to Orlando to see Disneyland in time for school.

Just back from a wonderful week in Acapulco, Jeane Roper, Paula Brock, Joyce and Kristy Rasco, Gwen Weatherly, Nancy Harvill and Peggy Baker are still talking about what a great trip they had. Peggy continued on to Mexico City and Cuernavaca for a week of study at the Center for Bilingual Multicultural Studies, and a week of traveling in Mexico.

The Kellerville Reunion on Sunday, Aug. 30, was great fun for all 62 Texans who came to the Lefors Civic Center for lunch and visitation. All the laughing, hellos and hugging reminded everyone of the great times in an oil boom town that is now a ghost town. Pampa, Lefors, Skellytown and McLean were among the area towns represented at the reunion. From McLean were Forrest and Clara Hupp, Imogene (Peabody) Longino, Bonnie Bidwell, Angela Martin, Eva Peabody, Mr. and Mrs. Harris D'Spain, Justin and Pam (Burnett) Phillips, Truman and Levie Smith, Lara (Burnett) Stump, and Stephanie Neeley. Skellytown resident Mrs. Sadie Lane attended. From Pampa were Marie Boyd, Annie Brown, Cayson Evans, Teddie Evans, Clara Sailor, Pat Grooms, Jon Langley, Dan Carter, Blanche Cox. Lewis and Dorothy (Cox) Gallimore. Lefors residents attending were Mrs. Gertrude Wall, Ray and Crestella Gossett, Ted and Gladys Kendall, Walter and Joeldine Elliott. The next day Floyd Sacket appeared with 300 lapel buttons that read, "I care! Please don' use drugs!" Not only did he make the first 300; in a couple of days he had made an additional 300 with even more promised for distribu tion among students. A round of applause for Floyd!

Jackson's 'Bad' offers good follow-up to 'Thriller'

By JIMMY PATTERSON Staff Writer

It was a task of monumental proportions for Michael Jackson

... How do you follow up the phenomenal success of Thriller? Considering that the 1985 album is the single biggest seller in the history of recorded music.

Jackson had a Herculean task at hand.

But don't for a moment think that he hasn't followed up very

With the help of Quincy Jones' slick production work, Jackson has himself another sure No. 1 with Bad

While sticking to his perfect blend of funk and rock on Bad, Jackson has avoided the trap that many pop stars fall into today: He has not duplicated any rhythms or basic melodies found on Thriller.

Although Bad does contain its share of discardable tunes, there are several songs on the album that have definite potential for a lot of pop radio airplay.

And the album is a breakthrough for Jackson in another regard in that he authors or coauthors eight of the disc's 10 songs. On Thriller, he penned only four tunes; Off the Wall, his first, contained only three Jackson originals.

Ironically, the best song on the album is not written by Jackson. 'Man in the Mirror' (cowritten by Siedah Garrett and takes on a distinctly different texture and at times it is hard to believe that it is actually him singing

In "Man in the Mirror," Jackson takes time to look at the misfortunes while convincing himself he needs to change his own ways in order to better the world: "I've been a victim of a selfish kind of love,/It's time that I realize/That there are some with no home, not a nickel to loan/Could it really be me, pretending that they're not alone.

The song's chorus, "I'm starting with the man in the mirror/ I'm asking him to change his ways," has that certain pop music hook that will make it a certain No. 1 - just one of many this record may beget.

'Dirty Diana' represents a major departure for Jackson. Complete with canned arena crowd applause, "Dirty Diana" tells the story of a rock groupie who will do literally anything to become a star and then will turn around and stab you in the back.

Both lyrically and melodically, 'Dirty Diana' makes "Billie Jean" look like Little Bo Peep.

What will no doubt prove to be the second single off the album is the title track

The syncopated rhythm found on "Bad" makes it the album's best toe-tapper and probably the biggest dance hall hit.

It is unusual in today's music video world, though, that this song can be best appreciated on vinyl rather than video.

The 16-minute clip was premiered on CBS last Monday and in it Jackson plays a would-be gang member. A sort of tough guy. Michael Jackson a tough guy? Not a chance. The video is a cheap rip off of "Beat It," complete with street fighters, and should be avoided if at all possible

'The Way You Make Me Feel' is another foot stomping effort thanks to a strong, steady bass line throughout. If written a few years ago, this tune could have very easily be found on the Flashdance soundtrack.

"Liberian Girl" has a definite Brazilian feel to it. A moderate tempo jewel, the song features above average vocal harmonies. Side One is rounded out by two throwaways: "Speed Demon" and "Just Good Friends." Both tunes have just one redeeming value each: top notch sax gock on "Speed Demon" and good vocals by Stevie Wonder on

"Good Friends."

The album's second side gets off to a slow, uneventful start with "Another Part of Me," a boring tale of love aliens taking over the planet.

"We're sendin' out/A major love/And this is our/Message to you." Pretty boring stuff.

Closing out Side Two is a tune that qualifies as mere filler — nothing more. "Smooth Criminal" is mundane, repetitive and quite unnecessary

Sandwiched in between the two discards are "Dirty Diana." "Man in the Mirror" and the first release off the album, "I Just Can't Stop Loving You.

The album version of "Loving You" includes a rather sappy spoken intro. As unneeded as this brief monologue is, there are two lines that appropriately sum up Jackson's personal struggle with his superstardom:

"A lot of people misunderstand me/That's because they don't know me at all."

Overall, Bad is a successful followup to Thriller. Even though Jackson has been out of the limelight for a couple of years, Bad has to put yet another rather large feather in Jackson's glove.

Dizzy Gillespie to be feted with 70th birthday concert

Dizzy Gillespie turns 70 on Oct. 21 but he says he feels "at least 21" when he's onstage playing his trumpet. He proved that during the recent taping of a five-hour show for PBS-TV, a concert he described as the second-most thrilling of his life.

By MARY CAMPBELL AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a premature 70th birthday party for John Birks "Dizzy" Gillespie, the patriarch of America's great jazz trumpeters, the puffycheeked maestro who gave birth to be-bop - with the help of Charlie Parker

It turned into a weekend happening at the Wolf Trap Farm Park in Virginia, a concert Gillespie described as his most thrilling since the time he played on a "holy mountain" in Haifa during a Baha'i pilgrimage.

Maryland Public Television taped the five-hour, Saturday night concert for showing on PBS next February during Black History Month.

Gillespie, who won't officially celebrate the 70th anniversary of his birth in Cheraw, S.C., until Oct. 21. introduced himself at the concert: "Ladies and gentlemen, it is not often for a musician in my place to be so well preserved.'

When he's blowing his horn, he said, he feels like he's "at least

The talk was about Dizzy. Singer Jon Hendricks, natty in a yellow suit, allows that Gillespie should be president. Trumpeter Jimmy Owens says Dizzy should be given a chair at a great university.

'Ladies and gentlemen, it is not often for a musician in my place to be so well preserved.

David Amram, a classical the French horn who went to Cuba in 1977 with Dizzy, Stan Getz and "Fatha" Hines, says, 'To play in Dizzy's band is a blow for mental health. He can give you a look and you'll know what to do and you'll play your best. He just exudes musical feeling.'

Brazilian Flora Purim, singer in her husband Airto Moreira's group, says, "I met Dizzy the day I got off the boat in 1967. I was so eager to hear jazz. I went to Harlem. Nothing was happening. I found out Dizzy and Carmen McRae were at the Village Gate.

I rushed there. Dizzy played his set with James Moody, so beautiful

"Then Carmen (McRae) came out. She was sitting on a stool. She sang 'Alfie.' She was really into it. Her eyes were shut. Dizzy came out with his horn and sat on her lap — in the middle of a ballad. She laughed so much.

Gillespie's protege, trumpeter Jon Faddis, who wears plus fours, met Dizzy when he was 15 at a jazz workshop in San Francisco, then went to hear his combo. Faddis recalls, "During the bass solo of 'A Night in Tunisia' he walked off the bandstand. He signaled me and I went up and sat in with the group and I've been sitting in with him ever since. That was 18 years ago.'

Rehearsal for the concert continued past midnight Friday. Gillespie was back at Wolf Trap early Saturday, where he rehearsed on the outdoor stage. Musicians came and went for 11 sets, but Gillespie kept playing, singing to indicate what he wanted to hear, stamping his foot to set tempo, ignoring backstage hammering and cicadas.

The concert, mostly of Gillespie's compositions, lasted five hours. It ended with a big band 'Happy Birthday'' and another cake Gillespie posed for pictures, told a joke, autographed a Far Side cartoon titled "Dizzy Gillespie's 70th Birthday Party.

"I would have had a good time tonight even if I had not played,'

Hundreds of Vatican and U.S. Secret Service agents will protect the pope during his nine-city U.S. tour and are keeping mum about their security

In San Antonio, federal agents must contend with more than 500,000 people at a 144-acre Mass site and with hundreds of thousands more worshippers along several parade routes.

Agents have been visiting the sites for months and some businessmen along the parade routes are seeking their permission to be in their stores when the pope passes in his bullet-proof popemo-

Heuck said 800 policeman, including 500 within the Mass site, will be on duty, along with 400 sheriff's deputies and 800 National Guard troops. Fifteen sheriff's deputies on horseback will patrol the Mass site.

Also, 150 Texas Department of Public Safety troops will be stationed at the Mass site and at major roads leading to San Antonio. More than 125 deputy constables will work in the downtown area.

"I have never seen anything this big before," Armstrong said. "This is one Heuck, however, said the various agencies are accustomed to working together for previous dignitary visits.

'This is nothing relatively new. It's just huge, plus you've got the pope visiting six totally different sites and you can equivocate that with the president of the United States coming here six times." Heuck said.

EL PASO (AP) — A 14-year-old boy accidentally sparked last month's chemical blaze that hospitalized 29 people and did $100,000 in damage, fire investigators say.

The boy, whose name was not released, "spilled the liquid accidentally, and it was very reactive with another product on the shelf, which started a chemical fire," investigator Richard

Mild cool front helps state's agriculture COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — A mild cool front fluttered through the state this past week and helped Texas agriculture retrieve some of the verdancy it lost after almost a month of searing, soil-sapping hot weather. The brief and quiet rains played favorites, however, and avoided those areas that needed relief the most.

Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, said central and upper coastal regions remain relatively dry, and forest fire danger is increasing in deep East

He said the rains have improved ranges and helped cattle eep their good condition in the northwestern sections. Cotton continues to progress and wheat planting has started.

The cooler, wet weather especially benefitted the southwestern region, although there was some cotton lint damage. Wet lint problems also were noted in such lower Brazos bottom counties as Robertson, Brazos and Grimes, Carpenter said.

Hot, dry weather continued to work on southeastern counties, where cattle showed some decline in condition on badly stressed pastures. The situation is pushing more animals to market.

Generally, the state's major cash crops - cotton, sorghum, corn, rice and soybeans — are doing well, according to the extension official. Sorghum harvesting is mostly done in the southern half, is well along in the middle tier, and the crop is heading and turning color in the northern counties. Average to high yields are reported, Carpenter

He noted that insect damage is increasing in some of these crops, cotton in particular. The overall pecan crop, predicted to be mediocre this season, also is getting more than its share of bugs. The Extension Service director said farmers and ranchers have baled a bountiful supply of hay for winter feeding, a situation made possible by generous spring and early summer rains. The following conditions were reported by district extension directors:

PANHANDLE: Rain and much cooler temperatures improved ranges and cattle condition. Wheat planting has begun, cotton continues to fruit well and sorghum is heading and coloring.

Some corn ensiling is underway. Sugar beets are doing well, but the rains have stopped the carrot and potato harvest in Deaf

SOUTH PLAINS: Soybeans and peanuts are growing fast, and melon harvesting continues. Corn is mostly mature and ready for harvest. Cool weather has slowed cotton boll opening, and aphid and bollworm activity is noted. About 20 percent of sorghum is turning color, and a very small percentage is mature. Wheat planting has started.

ROLLING PLAINS: A healthy livestock market is prompting some producers to wean calf crops earlier than usual to take advantage of high prices. Light weight stockers continue to arrive daily in Cottle County. Cotton continues to make fine progress in most areas. Harvesting is almost finished on early sorghum. Alfalfa demand remains strong in Wilbarger County. Pecan producers are spraying

NORTH CENTRAL: Livestock are holding up well on pastures that could use rain. Pecans are doing nicely, but there are problems with webworms and caterpillars. Corn, cotton and sorghum are in fair to good condition. Corn is almost all harvested, cotton bolls are opening and sorghum is 98 to 100 percent headed. Oat seedbed preparation has started.

NORTHEAST: Continued dry weather is hindering pastures and hay harvesting, although third hay cuttings have been reported. Many grass fires have occurred. Cattle are showing a little stress but remain in overall good shape for a favorable market. Corn, cotton, rice and sorghum are still in fairly good shape, but rain would help. Except for irrigated land, the drouth has slowed the growth of most vegetables. Insects are active. Melon harvesting continues with favorable prices. Production is down on a good quality sweet potato crop. Pecans need rain to help alleviate the effects of aphids, borers and weevils.

FAR WEST: Cotton yields will be governed by cool, wet weather in those areas that received 3 to 7 inches of rain. Bollworm and pink bollworm damage is increasing. The rain, however, continues to benefit livestock and ranges. There is strong market demand for all classes of cattle. Adult mohair prices range from $1.90 to $2 a pound. Cantaloupe and watermelon harvesting continues, and the pecan outlook is

WEST CENTRAL: Although as much as 3.5 inches of rain fell in some areas, soil moisture is still short overall and grass fire danger remains. Cotton bolls are set and some are opening, but warm weather is needed now for growth and maturity. Sorghum is growing well. Cattle are in good flesh, and ranchers have completed fall calf marketing. Insects are causing considerable shedding of

CENTRAL: Overall dry conditions have dropped quality of ranges. Cotton is being defoliated for harvesting, and peanuts are growing well. Webworms, cankerworms, aphids, weevils, mites and heat are stressing the pecan

EAST: Hot, dry weather has boosted the danger of grass and forest fires, brought vegetable growth to a near halt and is hindering pastures. Livestock are only in fair shape and more are being pushed to market. The drouth and aphids are affecting the pecan crop.

UPPER COAST: Pastures are showing drouth stress. There is heavy seasonal marketing of cattle, which still remain in good condition. Rice, corn and cotton harvesting continues, with corn and rice almost completed.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Puny and scattered showers have failed to help crops and pastures but livestock are still in good condition and selling on a strong market. Wheat planting has started, corn harvesting is nearly done and the cotton harvest is starting. Pecans are suffering from drouth and insects.

SOUTH: Ranges and livestock would benefit from rain, although livestock are holding up well. Corn is 98 percent harvested, cotton 85 percent and the nearly finished sorghum crop has produced above-average yields. Land preparation is underway for fall vegetables, and fruit is sizing favorably under heavy irrigation. COASTAL BEND: Drouthy conditions prevail in almost all counties, and pastures are showing stress. Livestock, however, are holding up well. Lavaca and Wilson counties report light pecan crops, with some shedding, leaf scorch disease and stem end blight. Corn is 90 percent harvested, cotton 77 percent, rice 47 percent, and the sorghum harvest is complete.

SOUTHWEST: Spotty rains dropped 1 to 5 inches, the first significant moisture since June. The showers will help native grasses and enable livestock to stay in good shape, but lint damage has shown up in many cotton harvesting areas. The corn harvest is complete. Early fall cucumbers are growing very well, and farmers are busy preparing fields

Raw products prices drop for second month

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prices farmers got for raw products in August dropped 2.3 percent for the second straight month, the Agriculture Department says.

The August decline, which left prices at their year-earlier average, was identical to a 2.3 percent drop in July. During the first half of 1987, the price index rose in six consecutive months.

Lower prices for cotton, apples, potatoes, corn and soybeans contributed most to the decline from July to-August, the USDA said Monday. Higher prices for broilers, cattle and milk helped offset some of the decline for the other commodities, however.

"The decrease in the average price of cotton was due mainly to a shift in cotton marketings from the normally higher priced western areas to the southwestern areas where the new crop harvest has begun," the report said.

"Most feed grain and oilseed prices dropped from a month earlier, while rice and all wheat continued unchanged," it added. "Calf prices increased to $81.60 per hundredweight, the highest since March 1980. The beef cattle price increased from July, while average hog prices were lower.'

Prices for livestock and livestock products as a group were reported up 0.7 percent from July and averaged 1.4 percent more than a year ago. The index of prices for poultry and eggs was up 4.8 percent from July but was down 26 percent from August

However, the all-crops price index dropped 7.5 percent in August and averaged 3.9 percent less than a year ago, the report said. Cotton prices led the decline, averaging 17 percent lower than in July but still 27 percent more than in August 1986.

The preliminary August figures were based mostly on midmonth averages and will be sub-

No new figures were reported to show what happened to prices paid by farmers to meet expenses. The most recent average computed in July showed farm expenses running 3.1 percent higher than a year earlier.

Feed grain prices declined 5.8 percent in August, averaging 6.9 percent less than a year ago. Decreases from July were reported for corn, barley and sorghum, while oats and hay increased.

Potato and dry bean prices as a group declined 19 percent from July and averaged 4.3 percent below a year earlier. All of the drop was due to lower potato prices, which fell from $6.89 per 100 pounds in July to $5.38 in August. Dry beans rose 10 cents from July to $17.70 per 100 pounds.

Rural Information Center being set up

WASHINGTON (AP) - A new Rural Information Center, dubbed RIC, is being set up by the Agriculture Department to help local government officials solve

The service will be put into operation on a pilot basis in November and December, with nationwide service scheduled for January, Deputy Secretary Peter C. Myers said Tuesday.

When in operation, local government officials will be able to call RIC headquarters at the National Agricultural Library from county extension offices and have questions answered from a computer data base.

For example, in a demonstration planned for later this week, phoned-in questions will trigger computer responses from the center to questions about how rural communities cope with decreased income. The responses will include case examples and other information on how similar communities have handled comparable problems

Help! My children have caught HEAD LICE and now I can see the bugs on the walls, as well as on our heads. I guess they're on my dog and cat, too. Right? What can I do?

A. First, let me assure you the bugs yo see on the walls of your house are NOT head lice. Most likely, they're small ticks. I've had many calls lately about ticks, and many of these callers had ticks in their houses. In this case, either call a professional exterminator, or arm your-self with the latest "Dursban" products for home, yard and animal use. This should take care of the ticks, as well as fleas, and yes, the lice, too, if you have them. As to the head lice, this is a hostspecific insect. It only affects one kind of animal. Dog lice on dogs, human head lice on humans. Next, lice never leave the host, except by way of combs or rubbing. as might occur on a pillow. This is why you should never use another's comb and why it's so important to clean the children's bedding when treating for head lice. Most doctors prescribe "Kwell" shampoo, to be used once on each affected person, and in cases of heavy infestation, repeat in 7 days. Head lice is an easily cured problem. If you have ticks in your house, it will take a much longer treatment period. Call your veterinarian for more information Call 665-1873 for our First-of-the-

TEXANS REAP MANY BENEFITS

FROM H&R BLOCK TAX GOURSE

H&R Block has been teaching income tax preparation for more than 30 years. This year the Income Tax Course starts on September 9; morning and evening classes are available at over 7 Panhandle locations. Classes will introduce participants to the new tax reform laws of 1987. Students may take the H&R Block course to get a new job or to advance in their present position. They look at the course as a good way to pick up or polish up tax return preparation skills. The 13-week course progresses from simple to complex tax problems. Students learn through a combination of classroom discussion, hands-on problem solving

Qualified course graduates may be offered job interviews for positions with Block. Many Block employees find the flexible scheduling a real benefit. However, Block is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H&R Block.

One low fee includes all materials, supplies and textbooks. Successful graduates receive a Certificate of Achievement and 7.5 continuing education units.

Registration forms for the income tax course may be obtained by calling H&R Black at Amarillo 373-0777.

MAKING HAY WITH FEED VALUE

The hay producer who believes a delay of a few days in cutting would be of little consequence in hay production should give the matter additional thought. Considerable feed value could be lost.

Research has shown that delaying harvest results in both protein and digestibility losses in the

In southern perennial grasses, digestibility drops about 0.1 to 0.2 percentage units per day between four and eight weeks of

Coastal bermudagrass has been shown to lose 25 percent of its crude protein by delaying cutting from the fourth week to the sixth week of growth. A further delay to the eighth week reduces crude protein an additional 8 per-

Joe VanZandt

While producers can increase their total volume or number of bales of hay by delaying harvest until the sixth week of growth, hay quality will suffer. The same principal applies to cane and hybrid-sudans. The highest quality is at the boot stage of growth. While many factors affect maximum yield of digestible nutrients per acre, the most important factor is the stage of plant maturity at harvest. All forage plants, grasses and legumes, become lower in protein, digestibility and acceptability to livestock as they progress from the vegetative stage to the reproductive stage of growth.

Cutting and baling hay while it is in the vegetative stage preserves the hay's feed value while harvest delays result in feed value losses.

Pizza man makes enjoyment, entertainment, from scratch

By RICK SMITH Sherman Democrat

SHERMAN (AP) - Part potter, part masseuse, the pizza man pumps a pile of dough with pistonlike fingers, kneading, pummeling, poking, pushing.

Then the fingers shape the lump, raising a crusty ridge, circling the border just so.

But the best part ends almost before it begins. Cradling the flattened dough in both hands, the pizza man throws it high, high, high into the air. Spinning carousel-slow, the thin, round sheet seems to hang in the sky for a moment, like a pie-shaped satellite.

Then it falls back onto the pizza man's hand where he spins it fast, fast like a 78 rpm record, fast like an NBA basketball.

Plopping the shell back on the counter, the pizza man smiles.

'Flying the pizza, it's called. Pizza flying."

Twist, twirl, a quick, final pat.

"I'll tell you this: you can't be lazy to fly a pizza. You gotta work to be a pizza man. You gotta be Danny Deari, 26, learned the art of pizza flying as a 15-year-old, working at pizza places on the streets of Brooklyn, N.Y. Two years ago, feeling like a pioneer, he packed his pizza pans into a car and brought New Yorkstyle pizza and pizza flying — to Sherman. Pizza flying, like the art of making fine pizza, is not easily mastered, Deari said. 'It takes time. You can't just go in and do it.

You've got to put in your time. 'But after awhile, it just comes natural. After awhile, you'll be making a pizza and you'll start tossing it up in the air. Deari owns the Italian Affair, a pizza shop in the food court at Midway Mall. He said it took him about a year to fly his first pizza ("No I never put one on the ceiling or dropped one. Poked my fingers through a few, though"). Pizza flying, he said, is one factor that separates a genuine pizza man from just another fast food pizza cook.

"It takes experience, see? Now, there are people who could just throw a pizza into the air and wait for it to come down. Throw it and grab it. Throw it

'That's not flying. There's no trick to that. 'But to throw it and let it spin on your hand. That takes talent.

"A pizza man will let it spin on his hand. Make that pizza fly and come out nice and even. That's Talent — and pride — are two factors often missing in modern day pizza parlors, Deari said.

When he was a teen-ager, Deari served as a sort of apprentice in Brooklyn under a master pizza man named Jimmy.

"He was a pizza man all his life. He knew what he was doing. He taught me how to do things the right way, what to do and what not to do.

'Once, when I was about 17, I told him, 'Jimmy, I don't want to be a pizza man all my life. 'He said, 'Let me tell you something. What you do now, you'll do later. You'll make pizzas. "I said, 'Nah, you're crazy. But here I am, making pizzas. And I love it. 'People working in these pizza franchises, they're just people who want a job. They'll do it for awhile, then move on. 'But a pizza man is a pizza man for life."

Running his own pizza place, Deari says he can be sure that his product is made right: fresh ingredients prepared just so. "There's pride. A big franchise, they all use the same roast beef, the same corn dog mix. The product tastes the same everywhere. "But with my pizza, you can't get this taste everywhere. Because I'm not everywhere. I'm A person, he said, could do worse than to be a pizza man. "Look, I make something from scratch, I put it out for people to see, sell it, get money for it. Then I get to watch people eat it. They say, 'Aw, that's great!' And I get a feeling of immediate accomplishment. 'Very few people get that from their jobs. You make socks, you make a car, you never know who's going to wear them, who's going to drive it. "But a pizza man gets to see people eat his product. He gets to hear them say they like it., "That's why I'd rather be a pizza man than, say, a chef.

"A chef is back in the kitchen, away from the people. Here, I get to talk to the people, be around them, watch them watching the food being made.

"That's what pizza flying is. Yeah, it's a way for a pizza man to have fun. But it's also entertainment for the customers, especially the kids. 'When a kid sees a pizza tossed in the air, it puts a smile on his face. "And that makes a pizza man feel good."

Deari tosses pizzas old-fashioned way.

question: Cash or credit? giants battle over pricing

By JUDITH CROWN Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON (AP) - Just as oil companies have at times offered free drinking glasses to lure consumers to their pumps, they now are jockeying for market share largely through pricing strategies.

Shell doesn't believe consumers should pay more to buy gasoline with credit cards. It charges a single price for cash and credit purchases.

Exxon doesn't believe consumers who pay cash should subsidize the cost of credit card sales. It and others offer a discount for cash.

The pitch of the debate is particularly heated between Shell and Exxon at a time when the two companies are vying for the title of world's largest oil producer. Analysts say Shell's one-price stance helped catapult it to No. 1 among domestic gasoline marketers last year, as ranked by the magazine National Petroleum News

Shell's sales volume in gallons (sales to customers and other refineries) rose 20 percent last year to give it 8.7 percent of the market. Its closest competitor. Chevron, saw its volume drop 3.3 per cent for 8.4 percent of the market, according to the magazine.

So far, none of Shell's largest competitors has followed its strategy. Some observers say the company has been helped just by separating itself from the

"It gives them an advantage in differentiating their brand from the others." says Ray Orv. vice president of Wright Killen & Co., a Houston consulting firm. "This is something different, and people like something diffe-

Shell shook up the market in 1982 when it ran a campaign honoring other gasoline credit cards for its single price. The campaign helped boost credit-card sales from 30 percent to 40 percent of Shell's sales

"The discount for cash is often viewed as a charge for credit," says J.W. Schutzenhofer, vice president of marketing for Shell Refining and Marketing Co.

In May, Shell launched another campaign, this time honoring the cards of its four largest competitors who offer a discount for cash: Exxon, Mobil, Chevron and Amoco. Motorists received an application for a Shell card.

Oil industry publications estimated Shell spent $10 million on the 45-day campaign, which would be more than Shell spent for all gas advertising in 1986. Shell says the estimates are too high Tom Farris, who owns a Shell station in Pasadena, says his business posted a 15 percent increase in sales during the campaign.

Schutzenhofer says the impact of the campaign is difficult to measure, since consumers buy gas because of convenience and brand loyalty as well as price. The blitz wasn't long or extensive enough, he says, to substantially boost the credit-card share of Shell's sales but contributed to maintaining high sales volumes. He says the one-price policy, spiced by periodic advertising campaigns, has helped Shell snare the leading spot among gasoline retailers. Last year, Shell posted a 12 percent gain in gallons sold, not counting gasoline sold to other refineries. About five percentage points were attributable to the acquistion of 400 Arco stations in the Northeast. Volume has increased another 12 percent through the first half of this year, Schutzenhofer says. Generally, Shell's single price is 1 cent to 2 cents above the cash price of competitors such as Exxon, but 2 cents to 4 cents below a competitor's credit price. Ory says that the Shell strategy strikes a middle ground. Shell dealers are likely to score points among the 25 percent to 40 percent of customers who buy gas on credit. But they aren't apt to lose many cash customers if the difference is only a penny, and if they like the Shell brand for other reasons such as convenience or quality, he said.

Analysts say credit customers are sought after because they are loyal and tend to make bigger purchases at a time. They may fill up the tank instead of buying only $5 worth, buy oil or have work done on their engine.

Although Shell denies it, competitors say Shell risks alienating the 70 percent of the market that pays cash.

"They could lose the cash customers even if it's only a penny differential,' says Chevron spokesman Cul Ingraham. "People are conscious of price.

The cash business has grown since 1982 when Exxon and others began offering a discount for cash. Before then, price controls on oil barred a twoprice system, and 50 percent of sales were on credit cards, says J.T. McMillan, senior vice president at Exxon Company USA

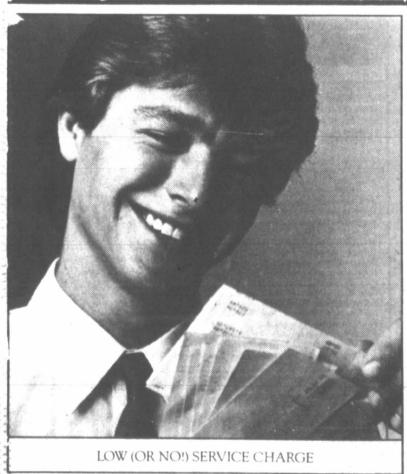

McMillan said the concept of a discount for cash evolved as a consumer issue. It is costly for oil companies to process credit-card transactions, and the customer enjoys the benefit of a float, the difference between the time he makes the purchase and pays the credit card bill.

"We don't expect the cash customer to subsidize the purchases that are made on credit," McMillan said. More motorists began using cash as more stations offered the discount.

Richard Alderman, a professor of law at the University of Houston, says a discount for cash is fairest to consumers Some say that consumers don't pay enough attention to the relative cost of credit. Farris, the Shell dealer, says many consumers don't even realize that dealers offer a discount. While some pumps register the cash or credit price, others don't and require the buyer to ask the attendant for the rebate. "People in a hurry don't check — they throw their money in the window and drive off," he says.

PLAINVIEW (AP) — It's almost like a letter that showed up a lifetime after it was mailed. Or a borrowed book returned decades after the fact.

Clyde Stovall opened a package from his hometown and found a tattered billfold and a driver's license - sent to him by the proprietor of a Plainview theater in which he lost it 50 years ago.

"Oh, yes, I was surprised," said Stovall, who left Plainview as an adult to work in the Houston shipyards and later went into the grocery business in Lubbock, where he retired about a bout with cancer in 1973

"But what really surprised me is that signature. When I saw it, it looked exactly like my writing today," he said. "I would have thought a signature would change through the years, but it's exactly the same.

"I called my family and sisters and told them about it," Stovall said. "They wanted to come and see the billfold and everything.

It disappeared from his pocket at the Fair Theater — one of several thriving city movie houses of the 1930s. He's sure he lost the wallet while on a date at about age 16.

"I remember, just barely," he said. "I think I recall something about losing it.

"That was the first driver's license I ever had," he said. He carried it to the shows, because he drove to them. "We had a 1931 Chevrolet at home, which they let me drive every once in a while, usually to take on a date."

But he doesn't think anyone profited from find-

American diplomacy moved backstage by ambassador

MEXICO CITY (AP) - In a marked change of style from his predecessor, U.S. Ambassador Charles J. Pilliod Jr. has shifted American diplomacy in Mexico backstage again.

Following any ambassador other than former movie actor John Gavin, Pilliod's preference for keeping discussions of problems between the two countries both private and amiable might not have been noticeable.

But Gavin's public airing of grievances, along with speeches seen as meddling in this country's internal affairs, irritated Mexicans. They added to the strain in relations from narcotics-related problems and attacks in the United States on political corruption here. Pilliod said this summer that both Mexico and the United States "strongly believe that diplomatic discussions can best be conducted on a direct, personal basis, and in private."

Aides say Pilliod, who became ambassador in October 1986, also thinks that with Mexico's sensitivity to criticism, it makes no sense to have confrontations or alienate people.

"Ambassador Pilliod has been more careful, less conflictive," said a top Mexican official.

As a result, relations between the government and the U.S. Embassy "have improved very much," he said, stressing the embassy as opposed to the U.S. government. He spoke on condition he not be identified.

"I believe he has shown the will to minimize to the extent that he can, the friction with Mexico ... and there are many frictions," said Lorenzo Meyer, the top academic official at the Colegio de Mexico, a leading graduate school and research

"Style is important," Meyer said. "In politics

it's part of the substance.

Aides, who spoke privately, say Pilliod, 69, has carried over the style he used as chairman of Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., of Akron, Ohio. He joined Goodyear in 1941 as a production trainee after attending college in Ohio. During World War II, he was an Air Force combat pilot in the Far East, then returned to Goodyear. He still flies and has a twin-engine plane in Mexico. He and his wife have eight children.

While Gavin involved himself in details of the embassy workings, Pilliod, the pragmatic businessman, deals with the most important issues and delegates authority, one embassy official said. "He knows U.S. policy very well and knows what his job is here," the official said. Meyer, who has seen Pilliod in action at two meetings, says he anticipates questions and comes well prepared with facts and figures.

In meetings with Mexicans, "he fills his responsibility of defending the U.S. position" and "responds firmly," the Mexican official said, but 'does not trample on the Mexican position' or bring up sore points in the relationship every time he has a chance.

His biggest collision with official and public opinion arose after he took a quick jab at Mexico's Central American policy in a speech last May.

The United States views leftist Nicaragua as expansionist and part of the East-West conflict. Mexico opposes U.S. support of Nicaraguan rebels and U.S. intervention in the region.

Pilliod said Mexico selectively applies its principles of nonintervention and self-determination; supporting Nicaragua while criticizing the rightist military dictatorship in Chile. He also reached back to 1981, when Mexico recognized the leftist rebels fighting the U.S.-backed Salvadoran gov-

The Mexican press pounced on his remarks, calling them interventionist and a return to the Gavin days. A Foreign Ministry official publicly defended Mexico's position.

One embassy official said the ambassador wanted to raise the issue, get it out of the way and then go beyond it.

Working keeps centenarian young

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) - The only difficulty David Kane recalls about reaching 100 is that he couldn't get his driver's license renewed.

Nothing else seems to bother Kane, a prolific artist so busy he has no time for an afternoon nap or television in the evening.

And he's adjusting to the loss of his driver's

'Now I have to take buses or walk," said Kane, the epitome of health at 102. "It's one of my hardships.

Pizza man makes enjoyment, entertainment, from scratch

By RICK SMITH Sherman Democrat

SHERMAN (AP) — Part potter, part masseuse, the pizza man pumps a pile of dough with piston-like fingers, kneading, pummeling, poking, pushing.

Then the fingers shape the lump, raising a crusty ridge, circling the border just so.

But the best part ends almost before it begins. Cradling the flattened dough in both hands, the pizza man throws it high, high, high into the air. Spinning carousel-slow, the thin, round sheet seems to hang in the sky for a moment, like a pie-shaped satellite.

Then it falls back onto the pizza man's hand where he spins it fast, fast like a 78 rpm record, fast like an NBA basketball.

Plopping the shell back on the counter, the pizza man smiles.

"Flying the pizza it's called Pizza flying"

"Flying the pizza, it's called. Pizza flying."
Twist, twirl, a quick, final pat.

"I'll tell you this: you can't be lazy to fly a pizza.
You gotta work to be a pizza man. You gotta be alive."

Danny Deari, 26, learned the art of pizza flying as a 15-year-old, working at pizza places on the streets of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Two years ago, feeling like a pioneer, he packed his pizza pans into a car and brought New Yorkstyle pizza and pizza flying — to Sherman.

Pizza flying, like the art of making fine pizza, is not easily mastered, Deari said. "It takes time. You can't just go in and do it.

You've got to put in your time.

"But after awhile, it just comes natural. After awhile, you'll be making a pizza and you'll start tossing it up in the air."

Deari owns the Italian Affair, a pizza shop in the food court at Midway Mall.

He said it took him about a year to fly his first pizza ("No I never put one on the ceiling or dropped one. Poked my fingers through a few, though"). Pizza flying, he said, is one factor that separates a genuine pizza man from just another fast food pizza cook.

"It takes experience, see? Now, there are people who could just throw a pizza into the air and wait for it to come down. Throw it and grab it. Throw it and grab it.

"That's not flying. There's no trick to that.

"That's not flying. There's no trick to that.
"But to throw it and let it spin on your hand. That takes talent.

"A pizza man will let it spin on his hand. Make that pizza fly and come out nice and even. That's talent."

talent."
Talent — and pride — are two factors often missing in modern day pizza parlors, Deari said.

When he was a teen-ager, Deari served as a sort of apprentice in Brooklyn under a master pizza man named Jimmy.

"He was a pizza man all his life. He knew what he was doing. He taught me how to do things the right way, what to do and what not to do.

"Once, when I was about 17, I told him, 'Jimmy, I don't want to be a pizza man all my life."
"He said, 'Let me tell you something. What you do now, you'll do later. You'll make pizzas.'

"I said, 'Nah, you're crazy. But here I am, making pizzas. And I love it.

"People working in these pizza franchises, they're just people who want a job. They'll do it for awhile, then move on.

"But a pizza man is a pizza man for life."
Running his own pizza place, Deari says he can be sure that his product is made right: fresh ingredients prepared just so dients prepared just so.

"There's pride. A big franchise, they all use the same roast beef, the same corn dog mix. The product tastes the same everywhere.

"But with my pizza, you can't get this taste everywhere. Because I'm not everywhere. I'm here."

A person, he said, could do worse than to be a pizza man.

"Look, I make something from scratch. I put it out for people to see, sell it, get money for it. Then I get to watch people eat it. They say, 'Aw, that's great!' And I get a feeling of immediate accomplishment.

plishment.

"Very few people get that from their jobs. You make socks, you make a car, you never know who's going to wear them, who's going to drive it.

"But a pizza man gets to see people eat his product. He gets to hear them say they like it.,

"That's why I'd rather be a pizza man than, say, a chef.
"A chef is back in the kitchen, away from the people. Here, I get to talk to the people, be around them, watch them watching the food being made. "That's what pizza flying is. Yeah, it's a way for a pizza man to have fun. But it's also entertain-a pizza man to have fun. But it's also entertainment for the customers, especially the kids.

"When a kid sees a pizza tossed in the air, it puts a smile on his face.

"And that makes a pizza man feel good."

Oil giants battle over pricing question: Cash or credit?

By JUDITH CROWN Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON (AP) — Just as oil companies have at times offered free drinking glasses to lure consumers to their pumps, they now are jockeying for market share largely through pricing strategies.

Shell doesn't believe consumers should pay more to buy gasoline with credit cards. It charges a single price for cash and credit purchases.

Exxon doesn't believe consumers who pay cash should subsidize the cost of credit card sales. It and others offer a discount for cash.

The pitch of the debate is particularly heated between Shell and Exxon at a time when the two companies are vying for the title of world's largest oil producer. Analysts say Shell's one-price stance helped catapult it to No. 1 among domestic gasoline marketers last year, as ranked by the magazine National Petroleum News.

Shell's sales volume in gallons (sales to customers and other refineries) rose 20 percent last year to give it 8.7 percent of the market. Its closest competitor, Chevron, saw its volume drop 3.3 percent for 8.4 percent of the market, according to the magazine.

So far, none of Shell's largest competitors has followed its strategy. Some observers say the company has been helped just by separating itself from the pack.

"It gives them an advantage in differentiating their brand from the others," says Ray Ory, vice president of Wright Killen & Co., a Houston consulting firm. "This is something different, and people like something different."

Shell shook up the market in 1982

when it ran a campaign honoring other gasoline credit cards for its single price. The campaign helped boost credit-card sales from 30 percent to 40 percent of Shell's sales.

"The discount for cash is often viewed as a charge for credit," says J.W. Schutzenhofer, vice president of marketing for Shell Refining and Marketing Co.

In May, Shell launched another campaign, this time honoring the cards of its four largest competitors who offer a discount for cash: Exxon, Mobil, Chevron and Amoco. Motorists received an application for a Shell card.

Oil industry publications estimated Shell spent $10 million on the 45-day campaign, which would be more than Shell spent for all gas advertising in 1986. Shell says the estimates are too high.

Tom Farris, who owns a Shell station in Pasadena, says his business posted a 15 percent increase in sales during the campaign.

Schutzenhofer says the impact of the campaign is difficult to measure, since consumers buy gas because of convenience and brand loyalty as well as price. The blitz wasn't long or extensive enough, he says, to substantially boost the credit-card share of Shell's sales but contributed to maintaining high sales volumes. He says the one-price policy, spiced by periodic advertising campaigns, has helped Shell snare the leading spot among gasoline retailers.

Last year, Shell posted a 12 percent gain in gallons sold, not counting gasoline sold to other refineries. About five percentage points were attributable to the acquistion of 400 Arco stations in the Northeast. Volume has increased another 12 percent through the first half of this year. Schutzenhofer says of this year, Schutzenhofer says.

Generally, Shell's single price is 1 cent to 2 cents above the cash price of competitors such as Exxon, but 2 cents to 4 cents below a competitor's credit price. Ory says that the Shell strategy strikes a middle ground. Shell dealers are likely to score points among the 25 percent to 40 percent of customers who buy gas on credit. But they aren't apt to lose many cash customers if the difference is only a penny, and if they like the Shell brand for other reasons such as convenience or quality, he said.

Analysts say credit customers are sought after because they are loyal and tend to make bigger purchases at a time. They may fill up the tank instead of buying only $5 worth, buy oil or have work done on their engine.

Although Shell denies it, competitors say Shell risks alienating the 70 percent of the market that pays cash.

"They could lose the cash customers even if it's only a penny differential," says Chevron spokesman Cul Ingraham. "People are conscious of price."

The cash business has grown since 1982 when Exxon and others began offering a discount for cash. Before then, price controls on oil barred a twoprice system, and 50 percent of sales were on credit cards, says J.T. McMillan, senior vice president at Exxon Company USA.

McMillan said the concept of a discount for cash evolved as a consumer issue. It is costly for oil companies to process credit-card transactions, and the customer enjoys the benefit of a float, the difference between the time he makes the purchase and pays the credit card bill.

"We don't expect the cash customer to subsidize the purchases that are made on credit," McMillan said. More motorists began using cash as more stations offered the discount.

Richard Alderman, a professor of law at the University of Houston, says a discount for cash is fairest to consumers. Some say that consumers don't pay enough attention to the relative cost of credit.

Farris, the Shell dealer, says many consumers don't even realize that dealers offer a discount. While some pumps register the cash or credit price, others don't and require the buyer to ask the attendant for the rebate.

"People in a hurry don't check—they throw their money in the window and drive off," he says.

PLAINVIEW (AP) — It's almost like a letter that showed up a lifetime after it was mailed. Or a borrowed book returned decades after the fact.

Clyde Stovall opened a package from his hometown and found a tattered billfold and a driver's license — sent to him by the proprietor of a Plainview theater in which he lost it 50 years ago.

"Oh, yes, I was surprised," said Stovall, who left Plainview as an adult to work in the Houston shipyards and later went into the grocery business in Lubbock, where he retired about a bout with cancer in 1973.

American diplomacy moved backstage by ambassador

MEXICO CITY (AP) — In a marked change of style from his predecessor, U.S. Ambassador Charles J. Pilliod Jr. has shifted American diplomacy in Mexico backstage again.

Following any ambassador other than former movie actor John Gavin, Pilliod's preference for keeping discussions of problems between the two countries both private and amiable might not have been noticeable.

But Gavin's public airing of grievances, along with speeches seen as meddling in this country's internal affairs, irritated Mexicans. They added to the strain in relations from narcotics-related problems and attacks in the United States on political corruption here. Pilliod said this summer that both Mexico and the United States "strongly believe that diplomatic discussions can best be conducted on a direct, personal basis, and in private."

"Ambassador Pilliod has been more careful, less conflictive," said a top Mexican official.

As a result, relations between the government and the U.S. Embassy "have improved very much," he said, stressing the embassy as opposed to the U.S. government. He spoke on condition he not be identified.

"I believe he has shown the will to minimize to the extent that he can, the friction with Mexico ... and there are many frictions," said Lorenzo Meyer, the top academic official at the Colegio de Mexico, a leading graduate school and research

institution. 'Style is important," Meyer said. "In politics

Aides, who spoke privately, say Pilliod, 69, has carried over the style he used as chairman of Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., of Akron, Ohio. He joined Goodyear in 1941 as a production trainee after attending college in Ohio. During World War II, he was an Air Force combat pilot in the Far East, then returned to Goodyear.

He still flies and has a twin-engine plane in Mexico. He and his wife have eight children.

While Gavin involved himself in details of the embassy workings, Pilliod, the pragmatic businessman, deals with the most important issues and delegates authority, one embassy official said. "He knows U.S. policy very well and knows what his job is here," the official said.

His biggest collision with official and public opinion arose after he took a quick jab at Mexico's Central American policy in a speech last May. The United States views leftist Nicaragua as expansionist and part of the East-West conflict. Mexico opposes U.S. support of Nicaraguan rebels and U.S. intervention in the region.

The Mexican press pounced on his remarks, calling them interventionist and a return to the Gavin days. A Foreign Ministry official publicly defended Mexico's position.

One embassy official said the ambassador wanted to raise the issue, get it out of the way and then go beyond it.
