Divers find Thai plane's black box

All 83 aboard jet believed dead

By MOLLY YONG
Associated Press Writer

PHUKET, Thailand — Frogmen today located the black box and recovered several bodies from the wreckage of a Thai airliner that plunged into the sea off the resort island of Phuket, apparently killing all 83 people aboard.

Eighteen bodies have been found since the Thai Airways Boeing 737 crashed Monday afternoon about 540 miles southwest of Bangkok. Lt. Plodt Pirathan, deputy commander of the provincial marine police, said today.

The cause of the crash remained unclear today. Thai Airways' Phuket manager, Narong Yantragorn, said, "We have established the location of the black box, but believe it to be lodged in some crevice." The black box records cockpit conversations and could contain important clues about why the jet crashed.

Workers planned to retrieve the black box after senior police officials from Bangkok arrived later today. Police radio reports said the box still was giving out strong signals.

The 37 foreign passengers on domestic Flight TH365 included two Americans, two Japanese, three Europeans and 30 Malaysians, said the managing director of the state-run airline, Air Marshal Narong Dithipeng.

A partial passenger list from the airline identified the Americans as William N. Ward and his Thai-born wife Jantree Ward. No further information about them was available.

No survivors have been found despite an intensive search by 250 workers, a half dozen marine and navy frogmen, 25 fishing vessels and two marine patrol boats, authorities said.

Narong, Thai Airways' managing director, said the jet plunged into the Andaman Sea eight miles short of Phuket International Airport after nearly colliding with a Boeing 737 owned by Hong Kong-based Dragonair.

However, Dragon Airlines Ltd. said in a statement issued in Hong Kong that it was assured by the captain of its jet that "the Dragonair aircraft was not involved." It gave no details.

Iraqis pound targets

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq said today its warplanes raided two industrial cities deep inside Iran and attacked three vessels in the Persian Gulf. Shipping sources said at least one Iranian-flagged vessel was on fire.

Iran said it downed three Iraqi jets and warned Iraqi civilians to stay away from economic and industrial sites across Iraq to elude retaliatory attacks.

Meanwhile, two reflagged Kuwaiti tankers escorted by American warships were cruising northward in the gulf a day after Iranian commandos in a speedboat raked a Kuwaiti vessel with machine gun fire and rocket-propelled grenades. That attack followed three days of Iraqi raids on Iranian oil installations.

In Washington, the White House on Monday termed the timing of Iraq's attacks "deplorable," but called on Iran to comply with a U.N. Security Council resolution calling for a cease-fire in the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

The Iraqi announcement brought to eight the number of raids it has claimed on Iranian oil targets since breaking an informal cease-fire in the gulf.

Gulf shipping executives said an Iranian-flagged vessel was on fire near Iran's Larak island oil terminal in the Strait of Hormuz.

The executives, who requested anonymity, said they have been unable to identify the burning vessel or establish if it had been struck in one of the raids reported by Baghdad's military communiques.

Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, reported that three Iraqi jets were downed by interceptors and ground-fire in today's raids, although Iraq said all its planes returned safely. IRNA said two of the planes were shot down over the gulf and the third was downed by ground fire over Khuzistan province. Ahvaz, one of the cities Iraq said it attacked today, is the capital of Khuzistan.

Iran has vowed to hit shipping in the gulf in retaliation for the attacks, and said it would not hesitate to fire on the U.S.-escorted ships. On Monday, Iranian commandos in a speedboat raked a Kuwaiti vessel with machine gun fire and rocket-propelled grenades. Iran accuses Kuwait of aiding Iraq.

The Iraqi News Agency said Iraqi warplanes attacked vessels in the gulf in three separate raids today, one at midnight, a second two hours later and a third at midday.

Iraq also announced a series of morning air strikes on industrial targets in Ahvaz in southern Iran and Isfahan, in the central part of the country.

Baghdad Radio, monitored in Cyprus, quoted an unidentified military spokesman today as saying: "Iraq will cut off Iranian oil exports so the revenues can no

Pampa police look for hoisted booze

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

The new "open container law" probably should be called the "drinking while driving law," to be precise.

The law, which took effect at midnight, puts a damper on the Texas practice of cruising down the road with one hand on the wheel and a beer in the other. But Texas lawmen must actually see a driver take a drink to make an arrest.

The new law is a Class C misdemeanor, carrying a maximum $500 fine.

No matter what it's called, Pampa motorists would do well to heed the law, Police Chief Robert Eberz says.

"We're going to enforce it the best we can," Eberz said today. "Open containers of alcohol in a moving vehicle are a combination that doesn't mix."

Eberz and other law enforcement officers have criticized the bill for not being strong enough. Eberz said the law should prohibit all open containers from motor vehicles, including those held by passengers.

He added that officers should not have to see the driver take a drink before making an "open container" arrest.

"They need to take alcohol out of moving vehicles," Eberz said.

Eberz

"Anytime you have alcohol in a vehicle, you have the chance of having somebody killed."

The chief called the new law a first step toward removing alcohol from Texas vehicles.

"In my opinion, it's a pretty feeble attempt to write an open container law," he said.

Eberz compared the drunk driver to a man waving a loaded gun in a crowd. He said he believes in the right to drink — even to get drunk — but added that the public has a right to be protected from the drunk on the road.

The chief admitted he and

Drama teacher crams to meet requirements

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

CANADIAN — And you thought your summer was hectic.

Try cramming 30 hours of college credit hours into 12 weeks.

Bad enough?

Try doing it when the classes are 600 miles away from each other.

That was how Canadian High School speech and drama teacher Tony A. "Tal" Lostracco spent his summer vacation.

Not a very relaxing summer, but it was something the 27-year-old drama coach had to do, partly to prove to himself that he could do it, mainly to keep his job.

Lostracco had to take the summer courses to obtain his certificate to teach speech and drama. The boisterous teacher, who was hired in 1984 on a three-year emergency teaching permit from the Texas Education Agency, was almost fired in March when the TEA said he did not have enough credit hours to get his certificate.

But instead of facing termination, Lostracco — who was busy grooming his one-act play cast for the University Interscholastic League state championship — chose to resign on the agreement that he be rehired if he completed his required courses. Half of those credit hours had to be earned by July 15.

This sent the ram-charged teacher on a cross-state trek that took him from West Texas State University in Canyon to the University of Houston, Downtown, to Southwestern University at Georgetown to Texas Tech University in Lubbock to Prairie

Justice denies trying to kill Iran-Contra probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is denying that its support for a constitutional challenge to the independent counsel law is an attempt to protect Reagan administration officials from prosecution.

But the head of a group opposing the attacks on the law said the department's position "could dangerously undermine all of the ongoing criminal investigations that involve numerous individuals who have served at the highest levels in the Reagan administration, potentially including top officials of the Justice Department itself."

"The Reagan administration's so-called interest in tough and effective law enforcement apparently disappears when the administration's political and personal friends are involved," added Fred Wertheimer, president of Common Cause.

The Justice Department on Monday challenged the constitutionality of the 1978 Ethics in Government Act. Under the act, independent counsels were appointed to investigate the Iran-Contra affair, the finances of Attorney General Edwin Meese III and alleged wrongdoing by other Reagan administration officials.

Lawrence E. Walsh, the Iran-Contra independent counsel, immediately announced his office opposes the Justice Department's constitutional challenge and Walsh sought permission to present his views in the case.

Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland said, "It's simply not true to suggest that we're trying to undermine these investigations."

Eastland said the Justice Department offered parallel appointments to all six independent counsels now operating to place them inside the Justice Department, protect them from constitutional challenges and "ensure that they can continue their work."

Walsh accepted the parallel appointment, as did James McKay, who is investigating Meese and former White House political director Lyn Nofziger. Therefore, they won't be affected if the department's position is upheld, Eastland said.

The challenge to the independent counsel provisions of the ethics law could affect other independent investigations, however.

Texas officials work to win atom smasher

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas bids to lure the big money "super collider" are now in Washington, and officials say the sale of $500 million in bonds would help boost the state's prospects.

Site proposals from the Amarillo and Dallas-Fort Worth areas were sent to the capital Monday, marking the end of the first phase of the state's bid to win for the atom-smasher, said Peter Flawn, chairman of the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission.

"The next phase, and a most important phase, is to organize to pass Proposition 19 on the Nov. 3 election ballot, so that Texas will have the bonding capacity to support these proposals," Flawn said.

Proposition 19, one of 25 constitutional amendments on the November ballot, would authorize issuance of up to $500 million in bonds to pay for super collider activities.

"It is critical that all Texans unite together to add to (the bids) the strongest economic and citizen support," said William Banowsky, president of the Dallas-Fort Worth Superconducting Collider Authority.

Approval of the amendment would show "that (the super collider) is not simply something that a narrow group of scientists is interested in, but that the state of Texas and the voters are supporting it," he said.

Meanwhile, business leaders from Midland and El Paso submitted their own maverick bids for the super collider. Their proposals emerged from among 12 regions that lost to Dallas and Amarillo in May in a state competition to pick the sites that Texas would enter in national competition.

"We wanted to come a little bit closer in the competition," said Joe Kloesel, executive vice president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, which has joined Big Spring leaders in a proposal for a site near Garden City, southeast of Midland.

The other independent Texas bid, which was submitted by the West Texas Council of Governments, is for a site 40 miles east of El Paso in Hudspeth County.

The super collider will include a 52-mile-long underground tunnel. Researchers will work to simulate conditions that existed when the universe began to study the four basic forces of nature — gravity, electromagnetism, radiation and the force that binds atomic nuclei. Some 10,000 superconducting magnets will guide proton beams in opposite directions around the tunnel. They will collide at almost the speed of light, creating new sub-atomic particles. Scientists say the experiments could yield significant discoveries about the fundamental nature of energy and matter.

The project "will impact every university in our state, so we all have a big stake in this," said Amarillo Mayor Glen Parkey. "We're standing on the edge of probably the greatest scientific project ever done."

If a Texas site is chosen for the atom-smasher, which is to be the largest and most advanced particle accelerator ever built, the state will benefit economically and assume national scientific leadership, officials said.

"I think it not only has great scientific promise, but it has great promise for our engineering, technological and also our economic activity within the state," said Herbert Woodson, laboratory commission vice chairman.

The project's cost is estimated at more than $5 billion, and the annual operating budget will be about $300 million, Flawn said. Up to 5,000 jobs will be created during construction, and up to 6,000 jobs in related activities.

It is estimated that 24 states will submit bids for the project to the U.S. Department of Energy by Wednesday's deadline. Texas officials said New York and California are expected to join Texas in submitting multiple bids.

After a review by the Department of Energy and evaluation by a select committee of scientists and engineers, the site is expected to be chosen by January 1989.

Air Force sergeant faces death penalty

AUSTIN (AP) — An Air Force sergeant was convicted of murder and attempted rape in the death of a Bergstrom Air Force Base civilian employee who was strangled with a seat belt from her car.

Gerald I. Mobley, a 15-year Air Force veteran, could receive the death penalty after being convicted Monday of killing Cynthia Torres, 25, a cashier at Bergstrom's Non-Commissioned Officer Club, prosecutors said.

Ms. Torres was found barely alive in a pool of blood after she left work at the club Feb. 7. She died two days later in the first killing on record in Bergstrom's 45-year history.

Mobley, 34, was found guilty of premeditated and felonious murder and attempted rape. If he is not given the death penalty, as prosecutors said they will request, military law stipulates he must receive life in prison.

The punishment phase in the trial that began Aug. 19 was scheduled to begin today.

The prosecution called 23 witnesses during the trial, including Edward Torres, the husband of the dead woman who found her body in the club's parking lot.

Evidence showed Ms. Torres, a mother of two children, was attacked shortly after she left the non-commissioned officers club at the base about 10:15 p.m. Feb. 7.

Ms. Torres was attacked by someone who struck her in the side of the head and stunned her, evidence indicated. She was then dragged to her car where she was strangled during the attempted sexual assault. Her nose also was broken.

She was found about 11 p.m. by her husband, who drove to the club when she did not come home. He testified he found his wife "lying in her own blood with her neck crushed."

Inside the car, police officers found a bloody footprint, hair samples and evidence of an attempted sexual assault. They also found skin under some of her fingernails, as well as a receipt from a bill that had Mobley's signature on it.

When authorities found the partial receipt, they began tracing Mobley's movements at Bergstrom, where he was stationed on temporary assignment while receiving additional training. He was stationed at George Air Force Base near Victorville, Calif.

During their investigation, authorities found that Mobley visited the club on several occasions while he was at Bergstrom and had cashed a check there the night of Feb. 7.

Authorities discovered in Mobley's home the other part of the receipt that had been found in the victim's car, according to court testimony.

They also found a bloody jacket at his residence and deck shoes similar to the ones that left the footprint in Ms. Torres' car. The blood was the same type as that of Ms. Torres, a rare kind that authorities said only one in 350 people possess. Hairs taken from Mobley were similar to ones found in her car.

Pickens-led group seeks to buy Newmont

DALLAS (AP) — A T. Boone Pickens-led investor group's $5.64 billion buyout offer could spark a takeover battle for control of Newmont Mining Corp., analysts say.

Newmont stock ballooned to a 52-week high, up $9.50 to $92, in New York Stock Exchange trading Monday following disclosure of the $95-per-share cash offer.

The investor group, Ivanhoe Partners, disclosed early in August it held 9.95 percent of Newmont's 66 million common shares outstanding and might seek to acquire the rest.

But until Monday's offer there was uncertainty over whether the group — 45 percent held by Pickens' Mesa Limited Partnership — actually would make a play for Newmont, a New York-based mining and energy company.

A major obstacle is Consolidated Gold Fields PLC, a London-based gold mining concern that holds a majority 26.2 percent stake in Newmont.

Consolidated said Aug. 19 that it supported Newmont's desire to remain independent and would take whatever action it deemed appropriate to thwart a hostile bid.

But Consolidated also has said it doesn't want to take over Newmont or increase its stake in the company.

Newmont officials declined comment on the offer Monday, and a spokesman in Consolidated's New York office said it was premature to make a statement. A company official in London, who declined to be identified, said Consolidated stood by its Aug. 19 statement.

Pickens was not available for comment and did not return telephone calls.

But in a letter to Newmont outlining the buyout offer, Pickens indicated Ivanhoe's offer "represents a significant premium to recent market prices and more than 200 percent of the price at which Newmont sold its own shares to the public only two months ago."

The letter also stated Ivanhoe was willing to discuss alternatives to Consolidated's sale of Newmont interest, such as an exchange of its stock interest for direct ownership in one or more Newmont assets or continued ownership by Consolidated of a minority interest.

Ronald Shorr, an analyst with Bear Stearns & Co. in New York, said Ivanhoe's $95 a share offer was close to what Newmont would be worth if sold off in pieces.

"I think (Pickens) would do whatever possible to give himself the quickest profit, and that wouldn't be operating Newmont Mining Co. without some dramatic change in the financial situation," Shorr said.

Shorr also speculated that if Consolidated declined to acquire a larger interest in Newmont, the company might seek aid from other mineral companies.

Newmont last week revised sharply higher the estimated geologic reserves and gold production of its 90 percent-owned Newmont Gold subsidiary in a report that raised the company's potential value. Newmont also owns 75 percent of Newmont Australia and a stake in Nevada's Carlin Trend, considered one of the world's biggest gold deposits.

The company had a profit of $315.5 million, or $5.09 per share, in the first half of 1987, including one-time gains of $330 million from public stock offerings. That compared with a profit of $60.3 million, or $1.12 per share.

The Ivanhoe bid comes after weeks of speculation following Pickens' disclosures that Mesa held sizable stakes in Boeing Co., Singer Co. and Newmont.

Although Amarillo-based Mesa had indicated it might seek up to 15 percent each of Boeing and Singer, there was widespread doubt that Pickens would attempt to mount a takeover for either company.

Rather, it was thought Pickens was more interested in making a profit from his stock holdings to help boost Mesa's sluggish cash flow and its stock price.

In the past, Mesa has launched hostile takeover bids for such energy giants as Gulf Corp. and Phillips Petroleum Co. and made millions of dollars in profits.

Texas death row inmate seeking stay of execution

AUSTIN (AP) — A violent death row inmate who faces lethal injection early Wednesday has asked the state Court of Criminal Appeals to block his execution.

James Demouchette, 32, was sentenced to die for the 1976 shooting deaths of two Houston pizza parlor workers during a robbery. On Monday, his attorneys asked the court to block the scheduled pre-dawn execution.

His first conviction in 1977 was overturned four years later on appeal. A second trial in 1983 resulted in another conviction and death sentence. His brother, Christopher, who was 17 at the time of the shootings, is serving a life term for his part in the slayings.

Demouchette was represented for the first time Monday by attorneys for the Capital Punishment Clinic at the University of Texas Law School.

"He's not volunteering to die," attorney Jim Rebholz said. "We'll be representing him at his emergency proceeding. We allege he doesn't have a lawyer and didn't know he didn't have a lawyer. The court has to give a stay."

Ron Dusek, spokesman for the Texas attorney general's office, said it was uncertain if the state would oppose the request for a stay.

Demouchette is considered one of the meanest of the 257 people on death row in Texas because of his history of violent behavior, Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Charles Brown said.

Records allege Demouchette beat and raped a fellow inmate while on trial in Houston, beat and stabbed at least two other inmates, twice set fire to his cell, destroyed a television set and commode and threw lye in the face of a guard.

He also was convicted of stabbing to death an inmate with a 14-inch metal rod. After the killing, guards said he lit a cigar.

Last month, 17 deputies were summoned to the Houston courtroom of State District Judge Patricia Lykos to provide security as Demouchette was given his execution date.

His record also shows that as a child he was known for setting fire to buildings and catching dogs and cats and killing them. He failed in elementary school five times.

Mayor: Business bad since he was investigated

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — In a successful plea for probation, Mayor Emilio Hernandez testified that his used-car business has suffered since he came under investigation by the Texas Rangers last year.

The same jury that last Thursday found him guilty of aggravated perjury sentenced the 56-year-old mayor Monday to a two-year probation sentence for the felony conviction.

It was the lightest possible sentence for Hernandez, who faced up to 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine. Prosecutor Sharon MacRae had recommended probation, citing the mayor's clean record and his community involvement.

Hernandez declined comment on the sentence other than to mouth that he felt "very good" about it as he left the state district courtroom.

Hernandez, who did not testify until the sentencing hearing Monday, told the jury of his years of working as a toll collector on the B&M Bridge between Brownsville and Matamoros, Mexico, while building his automobile business. He said he was in better financial shape before becoming mayor in 1979.

"I've neglected my business by taking care of the city, but that's a commitment I made," Hernandez said.

Business has dropped off at his Hernandez Car Sales, which advertises "clean, upstate cars," since his legal problems began, he said.

"For the past eight months, I don't think I've sold more than five cars out of my lot," Hernandez said.

The jury last week found that he lied under oath before a grand jury in January by telling investigators he did not use money from his own pocket to pay for billboards used in the unsuccessful 1985 re-election campaign of former City Commissioner Jesse Sloss.

Hernandez told the grand jury that in 1985, he could not personally afford to give more than $200 for the billboards, but helped raise money to purchase them through the Sloss campaign fund.

He voluntarily testified before the grand jury in its probe of alleged bribery in city contracting and other allegations.

Defense witness Hortencia Sloss testified last week during the trial that Hernandez told her to put the wrong names in a campaign finance report after he lost the original list of contributors for the billboards.

Mrs. Sloss said she filed the inaccurate report listing Hernandez as one of four people who gave $985 for the billboards, because she was in a hurry to file before the reporting deadline.

Hernandez said Monday he never told Mrs. Sloss to falsify the report, but had forgotten to tell her the name of one more person who had helped raise money for the advertising.

The mayor said he had wanted to testify during the trial, but did not after his attorneys advised against it.

Defense attorney Rey Cantu has said he plans to appeal the conviction.

Cantu in July successfully fought prosecutors' efforts to move the perjury trial and a bribery trial still pending against the mayor to another county. Ms. MacRae had pushed for the venue change by contending that Hernandez's influence made it difficult for the state to get a fair trial in Cameron County.

An attorney with the secretary of state's Elections Division in Austin said Hernandez apparently can remain in office until appeals are exhausted.

He has not filed for re-election in Brownsville's Nov. 3 mayoral race.

Texas Air balks at increases; may doom other airlines plans

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Air Corp.'s refusal to play along may doom other airlines' attempts to raise discount fares during the post-Labor Day period, analysts say.

On Monday, Eastern Airlines said it was cutting its lowest discount fares, and Houston-based Continental said it would lower its discount fares only in markets served by both Continental and Eastern.

Delta Air Lines and Northwest Airlines — which last week announced they were raising maxsaver rates — immediately said they would match the fare cuts in markets where they competed with Eastern.

Both Continental and Eastern are owned by Texas Air, generally considered the industry's pricing leader with about 20 percent of the U.S. air travel market.

"The fact that one carrier like Texas Air decides not to go along with the price increase makes it difficult for the others to continue with their plan," said Robert Decker, who follows the airlines for Chicago investment firm Duff & Phelps.

An American Airlines spokesman at the carrier's Fort Worth headquarters said the company was studying the fare cuts, while Chicago-based United Airlines did not return telephone calls seeking comment.

United, American, Delta and Northwest all announced last week they were raising maxsaver rates by $10 to $40 each way beginning with tickets purchased on or after Sept. 8.

In addition, the airlines tightened advance purchase requirements on their "MaxSavers" from the previous seven days to as much as 30 days.

On Monday, Eastern said that from Sept. 9 through Dec. 15, it was cutting an average of $20 one way from the deep discount rates commonly known as MaxSavers, the industry's cheapest fares.

"The situation remains competitive," said Anthony Hatch, an analyst at Argus Research Corp. "Things look pretty good for the industry from a financial point of view."

Under the Northwest plan, the lowest discount fares for tickets purchased beginning Sept. 8 would require a 14-day advance purchase, up from seven days. Those non-refundable tickets would increase in price by $10 each way over current rates, the airline said.

Northwest said it also would raise fares $10 to $20 each way on seven-day advance purchase tickets that are 50 percent refundable.

United would require MaxSaver tickets be purchased only 14 days in advance. But United's MaxSaver fares would continue to be non-refundable. The fare would be increased $10 each way.

The only other remaining discount fare offered by United would require a seven-day advance purchase, with a 50 percent cancellation penalty. That fare would cost $30 more each way than the new 14-day MaxSaver fare.

United's plan, while differing in its details, tracks similar moves made by American and Delta.

Both American and Delta are increasing the advance-purchase requirement on MaxSaver fares, the lowest fares available, to 30 days from the current seven-day period.

Under Atlanta-based Delta's plan, to go into effect Sept. 8, discount fares would go up by $10 to $20 each way, to compensate for a cut in the cancellation penalty to 50 percent from 100 percent for MaxSaver tickets purchased 30 days in advance.

There would be a 25 percent penalty for 14-day advance sales and a 10 percent penalty for seven-day advance sales.

ABA should admit mistakes with reds

At its recent convention in San Francisco, the American Bar Association passed up an opportunity to divest itself of a standing embarrassment. The ABA's decision to leave intact a 1985 declaration of cooperation with the Association of Soviet Lawyers lends undeserved respectability to an active accomplice in the Soviet regime's oppression. Worse, the ABA wants to continue a formal relationship with this group of lackeys.

Consider the psychological dynamics. After years of informal contact between American and Soviet lawyers, the Soviet group demanded a formal agreement, and the ABA, unreflectively hoping that such an agreement would enhance human rights in the Soviet Union, went along. Even though discernible progress on human rights is attributable to the de facto recognition of the Soviet lawyers' group, it can be tough to admit that you made a mistake and might even have been snookered.

The time is coming, however, for the ABA to protect its own integrity. The ASL is not, like the ABA, an independent group; it is a creature of the Soviet government, created to spread disinformation and propaganda. It doesn't press for changes in the Soviet system or insist that Soviet courts actually follow the procedures embodied in written Soviet law to safeguard the rights of defendants. Its members represent the state rather than their clients — particularly if the clients happen to be political dissidents.

The Soviet lawyers' group has been involved in some particularly vile propaganda campaigns. An ALS publication, "Anatomy of Lies," suggests that all Soviet dissidents are CIA spies and should be treated as traitors. ASL vice president Samuel Zins has published a scurrilous "White Book on Zionism" that some authorities characterize as the most sustained anti-Semitic attack since Goebbels.

Former Helsinki Watch members, members of outlawed peace groups, Jewish refuseniks, members of repressed religious groups, and Soviet dissidents have all expressed bafflement and indignation at the implied seal of approval which the ABA-ALS agreement puts on this instrument of state repression.

Balanced against this deplorable record is the faint hope that the formal tie will permit the American Bar Association to make inquiries about human rights from time to time. That faint hope is not worth the embarrassment. Unless spectacular progress is made through his unpromising channel, the ABA should sever the link at its next convention.

Democrats should try Plan B

Stephen Chapman

You want to know how desperate the Democrats are? This is how desperate: Gary Hart's former campaign director said his old boss was going to re-enter the race for president and some Democrats were glad. That's desperate. Hart denied it immediately or, rather, sort of more-or-less denied it, but what gives the proposition its faint ring of plausibility is that in the months since Hart dropped out of the race, no one has moved in to take his place as Top Gun. The candidates appear in groups, against each other, separately, and ... nothing happens. The field is still just that, a field.

It is amusing, in a horrifying way, to consider what might happen if Gary were to get back into the race and win the nomination. Who would he pick for vice president, Teddy Kennedy? Are the American people ready for a Sink-or-Swim ticket?

In any case, they won't get it. Hart has said he won't run and I believe him. Hey, would Gary lie? (Which reminds me, I really should follow him around some day. It might prove interesting.)

Still, the mere specter of Hart's re-emergence has convinced me that it's time for Plan B.

It's a plan for saving the Democratic Party from itself. I floated it a few months ago in full expectation that the Democrats would snap it up and everyone would start talking about it and I'd wind up on Nightline. Instead it sank without a trace. But don't feel guilty, Democrats, there's still plenty of time to act on it and I'm going to give you another chance.

Here is my plan:

Reverse the order in which the candidates for president and vice president are nominated at the Democratic National Convention, choosing the vice president first. Then allow the vice presidential candidate to pick his running mate, subject to the approval of the convention. That's the plan.

It is beautiful in its simplicity and it would ensure that the Democrats fielded their strongest team, election after election. You think not? Consider the evidence:

Almost every election the Democrats have a candidate or two who looks as though he'd make a great president but can't be nominated. He's too southern or he talks through his nose or he's from too small a state or he's got a squint. There's an army of them out there this year, not merely Sam Nunn but people like Tom Foley, Lee Hamilton and George Mitchell. The vice presidential candidate would undoubtedly be chosen from this pool. The fact that he's unelectable doesn't mean a lot since he's not heading the ticket. He would be chosen on merit.

In picking someone to run with, however, the vice presidential candidate would obviously want the man with the best chance to win. Who wants to go through the humiliation of running for vice president and losing too? Since the vice president was chosen in the first place because he was a man of respect and judgment, he would probably make a good, honest choice. Thus would emerge the strongest possible Democratic ticket.

Let's plug the process into the current campaign. Left to their own devices, it is entirely possible that the delegates to the Democratic convention would pick Sam Nunn as their vice presidential nominee. There's nobody in the party who has more respect and he has a special appeal to the south, which the Democrats must carry in order to win the election. He is not merely the ideal vice presidential candidate, he is essential.

Nunn would then pick Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey for his presidential running mate. (Don't ask me how I know this; I can't talk about it.) Bradley — smart, handsome and a sports hero to boot. There it is, the perfect Democratic ticket, balanced between liberal and conservative, domestic and foreign expertise, north and south.

What about minor things, like the fact that Bradley has voted for Contra aid and Nunn for Star Wars funding, votes that aren't too popular with die-hard Democrats? It's thinking like that that has gotten the Democrats in the mess they're in, waiting for Gary II.

Issues are highly overrated items in presidential campaigns. The most hotly debated issues — whether it be the status of Quemoy and Matsu or letting Red China into the UN or allowing prayer in the schools — hardly ever matter once a candidate is elected. Events take over and he does what he has to do.

Which doesn't mean that the president or what he believes isn't important; it's just that I would rather have a man of intelligence and character in the office, rather than a lightweight with whom I happen to agree on a lot of things about which neither of us can do much.

The way to get that man of character and intelligence is not the way the Democrats are going about it. It's time for Plan B.

TIP O'NEILL GETS ADVICE FROM "THE SMARTEST PUBLIC OFFICIAL [HE'S] EVER KNOWN".

Liberals trying to stall Bork?

Now you'd think that when a presidential appointment comes before the Congress for confirmation, interrogation before the appropriate congressional committee would develop the qualifications of the appointee — so that members of Congress might make reasoned judgment.

But the nomination of Bob Bork has not even been considered by the Senate Judiciary Committee and already that committee's chairman has made up his mind.

Sen. Joe Biden will vote no — and he is holding meetings with fellow Democrats to try to convince them to vote no.

And on his Judiciary Committee, Democrats outnumber Republicans eight to six.

Can these partisans keep Judge Bork off the Supreme Court merely because his preponderantly conservative philosophy does not agree with their preponderantly liberal philosophy? They can.

The Senate has rejected 11 Supreme Court nominees and blocked action on some 15 others during the past 200 years. And Democrats presently control the Senate 54 to 46.

Paul Harvey

The nomination need never get to the Senate floor.

Biden and his committee can conceivably stall confirmation into next year, when they would gamble that a Democrat in the White House would nominate a jurist more to their liking.

Republican administrations historically have been able to count on help from "Southern Democrats" but most "Southern Democrats" over the years have been displaced by Southern Republicans, some by liberal Democrats.

It is entirely logical and understandable that liberals in the Senate are trying to stall and, if they can, sidetrack the Bork appointment.

President Reagan has already turned our country back toward economic fundamentalism. If he can now leave us with a strict constructionist judiciary, he will have left an indelible stamp on our nation's history.

Liberals politicians are going to fight that. And it's going to be a far fiercer fight than greeted any of the President's earlier appointments — because this one "tips the balance."

And on such basic issues as affirmative action, racial quotas, abortion, religion, sex and homosex, capital punishment, libel and even one-man-one-vote.

In essence, Judge Bork believes the Constitution is to be "interpreted" by the High Court, not "rewritten," as has been recent practice.

President Reagan has brought marketplace economics back into balance. With the pivotal-Bork appointment he hopes to do the same thing for jurisprudence.

Reagan's mistake was 'crime of heart'

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER

Now that the Iran/Contra hearings are over, various Democrats are busy trying to put as much hay as possible in the barn. On television recently I heard Bob Beckel, the manager of Walter Mondale's 1984 campaign, declare happily that "A year ago Ronald Reagan was a candidate for Mount Rushmore. Now he'll be lucky to get back to the Hollywood Hills."

Well, things may not be quite that bad. Poor Beckel is obviously still smarting from his tiger's one-state sweep, and may be forgiven for exaggerating a bit.

But presumably President Reagan cannot escape all criticism in connection with the Iran/Contra affair, so the question arises: What, precisely, was his worst offense?

Since any reply I might offer would be suspect, let me call on New York Times columnist Anthony Lewis, a liberal whose sins assuredly don't include excessive solicitude for Ronald Reagan. Quoth Mr. Lewis:

"The most shocking aspect of the whole story remains the decision to sell arms to Iran in the hope of getting American hostages out of Lebanon. President Reagan had called on the world not to arm terrorist nations, in particular Iran, and not to make deals for hostages. His warmest supporters condemn the arms sale."

Actually, the president's warmest supporters (if I may speak for them) think that a lot of the criticism of the arms sales is a spectacular example of being wise after the event. Moreover, we think that the secret negotiations with potential friends in Iran and the ensuing arms sales began as a perfectly sound diplomatic initiative in that vital part of the world, and only gradually took on the aspect of a "trade" of arms for hostages. It seems likely that, to the bitter end, President Reagan believed that, far from dealing with the kidnapers, he was bringing heavy pressures to bear on them.

But this is Democrats' Day, so let's accept Tony Lewis's formulation and assume that Reagan, in direct violation of his own policy, deliberately sold arms to terrorists in return for the release of hostages. One can easily see the objections to this, but as a mistake, just how would you rate it, on a scale of 1 to 10?

It was clearly a crime of the heart. The president's mind was too much on the hostages, knowing (as you and I did not) that one of them, our Beirut CIA chief Bill Buckley, had been tortured and then killed. He shared, too, the anguish of their families. He saw, as the rest of us did, their pitiful pleas on national television, reproaching him for not doing more.

No doubt he ought to have been made of sterner stuff. But there is simply no denying that President Reagan is extremely sensitive to the human aspects of these grim events.

I have heard reliably that, on the night the U.S.S. Stark was attacked by an Iraqi jet in the Persian Gulf with a loss of many lives, the president was briefed in the White House Situation Room. The briefing officer was discussing certain technical aspects of the attack when the president interrupted.

"How many of our men were killed?" he wanted to know.

"About 38, sir," the briefing officer replied — and then resumed his technical account. The president was silent a while. Then:

"Where were they?"

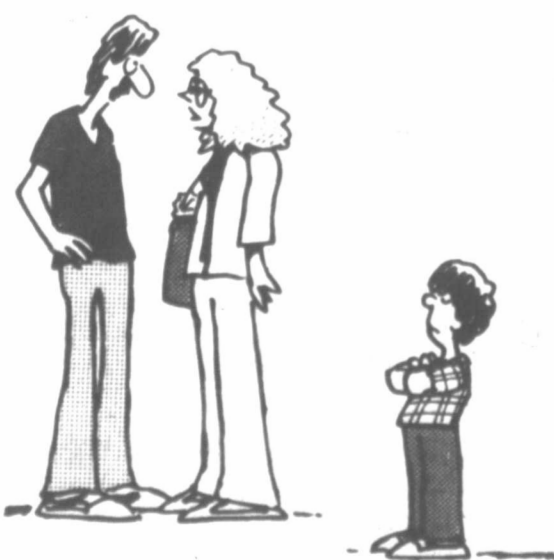

"In the forward sleeping quarters, sir," was the response — followed by more technical gobbledeygook. Another period of silence from the president. Then:

"Did they die quickly?"

The briefing officer affirmed that fortunately they had, and got back to his discussion of radar systems, etc.

Too much stress on the human element — that must count as a weakness in any president. But if Ronald Reagan has to have a weakness, I'm kind of glad it's that one.

Employers gripe about bureaucracy of new law

By The Associated Press

A sweeping law designed to curb illegal immigration requires the nation's 7 million employers today to begin documenting the status of employees with a special form, and many business people griped about the new responsibility.

Under the Immigration Reform and Control Act, which makes it a crime to knowingly employ illegal aliens, employers generally must have the new I-9 forms completed for all workers who were hired since the measure was signed into law Nov. 6.

The forms must be signed by employers after they review supporting documents that attest to the employee's eligibility to work, such as birth certificates, passports and permanent-residence cards.

A nationwide sample of businesses checked by The Associated Press indicated a high degree of compliance with the Sept. 1 enforcement deadline, with no evidence of mass confusion or widespread dismissals that some critics had predicted.

Many employers expressed irritation, however, with the Immigration and Naturalization Service because of the additional paperwork, while others said they have been forced to fire some workers who couldn't provide supporting documents with the forms.

"We're having to let people go because they can't comply with the letter of the law," said David Staton, owner of the Staton Hills winery outside Yakima, Wash. "You're continually having to turn over people who cannot come up with documentation and who for every reasonable appearance are Americans."

In California, where half the nation's estimated 6 million illegal aliens are believed to reside, farmers criticized the INS for subjecting them to today's deadline. Growers, contending another provision of the law defers sanctions against them until December 1988, threatened legal action if the agency tries to fine them.

At the Los Angeles-based Merchants & Manufacturers Association, which represents 3,300 California companies, spokesman Louis Custrini said many employers fear they won't be able to find replacements for undocumented workers.

Many employers said their main objection to the new law was the bureaucratic burden of the I-9, a one-page form that must be made available to agency inspectors.

"It is a lot of extra paperwork we're not too pleased with, but it's something we're able to handle," said John Pennington, spokesman for Genesco Inc., a Nashville, Tenn.-based maker and marketer of footwear and men's apparel with 7,000 employees.

Others complained about the difficulty in getting employees to complete the form, partly because of misconceptions that only foreign-born workers are subject to the law. At the Kelly Services Inc. temporary employment agency office in El Paso, Texas, branch manager Rosa Navarro said it took two months to document the 600 people hired after the law was signed.

At Michael's Restaurant in Des Moines, Iowa, owner John Huss said, "I have some of my own children working here and they say 'Dad, you know I was born here. Why do I have to do this?'"

Fines for failure to have the forms on file after today can range from $100 to $1,000. But in Washington, agency spokesman Verne Jarvis said it was unlikely that inspectors would cite errant employers for paperwork violations unless it was clear they were hiring illegal aliens.

Nevertheless, civil-rights groups have sharply rebuked the agency for what they call a failure to adequately explain the law, particularly its amnesty provisions for illegal aliens who have worked in the country since 1980.

"The government has failed miserably to publicize anything except in vague terms the sanctions against employers," said Lucas Guttentag of the Immigration and Aliens' Rights Task Force, a part of the American Civil Liberties Union.

ACLU says Bork radical

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union, calling the nomination of Robert H. Bork to the Supreme Court a threat to individual rights, is breaking with its tradition and urging the Senate to defeat the appointment.

Bork is not qualified to be a justice because "he believes the role of the court is to defer to local majorities in almost all situations," the ACLU said Monday.

The only previous time the ACLU took a position on a Supreme Court nominee was when it opposed President Nixon's appointment of William H. Rehnquist in 1971. The ACLU did not take a position last year when the Senate confirmed Rehnquist as President Reagan's nominee to be chief justice.

"Judge Bork is, in fact, more radical than conservative," ACLU President Norman Dorsen told a news conference. "He is certainly well outside the mainstream of conservative judicial philosophy."

Ira Glasser, the organization's executive director, said Bork is "unfit" to serve on the high court because of his views urging limited constitutional protection for personal privacy, free speech and separation of church and state.

"He believes the highest right in the society is for the majority to impose its moral views on the minority," Glasser said. "Had he been around in the 18th century, he would have been against adding the Bill of Rights to the Constitution."

The ACLU also challenged the White House portrayal of Bork, a federal appeals court judge in Washington, as a "strict constructionist" of the Constitution in the mainstream of American conservatism.

Dorsen said the ACLU board of directors voted, 47-16, last weekend to take a position on the Bork nomination.

Having voted to change the policy, the board then voted, 61-3, to oppose confirmation of Bork.

The fact that Bork, by replacing the more moderate Powell, may prove a pivotal vote on the court is not the most important consideration, Dorsen said.

"We're looking for the long run," he said.

Talks resume with focus on Ford

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — The United Auto Workers union's choice of Ford Motor Co. as its 1987 strike target means contract negotiations will focus on the world's most profitable automaker and not on the larger General Motors Corp.

The union selected Ford on Monday as its best candidate for a first agreement, in a process called pattern bargaining. After settling with the target, the union tries to force the agreement on the remaining automaker.

Talks with Ford, which has 104,000 workers, and GM, which has 335,000 workers, were scheduled to resume today, less than two weeks before contracts expire at midnight Sept. 14. Chrysler Corp. is not part of this round of negotiations because its contract doesn't expire until next year.

Negotiators for both sides at GM, the nation's largest automaker, will use the time until the union settles with Ford to solve some of their own issues, said UAW spokesman Peter Laarman.

"It's not intense, the way you are when you run against the clock, but intense enough. They've got work to do. They explore avenues, ideas," Laarman said.

GM chief bargainer Alfred Warren said, "There are sufficient differences between GM and its domestic competitors that demand a separate agreement specifically tailored to GM."

UAW President Owen Bieber, whose choice of Ford was approved by union leaders Monday, said, "Our first objective is to establish a settlement pattern that is good for the workers and good for the industry by making stable domestic employment a part of how these companies do business."

Ford chief negotiator Stanley Surma said the company had bargained under the assumption it would be the target. He said Ford wanted a settlement that addresses the union's top priority of job security while ensuring that Ford's quality and competitive position improve.

Auto analysts had said Ford was the most likely target because it is more profitable than GM. Ford earned $3.3 billion to GM's $2.95 billion in 1986, and in the first half of 1987, Ford earned $2.99 billion to GM's $1.9 billion.

Also, because Ford trimmed its work force when it was losing money in the early 1980s, the union believes it would be easier for the No. 2 automaker to accept a contract that gives workers greater job security.

Ford makes 50 percent of its own parts, compared with 70 percent at GM.

U.S. cautious about Soviet move to allow on-site nuclear inspections

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surprised U.S. officials are reacting cautiously to an apparent Soviet move that would allow the unprecedented detonation of a U.S. bomb on Soviet soil as one means of implementing a verifiable nuclear test-ban treaty.

Col. Gen. Nikolai Chervov, an official of the Soviet defense ministry, said Monday in Washington that if an American weapon were exploded in the Soviet Union in order to fine tune U.S. monitoring devices, the Kremlin would expect to be permitted to explode a Soviet nuclear device at the U.S. test site in Nevada.

Chervov, in a luncheon speech on Capitol Hill, said Soviet willingness to accommodate U.S. efforts to verify a test-ban treaty also might include adoption of the U.S. proposal to implant the Cortex monitoring system at Soviet nuclear test ranges.

The Cortex system includes a monitoring device placed in a hole bored near the site of an atomic explosion to gauge the size and nature of the blast.

Whitehead wants ban on surrogate mothers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mary Beth Whitehead, whose unsuccessful fight to keep "Baby M" made her the nation's best-known surrogate mother, is joining in a new coalition to stop the paying of women to have other people's children.

Mrs. Whitehead and other surrogate mothers in the coalition on Monday denounced surrogate-parenting contracts as a form of reproductive "slavery," and called for a federal ban on the practice.

The women, joined by feminists and a public-policy group, announced the coalition to warn of the legal and emotional dangers of bearing children on behalf of others.

The group, being organized by the non-profit Foundation on Economic Trends, will try to keep women from entering surrogate-parenting contracts and help current surrogate mothers cope with the birth of their children, organizers said.

Foundation president Jeremy Rifkin said the group would also try to unite "several hundreds" of surrogates into a national support network and would press Congress for a law banning all commercial surrogate-parenting contracts.

Such a contract, upheld earlier this year by a New Jersey judge, cost Mrs. Whitehead her rights to the infant girl named "Baby M" by the court.

But Mrs. Whitehead, who sees her baby for an hour a week pending an appeal of her case, argued for the rights of biological motherhood.

"I don't want equal rights. A woman has more rights to a child. That's the way it is," said the 39-year-old Brick Township, N.J., resident.

"The mother is the heart," she added. New Jersey Superior Court Judge Harvey Sorkow, in a March decision said to be the first of its kind, barred Mrs. Whitehead from seeing her child.

Jewish leaders meet with Pope on Waldheim, Israel

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (AP)—Jewish leaders began talks today with John Paul II to mend relations following a papal audience with Kurt Waldheim that threatened to disrupt the pontiff's visit to the United States next week.

The closed-door talks began at noon local time (6 a.m. EDT) at the pope's summer residence in this town in the Alban Hills 15 miles south of Rome.

Delegation members said they planned to discuss the audience with Waldheim, the Vatican's lack of diplomatic relations with Israel, anti-Semitism and Roman Catholic Church statements on the Holocaust and Jews.

"It's a watershed in our relationships, a historic and unique event," another delegate, Rabbi Gilbert Klaperman, president of the Synagogue Council of America, said last week.

The delegates, who prepared for today's meeting by holding day-long talks Monday with Vatican officials, dismissed the suggestion they were seeking an apology from the pontiff for the audience with Waldheim.

"One does not ask for an apology from someone of the stature of the pope," delegation spokesman Gunther Lawrence of the Synagogue Council of America told reporters.

Waldheim, the president of Austria and a former U.N. secretary-general, has been accused of aiding in the deportation of Jews and Yugoslav and Greek partisans to Nazi concentration camps while he was serving as a lieutenant in the German army in the Balkans in World War II. He has denied the allegations.

The meeting with John Paul was requested by American Jewish groups to "clear the air" following the June 25 audience with Waldheim.

Jewish groups had threatened to boycott a papal ceremony in Miami on Sept. 11 at the start of the pope's 10-day U.S. tour as a protest against the Waldheim meeting. Rabbi Mordecai Waxman, head of the delegation, said most Jewish leaders are now expected to attend the ceremony.

He described as "very rewarding" Monday's talks with Dutch Cardinal Johannes Willebrands, president of the Vatican's Commission for Religious Relations with the Jews.

"All positions have been stated," said Waxman, chairman of the International Jewish Committee on Interreligious Consultations. "Now we'll see how they're resolved."

No details of Monday's talks were disclosed. The Jewish delegates said relations with the Vatican had improved following the pope's statement in August praising the Jewish people and saying others cannot be indifferent to the "terrifying experience of the extermination suffered by the Jews" in the Holocaust.

Rabbi Marc H. Tanenbaum, a member of the delegation, said he hoped the talks would "ensure no more surprises like Waldheim, at least without not having some advance awareness of what is happening and why."

But he said the meeting with the pope was only a first step.

"I think it's unrealistic to expect that one meeting... is magically going to transform the situation," Tanenbaum, director of international relations for the American Jewish Committee, said.

He said the delegation would argue that the Vatican, which has diplomatic relations with 116 countries, should establish ties with Israel if it wants to play a peacemaking role in the Middle East.

The Vatican has never explained its reasons for not establishing relations with the Jewish state. But major obstacles cited by Vatican officials are unsettled borders and the status of Jerusalem. It also says the Palestinians are entitled to a homeland.

Military cadet protest continues

MANILA, Philippines (AP)—Cadets at the Philippines' premier military academy today boycotted meals and classes for a second day in support of last week's bloody coup attempt. The rebellion's six ringleaders remained at large.

The protest at the Philippine Military Academy, which has 600 cadets, began Sunday night when students issued a manifesto of support for the failed mutiny against President Corazon Aquino.

The document protested the government's use of artillery, helicopter gunships and bombers to quell Friday's coup attempt and criticized the president for not authorizing the use of similar firepower against communist rebels.

Commodore Rogelio Dayan, the academy's superintendent, said two junior officers who led the protesting cadets had been arrested and were under investigation. He did not provide details.

On Monday, the armed forces' deputy chief, Maj. Gen. Eduardo Ermita, rushed to the academy in Baguio City, 130 miles north of Manila, to try to talk the cadets out of the protest.

Ermita said in an interview on the government's television station today that the students were victims of the coup leaders' "disinformation" campaign, but had ended their protest after being given "the right information."

Inmates surrender after rebellion

ROME (AP)—Rebel inmates who held 28 hostages for a week in a prison on Elba Island surrendered today, Italian news media reported.

The Italian news agency ANSA said the six rebel inmates released their hostages and gave up to authorities at 11:35 a.m. local time (5:35 a.m. EDT).

The state-run RAI-TV, in a report from Elba, said the hostages were all in good condition.

The reported release came after lawyers for the rebels met with them in the presence of a representative of the human rights group Amnesty International, officials reported.

Italian news reports said the inmates were demanding various guarantees but that the government had insisted that the first priority was the release of the hostages.

Planning, smart shopping save on school wardrobe

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

With the beginning of the school year, many families are out shopping for clothing for their preschool and school-age children. Buying a child's entire school wardrobe before the school year starts may mean money gets spent on clothes that will soon be outgrown or never worn.

A few new things will help the youngster get ready for the school year. But when children grow rapidly, clothes bought too far in advance may be outgrown before the child gets much wear out of them.

Planning is the basis for any good wardrobe. Keep in mind that children tend to like the primary colors—yellow, red and blue. They like decorative details and clothes like their playmates.

If you are buying for your own child, involve your child in deciding what has to be replaced and planning what is needed to fill in. Have your child try on the garments in his or her wardrobe to see which items still fit.

Evaluate the condition of those things that can still be worn. Consider how fast your child is growing, how hard he or she is on clothing and how needs and activities are changing.

In planning a child's wardrobe, you need to answer four questions:

- ✓ How much do you have to spend?
- ✓ What do you need to buy or make?
- ✓ How will you buy?
- ✓ Where will you shop?

Your clothing budget will be a consideration. Try to set aside a certain amount each month for clothing. Decide how much of this is needed for each family member.

Homemakers' News

Donna Brauchi

Some months you may need to spend all of your clothes budget. Other months you may want to save part or all of it for a more expensive item, like a coat, which you will buy later. When you know how much you have to spend, you'll be better able to resist impulse buying.

Plan to spend the most money on clothing that is worn frequently, receives the hardest wear and is laundered often. Buy separates that can be mixed and matched with items already in the wardrobe.

Buy only what is needed at one time for children who are growing rapidly. Choose seasonless clothes that can be worn more than one season or as long as they fit and look good. Use layering to combine tops, sweaters and jackets for versatility.

Consider buying clothing with cash, especially if it helps keep you from overspending. Other ways to acquire clothes include using credit, lay-away, swapping or bartering.

Places to buy clothes range from very exclusive shops to outlet stores, thrift shops, yard sales and used clothing stores. A careful shopper may find almost new clothes at a used clothing store.

Buy during sales whenever possible, but purchase only sale items really needed. Watch newspapers for sale ads from department stores to get the best value for your clothing dollar. Take a list of the clothing each child needs with you.

Brand names on clothing usually mean quality fabrics and workmanship, and they may cost more than non-brand name garments. Smart shoppers will compare prices and quality among both types of merchandise. This may mean going to several stores, reading guarantees and labels, and looking for clothing made in the United States.

Consumers often pay more attention to color, fabric and style than to construction. Children's clothes must be able to take hard wear and frequent washings.

Check workmanship and look for the following features:

- ✓ Seams that are flat, smooth, firmly stitched and finished to prevent raveling, and interfacing for extra support where buttons are placed.
- ✓ Reinforced stitching or patches at points of strain, such as pockets, knees, elbows, plackets and crotch, firmly attached trims and appliques.
- ✓ Buttonholes that are firm, strong and closely stitched.
- ✓ Buttons and fasteners that are firmly attached and easy to button and unbutton.
- ✓ Flat-felled seams in play clothes, jeans and pajamas.
- ✓ Hems that are wide, even and well-sewn.
- ✓ Matching plaids, stripes and other designs wherever possible.
- ✓ An elasticized waist with elastic encased in fabric and triple-stitched.

Past entanglement prevents couple from tying the knot

DEAR ABBY: Re the letter signed "Brokenhearted in N.J.," who called her wedding off, then expected her fiancé ("Joe") to reimburse her parents for the "thousands of dollars" they had spent on wedding plans. "Brokenhearted" wrote: "When Joe proposed to me, he revealed that he had lived with a girl before I knew him. She became pregnant, he didn't want to marry her, she didn't want an abortion, so she had the baby. Joe convinced me and my parents that he had no obligation whatsoever to this woman or the child—that his attorney had settled it with her, and her attorney. Two weeks before our wedding date, Joe told me that he had been suddenly served with papers for child support, had decided to support the child and was asking for visitation rights. Because our lives would be drastically changed, and because I think Joe lied to me about his obligation to the child, I called the wedding off."

Abby, I am very disappointed that you encouraged this woman's pompous, spoiled-brat actions. Joe has a parental obligation to the child he helped to bring into this world, whether intentional or not, and he should help support it and be an active father presence in this child's life.

I work in a law office, and see people change their minds, deals fall apart and agreements unravel daily.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

manly course to take, but his financial and emotional obligations to this woman were not the issue. Joe had presented himself as a man free from all past entanglements; then after she agreed to marry him, she learned that she would not be getting the kind of marriage she expected. (Some women prefer a husband who comes with no baggage—just as some men prefer a wife without an ex-husband and children.)

Joe's "Brokenhearted" behaved like a pompous, spoiled brat to declare that since Joe changed the rules, she didn't want to marry him. I disagree.

I think she is entitled to change her mind since he changed the rules. And let us not overlook the fact that she thinks Joe lied to her from the beginning. Solid marriages are not built on foundations of misrepresentation, anger and mistrust.

I stick with my original answer: "Rejoice; you could have married this man. I think you and your parents got off cheap."

Sewing for the home still popular

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

With two-career families the norm and talk of contemporary life, you might think old-fashioned pursuits such as sewing for the home have become a thing of the past.

Not so, says David Jordan, editor of Better Homes & Gardens magazine. One of the most popular issues of the magazine each year tells readers how to make 100 items for under $100.

In its January 1988 issue, the magazine will show four sets of patterns for home decorations that readers can sew themselves. Projects include balloon and Roman shades, valances, pillows and children's bedcoverings. The patterns were developed with Butterick Co. They will be marketed via mail order through the magazine and in the usual pattern outlets as well.

"Sewing for decorating is normal for our readers, but we haven't had an efficient system before to provide quality patterns to our readers," said Jordan, explaining his motivation for participating in the program.

In one respect, inroads on the family's time have caused a change. Nowadays you don't necessarily have to know how to sew in order to be a customer for a decorating pattern and yard goods.

"There is a more adventuresome, less inhibited consumer today with a do-it-yourself mentality. Some sew and some don't," said Herman Phynes, marketing director for Vogue-Butterick Patterns. "One of our most popular home decorating patterns is wrap-and-tie slipcovers which require no sewing." The directions in the pattern package tell how to calculate yardage, cut the fabric and wrap, pin, tuck and staple it to achieve the desired effect.

Because of the time and money it saves over custom treatments and the opportunity for creativity, sewing for the home is outpacing sewing wearing apparel in terms of growth, according to some authorities. For example, the home decorating volume in the "Singer Sewing Reference Library" series has become the most popular volume, according to Al Anderson, marketing director.

Sewing for crafts and home decorating are growth areas across the country, according to Dean Ammans, divisional merchandise manager for Cloth World, a 300-store national chain which recently began enlarging these sections in its stores.

"It's easier for beginners to produce something attractive when making decorating items such as shades and simple curtains than when making garments which today can be purchased as inexpensively as they can be made at home," explained Anderson.

Fuller Brush Co. to open stores, sell catalogs

DALLAS (AP)—When the Fuller Brush man comes knocking, it's less and less likely that a housewife is at home.

So the company that built its reputation door to door will open its first two stores in the Dallas area this fall.

"We found that a high percentage of folks would buy Fuller Brush products if they could get them," corporate spokeswoman Nancy Young said in a telephone interview from Fuller Brush headquarters in Winston-Salem, N.C. "But the problem was giving them the opportunity."

The company, a division of Sara Lee Corp., undertook market research in 1985 to develop new sales strategies.

That led the company to test a catalog, and its success led to a regional mailing into 16 South-eastern states in 1986, Young said. Fuller Brush plans to mail 1.5 million catalogs four times a year nationwide, she said.

In September, the company plans to open a 2,600-square-foot store in a shopping mall in suburban Mesquite, followed by one in a northwest Dallas shopping center in October.

"The important thing to remember is that it's a test," Young said. "We'll look at what product mix works and how receptive the market is."

The growing number of working women is reflected in the declining number of Fuller Brush men. Women now make up four-fifths of the company's door-to-door sales force, Young said.

The company was founded in 1906 by Alfred C. Fuller in his sister's basement in Boston. He offered free replacements for brushes that wore out.

That guarantee still stands, Young said, and the Fuller Brush direct sales force will continue as the chief distribution network.

"Direct selling is the backbone of the company," she said. "Whatever we have has to mesh with the rest of the company."

Bobbie Foster of Mesquite, who has sold Fuller products for 18 months, believes the new store will generate business for sales representatives.

"It will put the Fuller Brush name out before a lot of people," Foster said. "They haven't known we're still around."

She said a division manager will distribute store customers' cards to sales representatives who can follow up with at-home orders.

The company makes its brushes in Great Bend, Kan., along with more than 2,000 other items, including cotton mops and dusters, household and industrial brooms and cleaners, personal-care products, gardening products, stainless steel sponges, and even 2 million plastic eggs a week for L'eggs pantyhose.

Fuller brushes, some of which are specially designed to clean jet engines, range in price from $1 to $5,000.

Though Sara Lee won't break out figures on sales, Young said Fuller Brush sales were up 7 percent in 1986.

Cardinals hold off Bears

By JOE MOOSHL
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Somehow, some way, the Cardinals always get those Bears. St. Louis, benefiting from three turnovers and a "Hail Mary" pass that landed in the hands of Don Holmes, defeated the Chicago Bears 20-16 Monday night in an exhibition game.

"We've got a lot of work to do before we meet the world champions," said Bears Coach Mike Ditka, whose team won Super Bowl XX and will open the regular season Sept. 14 against the New York Giants, winners of Super Bowl XXI.

In his six years with Chicago, Ditka's record stands at 0-6 in exhibition play and 0-2 in regular season competition against the Cardinals.

A couple of fumbles by Matt Suhey kept the Bears from scoring nothing more than a safety in the first half.

Neil Lomax' 13-yard touchdown pass to Troy Johnson in the first quarter gave the Cardinals a 6-0 lead. Late in the first half, quarterback Mike Tomczak drove the Bears to a first down on the Cardinal one-yard line.

But Suhey fumbled on the next play and the Cardinals, unable to move, gave up a safety in order to get a free kick.

The Bears came right back and attempted a 36-yard field goal, but it was blocked by Lenny Smith and recovered by Niko Noga on the Chicago 38 with three seconds left in the half.

Instead of going for a field goal, the Cardinals tried a "Hail Mary" pass by Lomax. The ball bounced off Bear defenders Reggie Phillips and Otis Wilson and into the hands of Holmes for a touchdown.

"The defensive back bobbled the ball right into my hands," said Holmes, who also caught a 31-yard touchdown pass from Cliff Stoudt on St. Louis' first series of the second half.

The outcome left both teams with 2-1 exhibition records with one game left before the start of the regular season.

Lomax completed 12 of 21 passes for 128 yards and two touchdowns. He now has completed 31 of 48 passes for 332 yards and five touchdowns in preseason play.

Tomczak played the first half for the Bears and completed 15 of 23 passes for 132 yards, but couldn't get the Bears into the end zone.

Doug Flutie took over in the second half and directed the Bears to their two touchdowns on drives of 68 and 69 yards. Tom Sanders went 13 yards for one score and Flutie passed five yards to Riley Walton for the other touchdown.

Flutie completed 5 of 10 passes for 75 yards and rushed for 18 yards on two scrambles.

Carter available for supplemental draft

By RUSTY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — All-America wide receiver Cris Carter will be available for an NFL supplemental draft just as he was going to be last week.

Carter declared himself available Monday after Ohio State officials declined to appeal to the NCAA for restoration of his eligibility. Carter was suspended six weeks ago for his dealings with an agent.

Carter, the leading career receiver at Ohio State in just three seasons, said he was disappointed at the decision by university officials.

"I wanted to play football for OSU this fall, and I thought I was going to get the chance," Carter said in a statement through Boston attorney Mitchell Frankel, who said he will handle Carter's contract negotiations with the NFL. "I still don't understand why they didn't appeal."

"Now I've got to go back and think about the NFL supplemental draft."

The NFL has scheduled a supplemental draft for Friday.

Carter and Pittsburgh running back Charles Gladman were to be made available in a supplemental draft last week but the NFL postponed the draft and encouraged the players to attempt to rejoin their college teams.

The NFL's decision came after the NCAA reinstated former Pittsburgh defensive back Teryl Austin, who was suspended after allegations he took money from an agent. The NCAA granted the reinstatement on condition that Austin repay any money he may have received, sever ties to the agents and sit out the season's first two games.

Carter was declared ineligible July 15 after admitting he accepted a $5,000 interest-free loan and $1,800 in monthly payments from agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom.

In order for Carter to regain his eligibility, the first step would have been for Ohio State to appeal to the NCAA on his behalf.

Ohio State President Edward H. Jennings, Athletic Director Rick Bay and head football Coach Earle Bruce met early Monday morning to discuss a possible appeal.

Bay said "none of us, including me despite my strong viewpoint in this situation, see this as a black-and-white issue. There is a gray area in there."

Jennings, in a statement read at a news conference after the meeting, said, "(The decision) is consistent with Ohio State's tradition of upholding stricter standards than those provided for by the NCAA or even the Big Ten."

Jennings added that the university would continue to grant Carter financial aid to complete his degree requirements in communications.

Bruce, who did not attend the news conference, had said last week he was willing to forgive Carter for his mistakes and hoped the university would appeal.

Reached at the team training table after the decision was announced, Bruce said, "I promised myself I wouldn't talk about Cris Carter. It's over and it's finished. We have got to take care of the people who are here now."

Carter's attorney, Bob Berry of Boston, said Carter had no plans to sue Ohio State.

Women's Open billed as battle for No. 1

By RICK WARNER
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In women's tennis, the 1987 U.S. Open is being billed as the battle for No. 1.

A possible showdown between top-seeded Steffi Graf and second-seeded Martina Navratilova could determine who finishes the year as the world's No. 1 female player.

Last month, the 18-year-old West German replaced Navratilova at the top of the computer rankings. Navratilova had been No. 1 for 4 1/2 of the last five years.

Graf has won 50 of 51 matches this year, losing only to Navratilova in the Wimbledon final. But the Open, which was to start today at the National Tennis Center, will be her first tournament since gaining the top spot.

"It will be interesting to see how she reacts to the pressure," fifth-seeded Pam Shriver said Monday. "It could be a burden, but I think Steffi has the game and the toughness to handle it."

Graf says her No. 1 ranking and top seeding will actually make her more relaxed.

"Everyone was saying, 'If she can win the U.S. Open, she can be No. 1,'" Graf said. "Coming in as number one takes some of the pressure off."

Navratilova, who was to play Kate Gompert of Rancho Mirage, Calif., in a first-round match today, said she is determined to regain the top ranking.

"I'm just calling it a temporary setback," she said. "I don't think the rankings will stay that way forever. I know how the computer works. I need to play Steffi and I need to beat her."

Almost forgotten in the hoopla over No. 1 is six-time Open champion Chris Evert, the third seed in the tournament. Evert has won at least one Grand Slam event for the past 13 years, but the streak will end if she doesn't win the Open.

In men's competition, Ivan Lendl was to open his bid for a third consecutive Open title today against South African Barry Moor.

Lendl, who has been an Open finalist five years in a row, is the top seed. Stefan Edberg is No. 2, followed by Mats Wilander, Boris Becker, Miloslav Mecir, Jimmy Connors, Pat Cash and John McEnroe.

Becker and McEnroe were also scheduled to play opening-round matches today.

Becker's opponent was Tim Wilkison, the only American man to reach the quarterfinals at last year's Open. Becker is a two-time Wimbledon champion, but has never reached an Open final.

McEnroe, who was upset by Paul Annacone in the first round last year, was to face Matt Anger of Pleasanton, Calif.

Noonan in Cowboys' camp

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys' No. 1 draft pick is finally in uniform after missing all of training camp in Thousand Oaks, Calif.

Danny Noonan, who held out longer than any other Cowboys rookie, arrived Monday in Dallas after ending his 41-day delay.

"I'm glad it's over and I'm ready to go," Noonan said. "The Cowboys are tough to deal with when it comes to money. Other guys, Mike Sherrard and Randy White, have held out for 30 days or so and they eventually got what they wanted. It worked for me, too."

Noonan, an All-America nose-guard at Nebraska last season, got what he wanted when he agreed to a contract that will pay him approximately $1.6 million total for four one-year contracts.

"I don't feel like a millionaire. But I think I might go out and buy my first car now," said Noonan. "My wife (Penny) and I have a place picked out in Dallas, just a half a block away from the Cowboys' offices. She's as ready to get to Dallas as I am."

Noonan's agent, Tom Condon of Kansas City, reached the agreement with Joe Bailey, Cowboys vice president of administration, after the two sides traded barbs throughout the negotiations.

The former Lincoln Northeast all-stater probably won't be a starter when the season begins Sept. 13, but he will probably play in the Cowboys' final exhibition game Saturday with Houston, Coach Tom Landry said.

The holdout was centered around the amount of money Noonan would be paid, plus arguments about a fifth-year option and other payments, the former Cornhusker said.

Landry said that he was pleased to finally get Noonan with the team.

"He's missed a lot and he's way behind, but we will be able to use him in pass-rush situations early in the season until he learns our defense," he said.

Noonan said that should not be a problem.

"I understand the basics of their defenses, but learning the schemes for certain situations will take some time," Noonan said.

An unidentified woman clutches family members Monday as they pause by a chain-link fence surrounding a home under construction in Cerritos, Calif., at the site of last year's fatal crash involving an Aeromexico jetliner and a small plane. Eight-two people, including the woman's daughter, perished as a result of the midair collision that occurred over the Los Angeles suburb.

Popemobile parade will be different

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — New Orleans, where parades are a way of life, has to throw out all of its ideas of what a parade is like when the pope comes to town. To start with, of course, it's decorous: No drunk, masked riders reaching over the edges of floats to trade artificial roses or pink panties for kisses. No blaring bands and strutting baton twirlers. No Shriners in miniature cars. The solitary Popemobile will proceed in state down the center of Canal Street, John Paul II greeting the crowd from within its 9½-foot-tall bullet-proof glass body. And that will be it.

No throws, even. "This may be a first," said Sgt. Ray Holman, who is in charge of police planning for special events such as Mardi Gras and the pope's visit. As long as anyone can recall and probably well before that, people have been throwing gew-gaws off of parade floats. Cheap beads and big aluminum coins called doubloons are standard, cabbages and potatoes are added on St. Patrick's Day and very cheap toys at Christmas. Even though nobody will have reason to yell, "Throw me something, Mister," police expect 350,000 to 400,000 people to show up along the three-mile route between the French Quarter and the Superdome. Holman said that's the size of a standard crowd for big Carnival parades like Bacchus or Endymion, on a route one-half to one-third as long as theirs. "That's going to be packed in pretty tight," said Holman. The papal sardinification has prompted an extraordinary decision: parents won't be allowed to set their children up on ladder-mounted seats. New Orleans carpenters make a minor sideline out of those seats, which let even the smallest fry get a good view from the back of a parade crowd. "Many people watching the parade will be elderly. A child falling off the ladder could well cause severe injury," Holman said. Something else won't be there: the advance guard of vendors pushing built-up shopping carts bedecked with popcorn, cotton candy, fancy vinyl balloons, fright wigs and other cheap toys. "No street vending. Whether or not they are selling papal items or whatever," Holman said. "That will be strictly enforced." Most of these regulations are dictated by the security this country gives a visiting head of state. But people who feel it's all too much can think on this: New Orleans is the only city approved for such a parade, according to Archbishop Philip M. Hannan. He said it won that distinction because its flat, wide avenues provide easy Popemobile protection. But only the pontiff's car and few other select vehicles will find easy driving Sept. 12. If you thought it was hard getting through traffic to see a Mardi Gras parade, you haven't seen hard yet. Holman recommends taking the bus. The Popemobile isn't scheduled to leave Jackson Square until 9 a.m., but the parade route will be closed to traffic at 6 a.m. "If you drive an automobile to come to the parade, be prepared to walk a long way and be prepared to wait a lot," said Holman.

College more important today, but too expensive, poll says

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans say a college education is more important than ever, but they question whether colleges give good value for the dollar, according to a Media General-Associated Press poll. A college education is too expensive, given the quality of education provided, according to a majority in the poll. Money, and not ability, is often the major variable in choosing where a child goes to school. About seven in 10 of the 1,348 adult Americans in the nationwide telephone poll said a college education is more important today than it was in the past. Nevertheless, nearly six in 10 respondents said tuition at most private colleges was too high for the quality of education provided, while 51 percent felt the same way about public school tuitions. Only 21 percent thought private schools charged the right amount; 32 percent thought public school tuition was a fair value. Six in 10 respondents said they would be disappointed if their children did not want to go to college. But most — 63 percent — said financial considerations would limit where their children could go to school. About one-third of respondents said they could send their children to any school regardless of the cost. Interestingly, high school dropouts in the poll were slightly more likely than college graduates to say college was more important today than it was in the past. Also, those respondents who are taking courses at public colleges or universities were more likely than others to say that public schools offered a good value for the dollar. But those taking courses at private schools were slightly more likely than others to say tuition was too high for the quality of education provided at those schools. Respondents in the Media General-Associated Press poll included a random, scientific sampling of 1,348 adults across the country June 1-10. As with all sample surveys, the results of Media General-AP telephone polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variation in the sample. For a poll based on about 1,300 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of chance variations in the sample. That is, if one could have questioned all Americans with telephones, there is only 1 chance in 20 that the findings would vary from the results of polls such as this one by more than 3 percentage points. Of course, the results could differ from other polls for several reasons. Differences in exact wording of questions, in the timing of interviews and in the interview methods could also cause variations.
