Nation pays honor to law of the land

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The Constitution, "the single greatest work of government the world has ever seen," is 200 years old today and President Reagan helped its hometown kick off a bell-ringing, flag-waving, star-spangled bicentennial birthday party.

In a speech at Independence Hall, Reagan acclaimed the framing of the Constitution 200 years ago as a milestone "that would profoundly and forever alter not just these United States but the world."

"In a very real sense, it was then—in 1787—that the revolution truly began," he said. "For it was with the writing of our Constitution... that the hopes and dreams of the revolutionists could become a living, enduring reality."

As the country entered its third century, Reagan said the Constitution's continuing goal is "the preservation and extension of the sacred fire of human liberty. That is America's solemn duty."

The day of superlatives began on a solemn note as Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Gov. Robert P. Casey helped lay a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Revolutionary War Hero near Independence Hall.

"This ground is as hallowed as those graves at Arlington National Cemetery," Weinberger said.

The ceremonies continued with the beginning of a $3.5 million, six-hour parade featuring 30 floats, more than 20,000 marchers and 1,500 white doves fluttering skyward. About 750,000 spectators were expected.

The procession began with a colonial artillery blast, a flourish of horns and a drum roll. A light drizzle fell shortly after the 9 a.m. march began.

Bands ranged from colonial-style fifes and drums to Dixieland, from bagpipes to kazoos. Marchers included 39 descendants of the signers of the Constitution, skateboarders from California, two 1,700-pound oxen and two teams of certified public accountants in blue business suits twirling briefcases.

Students celebrate Constitution Week

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

Students decked out in red, white and blue sang patriotic songs and signed Stephen F. Austin School's official "constitution" Wednesday before joining the rest of the nation in reciting the Pledge of Allegiance.

It was all part of a nationwide celebration marking today's Bicentennial of the signing of the U.S. Constitution in 1787.

Each of Pampa's schools found some way to mark the event — through special assemblies, in their classes or at strategically scheduled open houses.

At Austin School, some pupils got a crash course in democracy when they wrote their own school constitution.

Two delegates were elected from each homeroom — kindergarten through fifth grade — to vote on a set of rules suggested by their classmates.

Wednesday, Austin students lined up enthusiastically to sign the final document, which includes seven articles, such as reciting the Pledge of Allegiance every day or taking pride in the school's appearance.

The signing capped off an assembly in which students were treated to a slide show depicting a diverse America. See CONSTITUTION, Page 2

Women open doors to service groups

Members may not have noticed, but the Pampa Sunrise Rotary Club found meaning in the 200th anniversary of the Constitution this morning when Tina Eberz showed up at its regular breakfast.

No sexist barriers were crumbled. No strong statements were made. No eyebrows were raised. Eberz simply filled her plate with pancakes and fruit and enjoyed the meeting. It was not the first time a prospective member wore a dress.

The woman's acceptance at the morning meeting was part of the morning club's goal to double its membership and the result of a gentleman's agreement to include women.

Sunrise Rotary member Joe Martinez said the club members never officially voted to open the young club to women.

"In our case, it was kind of a consensus that we were going to go ahead and take the opportunity," Martinez said. "Women are being approached at this time for membership."

Eberz, the principal of St. Vincent de Paul Elementary School, hasn't decided if she will join the club. Her husband, Robert Eberz, belongs to the "noon" Rotary. See WOMEN, Page 2

Pampa man held in rape of clerk

A 23-year-old Pampa man was arrested at home Wednesday night and charged with the north-side rape of a convenience store clerk late Monday.

Michael Dean Williams, 23, of 2129 N. Zimmers St. was arrested shortly after 7 p.m. by Detectives Gary Boydston and Terry Cox on a warrant alleging aggravated sexual assault. Police had been searching for Williams since the incident occurred.

Williams is charged with abducting the 22-year-old clerk at knife-point from the store on North Hobart Street and forcing her to walk with him to the alley between the 2000 blocks of Coffee and Hamilton streets.

There, authorities allege, he raped the woman, then walked north from the area. He reportedly was a frequent customer at the store.

The alleged incident occurred at about 11:30 p.m. Monday.

Williams remained in custody at the City Jail this morning after his arraignment before Justice of the Peace Bob Muns. Muns set bond at $25,000.

Boydston said Williams, who lives with his mother and stepfather on North Zimmers, offered no resistance when officers arrested him.

Pampa 7-Eleven up for sale

Pampa's 7-Eleven convenience store is one of 21 Panhandle outlets currently being considered for possible sale by Southland Corp., one of the nation's largest retailers.

Southland public relations representative Charles Beck of Austin said this morning that the sale is really just "in the planning stages," dependent on whether a suitable buyer can be found to take over the Panhandle-area stores.

Southland has 21 Panhandle convenience stores, including the one in Pampa at 400 N. Ballard and 15 stores in Amarillo. Other outlets include two each in Dalhart and Borger and one in Canyon.

Beck said the sale is being considered as part of the corporation's plans on "where do we want to be in the next five years." He said company officials have drawn up a plan for divesting itself of the Panhandle market outlets as part of an overall corporate program.

But the plan is only tentative at this moment, he said, adding that much of it depends on whether the company finds a suitable buyer. There has been no definite timetable set for the period in which a sale would be made.

"If we find a buyer, we'll sell them," he said. "If not, we'll still keep them open."

Beck said the Dallas-based corporation would only divest in a manner in which the buyer will keep the stores open and try to retain the current employees.

The Panhandle sale is one of others being considered by Southland involving a number of its stores around the country in an effort to raise up to $5 billion cash to make the company a private corporation.

Beck said the corporation has been open with its employees in regard to the possible sale of some of its stores. He said Southland officials recently visited with some of the Panhandle employees to let them know the sales were under consideration.

But one Pampa 7-Eleven employee said she had heard no definite word on the sale plan. "Oh, I've heard rumors," she said. "But you always hear rumors. I really don't know anything about it."

She suggested questions be made to her district supervisor in Amarillo, who in turn directed that questions be addressed to the Austin public relations office.

Another Southland spokesman said no prospective buyers have presented any definite purchase plans yet, though apparently there are "several firms" that have shown some interest in the sale. No names of prospective buyers have been released.

In the past few months, Southland has said it might sell some of its operations, including its Chief Auto Parts stores and some of its more than 7,500 convenience store outlets, to finance a multi-billion dollar plan to take the corporation out of public stock ownership into a private company.

set to the strains of Lee Greenwood's "God Bless the U.S.A." Those who knew the words joined in on the chorus, and all later sang along to a patriotic "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

Delegates said after the ceremony that they learned about cooperation and democracy by working on the school constitution. Some, like third-grader Ryan Cornelison, said they think their efforts will be in effect at Austin School for another 200 years.

"I think the constitution is real important, and the rules will probably stick at Austin for a long time," said Chris Cochran, a fifth-grader.

All agreed with Chris that the Constitution is important, both nationally and at Austin school.

"If we didn't have a constitution, it'd be harder to live without the rules," said third-grader Ann Carmichael.

"It's pretty important," added Amy Bradley, a fourth-grader. "It has rules we have to follow. If we didn't follow them, there might be a problem."

First-grader Danny McPherson said the Constitution is needed "so we can have a government of the people."

"If it wasn't important, I wouldn't like it," Danny said. Delegates met last week to vote on the eight articles suggested by their classmates.

Two of the articles were combined into one, and some met with opposition before passing. Fifth-grader Richard Williams expressed a degree of libertarianism when he spoke out against making the Pledge of Allegiance a formal article.

Women

ary Club. "But it is a good opportunity," Eberz said, adding that if the morning club makes an offer, "I'd think about it, then I'd probably do it."

Eberz said that club member Gary Kelton had invited her to come to the breakfast meeting today.

"I'm not trying to make a statement or prove a point," Eberz said. "I just found the club interesting and different. All the clubs are interesting."

Eberz found the meeting educational and enjoyed the speech by Pampa Rotary President Mike Ruff, who discussed his recent trip to the Rotary International Convention this summer in Munich.

Kelton, who could not be reached this morning for comment, also approached Hoechst-Celanes human resources manager Jane McBunch for membership.

McBunch could not make it to today's breakfast, but she had attended previous breakfasts.

McBunch said today that she had not thought about joining any civic club until Rotary approached her.

"It was nice of them to think of me," McBunch said. "It would have been nice if Altrusa (a so-called "women's club") had asked me."

Sunrise Rotary Club President Blake Wilson said there was no opposition to including women in its membership drive.

"Some members have been indifferent," Wilson said. "But there was no negative feeling, particularly from the board."

"Being a younger club, we are concerned with getting active members, regardless of their gender," Wilson said, adding that the club now has 16 members, none female.

Ruff said the "noon" Rotary Club is certainly open to women who meet the Rotary standards of admission.

He explained that it is Rotary policy to "invite" people to join, rather than just take anyone who comes along.

He added that Rotary International members agreed at their Munich convention that qualified women may join Rotary International in the United States. Rotary clubs in other countries may prohibit women.

"Noon" member Roy Sparkman joked "we were considering women for prospects, but so far Donna Rice hasn't shown any interest."

The doors of other "men's" civic clubs are open, but no women have walked through.

"We never had any women apply here," said Noon Lions Club President Jack Gindorf, adding that the club has no women recruitment campaign.

"We're like a church group," Gindorf said. "Every civic group does a poor job getting members."

But women would "sure be welcome," Gindorf added.

"Our members are full of vim and vinegar," Gindorf said. "There's a lot of joking and roughhousing. You'd have to be a good sport to belong."

But, he added, a woman may add a soft touch to the joking.

Downtown Kiwanis President Tom Genung said the club's board has to approve any membership application, regardless of gender.

The club is open to qualified women, he said, adding the Kiwanis headquarters has declared that it would not "defend" a chapter in court if it denies admission to a woman because of her gender.

And what is good for the gander may also be good for the goose as far as Pampa "women's" service clubs are concerned.

Officers with the Pampa Desk and Derrick Club are attending their club's national convention this weekend in Oklahoma City. Among the issues reportedly up for a vote is whether to open its chapters to men.

There are no male members of the Pampa Altrusa Club - yet. But apparently the club is open to men.

Altrusa associate executive director Lynn Mitchell of Chicago said the club's by-laws have never barred men.

However, at their annual convention last summer, Altrusa members voted to strike "sexist" references from the club's by-laws.

Lovett Head Librarian Martha Parker plans no change in the library's original proposal. "Students use the library a great deal," Parker said, adding that with the school support, she could go ahead and purchase new supplies.

Parker did not have any figures on how many McLean school students use the library. Each month, she counts the number of library cards used by local young people. She will have figures for September by the next library board meeting.

School trustees also appointed Superintendent Jim Rutherford, high school Principal Pete Bate-man and elementary school Principal Dorman Thomas as teacher appraisers for the career ladder merit pay program.

McLean discusses library pact

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

McLEAN - Now that McLean's Lovett Library has its $2,500 in county funding, McLean school officials want to know how that will affect a proposal to use the city library as the school library.

At its regular meeting Monday, the McLean school board appointed Trustee Gwen Henley to check on the school's status with the McLean Library Board. The library board will have its next regular meeting Oct. 7.

School officials decided in January to examine the feasibility of designating the city library as the school library. They reasoned that the city and school can save money and broaden the horizons for McLean students.

The Lovett Library, 302 N. Main, not only has more books, but also a new computer system and access to the Harrington Library Consortium that offers access to other libraries in the Panhandle.

School Business Manager Shirley Johnson said the library had originally asked for $2,000 from the school to used by the library for school work.

But that was when the library's county funding was in jeopardy. Earlier this month, Gray County commissioners cut the library's request in half but later restored the full $2,500 funding when it approved its budget Sept. 4.

Johnson said Henley will meet with the library board at its next meeting to see if the $2,000 charge still stands.

Texas students pledge allegiance for bicentennial

By Associated Press

Uncle Sam competed against Ben Franklin for the best-looking character in American history award as Texas schoolchildren joined in Wednesday's nationwide celebration of the bicentennial of the signing of the U.S. Constitution in 1787 with assemblies, costume contests and dessert.

Many students in the Lone Star State tuned in when President Reagan led the nation's schoolchildren in reciting the Pledge of Allegiance from Washington, D.C. at about 1 p.m.

School pupils across the South Plains, including the majority of Lubbock Independent School District, joined with Reagan in saying the pledge, Carolyn Goebel, an LISD administrator, said. But for students in Jayton, the televised Pledge of Allegiance is just the beginning of a full year of activities that will be tied to the Constitution.

Throughout the year, students will be studying about the document and in the spring all the students in the district will combine for a Constitution program.

Students in Merkel battled to see who most closely resembled some of history's most important people.

Characters from the founding fathers to Civil War generals to Challenger astronauts attended school in this town eight miles outside of Abilene to show their true American spirit.

Even a green Statue of Liberty joined in the bicentennial festivities, which included answering history trivia questions.

Southeast Texas students celebrated the historical day with bicentennial wear.

Vidor students showed their patriotic colors by declaring Wednesday and Thursday "Red, White and Blue Days," and donning shirts, skirts and sweaters displaying the colors of the American flag.

At Beaumont Christian High School, students released 1,200 red, white and blue balloons after watching the national ceremony for the Constitution. A ceremony at the Hill Country Middle School in the Eanes School District, treated students to a 4½-by-6½-foot cake decorated like the U.S. flag. Some students in Central Texas talked with an actor portraying William Jackson, secretary of the 1787 Constitutional Convention.

The third-, fourth- and fifth- grade students at Bluebonnet Elementary school in Round Rock asked Mr. Jackson to answer questions such as why everyone wore wigs, what kind of feathers were used to write and were there any women back then.

One Port Arthur school shared the patriotic day by honoring Dick Dowling Elementary School teacher Diane Chantaplin as the school's newest American citizen, said principal Kathy Atway. Chantaplin, a native of Thailand, recently received her citizenship papers and enjoyed her first national celebration as an American citizen. In Dallas, hundreds of schoolchildren joined city leaders in celebrating the day with newly Americanized citizens from Taiwan, Indonesia, Ethiopia, Vietnam and Honduras, who led the crowd in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Joe Sherrill, a 12-year-old Dallas student, said the Constitution means an assurance of freedom for everyone.

"One of the kids in our class couldn't come today because of her religion—she's not supposed to pledge allegiance to the flag because it's like making it God," he said.

"But if it wasn't a Constitution, she would have had to come."

Over 800 people wait in line to buy beer.

Beer sale ad causes policy change by Southland Corp.

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—A newspaper advertisement threw local beer drinkers into a fervor and caused Southland Corp. to change a statewide marketing strategy for its 7-Eleven stores in matching prices.

Johnny Gabriel, who owns five Gabriel's Discount Liquor, Beer & Wine stores in San Antonio advertised 12-packs of Budweiser and Miller Lite for 99 cents each "while supplies last," Monday.

The supplies reportedly didn't last very long at Gabriel's stores and employees there began referring customers to 7-Eleven convenience stores, which had a policy of matching any advertised beer price.

Southland Corp.-owned 7-Eleven stores withdrew their policy Tuesday after the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission said the policy poses "potential problems."

"The TABC (Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission) has notified us there was a problem with our policy, so we decided to withdraw our guarantee," said Elena de la Garza, a spokeswoman for Southland.

Milton Brown, who heads the commission's local enforcement office, said the problem with the Southland policy is that customers are required to bring in a competitor's advertisement to receive the lower price.

"If an ad is presented for payment, it's a coupon," Brown said. "You cannot offer such an inducement to buy an alcoholic beverage in Texas."

Kenneth Fries, district manager for San Antonio 7-Eleven stores, said the commission apparently had not noticed the stores' policy before Monday.

"Occasionally we'd have to match an H.E.B. price or a Kroger price," he said. "But with all the attention (the 99-cent price) brought to us, the TABC started to notice."

Long lines formed at the Gabriel's stores Wednesday after the firm said it would offer the 99-cent price once again to the first 400 customers who came in each of the five area stores between 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. Wednesday.

But only one 12-pack was sold at that price to each customer, Gabriel said.

Woman found after four days of captivity, torture

McDADA (AP)—A woman found semiconscious in a farmhouse had been tortured so badly during four days of captivity that she wasn't able to speak or move after her rescue, authorities say.

The severely bruised woman was lying in a bed and was unable to tell officers what happened, but by the marks on her hands and feet, it was apparent she had been tied with electrical wiring, Bastrop County Sheriff's spokesman Jay Beggs said Wednesday.

Officers "couldn't touch her right away for her moaning," said Beggs. The woman was taken to Brackenridge Hospital in Austin and was in serious condition Wednesday night with a head injury, a broken left arm and wrist, and bruises.

Authorities said that during the captivity, the 25-year-old woman was driven around in a car trunk and tied to a chair in the two-story home's attic. Blood-stained wire and bloody clothes were found in a trash can outside the farmhouse, Beggs said.

Two people were arrested at the farmhouse Wednesday, and two others were arrested later at a Bastrop residence in connection with the abduction.

Pamela Hanson, 31, who shared the house with the victim; and Kenneth Kutalek, 30, of Smithville were arrested during the raid at the farmhouse two miles northeast of McDade. Brian Hopson, 22, and Craig Walker, 18, were arrested at a house in Bastrop.

All four were charged with aggravated kidnapping, and bonds were set at $100,000 apiece, Beggs said.

Bastrop Chief Deputy Tommy Adams said drugs may have been involved in the incident.

About 3 a.m. Wednesday, the sheriff's department received information "a woman might be held against her will," Beggs said. Further investigation led to the raid by sheriff's deputies, Bastrop police and a member of the Greater Austin Area Organized Crime Control Unit.

The woman was "in a gown, neatly covered, like they thought someone was coming. They just cleaned her up, it looked like," Beggs said.

"When they found her, she was semiconscious," Beggs said. The woman was unable to give any information, "not even a birth date."

Authorities said they were told before the raid that the woman had been held captive four days.

Authorities did not know how long the woman and Ms. Hanson had lived in the farmhouse. McDade store owner Sam Dungan said the house had been occupied for only a few months.

The owner of the house said she was unaware the house was occupied by the women.

Cocaine prices cheap despite more seizures

EL PASO (AP)—The wholesale price of cocaine has plunged over the past year even though seizures of the drug have increased, a federal narcotics agent says.

The wholesale price in Dallas averages $27,000 per kilo, or 2.2 pounds, compared with $45,000 in June 1986, Phil Jordan, special agent-in-charge of the Dallas region of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, said Wednesday.

Prices are $3,000 to $4,000 per kilo higher in El Paso, a city Jordan described as "a focal point for the Colombian-Mexican connection."

He said prices apparently are dropping because many cocaine users are trying to deal with their addiction, thus reducing demand for the drug.

"One thing I attribute that to, and I'm an eternal optimist in these things, is that the media has made the public aware of the dangers of crack cocaine. That has changed the public's perception that cocaine is not dangerous," he said.

Jordan's agents worked Wednesday to identify the Mexican smuggling operation responsible for bringing in 3,589 pounds of cocaine that was seized Monday by U.S. Customs inspectors at the Zaragoza Bridge.

The cocaine, in more than 60 55-pound bales, was found stacked 10 feet high behind a false wall in a tractor-trailer rig driven by a man identified as Eduardo Pinto Chavira, 22, of Juarez.

A federal grand jury indicted Pinto Wednesday. Pinto was held without bond in the El Paso County Jail.

Study: Rate of petroleum replacement lowest in decade

DALLAS (AP)—The nation's largest energy companies replaced only 41 percent of their oil reserves and only 48 percent of the gas reserves in 1986, the worst one-year rate in the 1980s, a study indicates.

The report by Salomon Brothers Inc., a New York securities firm, said those 30 energy companies provide about two-thirds of the nation's oil reserves, and that only three Texas companies bucked the low replacement trend.

Maxus Energy Corp. of Dallas and Mesa Limited Partnership of Amarillo replaced crude oil production in 1986. Maxus, the former exploration and production arm of Diamond Shamrock Corp., reported an 11 percent increase in its U.S. liquid petroleum reserves.

Enserch Corp. of Dallas posted a 14 percent increase in natural gas reserves last year, the report said.

U.S. crude oil reserves declined 5.4 percent and Texas crude reserves fell by 8 percent last year, the U.S. Department of Energy previously reported.

"Last year's drop in reserves was a response to a very difficult year," Robert Finley, acting deputy director of the Bureau of Economic Geology at the University of Texas at Austin, said Tuesday.

"It may work out that in 1987 the industry will not add reserves, but if there is a decline, it won't be as devastating as in 1986," he added.

Replacement of reserves had been improving until the 1986 price collapse as the industry increasingly used enhanced oil recovery methods designed to extract more oil from existing reserves, the report said.

But as oil prices fell by half last year, outlays for domestic property purchases, exploration and production dropped 47 percent, while foreign spending declined 28 percent, the report said.

Salomon energy industry analyst James D. Crandell said exploration and production budgets this year were set with $15-per-barrel oil in mind, but some companies are basing their 1988 plans on $18-per-barrel oil.

A mid-year survey by the Oil & Gas Journal showed that 17 major oil companies raised their drilling programs by more than 10 percent about their January expectations.

Education panel will be created

AUSTIN (AP)—Top state leaders say that although they expect to win an appeal of an order revising the state's public school finance system, they will appoint a special committee to inform the public of the order's implications.

"I don't want to leave any impression whatsoever... that I have a question about whether or not we'll win the case, because I think we will," Gov. Bill Clements said Wednesday.

"But I think the people of Texas need to be aware of what (State District Judge Harley Clark) is attempting to do to the present system," he added.

Clements met in a closed-door session with Lt.

Gov. Bill Hobby, House Speaker Gib Lewis, education officials and staff of the attorney general's office.

The special committee "will go a long way towards informing the people of Texas just what the implications of Judge Clark's ruling really is to our public school system in Texas," Clements said.

"I think that the public right now does not have a keen awareness of what that judge's ruling really means in tearing up and destroying, if you will, the public school system that we have historically had in Texas," he said. "It's just going to turn it inside out, upside down."

State money is returned

AUSTIN (AP)—All of the $21 million in state money that was improperly deposited in unsecured accounts in a British West Indies bank has been recovered, officials say.

Attorney General Jim Mattox said Texas American Bank of Fort Worth, trustee for the Texas Housing Agency, had assumed responsibility for the final $2.8 million that was still unrecovered and had deposited that amount in the agency's account.

"We don't want this to happen again. State money cannot be risked and foreign business should not be allowed to profit from Texas taxpayers' money," Mattox told a news conference Wednesday.

The wayward $21 million came from bonds issued by the housing agency for use in home loan programs. The agency had intended for the money to be invested in certificates of deposit in various San Antonio financial institutions.

Instead, the money was deposited with Equity Continental Bank Ltd. of Montserrat, British West Indies. Not all the agency's money was secured while it remained with Equity Continental, officials said.

Mattox and Richard Jordan, chairman of the Texas Housing Authority, said $18.2 million had been recovered earlier.

Negotiations will continue over some $70,000 to $80,000 in interest that should have accrued on the deposits, but "all of the monies of the state of Texas and this agency are safe," Mattox said.

The money began going to the West Indies account on July 31 with a $6 million deposit, said Lou McCreary, an assistant attorney general who worked on the case. Four transactions occurred before the mistake was discovered.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Commerce nominee lives on subsidies

At first glance, William Verity's appointment as Commerce secretary seemed questionable. A second look shows that he's about the worst appointment possible.

If confirmed, Verity likely will spend his days scrapping what remains of Ronald Reagan's free-trade philosophy. The only consolation is that Verity's tenure would end in 16 months.

Verity has long been one of free trade's strongest foes. In 1982 he retired from Aramco, a steel company his grandfather founded in 1900. His main job there seems to have been to erect trade barriers to steel imports and wrinkle federal aid out of Washington.

He also worked to get loans subsidized by taxpayers for the Soviet Union. Some of that money would have helped Aramco build a steel plant in Russia, but President Carter canceled the plan after the Red Army invaded Afghanistan in 1979.

In other words, during his working days, Verity really wasn't so much a businessman as a skilled quasi-governmental functionary. He ran his company, not by helping it smelt better steel at lower cost, but by making it a de facto ward of the state.

Consider what a wreck he helped make of the steel industry. Since 1968 the United States has imposed quotas — cynically named Voluntary Export Restraints — on steel imports. Even the supposedly free-trade Reagan administration has maintained the "voluntary" restrictions. The results were predictable: Between 1974 and 1983 American steel shipments dropped 23 percent.

The steel companies used the quotas, not to produce more and better steel, but to jack up prices. Steel unions were bought off with higher wages — for those steelworkers not laid off. In 1986 employed steelworkers' wages had jumped to 89 percent more than those of the average American — even as steel productivity dropped from 1974 to 1983, the worst showing of any industry.

While huge gains accrued to steel industry executive such as Verity, and to steelworkers lucky enough to keep their jobs, everybody else lost. Hundreds of thousands of steelworkers have lost their jobs, turning many cities across the Illinois-Indiana-Ohio-Pennsylvania rust belt into veritable ghost towns. Auto companies, forced to buy overpriced steel, jacked up costs, damaging their battle against imports. Taxpayers picked up the subsidy bill. And consumers had to pay more for everything from toasters to Chevrolets.

As Commerce secretary, Verity almost certainly would work to spread this blight to every other American industry. Therefore, the Senate should fling the Verity nomination back at Reagan.

But the going will be tough. Congress now is in one of its anti-trust frenzies. Verity's espoused "fair trade" — unfair protectionism — is music to its ears. And no doubt Verity will punch the right pork-barrel buttons on Capitol Hill.

But if Verity's record of economic disaster is exposed during confirmation hearings, enough senators might just give him the boot.

Regulation worsens air travel

Airline travel, which has never before resembled the stuff of poetry, now brings to mind "The Divine Comedy," and I don't mean the section on paradise. A trip on a commercial airplane, in the popular mind, has come to mean the hellish combination of high fares at the ticket counter, maddening delays in the departure lounge and near-collisions in the air.

This may be good news to partisans of Amtrak, but not for the rest of us. The popular impression isn't entirely wrong: Commercial air travel is considerably less pleasant than it used to be. But the dissatisfaction leads down a risky path. The growing impulse is to blame airline deregulation for everything that goes wrong and to demand that the federal government step back in to set things right.

That would be a costly mistake. Many of the existing problems are the product of too much government involvement in the airline business, not too little. Some of the supposed problems are fictional. None of them outweigh the blessings produced by deregulation.

The most important of these is to make air travel accessible to the average person. The number of people flying on major carriers is nearly two-thirds higher now than it was in 1978, when deregulation took effect. The increase can be attributed mostly to declining prices. A Brookings Institution study found that by 1983, consumers had saved $6 billion in lower fares.

In some important ways, air travel also has become more convenient. Departures are more frequent — up by 28 percent since 1978. The proliferation of hub airports has made it easier to go from one city to another without changing planes or airlines, something that consumers value. Contrary to what foes of deregulation warned, service to small communities has not suffered.

Stephen Chapman

The supposed ills caused by deregulation fall into three major categories. Consider each in turn:

■ Delays and congestion. A freer aviation market has promoted greater congestion only because it has encouraged more flying. The real blame for travelers' frustration belongs with government agencies. As the Washington-based Competitive Enterprise Institute points out, only one part of the system was deregulated. Airports and air traffic control, the two bottlenecks, are still in government hands. The people in charge of these, lacking the economic incentives that spur airline executives, have been slow to adapt to the rapidly changing needs of the industry.

A few simple changes would make a big difference. One is to charge airplanes higher landing fees during peak periods, discouraging the practice of scheduling too many flights in the morning and evening rush hours — and discouraging small private planes from taking up valuable landing slots. Another is to expand airport capacity. The funds for the expansion already have been accumulated, but the Reagan administration has resisted spending them lest the deficit look bigger.

Another is to hire more controllers — including some of those fired in 1981, who have paid amply for their illegal strike. It's also worth considering if the private sector might not be able to handle some of these tasks better than the bureaucrats.

■ Safety. Most people would be surprised to know that air travel, which was extraordinarily safe before 1978, has got safer still. In the first seven years of deregulation, the fatality rate fell by 44 percent. The recent Northwest Airlines crash in Detroit was the first one involving passenger deaths in nearly two years. The Brookings Institution's Clifford Winston notes that increased dangers would show up quickly in higher insurance rates for carriers — and that no such changes have occurred.

The idea that, in the absence of strict federal rules, carriers have an incentive to cut corners on safety is simply false. A crash typically costs an airline $21 million, which would pay for a lot of spare parts and mechanics.

■ Decreasing competition and rising fares. The argument is that the wave of airline mergers has produced a market in which giant airlines are free to gouge flyers. In fact, says Winston, fares have continued to fall despite the loss of several airlines. Between 1984 and 1986, the average ticket cost dropped by 11 percent, while the share of passengers flying on discount fares rose from 81 percent to 90 percent. The industry actually lost money last year.

The aggravations faced by travelers are real but solvable. But in the rush to relieve public frustration, the improvements produced by a freer market shouldn't be thrown away. Trying to fix the problems of air travel by restoring federal regulation is like trying to save PTL by bringing back Jim Bakker.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Sept. 17, the 260th day of 1987. There are 105 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Two hundred years ago, on Sept. 17, 1787, the Constitution of the United States was completed and signed by a majority of delegates attending the constitutional convention in Philadelphia.

On this date:

In 1862, Union forces hurled back a Confederate invasion of Maryland in the Civil War Battle of Antietam.

In 1939, the Soviet Union invaded Poland.

In 1947, James V. Forrestal was sworn in as the first Secretary of Defense.

In 1949, more than 130 people, most of them U.S. citizens, died when fire gutted the Canadian passenger steamer "Noronic" at a pier in Toronto.

In 1957, two male attorneys "stood in" as actress Sophia Loren and producer Carlo Ponti were married by proxy in a ceremony in Juarez, Mexico. (However, Italian authorities did not consider the couple legally married until 1966.)

Sure signs of heavy drinking

A lot of people are turning away from alcohol these days, including my friend Rigby, the former lush, who phones to tell me of his plans to give up drinking.

"How long have you been drinking?" I asked him.

"Professionally, 25 years," he said. "What is the difference between a professional and an amateur drinker?"

"A professional," Rigby began, "drinks every night except New Year's Eve, which is amateur night. A professional never drinks anything with an umbrella or a cherry in it, and a professional awakens at least ten times a year in a Holiday Inn in a different time zone and doesn't remember getting there."

For others who may be considering stopping drinking, I asked Rigby for some tell-tale signs one should look for in determining whether or not one has stepped over the quaffing line.

"It's the morning after that says it all," Rigby said.

"Start with your tongue. If you have to shave it, then you had way too much to drink the night before."

"Then, there's your money. Look at any bills you might have left over, and if they have been wadded into tiny little balls and you find them in strange places like your shoe or your ear, son, you got down to some serious drinking the night before."

Lewis Grizzard

"What else?" I asked.

"Check your clothing. Did you remember to take it off before you passed out? Check to make certain the clothing you have on is the same clothing you had on when you left for the evening."

"If you are wearing a fez, it was a big night. If you are wearing a Royal Canadian Mountie's hat, then you had an even bigger night.

"And if the Mountie's horse is down in the living room, grazing on house plants, call AA immediately and see if they deliver because you won't be able to get anywhere in your condition."

"There's a few other things to look for, too," Rigby continued.

□ "Check any credit card receipts you can find, if they are for charges at a Frederick's of Hollywood, at an arms dealer, or with a foreign airline, you've got troubles.

□ "Look at your checkbook. If checks 1562 through 1568 are missing and you don't remember writing them, call the bank and stop payment as soon as you are able to operate a telephone.

□ "And this one is very important: Check your body for any unexplained tattoos.

"If you find one you didn't have before, and it's a heart with an arrow through it and includes the names Doris, Trixie, Mona, or Grover, make up your mind to stop drinking forever, but call your attorney first."

I thanked Rigby for his hints, and I hope they have been of a public service.

To sobriety then. It just might catch on.

Smoke and poison creep into rural areas

By Robert Walters

MISSOULA, Mont. (NEA) — "Big Sky Country," is Montana's proud nickname — but the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency says air pollution in Missoula and six other communities around the state also qualifies it as "dirty sky country."

Throughout the nation, air pollution, which once was confined to the most densely populated urban areas, now has reached into sparsely settled states, rural communities and even remote national parks.

Arizona's two principal cities, Phoenix and Tucson, once were unspoiled desert communities where people with chronic respiratory problems went in search of clean air.

Today, Phoenix ranks third among all cities — behind only Los Angeles and Denver — in the proportion of carbon monoxide in its air. Tucson ranks 50th — ahead of such cities as Detroit, Atlanta and Philadelphia.

In California, the Los Angeles Times last year reported on air pollution's effect on agriculture in the state:

"In southern California, the annual (smog) damage is extensive. Lettuce, endive and spinach no longer can be grown commercially in Los Angeles County. Few orchards can tolerate the air south of Oxnard."

"In Riverside, once the home of the navel orange, only 2,000 acres of citrus groves remain and commercial production of alfalfa and turnips is marginal."

"Last year in Kern County, 20 percent — or $61 million worth — of the grape crop was lost... because of smog generated locally or blown south down the Central Valley from the San Francisco Bay area."

Nationally, the U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates that polluted air is responsible for $5 billion to $10 billion worth of crop damage every year.

Acid deposition — in the form of rain, snow or dry particulate matter — has decimated remote forests throughout the world, yet the pollutants that cause it continue to be produced at coal-fired power plants.

Similarly, ozone in once-pristine forests has damaged Wisconsin's white pines, California's ponderosa pines, North Carolina's loblolly pines, Michigan's yellow poplars and West Virginia's red spruce.

Air pollution levels in Maine's Acadia National Park are sometimes high enough to violate the health standards of the 1970 Clean Air Act. Serious contamination also occurs in the Great Smoky Mountain and Shenandoah national parks in the East and the Bryce Canyon and Arches national parks in Utah.

In Montana, EPA has identified suspended particulates that reach deep into people's lungs as a problem in communities stretching from Lame Deer in the southeast to Kallispell in the northwest.

Most of the 70 communities where elevated levels of particulate matter violate federal air quality standards are located in the western United States. This is caused by emissions from sawmills and residential wood stoves and from sand that is spread on roads in the winter and ground into a fine powder by passing cars and trucks.

Almost two decades after the enactment of landmark clean air legislation, EPA recently reported that some progress had been made but "air pollution still remains a serious public health threat in many areas of the country."

Moreover, EPA has not been notably enthusiastic about enforcing the law. "For too long," notes the Natural Resources Defense Council, "EPA has approached air pollution as if this level of human grief were somehow inevitable and had to be weighed against the cost to industry of controlling those emissions."

After ignoring the issue for far too long, Congress now insists that it is committed to revising the existing law this year to mandate tough enforcement. It's time to complete the task started 17 years ago.

Bork: Won't moderate position to get a job

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court nominee Robert H. Bork says there was "nothing wild" about him as a lawyer nor extreme about him as a judge, and his positions were not moderated with every nomination for a federal job.

Bork used the second day of his confirmation hearing Wednesday for some of his most forceful language yet to deny he was a racist, opposed equality for women or changed stripes when it was convenient.

The appellate judge, who returns to the Senate Judiciary Committee today, also gave a ringing endorsement to three landmark civil rights laws of the 1960s and called segregation "immoral."

But the 60-year-old Bork drew fresh criticism from civil rights groups when he said the Supreme Court used faulty reasoning in a 1954 decision that ordered Washington, D.C., schools desegregated.

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., suggested that after reviewing Bork's record — and listening to those who called him either a moderate or extremist — it would take a psychiatrist to predict how he would act on the high court.

Bork replied, "I think, senator, the best guide to that, is what I have done in any position of responsibility, when I wasn't speculating. As a partner in a law firm, I was a very regular lawyer, nothing wild about me."

"As solicitor general, I carried out my duties, in not a speculative or extreme fashion at all. And as a judge on the court of appeals, I think I have not been extreme in any way, and I don't think ... much extreme in my life."

Heflin said, "Well, there are those that raise the issue that your changing of your position ... on certain positions ... came only at a time when a carrot was ... being dangled before your eyes, when you knew that you'd have to ... face questioning ... on confirmation on solicitor general ... again also, when you came up for the U.S. Court of Appeals."

Bork said the "change in my political positions, from my youth to today, never had anything to do with a confirmation hearing or a carrot or anything else."

The nominee angered civil rights groups by telling Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., that "I haven't found a rationale" for a Supreme Court ruling that outlawed segregation in the nation's capital in 1954.

Following a break in the hearing, Bork said his remark "does not mean that I would ever dream of overruling" the court in the case.

And he added, "I should make it clear that, as I've said repeatedly, that segregation is not only unlawful but immoral. And I don't want my doubts about a constitutional mode of reasoning to be turned into anything other than that."

Despite the clarification, the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights called Bork's statements "astonishing and disturbing."

Committee action on the nomination expected after several more days of hearings, hinges on the votes of four senators who have not revealed their inclinations: Specter; Heflin; Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va.; and Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz. The other committee members appear equally divided.

The committee can vote to recommend to the full Senate approval or disapproval or to send the nomination out without a recommendation. Byrd vowed to have the full Senate vote even if the committee votes to reject Bork.

Pope, bishops debate dissent

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Leaving U.S. bishops with a firm directive to bring their independent-minded flock into line, Pope John Paul II turned his attention today to a city where dissent is as much a part of the landscape as the Golden Gate Bridge.

Before his arrival in San Francisco, where Jews, feminists and homosexuals planned protests, the farmlands and missions of Monterey awaited the papal entourage.

The message which John Paul gave to 320 bishops assembled at Our Lady Queen of the Angels Seminary on Wednesday was not new: He said no to women priests; no to divorce; no to contraception; and no to those who disagreed.

"We have more work to do to convince people on what they should do," said Cardinal Joseph Bernardin of Chicago, who had told the pope that Americans were accustomed to questioning authority.

"Dissent from church doctrine remains what it is, dissent," John Paul said. "As such it may not be proposed or received on an equal footing with the church's authentic teaching."

"I don't think the pope is saying everybody who practices birth control stop going to communion, leave the church, get out of our way," Archbishop Daniel E. Pilarczyk of Cincinnati said after the session.

The bishops portrayed American Catholics as energetic, involved in their church and unafraid to be skeptical.

Archbishop John R. Quinn of San Francisco said the bishops "recognize that we cannot fulfill our task simply by an uncritical application of solutions designed in past ages for problems which have qualitatively changed or which did not exist in the past."

Bernardin alluded to the dissension that has developed in the American church in cases such as that of the Rev. Charles Curran, who was ousted from Catholic University in Washington for questioning some of the church's teachings on sex.

"When someone questions how a truth might be better articulated or lived today, he or she is sometimes accused of rejecting the truth itself or portrayed as being in conflict with the church's teaching authority."

"We must be able to speak with one another in complete candor, without fear," he said.

Pilarczyk said the church is running out of priests, in part because of the rule of celibacy.

Archbishop Rembert G. Weakland of Milwaukee described the "pain on the part of so many competent women today who feel they are second-class citizens in a church they love."

Pope reaches out to touch youngsters Wednesday.

Superpowers upbeat on arms control agreement prospects

WASHINGTON (AP) — Talks between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze are raising expectations about the prospects for an arms control agreement and another superpower summit.

Both Shultz and Shevardnadze, who meet for a third and final day today, reported progress Wednesday in their talks on nuclear weapons, and their optimism was reinforced by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Gorbachev said in Moscow that an agreement to eliminate intermediate-range missiles could be worked out this year.

After five hours of talks that preceded a dinner in his honor Wednesday night at the State Department, Shevardnadze told reporters, "I think we are now discussing all these questions more constructively than previously."

Shevardnadze said Wednesday he was "looking with optimism" toward the possibility for another superpower summit. Both sides agree that a summit should be held only if final agreement is reached on banning U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range missiles.

Gorbachev and President Reagan last met in October 1986 in Iceland.

For his part, Shultz reported "some progress" in arms talks between U.S. and Soviet experts. State Department spokesman Charles Redman described the talks as "constructive, positive, thorough and businesslike."

After a midday news conference today by Shultz, Shevardnadze was to meet with reporters in the late afternoon at the Soviet Embassy.

In Moscow, Gorbachev said in a statement issued by the Tass news agency: "The Soviet Union is proceeding from the premise that a relevant treaty could be worked out before the end of the current year."

The statement, issued in conjunction with the opening of the U.N. General Assembly, also said that given a concerted effort by both sides, an accord on reducing strategic offensive weapons was possible early next year.

The tenor of the superpower relationship seemed much brighter than it did a year ago when Shevardnadze's visit to Washington was clouded by the detention of U.S. journalist Nicholas Daniloff and the U.S. demand that the Soviets cut back on their U.N. staff.

Besides arms control, Shultz and Shevardnadze and their respective delegations discussed Afghanistan, the Middle East, the Iran-Iraq war, human rights and other issues.

Two of Shultz's key goals are to narrow differences that are preventing a treaty to scrap U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range missiles so it can be signed this year at a superpower summit and persuading the Soviets to adopt a short timetable for withdrawing 115,000 troops from Afghanistan.

Commission proposes revisions in apartheid laws

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP)—A presidential commission today recommended the biggest changes in South Africa's system of legalized racial segregation since apartheid laws went into effect in the 1950s.

Even if the government adopted the proposals in full, however, most of South Africa would remain racially segregated.

A leading anti-apartheid group, the United Democratic Front, said Wednesday that the advisory council proposal was a "tragicomic farce" designed to prolong white domination.

The recommendations were prepared over three years by a 17-member committee of the President's Council, an appointed, 60-member advisory body.

They would do the following:

—Replace the Group Areas Act, which mandates racially segregated neighborhoods, with legislation that would allow localities to establish multiracial areas, subject to veto by a government-appointed provincial administrator.

—Make possible voting for local authorities on a non-racial basis in the new mixed communities.

—Scrap the law that designates segregated public amenities on a nationwide basis, but allow local governments and individuals to discriminate.

—Eliminate all segregated business districts.

The 250-page report will be debated by the President's Council, then presented to the Cabinet, which is expected to announce its reaction next week.

President P.W. Botha has frequently declared his support for racially segregated neighborhoods, hospitals and schools as ways of preserving distinct cultures.

But his appointment of the study committee in 1984 was an indication he was willing to accept some change.

South Africa has 5 million whites, who control the economy, and 25.6 million blacks, who have no vote in national affairs and who are predominantly poor.

One official source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the government has no objections to the recommendation to abolish the 1953 Separate Amenities Act and allow people to discriminate on an individual and local basis.

It also may be willing to allow local experiments in multiracial communities, but is not prepared to repeal the entire Group Areas Act, enacted in 1950, the source indicated. He said the government also has reservations about different races voting together in local elections.

There was no indication how the government feels about eliminating segregation on trains and buses, removing national government control of beaches, and dropping racial restrictions on use of farm, commercial and religious property.

Several cities, including Cape Town, have passed resolutions saying they want to abandon apartheid laws. Most leaders of South Africa's 29 million blacks, Asians and mixed-race people have demanded complete and immediate repeal of all apartheid legislation.

Only one of the four non-whites on the 17-member committee, T.L. Gounden, an Indian, signed the report. He said he supported "positive aspects of this report, which represent a move away from the status quo."

The committee said it received submissions from non-whites that the Group Areas Act was "discriminatory, racist and offensive."

The report said the existing laws were a hardship for middle-class blacks and Asians who found it difficult to obtain housing commensurate with their jobs and income.

The release of the report came shortly before the Commonwealth nations and the U.S. Congress are to consider more sanctions against South Africa.

Adverse world conditions continue impairing recovery

MEXICO CITY (AP)—High interest rates, trade barriers and low prices for commodities on world markets are hampering Mexico's recovery from a severe recession it has been going through for the past five years, Foreign Secretary Bernardo Sepulveda said.

Nevertheless, President Miguel de la Madrid's administration will continue to try and diversify the country's economy, making it increasingly less dependent on petroleum exports and less vulnerable to be influenced by events abroad, Sepulveda said Wednesday in an Independence Day address.

When de la Madrid was sworn in as president Dec. 1, 1982, for a six-year term "the national economy presented ominous signs and, more than a few people inside and outside the country were predicting its collapse," he said. "But, five years later, the country has not fallen apart under the confluence of adversity," he said, adding that Mexico's finances are now on a sound basis despite a $105 (b) billion foreign debt, and the economy is resting on more solid foundations.

Sepulveda reiterated similar statements made by administration officials during the past month that Mexico's crisis has touched bottom, but adverse outside conditions — especially rising world interest rates on money — is slowing down recovery.

The crisis began in February 1982 when international prices of oil, Mexico's principal export, started plummeting. Since then joblessness has risen, sales plunged, the peso currency has been losing value very quickly, the purchasing power of salaries dropped and inflation has topped 100 percent annually.

Even so, officials insist that Mexico has managed to increase its sales abroad of manufactured goods, farm products, minerals and other non-petroleum exports.

Sepulveda was the main speaker at ceremonies, which started Tuesday with a giant rally at the main Zocalo Square and lasted all night long, to celebrate the 177th anniversary of Mexico's independence from Spanish rule.

An estimated 200,000 people crowded the square to watch de la Madrid at 11 p.m. sharp ring the Liberty Bell from a balcony in the National Palace to mark the moment in 1810 when the Rev. Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla, a Roman Catholic priest, rang it to summon the townfolks of Dolores to take up arms against Spain.

Jose Arroyo, top aide to Aquino, resigns from cabinet

MANILA, Philippines (AP)—President Corason Aquino announced today her top aide, Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo, was leaving the Cabinet, but said the government would "hold fast" to ideals he represents.

She praised the 61-year-old human rights lawyer as "a man of unwavering fidelity, proven courage, patriotism and true nationalism."

Arroyo's removal was long demanded by military groups, including those who staged a bloody abortive coup on Aug. 28. That triggered the resignation of the 25-member Cabinet on Sept. 9 and plunged the Aquino administration into the gravest political crisis of its turbulent 18 months.

The announcement came after Mrs. Aquino met with Gaston Sigur, U.S. assistant secretary of state for East Asia and Pacific affairs. He gave her a letter from President Reagan reaffirming U.S. support of her government.

The president named Catalino Macaraig,

Arroyo's deputy, as her new executive secretary. Before joining Mrs. Aquino, Macaraig, 60, was President Ferdinand Marcos' deputy justice minister and vice president of a mining company.

Mrs. Aquino also announced that speechwriter Teodoro Locsin, who has also been criticized by the military as a Communist sympathizer, had resigned as special legal counsel.

The 54-year-old president called Arroyo's departure "our loss and the nation's." Arroyo had been

Mrs. Aquino's closest adviser and was widely believed to be the second most influential figure in the administration after the president herself.

Arroyo resigned along with the rest of the Cabinet last week, but it had been expected many Cabinet members would be renamed to their posts.

On Wednesday, Mrs. Aquino accepted four resignations, including those of Vice President Salvador Laurel as foreign secretary and Finance Secretary Jaime Ongpin.

Training birds of prey makes falconer's spirits soar

By ROBERT CADWALLADER
Waco Tribune-Herald

WHITNEY (AP) — Is it a bump on a branch or is it a female red-tailed hawk?

Al Jodoin says it's the latter. So he yanks his car off State Highway 22, somewhere between Whitney and Hillsboro, and points at the bird, sitting silently in a dead tree in a pasture.

"It's the female," Jodoin said, "because there's the male over there in that other tree."

He's invisible. "On that branch there," he adds, gesturing to a green tree nearby, "near the trunk."

Still invisible. "The female is always one-third larger than the male," continues Jodoin, owner of Big Al's pizzeria in Hillsboro. "And I just happen to know those two birds personally."

They remind him of a red-tailed hawk he caught and trained several years ago, one of hundreds of birds of prey he has taken under wing as a licensed practitioner of falconry.

Falconry — the so-called "Sport of Kings," dating to the beginning of recorded history — has aged 14 years since Jodoin took interest in it.

Nowdays, all birds of prey are protected by federal laws. People must earn licenses and permits to take the birds out of the wild and train them to hunt on command.

Jodoin, among only 117 licensed falconers in the state and only a handful with master-level experience, has no birds now. He turns them loose in the spring each year so they don't damage their new flight feathers in their cages.

In the meantime, the burly, bearded Jodoin is working full time in his pizza place on the Hill County Courthouse Square. But his heart soars with his avocation.

"I love it. I used to hunt big game all over the country. I hunted bear in Alaska," he said. "But I enjoy the natural part of flight in hunting. A bird eats all that it kills, so it's not like just going out and shooting rabbits."

He adds that last part almost defensively. Falconers' only natural enemies are wildlife preservation groups such as the Audubon Society, which accuses them of stripping the birds of their freedom.

Such criticism has molded the way the sport is practiced, so that most birds trapped are yearlings before the onset of winter, when, Jodoin estimates, about half die anyway for lack of food.

"The ones we trap, their chances of surviving through the winter increase to 90 or 95 percent," he said. "They're going to survive because we're going to take better care of them."

Training consists of getting the bird accustomed to finding meat in the falconer's gloved hand, so that it will return. It doesn't respond out of affection or obedience, as a dog does. The "trick" involved is teaching the bird to respond to a whistle command, to remind it of the food when it is flying too far away to see it.

When the bird makes a kill, the falconer holds up the meal and makes the bird eat it from his fist.

The sport takes a lot of training time and food and veterinarian bills. Travel costs to trap the birds often climb to more than $1,000 during the year.

"This isn't for everybody," said Jodoin, who trains the birds on his 10-acre peninsula at Lake Whitney. "At the end of the season, you don't oil it and put it in a gun closet. You take care of it. You don't go on vacation, because nobody in the neighborhood is going to want to feed your eagle."

Jodoin has rehabilitated and trained a golden eagle that was shot in the wing, apparently by a West Texas rancher who thought the bird was too near his livestock.

Jodoin, one of only 15 people in the country with a permit to handle eagles, was contacted after the bird was treated in a clinic.

A rehabilitation assignment means the eagle has to be leashed as soon as it is ready, the University of Southern Mississippi worked out a deal with the federal government to take as its new mascot.

They named it Nugget II.

"Baseball players always want to play in the World Series," Jodoin said. "Football players want the Super Bowl. For me, in falconry, the ultimate experience to fly a golden eagle."

Jodoin gets reacquainted with "Ms. Whitney."

Sixteen years ago this day,
The 17th became our baby's birthday.
We've watched her grow from a little blue-eyed cutey,
To a gorgeous, intelligent 5'8" beauty.
We managed the terrible two's and such.
And, Oh! The crazy teens are driving us nuts.
It used to be "Nite, Nite" at eight,
And now it's always "Don't be late."
At 5 you were our dancing star.
Now, all you want is to drive a car.
It's certainly been interesting these last few years.
Misty, you've made us so proud, and we want you to know
That no matter what, we love you so!
This little verse from us is just to say:
Have a very happy 16th birthday!

Two sentenced for cocaine smuggling

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Saying the Rio Grande Valley should not become a drug-smuggling corridor, a federal judge sentenced two men to 40-year prison terms for sneaking 1,260 pounds of cocaine into the country.

U.S. District Judge Ricardo Hinojosa sentenced the two men after they pleaded guilty earlier this summer to bringing 19 suitcases filled with bags of Colombian cocaine across the Rio Grande on June 11.

Both defendants, Jose Donato Berlanga-Hernandez, 26, and Rodolfo Cordova-Sanchez, 28, faced up to life in prison and a $4 million fine.

"This may be considered a harsh sentence, but there are some harsh realities involved with cocaine," Hinojosa said. "South Texas should not become a drug corridor."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Chris Milner asked Hinojosa to assess the defendants' 60-year sentences, saying they supported drug lords and participated in "an organized assault of narcotics traffickers on the fabric of our society."

U.S. Customs agents said they believed the two men were "mules," or people paid to transport narcotics into the United States for distribution by another party.

Pickens contends Takeovers good for America

HOUSTON (AP) — Corporate raider T. Boone Pickens says hostile takeovers are good for shareholders and the nation as a whole and denies that they eat into research and development funds.

But during a debate Wednesday, John R. Schwemm, chairman and chief executive officer of R.R. Donnelly & Sons Co. in Chicago, argued that evidence shows once-strong companies have emerged from takeovers swamped by debt with their managements in disarray.

"The Japanese don't play this game," Schwemm told Pickens. "They take the long view, and the hostile takeover phenomenon does not exist in Japan."

Pickens said that while there have been some job losses in takeovers, that does not compare to the jobs lost in top companies that have not been threatened by hostile acquisition bids.

Takeovers emphasize results, not size, and such attempts are nothing more than the market putting pressure on management, he said.

"Takeovers are good for shareholders and America as a whole," he said.

Pickens — who has led several takeover bids and is now part of a group trying to acquire Newmont Mining Corp. — is a proponent of shareholders' rights and has criticized managements as often being weak and only looking out for themselves.

Last year, he founded the United Shareholders Association, a Washington-based organization for the rights of shareholders.

"I believe takeovers solve more problems than they create," said Pickens, general partner of Mesa Limited Partnership in Amarillo. "I believe what we have going on right now is the system is purging itself of abuses that have gone on for years in corporate America."

But Schwemm said the current system is forcing managements to think only about the short-term, which is bad for long-term interests of the nation as it competes in the international market.

Schwemm is a member of Stakeholders in America, which he said was formed to speak out against what it claims are the abuses resulting from hostile takeovers.

"Obviously, not all business acquisitions are bad, and not all hostile takeovers are bad," he said during the debate before executives attending a two-day forum on takeovers and acquisitions. "Not all managements are good. We do not seek to entrench managements. We do seek some changes."

Pickens and Schwemm swapped criticisms during their 1½ hour-long debate.

Schwemm said takeovers in several cases have caused job losses, hurt communities where the company is based, forced cuts in research and development funds and depleted pension funds.

The two men disagreed on most points throughout the debate, with each claiming the other side is just out to make money.

Pickens claims many chief executive officers are short-term thinkers who generally don't own much stock in their company but have big salaries and let the stockholders take the risks.

The stakeholders group favors federal legislation requiring at least 60 business days between initiation and conclusion of an unsolicited takeover, he said. The current period is 20 days.

Pickens serious about acquiring Newmont

HOUSTON (AP) — Newmont Mining Co. may not be like the oil industry's T. Boone Pickens normally targets in his takeover runs, but the corporate raider says that doesn't mean he's not serious about wanting the gold-mining firm.

Pickens, a proponent of shareholder rights known for his hostile takeover attempts, denied reports Wednesday that his Ivanhoe Acquisition Corp. is bluffing.

"We have made a very serious offer for Newmont," Pickens said during a debate at an Arthur Andersen & Co.-sponsored forum on mergers, acquisitions and restructuring transactions. "In this case, we're trying to buy Newmont. I tell you, I'm serious."

Ivanhoe bumped its price offering to $105 per share for 28 million shares of Newmont common stock. The Pickens-led partnership already owns 6.65 million shares of New York-based Newmont, representing about 9.95 percent of the total outstanding shares.

Ivanhoe's first offer was $95 per share, but the company said Tuesday it was increasing it, dependent on Ivanhoe's arranging financing.

Pickens said Wednesday he has heard no response on the bid from Newmont, and would not speculate whether Ivanhoe could hike its current offer.

The owners of Ivanhoe Acquisition Corp. are affiliates of Mesa Limited Partnership, Herbert Corp., NRM Energy Co., L.P. and Galactic Resources Ltd. Pickens is a partner in Mesa Limited.

Newmont stood out among a list of about 20 possibilities, Pickens said without elaborating. He added that the attempt to acquire the mining company does not mean he's steering away from the oil and gas production business.

"It's my life," he said of the oil industry. "I love it."

Meanwhile, a Friday hearing has been scheduled in U.S. District Court in Reno, Nev., on Newmont's request for an order that would halt the hostile takeover attempt.

Mattox ends Brandley slaying case inquiry

AUSTIN (AP) — An upcoming hearing into evidence in the case of death row inmate Clarence Brandley should be held outside Montgomery County, Attorney General Jim Mattox says.

Mattox ended a months-long inquiry into the case Wednesday, saying new evidence uncovered was inconclusive as to Brandley's guilt or innocence.

Mattox said copies of his office's investigation were sent to prosecutors and defense lawyers, but won't be released to the public now.

"Some new evidence was found, but it would not be considered clear and convincing evidence of Mr. Brandley's guilt or innocence," Mattox said.

Brandley, 35, was convicted of capital murder and sentenced to death in the Aug. 23, 1980, rape and strangulation of Cheryl Dee Ferguson, 16, a Bellville High School student. Miss Ferguson was at the Conroe High School, where Brandley worked as a janitor, for a volleyball game.

Miss Ferguson is white and Brandley is black, leading some of his supporters to contend the case was racially motivated. The case has attracted national publicity, and the attorney general's office began its investigation after two witnesses recanted testimony.

A new hearing in Montgomery

County District Court has been ordered for considering evidence in the case.

Mattox said he believes the hearing should be conducted by a visiting judge and moved to another county. Mattox said he hoped his report would be reviewed by both the prosecution and defense as they prepare for the upcoming hearing.

The attorney general also said he offered to recommend a new trial if Brandley took and passed a lie detector test. Brandley never agreed to take one, he said.

Mattox, who launched his investigation after receiving a request from Brandley's lawyers, said finding additional evidence was difficult.

"Because the case is a very old case, we knew from the beginning that we were going to have some real difficulty in locating new evidence that was not known to the prosecution and defense," he said.

"We managed to locate certain evidence, and we were able to make some determinations through both corroborative evidence and the use of polygraph examinations," he said.

But he added that both sides likely would find some new facts for their cases.

Mattox said the FBI also had conducted an inquiry about the Brandley case.

Two men at odds in court, election battle

PECOS (AP) — Raul Florez and Eddy Markham were already scheduled to battle in court, but now it appears they may be fighting each other on election day as well.

Markham, a jail employee who says he was assaulted by the Reeves County sheriff this summer, announced Wednesday he will run against Florez in next year's election.

"I have been considering it for some time," said Markham, 49. "I think it's time for a change. The only reason that I have chosen to go ahead and make my campaign designation is this will give me an opportunity not only to get some exposure, but to prepare my campaign and raise some funds."

But the battle between the two men didn't start on the political field. Markham claimed the sheriff struck him in July while he was on duty at the Reeves County Law Enforcement Center.

Florez was arrested July 8 and charged with a misdemeanor assault. He was freed on a $500 personal recognizance bond set by Reeves County Court at Law Judge Lee Green and is scheduled to go on trial next week. If convicted, he faces up to a year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

Warren Heagy, Florez' attorney, has said Florez didn't initiate the altercation and that the sheriff was merely defending himself.

Markham, who was appointed to his job by Florez in May 1986, is the controller and operations officer at the jail. He has worked with the Justice Department for 20 years, and worked for eight years with the Border Patrol.

Resistol: Hat of choice among real cowboys

GARLAND (AP) — Al Luiz says he's glad the urban cowboy craze is over.

"Our business is not like it was during the crazy years," he said. "It's back to normal." For Resistol, a leading maker of cowboy hats, the late 1970s and early 1980s were hectic and heady times.

Everyone in the country wanted to wear a cowboy hat, said Luiz, vice president for manufacturing. And Resistol was the cowboy hat that John Wayne and Lyndon Johnson wore. Today it is the hat of choice for Ronald Reagan and "J.R. Ewing."

The company's 50-year-old suburban Dallas plant was on double shifts trying to keep up with a demand that was almost twice that of today's annual 500,000-hat production.

Finding enough materials — the beaver, rabbit and wild hare skins that go into felt hats and the woven imported forms that are shaped into straw hats — was difficult, Luiz said.

He says the quality that makes Resistol the headgear of choice among real Texas cowboys probably suffered during that time, too. Originally developed by a Texas immigrant from New York City in the 1930s and marketed as "the most comfortable hat ever made" with a "sweat-proof" band, this Texas icon fell on hard times for a while when the urban cowboy era ended.

"When it died, it died suddenly," Luiz said. "It was like somebody turned off the light. It really hurt us for a long time."

But after the company's Western store customers sold down their overstocked inventory, Resistol was back doing what it does best, serving its core group — the working cowboy.

It is found in thousands of U.S. Western stores, racked under the roofs of tens of thousands of pickups driven by working cowhands, and on the heads of hundreds of thousands of spectators at rodeos across the West.

"The guy who makes only about $100 a week working on a ranch will go out and pay two weeks' salary for a good beaver Resistol," Luiz said. "The people who know Western hats will always buy a Resistol."

Ranging in price from about $45 for a summer straw standard to $5,000 for the top-of-the-line chinchilla felt version, Resistol hats are made to order on decades-old machinery at the sprawling Garland plant.

"None of these machines has been made in 25 or 30 years and some of them are much older than that," Luiz said.

Resistol has its own machine shop to fabricate parts to repair those machines, as well as its own print shop with more than 45,000 separate customer dies, he said.

It also has its own fur-cutting facility in Newark, N.J. — a port location to receive imported skins from Canada, Europe and South America — and a fur-forming plant in Longview where a water supply is plentiful.

Up to 150,000 gallons of water are used daily in the process that converts fur into the shaped felt forms that are shipped to the Garland plant to be made into finished hats, Luiz said.

The woven forms that are made into straw hats are imported directly from South America, chiefly Ecuador, according to Luiz. The weaving process, he said, can take half a day for a standard straw hat to as long as six weeks for a fine Panama.

Resistol also makes a wide variety of dress hats in Garland. "About the only kind we don't make are top hats," Luiz said.

He said the plant's inventory includes about 8,000 different trim items and more than 2,000 separate hat styles.

The 400 or so employees in Garland are paid on a piecework basis used throughout the garment industry in which the more a worker produces, the more money he makes, Luiz said.

The Resistol workforce is stable, and many employees have been with the company 20, 30 or even 40 years. "We had a woman in her 80s who retired last year after working for the company something like 60 years," said Luiz.

Resistol had its genesis with Harry Rolnick, who after growing up in a Jewish neighborhood in Brooklyn, moved with his family to Dallas in the early 1900s.

By 1917, the Rolnicks were operating a hat renovation shop in downtown Dallas. In 1921 with a $60,000 stake from a Dallas family Rolnick founded a company to make hats designed.

A year later, Rolnick and Ed Byer, a retired machine parts millionaire, took over the firm, renamed it the Byer-Rolnick Co. and went into business with $100,000 capital.

Rolnick began marketing the guaranteed Resistol brand in the 1930s. His patented interior leather band allowed for expansion resist confining contact with the head and the sweaty brows it created.

The 1936 Texas Centennial inspired Rolnick to begin producing Western hats. Although they made up only about 10 percent to 15 percent of the line in the early years Rolnick was going head-to-head with legendary Stetson.

The St. Joseph, Mo., hatmaker still is nemesis, but Resistol people don't like to talk about their chief competitor, Luiz said.

"We try not to say anything," he said. "Stetson has the well-known name — it's almost generic."

"When a tourist gets off the plane in Texas the first thing he says is he wants to buy Stetson."

But Luiz reiterated that "people who know Western hats buy Resistol."

Rolnick moved the plant from downtown Dallas to a 50-acre farm in Garland in 1938. Business boomed, and by 1953 he reported producing a million hats a year.

In 1968, clothing manufacturer Koret of California bought out Byer-Rolnick, and in 1979, Levi Strauss and Co. purchased Koret. In 1985, Irving Joel of Richmond, Va., bought Resistol and added it to his Dobbs, Churchill, Adam and London Fog hat line.

Company policy has kept the Resistol reputation strong through the years, Luiz said. "You can't buy a Resistol hat except in a Western store," he said. "Most of the better Western stores are exclusively Resistol."

"Our volume is up in a softening market and we think it's because of the quality."

Current Eddie Foy visits town where grandfather entertained

TOMBSTONE, Ariz. (AP) — More than a century had passed since an Eddie Foy had walked the streets of Tombstone, but one was back recently to check on his more famous predecessor.

Eddie Foy III, grandson of vaudevillian Eddie Foy, says his namesake got out of town a couple of days after the legendary gunfight at the OK Corral and never returned, because he feared for his life.

The current-generation Foy decided to return to Tombstone to see if all had been forgiven, or if at least it had been forgotten that his grandfather was armed and ready to support the Earps during that fateful day, albeit timidly.

"Wyatt Earp had given him a shotgun," Foy said. "But he did not like guns and was so sick to his stomach that he went to a church and hid."

Foy No. 3 said he had never met his grandfather, but he had heard about his life in the West from other family members and had read about it in the first five chapters of the book his grandfather wrote.

"He had one chapter on Tombstone," Foy said.

As Foy, who was in Tucson as a judge for the Miss Arizona contest, walked the boarded streets of Tombstone escorted by the community's costumed Wild Bunch, he said at first he thought the side trip to "The Town Too Tough To Die" would be fun and lighthearted.

But then he realized that Tombstone had meant a lot to his grandfather.

"It was here that he really began to make a name for himself (on the vaudeville circuit)," Foy said.

He said that his grandfather and Wyatt Earp had a long association which began in Dodge City, Kan., and that Earp had written his grandfather a letter asking him to come to Tombstone to entertain.

After the corral shootout, Earp sent the elder Foy to Leadville, Colo., Foy said, because Earp "didn't want him to get involved in the political aftermath of the shootout."

From there his grandfather went on to Denver and Chicago and finally to the big circuits out of New York City, he said.

In the mid-1920s, Earp and the elder Foy met again in New York City.

"He really loved Earp, and he loved his time in Tombstone," Foy said.

As for the No. 3 Foy, he says his relatives keep telling him that he has many of the traits his grandfather had.

"He was left-handed, and so am I, he was a boxing nut and so am I," Foy said. "I have even been told that I walk like him."

AT&T ANNOUNCES UPCOMING PRICE CHANGES FOR SOME TEXAS INTRASTATE SERVICES

AT&T announces the following price changes for some of its Texas intrastate services. These changes, which more closely reflect the actual costs incurred by AT&T in providing these services, will become effective on October 1, 1987.

- SDN (Software Defined Network) Schedule B prices will be reduced an overall 7.1%. Schedule C prices will be reduced 4.4% for the initial 30-second rate period of each call.
- WATS 80 service prices for both the initial period 80-hour usage and additional period usage will increase 5%.
- The monthly prices for AT&T's Private Line Service will increase up to $25 per channel termination for Analog services and 10% for Digital Data Services.
- A $25 monthly surcharge will also apply to any private lines which may be used to access the local exchange network, unless certified as exempt by the customer. The $25 surcharge, which was previously authorized by the Public Utility Commission of Texas, is a flow through of charges assessed by the Local Exchange Companies to AT&T for those Private Line services.

The combined effect of these price changes is expected to produce approximately $4.99 million annual revenue, which is approximately .5% of AT&T's annual revenues for all Texas intrastate services.

If you have questions regarding the changes for Private Line service, please call AT&T toll-free at 1-800-345-5092. If you have questions regarding the WATS or SDN price changes, please call our business consultants toll-free at 1-800-222-0400. AT&T's tariffs reflecting these changes will be filed with the Public Utility Commission of Texas on August 31, 1987, with an effective date of October 1, 1987.

Persons who have questions regarding this tariff filing may also contact the Public Utility Commission of Texas in writing, at 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, or by calling the Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223, or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 for teletypewriter for the deaf.

Brown now firmly in command of Houston police

By RUTH RENDON
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — When newly elected Mayor Kathy Whitmire named Lee Patrick Brown as her choice for Houston police chief, shock waves and rage swept through the force.

A 2,500-member police union publicly announced they'd rather see Brown remain in Atlanta where he was public safety commissioner.

He would be the first outsider in 42 years to head the department.

He would be the city's sixth chief in as many years.

He would be leading a 3,200-member force viewed by the community as brutal and racist.

And he would be the first black person to hold the job.

"I suspect that I'm one of the few people who are blessed," he says now, five years later. "I'm doing what I want to do and I'm sitting where I want to be. You can't ask for anything more than that professionally or personally. I feel excited about coming to work every day. I look forward to it."

Despite the initial antagonism and multitude of problems, Brown says he had no doubt he would succeed in making the Houston force a good one.

"Houston was plagued by having a rapid turnover in police chiefs with no sustained direction. The biggest thing I found was that members of the department wanted to be respected and wanted to do a good job," Brown says from behind his big oak desk at the downtown headquarters. "The primary task I had initially was to make sure that we provided them with that direction."

His first chore was putting together an assessment of the department and a subsequent plan of action to correct any problems.

The assessment turned out to be a bound book showing the department had problems in hiring officers and keeping them and problems in management and operations. The No. 1 priority, Brown's study showed, was to restructure the department.

When he took over April 19, 1982, 8.5 percent of the police force was black and 8.2 percent was Hispanic. In the supervisory ranks, three lieutenants and 29 sergeants were Hispanic and 15 sergeants were black, compared with 90 Anglo lieutenants and 567 Anglo sergeants.

Under Brown's tenure, blacks now make up 13.6 percent of the force, while Hispanics account for 10.9 percent. One black and two Hispanics are now captains, while three blacks and seven Hispanics are lieutenants. There are 39 black, 52 Hispanic and 710 Anglo sergeants.

Brown's plan of action also included opening storefront police stations to make officers a part of the community.

In May, Brown got a national leadership award for the plan, which has become a model for police departments around the country.

"In the police force you have to have the community involvement of the people," the 49-year-old chief says. "There are ways of doing that and what we've done in the past five years is experimenting with a lot of different programs."

Mrs. Whitmire's appointment of Brown has been one of the mayor's smartest moves, political analyst

Richard Murray of the University of Houston says.

"I thought it was a brilliant stroke," Murray says. "She went through a tough campaign and in the runoff (election) got 95 percent of the black vote and that elected her. She needed to solidify that position and she got a lot of confidence on that behalf by appointing Brown."

In most Houston mayoral elections, the police department was a major issue. Under Brown, it was not, Murray notes.

Not coincidentally, Mrs. Whitmire comfortably has won re-election to two more terms, with solid support from the black community. Her bid for a fourth two-year term in November so far has drawn only token opposition.

Mrs. Whitmire said she knew Brown would face opposition from officers because he was an outsider and the department was set in its ways.

"I had no doubts after meeting Lee Brown that he could handle the job," she said. "Now, I couldn't be more pleased with Chief Brown. He's been a good chief for the office, the citizens and for all of the community." Brown was approached about the Houston job by a search firm hired by the city.

"I told them I was happy in Atlanta and not in the job market and had no intentions of leaving," the chief says. "But they were very persistent."

The courtship lasted several weeks before he met Mrs. Whitmire and decided to accept.

Brown's resume didn't just include his position as public safety commissioner in Atlanta. He also has a doctorate in criminology, master's degrees in criminology and sociology and a bachelor's in criminology. He started his law enforcement career in San Jose, Calif., in 1961.

Brown, married and the father of four, says he is content in Houston and insists he has no intention of leaving his $90,000-a-year job.

Mark Clark, head of the 2,500-member Houston Police Officers' Association, says although he and the chief often are at odds, Brown "is a very good

If the governing body of a political subdivision took official action to tax the items before January 1, 1988, the tax would be effective for the 1988 tax year. If the action were taken after January 1, 1988, and before April 1, 1988, the tax would become effective January 1, 1989.

In Nueces County, the powers, duties, and functions of the treasurer would be transferred to the county clerk.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to provide for the abolition of the office of county treasurer in Gregg, Fayette, and Nueces counties."

PROPOSITION NO. 16
ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 6 proposes a constitutional amendment to allow the commissioners court in a county with a population of more than 150,000 to establish more than one Justice of the Peace court in each Justice of the Peace precinct, i.e., to provide for the election of more than one Justice of the Peace in each Justice of the Peace precinct.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment providing that certain justice precincts may contain more than one justice of the peace court."

PROPOSITION NO. 17
ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 26 proposes a constitutional amendment to allow the legislature to define by law those municipal functions that are governmental and those that are proprietary. This authorization would apply to laws passed by the 70th Legislature, 1987, and by future legislatures in regular or special session. A municipality is liable for damages arising out of acts committed under its proprietary functions, but not its governmental functions. Definition of such functions by the legislature would clarify the liability of a municipality in civil lawsuits filed against it.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment authorizing the legislature to define for all purposes the governmental and proprietary functions of a municipality."

PROPOSITION NO. 18
ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 18 proposes a constitutional amendment to authorize the legislature to provide for the creation, operation, and financing of jail districts. Financing of a jail district could be accomplished through the issuance of bonds and other obligations, or by levy of an ad valorem tax on property located in the district if the qualified electors of a district approve an ad valorem tax or bonds secured by a property tax.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment relating to the creation, operation, and financing of jail districts."

PROPOSITION NO. 19
ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 88 proposes a constitutional amendment to authorize the issuance of $500 million in general obligation bonds, the proceeds of which will be used to establish a superconducting super collider fund. The fund would be used to provide economic incentives for the superconducting super collider research facility, and the agency administering the fund would be authorized to grant land or property to the United States government for undertakings related to the facility.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment authorizing the issuance of general obligation bonds to fund undertakings related to a superconducting super collider research facility sponsored or authorized by the United States government, and to make appropriate grants for such undertakings."

PROPOSITION NO. 20
ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 96 proposes a constitutional amendment to allow the legislature to provide ad valorem tax relief for mobile offshore oil and gas well drilling equipment. The tax relief would be limited to equipment that is being stored while not in use in a county that is adjacent to the Gulf of Mexico or on a body of water that is adjacent to the Gulf of Mexico.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to authorize the legislature to provide ad valorem tax relief for certain offshore drilling equipment that is not in use."

PROPOSITION NO. 21
ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 17 proposes a constitutional amendment to provide for legislative involvement in the executive branch of government by permitting the legislature to include the speaker of the house of representatives in the membership of an agency or committee that includes officers of the executive branch of government and performs executive functions. Under current law, the legislature is not allowed to exercise any powers in executive matters under Article II of the Texas Constitution, which provides for the "separation of powers" into three distinct departments.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment permitting the legislature to include the speaker of the house of representatives or the speaker's appointee in the membership of an executive agency or committee."

PROPOSITION NO. 22
ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 53 proposes a constitutional amendment to allow the legislature to limit the term of office of a gubernatorial appointee to a vacancy in a state or district office to a partial, temporary term if the appointment is made on or after November 1 of the last year of the governor's term and the governor is not reelected. Under this amendment, the legislature may provide that the tenure of such an appointee would end sooner than the term would normally expire.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to allow the legislature to limit the authority of a governor to fill vacancies in state and district offices during the end of the governor's term if the governor is not reelected."

PROPOSITION NO. 23
ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 54 proposes a constitutional amendment to authorize the Texas Water Development Board to issue an additional $400 million in water development bonds. Of the $400 million authorized, $200 million would be designated for conservation and development of water resources, $150 million would be designated for water quality enhancement, and $50 million would be designated for flood control. The amendment also authorizes the legislature to provide for review and approval of the issuance of the bonds and the use of the bond proceeds.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to authorize the issuance of an additional $400 million of Texas Water Development Bonds for water supply, water quality, and flood control purposes."

PROPOSITION NO. 24
ON THE BALLOT

House Joint Resolution 83 proposes a constitutional amendment to allow a county to use county equipment and personnel to perform work, without compensation, for another governmental entity if the commissioners court finds that the work will not interfere with the performance of county work and approves performance of the work. The governmental entity must be located wholly or partly in the county, and the governing body of the governmental entity must file a written work request with the commissioners court.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to permit a county to perform work, without compensation, for another governmental entity."

PROPOSITION NO. 25
ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 5 proposes a constitutional amendment to allow the Legislature to authorize Randall County to levy a tax for the benefit of the Amarillo Hospital District. Any such tax could be levied only on property located outside the City of Amarillo and outside the South Randall County Hospital District. The tax could not be more than 75¢ per $100 property valuation and would be effective only upon approval by the voters in the area to be taxed. If the tax is authorized by the Legislature and approved by voters, the Amarillo Hospital District is to serve residents of part of Randall County. If a tax is levied under this provision, Randall County must repay the State for the cost of publication of this amendment.

The proposed amendment also permits the legislature to authorize a hospital district to change its boundaries or jurisdiction if the district was created or authorized by a constitutional provision that includes a description of the boundaries or jurisdiction of the district. Any change in the boundaries or jurisdiction of such a hospital district would become effective only upon approval of the voters in the district.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment authorizing the legislature to permit the Amarillo Hospital District to serve certain residents of Randall County, to authorize Randall County to provide financial assistance to the district, and to authorize certain hospital districts to change their boundaries or jurisdiction with voter approval."

REFERENDUM NO. 1

Senate Bill 86 submits to the voters the question of whether the 15 members of the State Board of Education should be appointed instead of elected. If the proposition passes, the Governor will appoint a member of the board for each district, with the consent of the Senate. If the proposition fails, the members will be elected from these districts.

The referendum will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The State Board of Education shall be composed of members who are appointed from districts instead of elected, with equal representation throughout the State of Texas."

REFERENDUM NO. 2

The Texas Racing Act submits to the voters the question of whether pari-mutuel wagering should be legal in Texas on a county-by-county local option basis. If pari-mutuel wagering is adopted by the voters statewide, a county must also pass a separate proposition on pari-mutuel wagering at an election held in the county before any such wagering may be conducted in that county.

The referendum will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The legalization of pari-mutuel wagering under the Texas Racing Act on a county-by-county local option basis."

Roller skaters want to be legal

HOUSTON (AP) — Roller skaters weaving through Houston's traffic-clogged streets are subject to fines of up to $200 under a 45-year-old law and they don't like it.

"I don't consider my skates to be toys at all," skate mechanic Jim Sherman says. "I've got $450 tied up in them as my main form of transportation."

Since at least 1942, Houston has had an ordinance prohibiting use of "toy vehicles" — like skates and scooters — on city roadways.

"Technically we are breaking the law, and we'd like to see the law changed," Sherman told the Houston Chronicle. "All we're asking for is the same rights and consideration given the joggers and bicycles out there."

A group of hard-core skaters, many of whom gather at Sherman's Montrose Skate Shop and call themselves the Urban Animals, want to change the law.

The law says they must stay on sidewalks or crosswalks or face a possible ticket. The "Animals," however, say the law forces skaters into pedestrian traffic and fails to take into account areas without sidewalks.

The law was passed when skates were rickety, metal-wheeled, strap-on play things but now are reliable, smooth-rolling transportation, Sherman and his employer, shop owner John McKay, say.

"We all agree with the intention of keeping kids out of the street," McKay says. "But these are adults, not irresponsible maniacs."

"My personal feeling is that I am not a criminal when I'm out skating to work."

Skaters complain police have been ticketing them more, although police and prosecutors deny such a campaign exists.

At least one member of the city council, which could change the law, thinks no change is needed.

"I think it sounds like a very bad idea, basically for the safety of the skaters, the motorists and in our quest for mobility," says Councilman Jim Greenwood.

Greenwood noted skates, unlike bicycles, have no brakes and that the city might face increased legal liability and a higher standard for preventing bumpy roads and potholes if skaters are allowed in the streets.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Wife cuddles too close for hubby's comfort

DEAR ABBY: I got married three months ago to a wonderful lady. I am 31 and she's 26. The problem: She insists on sleeping in the same space that I sleep in. I thought it was kind of cute at first, but now I am annoyed. She practically sleeps on top of me. I can't sleep with somebody touching me, let alone using me as a human pillow. She says she's not able to sleep any other way.

I have tried everything including begging and pleading. I've pushed her to one side of the bed only to wake up later with her on top of me again. I've tried cuddling with her until she falls asleep, then moving to another bed, but she awakens and comes over to join me. She slept on my arm one night and it was nearly useless for two full days!

We've had numerous arguments about this. I asked her what she did when she was single. She said she slept alone because she had to, and does not intend to sleep alone now that she has a man to sleep with — correction — sleep on.

If this keeps up, I may have to rent a motel room to get a good night's sleep.

What a way to start a marriage! I love her, but wonder if this woman needs some psychiatric attention. What do you think?

SLEEPLESS
IN PALO ALTO

DEAR SLEEPLESS: Nowhere is it carved in stone that, once married, a person must give up his/her right to a good night's sleep to please the other. Your bride appears to be spoiled, selfish and immature. Buy her an inflatable life-sized man to sleep on, and stand your ground. And yes, she does need counseling if she can't compromise.

DEAR ABBY: I work in a three-person office. My two co-workers like the temperature "cool." However, what they consider "cool" is too cold for me. Consequently they are always switching the thermostat to regulate the temperature to suit themselves.

Today my fingers were so cold I had to put gloves on. (Ever try to type with gloves, Abby?) I complained to the boss, and he said, "If you are cold, put a sweater on — the other two workers are more valuable to me."

Any suggestions?

ONE AGAINST TWO

DEAR ONE: Now that you know how you rate with your boss, you have two choices: Dress for Siberia or find another job.

Mackie, Miller nominated for costume Emmy

On Emmy night, two of Hollywood's most famous couturiers — Bob Mackie and Nolan Miller — will be up, once again, for the same Emmy Award: Outstanding Costume Design for a Miniseries or a Special.

It happened once before, in a different category, with both of them nominated for, and then winning, an Emmy for Outstanding Costume Design for a Series, 1983-1984. Mackie won for Original Costume Concept, "Mama's Birthday" episode of "Mama's Family" (Ret Turner won for Costumes); Miller won for "The Wedding" episode of "Dynasty."

Between them, Mackie and Miller have won seven Emmys for Outstanding Costume Design.

This year, Mackie has been nominated for the CBS miniseries "Fresno," and Miller has been nominated for the NBC miniseries "The Two Mrs. Grenvilles." The winner will be announced on the 39th Annual Emmy Awards, telecast live from the Pasadena (Calif.) Civic Auditorium, 8 to 11 p.m. Eastern Standard Time, Sunday, Sept. 20 on Fox Broadcasting Company.

The program will air on the West Coast on a tape delay basis.

Mackie has also been nominated for "Mama's Family," Outstanding Costume Design for a Series (Original Costume Concept).

"Fresno," a spoof of prime-time soap operas, starred Carol Burnett and Terri Garr, whose elegant wardrobe included suits, gowns and penoirs. It was not the first time Mackie has worked with Burnett.

Their long-standing professional association includes the original wardrobe Mackie created for Burnett during the 11-year run of "The Carol Burnett Show." Last year, he won an Emmy for Original Design Concept for the costumes of "Mama's Family," a spin-off of the Carol Burnett series. He's again been nominated this year for "Mama's Family."

Mackie, who has won six Emmys and has been nominated three times for Oscars, has designed the wardrobe for such other superstars as Cher, Tina Turner, Ann-Margret, Diana Ross, Raquel Welch and Barbra Streisand.

Mackie, 46, is known as the "Wizard of Hollywood." He has written a successful "how to" book, "Dressing for Glamour," and is president, partner and designer for the fast-growing New York-based ready-to-wear firm bearing his name.

Miller, who has been nominated for Ann-Margret's wardrobe on "The Two Mrs. Grenvilles," provided her with 51 costume changes for this period piece.

"Most of what we needed had to be made, as there were few things available," said Miller.

He won his previous Emmy in the category of Outstanding Costume Design for a Series for "The Wedding" episode of "Dynasty," starring Joan Collins and Linda Evans. He has had four other nominations.

Miller describes his job as "20 percent design and 80 percent psychology." Schooled at the Chouinard Art Institute, he began his apprenticeship with Aaron Spelling and Dick Powell, creating fashion "entrance makers" for such legendary stars as Jane Wyman, Joan Crawford and Barbara Stanwyck.

Who will win this time — Mackie or Miller?

Or will they both walk away with an Emmy — as they did once before?

Small accessories make big news in Europe

By MARY MARTIN NIEPOLD

MILAN (NEA) — Accessories, small as they may be, can make or break a fashion ensemble.

Here in Italy, the value of a quality leather handbag is widely appreciated. Europeans recognize the importance of investing in fine leather — usually in smaller proportions than please American tastes.

Less is definitely more for the savvy European. While some women may not be able to afford an expensive jacket or blouse for the new season, they will spend as much as $400 for that one perfect, small bag. Italian women invest in fine leather shoes with the same insistence on quality.

At MIPEL, a semi-annual Milanese trade show of small leather goods, more than 500 manufacturers, mostly Italian, demonstrated that handbags for fall are a vital ingredient in completing the "successful" look of Europe and America's ready-to-wear collections.

Fall handbags from Italy are satiny leathers or meticulously handcrafted skins, and are frequently embossed (stamped to create textured patterns like pebbles) or color-printed to appear as patterns like plaid.

Classic is the overall theme for this fall's new bags. Black is the hands-down favorite — at moderate prices or more upscale interpretations from houses like Ferragamo and Gucci.

Brown is the second leading color, and combinations of black and brown appear at all price levels. Dominant interpretations of these classic colorations are square clutches or geometric-shaped shoulder bags showing classic luggage stitching in brown bags.

"What's new for fall," said designer Cesare Piccini, "is tones of camel and medium brown, like rust. Also burgundy and a touch of green."

"The American woman," he said, "is beginning to develop a taste in the last 20 years — she wants to look like a woman, but not too dressed up."

In that sense, sporty classic shapes and colors are the dominant theme for fall bags and shoes. Contrast stitching, architecturally inspired metal clasps, subdued tucks and folds, and semi-hard shapes like squares and rectangles — in clutches as well as shoulder bags — echo this return to classics, where the best pieces are those in the softest calf or pure crocodile and grained hides.

"The way I see things," said Marlo Di Stefano, director of the Nobel Tannery near Florence, one of Italy's largest, "is that the market will no longer accept ugly products at low prices."

Leathers have taken on new technology for special-occasion shoes and bags. Daytime bags were frequently stamped to appear as skins, particularly crocodile.

The "croco" craze aside, the newest patterns for day are embossed leathers that appear to be stones or pebbles. Be on the fashion alert for leathers that have been embossed and colored to appear as moire. The prettiest of these are draped clutches in navy, burgundy or emerald green, and only a hand's touch determines that they are leather, not fabric styled like the opera bags of the turn-of-the-century.

Another strong indicator of the return to classics is the rebirth of hand handles, "like the Grace Kelly bag," according to director Andrea Calistri in the S.A.P.A.F. showrooms in Florence. But true color-and-pattern enthusiasts should look for leather bags that have been printed — this fall, the strongest print patterns are plaid, then paisley.

Through all the choices, remember that shoes and bags, as much as the season's new body-conscious suits, flared coats and short skirts, determine how you perceive yourself. As one shoe designer said, "A woman should spend equally for her accessories as she does for her clothing."

Fiamma Ferragamo, design director for the women's division of the Ferragamo house, puts it this way: "I think accessories are a style of life. It's a way of being cultured."

Harvesters tackle seventh-ranked Hereford

Penalties hurt Pampa in setback to Sandies

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

The Pampa Harvesters are being schooled on cutting down on penalties and turnovers in practice sessions this week. And when the recess bell rings, head coach Dennis Cavalier is hoping to send the Harvesters out a much-improved team for Friday night's District 1-4A opener against Hereford.

"A lot of things hurt against Amarillo High (who defeated Pampa 28-0 in the season opener last week) and penalties was one of them," Cavalier said. "Especially those delay of game penalties, which were my fault."

Pampa opened the game with a penalty on an out of bounds kickoff and the infractions kept sprouting up like weeds in a neglected lawn.

Pampa piled up 90 yards in penalties against Amarillo High, including back-to-back clipping calls in the third quarter which halted the Harvester offense on the AHS 46. A 15-yard unsportsmanlike conduct flag in Pampa territory led to a first down and an eventual TD for the Sandies in the fourth quarter.

The Harvesters lost three fumbles operating out of their multiple I offense and two of those miscues led to Sandie touchdowns. Numerous times, the Harvesters were stalled by poor pitchouts and handoffs.

"We're going to have turnovers because we're running a high risk offense, but we've just got to cut down on them," Cavalier said. "We lost good field position, especially in the first half and the Sandies capitalized on it."

However, Cavalier was pleased with the Harvesters' intensity throughout the game against the Class 5A Sandies.

"We played real hard against the Sandies and the players enjoyed the game and the challenge," Cavalier said. "I couldn't have asked more out of them."

Hereford, a state semifinalist a year ago, opened the season with a 26-0 shut out of Andrews before bowing to Clovis, N.M. 21-14 last week.

"We're looking forward to playing them. Hereford has one of those great programs, like Amarillo High," Cavalier said. "Their team is just the reverse of last year. They have a good senior defensive team with the younger players on offense."

Middle linebacker Lee Young (210-pound senior) leads the Whitefaces' defense with his ferocious tackling.

Hereford also has a huge defensive line, led by 240-pound end Derrell Page.

The Associated Press had Hereford ranked second in the state, but the Whitefaces slipped to seventh after the loss to Clovis, N.M. Hereford's offense is paced by running back Marcus Brown, who has rushed for 246 yards in two games. Brown had to leave the Clovis game in the second quarter with a strained achilles tendon.

"Right now we don't if Marcus will be able to play or not," said Hereford head coach Don Cumpston.

Pampa enters the 7:30 p.m. clash with a 14-game losing streak, but Cumpston doesn't feel any more comfortable knowing that fact.

"Pampa is much, much better than those preseason picks," Cumpston said. "I was impressed with them against Amarillo High because I've never seen a team play any harder. Coach Cavalier is doing a heckuva job and he's got them going in the right direction."

David Fields at fullback and Dustin Miller at quarterback are the keys to Pampa's offense, Cumpston feels, and either one could give Hereford trouble if they're at the top of their game.

"Fields (200-pound junior) is a big strong runner who can break tackles. 'I've been impressed with Miller (190-pound junior) since I first saw him in a scrimmage some time ago."

"You know, the Sandies have a good enough team to get into the playoffs and Pampa stayed right in there and fought them all the way," Cumpston said. Hereford won last year's game 38-26.

Probable starting lineups are listed below:

Pokes ready to strike

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Dallas Cowboys players are firmly behind their union in its battle with National Football League management as the threat of a strike by the NFL Players Association looms, a union official said.

Gene Upshaw, union executive director, told about 40 players to expect a season-long strike if an agreement is not reached. He flew to Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport to meet with Dallas players on Wednesday.

"We have to pull our wheels into motion for the worst," Upshaw said. "When I started this process, I planned to come down this road to avoid a strike. The players know that. That's why they have confidence in my position."

A union negotiator said there was a good possibility a strike would start Tuesday.

Cowboys president Tex Schramm, a member of the management council's executive committee, said Upshaw's trip from union headquarters in Washington shows the organization isn't sure of players' support.

"If I were dealing from a position of confidence, I wouldn't be in Dallas, still trying to sell the program to players," Schramm said.

Upshaw said he decided to meet with the Cowboys players after talking to Dallas player representative Doug Cosbie.

Harvester football fans invited to Hereford feed

The Senior Class of Hereford High School invites Pampa fans to eat supper before Friday's football game in Hereford.

Senior Coordinator Gene Brock said the class will sponsor the Mexican supper from 5 to 7 p.m. in the high school cafeteria, located at Union Street and F Avenue.

The supper will consist of enchiladas, beans, guacamole, peach cobbler and drinks, coffee, tea or Kool-Aid.

Cost of the supper is $4 per plate.

Can Groom defense keep scoreless streak intact?

GRUVER at GROOM, 8 p.m. kickoff

The Game of the Week

Gruver Coach David Steele is confident his team will be able to score Friday night against the Tigers.

Steele ought to check with Clarendon and Highland Park, though, to see just how tough that chore might be.

No one has scored on Groom (2-0) in quite some time, but Groom Coach Terry Coffee feels their three game-plus scoreless streak may be in jeopardy against the Greyhounds.

Groom, ranked No. 17 in the statewide Harris Poll this week, is a 26-point favorite.

Gruver is 0-2 with losses to Turpin, Okla. (28-6) and Sunray (28-13).

Groom won last year's contest 42-14.

WHEELER at HOBART, OKLA., 8 p.m.

This Texas-Oklahoma Boundary Battle promises to be another barn burner as both teams are ranked in their state's top tens.

Wheeler (2-0) is ranked No. 4 in the Associated Press and No. 8 in Harris. Hobart, is ranked No. 2 in Oklahoma 2A ball.

Hobart touts one of Oklahoma's premier receivers in Tony Scallion while its offensive line averages 180 pounds and the defensive front weighs in at a 190 pound average.

Hobart defeated Wheeler 20-7 last year.

CLARENDON at WHITE DEER, 8 p.m.

Buck head coach Windy Williams expects another "good football game" against the unpredictable Bronchos and expects Clarendon to go through the air often with senior QB Wes Hatley.

White Deer will remain without the services of end Todd Haynes who is still suffering from a deep chest bruise sustained in the Bucks' season opener against Canadian. T.W. Lowe will start in Haynes' place.

Bart Thomas will start the game at quarterback for White Deer, although Williams will provide for a shuttle service between Thomas and Craig Davis.

White Deer shows up in the No. 125 slot in this week's rankings while Clarendon holds down the 156th spot. The Bucks are the chosen favorites, by eight.

White Deer slipped by with a 7-6 victory in last year's meeting.

McLEAN at VALLEY, 8 p.m. The Tigers are still looking for their first victory of the season, but might be looking in the wrong place as they face Valley Friday.

Valley is 1-1 after opening the season with an impressive 47-6 win over Claude.

"They've got a lot of speed and a balanced attack," McLean Coach George Watson said. "I feel good that we're improving, though."

The Tigers have had five more students suit out in the last two weeks which improves their depth.

Kyle Wood will not see action after suffering a mild concussion in last week's 35-0 loss to Clarendon.

McLean is rated 129th in the state; Valley is rated 34th and has been picked a 45-point favorite.

The Patriots won last year's game 52-6.

SHAMROCK at MANGUM, OKLA., 8 p.m.

The other interstate rivalry this weekend, the Irish will attempt to come back from last year's loss to Mangum and last week's setback to Wheeler.

Now 1-1, Shamrock is rated the No. 165 team in Texas 2A ball.

NBC silent on strike plans

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

CBS says it is considering numerous possibilities, from auto racing to triathlons, to fill broadcast time if there is a strike by National Football League players next week.

NBC is keeping quiet about its plans.

"We have no comment on strike contingency plans. We'll just wait and see," NBC spokesman Kevin Monahan said Wednesday. "We hope that they continue to negotiate and a strike is averted."

During the 1982 strike, ABC showed movies during the "Monday Night Football" slot and likely would do it again.

CBS spokesman Mark Carlson said on Wednesday there "are a whole lot of things under consideration," if the NFL tried to play in the face of a strike.

"We probably are obligated to do games if they (the NFL) can play them," Carlson said.

"There are all sorts of things being investigated," he said. "If there are no games, we are investigating possibly doing College Football Association games, moving them from Saturday to Sunday."

In order to do that, the colleges would have to agree to such a move.

The current network contract with the NFL has provisions for rebates to the networks if there is a strike.

NBC had no comment on reports that the PGA offered its weekly tournament finals to the networks on a rights-free basis if there is an NFL strike. There are no golf tournaments scheduled for TV through the end of the year.

Carlson confirmed the PGA offer and said it was also under consideration.

"That's just one of many things," Carlson said. "Auto races, boxing... We did a lot of auto races, triathlons, those kinds of things during the last strike."

this week for the Rangers and Warriors, and Miami Coach Currie McWilliams is hoping that his banged and bruised team can perform Friday as well as they did last week.

Although no game-missing injuries occurred last week, McWilliams said his crew is sore. McWilliams does see a vastly improved and surprising Patton Springs squad.

"They beat Smyer 6-0 and played close with Rochester last week," McWilliams said. "Anytime you don't give up a touchdown in six-man football, your defense is pretty good."

The Rangers will, of course, key on tailback Shane Bridwell who last week scored seven touchdowns and rushed for 188 yards.

Patton Springs returns four starters from last year.

"I feel like it'll be a good ball game. Our kids will have to work to win it," McWilliams said.

LAZBUDDIE at LEFORS, 7 p.m. If the Pirates had to do it over again, they would probably choose not to schedule Lazbuddie as their '87 home opener.

The Longhorns, in their first year of six-man ball, opened the season with a 47-2 win over West Texas Christian and a week later, defeated Lorraine 71-21.

Lefors, meanwhile, is trying to regroup after successive shut-outs in the first two weeks.

Friday's game will be the first meeting between the two teams.

CANADIAN at LUBBOCK ROOSEVELT, 2 p.m. Saturday

Wildcat Coach Paul Wilson feels his team's biggest problem this week may be fatigue.

Canadian will have to endure a five-hour road trip, leaving at 6:30 a.m. Saturday to take on the tough Roosevelt Eagles.

"They're bigger and more physical than they were last year," Wilson said of the returning district champs. "They're kind of a power team and have a 202 pound tailback in J.D. Douglas."

Roosevelt did suffer losses to graduation and are down some from last year.

Ranked 121st in Texas 3A, the Eagles are 1-1. Their only loss was a 6-0 decision to Floydada last week.

Canadian, a two-point favorite, is rated No. 41 in the state in 2A.

Blue Jays, Tigers remain tied in AL East Division

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The Toronto Blue Jays and Detroit Tigers are showing they have more in common than a share of first place in the American League East for four consecutive days.

Both teams, whose 88-57 records are the best in either league, got outstanding performances from their ace pitchers and their cleanup hitters Wednesday night.

Jack Morris pitched a three-hitter and Alan Trammell drove in two runs with his 26th homer and a double as the Tigers beat the Boston Red Sox 4-1.

Jimmy Key shut out the Baltimore Orioles on six hits for seven innings and George Bell knocked in two runs, giving him a major league-leading 124, as the Blue Jays blanked the Baltimore Orioles 7-0.

Morris, 18-8, didn't allow a hit for the first 5 1-3 innings. He allowed one unearned run, walked two and struck out four while pitching his 12th complete game.

In other games, it was Seattle 5, Cleveland 3; Milwaukee 5, New York 4; Chicago 13, Minnesota 10; California 6, Kansas City 4, and Texas 4, Oakland 1.

The Blue Jays and Tigers will play each other in seven of their remaining 17 games. The seven games will be played from Sept. 24 through Oct. 4.

Blue Jays 7, Orioles 0

Tony Fernandez had three hits and three RBI as Toronto kept pace with Detroit and handed Baltimore its ninth consecutive loss.

Strike threat grows

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — With the deadline for an NFL players strike less than a week away, the rhetoric on both sides is escalating. So is the likelihood of the second walkout in five years.

The owners flatly rejected Wednesday the latest union proposal, with chief negotiator Jack Donlan dsaying a strike starting Tuesday "a very good possibility."

Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association, agreed.

"Oh, yeah, there's going to be one because they forced it," Upshaw said. "It's like they had an agenda to force a strike and break the union."

Donlan advocated an impartial mediator, but the Players union flatly rejected the idea, noting that mediation has not worked in previous strikes. No further negotiations have been scheduled, and Upshaw was scheduled to meet today with Lane Kirkland, executive director of the AFL-CIO.

Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council, said he thought full negotiations would be futile at this point without mediation, although he called Upshaw in hopes of scheduling a one-on-one meeting. Dick Berthelsen, the union's chief counsel, said he relayed Donlan's message to Upshaw, but there was no other response from the NFLPA.

The strike is scheduled to begin following Monday night's game between the New York Jets and New England Patriots at Giants Stadium. That was also the site of the meeting between the Green Bay Packers and New York Giants, the final game before the players walked out for 57 days and seven games in 1982.

The union's latest proposal came Tuesday, when it withdrew its call for total free agency and limited it to players with more than four years' experience.

But Donlan, who suggested it looked like the union proposal was inviting a strike, dismissed it as little more than a variation on the original NFLPA position, first put on the table April 20.

Upshaw, meanwhile, continued to look for someone in management to make a deal. "We don't need a mediator, we need a negotiator," he said.

Upshaw has said several times he would accept Commissioner Pete Rozelle as a deal maker but not as a neutral mediator. He has also spoken with Dan Rooney, president of the Pittsburgh Steelers and a member of the Management Council's executive committee.

Rooney, with the help of Paul Marth, a lawyer and former Steeler, was instrumental in ending the 1982 strike.

Settlement nears in new auto pact

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Intensive bargaining for a contract for 104,000 Ford Motor Co. workers continued today after both sides said they had nearly settled despite the hospitalization of union President Owen Bieber.

Ford and the United Auto Workers union had kept Bieber's absence from the talks secret for nearly 24 hours after he was hospitalized Tuesday night for stomach pains and fatigue.

Top negotiators had worked for nearly a week without a full night's rest except for Monday night, when Bieber granted Ford an indefinite extension of its contract past the 11:59 p.m. expiration.

It was the first time in the union's history it had granted such an extension to its strike target, or the company it had selected to settle with first to create a pattern for other contracts.

"Our objective is to get an agreement. We're pushing real hard," UAW spokesman Frank Joyce said late Wednesday before both sides imposed a news blackout.

Bieber, 57, was listed in good condition today at Henry Ford Hospital, where coincidentally former company president Henry Ford II has been hospitalized in intensive care for pneumonia.

A union source who spoke on condition of anonymity said Bieber had remained in communication with negotiators and was not seriously ill.

Bieber granted Ford the extension after company negotiators presented a complex job security proposal that would protect the jobs of Ford's unionized workers during the three-year contract.

According to published reports, industry analysts and union sources, the sides had agreed to:

- Guarantee UAW jobs on a plant-by-plant basis, which would give Ford some flexibility to determine the future work force size at less productive plants.

- A 3 percent wage increase in the first year of the three-year contract and lump sum payments in the second and third years.

- Allow Ford to lay off workers on a temporary basis only.
- Require the recall of laid-off workers instead of ordering overtime when sales recover after a slump.

- Replace one of every two workers who leave the payroll by attrition.
- Require Ford to place strict limits on transfer of work outside the company.

- Extend a moratorium on plant closings. However, a union source said the moratorium most likely would not include the previously announced closings of Ford's Green Island, N.Y., radiator plant and its forge in Canton, Ohio.

Newspaper reports U.S. attacks on Libyan targets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Security Council staff ordered Navy commandos into Libya for clandestine demolition and intelligence missions last year, according to a published report.

The Journal newspapers, which circulate in the suburbs of Washington, quoted anonymous sources as saying the CIA was not informed of the missions. It said Navy SEALs units landed repeatedly from submarines near the Libyan city of Benghazi from May to October last year.

The teams blew up communications lines, collected intelligence on coastal defenses and engaged in "deceit and cover" operations, according to the report in Wednesday's Journal editions.

Navy spokesman Lt. Ken Ross refused to confirm or deny the report, as did Lt. Col. Arnold Williams, a Pentagon spokesman.

The expeditions began shortly after the April 14, 1986, U.S. bombing raids against Tripoli and Benghazi, the Journal source said, and were intended to destabilize the regime of Col. Moammar Gadhafi.

Names in the news

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A decision on whether to prosecute "L.A. Law" star Jimmy Smits for a scuffle with police has been delayed because the actor at first refused to make a statement, a city attorney's spokesman said.

Smits, who portrays Victor Sifuentes on the hit series, was arrested Aug. 10 with his live-in girlfriend, Juanita Cruz, after police went to their apartment to investigate a report of domestic violence.

An appointment in Municipal Court for arraignment was canceled Monday, said city attorney's spokesman Mike Qualls.

Smits, 33, and Ms. Cruz, 28, were arrested for investigation of battery on a police officer. They were freed on $1,000 bail each.

ROME (AP) — Greek actress Irene Papas, starring in an 18th century Neapolitan work to be staged at New York's St. John the Divine Cathedral, will open a fall festival of Italian productions and art.

Broadway, Lincoln Center, the World Trade Center and other landmarks will be host to "Italy on Stage 1987," which will encompass Italian theater, cinema, dance, and music, the festival's organizers said Wednesday.

The festival, which will simultaneously take place in Toronto featuring a different program, begins on Oct. 6 and ends in November.
