Word thief Biden drops

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Sen. Joseph Biden, the second Democratic presidential candidate to drop out of the race amid questions of character and integrity, says he is angry at himself but vows, "There'll be other presidential campaigns, and I'll be there."

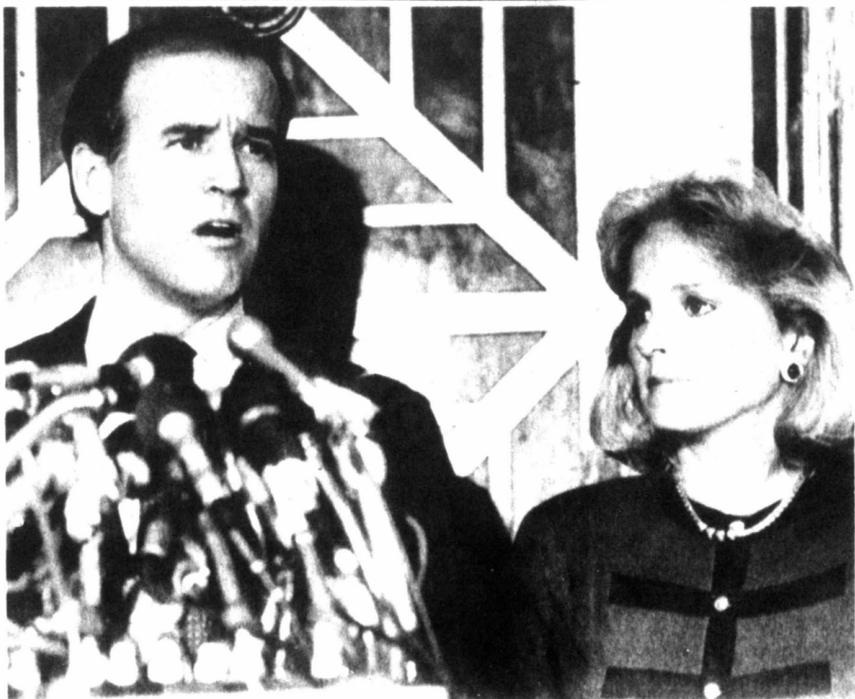

Biden was flying today to Des Moines, Iowa, and Manchester, N.H., to thank his supporters and workers for their efforts in those early caucus and primary states.

The three-term Delaware senator ended his campaign Wednesday just three months after it formally began, saying the "exaggerated shadow" cast by his own mistakes and misstatements had overwhelmed his candidacy and made it impossible to continue.

"There'll be other presidential campaigns, and I'll be there," Biden said at the announcement in a Senate committee room, where a crush of reporters and supporters spilled out the door.

"There will be other opportunities, there'll be other battles in other places, other times, and I'll be there," Biden said.

Biden, 44, withdrew from the campaign after a week in which his campaign was rocked by admissions of plagiarism and false claims about his academic accomplishments.

He said he would concentrate his energies on chairing the Senate Judiciary Committee hearings into the Supreme Court nomination of Robert H. Bork.

Biden's rivals for the Democratic nomination reacted with expressions of sadness and respect.

"I'm very saddened by it," Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis said in Iowa. "It takes a lot of courage to do what he has done — to put the Judiciary Committee's responsibilities ahead of his future."

Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., a competitor for the presidential nomination who has denied allegations that his staff tipped reporters to the first allegations against his rival, issued a statement calling Biden "a thoroughly decent and honest man of very real talent."

A Republican colleague, Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, ranking minority member of the Judiciary Committee, said, "The Democrats have now lost their most articulate spokesman."

White House Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker Jr., a former Republican leader of the Senate, said, "You hate to see that sort of thing in either party."

"I have known Joe Biden since he first came to the Senate. I count him as a friend and I really regret that it came to this," Baker said.

An ABC News-Washington Post poll released Wednesday found that 52 percent of those surveyed were aware of the plagiarism issue, but of those, more than half — 55 percent — thought Biden should not pull out of the presidential race as a result. Still, the poll showed a sizable minority of 43 percent who thought he should withdraw, indicating the extent of damage to his campaign. The results were based on interviews Sept. 17-22 with 2,015 Americans.

Biden's departure followed that of former Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, the front-runner who ended his campaign in May following questions about his relationship with Miami model Donna Rice.

Iranian crew helps pinpoint mines in gulf

U.S. to release 26 prisoners from captured ship Saturday

By NABILA MEGALLI
Associated Press Writer

MANAMA, Bahrain — American warships and helicopters swept the central Persian Gulf today for mines planted by an Iranian ship, and there was a report that a research vessel sank after hitting a mine off the Saudi Arabian coast.

The London-based Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence Unit said the Panamanian-flag vessel went down about 20 miles west of Saudi Arabia's Arabiyah Island on Tuesday. Four "casualties" were reported.

Meanwhile, shipping sources said a convoy of Navy warships and a reflagged Kuwaiti tanker were about halfway through the gulf. U.S. officials have not confirmed reports that the convoy set sail Wednesday.

Also today, an Iranian dissident group claimed 40 Iranian Revolutionary Guards were killed and 18 captured in an attack this week in western Iran.

The mine-sweeping, which began Wednesday, has yielded at least three mines, according to U.S. officials and shipping executives. The Pentagon said Iranian crewmen captured Monday in the U.S. attack on the landing craft Iran Ajr helped pinpoint the location of the explosives.

Diplomatic sources in the gulf said the Iranian crewmen would be released Saturday in Oman to the International Red Crescent Society, the Islamic equivalent of the Red Cross.

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Oman offered to serve as intermediary in the release of the Iranians to cool tensions in the gulf, where Iran and Iraq have been fighting for seven years. In recent months, Oman has developed close relations with Iran.

The Americans have said they detained 26 Iranians following Monday's helicopter attack on the landing craft, the Iran Ajr. Five were killed.

The Iranians will be flown by U.S. Marine helicopters from one of the warships of the U.S. Middle East Force to Seeb, where they will board an Iranian air force plane to Tehran, the sources said.

"Oman Red Crescent officials will provide medical assistance and overnight facilities if required," said one source in Muscat, speaking on condition of anonymity.

He said it was expected that some of the detainees would be on stretchers, and that no foreign news media would be allowed to cover the event.

The detainees will be handed over while Weinberger confers with leaders in Saudi Arabia on a five-day tour of the region, they said.

Pentagon sources had said earlier that the United States hoped to turn over the Iranian crewmen today.

School paper obtains secret police list of AIDS patients

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Alabama's top public health official, saying careers and reputations are at stake, wants to destroy a secret police department list of AIDS victims purportedly obtained by a college newspaper.

"A name on that list could potentially be yours whether you have AIDS or not," said Dr. Earl Fox, director of the Public Health Department.

The Aumnibus, the Auburn University newspaper, reported Wednesday that it received a copy of the list, condemned by civil and gay rights activists as an invasion of privacy, through someone who had obtained it from a police officer.

The weekly paper did not publish the list, which it said consisted of nine names and addresses. Editor Danny Claxton said he would not release it.

Fox said the situation underscored the danger. "Let's say somebody was not so scrupulous and was willing to publish the names. It would be a tremendous potential for harm," he said.

As of Wednesday, doctors and health labs are required to notify the state of people who test positive for the AIDS virus.

Mayor Emory Folmar last week confirmed police had compiled a partial, computerized list of Montgomery-area AIDS patients but said the one obtained by The Aumnibus was "absolutely fraudulent."

Police and firefighters need AIDS victims' names so they will know when they might come in contact with an infected person, the mayor said.

He refused to disclose how police obtained the names or how many are on the list.

"We've got lists on people who threaten police officers, have threatened to kill officers, and people who have fatal diseases. Hell, we've got all kinds of information," The Aumnibus quoted Folmar as saying.

Police Chief John Wilson said there is no actual list. Rather, he said the department maintains computer information obtained from verified carriers and professed AIDS victims booked into the jail, or from victims or their relatives who disclose the infection to officers or paramedics.

The chief said the people listed in the computer have already thrust themselves into a non-confidential situation. He stressed that the department's policy is not to deny assistance to anyone.

The state health officer said Folmar's attitude was as much of a concern as the AIDS list because the mayor "doesn't see anything wrong with it."

Olivia Turner, executive director of the Civil Liberties Union of Alabama, said Friday the list is an invasion of privacy and could be a violation of doctor-patient confidentiality.

Albert Sankey, president of the Montgomery chapter of the NAACP, said the list violates human and civil rights and should be destroyed.

The head of an AIDS support group said the newspaper's report was disturbing, and she wished Fox success in having the list destroyed.

Doctor finds cause of calf pain

BOSTON (AP) — Got a pain in the leg? Maybe snoring is to blame.

A Canadian doctor says he's found a link of sorts between the two.

In a letter in today's New England Journal of Medicine, Dr. Neil H. Shear of Sunnybrook Medical Centre in Toronto described a 66-year-old man who complained of a dull, mild pain in his right calf. The leg looked normal, so he was sent home with orders to take pain pills.

"Two nights later, the patient was in bed and had just fallen asleep, when he was awakened by a sharp pain in the right calf, caused by a kick from his wife," Shear wrote. "He said, 'Don't kick me there. That's just where my leg hurts!' His wife replied, 'You were snoring again, and that is where I always kick you to stop it.'

"Subsequently, his wife agreed to stop kicking his calf (though he continues to snore), and the pain cleared in three days and has not returned.

"The cause of calf pain can be difficult to ascertain, and various causes must be considered. To the list I would add occult (hidden) trauma secondary to snoring."

U.N. powers discuss Iran arms cutoff

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States called a meeting with the Soviet foreign minister today after he expressed differences with an American-British call for a worldwide arms embargo against Iran.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze told the U.N. General Assembly Wednesday that the body should seek a cease-fire in the Iran-Iraq war and establish a panel to judge who started the conflict. Another Soviet official questioned the effectiveness of an embargo.

A State Department officer said the Americans requested this afternoon's meeting at the United States U.N. mission to discuss the 7-year-old war after Shevardnadze clearly refrained from endorsing sanctions.

Earlier, Britain's foreign secretary, Sir Geoffrey Howe, called for an arms embargo against Iran. Howe's statement was particularly significant because Britain is one of the five permanent U.N. Security Council members whose vote would be essential to approving an arms embargo resolution.

The United States and Britain are the only permanent members to publicly endorse an embargo. The Soviet Union and China called Wednesday for more diplomacy, while the French foreign minister said an arms embargo was "one of the possibilities."

The five countries' foreign ministers will meet informally at a luncheon Friday in an effort to resolve differences.

Addressing the 159-nation body Wednesday, Howe said an Iran-See CUTOFF, Page 2

Canadian seeks grant for well

CANADIAN — Council members crossed their first hurdle in efforts to get a new water well and street improvements when nobody spoke at the first hearing on an emergency grant application this week.

The hearing was part of Monday's regular City Council meeting.

The city is seeking an emergency grant from the Texas Department of Community Affairs to build a new water well in the north part of the city. The city also wants a regular grant to upgrade the paving on city streets, Canadian City Secretary Terry South said. The regular grants are awarded on a competitive point basis.

The TDCA grants would be channeled through the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission. PRPC representatives Gary Pitner and John Kiehl explained the grant procedure to those attending the hearing, the first of two public hearings the city must have before it seeks the grant.

In other business, council members agreed to allocate $4,500 — approximately half — of the city's hotel-motel tax revenue to the Canadian Chamber of Commerce. Another $2,200 — one-fourth — of the tax will go to the River Valeu Pioneer museum.

South said the chamber uses the funds for special events and office expenses. She said $1,500 of the chamber's allocation will go for the Fall Foliage Festival in October, another $1,500 goes for the annual Independence Day celebration, $300 goes for bi-district play-offs at Canadian High School and $1,200 goes for office expense.

Of the museum allocation, $1,000 will go for special shows, $400 will go for the Foliage Festival and Independence Day celebration and $900 for office expense.

In other business, council members:

■ accepted one bid of $70 from Alan F. Witcher for lease of city property in the Riverview area.

■ accepted a $555 bid from W.W. Pickens for lease of 121.4 acres of land at the sewer plant.

■ agreed to abandon its public easement in an alleyway between Cheyenne and Hobart streets and to vacate a portion Kingman Street and a portion of Fourth Street.

■ renewed annual contracts with the Canadian Tax Service, for collection of city taxes, and jail contract and animal control agreement with Hemphill County.

■ nominated council member Jim Waterfield to the Hemphill County Appraisal District Board.

mines in its mine-sweeping in the central gulf. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, speaking from Washington in a television interview, said three mines had been located Wednesday and the Navy expected to find others.

He said some of the crewmen from the 1,662-ton Iran Ajr had provided information that helped American forces locate the mines. U.S. naval vessels often anchor in the area where the devices were found, about 50 miles northeast of Bahrain.

Another Pentagon official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said charts showing safe, unmined routes through the Persian Gulf had been discovered on the Iranian vessel.

Senior U.S. naval officers have maintained for weeks the Iranians were sowing mines in international waters in the gulf, but they said the U.S. capture of the Iran Ajr provided the first proof. Iran denied the ship was planting mines.

Monday's attack was the first American hit on an Iranian vessel in the two months since the United States began protecting Kuwaiti tankers in the oil shipping lanes.

U.S. officials have not announced what they plan to do with the Iran Ajr. "We might use it for target practice," said one source in Washington. "It's definitely not going back to Iran."

Pentagon officials said threats of Iranian reprisal for the ship attack would not deter Weinberger from leaving as scheduled for a five-day trip to the area. He was to visit Bahrain, Saudi Arabia, Egypt and U.S. warships in the region.

The war foes reported new attacks on each other's territory Wednesday. The state-run Iraqi News Agency, monitored in Cyprus, said Iraqi jet fighters flew 87 combat missions during the day, one of the highest totals in recent weeks.

Iran's official news agency said Iraqi warplanes struck industrial and residential areas at Bakhtara, western Iran, and that Iranian artillery bombed Iraqi military and industrial targets in southern Iraq.

Britain Foreign Secretary Geoffrey Howe announced at the United Nations Wednesday that his country was closing Iran's military procurement office in London, and would support a resolution for an international arms embargo against Iran, following an attack on a British ship in the gulf Monday.

Poll shows Americans support U.S. military presence in gulf

NEW YORK (AP) — A majority of Americans support using U.S. Navy ships to protect foreign-owned oil tankers in the Persian Gulf, even though they also believe the action is likely to get the United States involved in a war, according to a CBS News-New York Times poll.

Among the poll's other findings:

■ Most Americans approve of the U.S. military attack on an Iranian ship that was laying mines in the Persian Gulf, but think President Reagan should seek congressional approval for keeping U.S. forces in the region.

■ And Americans still are largely undecided whether Judge Robert H. Bork should be confirmed to the Supreme Court.

The poll, conducted Monday and Tuesday and released Wednesday, found that 60 percent of those polled said they approve of U.S. Navy ships being used to protect foreign-owned oil tankers, while 32 percent disapprove and 8 percent had no opinion. Fifty-five percent of those questioned think sending the U.S. Navy to the Gulf was likely to get the United States involved in a war, 36 percent think it unlikely and 9 percent had no opinion.

The highest majority found by the poll involved the helicopter raid on an Iranian vessel Monday night in which five Iranians were reported killed and 26 were captured.

Seventy-eight percent of those questioned approved of the helicopter attack on the 1,662-ton Iranian vessel Iran Ajr, while 8 percent disapproved and 14 percent had no opinion.

Sixty-three percent of Americans believe Reagan should secure approval from Congress to keep the U.S. Navy in the gulf, the poll indicated, while 33 percent think he should make his own decision and 4 percent had no opinion.

Moody Foundation scandal figure City Briefs

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston-area woman who says she's the daughter of William R. Pabst — a key figure in the Moody Foundation scandal who has eluded arrest — says her father is living in a Mexican hovel without water or electricity.

The woman — Becky, who asked that her full name not be used because she fears repercussions — says her father is considering whether to turn himself in to authorities, the Houston Chronicle reported today in a copyright story.

"None of us kids really know exactly what happened," Becky, 23, said Wednesday in a telephone interview.

"They say he took more than a million dollars. As far as I know, they're living in a real little house. They have no running water, no electricity. Sometimes there is not even enough food to feed them all.

"It doesn't seem like they're living the life of millionaires."

Becky said she has not spoken to her father in months, but is in contact with other relatives who have spoken to him.

Pabst is wanted by state and federal authorities for allegedly helping Galveston insurance heir Shearn Moody Jr. in a complex scheme to bilk the Moody Foundation out of $1.5 million in grants.

Moody and two other men are standing trial now in U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling's court on 17 counts of mail and wire fraud.

Pabst and his associate, Vance Beaudreau — believed to be hiding elsewhere in Mexico — are fugitives on the charge.

Becky said she has mixed feelings about the allegations against her father.

nian attack on the British tanker "Gentle Breeze" in the Persian Gulf Monday was the "last straw."

He said the 15-nation U.N. Security Council should now enforce its resolution, passed unanimously July 20, demanding an immediate cease-fire in the Iran-Iraq war.

"The first step should be an arms embargo, to prevent the flow of arms to those wishing to ignore the U.N. and to prolong the conflict," he said.

Iraq has said it will abide by a cease-fire if Iran will. Iran has said it will observe an informal cease-fire while an impartial board looks into who started the war, and will embrace a truce if Iraq is identified as the aggressor.

In his speech to the General Assembly, Shevardnadze said: "It is necessary to try to secure, concurrently and immediately, a cease-fire ... and to work for (establishment of) an impartial body to investigate the question of responsibility for the conflict."

His statement appeared to support Iran's insistence that the truce not begin until the impartial body is established.

Iraq, the United States, Britain and France have insisted the warring nations agree to a cease-fire first.

Iraq says the Persian Gulf war started with an Iraqi invasion in September 1980. Iraq says it began weeks earlier, with Iranian artillery attacks on border villages.

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov told a U.N. news conference later that a cease-fire and investigation should start at the same time, but added, "They are not our last ideas. They are a point for discussion."

He said other ideas include an arms embargo, but such a move might not be effective since weapons could be bought on the black market.

French Foreign Minister Jean-Bernard Raimond told reporters Wednesday, "I have not called publicly or an embargo on arms to Iran" but said it was "one of the possibilities."

In a General Assembly address, Chinese Foreign Minister Wu Xueqian said his government "calls on the big powers to stop their military involvement in the gulf ... leaving gulf countries to solve the gulf problems by themselves through consultations."

"My son plays baseball, and I couldn't even play catch with him any more," Covey said. "I couldn't even throw the ball."

So he agreed to be the subject of the radical surgical procedure. Pioneered in Sweden and perfected in Mexico City last year, it has been performed with positive results more than 70 times worldwide.

"This doesn't mean they are cured or that it won't eventually have its price," said Clark, president of the World Federation of Neurological Societies.

Parkinson's surgery aids Texan

DALLAS (AP) — New transplant surgery has resulted in dramatic improvements for victims of Parkinson's disease, a progressive neurological disorder, doctors say.

A Plano man who underwent the new surgery on July 31 recently returned to his job, a team of doctors at the University of Texas Health Science Center announced Wednesday.

The surgery for Dan Covey, 31, involved transplanting parts of his adrenal gland into the section of his brain that controls sensory and motor functions.

A second patient underwent the surgery on Tuesday at Parkland Memorial Hospital. But neurologist Kemp Clark, the leader of the surgical team, said it was too early to discuss results.

Covey's condition had worsened in recent years and he couldn't hold a pencil steady enough to write a letter or sign a check. He didn't have the mobility to walk around the block and his memory began fading, he said.

Republican joins Texas Railroad Commission

AUSTIN (AP) — Kent Hance, the newest member of the Texas Railroad Commission, says it's too soon to be thinking about any other political office.

Hance, who unsuccessfully sought the GOP gubernatorial nomination last year, said Wednesday only that he will run in 1988 for the remaining two years of his Railroad Commission term.

"I wouldn't have taken it (the appointment) and not made a commitment to go ahead and run in 1988," Hance said after taking the oath of office.

As for a possible gubernatorial bid in 1990, Hance said, "I don't even want to talk about that. That's something that's a long way off. I think it would be foolish to do anything like that... I want to be the best railroad commissioner I can be."

But Hance didn't close the door completely.

"If other things open up, fine. If they don't, fine. I may like this job so well that I'll want to do this in '90 and '96 or whenever the voters will vote for me." Hance replaced Democratic Commissioner Mack Wallace, who resigned to join a law firm.

Taking the official oath before a crowd of hundreds that filled the Texas Senate chamber and its spectator gallery, Hance said oil and gas industry troubles are so serious that politics must be secondary.

"The problems facing us are not partisan issues. We have to work together today in building a united front to meet the challenges," he said.

A three-term congressman from Lubbock, Hance lost the 1984 Democratic U.S. Senate nomination to Lloyd Doggett. After changing parties, he lost the 1986 GOP gubernatorial race to Gov. Bill Clements, who appointed Hance to the Railroad Commission.

Speaking at the swearing-in, Clements noted the visibility of Hance's new job.

"You know, the size of this crowd surprises me," Clements said. "Are you announcing for governor today, too?" Hance shook his head no.

Hance also had little to say about one of the most controversial issues facing the commission — selection of a new chairman.

Asked if he planned to vote for Commissioners John Sharp or Jim Nugent, both Democrats, or possibly himself, Hance replied:

"I have not made a final decision. I'll have this weekend to concentrate on it. I want to work together with both commissioners, that's the most important thing... If I can come up with a solution where we can all work together, I think that's the best solution."

Consumer products with air pollutants may be banned

AUSTIN (AP) — Room deodorizers and auto windshield washing fluids are two consumer products that may be banned because of their hazardous effects on the environment, Texas Air Control Board officials say.

The board is seeking a ban on some consumer items that add to the growing air pollution problem in the state's urban areas, officials said Wednesday.

"Consumer areas are getting to be the remaining area that we haven't done too much in," said Les Montgomery, the agency's director of technical support and regulation development.

Although the product bans initially would apply only in Dallas and Tarrant counties, they could be extended to Travis, Harris and others if ozone pollution exceeds the EPA maximum level as it does in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Montgomery said some of these products were developed when environmentalists became concerned about other propellants destroying upper-atmosphere ozone, which shields Earth from ultraviolet rays.

"At the time, a lot of the manufacturers began to switch away from the freons and more to the kind of propellants that we're proposing to ban in the Dallas-Fort Worth area," he said. "This will be a second option" for manufacturers of aerosol products.

The vapors produced by those products and chemicals, which contain hydrocarbons, react with heat and sunshine to produce low-level ozone. Ozone pollution, visible as the smog that hangs over many urban areas, can cause illness in infants, the elderly and people with respiratory disorders.

Lucille Linden, public information officer for the air control board, said Tuesday that the agency staff this week is expected to finalize the list of products proposed for the ban.

She said some items, including oil-based house paint and some kinds of automobile paint, could be restricted instead of banned. Hydrocarbon contents of paints also could be among the restrictions, she said.

Ms. Linden said the new rules must be approved by the agency's board and the Environmental Protection Agency. A public hearing on the proposals is scheduled for late October.

Among other proposals to curb Dallas area pollution are devices to control the vapors from pumps at gasoline service stations and limits on the use of inks in the printing business, she said.

The agency also has stepped up enforcement of laws that require motor vehicles to be in good working order.

Ms. Linden said the increased enforcement of motor vehicle pollution laws, to target used car dealers, will occur statewide.

Studies indicate that 50 percent of ozone pollution can be attributed to auto exhaust, she said.

Ex hospital official up for parole

HOUSTON (AP) — Hermann Hospital's former executive director who was sentenced to seven years for stealing from the charitable hospital is up for parole after serving about two months in prison.

But William F. Smith's attorney, Ross Rommel, is opposed to such a swift parole because he says a longer stint in prison may result in getting the conviction off his client's record.

Smith's release from prison is likely to occur between December and March, said Barbara Slaughter, spokeswoman for the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles. But Rommel has written to the board recommending his client be kept in prison.

State District Judge Miron Love, who sentenced Smith, has set a hearing for Nov. 10 to consider shock probation, which is designed to give offenders a taste of prison life, Rommel said.

Such probation is given when a judge finds a first-time felony offender has been shocked into good behavior by a stay of two to six months in prison.

If Smith is paroled, he will be ineligible for shock probation. Under state law, if he successfully serves out such a probationary term, his charges will be dismissed. If he is paroled, he will be an ex-convict.

Rommel told the parole board that Smith understands he may have to serve additional time awaiting Love's decision on shock probation.

State law allows judges who sentence defendants to 10 years in prison or less to release them on probation after they serve 60 to 180 days.

Smith, 49, was sentenced to the Texas Department of Corrections after pleading no contest to 27 charges of felony theft and one charge of misdemeanor theft from the hospital estate to take pleasure trips.

Although it has not been determined exactly how much Smith took from the estate, pending civil lawsuits are seeking more than $1 million.

Woman appeals to neighbors not to allow history to be trashed

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Alene Waneck doesn't want a piece of Texas history tossed in the trash. And she fears that will happen unless she and her neighbors convince the Texas Department of Health to deny a permit to a Houston company that wants to develop a 164-acre landfill nearby on a historic battlefield.

Ms. Waneck, 34, is president of Residents Involved in the South East, a southeast Bexar County neighborhood organization of about 70 members that is leading efforts to preserve the historic value of the proposed dump site.

It was on that location that more than 1,200 men died March 29, 1813, during the Battle of Rosillo in which Mexico temporarily gained independence from Spain. Texas then was part of Mexico.

"We wouldn't think of dumping garbage on Gettsburg," Ms. Waneck said. "We wouldn't think of dumping garbage on Vicksburg, and we wouldn't think of dumping garbage on the Alamo. We shouldn't think of dumping garbage here, either. That is not a good way to preserve Texas history."

Wayne Lee, an engineer with the state health department that approves all dumping permits in Texas, said Texas Waste Systems Inc. of Houston has applied to develop a landfill.

Lee said the state will not approve any permits without first conducting public hearings. He said it probably will be early next year before any hearings are scheduled because his staff has not completed a review of the permit application.

"The applicant has agreed to do a historical evaluation of the area," Lee told the San Antonio Light Wednesday.

Sheriff asking for extradition of man in Idaho

MADISONVILLE (AP) — If a fugitive wanted on charges of stealing $17,500 in state money and accused of faking his own bloody abduction is extradited from Idaho, the Madison County sheriff says he wants to go get the man himself.

Sheriff Ed Fannin is asking Gov. Bill Clements to seek extradition of James Rodney Pitts, 40, who was being held in the Bonner County Jail in Sandpoint, Idaho, on $50,000 bond.

"When the governor says so, I'll go up and get his tail," Fannin said Tuesday.

The paperwork for the extradition was processed Tuesday and forwarded to the Madison County District Attorney's office, which in turn will send it to the governor, Sheriff's Department Capt. John Davis said Wednesday.

Pitts was caught after a detective saw his name in the listings of wedding licenses in a Sandpoint newspaper Friday. He was arrested at a neighbor's yard sale Saturday, the day he was to be married.

"He said, 'If I go back to Texas, I'm dead meat,'" said detective Andy Anderson of the Sandpoint Police Department, quoting Pitts.

When Anderson asked Pitts what he meant, Pitts said, "They'll kill me."

Pitts disappeared July 3, 1984, one day after Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox announced Pitts would testify for the state in a probe of alleged bid-rigging on prison construction projects.

Pinkham honored by Cancer Society

AUSTIN — For the second year in a row, Pampa News staffer Paul Pinkham has won a Texas Media Award from the American Cancer Society.

In an announcement Monday, the Texas Division of the American Cancer Society said Pinkham, 27, had won first place in the series category for non-metropolitan dailies, for his series last November detailing efforts by Pampa police officers and other city employees to quit smoking.

The non-metropolitan division included all daily newspapers not located in the metropolitan areas of Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston or San Antonio.

The series ran on four consecutive Sundays in November, in connection with the cancer group's Great American Smokeout campaign. It detailed a four-part quit-smoking course led by Linda Haynes of Coronado Hospital, and developed by Hospital Corp. of America, which was at that time the Pampa hospital's parent corporation.

Pinkham won the opinion writing category a year ago for a column about a teen-ager who came through Pampa while on a cross-country bicycle trip to raise money for cancer research.

A graduate of Glassboro State College in New Jersey, Pinkham has completed coursework for his master's degree in journalism at Kent

Pinkham

State University. He began his journalism career as a reporter and photographer for the weekly Linn County News in Pleasanton, Kan., and was later named that newspaper's news editor.

In 1985, he became staff writer at The Pampa News, and was named senior staff writer last fall. He has won three awards from the Texas Associated Press Managing Editors for reviewing and feature photography, and two honorable mentions from the Panhandle Press Association for humorous column writing.

Pinkham and his wife Linda have three children: Charlotte, 15, Jack, 13, and Casie, 12. The family attends First Presbyterian Church.

Appeals court says Barrera did not err in murder case

AUSTIN (AP) — Former State District Judge Roy Barrera Jr. was qualified to hear a capital murder case although he was once listed as prosecutor in the case, a state appeals court has ruled.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals on Wednesday upheld the life sentence ordered for Jesus Martinez Gamez, who complained in his appeal that Barrera had worked on the case while a Bexar County assistant district attorney.

Barrera is no longer a judge. Last year he was the Republicans' unsuccessful candidate for attorney general. He has been mentioned as a possible appoint-tee as chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court, but has indicated he is not interested in the post.

Gov. Bill Clements will appoint a chief justice to replace John Hill, who is resigning.

According to court records in the Gamez case, the prosecution's written announcement that it was ready to proceed carried the signature stamp of Barrera.

"He had no independent recollection of ever seeing the document in question, and while he (said he) may have 'stamped that document,' someone else may have 'stamped that for me or used my stamp,'" the Court of Criminal Appeals said in recounting Barrera's testimony.

Reagan order views disruption of family

The Reagan presidency may be fading, but it still has a few good kicks left. Ronald Reagan recently signed an executive order that requires a report on how all federal programs affect families. This eleventh-hour idea may prove to be one of the best of the Gipper's stay in the Oval Office.

Every year brings more evidence of how much government bureaucracy erodes family authority. For example, Charles Murray's book, Losing Ground, documents how federal "anti-poverty" programs have made poverty worse by splitting up poor families. Many such programs in effect pay a poor mother only after the father (her husband) has been kicked out.

This government paternalism has wreaked havoc particularly on black families; 55 percent of black children are now born out of wedlock. The "anti-poverty" programs of supposedly compassionate liberals have proved to be modern Jim Crow laws.

To counter such abominations, said Gary Bauer, Reagan's chief domestic policy adviser, the presidential order "goes a long way toward forcing the bureaucracy to think about families." Bauer must be diplomatic in his statements, but the full truth is that federal bureaucracies are by nature destructive of families.

Bureaucrats care, not about reducing poverty or helping families, but about increasing bases of power. Isn't it odd that, 25 years and $1 trillion or so after the JFK-LBJ-Nixon anti-poverty programs have been at work, poverty is actually worse than before? The bureaucrats know that if poverty ever were ended, there would be no jobs left for bureaucrats; so the last thing they want to do is reduce poverty.

The new Reagan order tosses a cherry bomb into the bureaucrats' offices. "Family Policy-making Criteria" questions that each program must answer include:

- Does the program "help the family perform its function, or does it substitute governmental activity for the function?"
- Can "a lower level of government" or — gasp! — "the family itself" carry out the activity?
- "Does this action by government strengthen or erode the stability of the family and, particularly, the marital commitment?"

If such questions had been asked of the programs in the first place, we daresay that not one would have been enacted; and the American family, as a consequence, would not have suffered 25 years of assault.

The Reagan administration order is just a start, of course. And it's harder to tear down a bad program than to stop it in the first place. But the Reagan order not only will force a review of every existing government program affecting the family, but will extend such review into his successors' administrations.

The next step in further protecting the family is for Congress to pose similar questions for every bill considered.

Events lead to Biden's demise

The Democratic presidential candidates, who have been uncharitably likened to the seven dwarfs, are apparently determined to embody the seven deadly sins instead. Gary Hart embraced lust. Now Joe Biden has taken of covetousness, and maybe sloth as well. Several of the contenders could probably qualify for pride or envy, qualities almost mandatory for ambitious politicians. Anyone for gluttony?

There was a time when American political leaders produced prose of lasting value. Ulysses S. Grant's memoirs, for example, are considered one of the premier works of American literature. Lincoln wrote the Gettysburg address himself, in the custom of the day. Later, speeches got turned over to faceless ghostwriters, and books too.

When a real politician insists on composing his own words, as Jimmy Carter reportedly does in his universally unread volumes, the results usually discredit the practice. Today it's rare to find a public official who not only writes, but writes something worth reading. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, the Democratic senator from New York, is one of the few who come to mind. One magazine I know generally declines to publish articles by politicians, on the theory that the purported authors are not the real authors.

Americans are grown up about this development. They don't wait in anticipation for their elected representatives to produce original works of political theory. They don't demand that politicians personally draft the 20 or 30 speeches they have to give every week — or even to read them before they deliver them. The average voter knows that most utterances, down to press conference answers, are the work of committees of aides, who labor vigilantly to make sure the politician doesn't slip into spontaneity and say the wrong thing.

But Sen. Biden apparently has pushed the trend to new lengths. Borrowing a vivid phrase or two without attribution is common in politics, but lifting whole pages of oratory from someone else is not. A politician who can afford speechwriters ought to be able to afford speechwriters who can compose a 15-minute talk without excessive resort to scissors and paste.

All this might amount to much ado about nothing — as Biden put it in his Thursday conference, mysteriously neglecting to credit William Shakespeare for the phrase — if it weren't for the discovery that he was penalized in law school for a similar offense, namely plagiarizing a law review article. It looks less like an odd lapse, which is excusable, than an ingrained habit, which may not be.

Biden didn't help himself with his labored explanation for the law school offense. "I was wrong, but I was not malevolent," he declared repeatedly, as if it matters. Webster's defines "malevolent" as "wishing evil or harm to others." Plagiarism rarely stems from a desire to harm others; it stems from a desire to help oneself with a minimum of effort. Biden sounds like a thief pleading for mercy on the grounds that he isn't a rapist.

One serious offense 23 years ago and several modest ones recently don't reveal Biden as a really disreputable man, unfit for public office. Still, they most likely will do fatal damage to his presidential campaign. The reasons are several.

One is the higher ethical standards imposed by voters. Petty graft, outside of a few places like Chicago, is no longer overlooked. Laws regarding outside income and campaign contributions are stricter than ever before.

Another is that personal integrity is one of the few matters that lend themselves to first-hand judgments by the voters. Most voters may feel unable to judge whether a politician is right about the defense appropriations bill. But they are able to consider evidence about the politician's ethics and reach a verdict, because they make similar evaluations about people every day.

The last is that the growing scope and complexity of government action makes matters like this more important. Voters tend to vote for general themes, trusting candidates to apply them in specific cases. A politician who creates doubt about his personal honesty doesn't merely sow fear that he will steal from the petty cash. He creates doubt that his concrete policies will match his applause lines.

In the case of Biden, the damage is likely to be especially great because of his previous reputation as an orator and because of the old suspicion that he's a phony — a suspicion created by his insincere smile, his self-conscious emulation of the Kennedy brothers and his flip-flopping on the Bork nomination. Biden probably won't go down in flames the way Gary Hart did. But eventually he'll go down.

Hucksters push papal trinkets

Leave it to Americans to commercialize just about anything, including the pope's visit.

I don't know if you heard about pope hats (the ones that look like the Cisco Kid used to wear) being on sale in Florida when his holiness hit Miami, but they were.

Sales were reported as brisk. I have a friend in Miami who is Catholic, and I called to see if he had purchased a pope hat or knew anybody who had.

"My neighbor got one for his kid," my friend said. "They were going for 40 bucks apiece when the pope first came to town, but he waited until the pope left and got one marked down for five."

Pope hats weren't the only thing that were on sale during the papal visit.

I have another friend in Chicago who was telling me about his cousin's idea.

"She invented something called a 'pope scope,'" he explained.

"Do what?" I asked.

"You remember those things they used to sell at golf matches and parades with the mirrors?"

"They were sort of L-shaped and you looked in the short end and the image of what you were looking at was sent down from a mirror in the tall end. You could see over people's heads with those things.

"My cousin found some of those things in a warehouse and bought them and called them pope scopes and she's been selling them all over the country."

Another report came in on somebody who had heard of an item called "pope on a rope."

It's a statue of the pope with a rope tied around it. The idea, it seems, is to tie the rope to your belt buckle and have the pope with you at all times.

"For good luck?" I asked.

"For 30 bucks," I was told.

A guy who runs a bar in Atlanta was telling me he had a special drink to honor the pope's visit.

"I'm calling it 'papal punch.' It's gin, vodka, rum, orange juice and three shots of holy water."

I suppose some might be outraged by the attempts to make a few bucks off the pope's visit, but money and religion do have a powerful bond.

I visited the Vatican once. What I remember most were the countless shops in the area where people were shelling out cash for various items with religious themes.

And on the Protestant scene, I saw television minister Dr. Robert Schuller the other morning. He was pushing holy letter openers, and let us not forget Jim and Tammy's waterslide for Jesus.

But back to the pope's hat. It's the subject of one of my favorite stories that must be repeated at least once.

Two Americans, one Catholic and one Protestant, are visiting the Vatican. The pope appears on the balcony in full regalia.

"Where did he get that hat?" the Protestant asked.

"The cardinals gave it to him," answers the Catholic, to which the Protestant replies:

"Looks like the Giants would do something like that for Willie Mays."

Chicago's political mix produces brawls

By Robert Walters

CHICAGO (NEA) — Why are municipal politics consistently more intriguing and compelling here than in New York or Los Angeles?

Politics in these, the nation's three largest cities, do have much in common. In each, the electorate is increasingly multi-racial, the incumbent mayor has served multiple terms, and the Democrats have a semi-permanent grip on city hall.

But even when there are few major scandals, conflicts or controversies, municipal governance invariably is more interesting here — in great measure because Chicago has a tradition of openness.

When Chicago's political leaders disagree with each other, they seldom attempt to paper over their differences. Instead, they confront each other in yeasty, zesty debates.

News organizations in the other two cities too often ignore signs of wrongdoing at city hall. In Chicago, almost any hint of hanky-panky is enthusiastically pursued by intensely competitive newspapers and television stations.

Although all three cities apparently are destined to remain under the political control of one party, competing factions within the Democratic Party here aggressively capitalized upon others' real or imagined mistakes.

In Los Angeles, Democratic insiders long have been aware of persistent tension between black and Jewish voters, two of the party's most important voting blocs, but the issue is considered too delicate for public discussion.

In New York, the long-reigning political establishment headed by Mayor Edward Koch has been rocked by major scandals — but there has been little sign of protest from Democrats.

The lack of any substantive reaction from either Democrats or Republicans in New York is astounding in the wake of the resignations under fire of Koch's transportation commissioner, taxi commissioner, cultural affairs commissioner and head of the municipal hospital system.

In Queens, the borough president committed suicide after being tainted by scandal. In the Bronx, investigations are underway into allegedly widespread political corruption. Throughout the city, officials of the Parking Violations Bureau have schemed to sell municipal contracts.

New York's blase attitude toward such scandals would be unthinkable in Chicago, where municipal politics has entered a quiescent period following the resolution of a fierce power struggle within the Democratic Party between Mayor Harold Washington and Alderman Edward Vrdolyak.

Earlier this year, Washington won another term as mayor by defeating an assortment of Democratic, Republican and third-party rivals, then consolidated his control over Chicago's 50-member City Council.

Vrdolyak, the outspoken leader of the council's anti-Washington faction, recently signaled he was abandoning the struggle against the mayor when he relinquished the chairmanship of both the city and county Democratic committees.

That left Washington briefly without any public critics — until Gertrude Jordan arrived on the scene.

The regional director of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, Jordan has proposed that the federal government take over the management of the city's public housing agency, an important source of patronage jobs for Washington.

Charging that the Chicago Housing Authority has been chronically mismanaged during Washington's tenure, Jordan cites the squandering of government funds on a chauffeur for CHA's director, $90,000 in purchases from a florist and other unwarranted expenses.

Even the mayor's loyal supporters acknowledge that the CHA has been ineptly operated for many years. In true Chicago fashion, however, they insist that the criticism from the Republican-controlled HUD is merely a thinly disguised partisan political attack.

Democrats warned Bork rejection could backfire

WASHINGTON (AP)—A prominent lawyer is warning fellow Democrats that if they defeat the nomination of Robert H. Bork to the Supreme Court the decision may come back to haunt them.

Lloyd Cutler, former counsel to President Carter, told the Senate Judiciary Committee on Wednesday that someday a liberal Democratic appointee to the high court could be blocked by a Republican-controlled Senate using the Bork nomination fight as a precedent.

"The time is going to come, and it can't come too soon for me, when there is going to be a Democratic president," Cutler said.

"It's necessary for Democrats who would vote against a moderate conservative nominee to the court to remember they are giving a hostage to the time when a Democratic president will be appointing a moderate liberal or perhaps a very liberal member to the court who will be judged by the same standard in reverse that you would be applying in my view if you rejected Judge Bork today," Cutler said.

The committee recessed until Friday, taking today off because of the Jewish new year.

Cutler testified that Bork, attacked by many as an extremist, is a jurist whose views are close to those of retired Justice Lewis F. Powell. President Reagan named Bork, a federal appeals court judge since 1982, to succeed the centrist Powell.

"Based on my reading of this written record, and on 20 years of personal knowledge of Judge Bork, I have praised him as a highly qualified conservative jurist who is closer to the moderate center than to the extreme right," Cutler said.

But the Democrats who control the Judiciary Committee said Cutler is missing the big picture.

"Isn't that the heart of our difference," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. "You're urging us to look closely at the trees and urging us not to look too closely at the forest."

Bork also received support from retired Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, who made an extraordinary appearance for a former member of the high court. Burger said, "If Judge Bork is not in the mainstream then neither am I. It would astonish me to think he's an extremist any more than I'm an extremist."

The hearings were partly overshadowed by the announcement of committee chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., during the noon break that he was withdrawing from the presidential race.

Biden said he is quitting the campaign in the wake of damaging disclo-tures that he committed plagiarism and exaggerated his academic accomplishments.

But Biden, who opposes Bork's confirmation, vowed to continue the fight in the Judiciary Committee over the nomination.

"I intend to be deeply involved in that battle. I intend to attempt to bring it to victory," he said.

Also testifying in support of Bork was Gov. James Thompson of Illinois, who said that from his personal knowledge of Bork "I believe he would do equal justice. He has a fair, inquiring mind."

Among Bork critics who testified Wednesday, Professor William E. Leuchtenberg of the University of North Carolina said the Senate should block the appointment because of Bork's stands against Supreme Court rulings of the past 30 years that expanded individual and civil rights.

"If he now says, grudgingly, that he accepts these rulings, it is important to note that at the time, when it counted, he was one of the most boisterous of the faultfinders," Leuchtenberg said. "There is no way that Professor Bork can now be dressed up as a champion of civil rights."

Bork taught law at Yale University before returning to private law practice and then becoming a federal judge.

Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., a supporter of Bork, engaged in sharp exchanges with Leuchtenberg, Duke University Law School Professor Walter Dellinger and John Hope Franklin, a Duke history professor.

Simpson told Franklin, who is black, that "Robert Bork did not place those roadblocks in your way" to advancement that Franklin referred to in his remarks.

AIDS brothers welcomed by their new schoolmates

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP)—Three AIDS-exposed brothers, ostracized by their hometown of Arcadia, got a warm welcome from new schoolmates here, but up to 120 others were kept home by fearful parents threatening "another Arcadia."

Ricky, 10, Robert, 9, and Randy Ray, 8, were treated like any other students during their first day Wednesday at Gocio Elementary School, said Clifford Ray, the boy's father. He said Ricky found welcome cards on his desk.

"Everything was positive," said the boys' mother, Louise. "One of (the boys) said they had to assign seats in the lunchroom because everyone wanted to sit next to them."

School authorities said 120 of the 615 pupils stayed home and up to a dozen were withdrawn. The usual absentee rate is about 3 percent.

Later in the day, parents clashed at a protest rally that had to be moved because of a bomb threat.

The Ray boys had attended an Arcadia elementary school under court order last month but left after an Aug. 28 fire gutted their home, a boycott emptied their classes, and threats were made against the school and family.

The DeSoto County sheriff's department said Tuesday that the fire was arson but was "definitely not related" to the furor.

School board policy in Sarasota allows children infected with the AIDS virus to attend class if they pose no threat to other children and are undergoing treatment.

Angry parents Wednesday questioned why the boys had to choose their community.

"The Rays are hollering about their civil rights," said Tim Whitworth, who kept his daughter home. "But they are violating our civil rights by shoving their children down our throats. People will turn violent."

"They'll end up with another Arcadia if they're not careful."

A sports arena where a rally against the Ray boys was about to begin was evacuated and the protest was moved next door after police received a bomb threat, said police spokesman Fred Schmidt.

Melody Patton, an organizer of the Arcadia group Citizens Against AIDS in Schools, said she came with seven other members after being invited by 60 parents from Sarasota and Bradenton for the rally, which was attended by about 300.

"We're going to be starting a branch here just as soon as we can," Mrs. Patton said after the meeting, a question-and-answer session at times marked by shouting between Ray supporters and the Arcadia group.

Sarasota resident Greg Rudolph said he wouldn't send his son and daughter to school with classmates exposed to AIDS. "I'll teach them at home so I guess he'll be as dumb as me, but he won't be dead," he said.

Outside, about 30 members of the newly formed Sarasota-based Citizens Against Disinformation picketed the Arcadia group. Placards read "Sarasota Doesn't Have a Problem — Don't Create One" and "Fight AIDS — Not Kids."

Pickens bid for Newmont Mining fading, analysts say

NEW YORK (AP)—T. Boone Pickens is facing pressure to scrap his hostile bid for Newmont Mining Corp. because of a possibly crippling court ruling and a shareholder rights plan devised by the embattled company, analysts say.

A Delaware court said Wednesday that big blocks of Newmont stock purchased by its biggest shareholder Consolidated Gold Fields PLC earlier in the week were valid, though the court granted a Pickens request to block further purchases by the British concern, which is friendly to Newmont management.

The takeover attempt by the Pickens-led group Ivanhoe Partners also faced a fresh obstacle when Newmont proclaimed a so-called "poison-pill" measure that would require an acquirer to pay the same price for all shares.

Securities analysts said the developments might compel Pickens to abandon his pursuit of Newmont, a large New York-based mining concern that has been fiercely resisting the well-known oilman and takeover strategist.

"This puts the kibosh on Pickens, in my view," said Daniel Roling, vice president and senior mining analyst at Merrill Lynch Capital Markets in New York. "The point here is: How long can Boone carry the cost while he fights this in court? A raider doesn't like tying his money up for long periods."

Ronald Shorr, a mining analyst at Bear Stearns Cos. in New York, said Consolidated's presumed ownership of nearly half Newmont's stock "makes it very difficult for Pickens."

Wall Street also appeared to doubt that Pickens would persist with the effort. Newmont stock fell $2.25 a share Wednesday to $92.75 in composite New York Stock Exchange trading. More than 3 million shares changed hands.

Newmont and Consolidated agreed Monday that the British company could buy up to 49.9 percent of Newmont's stock, which would prevent Pickens from obtaining control.

In a controversial tactic known as a "market sweep," Consolidated bought an estimated 16 million shares Monday and Tuesday to fulfill that agreement.

The focus of the takeover battle then moved to Chancery Court in Delaware, where Newmont is incorporated.

At Pickens' request, Chancery Court Vice Chancellor Jack B. Jacobs ordered Consolidated to stop buying Newmont stock on grounds that it was an unreasonable defensive tactic. But he also said that shares purchased through 9 a.m. Wednesday were valid.

The practical effect of Jacobs' decision was to at least temporarily give Consolidated control of nearly half of Newmont's 66.8 million shares outstanding.

Pickens' lawyers asked Jacobs to reconsider his decision, and he scheduled a hearing on the matter for Friday afternoon.

Jacobs also set Oct. 1 for a hearing on Pickens' request for a preliminary injunction to block additional purchases by Consolidated.

Pickens spokesman David H. Batchelder did not return telephone calls. But Charles Richards, one of Pickens' attorneys who attended the Delaware court session, said, "I don't believe this has been decided on the merits."

Consolidated's mass purchase of Newmont stock came less than a week after the Securities and Exchange Commission said it was considering a ban on market sweeps on grounds that they constitute illegal tender offers.

Well known for his takeover forays, Pickens publicly undertook his pursuit of Newmont on Sept. 8 when he began a $95-a-share cash tender offer for 28 million Newmont shares for a total of $2.66 billion, which would have boosted his group's stake in the company to 51 percent.

Pickens later sweetened the bid to $105, but cut it to $72 this week after Newmont declared a $33-a-share dividend to fend off Pickens' advances.

In another defensive tactic, the Newmont board declared a shareholder rights plan Wednesday that it said was designed to "guard against front-end loaded, two-tier takeovers and other abusive tactics to gain control of Newmont."

Contra aid extension faces little Senate opposition

WASHINGTON (AP)—No major opposition is expected when the Senate next week takes up a stopgap spending measure that includes $3.5 million in new "humanitarian" aid to the rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government.

The House on Wednesday approved the spending bill, which is backed by the Reagan administration. The vote was 270 to 138.

A leading Senate opponent of the Contra rebels, Connecticut Democrat Christopher Dodd, said the additional aid is at odds with a five-nation peace agreement signed in Guatemala on Aug. 7, and is not needed because the Contras still have unspent money from the current year's $100 million allocation.

"But I'm not going to make a fight over it," Dodd said through a spokesman.

Other than the Contra money, which is intended to buy items like food, clothing and medical supplies, the spending bill is relatively uncontroversial because it merely continues government operations at their current levels through Nov. 10. It is necessary because current appropriations expire Sept. 30, the end of the fiscal year.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, said he expects the new money to be the last U.S. aid ever sent to the anti-Sandinista rebels because of increasing optimism that the peace process will succeed.

"The evidence indicates to me reason to be optimistic — still guardedly, but less guardedly than before," Wright said.

Bladder cancer patient undergoes new treatment

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A college freshman has become the first bladder cancer patient in the United States to undergo a new type of operation done at Medical Center Hospital, officials said.

The surgical procedure took place June 3, doctors said, and resulted in the removal of the cancerous bladder of Eddie Duge, 18, of Beeville, Texas, and construction of an internal urinary reservoir.

"This is the first time this procedure has been done in the U.S.," said Dr. Michael Sarosdy, an assistant professor of surgery at the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio and hospital staff urology surgeon.

"It means I can lead a normal life,"

Duge, a freshman business major at Bee County Junior College, told the San Antonio Express-News on Wednesday.

Duge now is able to retain urine for as long as five to six hours, and his reservoir has the capacity of a normal bladder, officials said.

Duge takes no medication and can eat or drink anything he wants, Sarosdy said, and the teen's physical activities are unlimited.

Two months after surgery, Duge was able to travel to Michigan to visit his mother, officials said. He also at the same time was able to resume playing golf, something he eagerly had awaited.

Duge became the first patient for the surgery called a "Continent Urinary Diversion" in which Sarosdy removed the teen's bladder and part of his colon or large intestine.

"It's a great step. We've taken the features of three widely accepted procedures and combined the best features of each into one simpler operation," Sarosdy said.

Taking about two feet or one-sixth of the small intestine, Sarosdy fashioned a reservoir or pouch to hold urine. He also constructed a valve-type mechanism from the intestine to hold the urine in the reservoir until the patient is ready to discharge it through a catheter through an opening in the abdominal wall.

"It is a much more convenient system than having to wear an external plastic bag," Sarosdy explained. It also used no artificial materials for two valvular mechanism — one on the stomach wall and the other between the kidneys and reservoir, he explained.

"It's 100 percent natural."

While there are other types of reservoir procedures for bladder cancer patients, Sarosdy's is the latest step, which he predicts will eliminate problems the others have encountered, such as infections and kidney stone formation.

Duge, who had a congenital bladder problem, was diagnosed in May as having cancer of the bladder.

For the past 14 years, Sarosdy has been developing the procedure. When Duge's cancer was diagnosed, Sarosdy thought he had a proper candidate for the surgery.

"I was scared for about two days," Duge said after learning he had cancer, "but then it didn't scare me any more."

Sarosdy explained it might not be a success, that Duge might have to wear a plastic bag outside his body to collect urine. The teen-ager, however, repeatedly said, "Let's go for it," Sarosdy said.

Many persons using external plastic bags could have the new operation to convert to a reservoir like Duge's, Sarosdy said.

Asked how many operations are done at Medical Center for persons with cancerous bladders, Sarosdy said, "We do about 10 to 12 a year."

Texas citrus group pledges fight against ending Florida quarantine

McALLEN (AP) — A proposal to ease a quarantine on Florida citrus has prompted sharp protests from growers in Texas.

Fresh citrus from Florida has been quarantined from shipment to other citrus-producing areas since a 1984 outbreak of citrus canker.

Under a proposal published last week in the Federal Register, the U.S. Department of Agriculture would allow Florida fruit deliveries to resume to those states. Conditions of the protocol include grove inspection and other precautionary measures, including dips in two different disinfecting solutions.

But Texas growers believe recent canker cases discovered in Florida provide reason to continue the quarantine for another 1½ years, said Ray Prewett, executive vice president of Texas Citrus Mutual, a McAllen-based growers' organization.

"The bottom line is that they really don't know for sure where they have canker," Prewett said Wednesday.

Citrus canker is an aggressive bacterial disease that causes defoliation and other damage to leaves and twigs, and creates lesions in the fruit, rendering it unmarketable. The disease also can cause the fruit to drop from a tree before reaching maturity.

"We feel it is a definite biological threat to our industry," Prewett said.

During a 45-day comment period, the USDA will conduct public hearings on the proposal in McAllen, Los Angeles and Lake Alfred, Fla.

"We're gearing up for that hearing and making contacts," Prewett said.

Executive Vice President Bobby F. McKown of Florida Citrus Mutual, however, said growers in his state believe Florida citrus no longer poses a threat.

He said the western parts of the state with the harmful "strain A" of the canker will remain under quarantine, and that recently reported cases involve the less serious "nursery strain."

Messy battle between Texans and Coloradans this weekend

TWIN LAKES, Colo. (AP) — Outnumbered Texans, preparing to fight Colorado's onslaught of Texas jokes with tomatoes in the best tradition of the Alamo, hope to win one for a change this weekend in the sixth annual Colorado-Texas Tomato War.

About 600 combatants are expected to plunk down $39 for T-shirts and tomatoes and fling six tons of the soft and rotten reds at each other beginning at high noon Saturday.

But only about 250 of them are expected to be Texans, putting them in the underdog role right off the bat.

The Texans set up an Alamo replica on the hillside and "it's the last stronghold to fall," said John Berg, of Leadville, a Texas refugee who has fought in four tomato wars.

"I'm sort of the resident Texan up here, not the most popular thing to be, but this weekend I get even," said Berg.

It doesn't hurt — not much anyway — to die in the tomato war. A good splat with a juicy red one on the torso eliminates a soldier from the action, providing a good excuse to visit a MASH unit for a Bloody Mary.

The winners — those who last the day with clean shirts — win bragging rights for another year. So far, Texas has won only once.

The losers, however, get a consolation prize — use of the Nordic Inn at Twin Lakes for festivities Saturday night.

Texans' fondness of Colorado as a vacation spot is at the root of the event, founded by Taylor Adams of Leadville, commanding general of the Colorado forces.

Texans pour into Colorado's mountains by the thousands, winter and summer. Their camping vehicles clog the highways in the summertime, their skiers crowd the slopes in the winter and their hunters seem to turn the ground orange during October.

While they do bring money, they also become the butt of jokes throughout Colorado. It doesn't help that it was the Dallas Cowboys who defeated the Denver Broncos in the 1978 Super Bowl, ending a magical season for the Broncos.

"Beautify Colorado: Put a Texan on a Bus," is one of the more popular lines in Colorado.

Some of the Texan jokes are even more wicked. "How do you tell the difference between a dead Texan and a dead coyote along the highway? There are skid marks in front of the coyote."

Few Texans are amused by such humor. Several years ago, then-Gov. Richard Lamm of Colorado ignited a small interstate feud when he told a Texas joke in public. Then-Gov. Mark White of Texas wasn't amused, and retaliated.

Lately, the talk has been of the states' new governors, Roy Romer of Colorado and William Clements of Texas, possibly joining the fray next year.

"I don't know why anybody would take offense at Texans," she said. "We have senses of humor, and any state that could produce a Lyndon Johnson can't be all bad."

She also thinks references to the Alamo promote the "wrong attitude."

Cisneros: U.S. cities need new vision

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) — Only American cities that can cope with today's problems while planning for the future will flourish in the year 2000, San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros told Iowa city officials.

"The cities and towns that are going to be successful are those that develop new visions of themselves and really decide to become masters of their own destinies," he said.

Cisneros gave a keynote speech on the challenges facing American cities to a highly receptive crowd of about 400 at the Iowa League of Municipalities convention Wednesday.

Cisneros said that cities already hard hit by the loss of thousands of high-paying manufacturing jobs will face in the future problems related to an increase in the number of the elderly and poverty-stricken children, without the cushion of billions of dollars in federal aid available in the past.

To face those problems, he said that city officials have to pull people together to decide where they want their city to be by the year 2000, and how they want to get there.

"Some cities and towns in Iowa are going to be victims of the changes I described and some are going to prosper," he said. "The difference between those that will be victims and those that will prosper is the ones that prosper will have planned."

Chaparral residents want to refuse El Paso's refuse

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Some New Mexicans contend that the only thing El Paso wants from New Mexico is water and a place to dump garbage.

The question of who gets New Mexico's underground water will be decided by courts. But the garbage issue is in the hands of local politicians, and residents of Chaparral, N.M., want Dona Ana County Commissioners to either ban Texas trash or make Texans pay more to dump their garbage in the border county.

About 20 Chaparral residents attended Tuesday's Dona County Commission meeting to protest county plans to designate the Chaparral landfill as one of three dumps that commercial waste haulers must use.

The commissioners voted at Tuesday's meeting to require waste haulers to obtain permits and pay fees to use the county's landfills.

In addition to requiring permits and fees, commissioners approved a contract with the Rio Grande Council of Governments. The council will study garbage control in El Paso County, Texas, and Dona Ana and Otero counties in New Mexico. It will make policy recommendations to the counties.

The amount of Texas refuse being dumped in the county landfill in Chaparral has increased in the past year since El Paso closed its McCombs Landfill to commercial haulers. Any household trash from El Paso can be dumped at that landfill now. In response, El Paso's commercial haulers have been driving across the New Mexico state line in increasing numbers.

"We object to waste carriers of El Paso bringing their commercial garbage into Chaparral and dumping it on us," Chaparral resident Mike Cormier said. "The dump is right beside the elementary school and we don't know what is being dumped out there. It has us a little worried."

Another Chaparral resident, Delores Wright, said the town is worried that the dump will contaminate the water supply. The landfill is atop the Hueco Basin, she said, adding she was worried that seepage of toxic chemicals could pollute the entire basin.

Concern over contamination of the water supply has prompted the county to close the septic pit at the La Union landfill because toxic chemicals were found in the raw sewage dumped there. Starting Saturday, commercial haulers of raw sewage and sludge can dump only at the Anthony, N.M., and Chaparral landfills.

"La Union is contaminated so now you're saying 'Let's dump it somewhere else,'" Cormier said.

Peters said the county should consider charging Texans more to use the landfill, or build more dumps, setting aside smaller ones for communities and creating others for commercial use.

Director and choreographer Bob Fosse is dead at 60

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Fosse, the choreographer and director whose genius spawned such Broadway musicals as "Sweet Charity" and "Dancin'" as well as the film version of "Cabaret," is dead at age 60.

Fosse, who won every major entertainment award, collapsed and died of a heart attack Wednesday at a hotel just before the opening of the revival of "Sweet Charity" at the National Theater.

The cast went on with the show not knowing that their director had died, toasting him later at a somber opening night party, a theater spokeswoman said.

The hard-driving, fiercely competitive Fosse prided himself on being a showman, refusing to curtail his pace despite past heart problems and a five- to six-pack-a-day cigarette habit.

He showed no sign of illness in an upbeat rehearsal earlier in the day, said Alma Viator, a theater spokeswoman. He was stricken after he left the theater at 6:30 p.m. for a break with Gwen Verdon, his former wife and a dancer who starred in many of his works over the years.

"He and Gwen Verdon went back to his hotel room at the Willard Hotel. He had a massive heart attack there. They rushed him to George Washington University Hospital, where they tried to revive him and could not."

"The cast knew nothing of this until the end of the show. He never made it to opening night," she said.

Fosse was long a mainstay of the Broadway musical theater, and he was one of the most widely acclaimed choreographers of recent decades.

"Sweet Charity," one of Fosse's most enduring creations, first opened on Broadway in 1966, with Miss Verdon the original Charity. It was acclaimed for its choreography, with one critic writing, "postures, stances, gestures and weary collapses of the one dime 10-cents-a-dance girls are brilliantly, tenderly and bitingly visualized."

It was Fosse who gave the show its distinctive stamp, as he did in much of his choreography.

In the 1950s and '60s, he won Tony awards for his Broadway musical hits "The Pajama Game" and "Damn Yankees"; "Redhead"; "Sweet Charity"; and two Tony awards each for "Pippin" in 1972 and for "Dancin'" in 1978. His film work included "Cabaret," "All That Jazz" and "Lenny."

In one year, Fosse garnered awards in every major entertainment medium — movies, television and the stage. He captured an Oscar in 1972 for his film of "Cabaret," the escapades of a British cabaret singer adrift in the depraved bohemianism of Berlin in the 1930s, plus a Tony for his Broadway show "Pippin," and an Emmy for his television special starring Liza Minnelli, "Liza With a Z."

In "All That Jazz," Fosse presented the autobiographical story of an equally brilliant director and choreographer, obsessed with work and women, whose smoking, drinking and frenetic lifestyle finally delivered him to open heart surgery. The choreographer, played by Roy Scheider, had a heart attack, just as Fosse did while editing "Lenny."

Fosse, the son of a vaudeville singer, was born in Chicago on June 23, 1927. As a 9-year-old, he liked to dance over stoops and garbage cans. He formed his first nightclub act at age 13 and performed in clubs around the Midwest. He made his Broadway debut as a dancer at age 23.

Fosse was married and divorced three times, to Mary Ann Niles, Joan McCracken and Miss Verdon. After his breakup with Miss Verdon, his girlfriends included Ann Reinking and Jessica Lange, both of whom appeared in "All That Jazz." He had a daughter, Nicole, with Miss Verdon.

Bob Hope pushes anti-drug plan

DALLAS (AP) — Comedian Bob Hope asked leaders of several Dallas corporations to support a nationwide anti-drug program he leads, calling drug abuse the biggest threat to America's youth.

Hope spoke in the theater named for him at Southern Methodist University Wednesday and mixed jokes with a straightforward message: Everyone must join the fight against drug abuse.

"This affair is a very serious affair. It's almost what you would call impossible," Hope said. Drug abuse "has hit us a lot in this country and really hurt us a lot. But I am happy to join this group and try to remedy this situation. It's going to take all of you to do something."

Hope made the appeal on behalf of the Hope for a Drug Free America campaign. Through it, he plans to use the support of famous athletes, entertainers, politicians and corporate executives to set up a nationwide foundation to fight drug abuse.

The organization hopes to raise more than $100 million during the next three years to sponsor drug counseling, prevention programs and treatment centers throughout the country.

Hope said he is planning to kick off the fund-raising effort with a telethon to air the night before this year's Super Bowl. It will feature professional athletes, television and movie stars and other performers and will include a toll-free number people can call to pledge money or ask questions about drug abuse.

Dallas businessman Lamar Hunt hosted the Dallas meeting and said the idea for the campaign came a year ago from Vic Maitland, vice chairman of the campaign and a member of the National Football League Alumni organization.

America: Nation of record-keepers

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Among other things Americans are learning about the 1986 tax law is that it forcing them to keep records — intricate, detailed, clear, dated, precise records.

Not to have them might, in some instances, make the difference between a life of relative financial ease or one of financial distress, and conceivably even of financial survival.

Consider the homeowner who borrows on a primary residence with the idea of deducting the interest payments. Can he or she prove exactly how much the house cost, the capitalized closing costs, and the total cost of improvements?

Easy? Probably, but not always, especially if the house was purchased a decade ago. And the records were flooded by a leak in the cellar. And the expenditures for improvement were a bit at a time over the years.

Taxpayers who refinanced or borrowed against their homes after Aug. 16, 1986, must determine such information and report it on their 1987 federal tax returns, or else face a dispute over the interest deductions they claim.

Under new interest deduction rules effective this year, the maximum amount of fully deductible mortgage interest on a home is determined by referring to the total cost of buying and improving the home.

A lot of people are affected — and as income tax time approaches, many personal accountants and financial advisers are getting concerned that their clients aren't fully aware of the situation and won't have their records ready.

Wright receives large royalties from friend

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Texas publisher who received $265,000 last year from the campaign of House Speaker Jim Wright is giving him book royalties four to five times higher than normally given to authors, the Washington Post reported today.

The newspaper said Wright, D-Texas, of Fort Worth, has received $54,642 so far under the unusual arrangement. Wright defended the book deal, saying it has been profitable to both him and the publisher, the newspaper said.

The Post said Wright receives a 55 percent royalty on sales of his $5.95 paperback book, "Reflections of a Public Man," published by Fort Worth printer Carlos Moore. Moore's company received $265,000 from the congressman's campaign last year.

No jobs

Armando Lopez, left, cooks dinner for his wife Robin and a friend, Pedro Lopez, on the banks of the Yakima River near Yakima, Wash., where they have been staying for three weeks. Unseasonably warm weather has delayed the harvest of Washington's apple crop and officials say thousands of migrant workers won't have places to stay and are running short of money and food while they wait for picking to begin.

Royal dress designer helping effort to save black rhinos

LONDON (AP) — The black rhinoceros is struggling to survive in east Africa and Lindka Cierach, who designed the royal wedding gown for Sarah Ferguson and was born in Africa, is involved in its fate.

"The rhino is so much a part of Kenya it would be heartbreaking to see it disappear," she told The Associated Press.

Miss Cierach is helping Rhino Rescue, an international effort headed by Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands to save the rhino of Kenya.

"My father was mapping Africa for the British government," Miss Cierach said. "I was born in Basutoland (now Lesotho) and spent 10 years in Uganda in the days, not so long ago, when you couldn't see the horizon for game."

"Most of those great herds have now disappeared. You have to travel far to see the animals and you will be fortunate if you see a rhino," the 85-year-old designer said.

Miss Cierach has donated clothes of her own design for a lavish safari in Kenya, which is part of a fund-raising Rhino Rescue auction to be held at Sotheby's in London on Oct. 26.

Maurice Coreth, a founder of Rhino Rescue Appeal, said poachers were responsible for cutting the black rhino population in Kenya to 425 now from 20,000 in the early 1970s.

Rhino Rescue Appeal is raising nearly $2 million to help Kenya's Wildlife Department build and maintain four rhino sanctuaries.

"We believe there are no rhino left in Uganda and very few in Tanzania," said Coreth, who once farmed in Kenya and now lives in England. "The white rhino in southern Africa isn't in danger, but the black rhino of east and central Africa is the most threatened large animal in the continent and if something isn't done extremely quickly that's the end of the species."

He said the sanctuaries should provide a breathing space for the rhino until international opinion ends the trade in rhino horn, now worth four times more than gold.

"When that happens, the rhino bred in the sanctuaries can be returned to the wild," Coreth said. The first sanctuary has already been enclosed by a fence that is 47 miles around and 7 feet high near Nakuru, 85 miles northwest of Nairobi, he said.

The "ultimate safari" coming to auction is a 21-day tour which the organizers say will be the most luxurious mounted in Kenya since U.S. President Theodore Roosevelt was there in 1910. It will cover the whole country, with a chef in charge of every meal and transportation by light plane, helicopters and raft on the Tana River to watch hippos and crocodiles while sipping champagne.

The Kenya safari has been donated by Governors' Camp, a tented lodge for well-heeled tourists in the Masai Mara game reserve, the Kenyan extension of the famed Serengeti wildlife region in Tanzania.

Giant Gargantua symbolizes first theme park in France

CERGY-PONTOISE, France (AP) — The giant Gargantua sits in what used to be a beet field, his right hand holding a huge goblet of red wine, his left holding a cow speared on a fork, ready to pop into his mouth.

More than 450 years after striding through the pages of a satire by the bawdy monk Francois Rabelais, Gargantua has become the centerpiece of France's first theme park, Mirapolis, open since May in this suburb northwest of Paris.

Rabelais, who published his Gargantua in 1534, almost predicted this, when he described how residents of the French capital turned out to gawk when the giant rode into town on a horse the size of six elephants.

"The Parisians are such simpletons, such gapers, and such feckless idiots that a buffoon, a pedlar of indulgences, a mule with bells on its collar, or a fiddler at a crossroad will draw a greater crowd than a good preacher of the Gospel," Rabelais wrote.

But there is still an open question whether such crowds will turn out for Mirapolis — based entirely on French legends and traditions — or for the other three theme parks planned for the Paris area in the next few years, including a European Disneyland.

Caroline de La Jarrige, spokeswoman for Mirapolis, said attendance since the park opened was running below predictions, which had called for a total of 2 million during the five-month season. She would not provide exact figures.

Dismal spring and summer weather are blamed for holding down attendance. In addition, there was a conflict with workers from traditional carnivals, who vandalized the park on opening day, fought with police and destroyed the machinery in several rides, in a protest of tax breaks given to the new theme parks.

"We'll never know how much effect it had," Guy de Boisgrollier, director of the park, said of the battle with carnival workers, which forced Mirapolis to cut back operations and its publicity campaign for several weeks.

Now the 136-acre park is back in full swing, and children line up to take a ride through Gargantua's body — which rises 115 feet off the ground. If he were to stand up, he would be taller than the Statue of Liberty.

Mirapolis — which means Marvelous City — has made a point of presenting themes from French fairy tales, many nearly forgotten in the 20th century.

Visitors can learn about the Legend of the Town of Ys — an Atlantis-like sunken city — in an underwater ride, or munch on candy at the home of "Dame Tartine," who lived in a home of fresh butter in a Breton nursery rhyme.

Other attractions, more interesting to adults or older children, focus on the Impressionist painters and on Leonardo da Vinci, who was Italian, but lived his last four years in France under the patronage of King Francois I, and is buried in France.

"We took a bit from everything in the French heritage," Ms. de La Jarrige said.

Volunteers gather 215 tons of trash

AUSTIN (AP) — Volunteers who troled for trash on Texas beaches picked up almost 215 tons of debris in three hours, Land Commissioner Garry Mauro says.

But the Saturday cleanup was temporary at best, Mauro said.

"Saturday afternoon, for the first time in many years, most of the beaches of Texas were clean. Unfortunately, that's changing right now. Every tide brings another load of garbage," he said.

Sixteen Texas beaches were cleaned during the 1987 Texas Coastal Cleanup, sponsored by the General Land Office and the Center for Environmental Education. Volunteer trash haulers filled out data cards that will be used by the CEE to publish a report on the project.

"We were thrilled with the response to the cleanup effort and wish to thank everyone who helped," said Linda Maraniss, CEE's regional director.

Guardianship entrepreneurs entering the field

EDITOR'S NOTE — State and county governments are not the only ones getting into guardianship. It's becoming a business. The increasing elderly population provides plenty of opportunities for accountants, lawyers and banks to earn money as the guardians of old people. This fifth story in a six-day series, "Guardians of the Elderly: An Ailing System," looks at who is getting into the business and why.

By FRED BAYLES and SCOTT McCARTNEY
Associated Press Writers

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Charles Arnold looks out on the rest of country from this retirement mecca and sees unlimited possibilities for the guardianship business.

"I think guardianship is unquestionably the future," he says. "The business is overwhelming and the need is dramatic."

An attorney and former public guardian in Phoenix, Arnold is part of a new and growing field of guardianship entrepreneurs — professionals who, for a fee, will run the lives of old people.

Called professional guardians or fiduciaries, they take on a role held by sons and daughters. They earn their money by making all the decisions for their elderly wards, including where they will live and, in some extreme cases, when they will die.

So promising is this field that San Diego Community College has begun night courses on how to be a professional guardian.

Their fees come from the people whose lives they control. No state yet requires a license to hang out a shingle.

The ranks include people such as Frank Repensek, who agonizes over the medical decisions he must make for his wards.

"Substituting judgment for another adult who sits there and says I don't want this operation, it's just miserable," said Repensek, the executive director of the Guardianship Program of Dade County Inc., a non-profit Miami firm.

Others define their role in terms of cost effectiveness, economies of scale and bottom lines.

"It is basically money management," said Alan May, a Detroit-area attorney with 400 wards. "It is basically the review of their financial affairs to make sure the nursing homes are charging them the correct amount of money, that the nursing home is paid, that the money is provided for their needs."

While guardianship still is largely seen as a family affair, a legal step taken by children to better care for their parents, a year-long Associated Press study of the nation's guardianship systems found an increasing number of strangers taking over as the legal "parent" of the elderly.

In more than 2,200 files reviewed by the AP nationwide, about one-quarter of court-appointed guardians were banks, attorneys and businesses who charge for their services.

The investigation also detailed instances where private guardians have proven costly and, in some cases, detrimental to their wards through avarice or ignorance:

■ Susan Lehmann, a Grand Rapids, Mich., professional conservator was sentenced to nine months in jail in 1985 for stealing $48,000 from her wards. She was accused of cashing wards' Social Security checks and buying a $6,000 car for herself with wards' money. A presentencing report said she had told a witness she "needed the money and they didn't."

■ A 1982 Miami grand jury report told of a lawyer who served as both attorney and guardian and double-billed his ward's estate to the tune of $77,000. The charges included $1,013 for the three hours it took to buy a $200 clock for the ward.

■ When a Hagerstown, Md., nursing home complained in 1978 about the unpaid bills of an elderly resident, court officials discovered her guardian, an attorney, had failed for five years to collect rents or pay taxes on a home she owned. The ward lost the home in a tax sale.

Court officials note that these cases are the exception. Many professional guardians are dedicated, caring people who can help the elderly through their remaining years.

For some, the deeper issue is the commercialization of guardianship, a shift from family caring and commitment to a business arrangement that often promotes itself with color brochures and slide-tape presentations.

"They can provide for all their conservatees' needs, from buying slippers or dentures, but they don't provide the social contact that is necessary," said Janet Morris, a Legal Services attorney in Los Angeles.

The growth in professional guardianship has many causes. The movement of retirees to the Sun Belt, where professional guardianship thrives, has cut off many of the aged from families and friends. Hospitals and nursing homes looking for someone to guarantee the payment of bills for elderly patients often direct cases to private guardians when family or government agencies are not available.

"People will have some sort of crisis that puts them in a hospital or a nursing home and they can't return home. The discharge planners at the hospital have to get them out and they come to us," said Judith Chinello, a guardian in Glendale, Calif., whose office receives 25 referrals a month, mostly from health care centers.

Some companies court business from hospitals and nursing homes, agreeing to take on wards with few resources in consideration for referrals to better-off wards.

"If we can make enough to meet the payroll, we'll take on charity cases," said Bob Webster, deputy director of Planned Protective Services Inc., a non-profit Los Angeles firm.

Some firms aim for specific markets. Oursell Conservatorship Services in Santa Ana, Calif., avoids committing itself to wards with estates of under six figures. "We have to try to stay with estates of $150,000 and over," said Judy Okonski. "We have a policy of staying with these people until they expire."

Professional guardianship does not come cheap. Ms. Chinello charges $65 an hour for her time, less for duties performed by workers who may cook, clean or chauffeur a ward. Planned Protective Services bills at $37.50 an hour for nearly all its services, but offers them free to 42 percent of its 200 wards.

About half those charity cases are people whose estates have trickled dry, in part, because of guardianship fees.

But the generosity of Planned Protective Services is not common. In many situations, once the money is gone, professional guardians petition the court to end their service, leaving the wards, already declared incompetent to handle their affairs, in a legal no-man's land.

"The outrage about the private ones is that when the money runs out, they refer it to the public guardian," said Raymond Steinberg, who studied guardianship referrals in the Los Angeles area for the University of Southern California.

Repensek says he gets calls from attorneys eager to hand over wards whose funds are exhausted to his non-profit group, which has 80 percent indigent cases.

"When the assets run out, we get the call," Repensek said.

The AP found a file in Dallas that contained a letter to the judge from a guardian who asked to resign because "funds in the estate will diminish when present fees" are paid. The guardian, an attorney, was paid and went on to resign.

At a Minnesota bar association conference attended by the AP, prominent probate attorney Milton Bix was asked by a participant if there was a need for a guardian once a ward's money ran out.

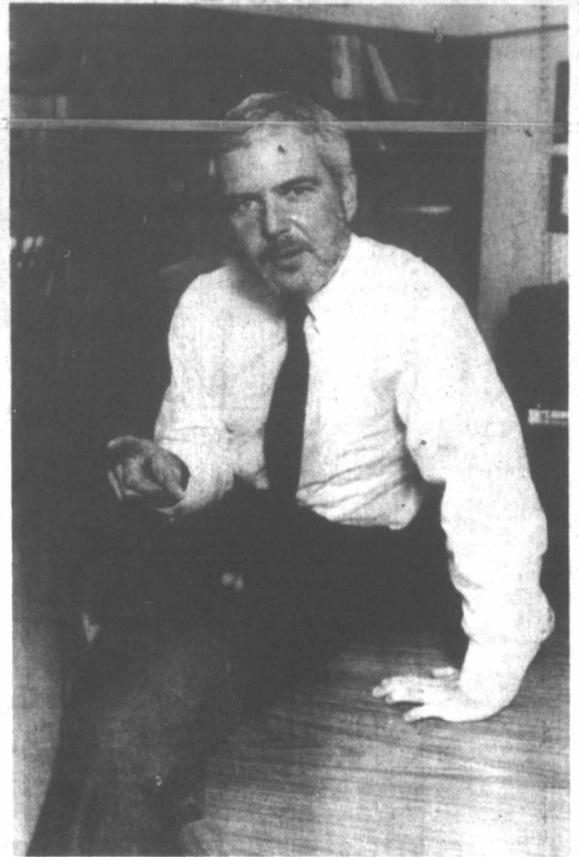

"No," he said. "Never be afraid to petition the court."

Most professional guardians advise keeping a close eye on the ledger because profits can be marginal. May, the Detroit-area probate attorney, said he was in the business only because "it's a nice part of my practice. It fits."

"Being in the probate court all the time makes me a little bit more unique in my cost factors," he said. "It's more cost-effective for me."

May said he nets $10,000 to $15,000 annually from his guardianship business. He keeps his costs down by concentrating on wards whose day-to-day care is handled by nursing homes. Even though the court often assigns him total responsibility for his wards, he rarely has contact with them.

First of America-Detroit, a Michigan bank company, also takes this business-like approach to the management of people's lives. The bank handles 700 conservatorships, the legal control of a ward's money, through the Veteran's Administration. It even has a special area for these clients — off a back elevator.

Charles Arnold is part of a new and growing field of guardianship entrepreneurs, professionals who, for a fee, will run the lives of old people.

Douglas children get honors at state, national Charisma pageants

Cody and Kaysi Douglas, children of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Douglas of Pampa, won the national titles in their respective divisions of Charisma Pageants, held recently in Hollywood, Calif.

Cody, 4, won the overall title in the age 3-6 Young Mr. Charisma state pageant in San Antonio during the summer. There were four categories of competition, including talent. He received a savings bond plus help with expenses to attend the national pageant.

He won the national title in Hollywood, and his duties during the year will include appearances throughout Texas and surrounding states. He will return to Hollywood next year to relinquish his title.

Kaysi, 8, a third-grader at Woodrow Wilson Elementary School, was named Texas State Charisma Girl in the age 8-10 division. At the state pageant, she was also named Miss Photogenic. The four categories of competition were interview, sportswear, partywear and talent.

Kaysi was crowned National Charisma Beauty at the national pageant in Hollywood. She will attend preliminary pageants

Victim's ordeal made public

DEAR ABBY: Recently my husband and I heard Norman Early, the district attorney from Denver, speak on the criminal justice system — from the victim's point of view.

He read the enclosed account of a victim of incest. Her name is "Cindy" and she is 12. I thought it worthy of inclusion in your column. I hope you agree.

MARY DEAN ARMSTRONG

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR MARY: I do. And here it is: Promises, Promises — A Child's View of Incest

I asked you for help and you told me you would if I told you the things my dad did to me. It was really hard for me to say all those things, but you told me to trust you — then you made me repeat them to 14 different strangers.

I asked you for privacy and you sent two policemen to my school in front of everyone, to "go downtown" for a talk in their black and white car — like I was the one being busted.

I asked you to believe me, and you said that you did, then you connected me to a lie detector, and took me to court where lawyers put me on trial like I was a liar. I can't help it if I can't remember times or dates or explain why I couldn't tell my mom. Your questions got me confused — my confusion got you suspicious.

I asked you for help and you gave me a doctor with cold metal gadgets and cold hands ... just like my father, who said it wouldn't hurt, just like my father, who said not to cry. He said I look fine — good news for you. You said, bad news for my "case."

I asked you for confidentiality and you let the newspaper get my story. What does it matter that they left out my name when they put in my father's and our home address? Even my best friend's mother won't let her talk to me anymore.

I asked for protection and you gave me a social worker who patted my head and called me "Honey" (mostly because she could never remember my name). She sent me to live with strangers in another place, with a different school.

Do you know what it's like to live where there's a lock on the refrigerator, where you have to ask permission to use the shampoo, and where you can't use the phone to call your friends? You get used to hearing, "Hi, I'm your new social worker, this is your new foster sister, dorm mother, group home." You tiptoe around like a perpetual guest and don't even get to see your own puppy grow up.

Do you know what it's like to have more social workers than friends?

Do you know what it feels like to be the one that everyone blames for all the trouble? Even when they were speaking to me, all they talked about was lawyers, shrinks, fees and whether or not they'll lose the mortgage. Do you know what it's like when your sisters hate you, and your brother calls you a liar? It's my word against my own father's. I'm 12 years old and he's the manager of a bank. You say you believe me — who cares, if nobody else does?

I asked you for help and you forced my mom to choose between us — she chose him, of course. She was scared and had a lot to lose. I had a lot to lose too — the difference was you never told me how much.

I asked you to put an end to the abuse — you put an end to my whole family. You took away my nights of hell and gave me days of hell instead. You've exchanged my private nightmare for a very public one.

Veteran Cowboys defy picket line

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys could be tough against the run when they start play against other free-agent NFL teams beginning Oct. 4.

Defensive tackles Randy White and Don Smerek, who have combined NFL experience of 20 years, rode through the players' union picket lines in a pickup truck on Wednesday.

They could form the anchor for a stout defensive line against the New York Jets in 10 days. Smerek is coming off the injured reserve list now that a pulled hamstring has healed, and he would be ready.

Spectators on a sidewalk across from the entrance cheered the two players, who were the only Cowboys not to honor the picket line of the NFL Players Union.

"I didn't expect 'em to cheer me," White said. "I'm doing what's best for me and my family. I didn't want to lose one-sixteenth of my salary ($31,000). I'll be paid whether we have a game this week or not."

White, a 13-year veteran and six-times an All-Pro, said, "I'm not against the union. I did what I had to do. I respect what they are doing. I hope they respect what I'm doing."

Some of the Cowboys' players turned thumbs down as White drove through the picket line, and Smerek, an eight-year veteran, said not many Cowboys know why they are striking.

"I don't know what the issues are, and why jeopardize my career for that?" he said. "I'm confused. Nobody on this team knows the issues."

Smerek said he expected a hostile greeting.

"I'm sure some of my teammates feel I let 'em down," Smerek said. "I have respect for their position and they should have respect for mine. If there is any animosity then it becomes their problem, not mine."

He added that "I feel a strong allegiance to the Cowboys. They stuck by me when I was injured. I feel a lot of loyalty to them."

But linebacker Jeff Rohrer didn't respect the decision made by White and Smerek, saying, "I'm a little bitter over it. I'll forgive, but I won't forget. ... This was a chance for them to show their true colors. And they have. They have abandoned all of the union people in America ... (White) is officially a scab."

The picketing Cowboys got on the line too late Wednesday morning to greet the 47 free-agent players who reported to practice. The players came in at 7:30 a.m. and the picket lines didn't go up until an hour later.

"This is not a party atmosphere," Rohrer said. "This is serious. We've got all kinds of workers here, plus a lot of fans showing solidarity, bringing us juice and drinks."

Club President Tex Schramm drove through the picket line at 9:45 a.m. en route to Philadelphia and a new round of talks between labor and management.

"Get up to Philly and get it settled," player representative Doug Cosbie shouted at Schramm from the picket line.

Schramm replied, "That's why I'm going."

Union members from Dallas-area locals were out in force as approximately 50 workers joined the Cowboys in support of the strike. There were ironworkers, construction tradesmen, postal workers, sheet metal workers, members of the United Auto Workers and International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

Talks stall; tempers flare

By DAVID GINSBURG
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Negotiators, still stalled on free agency, tried again for a settlement in the NFL strike though chances seemed slim that games could be played this weekend.

Talks to end the three-day walkout broke up early today after 8½ hours of actual bargaining, which started Wednesday afternoon. It was the longest session since a round of talks on April 20.

Players, meantime, were still on picket lines where, occasionally, things got ugly. In Houston, a busload of substitute players was pelted with eggs and a rock smashed a window.

The Washington Redskins went to court after striking players pounded a bus carrying subs to workouts.

In Kansas City, there were unloaded shotguns, a slashed tire and shoving.

Among those reporting for work were union defectors Randy White of the Dallas Cowboys and Mark Gastineau of the New York Jets.

As for Sunday's games, it didn't look good. "I wouldn't be encouraged that this weekend's games are going to be played," said Tex Schramm of the Dallas Cowboys, one of two team presidents attending the talks.

The league was expected to make its decision about the games today.

While Wednesday's session got under way at 3 p.m. EDT, talks didn't shift to free agency — the key issue — until just before midnight.

The union has demanded free agency for players with four years' experience. The

"Our position is that if free agency is not going to be resolved, then we're not going to make progress toward an agreement," he said.

"We reiterated our position; they reiterated their position. Then Gene Upshaw said, 'Let's break.'"

In Irving, Texas, White and teammate Don Smerek were cheered by spectators as they drove a pickup truck through the Cowboys' picket line.

"I'm not against the union," said White, a nine-time Pro Bowl player. "I did what I had to do. I respect what they are doing. I hope they respect what I'm doing."

"I'm doing what's best for me and my family."

Gastineau said defying the union "was the toughest thing I've ever gone through in my life." He did not have to cross a picket line because the striking players were not allowed to demonstrate at the Jets' training site at Hempstead, N.Y.

Gastineau said he was continuing to work out of loyalty "to the people who have been paying me for nine years."

NFL strike

owners, so far, have refused to modify the current system under which teams are compensated if a player signs elsewhere. Only one player in 10 years, Norm Thompson, has changed teams under that system.

Just after talks ended at approximately 3 a.m., Schramm told a news conference free agency was keeping both sides far apart.

Borger favored over Pampa

Pampa is a 21-point underdog to Borger in this week's Harris Football Rating System poll.

The two longtime rivals meet at 7:30 p.m. Friday night in Harvester Stadium in a District 1-4A clash. Pampa enters the game with an 0-3 record while Borger is 1-1.

Pampa is ranked 132 while Borger is 45th in the Class 4A state poll, according to Harris.

In other district games, Canyon is favored over Levelland by 19. Hereford is a 15-point favorite over Frenship and Lubbock Estacado is picked over Lubbock Dunbar by 10. Dumas is idle this week.

Canyon has climbed to sixth in this week's rankings while Hereford is 21st. Levelland is No. 70, Dumas 81, Lubbock Dunbar 87 and Frenship 88.

AL East leaders ready for battle

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Tonight, the Detroit Tigers and Toronto Blue Jays begin the business of determining who rules the best division in baseball.

The two teams, fresh from victories Wednesday night, start a four-game series in Toronto with the Blue Jays holding a half-game lead over the Tigers in the American League East.

George Bell hit his 47th home run and Jim Clancy pitched a five-hitter as Toronto beat the Baltimore Orioles 6-1. Bell leads the majors in homers and with runs batted in with 132. Toronto has won four straight and 16 of the last 21.

Doyle Alexander, acquired by the Tigers in mid-August, raised his record to 8-0 with Detroit with a two-hitter in a 4-0 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Alexander and Clancy are scheduled to pitch against each other Sunday. Tigers ace Jack Morris faces Mike Flanagan tonight.

In other games, Minnesota cut its magic number for winning the West to six by beating Texas 4-2 while Cleveland defeated Oakland 8-6. Milwaukee rallied past New York 8-7 in 10 innings, Kansas City routed Seattle 9-0 and California topped Chicago 10-6.

Toronto beat Baltimore in 12 of 13 games this season. Detroit was 12-1 against Boston.

Alexander, obtained from Atlanta for a minor leaguer, pitched the seventh two-hitter of his career. Both hits came in the first inning and he retired the final 22 batters in his third shutout since joining the Tigers.

Alexander is 20-3 lifetime in September, including 5-0 with Detroit.

Mustangs looking to bounce back after last week's loss

(All games 8 p.m., except where noted)

VEGA at WHEELER

The Wheeler Mustangs are bound to be mad.

Coming off the heels of an 18-0 shutout at the hands of Hobart, Okla. last Friday, the Mustangs should be ready to play.

Their competition, though, will not be a pushover.

The Vega Longhorns are led by quarterback Bryan Wood who last week guided the team to a 28-6 win over Boys Ranch and completed 11-of-19 for 183 yards.

The Mustangs ground game will try to get back on track after being held to only 169 yards against Hobart.

Backfield leaders Grayson Benson and Bubba Smith were both held to just over 50 yards in the loss.

Wheeler, rated No. 12 in the state, is picked by the Harris Rating System as two-point favorites over the sixth ranked Longhorns.

In last year's contest, Wheeler shutout the 'Horns 21-0.

BOYS RANCH at CANADIAN

The Wildcats will try to make it seven wins in a row when they take on Boys Ranch this Friday. The 'Cats, who sneaked by Lubbock Roosevelt 26-21 Saturday, have not lost a game since Oct. 17, 1986.

"We've got to shut their passing game down," Canadian head coach Paul Wilson said of Boys Ranch. "Their quarterback (Damen Hagen) releases the ball quicker than just about anybody I've ever seen."

"They're a Jekyll and Hyde ball club so far this year," he said, referring to the club's loss to Vega last week. "If they want to play football, though, they're in the business to do it."

Canadian is rated as the No. 48 team in 2A ball and is an eight-point favorite over 138th ranked 3A Boys Ranch.

The Wildcats won last year's contest 45-18.

FOLLETT at SHAMROCK

Irish coach Buck Buchanan not only hopes to tackle the Follett Panthers, he just hopes his tackling improves, period.

"Tackling cost us the last two ball games," Buchanan said. "Our blocking's been off, too."

Buchanan said the Irish tackled poorly the second week against Wheeler, and it cost Shamrock the game against Mangum, Okla. last week when their running back broke a tackle and subsequently ran for a 97-yard score.

One thing Shamrock does still in its favor is attitude.

"The kids are still spirited," Buchanan said. "The attitudes are still great and that's half the battle."

"I think we have two evenly matched teams Friday night. It'll just go back to playing mistake-free football."

Follett, ranked No. 50 in 1A ball, is picked as a six point favor-rite over the No. 168 ranked Irish.

SUNRAY at WHITE DEER

"It's gonna be quite a football game," Buck coach Windy Williams said about Friday's contest against Sunray.

Williams pointed out that although the Bobcats aren't "down," they did lose eight starters to graduation.

Last week, Sunray fought Spearman to a 13-13 tie. "They've got a great team. It'll be a struggle," Williams said.

Sunray, now 1-1-1 and ranked 42nd in 1A ball is picked as an eight point underdog to the Bucks, ranked No. 101 in 2A.

White Deer lost last year's contest 21-0.

MIAMI at LAZBUDDIE, 7:30 P.M.

Miami coach Currie McWilliams says if his Warriors can shut down the Lazbuddie passing attack while at the same time have his team produce a successful running game, Miami should win the contest.

"It could easily be 60-56, Miami wins," McWilliams said. "I think if we pass better than they run, it'll come down to that. I don't think we're gonna stop them a whole lot, but they're not gonna stop us at all."

Lazbuddie is 3-0 and has outscored its opponents 174-29.

Miami, riding a six game win streak, has averaged 53.3 points per game and is also 3-0.

If the Warriors can get by the Longhorns, there is a good chance they can make it through the year without a scar on their record if tailback Shane Bridwell remains healthy.

Bridwell has rushed for over 600 yards in three games and has scored a phenomenal 19 touchdowns — seven each in the last two games.

McLean seeks revenge against Motley County

By JIMMY PATTERSON Sports Writer

Last year's matchup between the McLean Tigers and Motley County had the buildup of a prize fight.

Cameras were all over the place — and not just any cameras, but the kind they use on television.

CBS covered the contest. So did ESPN.

Why all the national interest over a little Texas Panhandle football game?

Last year at this time, both Motley County and McLean were winless. Not only for the 1986 season, but neither team had won a game since 1984.

Motley County had lost 23 straight; McLean 24 in a row.

It was, according to former Tiger coach Bill Phillips, McLean's weekend to break that streak.

"This is definitely the one," Phillips said before last year's game. "I feel good and the kids feel good."

After the game, though, he and the kids felt anything but good as Motley County broke its winless streak with a 6-0 heartbreaker over McLean.

Although the Matadors won the game, it was their only win of the season and the touchdown they scored was their only one in five non-district contests.

Motley County finished the season with a 1-9 record, scoring only 33 points along the way.

McLean, meanwhile, finished at 0-10 and were outscored by opponents by a 358-48 margin.

Unfortunately, the losing has spilled over into the '87 campaign for present coach George Watson's Tigers. McLean is 0-3. They have scored once this year; their opponents have scored 15 TDs.

Thus far, the light at the end of the tunnel is more visible this year for Motley County than it is for McLean.

The Matadors have already chalked up their first non-district victory with a 47-0 win over Whiteface.

"We're improving a little each week," Matador coach Cecil Marks said. "We're looking forward to playing another school our size (in McLean)."

Marks was referring to the fact that the Matadors' two losses this year have come against larger 2A schools.

Watson believes in fate and feels his Tiger squad is improving each week. He has evidence to back that up.

"In the first game against Shamrock we had one good quarter," Watson said. "The second week against Clarendon, we put together two good quarters. Last week, we played three good quarters and the promising thing is that they were the last three."

Watson has five players suited up that were not with the team in its opening weekend loss to Shamrock.

Linebacker Rob Sanderson, tackle Floyd Morris, ends Kyle Woods and Sid Brass, and Patel Tarkash expressed an interest in playing for the team as it entered its second week of play.

The addition of the four players has helped McLean in the depth department, although two have suffered injuries.

Woods will be back after suffering a concussion, but Sanderson will miss the Motley County game with a bad shoulder bruise.

What the Tigers will have to overcome in Friday's game is the Matadors' strength and size.

The Mats average 190 pounds on the defensive line and fullback Tim Kendall — the team's main offensive weapon — weighs in at 225 pounds.

"We have to have our heads on for the game," Marks said. "McLean has improved from last year."

The cameras won't be there this year because there is only one losing streak on the line — McLean's luck has been anything good for 33 consecutive weeks.

"I hate to sound like a broken record, but we've just been improving," Watson said. "I always think we're gonna win. Sometimes I'm wrong about that, though."

Man who killed three and himself was on 'mission'

CORSICANA (AP) — A man who shot and killed three people before taking his own life — and who also is a suspect in three murders last week in Missouri — was on a "mission" that was planned to end in his death, a criminology expert said.

Howard Franklin Stewart, 37, put a gun to his temple and pulled the trigger Tuesday after a half-hour rampage in Corsicana that left his wife, a former employer and a Louisiana man dead of multiple gunshot wounds, police said.

Missouri law enforcement officers arrived Wednesday to pursue possible links between the Texas killings and three execution-style slayings in southern Missouri.

"He was on a mission, and he had to complete that mission," Sgt. Ed Richards of the Texas Department of Public Safety said Wednesday. "He actually didn't want to hurt anyone because he didn't try to kill anyone else."

"But had anyone interfered, he would have killed him. If he had seen a police officer, he would have killed him."

Richards, a DPS criminology expert from Austin, came to Corsicana on Tuesday to conduct a training session for law enforcement officials. Ironically, he had just begun to discuss psychopathic killers when the call about Stewart's trail of murder came over the portable radios carried by the officers attending the class.

Richards said Stewart was a "macho-type individual, a survivalist, outdoorsman."

"This was the third murder-suicide in Texas within the past week," he told The Dallas Morning News. "Similar crimes are committed by similar personalities who have similar lifestyles."

"One commonality that you find in cases like this is a precipitating event in the person's life," Richards said. "Everything seems screwed up, he's depressed, he's lost all his self-esteem, and it seems the whole world has turned against him."

"It's a safe assumption in a case like this that the person has a great deal of internalized anger, and when they start off on a mission like this, they're planning on dying, either by their own hand or by forcing police to kill them," he said.

Stewart's path of violent murder in Corsicana began sometime before 1:40 p.m. Tuesday, when he shot his two pit bull terriers and left them in his van on a hillside near Lake Halbert, just south of this town of 23,000, about 50 miles southeast of Dallas.

Also found in the abandoned van were a litter of six puppies, two Claymore anti-personnel mines, a high-powered bow and arrow, a .22-caliber rifle, and a poster of the "Grim Reaper" plastered on the dashboard.

Stewart, packing a .22-caliber automatic pistol with a 50-shot magazine and a .38-caliber revolver and dressed in camouflage fatigues with his pockets full of ammunition, rode his motorcycle to Hulcher Services Inc.

Until a few weeks ago, police said, Stewart had worked at the company, which specializes in cleaning up railroad accidents. There, he shot and killed foreman Dennis James Wade, 30, and stole a company truck, police said.

Stewart drove to the Western Sizzlin' steakhouse, where his wife, 34-year-old Brenda Stewart, worked. He threatened the steakhouse's assistant manager with a pistol and asked where his wife was.

After firing several shots into the air, Stewart left the restaurant, hitting a parked car with the stolen truck as he left the parking lot, police said. With police in pursuit, he drove to a mobile home park on the outskirts of town, where his wife lived.

Edward Persons, a 30-year-old Jonesboro, La., resident who was working in Corsicana, had come to Mrs. Stewart's mobile home to buy pit bull puppies, Persons' wife said.

Stewart forced open the door of the mobile home and shot Persons 10 times, authorities said. He cornered his wife in a bathroom and fatally shot her before walking outside and killing himself, police said.

Stewart, called "Rambo" by his neighbors, told acquaintances earlier this week he had killed three people in Missouri, authorities said.

Well-wishers bid Sessions farewell

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Almost 400 people, including well-known judges and attorneys, turned out for a reception to bid farewell to Chief U.S. District Judge William Sessions, who is expected to be confirmed soon as the new director of the FBI.

Wednesday's festivities were at the Institute of Texan Cultures.

Sessions made a short talk in which he called his nomination by President Reagan "a bolt out of the blue."

But, he said, "I leave the judgeship with great regret. I know my heart will remain with the judgeship the rest of my life."

Sessions already has received unanimous approval from the Senate Judiciary Committee. Larry Neal, spokesman for U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, said Wednesday that a confirmation vote by the full Senate was expected "any day now."

Among those on hand to say goodbye to the judge were employees at the federal courthouse, legal lawyers and other judges.

President Reagan nominated Sessions for the post in July after William Webster resigned to become director of the CIA.

Number of requests for food increasing in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Twice a week, Elreda Steele walks through her neighborhood to the local food pantry to get groceries.

The 69-year-old woman's bills exhaust her Social Security check, leaving her with no money to buy food.

Ms. Steele stands in line outside in the hot, humid summer with dozens of others from the poor, predominantly black Fourth Ward neighborhood. It's first come, first serve at the pantry where volunteers dole out fresh vegetables, fruit, rice, beans and even laundry detergent from a tattered two-story house.

"I've been coming here ever since it's been open," she says. "This is my only source of food." To the south of downtown Houston, homeless people gather at the elegant St. Paul United Methodist for free sack lunches. About 100 show up each day.

The program, which involves volunteers from about a dozen churches, is run much like a business and provides food each month to several thousand people, including families.

The two operations are vastly different, but both are part of the Houston Metropolitan Ministries Hunger Coalition, a group of 121 emergency food pantries in the Houston area.

The coalition, which has a hotline that can refer callers to a pantry in 24 hours, has had a marked increase in the number of requests during the past year, coalition director Ellen Mitchell says.

A record 480,000 requests for emergency food were made to the coalition for the 12 months ending in June, Ms. Mitchell says. That's up more than 60 percent from the 300,000 requests filed a year ago.

"I really had anticipated our numbers would drop," Ms. Mitchell says. "The increase has largely been over the first six months of this year."

She notes the traditional increase comes at the end of the year.

"That indicates we're just not meeting emergency needs anymore," she says. "The coalition has become more of a sustaining help than emergency help."

Ms. Mitchell says she believes many of the people now seeking help from the coalition are chronically underemployed.

"I think the so-called 'new poor' have in large numbers gone away," she says. "We're left with a whole lot of people who just don't have the resources. Those who have always been underemployed are really suffering."

Unemployment in Houston in July topped 9.3 percent, compared to 10.4 percent in June, according to the Texas Employment Commission. A year ago, those figures totaled 12.9 percent in June and 11 percent in July.

Ms. Mitchell says the figures confirm her belief that what's left are the perennially unemployed and underemployed. She also says she believes many seeking food assistance have given up looking for work and thus are not included in the state's figures.

King Cox, regional director of income assistance services for the Texas Department of Human Services, says the coalition also helps many who cannot make ends meet with state and federal aid. There are no city-funded programs in Houston that provide emergency food assistance.

"A lot of people can't make it on food stamps alone," Cox said. "We understand that."

The average food stamp allotment is $52.47 per person, per month, he said, but some people don't want to use food stamps and go directly to the coalition for help.

"The Hunger Coalition is the primary resource (for emergency food assistance)," Cox said. "We do refer people to them."

Some people also receive help through Aid to Families with Dependent Children, a state and federally funded program. The federal government basically matches the amount of money each state provides. In Texas, a woman with one child can get $158 per month, while in some other states that amount increases to $350 and even $400 monthly, Cox said.

Many of the pantries are church-based and get help from their congregations and through other private donations.

The Fourth Ward pantry, operated by volunteers from nearby Horbe Baptist Church, has a regular clientele from the neighborhood including many families and older people.

"It's a very small crowd today, thank God," says volunteer Lois Fleniken as she looks at the crowd of about 50 people who came for groceries on a recent Tuesday.

The pantry, open for about 18 months, dispenses groceries on Tuesdays and Thursdays and also provides food on an emergency basis. It also has a clothes bank.

News about the pantry has spread by word of mouth through the poor neighborhood and the number of people coming for food has grown steadily. Some days, 200 people come to get food.

They sign in with Ms. Fleniken and then line up and wait, some leaning on grocery carts they have pushed to the pantry.

"Most of them are unemployed," she says.

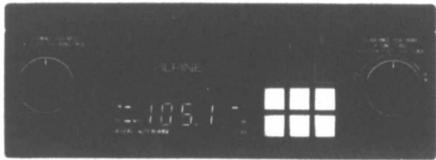

"I have a lot of kids come in here and tell me they're hungry, I feed them," Ms. Fleniken says. "They're sending food overseas and all, but we have hungry people right here."

Brigitte Collins 19, first came to the pantry a few weeks ago after learning about it from a friend. Out of work, married and expecting her first baby in December, she says it's her only source of food.

At St. Paul, the program has been serving an increasing number of parolees and mental patients, says Bobbie Kidd, director of the pantry.
