Reagan to press Bork's case in Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, rebuffing suggestions that he withdraw the Supreme Court nomination of Robert H. Bork, is embarking on a string of events designed to highlight support for the embattled jurist.

The president and his aides are looking beyond Tuesday's vote on the nomination in the Senate Judiciary Committee and are concentrating instead on winning the nomination on the Senate floor

Reagan, returning to Washington on Sunday on the eve of today's new Supreme Court session, said "no" when reporters asked if he thought his nomination of the conservative appeals court

Asked whether he was considering withdrawing Bork's name from Senate consideration, Reagan said: "I'm going to continue with his nomination.' Washington attorney Leonard Garment, a friend of Bork, called The New York Times on Sunday to say he was "authorized by Judge Bork to say that he will not ask the president to withdraw his name prior to the full Senate vote on his nomination," the newspaper reported today.

Reporters at the White House also asked Reagan a question dealing with his policies involving the Nicaraguan "I'm fighting another war," Reagan quipped, adding, "Bork."

Asked about the president's remarks. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the White House had scheduled a string of "activities" for Reagan to keep the nomination battle

"Every day we'll be doing different things," Fitzwater said, but he refused to be specific

The spokesman said Reagan had not called any senators over the weekend, but planned to make contact with some this week.

Fitzwater pointed to comments by Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, who said Reagan intends to press for a vote on Bork by the entire Senate even if the Judiciary Committee fails to recommend the nominee on Tuesday.

Hatch, interviewed on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," said the president will not withdraw Bork's name even if an overwhelming number of senators say they plan to vote against him.

"The president has authorized me to say on this program this morning that he's going to press through to conclusion, to a vote on the Senate floor," Hatch said.

The split among senators who have declared how they will vote on Bork's nomination narrowed slightly Sunday to 32-28 as Sen. Thomas A. Daschle, D-S.D., announced he would vote against the nomination.

Forty senators have not yet declared either way, according to a poll by The Associated Press.

Hatch, a member of the Judiciary Committee, said he believed the full floor vote could come in two weeks and that Reagan ultimately will succeed in getting Bork on the high court.

On Saturday, Reagan used his weekly radio address to charge that liberal opponents of the nominee were trying to intimidate judges and "thwart the desire of the American people" for jurists who will bring criminals to justice.

Ambassador denies GAO allegations

U.S. ambassador to Venezuela denies allegations that a State Department office he once headed was engaged in an illegal, covert propaganda effort for the Reagan administration's Central American policies.

In a report released Sunday, the General Accounting Office alleges that the department's Office of Public Diplomacy for Latin America and the Caribbean has secretly generated opinion articles opposing Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government for placement in major news outlets. and arranged news media interviews for leaders of Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

The activities of the public diplomacy office "were misleading as to their origin and reasonably constituted 'propaganda' within the common understanding of that term," and violated a legal ban on use of federal money for propaganda not specifically authorized by Congress, the report concluded.

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas. chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, said the operation "typifies the arrogance of those who took it upon themselves to operate a government within the government throughout the Iran-Contra Brooks and Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, requested the investigation by the GAO, Congress' investigative arm.

Meanwhile, Newsweek magazine reported Sunday that the late CIA director, William J. Casey, masterminded a domestic covert-propaganda campaign to rally support for the Contras and discredit Americans who opposed them.

The magazine's Oct. 12 issue says Casey was the prime mover behind the operation, part of which was run by fired National Security Council aide Lt. Col. Oliver L. North

Deaver loses appeal aimed at halting his perjury trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michael K. Deaver, the former presidential aide who is to stand trial later this month on perjury charges, today lost a Supreme Court appeal aimed at scuttling his prosecu-

The court, without comment, let stand a decision that Deaver prematurely pursued his challenge of a federal law that provides special independent counsels to investigate top government officials.

Deaver, a high-ranking member of President Reagan's staff from 1980 through 1985, was indicted earlier this year. His trial, after a false start in July, is rescheduled to begin Oct. 19.

Deaver became the first person ever indicted under a law authorizing court appointment of independent counsels, sometimes called special prosecutors, to investigate top officials in the federal government's executive branch.

Saving he is innocent of the periury charges. Deaver also contends the law is unconstitutional. Today's action does not preclude the nation's if Deaver were to be convicted.

If convicted, he faces up to 25 years in prison. Deaver still has a separate appeal pending before the justices. In it, he challenges a federal appeals court ruling that jury selection for his trial generally must be conducted in public.

That dispute caused U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson to halt Deaver's trial after jury selection had begun last July

Deaver was indicted on charges of lying to Congress and a federal grand jury about his lobbying activities after leaving the White House

The indictment alleged, among other things, that Deaver lied to the grand jury when he denied contacting anyone in the government in behalf of Trans World Airlines. According to the indictment. Deaver contacted Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Dole regarding TWA's efforts to block or delay Carl Ichan's taking control of the airline.

The indictment was sought by independent counsel Whitney North Seymour Jr. after a 10-month

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — President Jose Napoleon Duarte and leftist Salvadoran rebels, holding their first peace talks in three years, agreed to extend their negotiations today

Negotiations in 1984 on ending the 8-year-old war between the U.S.-backed government and the insurgents ended in deadlock

Rosa Chavez, auxiliary bishop of San Salvador, said the two sides spent more than six hours Sunday discussing the first of four points on the agenda. They agreed to meet again today, he said.

The auxiliary bishop declined to elaborate on the agenda. Both delegations, however, made it clear going into the talks that they were far apart on

The rebels are insisting, as they have for years. on participating in a new, provisional government that would rule until new elections could be held. They also want their army incorporated into the Salvadoran armed forces

But Duarte has said the rebels must lay down their arms before their demands can be discussed. El Salvador's civil war has shattered the country's economy and cost about 65,000 lives.

The government and the rebels agreed to the talks after Duarte and the presidents of four other Central American nations signed a peace plan aimed at ending regional conflicts.

The negotiations started nearly five hours behind schedule Sunday because the insurgent delegation arrived late. The rebels accused the Salvadoran army of causing the delay by impeding See SIDES, Page 2

Another aftershock, warnings that there could

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Quake-jittered residents got another aftershock today, after the most powerful one that followed last week's severe earthquake killed at least one person, injured 200, and shattered buildings and nerves.

Hundreds of frightened residents fled their damaged homes and stayed outdoors, refusing to enter structures, as panic spread after Sunday's predawn aftershock, the 22nd measuring above 3 on the Richter scale since Thursday's magnitude 6.1 temblor

Within 3½ hours of Sunday's big aftershock, three more above magnitude 3 on the Richter scale shook the area. An aftershock measuring 3.4 was recorded at 12:05 a.m. today, said Robert Finn, spokesman for the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena. There were no immediate reports of damage, and a police dispatcher said it triggered

"Psychologically, these people are in pieces. They were already upset and this has really done them in," said Frank Sapien, a Red Cross shelter director in Whittier. "I think a lot of the people are in some state of shock

One woman died of a heart attack suffered moments after Sunday's aftershock, bringing the earthquake death toll to seven, officials said. Damage since Thursday's quake has been estimated at $108 million.

The magnitude 5.5 aftershock, centered 10 miles northeast of downtown Rosemead, rumbled through Southern California at 3:59 a.m. It was felt in a wide area extending 100 miles from the damage, officials said. In suburban Whittier, which sustained most of the damage Thursday, police cordoned off a large part of the city's badly damaged downtown business district. Thirty businesses and about 800 homes were damaged last week.

Many Southern Californians ran from their homes as the earth began to shake Sunday. Craig Mathew of Thousand Oaks in Ventura County was roused from sleep when it hit. "I felt one jolt at the beginning, then a steady rock-and-rolling, like last time," he recalled. "I said, 'Here we go again.'"

South Californians should expect even more aftershocks, possibly for weeks, said Don Kelly of the U.S. Geological Survey in Washington, D.C. The Whittier area again bore the brunt of destruction during the 10-second jolt. Authorities declared 200 hundred buildings there unsafe Sunday, said Los Angeles County Fire Department inspector Chuck Gutierrez. Most could be condemned this week

"I thought it was over with after Thursday," said Jeff Langan, surveying the collapsed ceiling of his Whittier paint store. "This morning it really shook us up, even though it was only an aftershock it felt as bad as some earthquakes.

Two elderly men suffered heart attacks after Sunday's jolt and a pregnant woman almost miscarried, said Red Cross spokeswoman Barbara Haller She said some Whittier residents are so frightened, that some have even sought shelter in tents on a baseball field rather than in two buildings, where about 300 people were spending Sunday night.

County psychologist Patrick O'Connor said six counselors are on duty around-the-clock at the shelters and hundreds of people have told of their

Court rules Texas must conduct hearings before revoking paroles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to free Texas authorities from conducting hearings before revoking the parole of criminals convicted of new crimes

The justices, without comment, let stand a state court's ruling that such hearings are constitutionally required.

Texas prosecutors argued the lower court ruling's "impact on the state's financial resources is immense." They said at least half of the 9,376 parole revocations in Texas in 1986 were done without a hearing after new con-

At least 10 other states provide for parole revocations without hearings in such circumstances. the justices were told. Lawyers for Texas said those states are Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan, New York, Oklahoma, Rhode Island and Washington.

The Texas controversy centers on Mathis Carl Williams, first convicted of aggravated robbery in 1982 and sentenced to seven years in prison.

Williams was released on parole in 1984, but in early 1986 pleaded no contest to a charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. He was sentenced to three years in prison for the 1986 conviction

Williams subsequently received a letter from the Texas Board of Pardons and Parole informing him that his parole from the 1982 sentence was to be revoked because of his new convic-

The letter told Williams that no hearing would be held but that he could submit in writing any additional information he wanted the board to consider. Williams did not send any further information, and the board revoked his parole in June

Williams then challenged the revocation, contending that his due-process rights had been violated by the lack of a hearing.

The state court said a hearing is necessary "to avoid an erroneous evaluation of the need to revoke parole and to promote rehabilitation by avoiding reactions to arbitrariness.'

Monks appeal for support

LHASA, Tibet (AP) — Buddhist monks at Tibet's three leading monasteries issued a statement today asking the United Nations to support their call for independence, and the death toll from a proindependence demonstration rose to 12.

"We Tibetans have asked the Chinese who have occupied our country to leave," said the statement issued by religious leaders at the Sera, Ganden and Drepung monasteries.

Madlen Huber, a Swiss tourist who arrived today in Chengdu, Sichuan province, which borders Tibet, said she saw two jets arrive at the Lhasa airport Sunday night and a third this morning. Each carried at least 100 Chinese security troops, she said.

The City Commission and city staff have been working together over the past two years seeking ways to improve the operating efficiency and reduce the cost of operations of city government. In late 1986, we identified several key areas in which to focus our attention. As a result, the position of Risk Manager and Safety Officer was created to implement a comprehensive risk management and safety program for the city of Pampa.

The program began in February 1987 on a six-month trial basis to see whether this would be a cost-effective program.

This area was important because of the recent increase in insurance premiums and the total cost of workers compensation claims. We have averaged paying about $152,000 annually over the past three years in work ers compensation claims. Additionally, our general liability insurance premiums have risen over the past two years by about 280 percent.

Safety programs have long proven themselves as successful cost containment programs.

Our safety program is active in several areas. We are now using cones in work areas when we are working on streets. Employees are also wearing vests when they are in areas that might place them in danger.

We have instituted safety programs throughout the city, including back programs concerning proper care and rest, as well as proper use of the back. Another move for loss control was the purchase of side-boom electric hoists for moving fire plugs and other heavy equipment rather than having employees lifting heavy objects by hand.

Further, employees are receiving training in defensive driving and CPR courses. The city has recently been certified as a private training agency for defensive driving courses through the Texas Safety Council and the National Safety Council.

Another major safety area in which the city is involved is through the CAER (Community Awareness and Emergency Re-

As a result of the six-month trial. we have seen our workers compensation claims drop substantially. Claims for the current year are down by 75 percent.

Consequently, the City Commission authorized the program to be extended and included as a part of the 1987-1988 annual operating budget.

The success through this trial period is in large part due to the excellent cooperation and assistance we have received from local ies, including IRI Interna tional, Cabot Corp. and Hoescht-Celanese Chemical Co. The latest example is the DOE's reply to one of many complaints on nuclear dump site work in Deaf Smith County, said Susan Zimmerman, geologist with Gov. Bill Clements' Nuclear Waste Programs Office in Austin.

DOE officials said they were not concerned that contractors preparing characterization studies could distort the Panhandle site's merits to get contracts for actual work on the multimillion-dollar repository project.

'This is typical of DOE,' Zimmerman told the Amarillo Globe-News. "Anytime we bring up a concern, 90 percent of the time they don't think it's a concern. They feel they know every-

Along with locations in Nevada and Washington state, DOE chose a ninesquare-mile Deaf Smith County site 35 miles west of Amarillo County in 1986 as finalists for the nation's first high-level radioactive waste dump.

Characterization studies of the Panhandle site began earlier this year and are expected to last until the mid-1990s. A final site is expected to be selected soon thereafter and opened in dump opponents' concerns, including: Landowners of the proposed dump site near Vega for months asked for details on DOE's plan to buy or lease their land. DOE officials did not provide the information because it would "usurp our plans to be flexible," said Jeff Neff, DOE project manager in the Panhandle.

The concern over contractor conflict of interest is the latest in a long line of

DOE officials have moved into the area to begin work and deal with local government concerns. Officials have said they would not place the dump in West Texas if it were dangerous.

■ The DOE scheduled information meetings with the landowners to fulfill congressionally required consultation and cooperation sessions. In February, 20 landowners and their families walked out of one such DOE meeting because they said they had no information with which to ask intelligent ques-

Two weeks ago, DOE released a draft land acquisition plan, which opponents say is flawed and was issued to garner public support as criticism of the nuclear waste program mounts in Congress. DOE officials countered they were merely following procedure.

DOE officials have touted the economic benefits of site characterization work in Deaf Smith County, but they admit most of the workers will live in Amarillo. Also, a significant portion of the workforce will be transferred in or hired from other parts of the country.

At the same time, the department refuses to award funds to surrounding communities to offset the impact of increased burdens on schools, roads, police and other services.

Dump opponents have blasted the site characterization studies — which involve sinking two 12-foot-wide, 2,500foot-deep shafts for geological studies ightharpoonup as using unproven technology that could damage the Ogallala Aquifer, a major underground freshwater source for seven surrounding states.

DOE says the technology for digging the shafts — freezing the ground around the holes to prevent a shaft collapse or water interchange of aquifers - has been used successfully in the past.

Minnesota bird snares gobbler title

CUERO (AP) - Paycheck, the Minnesota racing turkey, cashed in on competitor Ruby Begonia's friendliness to win in overall time at the 15th annual Great Gobbler Gallop.

'We're proud that the Traveling Turkey Trophy of Tumultuous Triumph is going home with us again," said Paycheck team member Dave Carlson.

Although Ruby Begonia was a winner in the second heat run Sunday, the victory wasn't big enough to overcome the deficit of a loss in the first heat last month and Ruby couldn't budge Paycheck from the champion

"She's just too friendly," said Ruby race team member Albert Jahnsen. "We thought we'd have a better time but penalties got us.

'She's more politician than turkey, I think," he said, referring to frequent jaunts by the Cuero racing turkey into the crowd

As the fowl combatants raced, spectators lined the downtown street in Cuero.

Ruby Begonia won the second heat with a time of 2.8.0 minutes, beating out Paycheck's 3 minutes

But combining those totals with the first heat run in Worthington, Minn., Paycheck trotted off the winner with a total time of 3.55.0 minutes compared to Ruby Begonia's 4.35.0 minuts.

Ruby Begonia was plagued with penalties, as in the past. Ruby had eight penalties for leaving the course or for having to be touched by the race team.

A 30-second penalty is added if the turkey leaves the race course and a five-second penalty is added if a team member touches

Protester: Possible 'total tax rebellion' is brewing in state

DALLAS (AP) — A protest leader says irate taxpayers could stage a tax rebellion in Texas despite a recent opinion by Attorney General Jim Mattox that tempered the power of rollback elections.

"The anger and frustration of taxpayers everywhere has reached a fever pitch," tax protester C.A. Stubbs of San Antonio said. "The pendulum is about ready to swing in the direction of a total tax rebellion in Texas.

He is president of the newly formed Texas Association of Concerned Taxpayers, which held its first convention in San Antonio two weeks ago. Almost 2,000 people attended.

Officials say irate taxpayers have become even more determined in their efforts in reaction to Mattox' ruling on the constitutionality of such elections. A growing number of taxpayer movements across the state are requesting rollback elections in protest of tax increases.

Mattox, in a legal opinion issued Sept. 25, ruled it was unconstitutional for voters to roll back a county's tax rate.

The opinion does not carry the weight of law and would have to pass a court challenge before it could be enforced. But it was a blow to tax protesters. County administrators, who face a budget vacuum left by dwindling state and federal funds, were relieved. But the ruling didn't address rollback attempts involving other taxing entities such as cities, school districts or hospital districts. The opinion didn't discuss the other issues because the inquiry from DeWitt County officials involved the legality of county rollback elections and nothing else, Mattox spokeswoman Elna Christopher said.

"It would not surprise me to get some requests for opinions" on the other issues, said Ms. Christ-

Experts said they were unsure what the full impact of the opinion will be. "We're not sure what it does to any of the past rollback elections," Debbie Wheeler, special projects director in the office of general counsel at the State Property Tax Board in Austin, said. "Since (previous rollback elections) are over and passed, it probably doesn't apply to them, but we're not sure at this point," said Ms. Wheeler. We're still looking at the opinion."

Stubbs retired to San Antonio after being on the federal payroll for 31 years. He said he considers Mattox's ruling "a declaration of war on the taxpayers," and his group has asked for the attorney general's resignation.

"We charge that if there was something wrong (with the 1982 tax revision), he or his predecessor could've ruled back then," Stubbs said. "Up until this time, it hasn't been challenged by anyone.'

The state's 1982 tax reform law said that if county commissioners raised the tax rate more than 8 percent over the previous rate, citizens could gather signatures on petitions and call an election to limit the increase to 8 percent.

ODESSA (AP) — Federal officials say residents who have had their addresses changed a dozen times in as many years are victims of unprojected growth abetted by the oil boom of the early 1980s.

Residents may have stayed put but their route and box numbers have changed because of additions, U.S. Postal Service officials said.

A plan to correct the problem, scheduled for completion in 1984, proved a far greater undertaking than anyone ever imagined and now is only about 20 percent complete, Kyle Scarborough, postal customer service manager in Odessa's U.S. Postal Service, said.

'The big problem is that there's a huge amount of houses with duplicate numbers, or houses with no numbers on them and streets with no signs on them," Scarborough told the Odessa American.

"The main thing we're trying to do is get where there is no duplication.

Scarborough said route numbers and box numbers change when additions make the route too large, forcing a split into at least two new routes and new box numbers. For Ford, that means constantly changing the address on his checks, magazine subscriptions and

The goal of the project is to give west Odessa homes proper street addresses rather than route and box numbers

School violence's intensity, not numbers cause concern

DALLAS (AP) — Student stabbings and fights are increasing in intensity in North Texas schools, prompting concern among parents and administrators who are searching for solutions to curb the violence

Although the number of violent acts are not increasing, the intensity of the violence in schools is increasing for some unknown reason, Dallas Independent School District Superintendent Linus

'They are more severe, more hostile, and I'm concerned," Wright said. Students, parents, teachers and administrators across Dallas grappled with the ramifications of one of the worst football-related incidents in the district's history two weeks ago.

Five students were stabbed and one was treated for a head injury when a fight broke out after the game between football fans of opposing teams of Carter and Roosevelt high schools.

This past week, one Carter student was arrested for fighting with coaches after he was asked to leave a pep rally he was disrupting, police said. And in a separate incident, a Roosevelt student was arrested for allegedly punching one of his school's football players and then hitting a coach attempting to break up the fight, police said. Although police are uncertain whether these two incidents were related to the stabbings, officials are concerned about the violence within the two schools DISD spokesman Rodney Davis says students are arrested regularly through out the district. But since the Roosevelt and Carter incident, the district has been watching those two schools closely.

Other area high schools are taking a closer look at their own students and have begun planning preventive measures to curb possible violence.

At Adamson High School, principal Edward Baca met with he coaches to outline a plan to keep emotions in line and PTA presidents from across the district discussed reviving "Dads Clubs" to patrol high school football games

Other plans under consideration throughout the district include adding more security guards to some stadiums, changing two-way streets to oneway traffic during games to help manage crowds and locking the gates between rival teams' bleachers.

'We are optimistically cautious,' said John Kincaide, DISD athletics administrator. "We are optimistic that we have a strong, wholesome athletic

Statistics show that in the first month of this school year, officials have confiscated 10 weapons in schools throughout the district, a decrease from the 17 confiscated during the same period last

Student assaults also are down, from 29 to 22. But with at least six students hospitalized from two incidents in the past week, students, teachers and administrators are concerned about the level of violence in several isolated incidents.

"We do not want our general public, our fans, our athletes, our parents, to get off to a direction that suggests we need to cut back, curtail or cancel any athletics," Kincaide said. "We're not going to cancel a math class because there was a fight in the

Woman gives birth after car accident

FORT WORTH (AP) - The impact from a traffic accident threw a woman through a car's rear window and onto the bed of a pickup but, 14 hours later, she gave birth to a 5pound, 13-ounce baby girl.

Both mother and child were in good condition today at Harris Memorial Hospital, said a family spokesman who wished to remain anonymous. Geneva Crow, 25, of Azle, had her baby delivered by Caeserean section Saturday morning, hospital spokeswoman Gimchoo Quah said.

Authorities said the driver of a car involved in the threevehicle accident Friday was charged with involuntary manslaughter and driving while intoxicated. A passenger in that car died, while Ms. Crow's mother, son, and two sisters were injured in the crash, police said.

Ms. Quah said doctors peformed the Caeserean to save the life of the baby. James Clark, 19, of Fort Worth, was charged with involuntary manslaughter and DWI and held in Tarrant County Jail on bonds of $11,000, said Fort Worth police officer David Bowen. He said a passenger in Clark's car, Kenneth Steiner, 23, of Azle, was killed. Hyder said the car over turned in the northbound lanes. The pickup crossed the media and stopped in the southbound lanes, while the Toyota overturned twice and came to rest upright behind the pickup, he said. Ms. Crow, who was riding in the back seat of the Toyota, was thrown through the rear window when it flipped over and she landed in bed of the pickup, said Hyder.

Dole's replacement should lift controls

With the resignation of Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, President Reagan — assuming he doesn't plan to abolish the department and liquidate the federal government's role in transportation in one fell swoop — should appoint somebody deeply and knowledgeably committed to completing the job of deregulating transportation at the federal level.

Insofar as it has been carried out, deregulation has been an unmixed blessing for American consumers. Most problems have been transitional ones, or attributable to the fact that some aspects of transportation remain heavily regulated or still in government hands.

Mrs. Dole's decision to resign is an honorable one. It has been apparent for some time that her husband's compaign for the presididency would take an increasing amount of her time and energy

Dole's record at the Department of Transportation is a mixed one. It is difficult to discern if she brought a coherent philosophy about the proper role of government in the larger society. She pushed regulations requiring autos to have airbags despite public opposition or apathy, and imposed a few new regulations on airlines. Happily, she also managed the return of Conrail, the cobbled-together government freight railroad, to the private sector.

Dole's response to the current perception of an air safety crisis was deeply unsatisfactory. She combined pleasant press releases of little meaning with occasional micro-management of the Federal Aviation Administration of the kind that has contributed to that agency's ineffectiveness.

Any new DOT secretary should understand that present airline problems are not the result of too much deregulation, but too little. While fares and route structures have been deregulated, air-traffic control and airports remain in the hands of clumsy, inflexible government agencies that are deeply resistant to the kind of innovation the new environment requires.

The FAA is charged both with running the airtraffic control system and enforcing regulations to improve the system's safety. If that is not a clear conflict of interest, it is at least a position that often leads to ineffective or confused policies and actions.

Robert Poole Jr., president of the Los Angelesbased Reason Foundation, understands these transportation issues as well as anybody in the country; perhaps he should be on the president's short list. Ed Fuelner of the Heritage Foundation in Washington, D.C., understands the air-safety crisis. Economist Thomas Gale Moore, currently with the president's Council of Economic Advisers, has studied transportation issues deeply. Federal Trade Commission Chairman Dan Oliver has experience

Partial deregulation of transportation has yielded enormous benefits. It is time to consolidate those gains with more extensive deregulation. Dozens of qualified people understand this.

Berry's World

Community deserves protection

WASHINGTON — The thing to keep in mind is that Anthony Salerno and Vincent Cafaro were not very nice people. They were mobsters, high in the ranks of the Genovese crime family. Two witnesses would testify that Salerno personally participated in two murder conspiracies.

The question before the federal judge a year ago was whether these two hoods, under indictment for 29 counts of fraud, extortion and conspiracy to commit murder, should be held in 'preventive detention" until their trial. Relying upon the Bail Reform Act of 1984, the judge said, yes, lock 'em up. The U.S. Supreme Court approved that decision and upheld the act.

The high court's opinion, written by Chief Justice William Rehnquist, was a victory of common sense over legal theory, but it was not an opinion to set off dancing in the streets. No person who fears the power of life-tenured federal judges can feel entirely comfortable with the decision. All the same, with reservations, I'll

The defendants' position, in challenging the preventive detention act, is that the law conflicts not only with ancient principle but also with the Constitution. The principle teaches us that persons accused of crimes are presumed innocent until proved guilty. The Constitution says that no person may be deprived of liberty without due process of law. In the abstract, these propositions command universal acclaim. As a practical matter, they deserve something less. There is nothing unusual in this. No constitutional right is absolute. No court ever has defined precisely how much "process" is "due." For nearly 200 years lawyers and judges have grappled with the slippery words and phrases of the Bill of Rights. What is an "abridgement" of a free press? What is a law "respecting" an establishment of religion?

James J. Kilpatrick

What searches are "unreasonable?" What bail is "excessive?

In adopting the preventive detention part of the 1984 law, Congress sought to act realistically on a real problem. The problem lies in the Salernos and Cafaros of this world. They cannot be viewed as holy vessels, pure and undefiled; they are not gossamer spirits of childlike innocence. Once arrested and indicted, they continue to constitute a danger to society unless - unless they can be locked up until trial.

The 1984 act is carefully drawn. It applies only to crimes of violence, to serious drug offenses and to certain repeat offenders. Before preventive detention may be imposed, a federal judge must find by clear and convincing evidence that 'no condition or combination of conditions will reasonably assure the appearance of the person as required and the safety of any other person and the community."

The accused is entitled to a hearing in open court; he may be represented by counsel; he may have witnesses summoned in his own behalf. The court must consider the nature and the seriousness of the charges. The prosecution has to demonstrate that the accused, because of his record, is likely to commit new crimes if set free on bail. Only then can detention be imposed, and the maximum period of detention is limited by the Speedy Trial Act.

Rehnquist noted in his opinion that historically the court has held that "the government's regulatory interest in community safety can outweigh an individual's liberty interest.' There is no doubt, he said, that "preventing danger to the community" is both a legitimate and a compelling goal. Preventive detention is a 'carefully limited exception' to basic principles of law

In a passionate dissent, Justice Thurgood Marshall, joined by Justice William Brennan. accused the majority of fostering the tyranny of a police state and disregarding basic principles of justice. Marshall denounced Rehnquist's reasoning as "sterile formalism," disingenuous, abhorrent, untenable, ominous, "merely an exercise in obfuscation." The majority, he said, had produced a decision "which will go forth without authority and come back without respect.'

Marshall's denunciation was extreme, but not without merit. The elaborate procedural safeguards thrown about preventive detention may prove, in particular cases, to be little more than the sanctioning of gut hunches after perfunctory dumb show. One study has shown that judges grant detention in about 80 percent of the cases in which a prosecutor requests it. The National Law Journal has cited one case, involving a man suspected of bank robbery, in which an innocent person was held.

Such mishaps will occur, but after a long period in which the courts became obsessed with protecting the rights of the accused, it is pleasant to see a measure of balance restored. The community also has rights, and these rights deserve protection too.

Spuds and Satan show up on campuses

By Sarah Overstreet

When I was a kid the issues were short hemlines. Beatle haircuts and trousers for girls. The school administration was agin' em, and we, being kids, stuck our toes over the lines periodically.

We took regular trips to the princi-pal's office to kneel on the floor to have our skirt-length checked and to bare our necks for collar scrutiny. I was once sent home for wearing culottes, a split-pant that looked like a skirt and did a better job of hiding my thighs than the short skirts we wore.

This year, the issues are Spuds MacKenzie T-shirts in Prairie Village, Kan., earrings for boys and Satan worship in Chicago, and clothes in general in Baltimore.

Kids in the Kansas school are fortradict programs that teach students bidden to wear Spuds shirts because they "promote beer drinking and conto say no to drugs and alcohol.' High school senior Darryl Olesen has agreed not to wear his earring to school in Chicago until a U.S. district court judge rules on the case. The administration of Homewood-Flossmoor High School in Chicago has flatly ruled that students may not worship Satan, based on the finding last spring of two markings on lockers and one on a floor that resembled an 'upside down A in a circle."

(I can't think of a stronger incentive for kids to try devil-worship than for a school administration to forbid it. If you want kids to try anything once, just tell 'em they can't.)

And in Baltimore, kids in three elementary schools will be wearing uniforms this year. The school hopes to save children the pressure of clothes competition, as well as to quell any future violent incidents like the one in 1983 when one student killed another to gain a stylish, $65 jacket.

The no-earring and no-Spuds rul-ings seem patently absurd. Kids express their individuality through dress, as well as statements they deem important to make. To tell a normal American kid he cannot wear an earring to school, in this era, is about as sensible as telling him he can't bring his latest rock tape and listen to it on his portable cassette player in the schoolyard at lunch time. You're just setting up a battle that doesn't need to be fought.

At first glance the forced wearing of uniforms in public schools seems to rob students of the chance to make a personal statement and develop an individual style. But if Baltimore administrators are telling the truth, a series of forums held with parents revealed that 97 percent of them were in favor of uniforms.

What a novel idea, asking parents what they think of school dress policies! My parents weren't canvassed on how they felt about collar-length hair or slacks for girls, nor have many parents been queried on their opinions on dress in the 20 years since. School administrators are wont to make their rules and stand by them, and let parents fight it out in PTA and schoolboard meetings if they object. The parents usually lose.

Students rights are amorphous. Ideally, students' personal rights should begin where they do not interfere with the purpose the students are there for to learn. Administrators have been abusing these rights since the issues were robe length and sandal style, arbitrarily enacting rules that create so much hubbub among students they distract from learning, rather then

But I'm reserving judgment on the uniforms. These parents know their kids, and if they think the clothes race is doing so much harm to their kids that they'd learn better out of the fray, I'm inclined to let them try. The key in this case is the input of parents, and I hope that's a precedent other school administrators will follow.

Is it really Belter? Now that the name of John Henry Belter has become well known, collectors of Victorian furniture want to learn if the carved chair is really from his workshop Belter made the famous laminated wooden chairs with carved decorations. He also made rather plain pieces with simple scrolling at the edges of the frame.

Other makers working during the last half of the 19th century made similar pieces. Joseph Meeks and Charles Baudouine made carved, laminated furniture in New York City. Their pieces are often confused with those by Belter.

Other less famous makers made simpler laminated pieces. The best way to identify a piece of Belter is to compare the design to the known designs made by the Belter factory. Each detail of the carving should match.

It is also said that the back legs of Belter chairs have squared-off corners. The legs by the other makers were usually rounded.

Q. I have a copy of the New York Times with the stories of the shooting and death of Lincoln. It is in several pieces but could be framed and saved. Is it valuable?

A. Old newspapers have less value than most people realize. The acid in the paper eventually can destroy it.

A newspaper should be framed between two sheets of glass or plastic. Contact a framer who understands the problems of conservation for old newspapers. There are even some treatments that can de-acidify the paper.

If your paper is perfect, it would have a value. If it is in very badly damaged condition, it is primarily of interest as a framed Jemima cookie jar that belonged ches high and is in excellent condition except that most of the paint is worn off. Should I have it repainted and refired?

A. No. Antiques and collectibles are usually wanted in their original condition. If it is repainted; it will lose value for most collectors. You probably have one of many figural mammy cookie jars made in the 1940s. Most Aunt Jemima jars were made of plastic.

TIP: Try cleaning 1920s celluloid with a paste of vinegar and flour. Rub, wait a few minutes, then rinse and dry. If this doesn't work, try dishwasher detergent and warm water.

LADY WITH LUPUS

DEAR LADY: Contact the Lupus Foundation of America. Through its literature I have learned that there are about 500,000 known lupus victims in the United States, and probably twice that number who don't even know they have it. Most victims are women in their 20s and 30s.

Lupus has been misdiagnosed, misunderstood and ignored for years. It's especially frustrating because most lupus sufferers "look" so well between episodes that no one can believe that their energy level is so low they can hardly breathe or drag themselves out of bed.

Dear Abby

It's enormously comforting to know that you are not alone. I urge you, and other interested parties - including doctors and others in the health care field to write to the Lupus Foundation of America Inc., 1717 Massachusetts Ave. N.W., Suite 203, Washington, D.C. 20036.

You will be sent up-to-date information on the foundation's treatment and research findings, as well as a list of nearly 200 support groups throughout the United States and Puerto Rico, and 45 affiliated groups throughout the world. BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Some 2 million children in the United States suffer from severe short stature, and often their parents do not know that treatment is available for many of the causes of these disorders. according to the Human Growth Foundation.

The foundation is a national non-profit group of health care professionals and parents of children with growth disorders. Early diagnosis of growth problems may be

Seniors, kids get less sleep

As people change when they mature and grow, so do their sleep needs and habits. Research has determined - ironically that the sleep of a person over the age of 60 is much like that of a child under the age of 5.

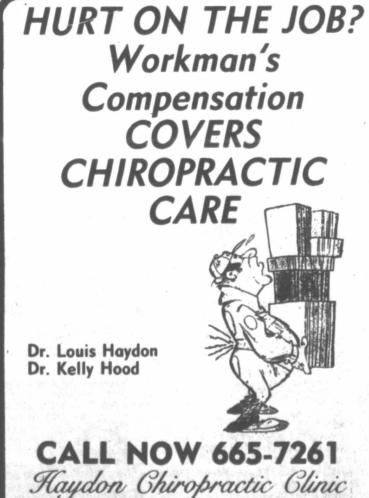

Both agr groups experience more difficulty falling asleep and an above average number of wakenings during the night, often with little or no deep sleep. Naps are more common during these stages of life; children and people over 60 who nap get an average of 10 percent of their total sleep time during the day.

With life expectancy lengthening, the poplulation is growing older. Recent studies have shown that the majority of people over the age of 60 are dissatisfied with their sleep.

Senior citizens age 60 and over are more affluent and active than ever before, with lifestyles accommodating business, sports, shopping, travel and socializing. So an inability to get a good night's sleep is a nagging

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — It might be the only game they ever play in the NFL, a short but delicious taste of football's good life. For one day, at least, they were America's Team.

Kevin Sweeney, Kelvin Edwards, Alvin Blount, Mike Dwyer, Dale Jones and Tommy Haynes replaced more famous and accomplished Dallas Cowboys on Sunday and routed the New York Jets 38-24.

They had help from some of the strike-defying veterans, particularly Ed "Too Tall" Jones, who led a defensive charge that totaled 11 sacks. But they were lead players, too, not just supporting actors

'This game belonged to them," Cowboys Coach Tom Landry said. "This was a showcase for them.

So Danny White, Tony Dorsett and Mike Renfro. three offensive regulars who crossed picket lines, watched from the sidelines. Sweeney, who replaced White at quarterback, completed just six passes. But three were for touchdowns and, as White said, Sweeney "was flawless running the team.

Blount rushed for 72 yards and a TD in place of "TD," who admitted "I feel apart" from his new teammates.

Edwards, who was with New Orleans for six games last year, caught 33- and 35vard touchdown passes and, he hoped, "showed some people I can do the job in the Haynes, a safety from Southern Cal, led Dallas with eight tackles, including two sacks. Dale Jones, a linebacker who was drafted in the 10th round out of Tennes see, was cut by both Dallas and Houston last month. Against New York, he had six tackles and recovered a fumble.

So did Dwyer, a demonstrative DT from Massachusetts who celebrated every outstanding defensive play with his arms raised and pumping in the air. "You have to play like it's your last game," Dwyer said. "That's our situation. The guys who can make the most of this might have their dreams realized.

For Detroit's Frank Tanana, every day on the mound is a big

"At my age every game I pitch is big," the 34-year-old Tanana said after he pitched a six-hitter Sunday to beat Toronto 1-0 and clinch the American League East title for Tigers.

The Blue Jays lost their last seven games of the season, including three straight in the season-ending series at Tiger Stadium, blowing a lead over the Tigers that was 31/2 games with seven games left on Sept. 26.

The Tigers open the best-ofseven AL playoffs Wednesday night against the Twins in Minnesota. In 1984, Detroit beat Kansas City in the playoffs and then took out San Diego in five games to win the World Series under Manager Sparky Anderson.

Tanana, who was dropped from the rotation last month after several poor starts, beat Baltimore, 10-1, last week to help the Tigers stay alive

On Sunday, he killed the Blue Jays with a variety of off-speed pitches, striking out nine.

Oilers defeat replacement AFC champs

By JOHN MOSSMAN AP Sports Writer

DENVER (AP) — In the first installment of the NFL's version of The Twilight Zone, we submit for your approval: A poised young quarterback who played like a grizzled veteran and whose most pressing problem was "trying to remember everybody's name.' A portly linebacker who somehow managed to outrun everyone in pursuit during a 73-yard interception return.

A coach who spent most of the morning throwing up out of nervous anticipation. An eerie silence emanating from the stands, instead of well-deserved booing, as the home team was being pummeled mercilessly.

'Our Scabs Can Whip Your Scabs' read a sign held up by a Denver Broncos fan at Mile High Stadium on Sunday. But it was not to be. Not by a long shot.

The NFL's great experiment in fielding replacement teams while veterans walked the picket line produced a weird result in Denver. The Houston Oilers, installed by oddsmakers as the heaviest underdog of any NFL team this weekend, overwhelmed the mistake-prone Broncos in nearly every phase of the game and prevailed 40-10.

The Oilers, exhibiting as polished an offense as one could expect after only 10 days of practice, generated 414 total yards compared to Denver's 220.

Quarterback Brent Pease, a late cut of the Minnesota Vikings this year, ignored the problem of name recognition and simply threw to white jerseys. He completed 15 of 25 passes for 260 yards and a touchdown. He also ran for another score. Running back Andrew Jackson rushed 21 times for 99 vards and a TD. Linebacker Eugene Seale, a 5-foot-10, 250-pounder, ensured the victory with a 73-yard return of an interception for a third-quarter score.

It was the most one-sided victory on the their record to 2-1. Denver fell to 1-1-1. Prior to the game, no one - the oddsmakers included - really knew what to expect of these free-agent squads. "I've never felt more of an 'unknown' than I did today," Oiler Coach Jerry Glanville said. "I was throwing up from 4 o'clock this morning until game time. 'Our quarterback played excellent. Every time he called an audible, it worked.' Pease indicated he didn't really expect such precision. "Our offense just kind of jelled right out there on the field," he said. Broncos Coach Dan Reeves accepted full responsibility for the rout.

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) -Texas Rangers manager Bobby Valentine looked up from the desk in his clubhouse office after his team lost for the fourth straight time to bring the 1987 campaign to a close.

"I never thought I would be glad to see a season end, but I'm glad this one is over," Valentine said on Sunday.

In pre-season, many writers and sports publications predicted the Rangers - a pleasant surprise in 1986 - would win the American League West in 1987. Instead, they tied California for last place with a 75-87 record, 10 games off Minnesota's winning "I'd like to forget about the negatives of this season as soon

Singletary said the player reps could change their position tonight, particularly on free agency, which has thus far kept the two sides from the negotiating table since Sept. 25, three days after the strike started. The owners have said they see no point in resuming talks unless the union drops its demand for unrestricted free agency.

Earlier Sunday, defensive end Charles Mann of the Washington Redskins said, "We're giving it (free agency) up. Once we give that up, what we're doing is putting the ball back in the owners' court and see if they are willing to make a move."

Asked if the owners were ready to make concessions, Tampa Bay house, chairman of the Manageper Bowl champions "will walk in ment Council's executive committee said: "If Gene needs something for dignity, we'll give it to him. But not free agency.

Dallas Cowboys president Tex Schramm, asked if negotiations would come to a quick conclusion if the union dropped free agency, said, "I think that's just dreaming.

Upshaw also said Sunday he was considering asking Jesse Jackson to mediate the dispute.

Jackson, who is expected to announce he is a presidential candidate this week, approached Management Council head Jack Donlan, Upshaw and NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, saying he wanted to help settle the strike. "Jesse Jackson is involved in getting both sides talking again," Upshaw said. "In fact, we've already been talking. I don't have any trouble at all having him join

Fumbles and flubs: NFL Scab Week I

By DAVE GOLDBERG AP Football Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Strike football turned out to be just about what it was supposed to be — the second half of any season's first exhibition game.

The first week of replacement games in the NFL strike Sunday was Gary Hogeboom outclassing the Buffalo B-team; heroics from faceless players like Anthony Allen and Kevin Sweeney; fumbles, flubs, empty seats, and scores that would be outrageous if the varsities were playing.

Can anyone, for example, envision Houston beating Denver 40-10 at Mile High Stadium?

Or Green Bay beating Minnesota at the Metrodome with New Orleans stockbroker Alan Risher, who hasn't played since 1985, out-quarterbacking 37-yearold Tony Adams, who last played in the Canadian Football League six years ago?

Or Bruce Mathison, a career backup who joined the Seattle Seahawks three days ago after being out of football for two years, passing for 326 yards in Seattle's 24-20 victory over Miami?

'It was the strangest feeling I've had on a football field," said quarterback Danny White of the Cowboys, who sat out while Sweeney threw three touchdown passes in Dallas' 38-24 victory over the New York Jets. "I compare it to being traded.

'We've just witnessed a bit of history, I suppose," Cincinnati Coach Sam Wyche said after the Bengals, with a passing attack that managed minus-13 yards, lost 10-9 to San Diego in a game marked by fumbles on three of the first eight plays.

There weren't that many other witnesses. The league that normally plays to more than 95 percent of capacity, did just 26.2 percent this time, including "crowds" of 4,074 in the Pontiac Silverdome and 4,919 in Philadelphia, where 1,500 pickets closed all but one entrance to Veterans Stadium. Those were the sites of the most trouble eggs were thrown and cars bashed in Philadelphia; seven people were arrested in Pontiac for failing to obey police traffic directions.

There were 9,860 in Buffalo's 80,000-seat Rich Stadium, 10,708 at the 92,516-seat Los Angeles Coliseum and 12,370 at 76,891capacity Giants Stadium to watch the Jets lose to Dallas.

Seattle, Minnesota, New England and New Orleans had their smallest-ever crowds. Buffalo had its second-lowest and there were just 27,728 in Washington's RFK Stadium, the first time in 160 games over 21 years that the Redskins didn't sell out.

The reaction to that was predictable.

'After what I saw on TV today, I felt bad my players are on strike," said Gene Upshaw, the executive director of the NFL Players Association. "They're being cheated and the fans are being cheated.'

"The number of fans is incidental," said Tex Schramm of the Dallas Cowboys, a member of the Management Council Executive Committee. "The main objective of the league was to play the games and we played all the games. If you looked at the scores, it looks like a typical NFL weekend. It was very successful.

Some notes on Week One of Strike Football:

There were 76 fumbles in the 13 games and 183 penalties, 26 of them alone in the Cowboys' victory over the Jets. New England's Tony Collins, a regular starter who crossed the picket line last week, lost the ball three times on his team's first series, one of them nullifed by a penalty. Two of the NFL's four unbeaten teams, the New York Jets at home to Dallas and Minnesota at home to Green Bay - lost in games their regulars would have been favored to win. But the Bears' irregulars looked pretty much like the regulars, registering 11 sacks in a 35-3 romp over Philadelphia that improved them to 3-0 and the Raiders remained unbeaten with a 35-17 victory over Kansas City

F Hogeboom, the Colts' regular quarterback, tied a 22-year-old team record with five touchdown passes in Indianapolis' 47-6 rout of Buffalo and played just one minute of the second half. Three of AP Top Twenty his touchdown passes went to Walter Murray, who crossed a union picket line last Tuesday, came out of camp Thursday, and went back in Friday

Allen, a former Atlanta Falcon and USFL player who reported to the Washington Redskins last Friday, set a Washington record with 255 yards in receptions, including three touchdown passes from Ed Rubbert in a 28-21 victory over St. Louis. One was an 88-yarder on which he victimized Pro Bowl safety Leonard Smith of the Cardinals, who lost despite suiting up eight veterans to none for the Redskins

Anthony Allen

☐ John Fourcade and Mike Hohensee each had three touchdown passes, Fourcade in New Orleans' 37-10 victory over the Los Angeles Rams, Hohensee in

Chicago's romp. Fourcade and Hohensee also set a new record for pro football leagues played in (four) as each had previously played Arena Football and in the USFL and

The Saints, who have never had a winning record, are now 2-1 and "Stay on Strike" signs appeared at the Superdome at the end of the game. The Rams, 0-3, on the other hand are in serious trouble

High rate of heterosexual spread of AIDS found in inner city

NEW YORK - A study of inner-city residents infected with the AIDS virus found that one-third of the men and almost half of the women apparently got the infection through heterosexual contact, a rate far higher than that found in other studies.

The study was based on a questionnaire given to 4,000 men and women visiting a clinic for treatment of sexually transmitted diseases, Dr. Thomas Quinn, one of the study's authors, said Sunday. The anonymous men and women came from an area of Baltimore where drug abuse is common, he said.

Three percent of the women surveyed and 6.3 percent of the men had been infected with the AIDS virus, Quinn said. Approximately one-third of the infected men and nearly half of the infected women denied being intravenous drug abusers or homosexuals or engaging in other behavior that would put them at special risk of getting AIDS, said Quinn, who is affiliated with Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore and the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md.

The assumption is that those respondents became infected through heterosexual contact, said Quinn, who didn't want to give precise figures about the anonymous respondents' sexual orientation until the study is published in a scientific

Quinn and his colleagues did not attempt to investigate the individuals to determine whether they were being truthful on the questionnaires about their sexual orientation and use of drugs.

Still, he was "absolutely confident" these individuals became infected through heterosexual contact, he said in an interview after presenting the findings at a meeting of the Interscience Conference on Antimicrobial Agents and Chemotherapy, which is largely devoted to research on infectious diseases.

Many other studies have suggested that the fraction of AIDS-infected people who get the disease through heterosexual contact amounts to no more than a few percent.

A study to be presented this week by the New York City health department and the U.S. Centers for Disease Control found that only one in 205 men coming to a sexually-transmitted-disease clinic in New York City was infected with AIDS in the absence of drug use, homosexuality or other high-risk behavior.

Quinn said that his study used anonymous questionnaires specifically to encourage people to admit to drug abuse and other high-risk behavior that they might not confess in a personal interview, fearing retribution. The New York City study used interviews to identify high-risk behavior.

Furthermore, Quinn said the accuracy of his questionnaire was tested by asking respondents whether they had ever had syphilis and later testing them to see whether they answered correctly. Ninety-five percent of the respondents told the truth about their history of syphilis, Quinn said. Asked about the discrepancy with New York City. he said, "I think you're going to see different patterns in different cities.

Snow in New England as California bakes

By The Associated Press

Temperatures dipped into the 30s as far south as Mississippi today, while the Northeast dug out from nearly 20 inches of snow in a sudden storm that sent trees crashing into cars, homes and power lines, and killed at least

The Northeast's earliest snowfall in a century dropped wet snow on autumn leaves, causing limbs to crack in the path of weekend travelers who thought they were going to view changing foliage and on power lines, knocking out electricity to about 900,000 customers.

The weather wasn't any more autumnal in California, where record triple-digit heat sent a million people to the beach.

Hundreds of people spent the night in emergency shelters as more than 200,000 customers in New York's Albany area, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Vermont remained without power today, officials said. Temperatures were forecast to rise above freezing, a comfort to those without heat, but a danger to flood-prone

"The only thing I worry about is we might get a lot of rapid melting with that snow," said National Weather Service forecaster Joe Luisi in Montpelier, Vt. "It's going to be a mess.

Central Vermont Public Service Corp., the state's largest utility, said 30 percent of its customers were without service, and spokesman Stephen Bravar said it could be days before power is completely restored.

Freeze and frost warnings were in effect overnight for areas as far south as South Carolina. A separate front brought 39-degree temperatures today to Meridian, Miss., tying the 13year-old record low for the date. In California, temperatures topped the 100-degree mark before noon Sunday, with Los Angeles peaking at 108 for a

Iowa Democrats charge admission to explain how the party works

By RICHARD L. VERNACI Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The political stakes in Iowa's Democratic caucuses are so high and the process is so twisted that the state party has managed to cross an invisible threshold.

It can charge admission to explain how things work.

AP News Analysis

at a Democratic precinct caucus in Adair County, Iowa, which lies amid farmland about 100 miles southwest of Des Moines.

The group included the usual gaggle from Washington and New York, but there were also a couple of them from London. There was even one from Iowa. Iowa's importance draws not from its size — with 58 delegates, it ranks 25th among the states and territories — but from timing. Next Feb. 8 it will be the leadoff event toward choosing a Democratic presidential nominee at the national convention in Atlanta in July.

The caucus tradition in Iowa goes back to the last century. The state toyed with the idea of a primary but gave it up after holding one in 1916.

The process has endured over the years, and the paper to explain it has piled up, especially since the Democratic Party reforms of the 1960s and 1970s. The rules for the Iowa caucuses are 35 pages long; by contrast, the national party's rules for picking delegates take 16 pages.

The ersatz Iowans meeting in Washington last week chose among a field of five presidential candidates, two from the East, one from the Midwest and two from the South.
