Iran warns of drawing U.S. into war

U.S. copters sink three Iranian boats

By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer

MANAMA, Bahrain — U.S. helicopter gunships attacked and sank three Iranian patrol boats in the Persian Gulf to defend an American aircraft under fire from the vessels, U.S. officials said. At least two Iranians were killed.

Iran today claimed it shot down one of the attacking U.S. helicopters and damaged a U.S. warship in the combat.

Pentagon spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Chris Baumann denied the Iranian report, saying, "We have no warships damaged, and we have no helicopters missing."

Tehran, in a report by the official Islamic Republic News Agency, described the attack by U.S. helicopter gunships as "open military action" by the United States against Iran.

A spokesman for Iran's War Information Headquarters was quoted by IRNA as saying Tehran holds the United States responsible for the lives of six Iranians it said were taken "hostage" by U.S. forces. The unidentified spokesman urged Washington to immediately hand them back, IRNA said.

The IRNA report, monitored in Cyprus, said, "The War Information Headquarters official said the U.S. has thus practically involved itself in a war."

IRNA added: "The spokesman warned the American people that (President) Reagan's unwise and provocative policies will eventually involve them in an unwanted war. He urged the Americans to pressure the U.S. administration to stop these provocative acts before it is too late."

"Otherwise, he warned, the American troops will not return to their home on their own feet."

Guided missile cruiser patrols gulf today.

The agency earlier quoted an "informed military source" in its first Iranian report on the clash.

"Iranian forces aboard speedboats shot down a U.S. helicopter with surface-to-air Stinger missiles and damaged an American vessel immediately after U.S. helicopter gunships attacked five speedboats in the international waters of the Persian Gulf Thursday," said the statement.

It said five Iranian speedboats were on a routine patrol mission in international waters near Farsi when "suddenly attacked by foreign helicopters" at 9:15 p.m. (2:15 p.m.)

IRNA quoted the official as saying the helicopter crash "was coupled with a huge explosion which lit the sky."

"Iranian units also fired "light missiles at several U.S. vessels which had rushed to help the helicopters as a result of which one of the American vessels was hit and damaged," IRNA reported.

The clash in the northern gulf was the second fatal encounter in three weeks between U.S. and Iranian forces in the waterway.

Attack prompts debate of War Powers Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — While Navy warships in the Persian Gulf kept a wary watch today after U.S. helicopters killed two Iranians and sank three boats, the Reagan administration braced itself for new demands by Congress that it invoke the War Powers Act, a law that would allow Congress to decide whether the U.S. military presence in the gulf should be reduced.

"We all look like fools, fools that are disregarding the law," Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., said in a speech on the Senate floor.

Pentagon spokesman Fred Hoffman said Thursday the administration still saw no need to invoke the act.

White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater said the administration would review the attack in terms of the act "but there are no preliminary judgments to make other than we will comply with the spirit of the resolution by giving full and detailed consultations to the Congress."

Meanwhile, Navy Secretary James Webb, in San Diego for a speech, told members of the San Diego Union editorial board that even stronger responses would be taken if U.S. forces were provoked by Iranian forces.

"There comes a time when a different sort of reaction could be necessary in order to make it clear what our objectives are," said Webb.

Hoffman, appearing at a Pentagon briefing, said Thursday's encounter occurred at 9:50 p.m. local time or 1:50 p.m. CDT. It began when a lone U.S. observation helicopter approached three and possibly four Iranian patrol boats in the northern gulf, about 15 miles southwest of the Iranian-controlled island of Farsi.

The island has been used extensively by Iran as a base for speedboats used to attack commercial shipping.

Hoffman said he did not believe there was any radio communication between the Iranian boats and the helicopters. The firing on the U.S. observation helicopter came without warning, he said.

The U.S. helicopters used machine guns and small rockets to sink the Iranian boats, he said.

"The firing on a U.S. helicopter was clearly a hostile act," Hoffman said.

Musicians to compete Saturday

By CATHY SPAULDING

Area student musicians are fine tuning their horns and stepping up their strides to prepare for the annual District I High School Marching Band Contest on Saturday at Dick Bivins Stadium in Amarillo.

This year's contest may prove extra challenging for area bands, three of which are working with new band directors.

Another challenge will come from the new location in Amarillo. In the past, the contest was held at Borger High School football stadium.

But the University Interscholastic League music committee voted to move the contest to Bivins Stadium at the Tri State fairgrounds. It was a decision that upset area band directors.

Said Pampa High School Band Director Charles Johnson: "Borger is a whole lot better than Dick Bivins. The field is not as rough."

Distance will also pose a problem for the high school band, which will have to forsake a halftime performance at the Harvesters' Friday football game at Frenship to be ready for the trip to Amarillo.

White Deer High School Band Director Dana Reynard agrees that the Borger field was better and noted that there are fewer football games played at Borger than at Bivins.

But somethings never change, like last year, musicians can expect cold morning temperatures and high winds.

The PHS Pride of Pampa Band, scheduled to march at 6 p.m., faces a tough field of four other class AAAA bands from Borger, Canyon, Dumas and Hereford.

But Johnson believes his band is ready.

"The students have been working extremely hard to achieve the standard of excellence needed to obtain a first division rating and advance to regional competition," Johnson said. "Many things have contributed to this goal — rehearsals,

Lefors AIDS plan would allow victims to remain in school

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

LEFORS — Stressing it's a general policy concerning all communicable diseases in the school system, the Lefors school board Thursday night unanimously adopted a policy that includes recommended guidelines for AIDS.

Superintendent Earl Ross said the policy follows guidelines written by the Texas Education Agency and meets the necessary legalities and requirements.

Ross said the policy concerns any communicable disease. But he admitted the current emphasis is on dealing with Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome — AIDS.

"It's really a quite prominent subject in the country," he said.

Ross said AIDS is not likely to become a major problem in the isolated regions of the Texas Panhandle, at least not anytime soon. But the district needs to have a policy in place, he said.

"We can't wait until it happens" to decide what to do, Ross explained.

Following TEA guidelines, the policy will permit students having AIDS to continue attending school as long as it can be shown there's no risk of transmitting the disease. Similarly, employees having AIDS can continue to work as long as there's no evidence of risk of transmission.

The determination of the risk of transmission will be made by the district medical adviser and the local health authority, in consultation with the person responsible for the school health program and the student's or employee's doctor.

A decision to remove a student from school or to exclude an employee from work will be made by the superintendent in accordance with the policy after consultation with the medical authorities and the parents (in the case of a student) or the employee.

The same guidelines apply to all communicable diseases, including but not limited to AIDS. See AIDS, Page 2

Four-year-old Hurst girl finds murdered parents

HURST (AP) — A four-year-old girl ran to a nearby apartment to tell neighbors that her parents were dead after finding their bodies on the floor of their apartment, authorities say.

Cynthia Rene Saleri, 21, and Ishtiy Saleri, 22, were found Thursday in their apartment at the Rivertree Apartments, according to Hurst Police spokesman Dan Oringerdoff.

Police were called after the woman's daughter ran to the home Evelyn Watson, who lives nearby and had worked as a babysitter for the couple.

"She came running over here crying and scared and said her mother and daddy were dead," the babysitter said.

The woman's nude body was found on the bedroom floor, and her husband was found lying on the floor just inside the front door. The woman had been shot in the face, and the man had been shot twice in the neck and once in the head.

Oringerdoff said there was no sign of forced entry into the apartment and no weapon was found.

"There's nothing noticeable missing, but burglary has not been ruled out," he said.

Ishtiy Saleri, an Indian national, worked at a 7-Eleven store, Oringerdoff said.

A neighbor told police that the couple was last seen entering the apartment early Thursday, about nine hours before the bodies were found. The neighbors said they did not hear anything suspicious during the night.

One resident of the apartment complex told officers that a man with a small-caliber revolver in his back pocket was seen walking near the apartment complex's laundry room about an hour before the couple went into the apartment.

Brave cooks gather flaming ingredients during Fire Department's chili cook-off

Area cooks will gather this evening to prepare final touches to their recipes for the second annual Pampa Fire Department Chili Cook-off.

Activities for the public will get under way at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Sportsman's Club on South Barnes.

People will be able to sample the various chilies by purchasing sampling kits at $1 each. The kits contain a bowl, spoon, napkin and crackers.

Proceeds will benefit the PFD Charity Fund.

Entries are still being accepted in the cook-off. Those wanting to challenge their chili recipes against others can show up and 9 a.m. Saturday and sign up for the competition.

Entertainment will be provided by local western band, Fence Walker, with Gary Pelfery serving as master of ceremonies.

Special guest who will be visiting with spectators during the day is the department's new Aries III robot.

Drawings will be held during the day for prizes donated by local merchants.

Following the judging of the chili, which begins at 3 p.m., there will be an auction, with the highest bidder winning the right to throw a cream pie in the face of one of four city officials. Throwing their faces into the ring are Assistant City Manager Frank Smith, Fire Chief J.D. Ray, Assistant Fire Chief Ray Fisher and Emergency Management Director Steve Vaughn.

Activities will wind down between 5 and 6 p.m.

The cook-off is conducted under official rules of the Chili Association Society Inc. (CASI), with cooks winning points toward participation in the national cook-off.

Board still hunting for appraiser

Directors of the Gray County Appraisal District seem to be in no hurry finding a new chief appraiser and have not yet set a date when one will be chosen.

GCAD board members examined nine resumes in a closed session at their regular meeting Thursday, but they took no action when they reconvened.

The board is seeking a replacement for former Chief Appraiser Charles Buzzard, who was fired in August for not maintaining what the board felt were "high management skills."

Board Chairman Kenneth Fields said the board is narrowing its selection down to about four candidates. But he added he is not yet ready to disclose who the finalists are.

Fields said that although the board will meet with candidates soon, members are in no hurry to make a decision.

"We feel the district is operating so smoothly now," Fields said.

Interim Chief Appraiser Judy Morris, who's had to forfeit her vacation time because of her extra duties, isn't complaining about the board's slow action.

"I hadn't thought about it," said Morris, who must drive to the GCAD office from her McLean home. "I think it's just good judgment that they don't hire the first person who comes along."

Despite the lack of an "official" chief appraiser, Morris said the GCAD staff was able to get its tax statements to the entities in record time.

"We got them out early this year," Morris said, adding that problems with computer software conversion and county printers delayed efforts to get statements to Gray County.

"The staff has worked extra hard and put in overtime to make up the difference," Morris said.

game performances and practice."

People expecting a standard field performance will be in for a surprise when the Pampa band starts playing classical Russian music. Johnson has created a program featuring such pieces as Mussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition," Grieg's "Hall of the Mountain King," and Borodin's "Polovetzian Dances."

PHS soloists will include Noelle Barbaree and Mitch King at French horn, Billy Brinsfield at alto saxophone, Chris Johnston and Brandon Wood at trumpet, Chuck Stone at tuba and Chantelle Rohrbacher, Jessica Hall, Wendy Jenkins and Gina Barnett at flute.

"The crowds have responded to the music really well," Johnson said, hoping to find a good Pampa crowd at the Saturday performance.

The PMS Patriot Band will be the only junior high school or middle school band participating in the contest. But that won't make any difference to director Bruce Collins.

"You're competing against a standard, not against anyone else," Collins said.

The PMS Band will perform the Magna Fanfare and March, a clarinet octet, a percussion feature to "Yankee Doodle Dandy" and a patriotic closing "This Is My Country."

The Patriot Band may be doing its last performance in its old "Robert E. Lee Junior High" Band uniforms. Collins said the school was to get new uniforms from Nicsinger Co. of Missouri earlier this month, but they have not yet gotten any in.

McLean High School, which ordered uniforms from the same company, almost met the same fate. Their new uniforms didn't come in until Thursday, forcing the Tiger band to do their halftime routines in blue jeans and matching yellow shirts.

But, McLean Director Roger Z. Myers feels the 44-member band has overcome the non-uniform handicap.

McLean's diverse routine will feature themes from High Chaparral, The Magnificent Seven and La Bamba, as well as a traditional fanfare, "Off the Line," and a rock hit, "The Final Countdown."

The performance will feature a trumpet solo by Tiffany Lopez and a low brass trio by Tony Hambricht, Carey Richardson and Ronnie Tidwell.

Miami, Groom and Wheeler will go into the Class A contest with new band directors: David Tucker comes to Miami from Bowie. Groom's new director is Steve Thomas of Brownwood. Manuel Martinez of Amarillo is the newcomer at Wheeler.

Miami's routine will feature "La Bamba," "Stand by Me" and "Devils Canyon," plus a brief piccolo solo by Angie Allison. Groom's routine features "Eye of the Tiger" and "Say You, Say Me."

Because of the younger age of White Deer's Band, Director Reynard said the Bucks' routine will be more of a traditional "corps" style, which will switch into an outline of the United States.

All marching routines will be judged by a three-member panel that will rate the bands on a scale of one to four, with a division one rating being superior.

The two top bands from each class will represent District I at the Regional Marching Contest Oct. 31 at Wichita Falls.

Man jumps from car in reported robbery

A 23-year-old man jumped from a moving vehicle he was driving after three robbers threatened his life Thursday night in the 900 block of Finley Street, police reports said.

Scott Hoke of Route 2, Pampa, said he picked up three men "to go riding around," according to Patrolman Wayne Williams' report on the incident. Hoke told Williams he didn't know the three men.

The men told Hoke to drive to the 900 block of Finley Street and turn his lights out, which he did, Williams said. The three men then robbed him of $58, his driver's license and other papers, the report says.

"If you tell police, you're dead," Hoke said the men told him after the strong-armed robbery.

Lt. Ken Hall said today that no weapons were involved in the incident.

Hoke told police he was then forced to drive away, but jumped from the moving car. Williams said the abandoned auto was found a block away in the 800 block of Finley Street.

No arrests have been made.

Expected witness given sentence in development plan

DALLAS (AP) — A judge sentenced a key prosecution witness to 13 years in prison for his involvement in a massive fraud scheme that led to the collapse of several thrifts and saw some land values quintuple in a matter of hours.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders on Thursday also ordered Clifford Sinclair, who pleaded guilty in March 1986 to four counts of conspiracy in the federal probe of Texas savings and loans, to pay $600,000 in restitution and fined him $40,000.

Sinclair was ordered to pay the fine within 30 days and to make restitution within six months. It was the maximum sentence Sinclair could have received under a plea agreement to testify for the prosecution in the Interstate 30 condominium probe.

"Scores have gone to prison for it, and for him not to go would deprecate the seriousness of the offense and would send the wrong message," said Sanders, who ordered Sinclair to report Oct. 29 to a federal prison not yet disclosed.

The sentencing came a day after a federal grand jury indicted seven men on charges of conspiracy and fraud in the land-fraud investigation.

Indicted on charges of conspiracy, racketeering and fraud were Garland developers D.L. "Danny" Faulkner and James L. Toler; Spencer H. Blain Jr. of Dallas, who was head of the now defunct Empire Savings and Loan of Mesquite; Paul Arlin Jensen, a former mortgage banker now living in Utah; and Kenneth Earl Cansler of Rockwall, Texas, who was described in the indictment as a sales manager in the transactions involving condos along I-30 in Dallas County.

Also indicted Wednesday on conspiracy and fraud charges were real estate appraisers Arthur George Formann, 58, of Hondo, Texas, and Paul Douglas Tannehill, 39, of Canton, Texas.

Attorneys representing the defendants said they will plead innocent.

The indictments capped a four-year investigation into an alleged $100 million scheme to defraud five savings associations in Texas and Arkansas through what authorities say was a network of fraudulent land and construction loans.

Prosecutors say they uncovered a series of "land flips" that put millions of dollars in the pockets of defendants.

A $100 million development of lakeside condominiums, many of them now demolished, is described by a real estate expert as the most notorious example of the "land flip" schemes that artificially inflated property values.

Deregulation of the savings and loan coupled with a real estate boom fueled the schemes, in which the same pieces of property were bought and sold many times.

"There was a demand and a need for construction. And this was combined with the deregulation of the S&Ls, allowing them to participate more fully in real estate loans," said George Roddy, president and chairman of Dresco Inc.

The use of land flips first appeared nearly 20 years ago in a development boom, though at that time ready cash from lending institutions was not as available as in the early 1980s, Roddy said.

"Everyone gets caught up in this inflationary spiral — inflation of land — and when you combine availability of money with appraisals inflated maliciously or knowingly, or through market conditions, you have this problem," he said.

Roddy and the president of another real estate research group said the prosecutions will prompt real estate appraisers and lenders to be more cautious. But Roddy said greed will eventually prevail, and a cycle of land inflation will begin again.

"Flips will come in and come out of vogue. With time, people will forget about this investigation, and not be as conscious of the repercussions," said Roddy, "and it will happen again, as long as there are humans in this world and there is a profit to be made."

In this case, the indictment alleged that tracts along the I-30 corridor east of Dallas, which were used as collateral for loans, were inflated in value through a series of insider sales, allowing the defendants and others to profit by distributing the proceeds.

The scheme collapsed when Federal Home Loan Bank Board examinations exposed the excessive values on which the loans were based. The ensuing failure of Empire Savings was at the time the largest in U.S. history.

Land flips are not themselves illegal. But the indictment charges that appraisals were bought for fees of up to five times the usual cost of such work, and that those appraisals were used to support later appraisals made for acquisition and development loans.

Faulkner was the first to surrender to federal officials, appearing late Wednesday with his attorney, Ed Mason. Faulkner was released on a personal recognizance bond later in the day.

On Thursday, Toler and Cansler were escorted in handcuffs to U.S. Magistrate John B. Tolle's courtroom, then released on similar bonds.

New mini-mall will open here Saturday

Pampa's local economy has gained a boost with the establishment of a new mini-mall on Price Road that will have its grand opening Saturday.

Named the Country Keepsakes Village, the mall — actually separate buildings located in one area — is located on Milliron Road, one block north of the Borger Highway on the west side of Price Road.

Three shops featuring quality handmade and custom-designed goods have already located at Country Keepsakes Village, with other spaces still available.

Holding their grand opening Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. are Country Comforts, 2500 Milliron Road; Precious Country Accents, 2510 Milliron Road, and Right Out of the Bird's Nest, 2518 Milliron Road.

Drawings for six door prizes will be held at 5 p.m. Registration for the drawings may be made during the preceding hours of the grand opening occasion.

The shops are opened from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday, with some variations for holidays.

Owned and managed by husband and wife Kirk and Hilleary Roberts, Country Comforts offers handmade furniture, including hand-fashioned willow furniture; Amish quilts, antiques and other items.

Mrs. Roberts said the Amish quilts represent the "cream of the crop in the quilt world." The shop has many quilts from "a few quality dealers" on hand, but others can be custom-ordered in colors and patterns.

The willow furniture, as well as baskets, birdhouses and doll-size furniture, are fashioned by an elderly man in Arkansas who has been carrying on the old tradition since he was 14 years old.

Husband Kirk uses his own designs to fashion wooden beds, shelves, mantles, kitchen hutches and other items. He will also custom-design furniture and other items.

Precious Country Accents, operated by Becky Norton, offers handmade and carved decorative country accessories for "the country look today."

Norton said her shop also has many attractive yet functional and useable items, including towel racks and paper towel holders, in the country style. Also available are various accessories for all rooms in a home.

Precious Country Accents also has items for children, including the Middleton Original Doll Collection line, German-made trains and dolls, and other toy items, with plans to expand the toy line if there's enough customer interest.

Norton employs five people to help with the running of the shop and manufacturing of the articles. She wholesales her goods to department stores, boutiques and other shops throughout the nation. The Pampa shop moves her into the retail business, too.

Owned by Dorothy Bird, Right Out of the Bird's Nest has made-to-order sweats, bath sets and decorative accessories. Also available are custom clothing, including a big line of applique items. She said she will applique and monogram items for customers' needs. "If it needs to be done, we can do it," Bird said. The shop also carries accents, gift items, fabric, children's clothing and a line of musical items, including clowns, ducks and cups.

Bird, who also wholesales and retails in other outlets, said the emphasis is on custom-design. "If we don't have it for them, we can make it for them," she said.

She employs 16 people in Pampa to help with the shop's operations.

Norton and Roberts credit Bird with conceiving the idea for Country Keepsakes Village.

Bird said she was looking for an inexpensive place to relocate and became aware of the warehouses at the Milliron Road location as a good site for boutique-type shops.

She interested the Roberts and Norton in joining the effort and forming Country Keepsakes Ltd. as a mini-mall. Helping to hold down expenses are the sharing of utilities.

Bird said she learned there were a number of people in Pampa looking for jobs when she and Norton advertised for help. She said the two of them interviewed well over 100 people before selecting their employees.

Bird and Norton said they are hoping to see the other spaces occupied by quality specialty shops or boutiques. Among the types being sought are some form of a tea room or gourmet food shop offering light fare of homemade specialties, with tea, coffee and light drinks.

They said they would also like to see a shop offering quality children's clothing.

10-year-old boy slept in ditches to avoid abuse

EL PASO (AP) — A 10-year-old boy slept in ditches to avoid his father's beatings, but child welfare workers took no steps to remedy the situation, according to court testimony.

A child welfare worker testified in district court that he was told five months ago that the boy was avoiding his father by sleeping outside.

The worker, Department of Human Services investigator Alejandro Moreno, said Wednesday he took no action to place the child in a foster home because he saw no bruises and did not believe the boy was in immediate danger.

District Judge Enrique Pena became visibly angry when Moreno said there was not enough proof of abuse.

"What better proof?" the judge asked. "You have a statement from a kid saying he'd been thrown against a wall."

Pena ordered the department to place the boy in a foster home.

Attempt to be a good writer fails

What I am about to tell you is very painful. I'll have to search way down deep in order to reveal my true feelings on the matter, and it won't be easy.

I've considered writing this for quite some time but couldn't quite bring myself to do it. Naaah! Just kidding.

Sort of. You see, it was about three weeks ago that I decided that for the first time in my life I would attempt to grow a beard.

As I had never made this attempt before, I wasn't quite sure how things would turn out. Unfortunately, I found out.

I looked like a young Robert Bork. It was that bad.

I discovered, too, that if I scrunched my head down and touched my chin to my neck and frowned, I looked so much like him it was scary.

And, of course, there were the usual snide comments that were hurled about me when it became apparent that the beard had stagnated.

"Not shaving this month?" was the comment from one of my co-workers.

I thought that question was the most painful, because the girl who asked me could've asked, "Trying to grow a beard?" or even, out of sympathy, she could've said, "You're beard's lookin' real good."

My reasoning for growing a beard was sound. I figured if one is to be a good writer, one needs to display hair on his or her face.

Shakespeare had a beard. Syndicated columnist Lewis Grizzard still has one.

Stephen King used to have one, but his beard probably said, "I don't want to be any part of this ugly face," so it fell out by itself.

If all these great writers have beards, then why couldn't I have had one, too?

Another girl at the office came up to me one day as I was working at my desk, my head down in concentration.

She lowered her head and I looked up at her, fuddled about what she wanted.

"Just checkin'," she said, not withholding her sarcasm.

Other people around the office have been able to successfully grow beards.

Jeff Langley, our managing editor, has not grown a full beard, but rather a simple goatee. He looks a little like Jim Bakker trying to disguise himself. Larry Hollis, who edited this column, did a fine job growing a beard. Since he doesn't look like anyone in particular, suffice it to say he just looks like a hairy Larry.

Off Beat

By Jimmy Patterson

Photographer Duane Laverty has a beard — the best looking beard up here — and staff writer Paul Pinkham has been known to sport full facial hair in the past, as well.

Pinkham looks a little like a convict with his beard. I think he even told me one time he was threatened with arrest just because he looked bad.

The only people on the news writing staff not to have a beard are Cathy Spaulding, Marilyn Powers, L.D. Strate and Fred Parker.

I don't know why Fred and L.D. have chosen to remain clean-shaven. People with names like Cathy or Marilyn tend not to grow beards, though. When I found my attempts to grow a beard to be futile last week, I decided I would shave it and forget about it.

Don't get me wrong, the fallen hair didn't exactly clog up the drain in the sink, but I did go through almost a half of a pack of Gillette disposables when I cut it off, or trimmed it, as I like to say for the sake of my ego.

I came out of the bathroom with the same peach-fuzz laden face I had had two weeks earlier and my wife just kinda looked at me.

No big deal. An hour went by, then two and three hours passed.

She said nothing.

Finally, I had to tell Karen that I had shaved my beard and hadn't she noticed.

That gives you sort of an idea about how unsuccessful I was.

But never fear — I'm growing a mustache now.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

How can we trust regime that shoots?

The Soviets have saluted the impending arms control agreement they'll sign with the United States in appropriate fashion — by committing an outrage. Last month, Soviets soldiers ambushed an Air Force captain and master sergeant, members of the U.S. military liaison mission assigned to East Germany. (Similar Soviet missions operate in West Germany.) Soviet bullet fragments wounded the master sergeant; and Soviet officials — in a cruel custom they seem to observe — refused for 20 minutes to let the captain give the wounded man water and medical care.

The Soviet incident is eerily reminiscent of two other outrages that also occurred right before important Soviet-American agreements or meetings. Just before President Reagan and Soviet dictator Mikhail Gorbachev met for last year's October summit in Iceland, in Moscow the Soviets kidnapped U.S. News & World Report correspondent Nicholas Daniloff. The KGB imprisoned him in a dungeon of the notorious Lubyanka prison.

How did Reagan and Secretary of State George Shultz respond to this "wimp test"? Desperate to meet with Gorbachev, they caved in to the Soviets' every demand. They "swapped" Daniloff, a respected reporter, for a KGB spy the FBI had caught red-handed in New York. This sellout besmirched Daniloff's character and stained the honor of the United States.

And let's not forget the cold-blooded murder of Army Maj. Arthur Nicholson in March 1985. Nicholson, like the two Air Force men ambushed last month, was a member of the American military liaison mission in East Germany. The Soviets shot Nicholson, then left him to bleed to death as the Soviets prevented an American sergeant from administering medical help. Just eight months later Reagan and Gorbachev exchanged handshakes in Geneva at their first summit.

Yet, the most outrageous thing about these assaults is not that the Soviets committed them — one expects barbarians to commit barbarities. Instead, it's astounding how our public officials, including especially Reagan and Shultz, who have taken an oath of office to protect and defend American citizens, have reacted. In each case, nothing — nothing at all — was done to let the Soviets know we won't tolerate such actions, from anyone.

Should we then be surprised that, time and time again, the Soviets commit more outrages?

Reagan has refused to see that the ambushing of our Air Force men shows, once again, the true nature of the Soviet regime. No matter how much the Kremlin propagandizes about "peace" and "glasnost," they're still thugs of the worst sort, resorting to every type of coercion, blackmail, and treachery available.

How can we possibly trust such people to uphold an arms control agreement? Maybe Reagan, like Jimmy Carter in 1978, will seal his delusory hopes of winning the Nobel Peace Prize by kissing Lenin's heir.

Nicaragua promises the moon

WASHINGTON — Oscar Arias, president of Costa Rica, came to town recently. He presented his program for peace in Central America to several hundred members of Congress. His was an eloquent performance, and he clearly bowled them over.

"Give peace a chance," he pleaded. That is a tough plea to ignore. Surely the Reagan administration would love to see a workable peace plan in Nicaragua. Such a pleasant outcome would put an end to a costly and divisive battle on Capitol Hill. It would calm nerves in Honduras and El Salvador. It would permit President Reagan to attend to the more pressing problem of an arms agreement with the Soviet Union. Everybody wants peace.

But peace at what price? Under what conditions? In the wake of the Arias mission, Daniel Ortega, president of Nicaragua, took a couple of steps that liberals in Congress have jubilantly acclaimed. He authorized a Roman Catholic broadcasting service to return to the air. He announced that, subject to minimal government censorship, La Prensa, the opposition newspaper, could resume publication.

The effect of these pronouncements can be felt on Capitol Hill. On Sept. 30, an appropriation of $100 million in aid to the Nicaraguan Contras expired. Only a supplementary appropriation of $3.5 million remains. There is no realistic prospect that Congress will consider another dime in aid to the Contras until mid-November. The first session of the 100th Congress will then be close to adjournment. It could be January or February before new congressional action could be taken. Meanwhile, the steam leaks out.

That prospect troubles conservatives. Over the years, through observation and experience, we have learned something about communist regimes and communist promises. We have learned they are not to be trusted. We are not so gullible as we were at the time of the Yalta agreement 40-odd years ago. We have heard pious declaration of peace, good will and brotherhood, and we have witnessed the oppression imposed upon the Soviet "republics." The pattern is too clear to be misunderstood: The velvet hand, the iron fist; the friendly overture, the cold rebuff.

Ortega's softeners fit perfectly into this pattern. House Speaker Jim Wright is purring like a well-fed kitten. There is no skepticism in him. The speaker seems truly to believe that a millennium is at hand. He sees "national reconciliation and democratization." He dreams of "an end to the insurgencies and counter-insurgencies in Central America." He looks ahead to revitalized economies, new markets for U.S. exports, repayment of debts. Hallelujah!

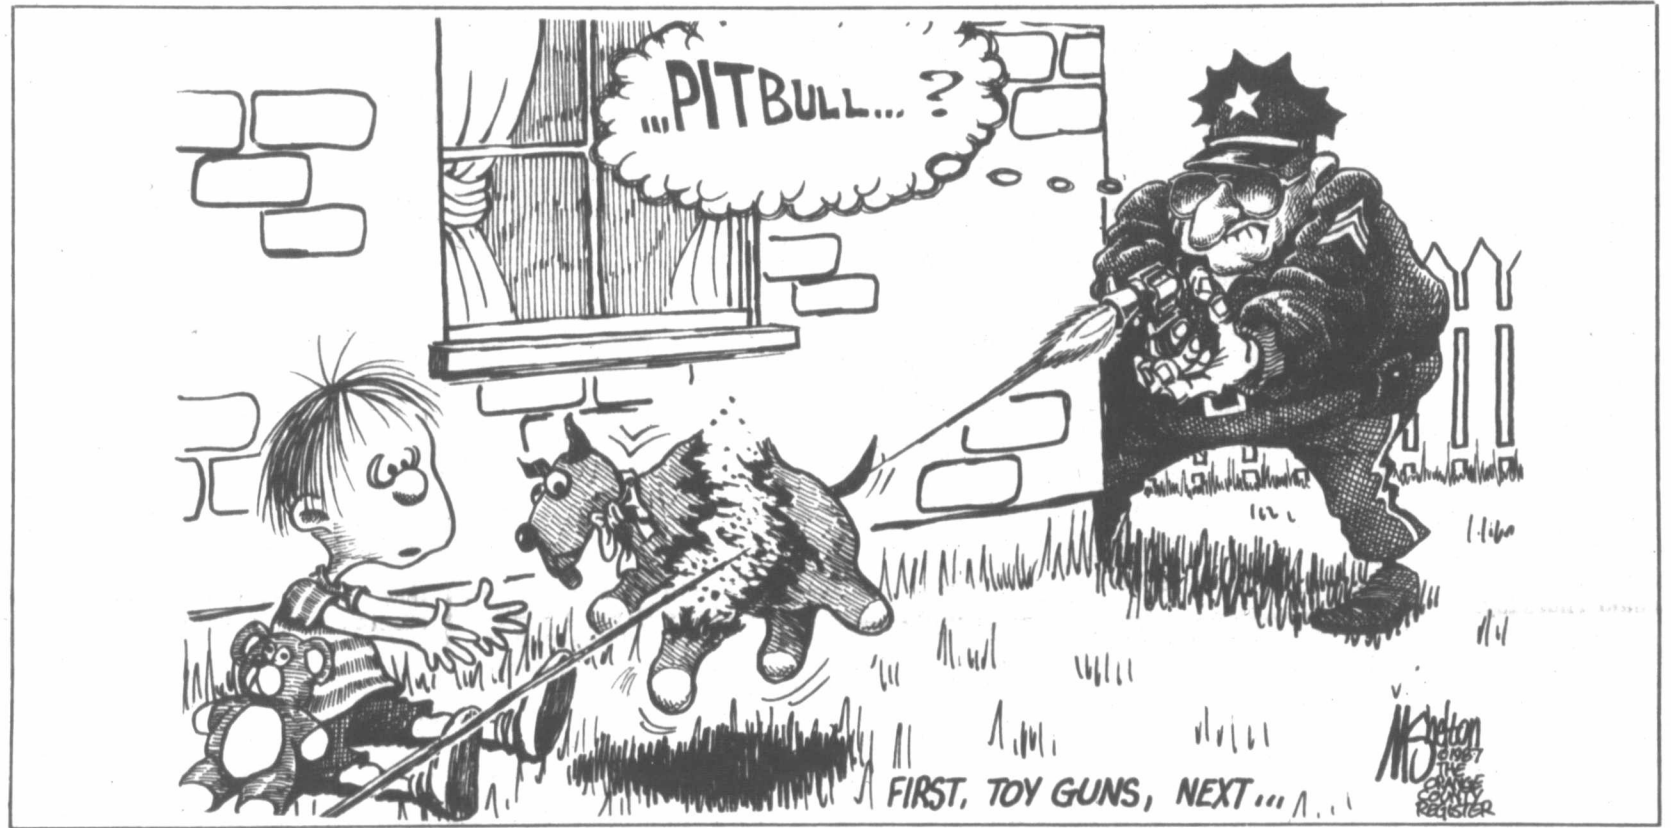

But suppose, to be supposing, that Ortega is playing Congress and his neighbors for suckers. Suppose that Ortega agrees to all these lovely propositions — a cease-fire, free elections, free press, human rights, talks with the Contras, an end to Soviet military aid, the whole works. This is a vast deal to suppose, but let us suppose it.

What happens then? Congress, which has no taste for anything distasteful, abandons the Contras altogether. Without U.S. aid, the anti-communist cause dries up. Ortega is now home free. Who would then be surprised to see La Prensa closed down again? Who would be amazed to see elections postponed? At this point, Ortega, a good communist, reasonably could be expected to follow the pattern of duplicity his masters have perfected.

Speaker Wright is a good man, possessed of good instincts, but in this business his head is full of mush. He writes that "the real American interests" lie in our concern "that Central Americans have the right to self-determination." Piffle! Let us get our priorities straight. The real American interests lie in preventing the establishment of Soviet bases in this hemisphere. Self-determination is a beautiful idea, but self-determination to a Marxist is not exactly the self-determination the speaker has in mind. We haven't seen much self-determination in Cuba lately. We are not likely to see much in Nicaragua, either, if we foolishly swallow the bait that Ortega and Arias so temptingly advance.

On Sept. 11, in an on-the-record interview, President Reagan addressed some of these concerns. He recalled that the Sandinistas, from the beginning, have announced that "their revolution knew no borders." He commented upon the billions of dollars provided to Nicaraguan Marxists by the Soviet Union. He welcomed the Arias peace plan, but "there are such loopholes in it" that only pressure from the Contras could bring the regime to democratization. That pressure is getting lighter day by day. Reagan is right in wanting to keep it up.

The very best of times is now

The best of times is now. If you imagine otherwise, it's because we media people have been immersing you in the world's woes.

Whatever the justification for our preoccupation with negatives, we should be ashamed of ourselves.

The best of times is now! Any American who thinks he wants to be someplace else — or at some other time in history — is a victim of his own expectations.

Some young people want it all now. They are impatient when the latest TV or a new car or a home of their own takes time.

So, the average car costs $13,000. Yes, that is five times the average cost of a car in 1960.

But it's a lot more car than in 1960... what with power steering and power windows and stereo tape deck and air conditioning. And that old car burned more gas.

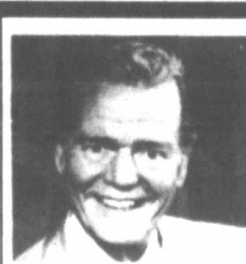

Yet, the average family can buy that average car today with 23 weeks of income.

In 1960 the lesser car would have cost 26 weeks of income.

More Americans own their own homes and prices still bear the same three-to-one relationship to family income.

Fortune Magazine recently audited our nation's prospects and found every segment of American society better off than ever before.

It is tough getting started. Getting started was always tough. Granted, prices have nearly quadrupled since the '50s, yet the average American still commands twice as much buying power now than then.

Per-capita income after taxes has risen by one-third just since 1970, by another 10 percent just since 1980.

In fact, the typical American family's income last year was half again as high as just five years before!

And all types of families got richer. Couples with two paychecks enjoy 60 percent more income. But even where the wife stays home, income is up 34 percent.

You hear that one-in-five Americans is "poor." Count food stamps and government housing subsidies, it's one-in-10.

In our proper concern for poor people, for perspective, we need to remember that far more Americans die from overeating than from undereating.

Seventy percent of American had some kind of health insurance in 1970. Today — 85 percent. Improved medication, nutrition and sanitation have added to human life expectancy a month a year.

The old in America work less and live longer, are healthier and more independent.

Black and white women earn approximately the same pay.

And the black elite has grown even faster than the black middle class... and more than the average middle-class white. And that proportion is rising.

So dynamic is our nation's economy that we have had five uninterrupted years of steady economic growth.

We've created 12 million new jobs in the past four years.

If you could choose any time and any place in history in which to live.

If you want the most of all things good and the least of poverty and war and sickness and subservience.

This would have to be the time and this United States of America would have to be the place.

You are right where the action is — and the best of times is now!

Program forces wasteful timber harvest

By Robert Walters

JUNEAU, Alaska (NEA) — It is by far the country's largest national forest, covering 80 percent of the southeastern Alaska archipelago and spanning 500 miles, from the Pease Canal on the south to Disenchantment Bay on the north.

More than half of its 16.7 million acres are covered with western hemlock, Sitka spruce or red or yellow cedar. The oldest of those trees date back 800 years, measure 10 feet in diameter and soar 250 feet high.

It is the Tongass National Forest, the last old-growth rain forest anywhere on Earth outside the tropics — but its future is endangered by the federal agency that is supposed to protect it.

At risk are more than the majestic trees that require hundreds of years to reach maturity in this spectacular region of snow-capped mountains, mist-shrouded fjords, alpine meadows and pristine rivers and lakes. The thriving ecosystem in Alaska's

"panhandle" teems with wildlife, including the nation's largest concentration of bald eagles. Also present in abundance are grizzly bears, deer, salmon and trout.

Early in this century, the U.S. Forest Service concluded that timber production here was the key to the economic development of the remote, sparsely populated region.

(Even today, only about 60,000 people live in the area, with 70 percent of them concentrated in Ketchikan, Sitka and Juneau, the state capital.)

Although logging contracts in other national forests seldom exceed 10 years in duration, the Forest Service argued that longer terms were required to attract timber companies to the Tongass.

Two 50-year contracts signed in the 1950s are still in effect. They guarantee the Louisiana Pacific Corp. and the Alaska Pulp Corp. exclusive access to timber on federal lands at exceptionally favorable prices.

But there is little domestic demand for Tongass timber. Virtually all of it is shipped to Japan (Alaska Pulp is a Japanese corporation) where it is used to produce rayon, cellophane and other products whose global markets are dwindling.

To provide the Japanese with an almost limitless supply of cheap pulp-grade timber, the U.S. treasury is being bled under an obscure provision of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act of 1980.

Bypassing the congressional authorization and appropriation process that governs other federal spending, the law requires that the Treasury Department automatically "make available" to the Forest Service at least $40 million each year to finance the Tongass timber program.

In addition, the law specifies that the national forest supply "dependent industry" with 4.5 billion board feet per decade.

While rigidly controlling supply, the federal government has little influence over demand. The result is that the Tongass timber program lost 91 cents for every dollar spent on it in 1983, according to the Wilderness Society.

That increased to 93 cents in 1984 and 99 cents in 1985. Last year, the Wilderness Society calculates, the Forest Service lost 99.8 cents for every dollar it spent here.

In addition, the scheme has failed to attain its primary goal of creating new jobs. Since 1980, employment in the region's timber industry has plummeted from 3,000 to less than 1,800.

The governments of more than a dozen communities in the area are on record opposing the senseless timber harvest. The leading fishermen's organizations object to "subsidizing a foreign company to despoil our landscape and waters" while threatening their livelihood.

In what the Southeast Alaska Conservation Council describes as "reckless pursuit of an inflexible mandate," however, the Forest Service persists in its plans to clearcut 17,000 acres of virgin timber every year.

Democrats eye tax increase plan without GOP help

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats who control the two tax-writing committees in Congress are vowing to write a $12 billion deficit-reduction tax increase that will appeal to both parties, even though Republicans are boycotting the process and President Reagan is promising a veto.

"I'm not interested in a political statement ... (or) campaign fodder," Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said Thursday after a committee meeting attended only by its 23 Democrats. "I'm interested in doing something about the deficit."

"I want this to be bipartisan," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, whose Finance Committee on Thursday temporarily suspended efforts to write a $23 billion deficit-reduction package including the tax increase.

Minutes after Bentsen spoke, Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon, senior Republican on the panel, announced that his fellow GOP members were not interested in writing a tax increase until it becomes more clear later this month whether one will be needed.

Packwood added that he had talked earlier in the day with Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, who made it clear that "the president will veto any new taxes — period."

"When we joined this committee we didn't take a vow to raise taxes," said

Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., pointing to the proposed sale of government property and higher user fees for government services as "attractive alternatives to raising people's taxes."

Bentsen recessed the committee, probably until Tuesday.

Rostenkowski, who had seen the 13 GOP members of his committee walk away from the tax-increase bill a week earlier, met with the other 22 Democratic members and continued looking for relatively small tax proposals that could win a majority vote.

The Democrats agreed on none of those Thursday. However, they did reject two dozen provisions that the Reagan administration had proposed in 1984, including repeal of the deduction for personal-property taxes and taxing a portion of employer-financed health insurance.

Despite Rostenkowski's opposition, the Democrats refused to kill several suggestions for increasing individual income-tax rates and excise taxes on gasoline, alcohol and tobacco. Those items will still be up for deliberation next week, but it is generally conceded they will not become part of the tax bill.

Under the Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget law, unless Congress and the president agree on a package of deficit reductions, $23 billion of spending cuts will take effect automatically on Nov. 20. That would mean a huge cut in defense spending, which Reagan opposes.

However, Packwood said he is convinced Reagan would find that more acceptable than having to agree to a tax increase. The senator, who said he could vote for some tax increases if necessary, added the wise course for the committee would be to delay any decision until congressional and administration budget experts determine where the automatic cuts would be made.

Even if the president could swallow big cuts in the defense budget, there is no certainty Democrats would sit still for large reductions in a variety of social programs.

Jim and Tammy Bakker would welcome invitation to return

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — PTL founders Jim and Tammy Bakker say they would welcome an invitation to return and "restore our baby," the evangelical empire, now that the Rev. Jerry Falwell has quit as chairman and taken his board of directors with him.

"I think if a child had a need, I would call the father and mother to help with that need," Bakker said Thursday.

Falwell, who took over PTL after Bakker's downfall in a sex and hush-money scandal, announced Thursday that he and the nine other board members could not stay as long as there was a chance Bakker might return and make the TV ministry "what it was — the greatest scab and cancer on the face of Christianity in 2,000 years."

The resignations were prompted by a bankruptcy court ruling Wednesday allowing PTL creditors and contributors to file a competing plan for reorganizing the ministry, which is more than $60 million in debt, Falwell said.

That ruling, it was felt, left the door open to a comeback by Bakker.

Falwell predicted after his resignation that within six months, "barring a miracle of God," Bakker would be back in control of the empire he founded and lost.

Bakker said during a news conference with his wife at their mountaintop retreat near Gatlinburg, Tenn., that he would return if invited by PTL's creditors. "We want to help in any way to restore our baby," he said.

Bakker said he thought Falwell was resigning to avoid testifying under oath in bankruptcy court.

"If they tell the truth they will have to reveal that they plotted to steal PTL," said Bakker, who contends he gave Falwell only temporary safekeeping of PTL in March after admitting a 1980 sexual encounter with church secretary Jessica Hahn.

Falwell, who in resigning called the PTL scandal "the Watergate of evangelical Christianity," asked PTL's 1,200 employees to stay on and said its main TV program, the "PTL Club," will remain on the air at least three weeks.

Later, he said he will meet with creditors' attorneys or his successor to allow an orderly transition, but he ruled out any return, saying he and the board, in resigning, weren't "issuing any ultimatum or putting on dramatics."

Two men arrested in sniper attacks

NORTH SMITHFIELD, R.I. (AP) — Two men faced arraignment today in a string of sniper attacks that left two people seriously wounded and terrorized citizens in three towns during last year's Christmas season, state police said.

Police Capt. Michael J. Urso said the two were arrested Thursday and would be arraigned on charges of assault with intent to murder.

Urso described the two suspects as best friends and said they attended high school in Burrillville together.

Reagan standing by Bork

WASHINGTON (AP) — While Robert H. Bork decides whether his doomed Supreme Court nomination is still worth a fight, President Reagan and the nominee himself have apparently stopped their lobbying efforts in the Senate.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Thursday that Bork has given President Reagan no indication he's ready to withdraw, even though a majority of the Senate has declared against him.

Reagan made clear Thursday that Bork must decide his own fate. "He has a decision to make. I have made mine. I will support him all the way," the president said.

Fitzwater said Bork also can request a meeting with the president today if he wants one, and added the White House is "playing it by ear."

The Washington Post, quoting unnamed sources, said Bork planned to make a statement today. Leonard Garment, a Washington lawyer and confidant of Bork, told The Associated Press he was unaware of any such plans.

An Associated Press survey showed 53 senators have declared against Bork, 36 said they back him, and 11 remain undecided.

At the end of the working day Thursday, Fitzwater reported that Reagan had not met with any senators on the Bork nomination during the day and had not made any telephone calls on the subject.

And a survey of virtually all the undecided senators indicated that none of them has any meetings scheduled with the federal appellate judge. Bork had been making the rounds on Capitol Hill, usually to hold one-on-one meetings with senators.

"The White House hasn't called us, Bork hasn't called us," said Ron Tammen, administrative assistant to undecided Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis.

"I think he (Proxmire) was somewhat surprised he had no personal approaches. It hasn't happened from either side (for or against Bork)."

Republican Sen. Alfonse M. D'Amato of New York also has no session scheduled with Bork, his office said. The senator issued a statement saying, "The constructive thing to do now is to move forward and find a consensus candidate who would represent the best of the Reagan revolution — someone with outstanding credentials who would be able to secure the overwhelming support of the Senate."

Five missing, eight injured in blaze

HOBOKEN, N.J. (AP) — Fire raced through a tenement early today, collapsing three floors and injuring at least eight people. Five people were missing, officials said.

Officials were bringing in a construction crane to search for the tenants believed to have been inside the five-story brick building when the floors gave way around 2 a.m., said Deputy Fire Chief Richard Tremietidi. Only the front wall of the building was intact.

"If anyone was in there, it's 99.9 percent sure they didn't survive," he said.

Residents of the 10-family building told firefighters and police that five people, including a 4-month-old child, were inside when it fell in, Tremietidi said.

Firefighters who arrived after the alarm was sounded around 1:30 a.m. could not enter the first floor because of intense flames, he said. "About five minutes after the alarm, the building was an inferno," he said.

Residents scrambled out onto fire escapes, and the missing infant's mother, Nancy Vasquez, was plucked from an upper floor by firefighters who maneuvered an aerial ladder between power lines, officials said.

"She was screaming for her husband and baby," said Police Chief George Crimmins said. She was listed in critical but stable condition at St. Mary's Hospital, where another woman and three men also were being treated, authorities said. Their conditions were not immediately disclosed.

Police Lt. Ken McGurk said three police officers suffered smoke inhalation, but their conditions were not known.

About 75 firefighters from Hoboken, Jersey City and Union City fought the blaze.

Scientists search for Nessie

DRUMNADROCHIT, Scotland (AP) — Twenty boats carrying the latest sonar equipment swept the choppy waters of Loch Ness today in the biggest-ever scientific hunt for the legendary monster lurking in its depths.

"I'm certainly not going to haul a Jurassic reptile out kicking and screaming for you," said organizer Adrian Shine, referring to prehistoric creatures.

"I am looking possibly for a very large fish," he said.

Shine, a 38-year-old London salesman who has studied the 754-foot deep loch for 14 years, heads the expedition, code-named Operation Deepscan, to find the Loch Ness Monster. Loch is the Scottish word for lake.

"I would be delighted with a 20-foot eel or sturgeon or something like that," he told a news conference Thursday night.

More than 20 motorboats formed a ragged line across the mile-wide lake, sweeping the murky depths with the sonar equipment for any large object. The monster-hunters kept as aligned as possible in an effort to ensure that nothing could escape their sonar curtain.

Shine, an avowed skeptic of the monster legend, urged the boat crews to "keep faith with all the maligned eyewitnesses who look to you for vindication."

"I want you to suspend my skepticism," he said.

Sebastian Calaway, a 14-year-old student from Los Angeles, steered one of the boats through the inky blue waters of the northern Scottish loch, bounded by sheer cliffs and rolling green hills.

"The water's rough, but it will start to shape up in a little while," he said.

Andy Trickey, a Bristol toolmaker who is in charge of one of the boats, the Lochindorp Castle, said: "I hope we're going to find something. That's the standard pattern for today."

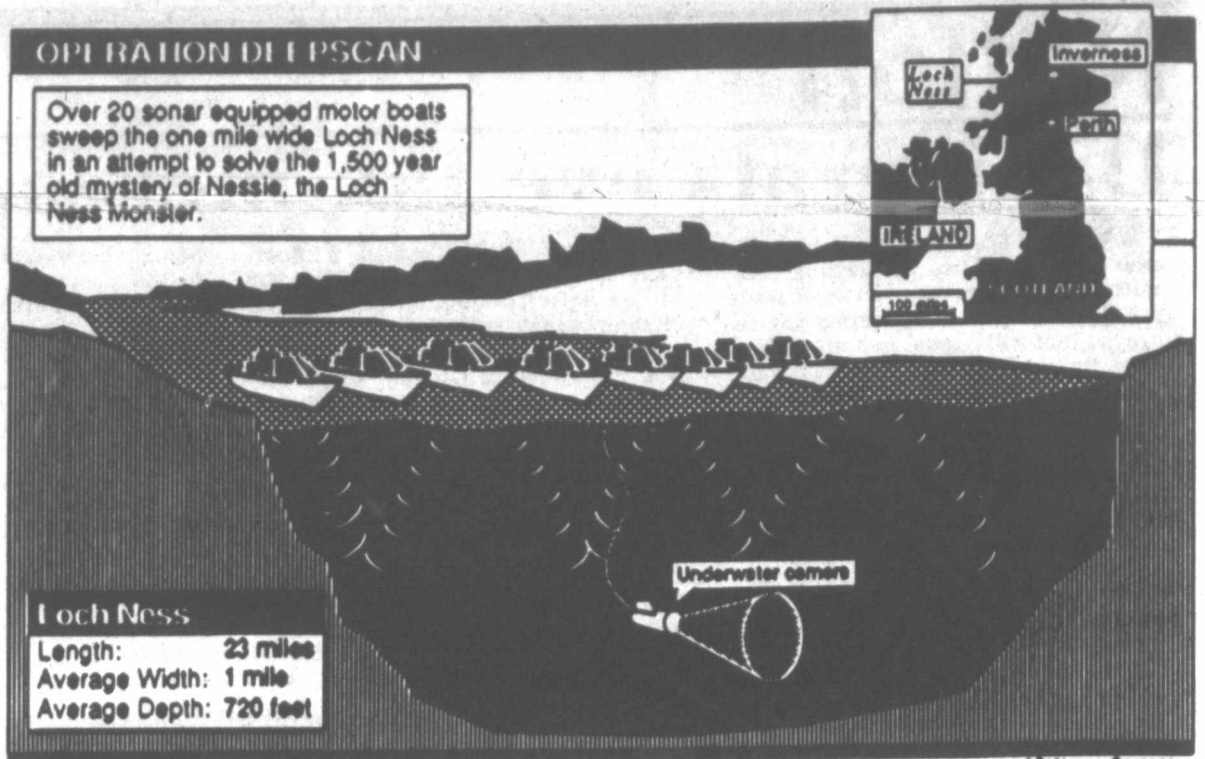

Whatever does emerge, even Shine says the legend that began in A.D. 565, when St. Columba castigated the monster for attacking one of his followers, will live on.

"You don't kill myths with science," he said.

The expedition officially began at midmorning after the identical, 32-foot boats spent about half an hour trying to get into formation.

Shine said each sweep down the 23-mile-long lake is expected to take six hours.

In 1982, Shine led an expedition that recorded 40 sonar contacts with large, sometimes moving objects as much as 350 feet deep.

U.S. doctor: Brazil radiation accident worst in the West

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Ten people who touched and tasted a "beautiful" glittering substance are now fighting for their lives in what a U.S. physician called the West's worst radiation accident.

The victims were flown to Rio last week after coming into contact with cesium-137, a radioactive isotope used in the treatment of cancer patients. Five were not expected to live and the other five had an even chance of surviving, specialists said.

Among those not expected to live was a 6-year-old girl, Leide Das Neves Ferreira, who rubbed the radioactive material over her body and even tasted it.

Only the Chernobyl nuclear reactor accident in April 1986 in the Soviet Union was worse, said Dr. Gerald Hanson, a U.S. doctor with the World Health Organization.

Thirty-one people have died from the accident, in which a reactor at the Chernobyl plant exploded and sent a cloud of radiation that eventually circled the world.

Hanson, who came to Brazil to help treat the victims, was interviewed Thursday with Globo TV, Brazil's largest television network.

Government investigators are looking into who was responsible for allowing the lead-encased cesium-137 to end up in the hands of a junkyard owner who bought it as scrap and broke the casing open.

The United States, the Soviet Union, East Germany and Argentina responded to an appeal this week made through the International Atomic Energy Association in Vienna, Austria, for help in treating the 10 patients hospitalized in Rio in critical condition.

Six patients were hospitalized in slightly better condition in Goiania, a central Brazilian city where the accident occurred last week.

The victims have suffered hair loss, lesions in the mouth and throat, and a sharp decline in white blood cells.

A scavenger found the lead-encased cesium in the ruins of a partly demolished hospital in Goiania and sold the 250-pound capsule to a junkyard as scrap, officials said.

The junkyard owner broke open the lead casing around the cesium and removed the powder, which was admired as "beautiful" by friends and neighbors, taken into homes, flushed down toilets and carried around in pockets.

Once the contamination was discovered, 30 families were moved from the area, their homes closed for radiation checks and an isolation post set up in a local soccer stadium to check people for radiation poisoning.

Helicopters circled the neighborhood and found high levels of radioactivity.

Nuclear specialists prepared to remove contaminated objects from the homes near the junkyard.

"Everybody thinks we are a band of lepers," said Maria Dos Santos, whose family has been left homeless by the incident.

said in an advisory issued by the National Hurricane Center. "All interests in the northwest Caribbean area should keep in touch with the latest advisories and small craft around the northwest Caribbean should not venture far from port."

The depression, which organized Thursday night, wasn't moving this morning but was expected to begin a slow west-northwest movement later in the day, Clark said.

Two hurricanes and three storms have formed this year. Emily killed three on its destructive path across the Dominican Republic, and Arlene fizzled.

Forecaster: Depression could strengthen

MIAMI (AP) — A hurricane forecaster said a tropical depression just off the Nicaraguan coast with winds of 30 mph could strengthen today.

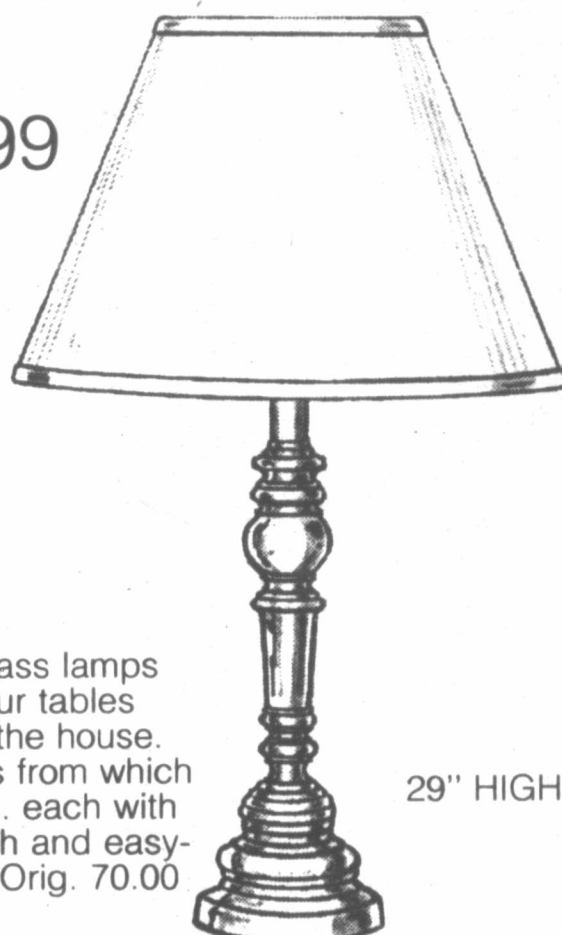

At 6 a.m. EDT, the 13th depression of the 1987 Atlantic hurricane season was centered near latitude 15.5 north and longitude 82.5 west, or about 50 miles northeast of Cape Gracias a Dios, Nicaragua.

Winds would have to reach 39 mph for the depression to become a named tropical storm. It would be called Floyd.

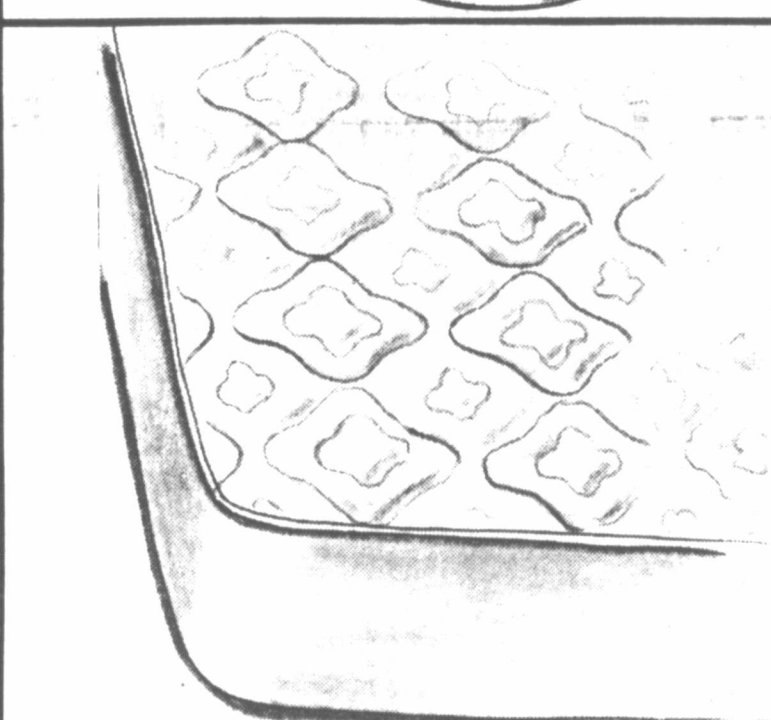

"Some strengthening is possible during the next 24 hours," hurricane forecaster Gil Clark

Mrs. Mary Phillips New Hope Baptist sets Woman's Day

Mrs. Mary Phillips of El Paso will be the speaker at the Woman's Day service at New Hope Baptist Church, 404 Harlem, at 3 p.m. Sunday.

A teacher in the Ysleta Independent School District, she serves in a number of areas of church leadership. She is a member of the Original West Texas Baptist District Association Inc. and is secretary of the Sunday School and Training Union Congress of that affiliation.

Phillips also is a member of Mount Zion Baptist Church in El Paso.

Rev. Vern C. Martin, pastor, invited the public to attend the special Woman's Day service.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

* Scripture: If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just and will forgive us our sins and purify us from all unrighteousness. (1 John 1:9 NIV)

I am a housewife by choice of profession; and I do consider myself a professional. I've done everything from upholstering furniture, to making complete wardrobes, to cleaning toilets, to tending both messy ends of babies, to cake decorating — I even do windows!

I've found that, among my professional constituency, I am no exception. Contrary to popular belief, not all housewives are bored, lazy, slovenly, daytime "soaps" addicts. Dedicated housewives are among the most conscientious, self-disciplined, self-starters I've had the pleasure of knowing.

As with all occupations, the housewifing business does have its drawbacks. On a less idealistic level, I hate to cook! Not only that, but through some quirk of fate, this whiz professional has managed to raise the three little pigs.

As I fold the last of a huge laundry, I know, at that very moment, dirty clothes are being discarded and walked on on bedroom floors. My middle daughter recently left for college, and I can see the carpet in her bedroom for the first time in years! Assuming I remember correctly and the carpet is supposed to be brown, it is not much worse for not seeing the light of day in an eon.

In truth, time, family and the very nature of the job preclude a housewife's ever catching up her work. As she sleeps at night, sheets are being slept upon and night clothes are being slept in; spiders are spinning; water deposits are accumulating; pets are shedding; and vicious little elves are dirtying dishes (I know elves do this because no one in my family is ever guilty).

I understand the frustration of a job which gobbles energy, time and noble intentions yet evinces little, if any, progress. Imagine God's frustration with us sinful mortals. He no sooner cleans up one spiritual mess, and another of His children leaps delightedly into an even bigger hole.

Not one of us manages to avoid being spiritually soiled. However, to our relief and delivery and to His glorification, God's mercy is greater than His disappointment. Our cries of remorse are consistently met by His dedicated ministrations of purification. He washes away the sludge of sin and exercises eternal forgiveness.

Pampa Community Chorus plans 'Messiah' rehearsals

One-hundred members are being sought for the Pampa Community Chorus for the Christmas season performance of Messiah by George Frederick Handel.

Jointly sponsored by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce and the Pampa Fine Arts Association, the presentation will be at 8 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 17, in the M.K. Brown Auditorium.

The chorus will be under the direction of Zan Walker, minister of music at Central Baptist Church.

Walker said the performance will include orchestra members from the Amarillo Symphony and area.

"Handel's Messiah is a unique work of one of the master composers," he said. "It is the first introduction for many church musicians to great religious art music. Yet it has turned out to be not only the avenue for generations to express their devotion, but also as a most useful vehicle to open doors."

The performance will include the entire Part I, which is traditionally known as "The Christmas section," and the familiar "Hallelujah" chorus that ends Part II.

Special guest soloists this year will be John and Leigh Blizard of the Fort Worth-Dallas Metroplex area.

"This talented young couple are two of the most sought-after voices in the Metroplex area," Walker said. "Their addition to the performance will enhance the musical climate of the most ambitious Christmas music of the season."

The couple will be flown in for the local performance.

Rehearsals for local choir members begin at 7 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 15, in the Heritage Room of M.K. Brown Auditorium. Rehearsals will continue each Thursday evening, with the exception of Thanksgiving, through Dec. 10.

"There will be no auditions," Walker said. "Everyone is invited to sing!"

Singers are encouraged to bring their own Schirmer edition of Messiah and to borrow copies from their respective churches. There will be copies available at the first rehearsal.

Walker encouraged local and area residents to participate in the community chorus "by singing as a member of the chorus and by making these rehearsals and performance a priority in your schedule."

"We want to make Dec. 17 an exceptional evening of musical worth and deepest religious feelings to the glory of our Messiah," Walker said.

Miami First Baptist schedules revival

MIAMI - The First Baptist Church of Miami, corner of Mobeetie and Wichita, will be having a revival Sunday through Wednesday under the theme, "Get All Excited."

Evangelist will be Ruffin E. Snow, pastor of Eastwood Baptist Church at Tulsa, Okla. Music evangelist will be Harry Layden, a member of the Gracemont Baptist Church in Tulsa.

Pastor Dale R. Dunn invited the public to come out and participate in "four great days of revival."

Revival services will be at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday and at 7 p.m. Monday through Wednesday. Free luncheons will also be held at 11:45 a.m. Monday through Wednesday.

revival have been scheduled. Snow has been in the ministry since 1963 and took his first pastorate right out of high school. He has been a pastor, director of evangelism and youth director during his 24 years of ministry. Snow was Pastor Dunn's youth director when Dunn was a youth. Dunn said he saw "in this man Jesus Christ," which inspired him with the desire to enter the ministry himself. A graduate of Southwestern Theological Seminary and the Quachita Baptist Seminary, Snow and his wife of 20 years, Melissa, have three children.

Layden is in full-time music evangelism. He became a Christian during a revival as a young adult and since then has earned his seminary degree from Southwestern.

Snow and Layden have worked together before as an evangelistic team.

Layden said he sees his ministry as one of evangelistic praise: "Its primary purpose is to prepare the hearts and minds of those in attendance to hear and respond to God's word."

Layden and his wife Lynette have been married for less than 10 years.

Presbyterians pick gospel, bluegrass

By LOUISE GREGG
Wichita Falls
Times-Record News

WICHITA FALLS (AP)—When Mike Bomar plays his five-string banjo with the Presbyterian Pickers, a bluegrass group, he is transported into a world of his own. His troubles and cares slip away and he enters a state of rapture.

"I get so wrapped up I'm not aware of what's going on around me. My mind is totally on the music," said Bomar, a Wichita Falls veterinarian. "When we were in Red River there was a beautiful sunset. I didn't see it. They pointed it out to me."

Ron Burks, bass player for the group, is just the opposite. Burks is a psychologist in private practice who specializes in marriage and family counseling and therapy.

"I see it as a form of communication between ourselves and the audience," said Burks. He likes eye contact and is quick to pick up the effects of the music on the audience: "Feet are tapping and little children are dancing. It's good therapy," he said.

Other members of The Presbyterian Pickers are Maj. Pat Osinach, an Air Force instructor pilot stationed at Sheppard Air Force Base. He plays guitar. Osinach's wife, Susan, a French teacher, plays fiddle.

Burks' wife, Judy, a medical technologist who supervises the clinical lab at Professional Medical Laboratory, plays mandolin.

She said: "Bluegrass makes you feel good." The mandolin is an instrument that has eight strings and a short neck. "Each two strings are tuned the same," she explained. "The mandolin is pretty traditional for bluegrass."

Bluegrass gospel makes up about 80 percent of The Presbyterian Pickers' music. Some of their favorite tunes are "I Saw the Light," "I'll Fly Away," "Will the Circle be Unbroken?" and "Sinner Man."

"Sinner Man" is always popular, said Burks. He recalled with amusement that "When we were playing in a bar in Red River we sang 'Sinner Man' to a highly appreciative audience."

Each picker has his/her own style: Bomar is moody and serious, Burks is laid-back, Osinach is extroverted, relating well to audiences, and Mrs. Burks and Mrs. Osinach add a certain amicability to the group. Osinach is lead singer though the others join in as the spirit moves them. Mrs. Burks and Mrs. Osinach often harmonize. Together, the various styles combine to make an excellent bluegrass group.

Bomar's wife, Ann, is not a picker but she and Bomar and their three children and the entire families of the other players went on vacation this summer to Red River, N.M. They just happened to line up two engagements while there. About 20 percent of their music is typical bluegrass: such tunes as "Salty Dog Blues," "Old Joe Clark," "Foggy Mountain Breakdown," "Cabin in the Sky."

Bomar is master of ceremonies "If I'm in the right mood." Osinach shares those duties and Bomar said, "We have a real good time."

"Bluegrass originated in the Smoky Mountains by Bill Monroe," explained Bomar. "It's non-electric instruments. All strings. No percussions."

Bluegrass is a folk art form that is vying with country, country-swing and country-Western in popularity. The Presbyterian Pickers have stuck to pure, traditional bluegrass except for one instrument, Burks said, "A big acoustic bass is as tall as a man. It's hard to carry around. I've gone to electric bass."

All members of the group, who have been together about a year and a half, belong to First Presbyterian Church. "We first played for services there on Serendipity Sunday," said Mrs. Burks. They entertain often at the city's nursing homes and have played for hospice, Faith City Mission, Maternity Cottage and other churches.

They entertain without charge for charitable organizations and nursing homes. If they provide music for certain private functions, "We ask for a contribution and it goes into a scholarship fund for some youth in our church," Mrs. Burks said.

Bomar has been playing the banjo since he was 13. He and a friend played for school functions and his friend turned professional.

The Presbyterian Pickers got started as such when Bomar and Osinach went to a Presbyterian youth conference in Otrant, N.C. "Pat and I played for morning wake up," Bomar said.

Mrs. Osinach, the fiddler, said: "Would you believe I didn't know how to play a year and a half ago?" She and Mrs. Burks, the mandolin player, took a few lessons but say they have learned mostly from practicing.

Presbyterian Pickers practice before performance.

LOCAL BRIEFS

Seventh Day Adventist Church

The Seventh Day Adventist Church, corner of Ward and Buckler Streets, will have its Friend Day this Saturday.

Sabbath School begins at 9:30 a.m., with church services at 10:45 a.m.

The church invites the public to come for worship. A pot-luck dinner will be served after services.

Pampa Chapel of Apostolic Faith

The Apostolic Faith Bible College Choir from Baxter Springs, Kan., will be in concert at 6 p.m. Sunday at the Pampa Chapel of the Apostolic Faith Association, 711 E. Harvester.

The choir is under the direction of Mrs. Steve Hackett. Rev. Austin Sutton, pastor, said the public is invited to share in an evening of fellowship and worship.

Fellowship Hamburger Cook-Out

A family hamburger cook-out and fellowship will be held beginning at 6:30 p.m. Saturday in the former Lamar Full Gospel Family Life Center at 1200 S. Summer.

The cook-out is being sponsored by the Men's Prayer and Praise Breakfast Group, a local group of Christian men who meet for prayer and fellowship on an informal basis.

Cost of the cook-out is $5 a person. Those not interested in eating are still invited to attend a program that begins at 7:30 p.m. Guest speaker is Ron Chamberlain of Houston, with music provided by local gospel singing group, Living Water.

Organizers said the cook-out is just a chance for Christian families to gather in informal fellowship for "spreading the good news of Jesus Christ." The public is invited to attend. No nursery will be provided.

The Men's Prayer and Praise Breakfast Group will meet for breakfast at 7:30 a.m. Saturday at the Starlight Room of Coronado Inn. Tickets for the cook-out may be purchased at the breakfast or at the door Saturday evening.

Religion Roundup

ATLANTA (AP)—The National Council of Churches has praised the tentative agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union to eliminate short- and medium-range nuclear missiles.

The executive committee of the cooperative organization of most major Protestant and Eastern Orthodox bodies said it had "worked and prayed" for reversal of an arms race leading "to global destruction," and added: "We thank God that now for the first time an agreement is within reach which would not only limit but eliminate some of the most destabilizing nuclear weapons."

"We continue to pray that this agreement in principle will signal the opening of a new age of trust and confidence-building which will lead to the further reduction and ultimate elimination of nuclear arms."

CHICAGO (AP)—The National Coalition of American Nuns says banning of Dignity, a Catholic homosexual group, from holding services in Roman Catholic churches in many dioceses "only robs homosexuals" of the church's "nourishment and support which is their right."

NEW YORK (AP)—Two more Baha'is were executed in Teheran on Sept. 28, bringing to five the number of Baha'is executed by Iran's government this year because of their religion, the Baha'is international office reports.

The men, Ardishahr Akhtari and Amir-Husayn Nadiri, both former members of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is in Iran, had been arrested in 1984 and had been in prison since.

More than 200 Baha'is have been killed or have disappeared in Iran since 1979.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't settle for undesirable terms in a commercial arrangement today. Call the other guy's bluff, and then walk if you don't get a satisfactory deal.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It will be up to you to be the motivating force today in a partnership situation. Your counterpart will follow your cues and supply the backup.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll know where your opportunities lie today, and you will also know that they will have to be energetic and enterprising if you hope to take advantage of them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Someone you thought hadn't noticed you will put this erroneous assumption to rest today; he or she will start showering you with attention.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Friends who have you in their corner today are lucky. Knowing you are there to back them up will give them fresh courage and strength.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your imagination is exceptionally keen today, especially if you focus it in on something new that has recently captured your fancy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Because you will be prepared to work for what you want today, the aspects indicate you'll have an excellent chance of getting it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Unless you are faced with some type of challenge today, your attitude is likely to be too easygoing. Once the gauntlet is thrown down, you'll be a different person.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Use an indirect approach today to achieve your ends. Do nothing that is devious, but, by the same token, don't be too obvious about your purposes.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're likely to be a bit restless today. Try to team up with friends who are equally as energetic. You won't be content being a loner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Channel your efforts toward a worthwhile objective today. The more ambitious the undertaking, the better. You'll perform well when you push yourself.

People create need for animal control

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago, you had a letter in your column that began: "I am your animal control officer..." Please run it again with your answer. It would be a timely reminder about the proper love and care of animals entrusted to our care.

MILTON BENOIT, TIMBERVILLE, VA.

DEAR MILTON: That letter went up on the bulletin boards of many schools. Thanks for asking. Here it is:

DEAR ABBY: I am your animal control officer. I am not the dreaded "dogcatcher" or the "murderer" you call me.

It is not I who allows your pet to roam the streets, to contract diseases from other free-roaming animals, to be hit by passing motorists or poisoned by rotting garbage. I am the one who must look into those sick, pain-glazed eyes, try to remove the animal without causing it further pain, and then humanely "put it to sleep" to put an end to its suffering.

It is not I who allows your pets to breed, then dumps the unwanted puppies and kittens on roadsides and in shelters. I'm the one who must find the tiny animals before they die of starvation, exposure or disease, and as an act of mercy, exterminate them. It hurts me to be forced to kill hundreds of thousands of animals each year, but because of your irresponsibility, I have no choice.

It is not I who abandons unwanted animals on farm roads, telling myself some friendly farmer will surely take them in and give them a good home. But I am the one who must pick up the frightened animal who waits in vain for its beloved master, wondering why it has been abandoned. I am the one who must help that friendly farmer trap, tranquilize or kill that animal because it has begun to roam in packs with other abandoned hungry animals, killing livestock, fowl and game.

I am not the one who breeds and fights dogs in the name of "sport." But I'm the one who fights the breeders and participants, and must pick up the dead and dying animals that have been left behind.

It is not I who keeps a pet confined in an area too small — without food, water, shelter or exercise. But I must deal with the irresponsible owner who does.

It is not I who refuses to spend the time and money to keep up regular inoculations that all pets require. But I am the one who must pick up the sick animal that is dying of a preventable disease.

So remember, the next time your child is bitten by a stray dog, your trash is dumped and scattered, your pet is lost, stolen, poisoned or hit by a car, it is the animal control officer you call — not the "dogcatcher." The next time your pet is picked up, or you are cited for neglecting or abusing it, remember, I am only trying to get you to fulfill your responsibility to your pet, your neighbor and yourself.

Do not scorn me. Respect me, for I am the product of your irresponsibility. I love animals, and I care.

ANIMAL CONTROL OFFICER

DEAR OFFICER: Thank you for a powerful message that needs to be repeated often.

No pet should be allowed to breed indiscriminately. Please, please have your pet spayed or neutered. And if you have a dollar or two to spare, please send it to your local S.P.C.A. so it can feed and care for all those kittens and puppies a little longer — instead of exterminating them immediately for lack of funds.

I love animals, and I care, too.

DEAR ABBY: Please help settle a mild disagreement. Two couples, who have been friends for years, enjoy getting together on an occasional Sunday evening for cocktails and dinner out.

Couple No. 1 calls Couple No. 2 to arrange the time, place, etc. When it's time to pay the tab, Couple No. 1 wishes to pay the tab. Couple No. 2 will not allow it, and insists on separate checks, saying, "Times have changed — now people handle it their own way."

This takes away from the pleasure of initiating the time spent together. Have times changed?

OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: For some couples, yes. It's possible that Couple No. 2 cannot afford to pay for dinner for four — and going "dutch" is a way to keep dining out within their budget. Do it their way, and don't make an issue of it.

Replace metal filing cabinet

Pop confession: Where do you keep your personal family records, files and paperwork? Stuffed in a box? Shoved in the back of several kitchen drawers?

Perhaps you're the proud owner of a metal file cabinet that's too grotesque to keep anywhere but the garage. I was. Until mold got my passport.

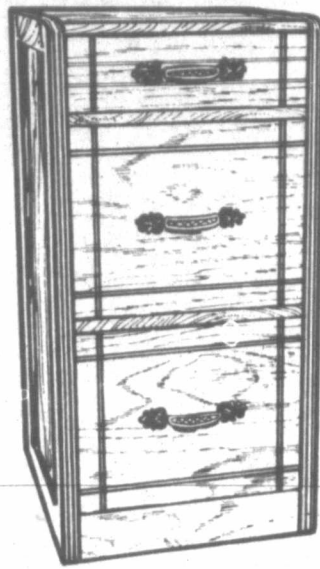

It was just one of those simple projects I had never gotten around to. With the mold as motivation to get started, I was surprised at how easy it was to build a handsome wooden filing cabinet.

At 17x34x20 inches, the cabinet features two spacious file drawers and a shallow top drawer for storage of computer disks or miscellaneous items. Cost is reduced by the use of plywood panels in the frame-and-panel wall construction.

Our detailed plans include a materials list and illustrated step-by-step cutting and assembly instructions for the filing cabinet and for a small rolling file organizer and a modular bookcase made of inexpensive 2x and 1x8 lumber.

Also available are plans for our knockout roll-top desk, an ambitious project but one you'll be proud to display, with raised-panel construction.

To order plans for the filing cabinet, file organizer and 2x4 bookcase, specify Project No. 2930 and send $4.95; for the roll-top desk, specify No. 540, $9.95. Or, save a dollar and order both plans for only $13.90.

Do-it-yourself wooden filing cabinet is a handsome answer to home clutter.

Mail to: The Woodwright, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. 74008-1000. Include $2.95 if you'd like our catalog, which includes $16 worth of coupons.

For the filing cabinet, I used about 50 linear feet of 3/4x8-inch oak and a 4x6-foot piece of 1/2-inch oak plywood.

Each cabinet side wall is a frame-and-panel. Cut from oak four stiles 2 1/4x34 inches, and four rails 2 1/4x20. Cut two plywood panels 16x30.

The stiles and rails are lap cut at the ends to fit together, and they are dadoed along the center-facing edges to accommodate the panels.

Assemble the two side walls and round off the upper front corners. I used a shaper to cut a decorative double bead along the top and front edges of each side wall.

For the back wall, cut two rails 2 1/4x15, two stiles 2 1/4x33, and one plywood panel 11x29. Cut the remaining parts from solid oak, splining where necessary: Top 15x20 inches, two drawer supports 15x19, facer 3x15, two upper drawer slides 1/2x18, eight lower drawer slides 1 1/2x17 1/2.

Round off the upper front edge of the top (a 15-inch edge). Assemble the basic cabinet, placing the top, back, facer and drawer supports between the sides. The facer is flush at the bottom, one drawer support is 4 inches below the top, and the other drawer support is 12 1/2 inches below that.

Attach the lower drawer slides to the side walls in pairs, even on each side, within the openings for the two large drawers. Attach a single upper drawer slide to each side wall 1/4 inch above the top drawer support.

The drawers are assembled with simple butt joints, bottom support strips and outer slides. The sides and floors are cut from plywood.

I compartmentalized the top drawer. For each decorative drawer face, I routed horizontal and vertical straight lines in a crosshatch pattern, using a narrow straight bit. I used decorative metal pulls.

Arts, crafts festival to feature Amarilloan

Amarillo artist Nancy Brown will be the featured artist for the Top of Texas Fine Arts and Crafts Festival this weekend at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Featuring artists and craftsmen from a four-state area, the Pampa Fine Arts Association festival will be open to the public from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday.

A native Texan, Brown has a bachelor of fine arts degree from West Texas State University at Canyon. She and her husband Jim have lived in Denver, Colo., and Phoenix, Ariz., before returning to Amarillo in 1986. They have two children, Erik, 9, and Kimberly, 7.

Brown has continued to study art whenever possible. She has studied with Diane Maxey in Phoenix and has taken workshops from Frank Webb, Robert E. Wood and Gayle Smith.

She enjoys painting a variety of subject matter, especially everyday objects that many others might not take the time to notice. Flowers, fruits and gardening tools provide endless inspiration for her new designs. Figure painting and portraits are also of special interest to her.

After moving back to Amarillo, Brown began teaching watercolor in her home studio. She has won several awards for her work and has participated in various juried shows, including the Rio Bravo Watercolorist Tri-State Aqua Media Exhibition in El Paso.

Her works may be seen at James M. Haney Gallery and M. Wade Myers in Amarillo.

One of her paintings, A Poet's Garden, will be given as a door prize at the festival.

More than 35 exhibitors will be displaying their works at the 21st annual festival in Pampa, including paintings, jewelry, dolls, wood-working, pottery, calligraphy, wheat weaving, clothes, ceramics, stained glass, fabric and illuminated verse.

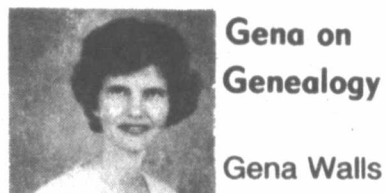

Admission is free.

Twins topple Tigers

By MIKE NADEL
AP Sports Writer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Jack Morris had never lost to the Twins in Minnesota. And during this American League season, Doyle Alexander had not lost to anyone, anywhere.

But both Detroit right-handers met their demise in the American League playoffs with the Twins taking a 2-1 lead over the Tigers in the best-of-seven series.

"We definitely feel good about what's happened the last two days," said Minnesota's Tom Brunansky, whose second-inning RBI double broke the ice against Morris in Thursday night's 6-3 victory in Game 2.

"We beat two of the best in Doyle Alexander and Jack Morris," said Dan Gladden, whose two-out, two-run single in the fourth put the Twins up 5-2. "I think that shows a little bit of the character of the Minnesota Twins."

Alexander, Wednesday's 8-5 loser, was 9-0 in the regular season after the Tigers acquired him Aug. 12 from Atlanta. He was 2-0 against the Twins, as was Morris — the winningest pitcher of the 1980s, who had been 11-0 in Minnesota including 8-0 in the Metro-dome.

On paper, it had seemed the Tigers were favored and the Twins were in trouble.

"Paper doesn't win games," said Morris, who had said before the game that he desperately wanted to win to prove that Twins Executive Vice President Andy MacPhail erred in not signing him. Last December, the St. Paul native had come to town wearing his full-length, black mink coat and offering to join the Twins as a $2 million free agent.

The AL East champion Tigers are counting on their prowess at Tiger Stadium — a 54-27 home record that was second only to the Twins' major-league leading 56-25 home mark — and Minnesota's shabby road record. At 29-52, the AL West champion Twins had the worst road showing of any division winner in big-league history. "I don't think we're going to get swept in Detroit," said Minnesota right-hander Bert Blyleven, who allowed seven hits in 7 1-3 innings Thursday. "I think we'll win it there."

After today's travel day, the teams will meet Saturday at 1:07 p.m. EDT at Tiger Stadium for Game 3. Minnesota rookie Les Straker, 8-10, will face Detroit right-hander Walt Terrell, 17-10. Game 4 is scheduled for Sunday night and Game 5, if necessary, would be Monday afternoon.

Despite needing to take four of five games to prevent the Twins from winning their first AL pennant since 1965, Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson remained calm.

Morris, who won a $1.85 million contract from the Tigers in arbitration after no team would meet his demands, said the pitch he threw to Tim Lardner with two outs in the second inning "was my poorest pitch, my biggest mistake, a nothing pitch, a slider down the middle."

Lardner, a .191 hitter during the season who was 0-for-3 with two strikeouts Wednesday, lined a two-run double to left field, putting the Twins ahead for good at 3-2.

The rest of Lardner's contribution came on defense, where he caught Blyleven and guided the curveballer through a rocky start. Blyleven, who led the majors in homers-allowed with 46, had put the Twins in a 2-0 hole by yielding Chet Lemon's two-run homer in the top of the second.

Improving Texas may test OU

By HERSCHEL NISSENON
AP Football Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Even though Oklahoma is a five-touchdown favorite, Coach Barry Switzer thinks Saturday's date with Texas is just what his No. 1-ranked team needs after hardly breaking a sweat in rolling over its first four opponents by a combined score of 218-17.

"I don't care what people say, Texas is still Texas," says Switzer, who gets more uptight for this annual Red River range war than for any other game.

"The only way we will get better is to play good people, and believe me we will get a test this Saturday. They have some good athletes and seem to be playing defense better than they did a year ago. "I also believe they are improving their offense at a rapid pace. They are definitely the best team we have played to date."

That, of course, is a left-handed compliment. The closest game Oklahoma has played was a 28-0 pasting of North Carolina, one of the Atlantic Coast Conference's better teams. North Texas State fell 69-14, Tulsa 65-0, Iowa State 56-3.

Oklahoma leads the nation in scoring offense (54.5 points a game) and defense (4.3), total offense (544.2 yards), rushing (442.3), total defense (150.0) and passing defense (89.8).

But they are only second in rushing defense (60.3 to Clemson's 57.8), so perhaps Texas, which is 15th in rushing with a 242.5-yard average, can take advantage of that flaw.

"We are still in the process of improving ourselves, and we cannot afford to make some of the mistakes we have been making," Switzer says. "The kicking game has always been an integral part of this battle, and that concerns me, as I don't feel we are executing in that area like we must."

Only Darrell Royal, who was involved in 23 Oklahoma-Texas games — three as a player for Oklahoma and 20 as Texas' head coach — has participated in this rivalry more than Switzer, who will take that walk for the 22nd time, 15th as head coach (he is 7-5-2).

It will be the 20th meeting with Oklahoma for Texas' David McWilliams.

'Horns' mentor says Sooners deserve heavy favorite's role

By The Associated Press

Both David McWilliams and Barry Switzer have reason to feel a little edgy this week.

Texas is a 31-point underdog to Oklahoma Saturday, the biggest point spread in the series' 82-game history.

It will be the 20th meeting with Oklahoma for McWilliams, but his first as head coach of the Longhorns. He was 3-0 against the Sooners as a player from 1961-63 and 6-8-2 as an assistant coach from 1970-85.

"Let's face reality," McWilliams said. "They are a better team than we are. But we feel that we are an improving team. But certainly it is an understatement to say that we are big underdogs. We will have to play our very best just to stay in the game with them."

McWilliams says No. 1-ranked Oklahoma, 4-0, deserves its heavy-favorite role against the Longhorns, but his players think Texas' day is coming.

The Longhorns, 2-2, managed a 15-15 tie in 1984 on a disputed call wiping out an apparent Oklahoma pass interception, was shut down 14-7 in 1985 and got run over, 47-12, last year.

Meanwhile, in the midst of pre-game preparations, the Dallas Morning News reported Tuesday that for years, some OU players netted as much as $4,000 per season from complimentary tickets that were issued to them and then sold to boosters at inflated prices.

In a copyright story, the News also said a bank that was headed at the time by former OU president George Lynn Cross and prominent OU booster Jack Black gave preferential consideration to selected members of the OU squad.

Switzer and university and bank officials denied the allegations.

In other Top 20 action Saturday it will be No. 2 Nebraska vs. Kansas; No. 3 Miami, Fla. vs. Maryland; No. 4 Notre Dame vs. Pittsburgh; No. 5 Auburn vs. Vanderbilt; No. 6 Florida State at Southern Mississippi; No. 7 Louisiana State vs. No. 16

Despite being a heavy favorite, Switzer is also a little nervous.

"I don't care what people say, Texas is still Texas," Switzer said. "The only way we will get better is to play good people, and believe me we will get a test this Saturday. They have some good athletes and seem to be playing defense better than they did a year ago."

Oklahoma leads the nation in scoring offense (54.5 points a game) and defense (4.3), total offense (544.2 yards), rushing (442.3), total defense (150.0) and passing defense (89.8).

Kansas at No. 2 Nebraska

Kansas only beat Southern Illinois 16-15 last week, a team that lost to Delta State 24-16. Nebraska beat the Jayhawks 70-0 last year and has outscored them 611-66 in their last 13 meetings.

Maryland at No. 3 Miami, Fla.

It's the first time this season the Hurricanes haven't played a Top Twenty team. Miami sees this game as revenge for Maryland's record comeback from a 31-0 deficit to a 42-40 victory three years ago.

No. 4 Notre Dame at Pitt

With their rugged schedule, the Fighting Irish can't begin looking ahead to their Nov. 28 date with Miami quite this early. This is an emotional homecoming for former Pitt Coach Foge Fazio, now Lou Holtz's defensive coordinator. Notre Dame, a 10-9 loser to Pitt last season, is a touchdown favorite.

Vanderbilt at No. 5 Auburn

At least Vanderbilt Coach Watson Brown knew brother Mack and Tulan

Watson Brown knew brother Mack and Tulane wouldn't roll it up last week. The Tigers have won all three meetings since 1955, by a combined 132-51.

No. 6 Florida State at Southern Mississippi

A loss for the Seminoles, 4-1-0, could cost a major bowl bid.

No. 7 Louisiana State at No. 16 Georgia

The mystery is where LSU's offense has gone. The Tigers are averaging 29.6 points and 433.6 yards a game, but most of that came in early routs over Fullerton State and Rice.

No. 8 Clemson at Virginia

Clemson is 4-0 and possibly heading for an Orange Bowl date. Virginia has rallied from an 0-8 start to win its last two games.

Indiana at No. 9 Ohio State

Except for a 0-0 tie in 1959, the Hoosiers have lost every game to the Buckeyes since 1951 and have been outscored 995-287.

Pampa soccer club seeking donations for high school program

The Pampa High School Varsity Soccer Club is seeking donations to help support the high school soccer program, which will be launched this spring at PHS.

Club President Steve Phillips said the donations will be used mainly to purchase equipment and uniforms.

"Any donation, no matter how small or large, will assure continued growth," Phillips said.

School board members this past August voted approval of a boys soccer team, which will play the four Amarillo schools in non-UIL sanctioned matches starting in April. A girls program is tentatively scheduled to begin a year later. Home matches will be played at the high school football practice field.

"At the end of this fund drive, members of the club plan to associate with the Harvester Booster Club to support all athletic programs at Pampa High School," Phillips said.

Donations may be mailed to Pampa High School Varsity Soccer Club, Steve Osborn, treasurer; P.O. Box 2516, Pampa, Tex. 79066.

They're dancin' in Anson

ANSON (AP) — There were no lightning bolts and the earth did not rend asunder, but there was plenty of legal toe-stepping when this tiny West Texas town celebrated an end to a 54-year-old ban on public dancing.

Thursday night's victory dance was sponsored by the Footloose Club, which engineered the defeat of the city ordinance that drew international attention.

"It's nice to come to a dance and not have to shut it down," Assistant Police Chief Ralph Simpson said outside Pioneer Hall as it was filling up Thursday night. "People are having a good time, and they earned it. They worked hard for this."

Residents say the ordinance, on the books until April, was passed 54 years ago. But old-timers say the ban on dancing may date back 76 years.

In April, the Anson City Council, responding to pressure, passed a law that allowed dances, but only under strict conditions that prevented all but a few dances to be held in the city.

In August, however, the council passed a less restrictive ordinance that the city's dance advocates said finally made regular dances possible.

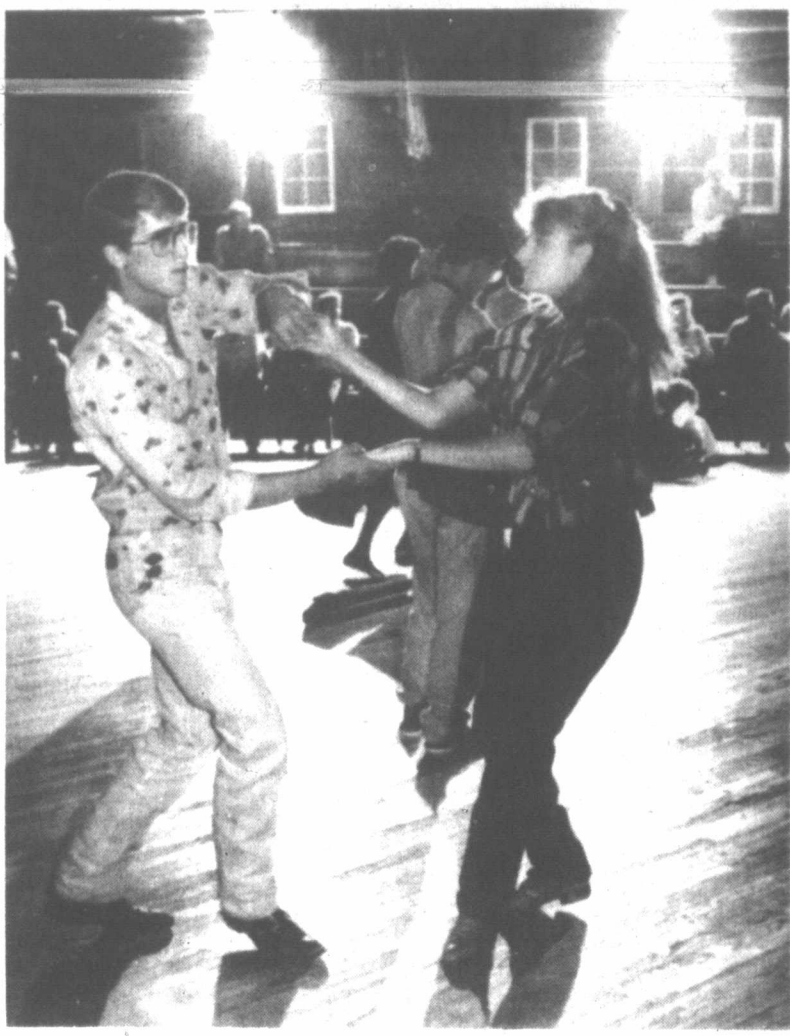

A rodeo dance was held 10 days later, followed two months later by Thursday's victory celebration.

"This means we can finally have fun," said Maggie Jimenez, 14. Her friend, Becky Brewer, 16, added, "That's right. Normally, what we can do in Anson is nothing. Now, we can have a prom, just like everyone else."

J. V. Masters, 80, brought his date, Lucille McDuff. The Anson couple said they have danced for many years, but never in their hometown.

"He's a wonderful dancer," McDuff said. Masters said he couldn't say he was a good dancer, but "I have a good way of holding the girls."

Playing at the dance was the Clifton Terry from Sweetwater and Kelly Head from Roby were the first couple on the floor in Anson.

country western band, Mason-Dixon. The band waived its usual $5,000 fee for the evening. Sweetwater-based Bittercreek opened the event.

"This is something we wanted to do," said Jerry Dengler of Mason-Dixon. "It's for the kids and a way to show that everybody dancing and having a good time doesn't mean trouble." The Footloose Club was named after a 1984 movie about a town where teenagers battled for the right to dance.

The opposition forces were noticeable by their silence and their absence Thursday.

The Rev. Bob Evans, of the Northside Baptist Church, and Leon Shurr, minister of the Church of Christ, could not be reached for comment. Local ministers had warned that dance-loses could lead to drinking and sexual promiscuity.

Second case reported of lab worker contracting AIDS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal authorities say they are planning a new monitoring program for laboratory workers who handle concentrations of the AIDS virus following disclosure of a second worker becoming infected on the job.

National Institutes of Health officials said Thursday that a worker at a laboratory contracted to do AIDS work for the government apparently became infected when his or her hand was cut accidentally during the process of concentrating the virus.

The worker, whom NIH did not identify, was employed at one of a handful of contractor labs doing such work in the Washington area. The worker was handling virus concentrates used for research and making screening tests for acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Authorities last month disclosed the first such case when a worker at another Washington lab, who later acknowledged having cuts or abrasions of the skin, apparently had direct contact with concentrated virus because of leaky equipment or defective protective gloves.

Even with a second infection incident coming to light, officials said, existing occupational safety guidelines for lab workers are adequate and provide sufficient protection if followed.

Dr. Robert McKinney, director of the NIH's division of safety, said in an interview that federal health authorities began considering routine monitoring of these lab workers when they found out about the second incident.

Until now, workers dealing with concentrated virus were checked only for AIDS virus antibodies — an indication of infection — if they volunteered for certain studies, he said.

"We are looking at a program where people would be checked routinely," McKinney said. "Based on what we know about the AIDS virus, we foresee testing every six months. If there is an accident where there is a likelihood of exposure, that interval would be shortened."

"We anticipate we would have this program in place in no longer than 60 days," he continued. Between 50 and 70 people who handle concentrated AIDS virus are employed at seven facilities around the country involved in large-scale production of the agent, he said.

While participation in the routine monitoring still would be voluntary, McKinney said, "we would hope these people would recognize the value of the program."

The second infection case involved a worker who was contaminated late in 1985, officials said, and antibodies to the virus were first detected in May 1986.

However, because of a "communications breakdown," McKinney said, the worker and NIH safety officials found out about the infection only recently.

Clements appears to link twin plants with Mexican fight against drugs

EL PASO (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he was only talking about tit-for-tat and not threatening economic retaliation if Mexico doesn't do more to combat drug traffickers.

Clements on Thursday linked the fight against drug traffic with the twin-plant program at a news conference following a tour of a Drug Enforcement Administration facility.

Under the twin-plant concept, a company makes components in the United States, ships them to a sister factory in Mexico for assembly, then ships them back to the United States for distribution.

Clements said twin plants on the Mexico-Texas border employ 103,000 Mexicans and about 20,000 Texans. He said Wednesday he plans to encourage companies to set up twin plants in Texas to raise employment on both sides of the border.

Clements was asked what he plans to say regarding drug traffic when he attends an upcoming conference between U.S. and Mexican border governors.

"This is a tradeoff between legitimate dollars and illegitimate dollars," Clements said. "When we start talking about the twin plants ... and we're talking about the employment ... well, is that important to Mexico? How important is it to raise that employment level from 103 (thousand) to 203?"

"And if we're going to cooperate in doing those kinds of things to bring plants to the border and help Mexicans in that regard, we have every right to expect reciprocation from them on our priorities. And our priorities will include, for instance, drug traffic."

Asked if he was threatening to discourage companies from locating twin plants in Texas if Mexico doesn't do more to combat drug traffic, Clements said: "I didn't ever use the word 'threat.' That's your word. I would certainly make clear what my priorities are and I certainly would be sympathetic to their (Mexican governors') priorities."

He then listed some of those priorities: twin plants, scholarships and international bridges.

Pressed on the issue, Clements appeared to become exasperated and stalked away from the lectern while a reporter was asking a question, ending the news conference.

Before the comments about twin plants and drug traffic, Clements said he would work to get volunteer groups involved in educating children about drug use.

The conference of border governors originally had been scheduled for earlier this week in Las Cruces, N.M., but was postponed because of political developments in Mexico. Clements said it has been rescheduled for Dec. 10 and 11 in Las Cruces.

Police find body of missing A&I student

KINGSVILLE (AP) — Police searched today for a man charged in the strangulation death of a Texas A&I student whose body was found in the trunk of a car, ending an extensive search.

The body of Mary Beth Kunkel, a 19-year-old business major and former cheerleader and high school homecoming queen, was found late Wednesday in a car at the home of Richard Lewis Brimage Jr.

Justice of the Peace Charles G. Bigger Thursday issued an arrest warrant for Brimage, 31, Thursday on charges of capital murder.

Authorities said they don't know Brimage's whereabouts and last night issued a statewide bulletin seeking his arrest, police Capt. George Gomez said.

Brimage was on parole for a forgery conviction and had been released by the Texas Department of Corrections on Jan. 9, Adan Munoz Jr., a district attorney's investigator, said.

Kingsville lawyer Roy Turcotte summoned police to the home, which he was checking for the owners, who are vacationing in Mexico, police said.

"When I walked inside, I felt something was wrong, and so I went to the police department," Turcotte said. He didn't elaborate on what he felt "wrong."

Concern over Kunkel's disappearance Monday spurred businessmen to offer a $10,000 reward, and friends had distributed thousands of fliers about her in Kingsville and surrounding towns.

Introducing Spell-Right 1™
 Electronic Spelling Dictionary

XE-2000
 Electronic Typewriter

It catches your mistakes before you do.

- It watches your spelling, catches your errors, finds them for you... and takes them away with a single touch.
- 35,000 word dictionary* (four times the average vocabulary).
- WordEraser™ Key removes words, phrases quickly... almost invisibly.
- With Spell-Right, half-space key, memory correction and auto-relocate the XE-2000 has the most complete correcting system on any electronic portable in its price range.
