Forecasters see no relief from heat wave

By The Associated Press

A 40-year-old man has died of heatstroke in Dallas as record high temperatures continued across much of Texas.

The Dallas County Medical Examiner's office said the man, who was not identified pending notification of relatives, was found unconscious earlier this week beside a road in northwest Dallas.

The man died Tuesday, but authorities did not determine the cause of death until Wednesday, authorities said.

At least 30 Texas cities recorded highs above the 100-degree mark Wednesday, pushing the use of electricity and water to higher levels, too.

Forecasters had little hope for sun-scorched Texans as they say it will be at least Sunday or Monday before a cool front reaches the state with enough power to drop temperatures by even a few degrees.

Wichita Falls, at 110 degrees Wednesday, tied a record set in 1980 for the same date and registered the state's high.

Houston's 101 degrees broke that city's record of 99 degrees in 1980, as did Dallas-Fort Worth with its 106-degree reading and its sixth day in a row over 100 degrees.

Beaumont was not as hot — 99 degrees — but that was enough to break a high mark set more than 20 years ago in 1962.

Waco, Presidio and Laredo recorded 107 degrees.

Marfa, with a chilly 56 degrees Wednesday morning, topped out at 99, according to the National Weather Service.

No rain had been reported around the state, and only a few paltry showers fell tauntingly off the lower coast.

Even nightfall failed to bring relief. Temperatures remained in the 90s Wednesday night.

A stubborn high pressure center hovering above the area is responsible for the heat wave, the weather service said.

As air conditioners hummed, Texas Utilities in Dallas set a new all-time peak demand at 5 p.m. Wednesday of 16,537,000 kilowatts or about 4 percent higher than last year's peak, said spokesman Dick Ramsey.

"We've still got something a little bit less than 15 percent reserve capacity, so we're still in reasonably good shape to take care of the needs," he said.

"Looking back at the summer of 1980, we had 60 some consecutive days of 100-degree temperatures. We kept up with that."

There were 69 consecutive days of 100 and above temperatures that summer in Dallas and much of the rest of the state.

Dallas Water Utilities officials reported record water consumption on Tuesday, and expected the trend to last through the weekend. Residents used 562 million gallons — up from the 560 million gallons of Aug. 22 last year.

In Wichita Falls, homeowners were put on lawn-watering schedules to conserve in the face of peak demand.

Law enforcement officers will be patrolling the city to back up the lawn-watering restrictions, Wichita Falls officials said. The measures ban watering outside from 5 p.m. to midnight.

Residents may water outside on an odd-even day system, corresponding to their address number. Violators face fines of up to $200.

"We came close to crashing the system," said Public Works Director George Bonnett.

Golf course tops county's agenda

Supporters of a public golf course in Pampa plan to submit a cost estimate for construction and maintenance of an 18-hole course to the Gray County Commissioners when they meet at 9:30 a.m. Friday.

County Judge Carl Kennedy said members of the Pampa Public Golf Association plan to present the cost estimate to the court, which is considering lending county equipment, personnel and funds left over from the sale of Highland General Hospital for the project.

An informal, non-binding mail balloting of county voters and their families in June showed strong support for the idea of county involvement.

John Cleavinger, secretary-treasurer of the golf association has estimated cost of construction will be about $600,000. Association president Buddy Epperson said at an association meeting last Thursday that he had met with Bob Keller, a land developer who is donating land for the proposed course, an area golf pro and a local golfing equipment salesman in order to determine construction cost for the course.

At the meeting, Epperson urged course supporters to attend the commissioners' meeting because, he said, he expects the commissioners to make their feelings known Friday. He said construction could be completed by September, 1987, if the commissioners approve county participation.

Kennedy said he would like to see the court reach a decision Friday but added he has no way of knowing if that will be the case.

Epperson said if the commissioners vote the proposal down, the next step will be a meeting of charter association members to determine what to do next.

In other action, the commissioners plan to:

- continue discussions about implementing the indigent health care law in Gray County.

- consider participation in a self-insurance program for liability and motor vehicle insurance proposed by the Texas Association of Counties.

- designate election judges for the November 4 general election.
- discuss changes in the insurance policy for county equipment.

- pay salaries and bills and consider time deposits and transfers as recommended by County Auditor A.C. Malone.

Celanese manager transferred

Celanese Pampa Plant Manager Don Lehman will be leaving Pampa to head up the business services and operations division of Virginia Chemicals Inc., a Celanese company, the corporation announced today.

Lehman has been plant manager in Pampa since February, 1985. While here, he served on the board of directors of the Pampa Industrial Foundation, Chamber of Commerce, Coronado Community Hospital and Adobe Walls Boy Scout Council. He was also a Rotary Club member.

His new post takes him to Portsmouth, Va., where he will be responsible for the provision of business services and operations support for existing Virginia Chemical businesses, as well as commercial development ventures, under the direction of the general manager. He also will direct the manufacturing, engineering, research, purchasing, finance and business information activities of the company.

Lehman said he considers the new job a promotion. He and his family will reside in Virginia Beach, Va.

No replacement has been chosen yet. Lehman predicted a replacement would be named by the end of next week.

The transfer marks the second time Lehman has left the Pampa plant. He was a production supervisor here from 1976 until 1979 when he was transferred to Houston as a process engineer superintendent at the Celanese Clear Lake plant.

He began his 17-year career with Celanese in 1969 as a process engineer at the company's plant in Bay City. He has also managed international planning and business development for Celanese operations in Dallas and served as a technical manager at the company's Bishop Plant in Corpus Christi.

Lehman received a bachelor of science degree in chemical engineering from Oklahoma State University in 1969 and has completed master's coursework at the University of Houston. He and his wife Laura, a registered nurse, have three children, Shelby, Shana and John.

DON LEHMAN

Senate resurrects Gramm-Rudman

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is trying to bring new discipline to Congress' lagging deficit-cutting program by restoring automatic spending cuts to the Gramm-Rudman law.

The Senate voted 63-36 Wednesday to revive the cuts by changing the mechanism that the Supreme Court struck down this month.

The court said the original scheme violated the Constitution's separation-of-powers doctrine because the comptroller general — an officer of Congress — would have ordered the executive branch's spending cuts.

Gramm-Rudman requires Congress and the president to keep next year's deficit below $144 billion. But few steps toward the goal have been taken — in part, lawmakers say, because the Supreme Court removed the threat of the across-the-board cuts.

The new plan gives the comptroller's job to the president's budget director with tight constraints on how he would carry it out. Congress would reserve for itself the right to dictate the economic estimates that would be the basis for the cuts.

Restoring automatic cuts would "commit ourselves once again to balance the budget, to make the hard choices," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

Preliminary economic projections for fiscal 1987 were included in the amendment, although Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., the budget committee chairman, said they would be updated before final passage by Congress.

Based on information provided by the Congressional Budget Office and the president's Office of Management and Budget, the legislation envisions 3.5 percent average growth for the economy for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, with continued low inflation and an average three-year Treasury bill rate of 6.2 percent.

The OMB and CBO plan to release their updated economic forecasts in the next two weeks, and then on Aug. 20 will release their formal deficit projections under Gramm-Rudman. The comptroller general would still review those reports, but hand over to OMB the final certification of the required spending cuts.

Gramm-Rudman requires that the cuts be ordered if the final report projects a deficit exceeding the target by more than $10 billion. Congress could let the cuts take effect or pass alternative cuts or taxes — or even negate the order — subject to President Reagan's signature or veto.

So far, most estimates say the automatic cuts would be called into play because Congress has completed virtually none of its deficit-cutting initiatives. Domenici said Wednesday that the House and Senate were falling short in pending legislation designed to meet the goals of the fiscal 1987 budget.

Local rate rises despite jobs gains

Continued influx of people into the job market who had not previously sought employment was apparently responsible for the unemployment rate in Pampa and Gray County reaching another record high in June.

Even though the number of people holding jobs increased substantially from May, Pampa's unemployment rate increased a full percentage point to 13.7 and the Gray County rate shot up from 12.9 to 14.0.

Charles Vance, director of the Pampa office of the Texas Employment Commission, had said the 12.7 rate registered in May was the highest in the 24 years he's been here.

The unemployment rates rose to the new highs even though TEC statistics showed that Pampa had 168 more persons holding jobs than the previous month and Gray County had 206 more.

But the number of people listed as unemployed rose from 1,479 to 1,647 in the city and from 1,863 to 2,074 in the county.

The city's total labor force rose from 11,671 to 12,007 during the month and the county labor force increased from 14,391 to 14,808 as new jobseekers entered the labor market.

Vance said his office filled about 100 jobs during June, most unskilled labor, food service and retail sales positions. He said those types of jobs continued to be about all his office has to offer.

Two of the other four counties served by the local TEC office were also shown with more people holding jobs, but a higher unemployment rate.

Hemphill's number of employed residents increased from 2,110 to 2,170. But the number listed as unemployed climbed from 248 to 306, boosting the jobless rate from 10.5 to 12.4 percent.

The statistics for Wheeler County showed 2,979 jobholders, compared to 2,795 in May. But the number unemployed increased by 50 to 276 and the unemployment rates rose one percentage point to 8.5.

Roberts County, where the unemployment rate fluctuates considerably because of the small population, saw its number of jobholders drop from 647 to 626 and the number of unemployed persons increase by four to 65. That pushed the jobless rate from 8.6 to 9.4 percent.

Lipscomb County's unemployment rate was virtually unchanged, increasing from 4.8 to 5.0 percent.

LOUISE SEWELL McDOWELL

Louise Sewell McDowell, 87, died Wednesday afternoon at her home. Services for Mrs. McDowell are to be at 10:30 a.m. Friday, at Carmichael-Whitley Colonial Chapel with the Rev. Max Browning, pastor of the First United Methodist Church, officiating. Cremation will follow.

Mrs. McDowell was born Jan. 30, 1899, in Miami. She was raised in Miami where she was a charter member of the First Christian Church. She married Rufus Sewell who preceded her in death in February 1952. She married H.C. "Tuffy" McDowell on April 12, 1976. He died on April 5, 1981. Holding more than 1,000 hours of volunteer service, Mrs. McDowell was an active member of the First Methodist Church of Pampa, a Gray Lady at Highland General Hospital and member and past chairman of the Gray-Roberts chapter of the American Red Cross. She was the first recipient of the Highland General Hospital Lifetime Volunteer pin.

In recognition of her distinguished service to the community, Mrs. McDowell was named Outstanding Woman of Altrusa Club of Pampa for 1979. In 1974, Beta Sigma Phi awarded her their Woman of the Year honor. Two years ago, Mrs. McDowell was again honored by Altrusa Club of Pampa for her 26 years of membership. She was also a member of the Pampa chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution and of the Pampa Knife & Fork Club.

Survivors include one son, R.D. Sewell of Andrews; two sisters, Florence Dodson of Miami and Sybil Wade of Hamlin; three brothers, Buss Weckesser of Miami, Sylvester Weckesser of Spearman and Elmer Weckesser of Reno, Nev.; and one grandson, Terry Sewell of Hawaii.

WENDELL JORDAN

AMARILLO - Services for Wendell Jordan, 54, of Amarillo, area Optimist Club leader, will be at 10 a.m. Friday at Schooler-Gordon Bell Avenue Chapel in Amarillo. Officiating will be Rev. Jim W. Smith of St. Stephen United Methodist Church.

Graveside services will be at 2 p.m. Friday in Floyd County Memorial Park Cemetery at Floydada with Rev. Earl Blair, Floydada Methodist Church pastor, officiating.

Arrangements are under the direction of Schooler-Gordon Bell Avenue Chapel.

Mr. Jordan died Tuesday at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo.

Born in Ralls on Nov. 29, 1931, he had been a resident of Amarillo for the past five years. He was a salesman for D&B Construction. He was the current president of the Optimist Club of Southwest Amarillo and the lieutenant governor of Zone 1, North Texas District, Optimists International.

Survivors include his wife, Margaret, of the home; two daughters, Jami Jordan, of the home, and Mrs. Joy Breed, Floydada; a son, Dean Jordan, Oklahoma City, Okla.; four stepsons, Steve Swaim, David Swaim and Jerry Swaim, all of Amarillo, and Robin Cochran, Hale Center; a sister, Mrs. Sue Moore, Floydada; two brothers, Wayne Jordan and Max Jordan, both of Amarillo; five grandchildren and two stepgrandchildren.

The family requests memorials be made to Optimist Club of Southwest Amarillo.

Rehnquist denies allegations during confirmation hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court Justice William H. Rehnquist, unapologetic about his staunch conservatism and denying any wrongdoing as a political operative two decades ago, says he can be an effective symbol of justice for all.

Rehnquist, who sat through more than five hours of Senate Judiciary Committee questioning Wednesday, was scheduled to continue testifying today.

More than 60 other witnesses were scheduled to testify, and Committee Chairman Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said he was prepared to preside over a marathon session today so the hearings that began Tuesday could be concluded by midday Friday.

In his Wednesday appearance, Rehnquist had to weather intensive questioning from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., over allegations he harassed and intimidated black and Hispanic voters in Phoenix, Ariz., in the early 1960s as part of a state Republican Party ballot-security program.

Rehnquist said he does not remember whether he ever challenged anyone's right to vote, a routine and proper endeavor by poll watchers, but said he never tried to block lawful voters from casting ballots.

"If you're talking about harassment or intimidation, I categorically deny that," Rehnquist told Kennedy.

Ten witnesses who Democrats say are ready to testify they saw Rehnquist try to intimidate minority voters are scheduled to appear before the committee Friday.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., said he harbored questions about Rehnquist's "sensitivity to civil rights and liberties."

"I don't see someone who is a champion for justice for all... for minorities and women, people who don't have a champion and need one," Simon said. "Do you think you can be an effective symbol for justice for all?"

Rehnquist answered, "Yes, I do."

The nominee seemed embarrassed when Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., disclosed that a Greensboro, Vt., home Rehnquist bought in 1974 has a restrictive deed barring him from selling it to anyone "of the Hebrew race."

Rehnquist said he was amazed to find out days ago about the restriction, calling it "quite obnoxious."

He called the restriction "meaningless in today's world — it is unenforceable under the Constitution or federal law."

REHNQUIST...undergoes grilling

Asked by Leahy if he planned to have the restriction stricken from the deed, Rehnquist answered, "If there's a procedure under Vermont law (for that) certainly would go through it."

Lawyers contacted in Vermont by The Associated Press said such excisions are difficult but possible under state law. They said such discriminatory provisions are rare in Vermont property deeds.

Under questioning from Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., Rehnquist testified that as a young law clerk in 1952 he never decided how he would have voted in the then-pending decision over the constitutionality of racially segregated public schools.

"I don't think I reached a conclusion," he said of the case that resulted in a landmark 1954 decision outlawing such segregation. Rehnquist has drawn criticism from Kennedy and numerous civil rights groups for his acknowledged authorship of a memo supporting an 1896 Supreme Court decision that upheld racial segregation in public accommodations.

He said Wednesday that he thought as a law clerk the 1896 Plessy vs. Ferguson decision was wrongly decided but that it was significant Congress had never acted to blunt the ruling's effect and, in fact, had required racially segregated schools in the District of Columbia.

Rehnquist, who in 1982 was hospitalized after suffering a withdrawal reaction while being taken off a potent drug for chronic back pain, won praise Wednesday for bearing up well to the long hearing, which at times proceeded at a snail's pace.

"There should be no question about your endurance after today," Simon said.

City officials blame the shortages on construction at one of the city's water treatment plants. The plants normally treat 36 million gallons per day, but city use has soared to nearly 60 million gallons per day during the recent hot temperatures.

The number of people seeking food and shelter at the Dallas Life Foundation has risen to 325 a day from the average of 225, and the heat is driving them in, said director Ray Bailey.

And at least five people were treated at Dallas hospitals Wednesday for heat exhaustion or heat-related illnesses.

"It's hard to get them (elderly) to open their windows," said Mary Marsh, supervisor for the Nurses for the City of Dallas Geriatric Nursing Program.

"There's a lot of crime fear that people will come in if they open them... or they won't leave to go to a cooler location."

Nine department stores designated Tuesday as "fan day" in Dallas and requested each employee to bring a fan to work for distribution to needy elderly residents.

Steel union may seek extension

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The United Steelworkers union today considered asking USX Corp. to extend contract talks beyond the midnight expiration, according to union sources.

The union leadership also considered offering USX Corp. a 48-hour strike notification agreement if it accepts extension of negotiations.

No talks were scheduled today. But Andy Toth, chairman of the USW's benefits committee, said, "We gave them (USX officials) our number and we told them where to call."

Hay shipments continuing, but farmers facing ruin

By MARTIN STEINBERG
 Associated Press Writer

Southern farmers face economic ruin from the region's record drought, which could hurt industry and governmental budgets if it continues, experts warn.

Hay shipments to feed starving livestock were continuing today from around the nation, including tons from the 700-acre farm of Jimmy Cagney's widow.

The drought, which extends from southern Pennsylvania to northern Florida, has cost farmers more than $2.3 billion, and an accompanying heat wave this month has contributed to 62 deaths in the South and Midwest.

"Basically, I don't know of any commodity in agriculture, whether it be honeybees or catfish, that is exempt from the drought situation," said Bob Nash, president of the 162,000-member Georgia Farm Bureau.

Maryland officials said Wednesday that 10 percent of the state's 18,000 farmers face ruin with no crops to pay off debts.

There "just isn't any hope for a lot of farmers," said Wayne A. Cawley Jr., Maryland's secretary of agriculture. "I advise them to quit while they're ahead."

Weather forecasters say no long-term relief is in sight from the drought, and that the heat wave from the Southern Plains to the Southeast should continue for days.

Record highs were reached Wednesday in more than 20 cities, including Mobile, Ala., where the 99-degree reading broke a 103-year-old record by one degree, and Tulsa, Okla., where the high soared to 110.

Houston's 101 degrees made Wednesday the fourth straight day of record heat, and the 107-degree reading in Springfield, Mo., broke the daily record for the fifth time in six days.

The heat sent scores of people in Dallas, New Orleans and Baton Rouge, La., to seek treatment Wednesday, and hospital officials said many victims were elderly or poor.

"The sad part is we've seen a lot of old people who are scared to go outside," said Dr. Jim Hogan in the emergency room at New Orleans's Charity Hospital, where more than a dozen heat victims were treated. "Instead, they'll stay in and close their windows, shut their doors and just sit without any air conditioning."

Agencies in Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Missouri and Tennessee have offered help with fans or air-conditioned shelters.

Help for farmers in the drought belt also was on the way.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture declared 39 South Carolina counties as disaster areas, clearing the way for low-interest loans.

In Washington, the House Agriculture Committee on Wednesday approved a bill that would send free grain to the hardest-hit parts, liberalize disaster payments to farmers and get the government to pick up half the cost for buying feed for qualifying livestock producers.

"This is everything we can do short of making it rain, which only the good Lord can do," said Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, committee chairman.

But Rep. Charles Hatcher and others said low-interest loans would be of little use.

Bullock sticking to estimate on budget deficit

AUSTIN (AP) — Although some officials reportedly question it, the $3.5 billion state budget deficit estimate stands, says Comptroller Bob Bullock.

"If anyone in state government wants to question the estimate, then they ought to call them a committee and get with it," Bullock said.

Bullock extended the challenge to "any members of the press or former members of my office," saying his record for accuracy over the past 10 years is unquestioned.

Bullock's comments followed news reports Wednesday that said some comptroller's office staff members and others had differing opinions on the size of the deficit, which has sparked a special legislative session beginning Aug. 6.

The state's slumping economy and the oil price drop have caused government revenues to fall well short of the $37.1 billion budgeted by the Legislature for the 1986 and 1987 fiscal years. Bullock in mid-June pegged the deficit at $2.3 billion and last week raised the projection to $3.5 billion.

The Dallas Times Herald reported that Bullock's "top experts" advised him in a memo the day he released the $3.5 billion estimate that their forecast of the shortage was nearly $700 million less.

The newspaper reported that the memo also identified about $400 million in savings and said, "Our best estimate is that Texas will face a $2.5 billion shortfall and the end of the current biennium."

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who is touring the state to urge support for a combination of spending cuts and a tax hike, told The Dallas Morning News that Bullock's projection included more than $600 million in contingencies the state might be forced to pay because of lawsuits and other matters.

However, Bullock said, those variables shouldn't have surprised anyone because he has pointed them out for weeks.

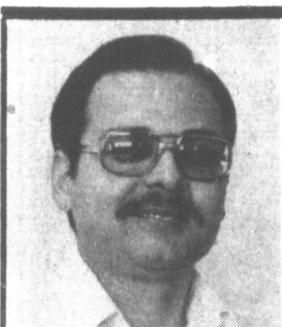

"We told Gov. (Mark) White about these contingencies. I mentioned them in my speech to the House May 30. But most of all, we listed these contingencies in black and white in the estimate when it was issued," Bullock said.

"These contingencies weren't in earlier estimates — though we made note of them — because many, like Gramm-Rudman (federal budget cuts) were still up in the air, but as time has gone by, they have become less 'contingent' and more probable," Bullock said.

On Tuesday, Bullock said it would be "Pollyannaish" to wait in dealing with the shortfall in the hopes the Texas economy will improve.

Gov. White on Wednesday continued meeting officials of big-money state agencies, reviewing areas where spending could be cut. The meetings included the human services, mental health and highway departments.

Let's be more honest, eh?

Old wives tales, irrational fears and ignorance apparently continue to be a bane in otherwise enlightened and educated societies. And it's especially hard to counterattack such foggy thinking when superstitions and ingrained prejudices create moods that resist reason and freedom of choice claims.

Such elements surface among those who applaud the U.S. Supreme Court's recent decision upholding sodomy laws.

Some of those who uphold the ruling try to claim that they do so not out of any moral or religious conviction — though they admit, directly or indirectly, that such convictions form a strong point of their support for sodomy laws. Instead, they cite a need to curb sexual perversion — a view which in itself proffers a moral outlook — and to prevent the spread of disease.

One recent letter writer, for example, states that "sex perverts... infiltrate and contaminate our society with their aberrant behaviour." Maybe many of them would like to do so, but a strong, moral, resistant adult individual is not going to allow himself or herself to be seduced unless the weakness is already there.

The letter writer also claims, however, that sex perverts "prey upon innocent children — seduce them and ruin their lives." He later indicates he's mainly talking about homosexuals when he refers to sexual perverts: "Innocent children who are seduced and subverted by homosexuals are victims."

Whether one considers homosexuality a perversion or not, most studies and statistics overwhelmingly indicate children are more likely to be seduced and sexually abused by heterosexuals, and those sex perverts are more likely to be ones children have trusted: parents, siblings, aunts, uncles, cousins, neighbors, family friends, babysitters and even teachers.

The percentage of strangers and gays involved in child sexual abuse is rather small in comparison to the damage done by so-called straights. And I have to say any child sexual abuse is distressing, wrenching, inexcusable under any situation. I certainly have no respect, none at all, for any child abuser, and I for one would just as soon lock up such abusers and throw away the key.

So the claim that sodomy laws help to prevent widespread seduction of our children holds little supporting weight. There are numerous other laws that can be used to punish child abusers; the sodomy laws upheld by the court really do not fall into that category.

Again, the letter writer appeals emotionally for protection for children by bringing in the disease element: "When a person has a contagious disease, common sense tells us to segregate, isolate, quarantine that one lest others be infected. Then, should not decent people, innocent children be protected from infection from sexual perversion?"

He never mentions it, but he's obviously referring to AIDS. And I have to agree that's a serious problem. However, I have previously written a six-part series, showing among other things that the disease is not contracted by casual contact. Sexual intimacy is one of the major transmittal routes for AIDS, so I understand his concerns there in regard to sodomy.

Still, I feel the solution is more likely to come from better education than from the application of unenforceable laws.

However, diseases are also spread by other sexual practices than sodomy, including plain old sexual intercourse. So why don't we have laws prohibiting any sexual activity? (That would certainly cut down the spread of venereal diseases — and also the spread of humanity, which would eliminate most problems in this world.) And while not all VD is as dangerous or as fatal as AIDS, there have been many people crippled, debilitated and physically damaged by VD, more so than by AIDS.

And on the subject of diseases, let's not forget about kissing. Think of the numerous colds that have been spread by that act, along with more serious infections like pneumonia, hepatitis, typhoid fever and numerous other contagious and often fatal diseases. So why don't we have laws against kissing? Or sneezing? Or smokeless tobacco spitters? (I might almost be able to support a law against the latter.)

The author also brings in his claim that "civilized people need laws and policemen... to isolate and contain the corrupt element of society." Of course, he implies strongly that sodomites are corrupt per se. In many moral and religious viewpoints, so are fornicators and adulterers — but I don't yet hear any great numbers of claimants calling for the reinstatement of laws against those practices, as there were in the past.

Of course, many would like to see them revived, especially those concerned with civilizations falling because of unrestrained morality. But I think morality is a subject better taught in the home or at church instead of depending upon government to enforce matters that may not have wide support or that may involve conflicting viewpoints.

Like it or not, upholders of sodomy laws really can't deny the laws are aimed against gays. All their claims can't cover up the fact that they are seeking to deny freedom of choice to a sizable portion of society for no other reason than they don't like the practice of homosexuality.

And I certainly won't deny them the right to hold such views. But I don't think laws are the route to take against curbing such practices, especially since no one has been able to come up yet with any widely acceptable account of why some people are gay and others aren't.

As to his concerns about the victims, there are already numerous laws in regard to rape, violence and sexual abuse which can be applied in cases where one person is forcibly attacked sexually by another. And if a young person is involved, even with his consent given, there are statutory rape laws which can be applied.

So why have a general law against sodomy when it is unenforceable? In a supposed free society, minorities should be upheld in their reasonable rights even against a majority that may not like their practices, as long as those practices don't infringe upon others' rights and aren't imposed unwillingly on others.

If we can't accept that, then let's be more honest and stop throwing around these platitudes about our land being a free nation.

Plane bomber sentenced to 40 years

AUSTIN (AP) — Albert Lee Thielman, portrayed by his lawyer as a cocaine victim, has been given a 40-year prison sentence for placing a bomb on a commercial flight that carried his wife and three children.

The San Marcos man pleaded guilty June 10 to two charges stemming from a blast that damaged an Oct. 30 American Airlines flight from Austin to Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport.

The bomb went off after the plane landed, and there were no injuries. The airplane suffered $1,200 in damages, U.S. District Judge James Nowlin said during the Wednesday sentencing.

Court records showed Thielman, who faced financial ruin as a result of gambling, drugs and an extra-marital affair, had purchased more than $2 million worth of insurance on his wife and three children.

An FBI agent's affidavit said the bomb had been placed in Mary Thielman's luggage by her husband.

Nowlin ordered two 20-year sentences, to be served consecutively, on each of the two charges — placing a destructive device on an aircraft and causing damage to an aircraft.

It was the maximum prison term allowed for the convictions.

Thielman, 34, had no comment when asked by Nowlin if he had anything to say. But defense lawyer Rip Collins told the judge, "I think Albert Thielman is one more testimonial to the tragic end result of drug abuse, specifically cocaine abuse."

Collins acknowledged that the crime was of a "heinous nature," but asked Nowlin to take the drug problem into account in assessing the sentence. After the sentencing, Collins said Thielman had expected to get the maximum sentence.

Assistant U.S. Attorney James DeAtley told Nowlin, "This was a cold, calculated plan to murder his wife and three minor children to receive life insurance benefits of $2.65 million."

"He was going to cause the murder of 147 innocent people on that airplane," DeAtley said.

Special session might be expanded

AUSTIN (AP) — The chairman of the House Education Committee says Gov. Mark White indicates he may allow the upcoming special legislative session to consider a bill to toughen school discipline.

"I want to open the call to the discipline bill that we passed last year in the House. He was receptive to it," Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, after a 20-minute meeting with White on Wednesday.

White has summoned lawmakers to Austin on Aug. 6 for a 30-day session to balance the state budget, which faces a $3.5 billion deficit.

New minister is charged with murder

MONAHANS, Texas (AP) — A newly ordained Lutheran minister who told police his wife committed suicide less than two weeks after the family moved to Texas has been charged with first-degree murder in the case, authorities said.

Rev. Joseph Loduca Jr., 31, was denied bond after his arraignment Wednesday before Ward County Peace Justice L.A. Wester.

Loduca was accused of murder in the asphyxiation death of his wife, Mary Loduca, 32, whose body was found in her bedroom in the West Texas town of Monahans on July 12.

The Loduca's and their three children had moved to Monahans on July 1 from St. Louis, where he had been ordained as a minister in May after attending Concordia Seminary. Loduca had been installed as pastor of the St. Paul Lutheran Church of Monahans.

Mrs. Loduca's body was found with a plastic trash bag pulled tightly over her head, authorities said. No suicide note was found.

Monahans Police Chief David Mills said he arrested Loduca Tuesday night on a warrant issued by Peace Justice Sue Mullins. Mills said the arrest followed a 2½-week investigation prompted by what he called inconsistencies and discrepancies in a statement by Loduca.

"He said he returned home about 3:30 p.m. July 12 and found his wife in bed with a plastic trash bag over her head," Mills said. An autopsy by the Southwestern Institute of Forensic Sciences in Dallas determined Mrs. Loduca died of asphyxia, Mills said.

"The suspect made a detailed statement Tuesday afternoon," Mills said. He declined to elaborate on the statements.

Authorities told the St. Louis Post-Dispatch that one of Loduca's children said he had heard his mother screaming the day of her death.

Under the Texas Constitution, special sessions can consider only those subjects that the governor includes in his formal call, and White so far has limited this call to spending cuts.

Several lawmakers are urging him to consider other subjects — including interstate banking, lottery and horse racing legislation — but White has yet to do so.

Haley said, however, that White told him to introduce a school discipline bill, hold hearings and get it ready for consideration by the full House.

"He told me, get your bill introduced, get the process going, get it as far as you can and we'll open it at that time," Haley said.

Haley said the prospective bill he discussed with White would be identical to legislation the House passed in the regular session last year.

"It re-establishes the ability of school districts so that in severe cases — such as people coming into the schools with dope, selling dope, having it or whatever — they can be expelled," Haley said.

"The teacher would once again be allowed to remove the incorrigible student from the classroom. Those things that give some teeth to the teacher and the local school district, the ability to discipline students. It gives them the right and the ability to decide when the breach of conduct is serious enough that the kid needs to be gotten off campus," he added.

Haley said the legislation is supported by teacher groups and school administrators.

"There is a unanimous consensus out there among every education organization and association I know anything about," Haley said. "Every one I talked to this year said, 'Go for it, let's try to get that done before school starts.'"

Reform could be good, bad

BY RICHARD LESHER

WASHINGTON—"The income tax," Will Rogers said, "has made more liars of the American people than golf has."

Rogers made that wisecrack back in 1924 when the tax code was relatively simple by modern standards. Today it is much more complex, so intricate, in fact, that no mortal human can pretend to understand it all. If you take your tax return to five different accountants, chances are you will get five different results.

It now appears Congress will enact a major overhaul of our tax system that presumably will eliminate many loopholes, lower basic tax rates, and reduce complexity. The sociological implications of such reform would be profound. It could bring taxpayer honesty back into fashion.

The economic repercussions are less clear and will depend to a large extent on what the House-Senate conferees agree to. They must reconcile the differences between their competing versions of tax reform, and the decisions they make will guide our nation's economic performance for a long time to come.

Of the two, the Senate version is vastly preferable, and even it has some serious flaws. In the long term, it would foster economic growth through: lowered individual tax rates that would reduce the bias against work, savings and investment; lowered corporate tax rates that would reduce the after-tax costs of capital investment and doing business; and maintenance of accelerated capital cost recovery allowances over short lives for most plant and equipment.

Unfortunately, in the short term the Senate bill could have an adverse impact on the economy because it: retroactively repeals the investment tax credit in 1986 with no compensating rate reductions; does not fully phase in the tax rate reductions until 1988; and raises the government's tax take by over $30 billion in the next 18 months.

Business will seek improvements in the reform bill during the Conference Committee sessions, but our task will not be easy. House conferees are fighting to preserve key elements of their bill, many of which would impede economic growth. Senate conferees will have their work cut out for them obtaining a final product that will both simplify the tax code and spur business investment.

In this contest of wills, much is at stake. This tax reform initiative may determine our country's economic performance well into the next century. There is no valid reason why this bill cannot simplify the tax system, reduce tax rates and encourage long-term investment all at the same time. If our elected representatives have their wits about them, we may yet have our cake and eat it too.

Lesher is president of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Government labels may be dangerous

Warning: reading this could cause you to think. Or it could cause you to go to sleep. Either way, forewarned, as the folks in Washington, D.C., like to say.

We include the above warning partly in jest, partly to make a point. Government-mandated warning labels, most of which are routinely ignored, are a growth industry. The federal government for some time has mandated warning labels on industrial products — all kinds of products for which only common sense need be the guide.

Cigarettes are a prime example. Every package sold in the United States is required to carry a warning that cigarette smoking is hazardous to your health. The wording is a lot stronger than it used to be. So are cigarette sales—industry studies show that more people are smoking now than before the government introduced warning labels.

We don't pretend there is a correlation between the labels and increased smoking: you'd think there would be, one between the labels and decreased smoking. After all, the government intended the warnings to reduce the number of smokers. Could it be that warning labels aren't the panacea the government bureaucrats thought they were?

Don't tell that to the American Medical Association, which is lobbying hard to get Congress to pass a bill mandating yet another set of warning labels — these for alcoholic beverages.

The proposed legislation offers the bottlers of beer, wine and hard liquor several options: labels that warn against drinking while pregnant, while taking drugs and before driving; others that spell out the health risks of drinking too much. Companies would have to switch messages every year, never mind the cost.

Even moderate alcohol use during pregnancy can cause birth defects in humans and excessive drinking can cause problems for anyone. But are warning labels really the answer? Probably not.

Learning to use alcohol responsibly is a lifelong process, fostered by maturity and common sense. Warning labels on booze bottles simply won't do the job, and could undermine other efforts by giving people the false impression that alcohol abuse has been "taken care of."

Life includes a number of risks, most of which we encounter without warning. Some we encounter with warning — and proceed anyway, with or without caution. First cigarettes, then smokeless tobacco. Now booze. Where will it stop?

Warning: the proliferation of warning labels may be hazardous to the good intentions of government bureaucrats. When everything carries a warning label, the warnings will have become meaningless.

How to save on water

The drought in the Southeast is becoming a very serious problem and authorities are involved in a major crackdown against residents who are caught wasting water.

Last week, Leonard Fillpot and his wife, Madge, were arrested for boiling more water than they needed for instant coffee. They will be shot at the next available sunrise.

"Water wasters are the No. 1 problem in Atlanta," said Mayor Andy Young, who has overcome the water shortage crisis at his house by filling his swimming pool with Perrier.

I'm trying to do my part. I haven't washed my dishes in six weeks, and despite the fact something that looks like The Blob That Ate Cleveland has taken full control of my kitchen, I hold off out of my keen sense of duty to my fellow citizens.

I do think, however, we are missing out on still another way to conserve our water. We're taking too many baths and showers.

Very few other societies bathe and shower as much as Americans do. And in our continuing effort to defeat body odor in our lifetimes, we are seriously depleting our water supply.

Television commercials, more than anything else, have caused us to have this phobia of having any scent that isn't artificially perfumed.

Ever notice how many dedicated-to-clean commercials are on television? There are commercials for detergents that will keep your clothes clean and fresh-smelling. And then every soap company in the country is running ads showing people getting squeaky clean in the shower.

If Congress simply would ban all commercials that involve somebody taking a shower, we could ease our water problems decidedly.

We didn't always have this urge to be clean at any cost. We once were content with a bath only now and then.

Saturday was the big day for bathing in America before soaps starting having names like Zest and Safeguard and Irish Spring.

On Saturdays you got inside a tub of hot water and lathered up with a little Octagon soap and bathed yourself, whether you needed to or not. Sure, people got a little gamy by Tuesday or Wednesday, but that wasn't considered means for becoming a social outcast.

People were used to people smelling like people and not like some Parisian woman-of-the-night. Besides, dogs were friendlier to people before they started bathing every day.

I don't propose we go back to the once-a-week bathing process, but we could cut down. Everybody whose last name begins with "A" through "M" could bathe on odd days and "N" through "Z" on the even.

That way, we could conserve millions of gallons of water and save millions on soap. Think about it, America.

It's a matter of dollars and scents.

Destroying the rights of refugees

(Second of two related columns)

The federal government maintains eight detention facilities for aliens believed to have entered this country illegally.

The centers are in New York City; Boston; Miami; Los Fresnos and El Paso, Texas; Centro, Calif.; Florence, Ariz., and Oakdale, La.

The last is the newest. Opened March 21, it is a modern complex of several low structures laid out on a campus plan. It is spacious and clean where the others are crowded and grim.

It might appear to be the best of the lot. Appearances, however, aren't necessarily everything. Oakdale actually represents something ominous and ugly. It institutionalizes the Reagan administration's policy of rejecting persecuted people from other countries who are seeking haven here.

For all its amenities, Oakdale was built for one purpose — to serve as a prison. That is made clear by the 12-foot fence topped with razor wire surrounding it, the two-inch thick window bars and the armed patrolling of the perimeter.

It is the first such detention facility to be operated jointly by the Immigration and Naturalization Service, which has primary jurisdiction over aliens, and the Bureau of Prisons.

It is a prison for non-criminals. Oakdale's inmates are in the process of requesting asylum or appealing initial decisions against them. Yet they are fingerprinted, made to wear prison garb and locked up like criminals.

There are other disturbing aspects of the facility, which has a normal capacity of a thousand but could accommodate up to five times that number if necessary.

It is located in a small town in rural Louisiana, so the prisoners are far removed from major population centers and ready access to legal representation. Of necessity, most lawyers representing refugees work free of charge since most of the aliens are without adequate funds.

There are, however, only five attorneys in Oakdale. And of some 700 in the surrounding area surveyed by the American Civil Liberties Union, only three indicated any interest in representing Oakdale's prisoners.

"By building a national immigration jail in an area with virtually no available lawyers," Lucas Guttentag, an ACLU attorney, has pointed out, "the government has rendered the refugees' right to counsel meaningless."

It is, he says, not unlike confining people on a ship hundreds of miles offshore and telling them they are free to seek legal assistance to secure their release. All they have to do is find a way to get lawyers out there.

There is, of course, nothing accidental about this. It is in line with the Reagan administration's calculated policies of the past five years, which have sought to close what had been a relatively open American door to refugees.

The change is documented in a current report by two New York-based rights organizations, the Lawyers Committee for Human Rights and Helsinki Watch. Previously, detention of aliens, even those entering the country illegally, was rare. Most remained free during the asylum application process. Now, detention has become the rule.

The purpose, according to Arthur C. Helton of the Lawyers Committee, is to deter refugees from seeking asylum in this country. Such a policy, he says, violates international accords, to which the United States is a party, and domestic law, which provides for release on parole during processing.

The report, "Mother of Exiles: Refugees Imprisoned in America," was released during the July Fourth rededication of the Statue of Liberty.

If the Reagan administration has its way, Liberty and her lamp will cease to symbolize this country's response to the world's huddled masses yearning to breathe free.

Oakdale will.

White House regretting Reagan's South Africa speech

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — As President Reagan prepared to deliver last week's South Africa speech, White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan was told by an aide: "To give any speech (on South Africa) would be a mistake; to give this speech would be a disaster."

Regan concurred but was overruled. The president decided to give the speech anyway, and some of his key advisers now admit — at least privately — that "it was a major PR goof," "a total backfire," "a disaster."

They weren't saying those things just before the speech, at least not outside the president's own tight circle. They were defending the president's opposition to sanctions and arguing the importance of explaining the administration's policy of quiet diplomacy.

But in the wake of Reagan's most serious political blunder since his decision more than a year ago to visit the Bitburg military cemetery in West Germany, anger and recrimination are rife within the White House.

"We had beat Pat down," one official said, reviewing a struggle by some Reagan aides to kill the speech conceived and drafted in large part by Patrick J. Buchanan, the director of communications and the president's most articulate and outspoken champion of conservative issues.

Legislative strategists Dennis Thomas and Will Ball were said to have led the fight against making a speech, arguing that it would play into the hands of congressional opponents by rekindling the controversy over the administration's already unpopular policy.

Regan, who is perceived inside and outside the White House as the most influential presidential adviser — unless Nancy Reagan chooses to weigh in with her own opinion — was swayed by their arguments.

But sources said Buchanan and national security adviser John M. Poindexter, who had conducted a much-publicized "review" of administration policy toward South Africa in the weeks before the speech, still wanted Reagan to address the issue in an attempt to ward off sanctions already approved by the House and gaining support in the Senate.

Regan "could have been persuaded either way, to do it or not to do it," one senior aide said.

Then, Secretary of State George P. Shultz, who wanted Reagan to address the issue before Shultz's own scheduled testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, came to the White House for a private meeting with the president and, according to one account, "went ballistic," arguing strenuously for a presidential speech.

"Shultz persuaded him to do it, and it was off and running," another source said.

"It's not as if it was all bad," commented one White House aide as he searched for a defense of the position in which the administration now finds itself.

"An argument can be made that having had the president speak out as he did and the reaction being what it was, if ever there was any hope — and if there is any hope — of having the South African government move, it will be out of the recognition that the president spoke as he did and notwithstanding that, the feelings are still as strong, if not stronger than before" against the Pretoria regime.

Titanic Tells Liner reveals secrets of doom

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The second and final visit to the Titanic by a team of undersea explorers has shed new light on what doomed the grand liner as well as the macabre, deep-sea ravagers who dined at its grave.

Researcher Robert Ballard, who discovered the Titanic in the North Atlantic last Sept. 1, said its collision with an iceberg in April of 1912 did not create a huge gash in the hull — as many, including himself, had long supposed. Instead, he said, the 12-inch-thick plates on the hull simply popped their rivets and buckled enough to spring a fatal leak.

Ballard said the comprehensive photographic exploration of the wreck in 12 dives earlier this month showed "absolutely no evidence" of a gash, estimated in some historical accounts as 300 feet long.

His team, from the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Woods Hole, Mass., took more than 57,000 still photos and 50 hours of videotapes. One series of pictures will result in a complete mosaic of the shipwreck, a project scheduled for completion within six weeks.

Ballard met reporters Wednesday at the National Geographic Society headquarters, where Navy Secretary John Lehman commended the Woods Hole team and conferred upon Ballard the title of "Bottom Gun," a title dreamed up in the wake of the hit movie "Top Gun."

The explorer said the fact that the stern of the liner was found 600 meters away from the bow section shows that the ship broke apart not when it hit bottom, 12,500 feet from the surface, but on the way down. He theorized the ship might have imploded from the pressure.

Ballard described the "frozen terror" of the stern section. "You really felt it when you were there," in the tiny, three-man submarine, called Alvin, that scoured the wreckage. "The sheer carnage ... it looked violent and destructive."

On the other hand, he said, the bow section was much more intact, though all four funnels had disappeared — perhaps disintegrated — and "the entire wheelhouse has been eaten" by wood-boring organisms.

His photos showed millions of the tubular skeletons of the creatures that dined on the organic remains of the Titanic. Scientists previously had not known that such creatures lived at those extreme depths.

Ballard said he was not surprised, after noting "the absence of any wood, anything organic," that he found no evidence of human remains. The only organic artifact found was a patent leather shoe, he said.

Rust was everywhere on the wreckage, except for copper and ceramic objects. The photos showed gleaming copper pots and pans from the ship's kitchen, the head of a doll, a copper cup sitting upright atop one of the engine boilers.

"It would have been easy to retrieve these things," Ballard said. "We felt it was better to leave them where they were."

V.P. Bush's son prefers the quiet life of Midland

By JANICE JOHNSTON
The Odessa American

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — President Reagan. King Hussein of Jordan. Evangelist Billy Graham. Former Dallas Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach. Houston Astros pitcher Nolan Ryan. Australian tennis star John Newcombe. The lips of the vice president's son, George W. Bush of Midland. But it's the names of his wife and twin 4-year-olds that linger most often there.

His heart is where his home is, in northeast Midland, Bush says. Bush, son of Vice President George Bush, is the sole Bush family member still living in the family's former home of Midland.

Years of following at his politician-father's heels through Washington, D.C., New York City and Dallas robbed the glamorous life of much of its luster for the younger Bush, he said.

Bush said he elected to stay in Midland because of its homespun values.

"The great thing about Midland is it boils things down to the fundamentals: family, religion and friends," the 39-year-old oilman said.

"People in West Texas tend to judge you for what you are, instead of who you are."

Dr. Charles Younger, 44, of Midland said he jogs with Bush almost daily.

Younger described his friend as a "natural athlete" who plays competitive amateur games of tennis and golf even without practicing.

The two met about 33 years ago when the Bush and Younger families lived across the street from each other, Younger said.

Five years older than his friend, Younger said he never paid much attention to the oldest Bush child when the two were young.

They became friends after both moved back to Midland as adults, about 10 years ago, Younger said.

Younger called the vice president's son a "very sincere and very honest, hardworking person."

"He goes out of his way to keep his nose clean because of who he is. He takes being the vice president's son more or less as a responsibility, and tries not to do anything that would be an embarrassment to his family," Younger said.

His friend also has a good sense of humor, although Bush avoids playing practical jokes on his acquaintances, Younger said.

For all his good qualities, Bush does possess faults such as a tendency to pinch pennies too tightly, the Midland doctor said.

Younger recalled many times when the two friends would go out to dinner, and Bush would make only a "half-hearted attempt" to reach for the check.

"He's almost a Jack Benny type, almost the epitome of someone who wouldn't pay a dime to see an earthquake," Younger said.

Independent oil producer Bob Holt of Midland says his 15-year friend doesn't rest on his father's laurels but makes a name for himself.

Holt said he sees similarities in mannerisms between the vice president and his son.

But the younger Bush is "making his own niche. He acts exactly like he wants to. He's his own man," Holt said.

Holt marveled at the special closeness and communication between the Bush family members.

"They are the closest family, in many ways, of all the families I've been around. The respect that they hold for each other is amazing," the Midland oilman said.

Prep-school-educated Bush, a Midland native, married Midland Lee High School graduate Laura Welch, 39, a former school librarian, after both had turned 30.

The couple "diplomatically" named their twin girls, Barbara and Jenna, after grandmothers on both sides of the family, Bush said.

The vice president's son said his entire world revolves around the nucleus of the two families: the one in Midland and the one centered in Washington, D.C. His life in Midland begins at 6:45 a.m.

After breakfasting with his family on cereal with skim milk, Bush gets to his Spectrum 7 Energy Group office on the 13th floor of the First City Towers at 8:02, he said.

Mornings usually mean endless discussion with his partners in Spectrum 7 and in Bush Exploration.

The two companies merged in 1984. Spectrum 7 is a Cincinnati-based group of investors who backs independent oil producers, Bush explained.

At noon, the vice president's son leaves the office to run between three and five miles at the local YMCA, where he generally meets up with friends who join him for a sandwich after the workout.

Bush returns to the office to open mail and generally "deal with problems that come up."

Evenings mean dinner with his wife and daughters, followed by a few hours of reading the newspaper and "watching the girls color."

Pride is evident in Bush's voice as he describes his girls' handiwork, tacked up on the wall of an otherwise conservatively decorated office.

One daughter displays her more obedient nature by coloring carefully, drawing realistic clouds and raindrops, the father said.

After the two girls go to bed about 9 p.m., Bush and his wife spend the rest of the evening reading and then turn in themselves.

Bush said he most often finds himself reading spy thrillers.

It's no fun being an illegal alien

By casket or limo aliens cross over

By ALAN L. ADLER
Associated Press Writer

IMPERIAL BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Many illegal aliens sneak into the United States on foot. Others come by limousine.

The U.S. Border Patrol says smuggling aliens has become a lucrative business. Entrepreneurs use sports cars and Cadillacs with secret compartments, and trucks laden with caskets.

So far this year, 1,912 vehicles used to smuggle aliens into the country have been seized in the San Diego area, compared with 1,503 confiscated in all of 1985.

"This is never going to be as profitable as narcotics, just simply due to the volume, but it's a lot safer than narcotics," said Brian McClatchie, a Border Patrol agent responsible for keeping track of hundreds of cases a month in which smugglers' vehicles are seized.

A recent case involved a 1985 Lincoln stretch limousine, luxuriously transporting nine undocumented aliens.

"This is probably the height of sublime in smuggling," McClatchie said. "We've just never seen anything like this before. They were just watching TV and enjoying themselves in the back seat drinking cold soda pops."

"The smuggler had a little more class than most, I guess you could say."

The aliens were charged $350 to $450 each for the ride across the border, McClatchie said, adding that the limo was confiscated and converted for use by the Secret Service.

In another case, operators of a casket manufacturing company used their truck to ferry undocumented aliens.

"They were not in the caskets. They were in between and on top of them and covered with blankets," McClatchie said. "It was probably one of the more unusual cases we've encountered."

The casket truck, which sits at the Border Patrol's impound lot on a Navy base in this southern San Diego County city, will be destroyed unless a federal agency claims it, officials said.

Almost any vehicle can be used for smuggling. Secret compartments built into cars and trucks hold from one to a dozen people.

On a tour of the lot, McClatchie pointed out some vehicles so cleverly altered that even a trained eye would have trouble locating the compartment.

"These things we destroy or turn over to a government agency," he said. "We would be condoning alien smuggling by turning them back to the general public."

Twenty such vehicles have been destroyed this year, said Louis Valderrama of the Border Patrol.

Fort Worth judge accused of trading sex for leniency

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A federal grand jury in Dallas is investigating allegations that District Judge Tom Cave has traded favorable rulings to women probationers in exchange for sex, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported today.

Cave, 56, a judge in Tarrant County since 1975, strongly denied the allegations in a written statement given to the newspaper Wednesday.

The judge did acknowledge that he is dating and soon plans to marry a 33-year-old former prostitute who has previously appeared in his court on a felony drug charge.

Cave denied that he has done anything illegal or improper and blamed the investigation on criminals in Tarrant County who "apparently influence." Police Chief Thomas Windham and Captain Jerry Blaisdell of the Fort Worth Police Department to begin an investigation.

Saying that the "criminal element" in Tarrant County would like to see him removed from the bench because he has sent many of them to jail, Cave said, "I am the target of a conspiracy."

"I have not violated any laws nor will I do so," he told the Star-Telegram.

The investigation centers on Cave and his girlfriend, Rachel Perez Tallent of San Antonio, and several other women probationers who have appeared in his court since 1981, the newspaper reported.

District Court Judge Joe Drago III, who served as chief prosecutor in Cave's court in 1980, said he was interviewed by FBI agents for more than an hour earlier this month.

Drago said he told the FBI he he witnessed no wrongdoing of any sort in Cave's court.

Several current and former court officials from Cave's court were scheduled to appear before the federal grand jury in Dallas today, the newspaper reported, based on grand jury subpoenas obtained by the Star-Telegram.

Tallent was given five years probation on a felony charge for possession of cocaine on Aug. 22, 1983, court records show. She had earlier been convicted on misdemeanor prostitution and drug possession charges.

An important issue in the federal investigation, the newspaper reported, is whether Cave was dating her at the time she appeared before him or whether he offered leniency to her or other female defendants in exchange for sex.

"It's no secret that I have been dating Rachel Tallent for a year or more," Cave told the newspaper Wednesday. "I love her. We are engaged and we plan to be married. But I was not dating her before that hearing."

Introducing the world's smallest Marathon.

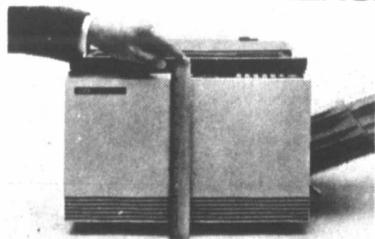

Finally, there's a copier that's as rugged as it is compact. Introducing the Xerox 1020 Marathon copier.

It's just 17" square by 11" high, yet it's equipped with features you'd expect to find only in a big copier. For instance, the Xerox 1020 has five contrast settings for colored or problem originals, so line-work won't break up, solid areas stay solid and different shades of blue writing, light pencil, green and red inks and yellow crayon get clearly copied.

And the Xerox 1020 copier only takes 35 seconds to warm up. After that, all it takes is 7 seconds until you get your first copy.

But what really makes the Xerox 1020 a Marathon is how it's been designed to run.

The 1020 copier's powerful microprocessor and other advanced electronics have greatly reduced the need for moving parts that can break down. And every one of the 1020 copier's major components has had to pass an unprecedented array of stress tests.

But one feature the Xerox 1020 Marathon copier doesn't share with big copiers is a big price. In fact, at under $1,800, the 1020 is the lowest-priced copier Xerox ever introduced. All of which makes it a copier you can afford in the short run while it works for the long run. The Xerox 1020 Marathon copier. Built to shatter the record for endurance. For information call:

Brain-dead mother dies shortly after giving birth

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — A brain-dead woman kept on life-support systems for 7½ weeks until her pregnancy neared term was disconnected and died shortly after giving birth, hospital officials said.

The baby, named Michele Odette Poole, was delivered Wednesday by Caesarean section at Kaiser Permanente Hospital here and was "raring to go," hospital officials said.

The baby's father, Derrick Poole, fiance of 34-year-old Marie Odette Henderson, fought a legal battle with Ms. Henderson's parents, Edna and Otis Henderson of Detroit, who wanted to disconnect their daughter's life-support systems.

Poole, 31, obtained a court order to keep the life-support system connected, eventually reaching an agreement with her parents to keep her alive until the baby was born. He also was granted custody.

Ms. Henderson was six months pregnant when she collapsed June 4 because of a stroke caused by a golf ball-size brain tumor. She was declared legally dead three days later.

Dr. Stephen Fernbach, director of the neonatal intensive care unit at Kaiser, said the child is doing well and probably will be ready to leave the hospital in seven to 10 days.

"She was more mature and more vigorous than I expected. She's a real pretty baby," said Fernbach. "She was more active than many normal deliveries. She was raring to go."

After the baby's birth, and the death of Ms. Henderson, Poole said Wednesday, "Knowing Odette, and how bad she wanted to have this baby, maybe it was God's will that today was the time for her — the time to take the baby."

Michele was delivered by Dr. Donald Dyson, chief of perinatology at Kaiser Permanente Hospital. She weighed 4 pounds, 5 ounces and was 16½ inches long.

Dyson said only 5 percent of all brain-dead people survive more than two weeks on life support, adding that he had read about only five cases of babies being delivered to brain-dead mothers.

"I'm very happy about the outcome for Michele, but I'm still grieving a little bit (for Ms. Henderson)," Poole said later at a news conference. "Michele's birth today makes things a little easier."

Poole said his daughter had a full head of hair and was wearing a pink T-shirt that said, "I was born at Kaiser, Santa Clara." "When I looked into her eyes, I could see the extension from Odette into her. Michele looked like a carbon copy of Odette," Poole said.

Poole said he hoped his fight would inspire other fathers faced with the same difficult decision.

"If I can go to my grave saying I have Michele here on earth and I can reach out and touch somebody by doing all this, then my job was served well here," Poole said.

'Reform' will mean hikes for many

WASHINGTON (AP) — For more than 24 million couples and individuals — about one of every four who file returns — "tax reform" will mean a tax increase next year.

That's the latest estimate of the Joint Committee on Taxation, whose figures also show 70 million-plus taxpayers can expect to keep more money as a result of the tax-overhaul plan making its way through Congress. About 10 million would see no change.

The committee staff estimates that efforts to protect middle-income families from a temporary tax increase in 1987 would penalize more than 2 million taxpayers with incomes under $30,000 a year.

The new figures are based on an analysis of the sweeping tax-overhaul plan passed by the Senate. Congressional negotiators are using the Senate bill as a model as they try to write a compromise between it and the version passed by the House.

Either bill would repeal or reduce several deductions and slash tax rates significantly. But the rate cuts would come six months after the deductions were taken away. So, taxpayers would lose their deductions for all of 1987 but would pay current tax rates for half the year and the new, lower rates for the last six months.

That would mean a temporary tax increase even for those who, under the bill, would get a tax cut starting in 1988.

Most of the impact of delaying the rate cut to July 1 would fall on couples and individuals with incomes between $30,000 and $50,000 — taxpayers who vote in large numbers and, therefore, are a special concern of members of Congress.

A solution being considered by negotiators would advance the rate cut to Jan. 1. That would reduce from 11.8 million to 8.2 million the number of tax returns in the $30,000-to-$75,000 class facing a tax increase.

But it would raise from 12.4 million to 14.6 million the number of couples and individuals with income under $30,000 whose taxes would go up. The chief reason is that while the present 50 percent maximum tax rate would be slashed to 27 percent for most upper-income people and 32.4 percent for others, the present minimum rate of 11 percent would rise to 15 percent.

Regardless of when the rate reductions take effect, the analysis shows, the new tax system would mean a tax increase in 1987 for about 25 million couples and individuals, compared with what they are paying this year.

For 1987, the tax increase would average $1,219 under the earlier tax-rate reduction and $1,379 if it took effect July 1.

Fort Worth clerk faces theft charges

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — An indictment has been returned by a Tarrant County grand jury accusing a former Fort Worth Public Library clerk of stealing about $80,000 in fines and fees.

The indictment, returned Tuesday, names Nancy Stevens Tapp, 40, of Fort Worth. The 27-page indictment accuses her of 67 thefts between March 1, 1985, and March 21, 1986.

Officials said Ms. Tapp was a $12,800-a-year clerk typist at the downtown library until she resigned March 31.

Ms. Tapp declined comment on the indictment Tuesday, saying she needed to discuss the case with a lawyer. She said she resigned to take of her 70-year-old mother, who recently suffered a third heart attack.

The theft from the library went undetected for more than a year because officials paid too little attention to how the money was collected, according to Assistant City Manager Ruth Ann McKinney.

Officials should have detected the thefts sooner, she said.

Authorities said Ms. Tapp was responsible for collecting fees and fines from eight branches and forwarding the money to city treasury. The indictment did not say how the money was stolen.

Ms. McKinney said the reported theft have prompted city officials to reroute library fees from the branches directly to the city treasury.

Cyanide buried in Austin cemetery

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin city officials, surprised at a report that the Austin State Hospital buried a pound of deadly cyanide 20 years ago in a cemetery, say they want an investigation to determine if it is dangerous.

"It sounds important enough to pursue, without a doubt," said Ramon Miguez, the city's assistant director of public works.

Laura De La Garza, an employee of the city's environmental office, said the reported burial of the cyanide and other toxic chemicals at a state cemetery near Waller Creek in North Austin would be investigated.

The Austin American-Statesman said it learned of the burial from Fred Lara, a retired doctor of pharmacy and the former director of the state hospital's biochemical and toxicology laboratory.

Lara, 60, said it only takes a few hundred milligrams of cyanide to kill an adult human and that a pound contains more than 400,000 milligrams. Lara said he was reminded of the burial by publicity of the hospital's recent donation of a rare collection of brains and other organs of former mental patients to the University of Texas at Austin.

Kenny Dudley, superintendent of the state hospital, said he vaguely remembered Lara telling him something about the burial earlier this year after a series of articles in the American-Statesman about the hospital.

"If the city wants to look into it, we'll help them try and figure out what's there," Dudley said. "If someone thinks there's something out there that shouldn't be and they want to check, we'll cooperate."

In the late 1950s or early 1960s, Lara said he supervised the burial of about 100 brains from the hospital's collection in half-gallon glass jars — some of them cracked and leaking toxic formaldehyde preservative — along with the pound of potassium cyanide and other toxic chemicals in smaller bottles.

He said the burial took place under a large shade tree in the northwest corner of the cemetery that is just southeast of the Highland Plaza shopping center, a few yards from Waller Creek in Northeast Austin.

"I was new in the job and didn't know what was right," Lara said. "The state said to do it. I didn't question. I seem to remember that the cyanide was ordered by mistake. I don't know why the brains were buried. Everything was in cardboard boxes. I was ordered to go along and see that all of it was buried deep enough not to be affected by rainfall."

Strike deadline looms for Southwestern Bell

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Negotiators are facing an Aug. 9 deadline in an attempt to avert a strike by District 6 of the Communications Workers of America against Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., the union says.

A three-year contract between the company and the union expires that date and progress on an agreement to succeed it has been slow, District CWA spokesman Bill Harwell. He said union members have voted to walk out unless the contract issues are resolved.

The negotiations affect about 47,700 employees in Southwestern Bell Telephone's five-state territory of Missouri, Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Kansas.

Harwell said 2,700 union employees of Southwestern Bell Publications also set an Aug. 9 strike deadline last week. He said negotiations began July 8 between the CWA unit and the Southwestern Bell subsidiary that publishes the Yellow Pages.

Jim Moore, assistant vice president for human resources at Southwestern Bell Publications, identified the major unresolved issue in talks there as a commission plan for Yellow Pages salesworkers.

Howard says he won't go to session

AUSTIN (AP) — State Sen. Ed Howard, who had announced his resignation prior to the calling of an Aug. 6 special legislative session, said today he would not participate in the session unless it is determined that his attendance is required.

Howard, D-Texas, resigned April 13 and accepted a job with the law firm of Jenkins, Hutchinson and Gilchrist as an Austin lobbyist. He said he had been "engaging in that activity since my resignation."

Howard said "to avoid any questions of impropriety or conflict of interest, I will not participate as a state senator."

Cruise ship catches fire near Miami

By RICHARD COLE
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — A fire aboard the cruise ship Emerald Seas injured at least seven people Wednesday, one critically, and prompted the evacuation of all 897 passengers in lifeboats before the blaze was controlled, the Coast Guard reported.

The ship was in the Berry Islands about 50 miles north of Nassau in the Bahamas and 130 miles east of Miami, said U.S. Coast Guard spokesman Jim Simpson. The Coast Guard said the fire was "under control" at 11 a.m., about 2½ hours after it broke out following an explosion in the storeroom, but officers here had no details on the amount of damage.

Five Coast Guard helicopters and a jet were at the scene and the cutters Farrallon and Cape Gull also were en route, Simpson added.

He said the critically injured person was burned, but he had no further detail on injuries, including whether they were passengers or crew. The Coast Guard planned to fly the injured to Princess Margaret Hospital in Nassau, but the critically injured person will then be flown to the Jackson Memorial Hospital burn treatment center in Miami, he said.

The ship, which carries can carry up to 970 passengers, was being evacuated as a precaution, said Simpson.

The ship's crew planned to take the passengers to the tiny private island of Little Stirrup Cay, Simpson said.

"They will evacuate all to Stirrup Cay and then go from there," he said, adding that the Coast Guard hadn't received any word on whether the ship would be able to sail on after the fire was out.

Today's cruise departed Miami before dawn and was scheduled to stop first this afternoon at Little Stirrup Cay.

Tourists still visit Plains, but not as many

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Visitors still browse through Hugh Carter's antique store and drive past Miss Lillian's house, but mobs of reporters and tourists who descended on this obscure south Georgia town 10 years ago have vanished.

Cast into the international spotlight during Jimmy Carter's 1976 presidential campaign, the town's 650 residents played host to an estimated 30,000 visitors a day during Carter's four-year term.

"When Jimmy Carter was president, you couldn't drive down the street or walk down it, and that was every day," said Mattie Beth Spires, a clerk at the Plains Pharmacy.

Tourists came to see the president's birthplace, his church and his boyhood home. They bought souvenirs in the brick shops on Main Street and refueled at brother Billy's service station.

Now, the presidential softball games are memories. Billy Carter's famous service station has a new owner. Lillian Carter, the family's crusty matriarch, died three years ago.

Since Carter left office in 1981, the tourists have dwindled to about 300 per day in the summer. The town moves at a slower pace.

Plains can expect to perk up a little Saturday, when the 98-year-old former railroad depot that Carter used as his Plains campaign headquarters is to be donated to the Plains Historic Preservation Trust.

A bill was introduced in Congress last year to create a National Historic Site, which would include the white, wood-frame depot, the former president's home, the Plains High School and his boyhood home in nearby Archery.

There are also plans for a Jimmy Carter monument in the park, built with money donated by country singer Willie Nelson, who performed at last year's Plains centennial celebration.

Hugh Carter's shop, located in a row of turn-of-the-century buildings on Main Street, remains a prime attraction. Visitors can buy antiques, souvenirs and Carter memorabilia ranging from bumper stickers to books.

"The people like the town," Hugh Carter said. "It's quiet and peaceful. It's a God-fearing community. They like to come here and mix with the people."

During his cousin's presidency, Hugh spent much of his time answering reporters' questions. These days, he sits behind a counter near the front door, talking to tourists and friends.

Hispanic detained after raid

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — A West Texas artist who was detained for 90 minutes during a recent roundup of aliens said the incident was humiliating and claimed federal officials did not act properly.

Romeo Reyna, a tapestry artist, says he and several other Hispanics were wrongfully detained during the Immigration and Naturalization Service's sting operation Saturday which netted 68 illegal aliens in Midland.

"I intend to pursue it," he said. "The people, the taxpayers, need to be aware of what they are doing."

INS agents said Monday that the raid was conducted according to standard procedure and did not harass legal residents who were caught up by the operation, in which a bogus contest was set up with cash and other prizes.

Reyna said he did not receive a letter but was accompanying a friend from Dallas to the contest. He said he decided to go because he suspected a sting operation.

INS agents sent out letters to illegal aliens who had been ordered deported. The letters, claiming to be from a fictitious company called the Janus Group, promised recipients a $1,000 prize and the possibility of winning a $25,000 mobile home.

However, when recipients of the letters arrived at a Midland Regional Airport hangar disguised as a mobile home factory they discovered that the contest was a ruse.

"They took me to the side and questioned me," Reyna said. "They said my car was confiscated because I was 'helping criminals.'"

Reyna said he was released after checks to various law enforcement officials showed he had a clean record.

U.S. Border Patrol officials said the detention was a precaution aimed at ensuring that none of the aliens had outstanding arrest warrants.

"We ran a check on everyone," said Lane Horger, one of two Lubbock Border Patrol agents who took part in the sting operation. "If their check came back clean, then we released them. But we did not arrest any legal resident."

Horger said the only delay in the operation was caused by a 30-minute computer outage. The computer, Horger said, was used to check immigration and criminal records of aliens.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol
August 1, 1986

The year ahead offers great promise that will come your way without too much effort on your part. However, if you treat these developments indifferently, nothing important will result. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Financial entanglements with friends could result in complications today. It's best not to create situations where you and your companions have to chip in money. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $1 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Because of your indecisiveness, you may lack the drive that's necessary to accomplish meaningful goals today. Be single-minded. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your judgment on a serious matter may be blinded by the glare of unwarranted optimism today. Step back in the shade and re-evaluate things. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) At a social gathering today, a member of the opposite sex may flirt with you. Be careful not to read more into it than what's intended. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There's a possibility today that you might put yourself in a position where you've promised the same thing to two different people. Be mindful of your commitments. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your artistic taste might not be up to par today, so be careful what you decide to paint or redecorate. You could create a permanent eyesore. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It won't prove wise today to treat too lavishly certain people you are trying to win over. They might end up resenting being bought. PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you have a matter that you would like to conclude, try to wrap it up today. Time isn't your ally, so don't leave it hanging. ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you embellish your tales today in order to impress co-workers or subordinates, you're not apt to be believed. Keep your facts straight. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) There could be a powerful streak of extravagance in you today that might cause you to waste your money. Get a grip on your purse. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It's essential today that you be very explicit about your targets. If you lack method and purpose, you could muddle up things that now are running smoothly. CANCER (June 21-July 22) There is a very thin line today between healthy optimism and purely wishful thinking. Be careful you don't step over it.

Fall menswear: out is in

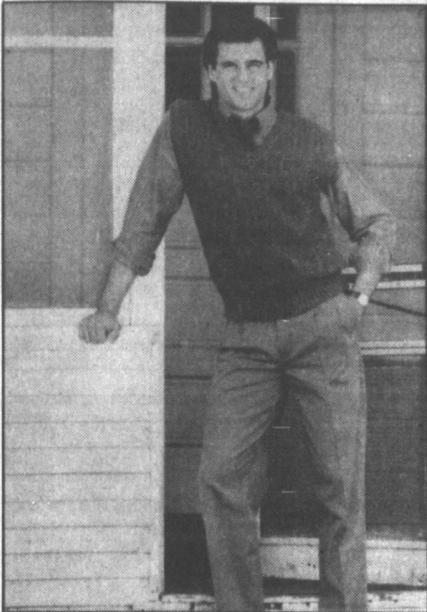

This fall, out is in for men. The "outdoors" look has arrived, bringing a fresh face to the familiar in menswear.

The familiar: bleached-look jeans, chambray shirts, woven flannels, pullover sweaters, fleece. The fresh: geometric block plaids on flannel; updated basketweaves on sweaters; chambray shirt and jean combinations underscored with red; fleece printed with abstracts. "For fall, there's a continuation of the simplified styles that have been around for some time," comments Paul Rogers, fashion director for a major department store chain. "Only on this go-around, related items are being put together with an individualistic flair. And key to this 'new way of wearing it' look is texture and pattern mixing." Rogers cites as examples block woven flannel shirts with multi-fleck pants; silk-poly sport jackets with tactile basketweave sweaters; woven stripe shirts and knit shevron sweater vests.

The popularity of gray and black extends into fall, along with a strong emphasis on brown tones. Bright gold, royal blue and fuchsia are the accessory accents for packing even more pizzazz into that personal touch.

TEXTURE TRIUMPH—Novelty knit blue sweater vest smartly ties together a woven strip shirt and twill pants. From Boston Athletic Club.

SWEATER SETTING—100 percent rag wool sweater warms up the fall fashion forecast in a gray, royal and black print motif.

McLEAN HIGH SCHOOL cheerleaders were among 290 participants from Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas and Colorado at the 1986 NCA Cheerleading Camp held recently on the campus of Panhandle State University in Goodwell, Okla. Forty-four squads re-

Coloring and frizz

Summer sun and wind can dry the ends of hair that has been permanently tinted. Ends are the oldest part of the hair strand and are usually already abraded when tint enters the shaft. To prevent frizz, use conditioning rinse after shampooing. It doesn't work, spread a bit of baby oil over your fingers, and rub gently onto ends. Then brush well. Keep tinted hair covered when out in sun or wind.

Warm-ups needed

Many people dislike exercise because it leaves them stiff or sore. Even constant exercisers — such as ballet dancers — will tell you that they warm up before exercising. Before your exercise sessions, do stretching, rapid walking, knee bends, arm swinging and side-to-side twisting. To avoid stiffness, choose a sport with motions close to natural movement, such as golf.

Dear Abby

Young mother's discipline provokes shoppers' disgust

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday while grocery shopping, I witnessed a young mother screaming at her son to hurry up and choose between a Twinkie and a Ding Dong. The child was so frightened he couldn't decide. Instead of waiting, she grabbed him by his hair and whipped his head back! He started crying and fell to the floor. She reached down, pulled the little fellow to his feet, then slapped him as hard as she could and whipped his head back again. Needless to say, the child ended up with nothing.

I noticed that four or five other shoppers had witnessed this cruel scene and appeared as disgusted as I was.

Why didn't one of us do something? A part of me said, "Stay out of it — it's none of your business," and another part of me said, "That woman is abusing that child; you should intervene."

What should I have done? WITNESS IN HUNTINGTON BEACH DEAR WITNESS: It would have been appropriate to have quietly approached the young mother and in a very kind and non-judgmental way expressed concern for her: "You must be very tired, impatient and under a lot of pressure to have overreacted as you did. Please discuss this with your physician instead of taking it out on the little fellow."

DEAR ABBY: I need to know something about homosexuals, and I can't ask anyone I know for fear of exposing my husband. We have been married for 25 years, and in all that time I have never suspected him of homosexual behavior. I've suspected a couple of his friends, but never him.

My husband has had ulcerative proctitis for the last 20 years. Yesterday I mentioned this to my friend and she said, "Oh, that's a homosexual disease." This left me very upset and suspicious of my husband, and I need some answers before this totally destroys my marriage.

Please ask your medical expert if ulcerative proctitis is a homosexual disease.

NAGGING DOUBTS

DEAR NAGGING: I consulted Dr. William C. Bernstein, senior consultant in colon and rectal surgery at the University of Minnesota Hospitals, and he assured me that ulcerative proctitis is NOT a homosexual disease.

For further reassurance, you should discuss the matter of your husband's physical condition with his physician. And questions concerning your husband's sexual activities should be addressed to your husband.

(Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (30 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Men's jackets go to any length

By Florence De Santis

Whether for campus or leisure, men's jackets this fall come in classic styles in a variety of lengths. To bomber and baseball jackets at 26 inches are added parkas and coatlike styles at a medium 32 inches and up to as long as 40 inches. The idea now is to accommodate a wide range of tastes rather than impose any one style or length.

If there's any one trend, according to I. Spiewak and Sons, whose Golden Fleece jackets often lead the jacket fashions, it's to a smoother, more refined look. Colors and patterns have quieted down, with navy moving up on black as the most popular dark color against flag-red and winter-white. Beige and a softer taupe now have a third basic color, silver-gray.

This is the color of Titan cloth, formerly a rugged industrial cloth introduced by a major car maker for seat covers in their truck division. Proven to be strong, Titan cloth has now taken to softness and sheen, making it usable in outerwear.

Spiewak has tailored it into a Western-style jacket with hand-warmer pockets, rib-knit neckline and storm wristlets. The fabric is a true all-weather material that will not snag, pull or burn. It's even been tested on barbed wire to demonstrate its nonsnag quality. Despite its rugged quality, Titan cloth is lightweight enough to tailor crisply. The Western jacket may be casual, but in this cloth it has style.

Heavily textured surfaces are being replaced by quieter surface treatments in the Golden Fleece collection, or such classic patterns as buffalo plaid in wool lumber jackets. The ski-jacket look remains popular, with linings of Thinsulate or Hollofil to give warmth without bulk.

The chief point about sport jackets is that they look snappier than ever for campus.

© 1986, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

NEW LOOK in Western jackets from I Spiewak and Sons lies in the fabric — silvery Titan cloth. Too rugged to snag or burn, it also takes well to crisp tailoring.

Expert on teenagers urges helping hand

NEW YORK (AP)—Communities need to be more aggressive in committing their resources to teenagers, including summer jobs and other programs and services that are sensitive to adolescents, says teen expert Lois Akner.

"Our ultimate challenge both to families and to society is to provide an environment that has structure, where teens feel safe and cared for, and one that also allows them the freedom to express themselves and to actualize their potential," she said.

Akner, director of Teen Services at the 92nd Street YMY-WHA here, is a specialist in the treatment of adolescents and their families. She is responsible for a number of community programs for teens including a Teen-Age Suicide Prevention Conference. She is on the board for Jobs for Youth, a community agency that deals with unemployment for minority youth.

Akner explains that adolescence is a transition — like crossing a bridge — and society and families must provide the side-rails to that bridge so that teens don't fall off.

"The key is knowing when to rescue a teen-ager and knowing when to let them feel the consequences of what they do," she said.

"Going from adolescence to adulthood is not a direct path. It's full of new experiences and exposure to new ideas. Families have to expand their boundaries to allow for that: the independence one day, the babyishness the next. It may take several trips around the block to get where they're going, and we have to make their trip reasonably safe."

In her work Akner sometimes requires a written contract between the parents, the adolescent, and her organization. This contract lists certain unacceptable behaviors — such as those involving drugs, alcohol and cigarettes — and then spells out the consequences of such unacceptable behaviors, consequences that are strictly enforced.

Another key to helping adolescents approach adulthood is the availability of role models, other than parents, to give teens a sense of the possibilities of success, she pointed out.

No collapse yet

Slaughter, Incaviglia lift Rangers past Orioles

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Tradition is that if the Texas Rangers haven't collapsed by the All-Star break, they waste no time in doing so after returning from the mid-season respite.

Don Slaughter and Pete Incaviglia say it isn't going to be that way this year. Both went out of their way Wednesday night to prove it.

Slaughter hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the 11th inning to give the Rangers a 5-3 win over the Baltimore Orioles. Incaviglia hit a three-run homer in the fifth to account for the Rangers' other runs.

The victory, the Rangers' fifth in seven games after starting the second stanza of the season with a seven-game losing streak that knocked them out of first place, kept Texas within three games of division-leading California in the American League West.

Slaughter said the Rangers' back-to-back wins over the Orioles in extra innings would provide a boost as the team hits the road. The Rangers won 6-5 in 12 innings Tuesday night.

"This is the toughest part of the season — the middle of the season," Slaughter said. "We've bounced back and we're on our way."

Slaughter, whose 11th homer set a new club record for home runs in one year by a catcher, hit the game-winner came after Steve Buechele singled off Nate Snell, 2-1.

Jeff Russell, 2-1, the fourth Ranger pitcher, picked up the victory.

Incaviglia hit a three-run homer, his 17th, after Scott Fletcher was hit by a pitch and Pete O'Brien drew a walk from Mike Boddicker as Texas took a 3-0 lead in the fifth.

"This team is starting to gell," said Incaviglia. "Everybody's real tight. We're starting to feel like we can beat people."

Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver, whose club remains 4½ games behind division-leading New York in the AL East, gave Arlington Stadium, rather than the Incaviglia, credit for his homer.

"(Boddicker) only gave up one hit that inning and 16 feet shorter and he would have had a shut-out," Weaver said. "If we would have been playing in Detroit, Baltimore or New York, he would have had a shutout. But in Texas it's a three-run homer."

"This loss just shows me that I am one or two players short," he said. "I make a couple of moves and I'm out of ammunition."

Texas starter Jose Guzman surrendered only two hits through six innings, but was chased in the seventh when Cal Ripken led off with his 16th homer and Jim Traber singled. Reliever Mitch Williams then hit pinch-hitter Tom Dodd and walked Rick Dempsey on four pitches to load the bases.

Williams then got Jackie Gutierrez to fly out to end the inning.

But Williams started the eighth by hitting hitters Juan Beniquez and Fred Lynn back to back. He then gave up an RBI double to John Shelby and a sacrifice fly to Traber to tie the score.

Astros' Ryan on disabled list

HOUSTON (AP)—Nolan Ryan, the all-time major league strike-out king, is back on the disabled list because of a sore right elbow but is unhappy about the Houston Astros' decision to keep him inactive.

Ryan on Wednesday was placed on the list retroactive to July 28, club spokesman Chuck Pool said. Ryan previously was on the disabled list from June 1 to June 24 because of a sprained medial collateral ligament in his right elbow.

"I think it's premature and I don't agree with it," Ryan said of the club's action. "For some reasons unknown to me, they made a decision that I don't agree with. I think I can pitch. But I have no say in it."

Ryan is 7-7 so far this year but has been 4-1 and overpowering hitters since returning to the pitching rotation in late June.

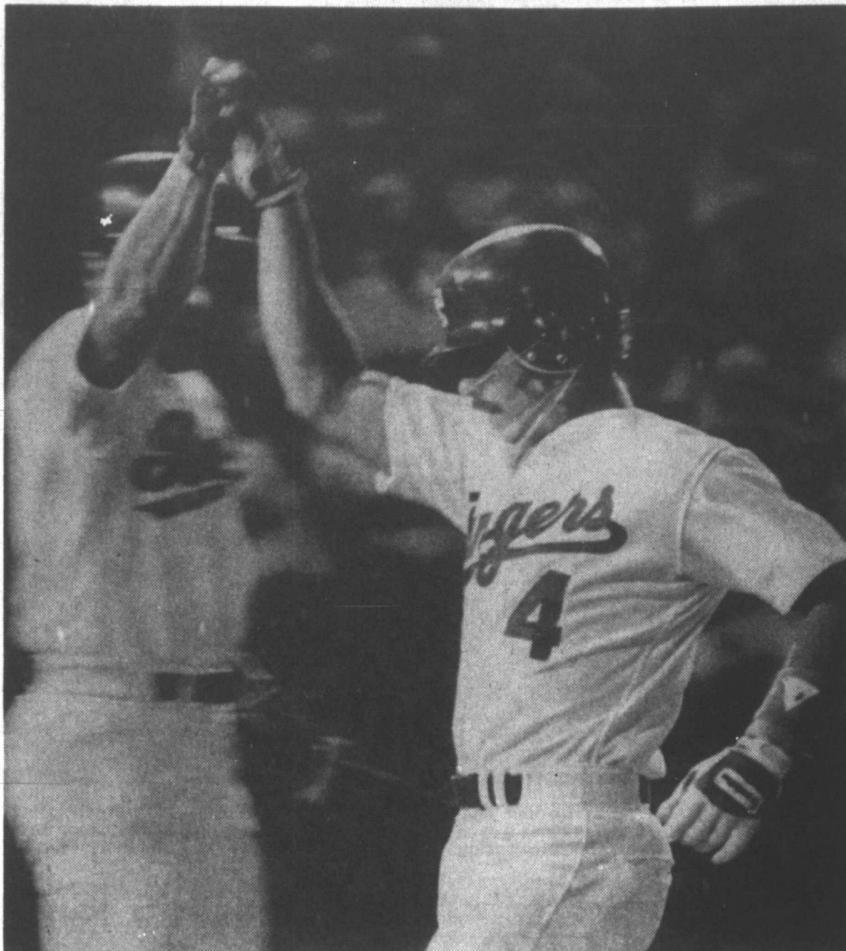

"You have to look at it in the long run," Manager Hal Lanier said. "I need Nolan Ryan in late August and September. Nobody is going to win a division in August. It's going to be won in September, and that's when we need Nolan."

Ryan, however, said he believed he could have pitched with just a couple of days extra rest and missed one start at most.

Ryan's spot on the Astros' roster has been filled by Matt Keough, who comes from the club's AAA affiliate team in Tucson.

Keough, 31, has a 3-1 record in six starts and 4.19 ERA. He opened the season with the Chicago Cubs and was 2-2 in 19 games before being released.

Keough will join the team in San Diego on Friday for a six-game West Coast trip.

Red Sox continue tailspin

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

Despite a slump that has seen them lose 12 of their last 16 games, the Boston Red Sox remained key would win any time ace right-hander Roger Clemens stepped on the mound.

But Boston, which has lost half of its eight-game lead in the American League East this month, never figured to lose because Clemens would fail to step on first base.

"There's no question in my mind I got the bag," Clemens said of the decisive fifth-inning play that gave the Chicago White Sox the go-ahead run in a 7-2 victory Wednesday night.

Clemens, 17-3, not only missed the bag — at least in the opinion of umpire Greg Kosc — he missed the rest of the game after making contact with the arbiter, who promptly tossed him out of the game.

"He said I bumped him, but his arm bumped up against me when he pointed to the bag," Clemens said of the dispute that followed. "He said I'm gone."

"I lost it (his composure) when I realized I was being taken out of a situation to win a ballgame and to win for my team," said Clemens, who has three of Boston's four victories in those 16 games. "I had to calm down, I was hyperventilating."

Elsewhere in the AL, it was Milwaukee 5, New York 0; California 6, Oakland 2; Detroit 11, Cleveland 3; Seattle 4, Minnesota 2; Toronto 7, Kansas City 2, and Texas 5, Baltimore 3 in 11 innings.

Angels 6, A's 2

The California bench made life a little easier for Manager Gene Mauch, with Doug DeCinces, the first of three consecutive pinch hitters, doubling in the go-ahead run in the eighth inning in Oakland.

"It's nice when you make a lot of moves to be making them with good players," Mauch said. "I haven't always had good players on the bench."

John Candelaria, 4-1, pitched five-hit ball for seven innings, striking out five and walking none.

Brewers 5, Yankees 0

After a brief decline prior to his All-Star Game appearance, Milwaukee's Ted Higuera has returned to his early-season form.

"He's the same pitcher as he was before," Brewers Manager George Bamberger said after the left-hander blanked New York on six hits as Milwaukee won its fourth straight and completed a three-game sweep of the Yankees. "When you shut out the Yankees, you've done a super job."

Higuera, 13-7 after winning his third consecutive game, was 1-2 in the four starts prior to the break. He struck out six in completing his ninth game.

Designated hitter Ron Kittle, the key player acquired Tuesday in a six-man trade between New York and Chicago, struck out three times and walked in his debut with the Yankees.

Tigers 11, Indians 3

Cleveland Manager Pat Corrales tipped his hat to Detroit rookie Eric King, who throttled the Indians even though his breaking ball deserted him.

"He's the best young pitcher I've seen this year," Corrales said of the 22-year-old right-hander after King, 8-3, allowed six hits over 7 1-3 innings. "He didn't fool around with any breaking balls."

The Tigers backed King with 13 hits to win for the 11th time in 14 games since the All-Star break.

Cleveland reliever Dickie Noles hit Darnell Coles in the eighth and Dwight Lowry in the ninth, then came close to Kirk Gibson, causing both benches to empty. But no punches were thrown. Then Detroit reliever Jim Slaton threw the first pitch in the bottom of the ninth over the head of Andre Thornton, leading to his ejection.

Blue Jays 7, Royals 2

Toronto's Joe Johnson was happy to get his first AL victory, but happier still to be involved in a pennant race.

"I pitched well. We're in a race and it's exciting," he said after leading his new team to a three-game sweep of Kansas City that left the Blue Jays 5½ games behind Boston in the East.

Johnson, obtained from Atlanta — last in the National League West — on July 6, scattered six hits through 6 2-3 innings before giving way to John Cerutti, who picked up his second save.

Mariners 4, Twins 2

Seattle's Spike Owen figured that with the bases loaded in the sixth inning he would see a fastball from Minnesota's Neal Heaton, 4-10. He guessed right.

"He got the fastball out over the plate and I was able to line the pitch into center field," Owen said of his decisive two-run single.

Rangers 5, Orioles 3

Catcher Don Slaughter was given the night off by Texas Manager Bobby Valentine to some rest before the Rangers start a road trip.

"It just so happened that he needed me tonight in the 10th and things worked out for us," said Slaughter, whose two-run homer in the 11th inning was his 11th of the season, setting a new club record for home runs in one year by a catcher.

Stars' Sutton feels he can play in NFL

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Herschel Walker, Kelvin Bryant and Jim Kelly have little reason to worry about their football futures. With or without a USFL, they'll be in demand.

Jonathan Sutton, on the other hand, realizes he might have trouble finding work if the USFL is unable to weather Tuesday's federal court setback in its antitrust suit against the NFL.

But Sutton, a starting cornerback for the two-time USFL champion Baltimore Stars, is convinced he's good enough to play in the NFL if the USFL fades into oblivion.

"I've most definitely proven I can play football," Sutton said Wednesday. "I've put seven years into it at this point. It's been an uphill battle from day one. I've worked hard for it. I'm not about to quit now."

Despite the outcome of the USFL-NFL trial — the NFL was found guilty of violating an antitrust law but the USFL was awarded only $1 in damages —

South cagers win

Howse, Hobbs, key rally in closing seconds

HOUSTON (AP) — Coach Roy Garcia of Mission says his South team's 74-71 victory over the North in the Texas High School Coaches Association All-Star basketball game was an inside job.

"Our inside play was the difference in the game," said Garcia. "When their big men went out with fouls, ours took over the game."

Roderick Brown helped the South's cause until he fouled out late in the game, and Calvin Tillis was impressive enough to earn most valuable player honors for the Rebels.

North Coach George Byerly said his team suffered when Steve Miles of Dallas Samuell fouled out in the game in the crucial fourth quarter.

"It hurt us when our guys had to leave the game," Byerly said. "It forced us to move players around and do things that we hadn't covered in practice."

The South led by 10 points late in the third quarter, but the North rallied to take a 62-59 lead in the closing minutes.

But the South finally extended its series lead to 22-20 when Mike Howse of Corpus Christi Miller hit a layup with 42 seconds to play and Michael Hobbs of Clear Lake, a last-minute addition to the South squad, hit two free throws in the final 14 seconds to secure the victory.

Jerry Mason of Lamesa, who scored 17 points, was named the most valuable player for the North squad and Calvin Tillis of Grapeland earned the honor for the South.

After losing the lead, the South regained the advantage for good with 1:21 to play on a basket by Brown, representing Alief Hastings.

The South took a 36-29 halftime lead and built a 10-point margin at 54-44 with 2:50 to go in the third quarter.

The South rallied from a 62-59 deficit with 7:14 to play and regained the lead on a basket by Robert Barley of Brookshire Royal and five straight free throws.

The North made the game's early charge, outscoring the South 9-0 during the first quarter for a 13-7 lead.

The South had an 11-0 second-quarter surge to take a 36-29 lead at the half.

Barley put the South ahead to stay in the second quarter at 18-17 and the Rebels led by as many as eight points before the half. The South lost the lead only briefly in the crucial fourth quarter.

The North played the game without Roderick Hampson of Dallas Kimball and Billy Ray Smith of South Garland, who were dismissed from the team for disciplinary reasons.

Football game tonight

HOUSTON (AP) — South Coach Lynn Etheredge of Tomball has the weapons to make tonight's Texas High School Coaches Association All-Star football game a high-scoring game.

But those weapons could misfire from lack of enough preparation time.

"I can see now why these games have been low scoring," Etheredge said. "It's so hard to get an offense in in four days. The defenses are always superior to the offenses early in the season and that is accentuated for this game."

Etheredge would like to entertain the crowd with a pass-catch display from quarterback Lance Pavlas of Tomball and receiver Percy Waddle of Columbus, both headed for Texas A&M this fall.

"We hope to get the ball to Percy deep," Etheredge said. "But he's a threat no matter what the range of pass. That speed is hard to beat. We can make it fun if he can catch a few passes."

Waddle, 6-2, 175, of Columbus is a two-time Class 3A 400 meters champion and ran a leg on a junior world record 1600-meter relay team.

Pavlas led Etheredge's Tomball team to the state Class 4A title game the past two years, making Etheredge's job easier for the All-Star game.

"It means that I don't have to coach the most important position on the team, it saves a lot of time," Etheredge said.

REBOUND BATTLE — Mike Howse of the South battles Pat McDonald (31) of the North for the rebound in the Texas All-Star Basketball Game. Howse of Corpus Christi Miller hit a layup down the stretch to help the South to a 74-71 victory. McDonald is from Dimmitt. (AP Laserphoto)

Farmers reduce debt, but assets going down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers shaved a bit from their huge debt last year, but their assets — chiefly land values — continued to sag and helped whipsaw another hunk out of their net worth, according to the Agriculture Department report.

As of Jan. 1, the nation's farm debt probably was in the range of $195 billion to $202 billion, compared with $198.9 billion on Jan. 2, 1985, the report said.

Total assets, meanwhile, declined for the fourth consecutive year to a range of $755 billion to $805 billion, down from $856.1 billion a year earlier. A 12 percent drop in land values was blamed for most of the decrease.

"Changes in assets and debts continued to reduce owner equity in 1985," the report said. "Equity dropped by about $75 billion from its 1984 level and by nearly $200 billion since 1982."

The report, by the department's Economic Research Service, said that the drop in equity "indicates a diminished wealth position" of farmers and their ability to use assets as collateral to obtain loans.

One indicator of farm financial condition is the ratio between debt and assets. As of Jan. 1, the report said, the ratio was estimated to range between 0.25 and 0.27, compared with 0.232 a year earlier.

That means that for every $100 in farm assets, there was a debt of $25 to $27. Gary Lucier, an economist in the USDA agency, said the Jan. 1 reading was the highest since records were begun in 1939, although the ratio could have been higher in the earlier Depression years.

When compared with equity, the debt was even bigger. It showed that for every $100 of equity there was a debt of $33 to $35 as of Jan. 1, compared with $30.30 a year earlier.

The latest figures were based on USDA's 1985 Farm Costs and Returns Survey conducted in February and March of this year. The survey included 11,497 samples which were used to generate national figures for more than 1.55 million farms.

Looking at farm debt of actual farm operators — which does not include land, and debt and some other categories — the report showed that farm operators owed about $113.4 billion as of Jan. 1, down from $120.2 billion a year earlier. Items that increased included debt to the Farmers Home Administration and to the department's Commodity Credit Corp. for price support loans.

But the overall reduction masked the plight of many farm operators who have had to borrow heavily to stay in business.

"From the farm business perspective, 66 percent of total U.S. operator debt is or could be at risk," the report said. "Farm businesses vulnerable to earnings and solvency problems owed 26 percent of U.S. farm operator debt. Farm businesses that could face problems if their income drops owed an additional 40 percent of total operator debt."

CALCULATION OF EFFECTIVE TAX RATE, ESTIMATED UNENCUMBERED FUND BALANCES, AND DEBT SCHEDULE

I. Billy B. Adams, tax assessor-collector for Alameda ISD, in accordance with Sec. 26.04, Property Tax Code, has calculated a 1986 rate of $1.18 per $100 of value as the tax rate which may not be exceeded by more than three percent by the governing body of the Alameda ISD without holding a public hearing as required by the code.

The estimated unencumbered fund balance for Maintenance & Operation fund: $235,000.00. The estimated unencumbered fund balance for Interest & Sinking fund: $0.

The following schedule lists debt obligations that 1986 property taxes will pay: No bonded or other indebtedness.

Billy B. Adams Tax Assessor-Collector, 728-28-86. CALCULATION OF EFFECTIVE TAX RATE

1. 1985 total tax levy: $219,279 (1985 tax rate: M&O $1.59 + I&S $0 = $1.59/$100)

2. Subtract 1985 debt service (I&S) levy: -$0

3. Subtract 1985 taxes on property in territory no longer in unit in 1986: -$0

4. Subtract 1985 taxes for property becoming exempt in 1986: -$25

5. Subtract 1985 taxes for property appraised at less than market value in 1986: -$0

6. Subtract frozen M&O levy of over 65 homesteads: -$41

7. Subtract 1985 M&O taxes used to regain lost 1986 levy: -$0

8. Adjusted 1985 M&O levy (subtract #2, #3, #4, #5, #6 and #7 and #7 from #1): $219,213

9. 1986 total taxable value of all property: $32,586,480

10. Subtract 1986 value of new improvements added since 1/1/85: -$625,360

11. Subtract 1986 value of annexed property added since 1/1/85: -$0

12. Subtract 1986 value of over 65 homesteads with frozen taxes: -$17,200

13. Adjusted 1986 taxable value for M&O (subtract #10, #11 and #12 from #9): $31,943,926

14. Divide the adjusted 1985 M&O levy (#8 above) by the adjusted 1986 taxable value for M&O (#13 above) ($219,213 ÷ $31,943,926) = 0.006864

15. Multiply by $100 valuation = $100

16. Effective M&O rate for 1986: $0.6864/$100

17. 1986 I&S levy needed to satisfy debt: -$0

18. Subtract frozen I&S levy of over 65 homesteads: -$0

After 100 years, another train heist finds Round Rock

ROUND ROCK, Texas (AP) — For the first time since the late 19th century, robbers have hit a train in Round Rock, authorities say.

The bandits who pulled off the Saturday night holdup remain at large, police said.

According to police, a Union Pacific freight train was waiting for another train to pass about 9 p.m. Saturday when two men, one carrying a pistol, held up the brakeman in the caboose.

"They demanded that he step down, and they took $300 cash and several pieces of jewelry," said Officer Dan LeMay.

"He got back on the train after they left on foot and called us. We checked the area for suspects and several people have been questioned, but there are no arrests," LeMay said.

LeMay said the robbers may have been riding the train illegally and may have jumped off to commit the crime, then jumped back on. Police did not search the train before it pulled away, heading for Chicago. Witnesses later reported seeing men riding in the train cars, he said.

"This is the first train robbery in Round Rock since the late 1800s," LeMay said. "I really hope (the robbers) turn out to be locals."

A notorious 19th Century train robber, Sam Bass, was killed by Texas Rangers in Round Rock in 1878 after being betrayed by one of the members of his gang.

Ice cream vendor kiddies' pied piper

Dallas Times Herald

LEWISVILLE, Texas (AP) — The sharp melody of the electronic music box pierces the early afternoon on the silent, tree-lined street. Ahead, children clutching quarters gather in small clusters along the curb.

The white truck eases to a stop. Small customers, plump and sun-burned, crowd around the right rear of the vehicle, jabbering excitedly, pressing stubby fingers against pictures of frozen treats.

A frosty white cloud billows from the freezer door as Kandice Kugle fills each order. The freezer door closes with a firm clink-thunk, the jabbering turns to slurps, and Ms. Kugle is on her way.

Except for the prices — 50 cents for a fudge bar, 75 cents for a chocolate coated ice cream cone — the scene could be the childhood memory of several generations.

"I'm making memories," Ms. Kugle says. "These are the happiest — or at least the easiest — times for the kids who follow me down the street with quarters in their hands. Life is just going to get more complicated for them."

But Ms. Kugle doesn't get too sentimental.

"I'm feeling more and more guilty about selling this stuff all the time," she confides. "If parents ask me, I tell them it's bad for the kids. They really shouldn't eat it."

Now understand that Ms. Kugle does not have a mainstream view of diet and nutrition. At 38, she eats only brown rice and fruit. She began a spiritual voyage several years ago that carried her down dusty lanes in India, the Middle East and South America as well as through the cul-de-sacs of Lewisville subdivisions.

She recently asked a Dallas psychic to conduct a "trans-channeling" to determine where the voyage might lead her. "He saw me selling salads and health food (out of the truck) to men at construction sites," she says. Ms. Kugle saw things differently.

Today, Ms. Kugle works seven days a week and five to seven hours a day selling frozen treats. And this is the peak of the season.

"Everybody thinks the hotter it gets, the more ice cream I sell. That's absolutely wrong," she says. "The best ice cream selling weather is 75 to 80 degrees. The hottest part of the summer is better for lower income neighborhoods. In upper income areas like this, kids just aren't motivated enough to get out of the backyard pool or to leave the air-conditioned house."

Ms. Kugle drives the same route in the same pattern every day. The music box plays the same notes over and over and over.

"It's monotonous," she says, "but the kids get tuned into it. I'm like the Pied Piper."

Ms. Kugle is one of several hundred ice cream vendors in the Dallas area. Some, like Ms. Kugle, drive trucks. Others use push carts. Some, like Ms. Kugle, are independent operators who own their own equipment and buy from a distributor. Others work for one of the half dozen or so large companies that still have street sales.

Ms. Kugle owns one of the original Good Humor trucks, but because that ice cream company abandoned street sales she must keep the legendary name obscured. Bumper stickers that read "USA Africa" and "We will end world hunger" help do the job. Even so, the familiar-looking truck sparks memories as it rolls slowly down the street.

"Parents always tell me how much the ice cream truck meant to them when they were growing up. I guess I mean a lot to these kids, but it's hard for me to relate. I grew up on a ranch," Ms. Kugle says.

The parents who buy from her prefer the traditional treats — fudge bars, ice cream sandwiches, Eskimo Pies. But the ice cream vending business doesn't depend on nostalgia. A growing number of vendors sell to a new generation of customers.

Neither is Ms. Kugle a traditional ice cream vendor. An agriculture graduate of Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos, she tried a marriage to a rodeo cowboy and a job as a school teacher before finding the ice cream vending business.
