Kentucky Men Slay Five In Election Row

Mountaineers Blaze Away Over Table In Voting Booth

PRESTONSBURG, Ky. (AP)—Kentucky's worst shooting since the Lexington riots of 1929 claimed five lives in Floyd county, left another man critically wounded and two others less seriously shot. Dr. Orris Gerhard, attending physician, said Lawrence Conn. 23, may live a day or two but has no chance for recovery.

Mountain guns blazed across a table in a voting booth on the head of Prater Creek Saturday, climaxing dispute whether it was time to halt voting in a school trustee election or if two minutes remained for balloting.

WASHINGTON

By George Durne

Futures—

Hold your hats and listen to this political lineup. It comes from men whose ideas can hardly be laughed away.

Gov. Lehman of New York to watch the Senatorial toga from Royal Copeland next year.

Jim Farley of the many jobs as Democratic candidate for governor in the same election and—

The same Farley as Democratic candidate for President in 1940!

Strange things could happen. A definite line of reasoning is back of it all.

Lehman is said to be unhappy in the gubernatorial chair at Albany.

Dr. Copeland is on the administration black list for voting against President Roosevelt on several crucial occasions. Farley is as ambitious as the next man to be President.

With Lehman contesting the Senatorial nomination against Copeland Farley would be a cinch for the nod as Governor. At least so say some influential politicians who've been through Washington.

Not a word of course from Postmaster General-National Chairman Farley.

A build-up for 1940 would make it necessary for him to be a three-time governor.

He'll be in Roosevelt's corner for reelection in 1936. Make no mistake about that.

If such a combination should materialize you'll have an interesting situation.

Farley would be assuming Al Smith's mantle. They're both active churchmen.

There might possibly be this difference. Four southern states helped to throw Al in '28. Jim has been doing some powerful missionary work in the south for months.

He's been dodging below the Mason-Dixon line with great regularity. Always exuding that personality and uncanny memory for names and faces.

'Pa'—

Another interesting political story comes up from down Texas way.

They say Jim Ferguson is getting the itch to run against Tom Connally for the senate next year.

Jim is the husband of "Ma", present governor of Texas. Jim was governor once himself but got impeached. He's not eligible for state office but a little thing like that wouldn't stop his shooting for the senate.

Ferguson hasn't said anything yet. But those who know the signs whisper that he's talking now just the way he used to when trying himself for the political fray.

Tape—

It looks as if we're going to need a coordinator to coordinate our coordinators.

Unless President Roosevelt hurries back to do this colossal job of interweaving personally. He probably will.

Now it's the federal lending agencies that seem to be in a squirrel cage.

Some Michigan bankers hit town. They need dough pronto. They had stated their case to the Chicago Federal Reserve bank before leaving home.

In Washington they want to the R. F. C. Jesse Jones's hired men said matters would have to be looked up first. The Chicago statement was of no interest.

The bankers went to the Federal Reserve Board. It seemed the

"I have hopes" said C. T. Watson, manager of the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce in a telegram to The Herald early Monday afternoon from Washington, D. C., where he is to confer with the Secretary of Agriculture concerning status of drought stricken farmers under the government's cotton acreage retirement plan.

Precipitation Here During June Lowest On Record For 32 Years

June of this year was the driest on record here in 32 years as rainfall figures have been kept. Precipitation at the United States weather bureau at the airport amounted to only .91 inch. A shower which fell June 28 amounted to .16 inch at the government experiment farm a mile north of town, and covered most of the city.

Highest temperature recorded here in June over a period of 32 years was 117 degrees, lowest in that period 84 degrees.

Normal temperature for June is 80.6 degrees, while mean temperature during the past month was 81.1 degrees.

Farmers File Cotton Contracts

Many Yet To File Acreage Cut Agreement

Two Hundred Contracts Yet To Be Turned In Says Griffin

Contracts signed and approved by the county steering committee showed farmers of this section are rallying to the acreage reduction plan.

Ninety-six farmers with 9,121 acres growing, offered 4,019 acres for retirement.

Actual cash benefits to the ninety-six farmers amounts to $29,518.50 besides an option on 698.96 bales of government cotton.

Average anticipated yield per acre to be retired was 119.2 pounds. Average yield in 1932 was 188 pounds of lint per acre. The latter average is made lower because many farmers could not ascertain or approximate yield for last year.

There are more than 100 contracts filed with the county agent and subject to approval of the county committee. An equal number is in the hands of community committees or lien holders.

Contracts in the heavy producing section of Howard county have not yet been considered. It is believed the average of farmers around the Coahoma district will boost the per acre yield average materially. The normally low producing areas of this county happen to be drought stricken.

Reductions averaged between forty and fifty per cent.

County Agent O. P. Griffin and the county steering committee expressed the opinion the campaign would be completed here by the middle of the week. At that time they are confident 100 per cent of farmers with cotton up to a stand will have been signed as participants in the retirement plan.

The steering committee was kept busy throughout Saturday afternoon signing contracts and giving information.

"One of the most encouraging things about the whole matter," said Griffin, "is that three out of every four farmers are not thinking about benefit payments but about control."

The local committee has been handicapped by lack of material until Wednesday. Until that day it had been acting on telegraphic advice. When adequate facilities were received, several changes had to be made.

"It has been almost impossible to marshal a farmer committee for the work we have been doing," declared Griffin, "and hope for everything to be right. Yet we have done remarkably well."

Members of the committee and farmers who milled around the Woodman Hall during the day were cheerful over the outlook.

Conference Is Given Jolt By Roosevelt

President Criticizes Gold Bloc Seeking Early Stabilization

LONDON (AP)—President Roosevelt exploded a bombshell at the world economic conference Monday with an uncompromising statement not only rejecting French and other gold currency overtures for temporary currency stabilization but sharply criticizing what they described as attempt to divert the conference from its broad objectives.

This resulted in European gold blocs taking definite steps to make good a threat to desert parley unless it sailed under flag of gold.

It was stated in gold bloc quarters that some delegations expected immediate orders from their governments to return home. Should entire gold group consisting of France, Belgium, Holland, Italy and Switzerland abandon conference it would be virtually paralyzed.

PARIS (AP)—France's decision to continue at world economic conference temporarily to strive to rally England around the gold flat was confirmed Monday by an announcement that Finance Minister Georges Bonnet would return to London Monday.

The report France would withdraw from the parley unless an agreement was reached by July 15 was denied by authorized sources.

Reduction In Valuations And Tax Rate Understood To Be In Sight As County Judge Prepares Budget

With taxable valuations for the next year definitely settled, Judge H. R. Debenport Monday was busying himself with the task of preparing the 1934 county budget.

Interviews with private property owners were held Friday and Saturday by commissioners court convened as an equalization board. Previously representatives of oil and utility companies had been heard.

Reduction in valuations and rate are both in sight, it is understood. One thing which will mar an otherwise rosy aspect is the disappointing showing on collection of the last half of split payment plan taxes. It is estimated that $8,000 in this kind went uncollected.

Judge Debenport is working doubly hard to complete a preliminary draft of the budget as soon as possible that the court may deal primarily with highway construction.

Pumped through tubing without an oil string having been run, M. D. Bryant and others' No. 1 Denman, one of eastern Howard county's most recent producers, made 60 barrels the first 24 hours and 75 barrels the second day, ending Friday morning. LOVE, PREFERRED

By EDNA ROBB WEBSTER

CHAPTER 5
Mary talked briskly the three blocks from the station that were the last lap of her daily journey home. The air was cold and crisp, acrid with smoke of burning leaves and autumn haze. Some of the trees already stretched gaunt, naked arms to the aloof, dull sky as if asking why they had been shorn of their beauty. They moaned and sighed and clashed their limbs together as in anguish, when the chill wind stirred. The dead leaves swirled and rustled beneath them as if in mockery. It was not a pleasant autumn evening.

Mary was tired. She thought, as she hurried along, that it would be no luxurious to slip off alone to a room or apartment or her own where she could relax in quiet and comfort. Which thought was instantly submerged when she entered the Vaughn section of the house on East 25th street.

The rest of the family seldom got over to New York, except Bonnie, when she went for shopping or her own pleasure, so they always expected Mary to bring home a bit of the city to them: news, gossip, incidents, jokes. They never could realize that she hadn't been on a lark and that was a relief to her to get away from shop and talking shop.

She tried to be obliging and entertaining especially for Mom's sake. Her mother's world was so small and her happiness had been so very limited. The house and the cooking, the boys and the sewing she could do, kept her hands well from idleness and Satan's designs.

Mary browsed around the shops whenever she could spare any time and brought her mother little new ideas in styles and designs. She subscribed for all the fashion magazines for her, from which Mrs. Vaughn derived quite as much pleasure as anything in her life. Jennie Vaughn really was clever, but she never had had an opportunity to capitalize her ability beyond catering to a few Paterson matrons who still maintained that you could not buy as good a ready-to-wear dress for the price as you could have made—fortunately for the Vaughns.

The fact is that half of Mom's ingenious creations were lavished on her limited time for work. Ever since Bonnie was a wee tot with sundog curls, her mother's one delight had been designing and making clothes for Bonnie. And Bonnie made the most of it, even yet. Every time she could get her hands on any money, she would go to New York and purchase lengths of shimmering materials, get an idea from some Paris model in an exclusive modiste shop and Mrs. Vaughn would sit up all hours of the night, stitching with deft fingers on the seams that could well have been worn inside out, they were so perfectly done.

But when Mary needed a dress, her mother always seemed to have too much to do for other people; besides, store clothes were well enough on plain Mary and more suitable for business wear. Smart apparel wasn't necessary in an office. Somehow, Mary never resented little things like that. It had always been that way, and the whole family accepted it as a fact that Mary didn't care much about clothes or anything else so long as she could make the family budget balance the urgent needs. She was like the man of a family that looks so sad for sustenance and considers him little more than a mechanical cash register that rings cheerfully when it is punched.

In other respects it was much the same way. The family awaited Mary's arrival for dinner and greeted her much as a man of the house. The spicy odor of baked ham welcomed her that night when she came in from the cold bleakness of the night. "Hello, everyone," she called in a muffled voice from the depths of the coat closet, hanging up her coat and hat. The hall was dark, but the light streamed across the floor from the kitchen door.

Mrs. Vaughn stepped around the stove and peered into the hall. "That you, Mary?" Well, for once you're home on time. Colder out, isn't it?"

Mary came into the warm, clean kitchen and sniffed the delicious aroma of the dinner. "Yes, feels like it might snow. And it is good to be home for a real dinner, once," looking around to see what there was to eat. Her mother was a splendid cook when there was plenty to cook. Mary slipped an arm about her broad waist and gave her an affectionate little squeeze. She knew that her mother was starved for love. She had adored Tim Vaughn and never ceased to grieve for him. She was the kind of a woman who is not demonstrative, but responds to overtures of affection, timidly. Mary kissed the warm, soft cheek. Mrs. Vaughn was young with years, but they had been difficult years and her hair was streaked with gray, as if time had dealt it broad cruel strokes and then retreated for a space between. She was industrious, but somewhat improvident. For the past five years she had leaned heavily upon Mary.

There was a sudden clatter on the stairs and then a final thud that shook the very timbers of the house. Tim and Ted hurtled into the kitchen. Their mutual objective was Mary. Ted reached her first and almost knocked her off her feet with his vehement greeting. "Say, Mary—gee! I'm glad you came home tonight. I just gotta have a dollar and Mom hasn't got any money." Confidently, his merry blue eyes looked up to her from beneath the cowl of his forehead.

Mary put her arm around his shoulders and laughed. "You should say, 'Mom has no money,' her mother always seemed to have

"I gotta have one, too," Tim stammered. "Why, at school we're making book ends in manual training and we gotta buy the wood and stuff. Say, Mary, you oughta see the purty design. I made for mine!"

"It's no better'n mine," Ted snorted. "And I'm going to give mine to Mary for Christmas, so there."

"Aw, say—well, then I'll give mine to Mom," Tim changed with a tone of reluctance. "All right, go wash your hands and faces and brush your hair ready for dinner, and I'll give you each a dollar," Mary promised.

"That's a lot to do for a dollar," Ted grinned. "I wish dollars were that easy to earn, boys."

"What's all the row?" Bonnie asked, coming from the living room with a book in her hand. Half yawning, she said, "Hello, old girl. Fudge of heart. What's new?"

Mary was leading the gravy into a bowl while her mother whisked the mashed potatoes to snowy snow. "Oh, not much. Except that Dick has asked me to go to the game at Yale on Saturday with his crowd."

"Going? Well, rather. Why not?" Bonnie grinned. "Oh, I've known you to turn down games before. You go for Dick in a big way, don't you? I never knew you to leave your work for a date, before."

"Why?" Mary's heart sank. She wanted Dick all to herself. Such a little time they had together, with his leaving town so much and her working evenings. "I don't like to ask him just yet. I really don't know him very well."

"All right, selfish," Bonnie retorted. "If we start and get stranded half way, I won't walk home."

"Better give 'em our scooters," Ted offered with a snicker. "Boys, that will do," Mrs. Vaughn reprimanded. "I don't see why you couldn't take Bonnie and Walter," she turned to Mary. "It would save expense to drive one car instead of two."

Resentment smothered Mary for a moment. When had she ever imposed upon Bonnie with her dates? For Walter, yes. And if he would go to work he could afford a better car."

"Aw, say, you don't need to be so high-bat because you happened to land Dick Baldwin. I could get him away from you just like that, if I wanted to. I'll bet he's not so hot, if he is an ex-football star and drives a Buick," Bonnie declared with a sour-grape sneer.

"Say, Mary, is your guy a football star?" Tim demanded, almost rising from his chair. "Mary nodded quietly, hurt with Bonnie's rebuff. "He was a full-back on Princeton last year. Remember his pictures in the papers?"

"I'll say! Ain't we got 'em all pasted in a book? Gosh," he marveled. "Is he comin' here some time?"

LEARNING A LESSON FROM THE NAVY.

Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, U. S. N., who retired some years ago after long and distinguished service in the navy, believes that the republic as a whole right now is going through the same difficult sort of transition period that the navy went through in Admiral Fiske's youth.

When Admiral Fiske was a stripling officer, back in 1880, the American navy was composed largely of ships in which old-time sailors like Nelson could have felt quite at home; wooden sailing ships fitted with smooth-bore guns, manned by broadsides, manned by men to whom steam power was anathema.

"Within a decade all that was changed and with what difficulty!" says the admiral. "The officers had to learn, or invent, rather, a new profession. The ships and guns had to be built, they had to be handled and a strategy for them had to be devised. A whole new method of thought had to be created. Do you see the analogy? That was our material improvement. We've had that in the country, too, now. We've gone from the little wooden ships to the steel monsters, literally and figuratively."

The parallel is a good one; and

Mrs. Herbert G. Keaton Entertains For Her Sisters

Pastel Tints And Hand-Painted Placques Feature Unusually Charming Summer Party

Mrs. Herbert G. Keaton was hostess for a delightful summer party Saturday morning, honoring her two sisters, Misses Frances and Mary Ida Morton, of Strawn. Her mother, Mrs. C. M. Morton, was also a honor guest, although she does not play bridge.

A profusion of summer flowers, zinnias in the pale pinks, sweetpeas and Shasta daisies made the rooms charming for play. The tallies reflected colors of pink, yellow and green.

The guest played bridge all morning and were served at noon with a substantial and delicious two-course luncheon.

The hostess presented the three honor guests with attractive gifts. Mrs. Morton was given a hand-painted placque done by Mrs. Keaton herself. Miss Frances received a pair of hose and Miss Mary Ida a brilliant head band.

Mrs. Adams Talley was the lucky recipient of a placque painted by the hostess for the highest scorer. Mrs. L. G. Talley won high cut and received a framed miniature picture.

The guest list included in addition to the honorees: Misses Adams Talley, C. C. Carter, Vivian Nichols, C. E. Talbot, J. L. Rush, Morris Burns, Hugh Duncan, O. M. Waters, Hayes Stripling, O. R. Bollinger, L. G. Talley, W. H. Remala, M. Wenz, Stanford, W. K. Edwards, A. L. Underwood, Tom Johnson of Spearman, A. Schmitzer, V. W. Latson, Jimmie Mason, Cecil Collings, and Miss Virginia Frances.

the way in which the navy accommodated itself to radically changed conditions may, as Admiral Fiske believes, point a moral for the nation as a whole.

These old-time navy officers, who, in Admiral Fiske's words, "loved their beautiful white sails and spotted decks, and could not bear the thought of smoke and machinery," are not unlike the modern politicians and business men who look back to the social and economic order of a by-gone day and wish to bring it back again.

Mechanical developments made a change in the navy as inevitable as the sunrise. The problem was not solved until the navy officers stopped wringing their hands over the decline of the old ways and set to work to bring the service into line with modern inventions.

In the same way, modern developments in manufacturing, transportation, distribution and in finance have changed the picture for the nation itself.

It will do us no good to look back regretfully to the day of unchecked individualism, small businesses and keep-the-government-out-of-business. We can solve our problem only as the navy men solved theirs—by pitching in wholeheartedly, calling on the technicians for help and resolving to accommodate our institutions to changed conditions.

IT WAS A "BARGAIN" WHEN SHE BOUGHT IT

● These days, many a product that looked like a bargain at the store becomes only a disappointment at home.

It is easy to account for such mistakes in buying. Just as easy to avoid them, if you know why they are made.

When families have little money to spend, all manufacturers try to reduce the price of their merchandise. Those who have built a reputation for quality guard it jealously, lowering the prices of their products as far as they can without sacrificing any of the quality you always look for.

Other manufacturers go too far in their efforts to sell goods. To make a low price still lower, they sometimes reduce quality. Or bring out entirely new products of lower grade.

You may be told these products are "just as good" as the brands you know by experience, by their advertising, or the reputations of their makers. But all too frequently, they are urged upon you only because they pay maker and dealer a higher margin of profit.

Remember these facts when you shop, and you will look for genuine bargains among brands you recognize. Many of these brands now cost less than they have in years.

When you buy them you pay a low price, but an honest one that assures highest quality, complete satisfaction. ●

San Antonio And Corpus Christi Plan To Fight For Construction Of New Road By Southern Pacific

Business Men Meeting In San Antonio Decide To Urge Immediate Action On Corpus Christi To San Angelo Project

San Antonio (UP)—Plans to urge upon the Southern Pacific railroad the advantages of immediate construction of the Gulf and West Texas railroad from San Antonio to Corpus Christi through San Antonio and Fredericksburg were laid at a meeting of 35 business and professional men from cities along the route.

Friends of the Family

As science and discovery go on, newly developed products are constantly being advertised—ready to help you save money and improve your standard of living. Every advertisement of such a product you read in your daily paper is a letter of introduction to a new and possibly useful friend. It will pay you to read the advertisements in this paper every day. By so doing you will meet many choice products—worthy to become friends of the family. LOOK at the packages on your pantry and bathroom shelves, and see what a multitude of brand names you recognize. Some of them have been familiar for years. You may have made the acquaintance of others only a few weeks ago. But even these are not suspected strangers. You have bought them confidently because they were advertised. And it is the same with your sheets and towels, your shoes and clothes, your electric appliances, the car in your garage—nearly everything you use. Advertised products have a standing that commands respect. They are not nameless, but vouched for by responsible firms. The fact that they are advertised is in itself an indication that their standards of quality are strictly maintained, that they represent honest value.

W. Walker's Two Homers Lead Attack

Morgan Relieved In Ninth With Score Tied, Baber Hits Hard

After running up a lead in the sixth inning, Big Spring slipped and Coahoma scored enough runs to edge the Bulldogs out 12 to 11. Big Spring scored in the third frame when Harris was awarded first on a fielder's choice and was followed by Baber's triple. Coahoma also scored in the third on two home runs by Mahoney and Walker.

Mahoney was chased in the sixth and Hutto took the mound. Although allowing a number of hits he scattered them through the rest of the game. Morgan was relieved by Payne with two on in the ninth and the score tied, but he failed to hold and the winning run was tallied off of him.

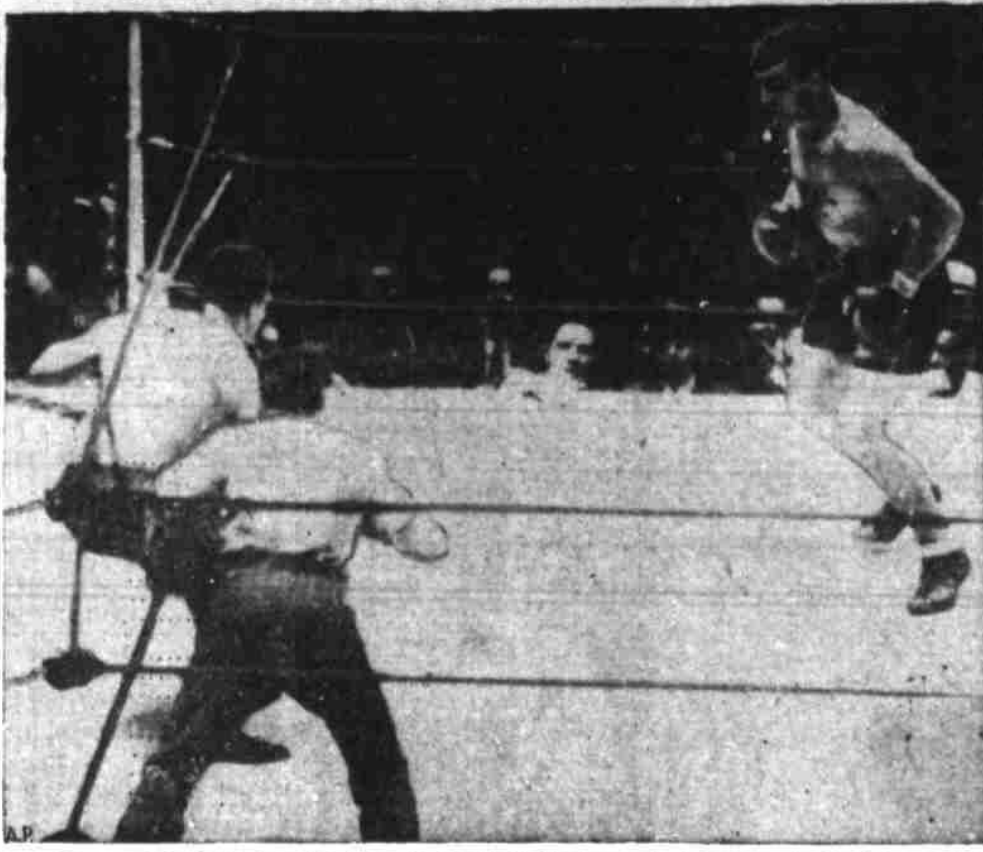

W. Walker hit two home runs, Madison and Babers of Big Spring hit three for five. A double and a triple were included in Babers hitting. Jake Morgan whiffed seven of the Coahoma batsmen.

Lone Error Deprives Odessa Hurler, Playing Ackerly Of Perfect Game

ODESSA—By the ill luck of a lone error, permitting a batter to reach first, Park Allen, star moundman for the Oilers, was deprived of the glory of a perfect ball game here Friday afternoon. Pitching air-tight ball, with perfect support, Allen handed the strong shutouts imaginable here Friday.

Each team made one error in the first inning; after which the game was errorless. Allen did not walk a man, and struck out nine of the Ackerly batters. The entire Oiler squad played perfect ball. Brooks Travis and Dick Cook leading the hitting.

The Ackerly boys, who are leaders of the Tri-County League, had won 13 out of 14 games, but were helpless against Allen's twirling and the air-tight Odessa defense. Watson, shortstop, handled seven hot chances, while Dameron at third took five. Both boys played brilliantly, with Andrews at first receiving their hot shots in the best of style.

The largest week-day crowd of the season was on hand to see the Oilers strut their best form of the year.

Ackerly Wins In Baseball Tournament

Dorn Loses Hold In Ninth Frame When Five Runs Are Tallied

BY THORNTON HART
With the aid of two Tigers, A. Garcia and Raymond Cruz, Ackerly lambasted Dorn in the ninth inning to score five runs, and win the pennant 6 to 2.

Rose pitched good ball although in several tight spots. Dorn also pitched creditable ball until the last frame. Errors by infielders contributed to Col-Tex's downfall. Ackerly was in trouble in the third when there was a man on third and one out, but Berry saved a possible score when he pulled a double play unassisted.

Col-Tex scored in the first on three singles by Coffee, Scarborough and O'Neil. Col-Tex kept Garcia from the plate in the seventh when the ball was relayed and Willis was tagged at second. Brown tallied Garcia in the eighth on a long double to left center. R. Cruz contributed several nice catches throughout the game.

Giants Lose In Semi-Final

Wright Hurls Ackerly To Victory Over Local Team

Ackerly went to the finals in the Carnival of Values baseball tournament by defeating the Big Spring Giants 4 to 3 in a fast game.

After pitching the morning game, Wright pulled the "iron man" stunt and pitched well until the eighth frame when Rose stepped in to put a stop to the uprising Giants. Old "Grandpa" Ebbs was the hitting star of the game with a triple and two singles and chalking up three runs in four trips.
