Kids were cooking, now top stars will open rodeo action

By DAN MURRAY
Staff Writer

Those wide-eyed looks that dominated Monday's Kid Pony Show are gone. You knew from watching the eyes of the 12- to 15-year-old competitors Wednesday night that things were getting serious. They were intense, and that's how things will be from now on at the Top O' Texas Rodeo Arena. The real rodeo starts tonight.

Nine of the nation's top cowboys and cowgirls are slated to compete when the 40th annual Top O' Texas Rodeo gets out of the chutes at 8 p.m. The rodeo will be preceded by a free barbecue for all ticket-holders beginning at 5:30 p.m., and the Jay Riley Band will play at the Clyde Carruth Pavilion beginning at 9 p.m.

Some of America's finest rodeo stars are entered in the Top O' Texas. The Professional Rodeo Cowboy's Association's No. 6-ranked Monk Dishman of Beaumont and No. 9 George Mesimer of Martin are signed up for the bareback bronc competition, while the bull riding features No. 8 Glen McIlvain of Mesquite and No. 10 Philip Fournier of Raceland, La.

Slated for the calf roping are No. 4 Jerry Jetton of Stephenville and No. 6 Tom Walker of Wynnewood, Okla. The largest number of top-10 performers are penned in for the barrel racing, where No. 7 Shanna Bush of Mason, No. 8 Jan Powell of Hungerford and No. 10 Tamara Hammons of Lakin, Kan., are scheduled to compete. Pro rodeo is back in Pampa.

Judging by Wednesday night's Kid Pony Show performance, you might have thought that the pros showed up a day early. Many of the times the teenagers posted were within hundredths of a second of the marks the professionals logged last year. Like the barbecue in the pit at the north end of the arena, the kids were cooking.

Missy Shackelford of Pampa won the Group V girls barrel race in 17.60 seconds on a borrowed horse, after McLean's Misti Coleman set a time of 17.96 to beat, and Pampa's Matthew "Hollywood" Hamon set a time of 8.13 in the boys' breakaway roping.

After two unpredictable nights, the only uncertainty left Wednesday was in the livestock, which will never learn to follow the patterns of human logic. Some horses acted up and some calves ran in

Trio of hijackers gets life sentences

GENOA, Italy (AP) — A jury today convicted 11 people accused in the Achille Lauro cruise ship hijacking and sentenced three of them to life in prison, including alleged hijack mastermind Mohammed Abbas.

The panel of two judges and six civilians acquitted the four other defendants for lack of evidence. The jury had deliberated for three days under tight security.

Judge Lino Monteverde entered the underground courtroom, stood in front of the court and quickly read the verdict.

Four defendants were present when the verdict was announced.

They shouted "Long Live Palestine!" in Arabic from their steel-barred courtroom cages. Their shouts were translated by a courtroom interpreter.

At issue was the hijacking of the Genoa-based cruise ship with 413 people aboard. Four Palestinians commandeered the vessel Oct. 7 after it made a port call in Egypt, and demanded the release of 51 Palestinians jailed in Israel.

A wheelchair-bound American passenger, Leon Klinghoffer, 69, of New York, was shot to death during the two-day ordeal, and his body dumped overboard.

Five defendants were in custody. The other 10 were tried in absentia. Among those tried in absentia was Abbas, leader of the Palestine Liberation Front, a faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

In addition to Abbas, the jury gave life prison terms to two other Palestine Liberation Front officials considered fugitives: Ozzuddin Badrakkam, 39, the PLF military leader, and Ziad El Omar, 35, who was charged with buying the hijackers' cruise tickets.

The four men accused of the hijacking are in custody. Three were sentenced today, and the fourth, Bassam al-Ashker, 18, will be tried later because he was 17 and a minor at the time of the crime.

Youssef Magied al-Molqi, 23, the hijacker accused of shooting and killing Klinghoffer, was sentenced to 30 years imprisonment. The prosecution had asked for a life term.

Ibrahim Fatyer Abdelatif, 20, also accused of being one of the pirates, was sentenced to 24 years and two months.

Ahmad Marrouf al Assadi, 24, a hijacker who had cooperated with authorities, was sentenced to 15 years and two months. He was not present when the verdict was read.

Two Miami council members, city secretary leaving posts

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MIAMI — Council members were just getting ready to examine the proposed 1987 city budget Wednesday when they learned two council members were quitting.

Then city secretary Evelyn Heare announced that it was about time she considered resigning, too.

Bruce Topper, who was elected just last April, submitted his letter of resignation to Mayor Tom Stribling and was not present at Wednesday's regular meeting. He had also missed the previous meeting. His letter said he was leaving for "personal reasons." Topper could not be reached this morning for comment.

Then Wayne Bright, another new member, told the council that he had to resign because his employer, Natural Gas Pipeline Company, was transferring him to Port Arthur. Bright's departure in the middle of the regular meeting left only Stribling and two council members present to examine the proposed budget.

Heare's bombshell came after the council examined the proposed budget, when she announced that she was "very seriously considering resigning."

She told the council that she enjoyed the job and would be willing to stay for another two months until a new city secretary is hired. She had wanted to cut back on her hours for several months because of health problems in her family.

"There's not enough of me to go around," she said. "Plus my husband is retired and he kind of wants me to retire, too."

Council members were handed the proposed budget and computations of its effective tax rate Wednesday.

The city's proposed general fund budget is $75,085, up nearly $9,000 from 1986. The proposed increase comes in maintenance, where the allocation for street and alley topping rises from $6,000 to $14,000, and the allocation for new equipment doubles to $3,000. Heare said the increase will be taken out of the projected 1987 surplus.

Heare projects about $30,946 in reserve at the end of this fiscal year, with $8,985 of that going to support the 1987 budget, leaving $21,961 in unbudgeted reserves at the end of fiscal year 1987. She projects $30,600 revenue from ad valorem taxes, $13,500 in gross receipts, $18,000 in sales tax, $1,500 in delinquent taxes and $2,500 from the bank franchise tax. This brings the total revenue to $66,100.

Heare anticipates a $2,000 in-

Revenue bonds planned for Canadian River desalination

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

SANFORD - Canadian River Municipal Water Authority officials initiated steps Wednesday to seek authority to issue revenue bonds for a desalination project involving Lake Meredith water.

General Manager John Williams said in a telephone interview this morning that the CRMWA would be approaching the state Legislature in an effort to revise and update its enabling act.

Williams said the authority is seeking the power to issue revenue bonds without having to call elections in each of the 11 cities using the Lake Meredith water.

The authority wants to issue revenue bonds of $2.3 million toward an initial desalination project phase costing an estimated $3.4 million.

Williams claimed that the 1953 enabling act which established the CRMWA and its powers and authority "has become outmoded" and restricts its ability to issue bonds needed to finance improvement projects.

He said a revision of the current act would enable the CRMWA to have the same powers now given most other river authorities in the state.

Under the existing act, the water authority must call elections in each of its member cities. The bonds must be approved by a vote in each city and by the Texas Water Commission.

The revised act, if approved by the Legislature, would allow the CRMWA to issue revenue bonds faster, requiring approval only by the Attorney General.

Williams said the revenue bonds would be similar to the Certificates of Obligation which cities can issue without having to call elections. The bonds would be paid off by revenue generated by water sales, he explained.

If the revenue bonds are approved, residents of the member cities could see about a 10 percent increase in their water bills.

Williams said the authority is hoping to get the state's approval "to update that old statute" and to modernize its powers in accordance with other river authorities that have been created since the 1953 enabling act which set up the CRMWA.

He noted other state statutes and legislative acts since then have broadened the power of river authorities regarding the issuance of bonds. The CRMWA is only seeking to obtain the same powers, he said.

The proposal for the amended act will go before the Legislature in January, Williams said. If approved, it will be "at least a year" before any bonds are issued, he said.

Williams said the changes in the act are necessary to allow the authority to proceed with the project to reduce the salt content in Lake Meredith by up to 70 percent.

A study by the Department of the Interior's Bureau of Reclamation released last year indicated the lake's high salt content is coming from a brine aquifer in New Mexico downstream from the Ute Dam near Logan, N.M.

The CRMWA has been pushing a project that involves drilling one or more wells near the brine aquifer and then pumping the saline water from underground and placing it in disposal wells away from the water supplies which feed into Lake Meredith.

The authority has to get the approval of the Bureau of Reclamation and then get funding from the U.S. Congress for the bureau's share of the work.

Williams said the CRMWA is hoping the bureau will provide at least $800,000, with the $2.3 million revenue bonds from the authority covering the rest.

He noted the costs are for the initial phases of the project. If the initial work doesn't reduce the salinity as much as desired, more bonds may have to be issued up to $7 million, he said.

Williams said the enabling act had given the authority the power to issue bonds for the creation of the Lake Meredith project, but the bonds were not needed and were never issued.

He said the authority has never issued bonds before, but they are needed now to provide financing for the desalination project.

crease in the 1987 sewer fund budget, with most of that increase going to the $5.615 emergency fund. Last year, the city allocated $3,000 to the emergency fund. Maintenance funds rose $225 to $4,000 and office expense rose $250 to $1,025. The city cut salaries from $8,000 to $6,860.

Of the anticipated revenue, $16,800 could come from sewer charges; $500 from delinquencies, penalties and interest, and $250 in interest on certificates of deposit. The budget has spaces, but no projections, for sewer connection fees and septic tank dumping fees.
 The city anticipates $400 to add to its $2,900 in Revenue Sharing funds, bringing its budget to $3,000. Of that, $2,500 will go to dig a new trash pit and $500 to general maintenance on the dump ground.

City designates fire lanes at major shopping centers

By LARRY HOLLIS
 Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners Tuesday evening approved on first reading an ordinance designating fire lanes at Wal-Mart, the Pampa Mall and Coronado Shopping Center.

The ordinance prohibits parking within the fire lanes and permits the impoundment of vehicles and fines against the drivers for vehicles parked in the lanes. City Attorney Don Lane said the ordinance will give legal status to the fire lanes and allow law officers to enforce the prohibiting of parking within the lanes.

Lane said all three commercial establishments have already designated fire lanes, but too many people have not been observing them.

Fire Marshall Tommy Adams, in a memorandum to the commission, stated a problem exists with cars being parked in the designated fire lanes at all three places.

"It is necessary to maintain fire lanes around areas for the protection of the lives of citizens and the buildings that are located on the property," he notes.

"In the event of fire, time is the most critical element the fire fighter is faced with," he adds. "Those first few minutes after an alarm is turned in make the difference between saving the structure or having a total loss. Fire lanes can greatly enhance the fire fighters' opportunity to suppress existing fires and keep them from spreading."

At the meeting last night, Adams said he had visited with the managers of the three shopping places and had received no objection to the legal establishment of the fire lanes.

In general, the ordinance establishes fire lanes at the front of the Wal-Mart store, around all sides of the Pampa Mall except for the Safeway store, and around the perimeters of the Coronado Shopping Center complex.

In other business Tuesday, the commission approved on second and final reading an ordinance granting a zoning change request from Single Family 2 District to Commercial District for two tracts at the southwest corner of the Hobart and Montagu intersection.

Commissioner Joe Reed, presiding in the absence of Mayor Sherman Cowan, said representatives of St. Paul United Methodist Church had reached an agreement with property owner C. R. Hoover regarding the construction of a fence between Hoover's property and the church's parsonage.

Church representatives had initially protested the zoning change because of uncertainty about the nature of any commercial business that might be established next to the parsonage.

Commissioner Bob Curry said he appreciated the efforts of the two property owners to reach an agreement without hindering the zoning change.

Commissioners approved on first reading an ordinance adopting and approving engineer's estimates, rolls and-or statements for paving, curb and drainage improvements on portions of Hobart and Harvester streets.

City Manager Bob Hart said the ordinance was needed to make assessments against two property owners in the affected areas. All other owners had reached agreements with the city, he said.

Portions planned for improvement include Harvester Avenue from its intersection at North Dwight to the east property line at North Davis, and Hobart Street from a point between Terry Drive and Cinderella to a point 13 feet north of Sandelewood Drive.

Estimated cost, including the city's and property owners' shares, will be approximately $76,000.

In other business, the commission also approved on first reading an ordinance prohibiting the parking of vehicles on the west side of Frost in the 100 block of South Frost and on the east side the 100 block of South Frost to 226 feet north of Atchison Avenue.

The ordinance was recommended by the Traffic Commission. Police Chief J. J. Ryzman said the commission felt the narrow road would be receiving more traffic after the rehabilitation of the former Schneider Hotel. Traffic flow already has been dangerous at times because of the parking of vehicles on both sides of the street, he noted.

In other matters, the commission:

- deferred appointment of a new member to the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board;
- awarded a bid to Neptune Water Meter Co. of $16,065 for 700 water meters.

Murder charges against Pampa resident dropped

AMARILLO — Murder charges against a Pampa man who was accused of a motel stabbing on East Amarillo Boulevard have been dropped for lack of evidence but Amarillo police still consider him the prime suspect, a spokesman said.

And although charges were dropped, the man, Dennis Ray Hayes, 37, 851 S. Banks, has been placed on material witness bond by 108th District Judge Edward Nobles.

Hayes was first arrested March 17 by Pampa police as a material witness in the stabbing death of April Denise Hill, 21, Birmingham, Ala., at the Palo Duro Motel. Hill's fully-clothed body, which reportedly was stabbed more than 60 times, was found earlier that day in her motel room.

After he was transferred to Potter County, Hayes was charged with the murder and formally indicted March 28. Forty-Seventh Assistant District Attorney Kent Birdsong said Wednesday he was faced with the choice of going to trial with a weak case or dropping the charges. He said there was not enough evidence to take the case to trial.

Witnesses told Amarillo police that Hill was seen entering the motel with a man at about 11 p.m., the night before her death. An autopsy concluded she died around midnight.

Lt. Andrew Dieterman of the Amarillo Police Department Special Crimes Division said this morning that the case was dismissed without prejudice, meaning it can be filed again. Dieterman said the dismissal was based more or less on a technicality involving the Speedy Trial Act.

The lieutenant said his department's investigation of the murder still focuses on Hayes as the number one suspect. He added the department is not considering any other suspect at this time.

Nobles set Hayes' material witness bond at $5,000 Wednesday.

Escaped capital murder suspect remains at large

GILMER, Texas (AP) — Hundreds of police officers searched today for a convicted sex offender awaiting a murder trial who escaped from jail and took a female deputy hostage, authorities said.

A manhunt by hundreds of state and local police and four helicopters using searchlights intensified early today for Jerry Walter McFadden as 35 to 40 more state troopers and bloodhounds were added to the search. McFadden escaped about 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, authorities said.

Sheriff Dale Jewkes said McFadden, 38, who calls himself "Animal" and is a suspect in two other murders, fled in a maroon and gold Datsun 280ZX and was armed with a .38-caliber service revolver.

"He was making a phone call and he hit a deputy with a piece of iron and escaped," said Chief Deputy James Beasley.

Jewkes said the 6-foot-1, 220-pound McFadden had been taken to a lobby area inside Upshur County Jail to use the telephone. McFadden was scheduled to be tried July 28 in neighboring Wood County for aggravated assault and robbery.

He struck Sgt. Kenneth Mayfield, 53, between the eyes with a sharp piece of L-shaped metal believed torn from a cell window, Jewkes said. Mayfield was in good condition at Baylor Medical Center in Gilmer with trauma and a laceration on his head, a spokeswoman said.

Jewkes said McFadden then went into the dispatching area, forcing another deputy, Stacey Mullinix, into a cell and abducting Rosalie Williams, 24. McFadden took Mayfield's weapon from a locked box outside the jail area, as well as an undetermined amount of cash, Jewkes said.

"He had been led out of his cell to make a telephone call," said Ms. Mullinix, 27. "And the next thing I knew, he was coming toward us with a flat piece of metal in his hand. He made us get the sergeant up and was going to put all three of us in his jail cell."

"At first, he wanted us to put handcuffs on the sergeant," she said. "But then he wanted us to get him up however we could. Once we got him (Mayfield) up and on his feet and helped him in a cell, he had Rosalie close the cell door behind us. And then he took her. I never saw what happened after that. I never heard her say a thing."

Jewkes said Mrs. Williams, whose husband, Eddie, is a DPS trooper in the Upshur County area, is the mother of a 2-year-old son.

Jewkes said early today he believed McFadden and the kidnapped deputy could still be in Upshur County "or the immediate area and daylight will make it extremely difficult for McFadden to remain holed up."

Jewkes said McFadden stopped at a convenience store just north of Gilmer and bought $10 worth of gasoline. He had discarded the jail's standard issue white jumpsuit and was last seen wearing blue jean cutoffs and a light colored shirt.

McFadden was charged in the murder of Suzanne Harrison, 18, who was one of three Hawkins youths slain after they went on an outing to Lake Hawkins the weekend of May 3.

Miss Harrison was found beaten and strangled May 5, a Monday, at Barnwell Mountain Park five miles north of Gilmer in Upshur County. An autopsy showed she had been sexually assaulted. She had disappeared along with Hawkins residents Bryan Boone, 19, and Gina Turner, 20, who were found dead five days later in a drainage ditch after an extensive search.

McFadden, of Ore City, was taken into custody on May 6 and questioned in connection with the case because authorities believed he had tried to rob a couple at gunpoint near the lake the Sunday night of the weekend the trio disappeared.

McFadden was charged with two counts of attempted robbery and was charged May 21 in Miss Harrison's death. He was indicted by an Upshur County grand jury June 9.

McFadden also was held for a parole violation. He had been released from prison in July 1985 following three sex-related convictions.

A press conference was scheduled at 7 a.m. CDT by the Upshur County sheriff's office.

Otwell: 'I'm going to God'

A new sound? C'mon now!

One day last year I was listening to a radio station. A song had just ended, and the DJ — obviously enjoying the record — said, "Hey, folks, wasn't that great? What a new sound, eh?"

Well, maybe for him and some of his listeners. But I couldn't help chuckling. The "new sound" was John Fogerty's "Old Man Down the Road."

Somehow, with its obvious echoes of his many years and hits with a "minor" group of the late 1960s and early 1970s named Creedence Clearwater Revival, Fogerty might not have appreciated his revival of "swamp rock" being called a new sound.

However, there were many CCR fans glad to see Fogerty back, and picking up enough new fans along the road to put his comeback album at the Number One spot on the charts.

New sound, indeed! Any true CCR fan recognized Fogerty at the first spin of the new single.

But I don't guess you can fault the DJ too much. After all, he was only 17 last summer, and he had only been about 4, I guess, when Creedence's last hit had charted.

I've been reminded of his excitement at a "new sound" only recently because of two new singles I've heard in the past couple of weeks. And already I'm hearing the DJ's talking about the "great new records."

The two records are The Mary Jane Girls' "Walk Like a Man" and Bananarama's "Venus." New records they may be, but new songs they aren't. And while both are fairly good, they really don't compare with the originals.

The Four Seasons' "Walk Like a Man" was bringing a new sound to rock in the early 1960s, along with their "Sherry" and "Big Girls Don't Cry," all featuring the vibrant falsettos of lead singer Frankie Valli. (I can still remember my mother rushing into my bedroom one day while I was trying to sing along with "Sherry"; she thought I had cut myself somehow and was screaming for help.)

And Shocking Blue's "Venus" maybe wasn't a new sound in the early 1970s, but it certainly had a pulsing beat, a driving guitar overlay and a strong, throaty vocal by the female lead singer. And it was the first song by a group from Holland to top the American charts.

The Mary Jane Girls and Bananarama, much as I like both groups, really haven't done anything new with the songs except for some rearrangements of the vocals and instrumental backgrounds. But I enjoy the girls bringing back the old songs and hope their revivals will lead the younger listeners back to the much better originals.

Revivals have always been a part of the music scene, from restaging of off-sung operas and musicals to The Honey Drippers' recent remake of Phil Phillips' "Sea of Love" (no, kids, that wasn't a new song, either).

If nothing else, they provide new audiences, sometimes even new generations of listeners to past music.

And sometimes they offer new versions and variations, like "Bridge Over Troubled Waters" by Simon and Garfunkel and by Aretha Franklin, or "Proud Mary" by Creedence Clearwater Revival (remember them?) and by Ike and Tina Turner (and who can forget her?), in which the versions are so different it's almost like having two separate songs instead of just remakes.

And then there's the times when a remake rescues an older record and gives it a completely new life. The Carpenters, for example, had their first major hit with "They Long to Be (Close to You)," a remake of a song that had been included and almost ignored on an album by Dusty Springfield.

Most recently, The Rolling Stones hit the top 10 by dusting off an obscure rhythm and blues song, "Harlem Shuffle," and then DJs went running to the vaults to resurrect the forgotten Bob and Earl single. I have to admit I had never heard the 1964 version before, though I have since heard it played on an area station.

I can't really fault the younger listeners too much, since I can remember listening to The Platters' "Only You" and Nino Tempo and April Stevens' "Deep Purple," not knowing they were revived songs from the 1930s, of all times.

But I learned they were remakes, and I have since heard the early versions a number of times (and have learned to appreciate them), thanks to stations which play songs from the way past, like from the days of my parents, even. And those songs were revived again in later years, with Ringo Starr doing "Only You" and with Donnie and Marie Osmond singing "Deep Purple."

Good songs are good songs, and will continue to have long lives, either through remakes or through just being played as golden oldies.

And sometimes, through misinformed or unknowing DJs, the latest remakes will still be hailed initially as "a great new song" or "what a new sound, eh?"

And that's okay — even I don't always recognize a remake, especially if I've never heard the original before. But once a song is learned to be a remake, let's give it some acknowledgement, eh?

State District Judge Paul Davis of Austin ruled earlier this year that Otwell's Community Baptist Church at Forest Hill, near Fort Worth, was illegally operating without a state license. Davis assessed fines of $100 per day for Otwell and eight other people connected with the home.

At first, expressing contempt for the court system, Otwell said he would not appeal Davis' decision. He changed his mind after a May 21 meeting with Gov. Mark White.

"We put up the appeal because Gov. Mark White said the court system was fair. I said I'd give it a try. It worked out like I thought it would," Otwell said.

"I told Gov. Mark White our court system is corrupt and we are in a Hitler-type situation in this country," Otwell said.

"These judges are playing God in these courtrooms and these little bureaucrats are controlling our system," he said.

Otwell argues that the state has no business forcing a church home to get a license. But the courts, in Otwell's case and cases involving the late Rev. Lester Roloff of Corpus Christi, have ruled otherwise.

An Aug. 5 sale of the Community Baptist Church property has been ordered to cover the fines, which Otwell said now add up to more than $24,000.

Otwell and his followers came to Austin in May to protest near the Capitol and to meet with state leaders.

The 3rd Court of Appeals did not write an opinion in the case. It was listed as "dismissed for lack of jurisdiction."

Patrick Shannon, the appeals court's chief staff attorney, said the $1,000 appeal bond was filed after the deadline. Otwell's request for more time was denied, Shannon said.

"The reverend didn't make up his mind soon enough to get the bond filed," he said. "This is pretty much it. He's pretty much out of court now. There's not much more recourse he has."

Otwell said he will not voluntarily close the church home. He challenged Attorney General Jim Mattox to go through with the Aug. 5 sale of the church property.

"If Jim Mattox has the guts, he'll sell it. If he ain't, he won't," Otwell said.

Mattox said Wednesday, "It's going to be sold unless he quits operating or he pays the fines."

"The law is very clear. It was totally expected," he said of the appeals court ruling. "Unfortunately, Otwell thinks he's above the law."

Otwell continued to predict that God would punish the state if the home is closed.

"God's not through with Texas yet. They think the state's economy is bad now, just wait," Otwell said.

WTSU discriminates against women athletes: attorney

HOUSTON (AP) — West Texas State University benefits from federal funds and therefore should follow federally mandated rules that prohibit sex discrimination, an attorney said.

Suzanne Meeker, who represents the six women who filed a class-action suit against the school in 1980, Wednesday told a 5th Circuit Court of Appeals panel in Houston that WTSU's intercollegiate athletic programs receive federal aid through revenue sharing, work study funds and the use of buildings constructed with federal money.

The suit charges the programs unfairly favor men by giving male athletes more money, better facilities and better game and practice times.

Tape reveals giggles as torture victim begged for his release

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — "Are you having stage fright? This is the second tape. You haven't even been shocked yet," said a voice Caldwell identified as Junior's.

"Coochy, Coochy, coo. Now here it comes," said the voice as men, identified by Caldwell as ranch workers, giggled.

"Sometimes I'm bluffing, and sometimes I'm not," the voice said.

"I'm grateful to be here, and I'm sorry I didn't cut enough tin," Bates was forced to repeat after the voice.

"You're not very loud. You know I like it loud," the voice repeated after Bates screamed.

"I would die for the privilege to be here," Bates was forced to repeat.

Then he begged, "Please God. Let me go, Junior!"

The men exaggerated the sounds for Junior's pleasure and were acting while Bates was shocked with the cattle prod, Caldwell testified.

Later in the day, Bass asked Caldwell to describe Bates' position during one of the last torture sessions. Taking his cues from Caldwell, Bass laid on his back on the courtroom floor and stretched his arms outward.

"Like this?" Bass asked.

Bates was tied under a barn entryway so that his hips and shoulders hung off the ground, Caldwell said.

"You're giving me the mental picture that he was sort of tied up like a hammock," Bass said.

"Yes," Caldwell responded.

As the trial continued into late afternoon, Caldwell's hands began to shake and he ground his teeth as Bass quizzed him about conflicting dates.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Privatization gains across the country

There is a nationwide movement to privatization, that is, away from governmental activities toward more private enterprise. This is good news. It means more efficiency, less bureaucracy; more freedom, less force.

"It's no tidal wave," says John Gunther, executive director of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, "but people are definitely moving in that direction."

Both Boston and New York City have turned over the collection of parking tickets to private firms. In Boston, the city's revenues from this source went up from $4.8 million in 1981 to $38 million last year. The city had been collecting only 17 percent of its tickets; the private collection agency boosted this to 79 percent.

In New York, privatization of the parking privilege exposed the biggest city scandal in a decade. City officials were indicted for bribery and one borough president committed suicide. Getting a ticket in New York, which used to be a joke, is now anything but.

There is talk about jails and prisons being operated by private enterprise. Private jails are operating in various towns, some being run by organizations like the Volunteers of America, which has a women's jail in Roseville, Minn. Others are being run by profit-making firms such as The Corrections Corp. of America.

This movement is in response to the sheer inefficiency and waste which characterize most government agencies. People working for the government — local, state or national — feel under no urge to make a profit. If there is a deficit, it can be made up for in tax revenues. Taxes are a supersoft pillow for a government functionary to fall back upon.

But the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees takes a dim view of privatization of public projects and activities. It causes them to lose members. In some cases, employees continue to hold their jobs and remain members of the union, but in many cases the union has to bestir itself to hold them.

When a worker gets a public job and joins the union, he assumes he is fixed for the rest of his working life. His monopoly power is complete. When a private employer takes over the work of the agency and is under no obligation to retain the present workers, the latter suddenly finds that his snug monopoly has lost its power. He has competitors. At this point, the increase of efficient performance begins.

The incumbent employee has the advantage of experience on the job involved, but the newcomer brings fresh, new ideas, which are especially needed in government bureaucracies. A healthy competition results.

Nixon's secret projects

Being an ex-president doesn't, all by itself, keep a person very busy, but Richard Nixon isn't letting any grass grow under his feet. The former chief executive is often in the public eye these days, making speeches, traveling here and there, writing books or being interviewed. He wouldn't be Nixon, however, if he didn't also have a secret project or two.

Currently his biggest such project is to expand this country's relations with Communist China into a full-fledged treaty of alliance. In addition to the scheme's merits (if any), the point is that, if it succeeds, history will presumably look more fondly on Nixon than it currently does, since it was in his administration that "detente" with Peking began.

Even an ex-president, however, has to operate through people currently holding key positions if he wants to influence current U.S. policies. Luckily, Nixon not long ago managed to insert a dependable friend in exactly the right slot in the State Department. Nixon's point man in State is Richard H. Solomon. Solomon, who received his doctorate from MIT in 1966, is a specialist in Chinese affairs and speaks the language. From 1966 to 1971, he was a professor of political science at the University of Michigan, and it was there that he wrote his first book: "Mao's Revolution and the Chinese Political Culture."

It may have been that book that called Solomon to Nixon's attention. At any rate, Solomon's rise thereafter was swift. In 1971, he received a grant from the Council on Foreign Relations to serve as an international affairs fellow. And in that same year President Nixon, who of course had already embarked on his own romance with Communist China, moved Solomon onto the staff of the National Security Council as senior staff member for Asian affairs.

Solomon accompanied Nixon on his trip to Peking in January 1972, and continued in his key NSC job through the rest of the Nixon and Ford administrations. In 1976 he moved to the Rand Corp., becoming director of its research program on international security policy.

It was not until January 1985 that Nixon found another suitable spot in government for his protege. In that month, after the usual Nixonian backstairs maneuvers, Solomon was appointed director of the policy planning staff of the Department of State. In that post today, he is one of the former president's most influential operatives on the subject of U.S. policy toward China.

In particular, Nixon and Solomon are urging the State Department to pressure the Nationalist Chinese government on Taiwan to engage in direct talks with Peking — on postal matters, on customs, on almost anything that could break the ice and lead eventually to a political solution of what the Communists call "the Taiwan problem." They are doing this, of course, because it is inconceivable that Peking would ever agree to enter into a formal alliance with the United States as long as Washington maintains separate contacts with Taipei — contacts which, though informal, are both friendly and close.

In effect, then, the Nixon strategy is simply to throw Taiwan to the mainland wolves, in the higher interest of "playing the China card" in America's ongoing poker game with the Soviet Union. Inside the State Department, Richard Solomon is one of the key players supporting this strategy. But there are others who support it too, and we shall have occasion to discuss them in the weeks and months ahead.

Luckily there are also people, not only in the State Department but elsewhere high in the federal government, who disagree with Nixon and Solomon on this issue, so the battle is far from over. Meanwhile Nixon, who really enjoys this sort of thing, is having the time of his life.

A Tricky election scenario

Couldn't happen. Could it? May 1986: Richard Nixon is featured on the cover of Newsweek magazine and the words: "He's back."

October 1986: Nixon seen dining with columnist George Will. Nixon seen picking up the check.

November 1986: Will, appearing on David Brinkley's "This Week in Washington," says, "Let's face it, Nixon wasn't that bad."

January 1987: President Reagan calls the locker room of the Washington Redskins, who have just won the Super Bowl. Is put on hold while Nixon finishes his message.

April 1987: George Bush announces his bid for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination. Phones Nixon and asks for help. "You know you can count on me, Georgie," says Nixon.

May 1987: The Washington Post, quoting a "highly reliable source" reveals another wishy side of Bush by reporting he sleeps in pajamas.

June 1987: Sen. Robert Dole, Rep. Jack Kemp, former senator Howard Baker and evangelist Pat Robertson also announce for the Republican nomination. The Associated Press promptly reports it has learned, from another unnamed source, that all four candidates don't think wrestling is fake.

July 1988: New York Gov. Mario Cuomo receives democratic presidential nomination for president. National Enquirer reports Cuomo's Uncle Nunzio was once the basis for an entire episode of "The Untouchables."

August 1988: Republican convention hopelessly deadlocked. Bush gets upset and cries. Dole's wife, the secretary of transportation, throws her support behind Kemp who, unfortunately for him, has forgotten where the convention is being held and hasn't shown up.

Baker, meanwhile, never gets noticed because he's too short, and Robertson loses the support of Jesse Helms, Rev. Jerry Falwell and the Moral Majority when Spiro Agnew casually mentioned to them Robertson sometimes doesn't close his eyes when he prays.

Nixon appears on "Donahue" to discuss the convention. Donahue gets too personal and Nixon punches him out. Pro-Nixon faction, "La Rouche Supporters for Nixon," springs up at the convention.

Bob Haldeman seen having lunch with George

Will. Haldeman picks up tab. ABC's Sam Donaldson interviews Will, who says, "Watergate, schmatergate. Bernstein and Woodward probably made up most of that stuff, anyway."

Nixon appears on "The David Letterman Show" after stint with Donahue. Repeats his famous "Checkers" speech as a part of Letterman's "Stupid Dog Tricks" routine.

Convention remains deadlocked. Bush drops his name from consideration after he is photographed by Time magazine taking a bath with a rubber duck.

Dole files for divorce. Kemp is still missing. Baker is off somewhere trying to find elevator shoes and Robertson dances off with a group of Hare-Krishnas in front of the convention hall.

Gordon Liddy throws a stink bomb on the convention floor, and when the smoke clears, Nixon is at the podium doing high-5s with George Will.

January 1989: Richard Milhouse Nixon is sworn in as president for the third time after he and running mate Will thrash Mario Cuomo and his Uncle Nunzio in the November election.

The problem with Nicaraguan policy

By Don Graff

"Even if President Reagan wins the funds he wants for the contra rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government, his policy is producing a stalemate that ultimately could draw the U.S. further into that nation's civil war."

I didn't write that, but I subscribe to every word of it. It's the work of Wall Street Journal reporter Robert S. Greenberger, in a recent dispatch from Washington that summarizes, as succinctly as anything I've read lately, exactly what's wrong with administration policy in Nicaragua.

Briefly, the administration has no strategy beyond simply keeping the contras in the field. The $100 million in aid the president continues to push for is far short of what would be required to build a rebel force capable of overthrowing the Sandinistas. On that point, there's pretty much a meeting of military minds, both within and outside the administration.

So a military solution is out. But the administration gives only lip service — and precious little of that — to the alternative, a diplomatic solution. It seemed to be taking a step in that direction with the naming of Philip Habib as special envoy to Central America. But it quickly backtracked. When Habib suggested that an end to contra aid might be traded for Nicaragua's signature on a regional peace treaty, administration spokesmen told him to sit down and be quiet.

So diplomacy is out. Economic warfare has been counterproductive. The embargo decreed last year has crimped but not crippled the Nicaraguan economy. It has, however, provided the Sandinistas with a convenient excuse for the consequences of their own economic mismanagement.

Congress isn't let off easily in this indictment. It is at least an accessory. It can be expected to continue voting just enough contra aid to avoid a charge that it "lost" Nicaragua, according to Greenberger.

Coincidentally — or maybe not — the lead editorial in the same day's Journal is more or less on the same subject. But the point is entirely different — unequivocal support of administration policy. God help us all if the contras don't get that $100 million!

I do not find the Journal's dichotomy in this case surprising, only evidence of what I've long believed: that the editorial page staff is under strict orders never ever to read the news pages. The Journal's editorials rarely have much connection with reality, while its reporting is about the best in the business.

The reporter in this case, however, may not have gone deeply enough into that "losing" business. There are those who suggest that not wanting to be tarred with that particular brush may also explain otherwise contradictory aspects of administration policy, as cited above.

New Republic contributor Michael Walzer developed the idea at length in the April 28 issue. His thesis is that the real aim is not victory, but to keep a small war going indefinitely.

"The point of the war," Walzer continues, "is to put off for as long as possible the moment when President Reagan must choose between acknowledging that Nicaragua is 'lost' and sending in the Marines."

And, Walzer thinks, the president is sincere in saying he does not want or intend to do that. So why, then, continue the fight at all?

"In all probability, the contras can't win," Walzer explains, "but all that matters is that they not lose. So long as the war continues, the president can say that he is standing tall, fighting communism, defending the Hemisphere (and cheaply, too). If some future Democratic president gives up on the contras, he is the one who will have 'lost' Nicaragua."

Well, it's a theory. And it certainly puts an otherwise hopelessly contradictory policy in a more logical light. It's worth keeping in mind.

Cisneros: high voter turnout needed to defeat budget cap

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Unless there is a heavy voter turnout at the polls Aug. 9, Mayor Henry Cisneros says he fears a proposed ceiling on city spending may pass.

A turnout of at least 100,000 voters is necessary to defeat the proposal, the mayor said.

The spending limit, proposed by conservative C.A. Stubbs, would tie city expenditures to inflation and population.

The proposal, Cisneros said Tuesday, has solid support from at least 45,000 citizens. Those supporters, the mayor said, are more likely to vote than opponents of the cap.

In response, Stubbs said the cap probably has at least 90,000 supporters.

Cisneros, he said, "is the leader of this community. I am a lowly taxpayer trying to get him to pay as much attention to the taxpayers as he has to people who take tax money."

Cisneros said he based his prediction of the pro-cap votes on the number who voted last year to defeat a proposal to fluoridate the city's water supply.

Stubbs' Homeowner-Taxpayer Association led the anti-fluoride fight. The organization also gathered signatures on petitions forcing the upcoming spending cap referendum.

Cisneros admitted a turnout of 100,000 at the polls would be unusually high for a one-issue referendum.

The figure would represent more than 20 percent of the city's voters.

"I don't know why people want to do certain damage to the city's momentum," Cisneros said.

The spending cap, if endorsed, would tie spending to the sum total of population growth in the city of about 850,000 residents, and the consumer price index.

For example, if the population grew 3 percent and the consumer price index grew 3 percent, spending for the next year could not grow more than 6 percent.

City officials say the proposed 1987 budget of $606 million is well within the spending cap limitations.

However, by 1989, officials say needed capital improvements could force the city to exceed the cap.

In a related development, the leader of a San Antonio-based Catholic organization has criticized Archbishop Patrick Flores for opposing the spending cap.

Charles Wilson, executive director of the St. Joseph Foundation, said religious leaders are entitled to declare their positions on public policy matters.

But he said, "We believe San Antonio Catholics are quite capable of deciding for themselves whether specific limits should be placed on city spending."

Flores, who is in Mexico, issued a two-page statement saying "the spending cap mentality seems to foster a selfish and sometimes mean-spirited bent on limiting the future."

Flores said he feared the proposal would hamper improvement of public services and would curtail capital investments, particularly in poor communities.

Texas banks are fortifying reserves against the economy

DALLAS (AP) — Analysts reported problems in the state's energy and real estate sectors will prompt second-quarter results of weak earnings and strong loan loss provisions for Texas financial institutions.

The state's largest bank-holding company, RepublicBank of Dallas, was the first to report for the second quarter, with an 84 percent drop in earnings and net income of $5.7 million or 13 cents per share. The loan loss provision was strengthened by $78.5 million, the company reported.

RepublicBank reported $22.5 billion in assets as of June 30.

First City Bancorporation of Texas, which made a $275 loan loss provision in the first quarter, showed net income of $15.1 million or 36 cents per share, for the second quarter, officials said Wednesday.

The company is reporting a net loss of $217.2 million for the first six months of the year because of the large reserves set aside, spokesman John Jamison of Houston said Wednesday.

"We are still swallowing and living with the positive decision we made in the first quarter to provide for future uncertainties," Jamison said.

He said the net income reported for the second quarter indicates First City was correct in increasing reserves. The company charged off $126.6 million in loans during the second quarter, primarily in the drilling and oil-field service areas. Reserves for loan losses stood at $269.8 million as of June 30.

Most second-quarter reports from financial institutions will probably reflect a slight deterioration from first-quarter results, said Georgia Head, an analyst with the Dallas firm of Rauche Pierce Refsnes Inc.

She said problems started with the rapid drop in oil prices this year and spread into the real estate economies because of overbuilding in some Texas cities during the boom cycle.

Officials for InterFirst Corp. are predicting a second-quarter loss of at least $260 million after increasing reserve funds for loan losses.

RepublicBank Chairman Gerald W. Fronterhouse said in a prepared statement that the bank's performance this year reflects the current challenging economic environment in Texas.

"There's no question that the banks as far as their earnings are definitely under pressure," said

Frank Anderson, an analyst at Weber, Hall, Sale & Associates in Dallas.

"What we're starting to see is not only no improvement in energy, but we're also seeing additional weakening in the real estate market," Anderson said.

RepublicBank's provision for loan losses of $78.5 million in the second quarter exceeded charge-offs of $53.8 million, thus increasing the allowance from the first quarter by $24.7 million to $285.7 million, or 1.84 percent of loans outstanding, RepublicBank said in a statement.

"Banks in Texas have been very fortunate going into this cycle. They've always been the darlings of Wall Street," Anderson said. He said most banks built up a strong capital base and can withstand the present economic problems.

"The big question mark is where are oil prices going in the next couple of years and what's going to happen to real estate," he said.

Both Anderson and Ms. Head said they don't expect any major bank failures in the immediate future, but Anderson noted that "the numbers are not going to be pretty."

Phoenix attorney and law firm sued over suspected drug money

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — More than $4.2 million in suspected drug funds was withdrawn from two local banks by a Phoenix, Ariz., attorney who knew the money was subject to tax liens, according to a U.S. Justice Department suit.

The money had also been linked to a Mexican drug lord, a prime suspect in the kidnapping and murder of a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent, said a federal official.

The civil suit, filed in U.S. District Court here, named as defendants Merwin Grant and the Phoenix law firm of Beus, Gilbert, Wake & Morrill. It alleged Grant took more than $2 million from El Paso National Bank and more than $2.2 million from First City National Bank of El Paso.

The suit, filed Friday by Michael E. Greene, an attorney in the Justice Department's tax division in Dallas, alleged Grant knew there were tax liens on the money when he withdrew it in early July 1984.

The money was to go toward payment of $28 million in taxes for 1984 owed by Marquedeo Alfaro Margarino, 54, a Mexican businessman, for what the IRS said were illegal transactions in a drug money-laundering scheme.

Grant represented Alfaro last year in a dispute over $6.5 million in certificates of deposit at First City National Bank.

"Defendant Merwin Grant had actual knowledge at the time he received the currency and checks ... that such removal was being done for the purpose of defeating and evading payment of tax liabilities assessed against Taxpayer Alfaro," the suit alleges.

A receptionist at the law firm in Phoenix said Grant was not in his office, the firm's senior partner was in Utah and the firm's administrator was unavailable. Telephone calls by The Associated Press were unreturned.

Alfaro, whose name was on the certificates of deposit as co-owner, had said the money belonged to 13 Mexican citizens for whom he was making investments.

U.S. District Court Judge Harry Hudspeth ended an 18-month controversy when he ruled Dec. 18, 1985 that the $6.5 million belonged to the Internal Revenue Service.

Alfaro claimed he was simply a broker for the 13 clients, all of whom live in Guadalajara, and therefore the money did not belong to him.

But Hudspeth ruled that the 13 investors forfeited their claim to the money when they, and Alfaro, failed to show up for court-ordered depositions.

Alfaro was being investigated by federal officials on allegations he operated a money-laundering ring on behalf of Miguel Angel Felix Gallardo of Guadalajara, one of the most powerful drug lords in Mexico.

New debate looms over the lethal effect of other people's smoke

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two new studies that draw opposite conclusions as to whether cigarette smoke can kill non-smokers are likely to touch off a replay of the initial dispute over whether smoking is harmful to health.

The annual death toll among non-smokers from "sidestream" smoke could be 31,000 or as high as 46,000, chemist Judson Wells, a retired research executive with the Du Pont Co., has concluded in a paper. But even Wells, who works as a volunteer twice a week with the American Lung Association, acknowledges his estimates are uncertain and preliminary.

Such a toll would be comparable to the 44,500 motor vehicle deaths reported last year.

The Tobacco Institute, the principal industry lobby, disputes Wells' findings and made available a British study from the July issue of the British Journal of Cancer. That study concludes "that any effect of passive smoking on risk of lung cancer or other smoking-associated diseases is at most quite small, if it exists at all."

Wells' estimates were presented last month at a meeting of the Air Pollution Control Association in Minneapolis. He provided a copy of his paper to The Associated Press.

The Wells report has not gone through formal peer review by other scientists. The British study, financed by the tobacco industry, has been reviewed by other scientists.

Center Wednesday. Followers of the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi demonstrated their bliss-induced levitation to the public for the first time. (AP Laserphoto)

Meditation convention: 'flying' in the face of the skeptics

WASHINGTON (AP) — OK, sit down. Legs in the yoga position, hands resting lightly in front of you. Now hop 50 yards in that position in 20 seconds. Or leap six feet ahead. Or two feet in the air.

The followers of the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi call what they do bliss-induced levitation or "flying."

Skeptics are skeptical.

But the maharishi's men did it in public for the first time Wednesday, and anyone watching would have to admit it was something to see.

The maharishi and advertisers of his advanced transcendental meditation methods have contended for years that they could achieve such brainwave coherence that they could — in groups — lower wartime death tolls, raise the stock market and generally improve the world's quality of life.

And fly.

The "flying" is an involuntary bodily response to exceptionally high achievement in their meditation, they say.

Actually, organizers of the exhibition said, current experts in what they call the maharishi technology of the unified field have achieved only the first stage of flying — a kind of hopping — while expecting they eventually will reach the second and third stages: hovering, and then directed flight.

Hop they did on Wednesday in what was billed as "The First North American 'Yogic Flying' Competition."

More than a dozen students, all relatively young men in apparent good physical condition, meditated quietly as they warmed up — or cooled down, perhaps — for the competition on a floor covered with foam-rubber mattresses.

Soon the men, legs folded, began hopping in place, and then — still in the yoga position — they went bouncing down track lanes laid out at the Washington Convention Center.

Reporters watched and took notes. Photographers snapped pictures. Impressive as the hopping was, judging from their comments on the way out, they still weren't convinced what they'd seen could be called flying.

However, more than 1,000 transcendental meditation students watching the competition expressed no such doubts. They roared their approval — after all the competitors had finished and there was no danger of breaking concentration.

Asked why they were bringing their exhibition out in public — after years of keeping it out of sight while talking it up in advertisements — organizers said rising terrorism and other world problems have made it necessary to work harder at spreading the word of such practices.

Israelis battle guerrillas off south Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli border guards clashed in a gunbattle today with guerrillas aboard a rubber boat off south Lebanon, and all four guerrillas were killed, an Israeli-allied radio station in Lebanon said.

The Voice of the South, a radio station controlled by the Israeli-sponsored South Lebanon Army militia, said one Israeli soldier was killed in the firefight at daybreak in the area of Naqoura on the Lebanese-Israeli frontier.

There was no immediate confirmation or comment on the report from Israeli authorities or from United Nations peacekeeping troops in south Lebanon.

The Voice of the South said the four guerrillas on the boat "were trying to infiltrate near a U.N. camp at Naqoura when they were attacked by the Israeli patrol."

The broadcast, monitored by reporters in south Lebanon, did not specify the nationality of the guerrillas, but reporters said they were believed to be Palestinians.

The bridge was "cut" into ten pieces with dynamite charges. The total destruction took about six seconds. It will be replaced with a new $10 million structure.

Reagan travels to Alabama to speak for tax revision

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, trying to help shape the final version of the tax-overhaul package in Congress, is personally endorsing a top individual tax rate of 27 percent and crediting himself with being one of the first champions of slashing rates.

Reagan was to fly to the southeastern corner of Alabama today to plug tax changes in a luncheon speech before the Chamber of Commerce in Dothan, a community of 52,000 people that proclaims itself the peanut capital of the world.

The chamber sold nearly 1,600 tickets for the luncheon at $25 apiece.

"The main point of his speech is that individual rates must be held down," said presidential spokesman Larry Speakes.

"The president wants to make his views known to the (congressional) conference, indicating that he wants to make sure it (the tax package) is fair, it is simple, and that those who should pay, do pay taxes," Speakes said.

He said Reagan would specifically give his endorsement to the top individual rate of 27 percent, as approved by the Senate.

A separate tax bill passed by the House prescribes a maximum individual rate of 38 percent, but there is a growing consensus for the 27 percent figure in the Senate bill, along with acceptance of higher business taxes approved by the House.

Reagan's own tax plan had proposed a top rate of 35 percent. Currently, the top individual rate is 50 percent.

Speakes said Reagan would trace his involvement in tax reform back to 1980, before he became president, when he argued that the problems of low economic growth, high inflation and spiraling interest rates were the result of people being overtaxed.

Tax-rate cuts proposed by Reagan were approved by Congress with some changes in 1981.

"Inflation dropped from 12 percent to under 2 percent and more than 40 months of (economic) growth was the result, as well as the creation of over 10 million new jobs," Speakes said.

Reagan's speech was billed by White House chief of staff Donald Regan as "the stage setter" for administration involvement in the weeks-long struggle that will begin next week as House and Senate negotiators begin reconciling differences in the bills passed by the two chambers.

Reagan said Treasury Department officials will be on hand at the congressional meetings "to reconcile the differences or help to reconcile the differences between the two to come up with a tax bill that can be passed and on the president's desk by Labor Day."

He said administration officials will encourage the tax writers to seek to retain the deduction for Individual Retirement Accounts at least for workers who are covered by employer pension plans.

The Senate-passed bill would do away with IRA deductions for everyone covered by a pension plan.

Government to issue revised union meetings order today

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A government order prohibiting virtually every major anti-apartheid group and most big unions from holding indoor meetings was flawed and will be replaced today with a revised ban, the government said.

The official Bureau for Information announced the lifting of the 2-day-old ban, which had affected 33 organizations headquartered in the Johannesburg area and all student councils.

It said the revised order to be issued today would cover only the Soweto black township and would exclude all trade unions.

The ban was lifted just hours after four unions representing more than 300,000 workers challenged it in court.

Since the nationwide state of emergency declared June 12, unions representing hundreds of thousands of black workers have mounted strikes, work slowdowns and other actions to protest the detention of scores of their leaders.

Those actions, the only effective black protest of the emergency, have prompted appeals by white employer organizations that the union officials be freed.

The information bureau, saying the ban contained "certain errors," issued a statement by national police headquarters lifting the order.

"The South African Police herewith reiterates its standpoint that economic stability, which is dependent on sound labor relations, is vitally important in all spheres of the community," it said.

Louis le Grange, minister of law and order, met employers "to help with problems arising out of the present abnormal situation, and to stress the fact that no employee is or will be detained for bona fide trade union activities," the bureau said.

Le Grange has said those in custody are held for political reasons, not because they are union members.

Under severe emergency restrictions, journalists are prohibited from revealing the names of people in detention, reporting on activities of security forces without official permission or quoting statements which the government considers subversive.

In another development, police said without elaborating Wednesday that they had arrested five suspected members or accomplices of the African National Congress black guerrilla group in connection with landmine explosions that killed two black men on May 19 and had injured 12 other people since April.

In Cape Town, Supreme Court Judge Robin Marais ordered the release from detention of a Roman Catholic nun, Clare Harkin, ruling she was improperly detained on June 23 while trying to stop a policeman from beating a black youth at a funeral.

Goldstone said that, although the emergency gives police broad powers, it does not exempt them from demonstrating reasonable grounds for detention.

The National Statutory Council has been billed by the government as a possible vehicle for future power-sharing.

Prisoners torch 13 buildings

LORTON, Va. (AP) — Prisoners at the overcrowded Lorton Reformatory set fires in 13 buildings today in what authorities called an organized effort to "burn the place down."

Three buildings at the District of Columbia's suburban prison were heavily damaged; the roofs on two collapsed.

As fast as some fires were brought under control, others were set. At one point, 120 firefighters were battling the blaze.

By 7 a.m., however, nearly seven hours after the first fire was reported by a passing motorist, all the fires were under control.

Authorities said many of the facility's 4,100 prisoners could not be accounted for. But none were believed to have escaped.

The fires erupted two days after a consultant said crowding was so bad that a disturbance "costly in terms of human life and property" could come at any time.

One of about 900 prisoners taken to the city's jail yelled out a bus window, "It's crowded. That's why this is going on."

Four firefighters were injured fighting the fires. One sprained his arm; another collapsed, apparently from fatigue.

Firefighters refused to enter any given building until all the prisoners there were accounted for.

District of Columbia officials said the blazes appeared to be planned.

"This looks like a highly organized activity. A lot of people decided they were going to try to burn the place down," said district administrator Thomas Downs.

The fires, which began when mattresses were set on fire, spread quickly through all the prison's dormitories, he said.

But Fairfax County police spokesman Warren Carmichael said there appeared to be no danger inmates could escape.

Prisoners were corralled onto a baseball field in the complex, where about 500 to 600 prisoners were surrounded there by prison guards, officials said.

The fires were reported at about 12:15 a.m., but firefighters were not able to enter the area until 2:05 a.m.

The disturbance was "not a surprise at all, especially with the overcrowded conditions, the heat and the humidity," John Herry, chairman of the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors, said of the fire. "As a matter of fact it was almost predictable."

Whitworth defense: secrets sold, no Soviet tie

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A lawyer defending Jerry Whitworth on espionage charges began closing arguments by admitting the prosecution's case except for one crucial point — Whitworth did not know he was working for the Soviet Union.

"There is no question that Mr. Whitworth received money, and a lot of it, for the classified information which he provided over the years," attorney James Larson told jurors Wednesday.

"The question is, what was his intent?"

Larson conceded that Whitworth, a former Navy code expert, sold communications secrets to his friend John Walker Jr. and hid the money from the government, but said Whitworth is innocent of espionage because he was unaware Walker was working for the Soviet Union.

Federal espionage laws prohibit disclosures intended to aid any foreign nation. But U.S. District Judge John Vukasin has ruled that the prosecution is bound by Whitworth's indictment, which refers only to the Soviet Union.

Walker, who pleaded guilty to espionage and was the chief prosecution witness against Whitworth, said he never told his old Navy friend about the Soviets' involvement, instead suggesting that the secrets were being bought by Israel, the Mafia or a private intelligence organization.

But Assistant U.S. Attorney Leida Schoggen said Wednesday there was overwhelming evidence that Whitworth had knowingly provided vital cryptographic secrets to the Soviets "for greed, the basest of human motivations."

She cited Whitworth's training, which stressed the Soviets' interest in code secrets; his alleged disclosures of information prized by the Soviets, and circumstantial evidence that he wrote anonymous letters confessing involvement in a Soviet-run spy ring.

She said a conviction would mean Whitworth's "traitorous, cold-blooded conduct will not be tolerated."

Even if the jury concluded that he was unaware of the Soviets' role, Ms. Schoggen added, "it is not for Jerry Whitworth to decide when cryptographic material is to be disclosed to an ally. It is a matter of national defense."

In that case, she said, he could still be convicted of espionage for disclosures that he had reason to believe would harm the United States.

Whitworth, 46, of Davis, who retired from the Navy in 1983 after 18 years as a radioman, is charged with selling code and communications secrets for $332,000 between 1974 and 1983 to Walker's Soviet-controlled spy ring.

Walker, of Norfolk, Va., pleaded guilty last October to spying for the Soviets for 17 years, and agreed to testify against Whitworth in exchange for a reduced sentence for Walker's son, Michael, who also pleaded guilty. Walker's brother Arthur was convicted of spying, a conviction upheld Wednesday by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Study says crib deaths often due to preventable accidents

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP)—Poor parental judgment and accidents are probably responsible for many of the baby deaths that are officially classified as the mysterious sudden infant death syndrome, according to a study published today.

When a seemingly healthy baby dies unexpectedly or without explanation, the cause of death is frequently attributed to SIDS, or crib death. It is the leading killer of children between ages 1 month and 1 year, and blamed for 8,000 to 10,000 deaths in the United States annually.

New research, however, suggests that when such deaths are examined, there frequently is a reasonable explanation for the death, often a preventable household tragedy.

Dr. Millard Bass said he and his colleagues found evidence of accidental causes of death in 24 of 26 SIDS cases at Brooklyn-Kings County Hospital Center in New York City.

"What occurred in Brooklyn is probably characteristic of the problem nationwide," said Bass, a forensic pathologist at the State University of New York's Health Science Center. "It appears there are a lot of misdiagnoses being made."

Among the cases cited:

—A 3-month-old boy suffering from a cold slept in a wooden drawer on a basement floor. He died, probably of asphyxiation and high body temperature, when the parents tried to treat him with a crude mist tent — a plastic bag over the drawer and an attached vaporizer.

—A month-old girl was placed face down on a large foam-rubber pillow in a bassinet. The baby was found dead, trapped in a groove formed between the edge of the pillow and the plastic side of the bassinet.

—A 4-month-old boy was dressed in an undershirt and jumpsuit, covered with three blankets and put to bed in a crib next to a leaky steam radiator. He was found dead the next morning. Blankets covered his head, and the temperature in the crib was 105.

"Poor judgment by the caretaker of the infant was considered an important contributing factor in almost all the deaths," the researchers concluded.

Dr. Frederick Mandell, vice president of the National Sudden Infant Death Syndrome Foundation and senior associate physician at Children's Hospital in Boston, said he feared the ramifications of the conclusions.

Bass investigated the deaths of babies brought to the emergency room of the hospital. Most of the babies died in crowded tenements in poor neighborhoods around the hospital.

Little by little, Reagan access reduced

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan White House, whose managers prefer decorum to the sometimes unruliness of a free — and sometimes free-wheeling — press, is more and more off limits to reporters.

They're small steps, to be sure, each one by itself hardly worth mentioning outside the grounds. But as they are added one after another, they begin to form a pattern of exclusion.

Item: Broadcast correspondents, whose persistent questions seem in recent years to have dominated the brief photo sessions sometimes permitted at the start of presidential meetings, are told they may send only one of their number to each session.

Item: The Secret Service, ostensibly for reasons of security, begins barring the small "pool" of reporters and photographers that usually accompanies the president from following him into and through hotels and places where he goes to make speeches. As a result, news people no longer can get close enough to the president to talk to him when he is traveling.

Item: Still photographers, once accompanied by reporters and television crews whenever they took pictures of the president, are quietly escorted into some meetings without their inquisitive colleagues along. Begun on an experimental basis, purportedly to increase opportunities for candid photos of Reagan, these "stills only" events are now frequent substitutes for the larger sessions that customarily include reporters.

Item: The president, who once entered the East Room through the main door to address assembled guests, now slips in through a side entrance beyond the reach — and questions — of reporters covering such events.

None of these steps would be cause for concern if there were regular access to President Reagan and his top lieutenants. But for years members of the news media have been prohibited from walking unescorted through the working areas of the White House and generally see the president only at his pleasure or the inclination of his staff.

Reagan, in particular, exhibits little desire for informal or unrehearsed meetings with reporters.

And as a practical matter, no other outside observers have regular opportunities to question him about his policies or issues of national concern. The American system of government doesn't offer the alternative available in parliamentary governments, which traditionally subject the prime minister to questioning by his or her fellow lawmakers.

In the past week, Reagan flew to New York and back aboard a plane without the usual contingent of reporters and photographers in tow. And he slipped out of the White House to celebrate his wife's 65th birthday in a local restaurant without alerting the press pool that customarily goes along in the motorcade just in case something unexpected were to happen.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes acknowledged the White House had a historical commitment to take a contingent of reporters and photographers along when the president left the White House. But henceforth, he said, Reagan and his staff will decide on their own whether to take the press.

Shortly thereafter, Speakes erected a chain fence in the driveway to restrict reporters and photographers seeking to interview members of Congress and others as they emerge from the White House after meeting with the president.

The president's business is, after all, the public's business. And while most would acknowledge he has the privilege of conducting much of his work behind closed doors, there will continue to be demands for open scrutiny of his thoughts, his decisions and his policies.

Partnership arrangements will work out fortunately for you in the year ahead. Two, in particular, will produce outstanding benefits.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You will have a marvelous facility today for taking ideas that have not worked well for others and using them successfully for yourself. Is there romance in your future? To find out what's in store for you, get your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, PO Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Additional efforts could pay you a bonus at this time, so don't mumble and grumble if the boss asks you to do something extra.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You will not fit comfortably into a subordinate role today, so instead of taking directives from persons less capable than yourself, step forward and take command.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A matter that has been a thorn in your side for quite some time can be concluded to your satisfaction today. All it will require is your will to do so.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You could be disappointed if you wait on others to make the social arrangements today. Get on the phone early and start putting some fun together yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) The aspects indicate that you can be fortunate today in money matters. However, if you want to fatten your purse, you'll have to be enterprising.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If there is an idea or cause you are promoting today, be both bold and dramatic in your presentation. You will win supporters with your enthusiasm.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your greatest asset today is your talent in managing situations for others. When you genuinely try to be helpful, rewards will follow.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Friends will find you an enjoyable companion today because you'll know exactly what to say or do to make them feel important. What's more, you'll mean it.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This is the right day to call attention to yourself regarding an assignment you've done successfully. Those in authority should know who deserves the credit.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Competitive situations will prove to be very stimulating to you today. It doesn't matter whether they are in the sports or commercial world.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't be reluctant today to stand up for what you believe, even if you have to go toe to toe with a person who is loud and arrogant.

Fall fashions

Emphasis is on comfort

By Florence De Santis

Even in London — where the fashion-conscious have learned to expect the wildest ideas — designers have calmed down for this fall. In Milan and Paris, they're designing for women rather than showing how radical they can be. Whether you like fitted or loose clothes, Europe has them.

Realism even extends to downplaying the evening clothes that once formed an extravagant part of, say, Paris fashion. Designers are more interested in day clothes, such as the classically tailored suits at Yves St. Laurent or the cashmere tunic dress at Valentino. While shoulders are still padded, they are no longer exaggerated; body fit isn't impractically tight, but belted or draped. Even full skirts returned in Paris.

Controlled volume marks Italian clothes, such as Laura Biagiotti's bathing cashmere tunic sweater striped in black and white with band edging in mauve, over a pencil-slim black skirt. The combination of full and lean contrasts with softly lean, as in Krizia's mauve cashmere dress — nearly ankle-length and bloused above a black hip sash, under a black cardigan knit coat.

Knits always stand out in Italian collections, and many designers who showed in New York, at either Donna Moda or the New York Pret, brought new patterns and colors. Maria Spadafora layers two-tone gray geomet-rics in a gently widened double-sleeved top over a slim skirt. In Pacabu's twin set, with vividly colored flora-and-leaf intarsia and wide-rib trim, the jacket is long enough to make a new kind of suit look.

The vivid colors usually thought of as Italian also showed up in Paris, where usually a more somber palette reigns. Red often sparks black or gray. Karl Lagerfeld uses Kelly green for his curvy peplum jacket flared over a slim black skirt. Thierry Mugler chooses purple wool for his wide-shouldered jacket with its sweepingly curved side closing.

The suit is being rethought with new details in Milan and Paris. Giorgio Armani cuts a fingertip jacket in mauve wool with a collarless cross-over closing under an attached side-to-back belt. Then he does a shorter, shaped jacket with a zigzag closing.

Also noted in Paris and Milan were luxury fabrics — lots of mohair and cashmere as well as the most buttery of woolsens. The same trend marked leading London collections, where the punk looks of recent years had either disappeared or looked tired. New designer Alistair D. Blair, with 10 years of couture apprenticeships behind him, impressed with elegant tailoring and superb detailing, as in his red wool suit with a long-lapel, knee-length jacket over a shorter skirt.

Rifat Ozbek stayed with closely fitted, cropped jackets, while Wendy Dagworthy turned from avant-garde to a casual mix of separates and patterns, such as her oversize coat in black and white houndstooth wool over a jersey suit with gold zipper closing. Evening clothes were more important in London, from Isobel Martin's knit tube flaring into a ruffled skirt to David Fielden's fuchsia paper-taffeta bustle gown and Bruce Oldfield's winged-shoulder crepe.

European influence extends even to Hong Kong, whose designers have often trained abroad. Ragence Lam was already successful in London before he returned to Hong Kong, where he melds Eastern and Western influences in his collections. Quite different are the mixed-print dresses of Diane Freis, a California-born talent whose ruffled dresses in riotous colors are made of both woven fabric and knit and are unlike any other designer's.

Hosiery shapes legs
Choose tinted and patterned hosiery with an eye to shaping the legs. Dark tints slenderize, while light ones make legs look larger. Patterned hosiery — such as those of white lace — can make legs look twice their size.

Dressing for job interviews

The excitement of graduation is past. Now it's time to look for that first job. Interviews are ahead, and looking one's best is an important part of making a good impression.

"The clothes you choose can be those you wear to the job itself, if you pick them well," says Kae McCulloch, fashion consultant for the Jewelry Industry Council. "Keep your campus jeans and other casuals for your leisure hours and look for a suit. Not a severe man-tailored look — that's out these days. The softer suit in a gray or beige color is the right choice."

Even if you prefer a more tailored suit, soften it with a blouse that has a high, pleated ruffle neckline or a jabot front. Avoid novelty shoes or hosiery, since beige sheers and plain pumps are better for the trim look that will make a good impression.

In jewelry, forget bangle bracelets, drop earrings and necklaces. Best choice is a simple gold pin and matching clip-on earrings. If you wear a watch, leave the fun kind at home, says McCulloch, and wear a gold dress watch. Even such an accessory as a gold pen, to fill out forms, gives the impression that the job applicant is a person who pays attention to details.

When going to job interviews, avoid big, squashy handbags that look overstuffed. A tailored bag in a darker tone of the suit color — which can be fitted with necessities without looking bulky — is the correct choice. Women often forget how important their handbag is to their total look, but since it is the largest accessory it is noticed by the interviewer.

"Young women often think they'll wait until they're on the job to change their wardrobe," says Ms. McCulloch, "but the time to invest in your business appearance is when you're looking for the job. It's a big change from college dressing, but it pays off in job interviews."

Dear Abby

Woman's paper marriage is worth lots of bucks

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I received a tempting proposition last week and would like some information from you before I make up my mind. I am a woman, 28, single, and struggling to gain recognition as an artist. A good friend of mine knows a man from Mexico who wants to move to the United States and is seeking an American woman to marry. I have been assured that he wants nothing else — just my name on the marriage license. He is willing to pay me a good price to marry him. Frankly, I could use the money and am considering his offer.

THINKING IT OVER

DEAR THINKING: I spoke with Joel Flanders of the U.S. Immigration Office in Los Angeles. He said: "This is a wide-spread problem. Particularly vulnerable are college students who, out of friendship (or for a price), will accommodate a fellow student by agreeing to an in-name-only marriage.

"We investigate suspected sham marriages and pursue the parties involved. One who enters into such an arrangement can be charged with general fraud, which is a felony. If the person is found guilty, the fine is $10,000 or five years in prison — or both."

DEAR ABBY: In a recent letter to "No Name or Town," you addressed yourself to a situation which I see regularly. I am a Roman Catholic priest. I was very interested in your response to the woman concerned that her ex-husband wished to get an "annulment" for his marriage to her.

Abby, although you were correct in saying that a declaration of nullity (as it is called) can be granted only in the case where no marriage existed, there is more to it. The declaration is made in cases where a previous marriage was not a sacramental marriage according to canon law. It does not mean that there was no marriage at all. It has no effect on children (although there were none in this case). And it has no effect on civil legal status.

By the way, your advice that she see a lawyer would be a waste of time and money. It would be more sensible to consult a priest and would not cost anything. Chances are that it was indeed a sacramental marriage if she was married according to the laws of the Lutheran Church.

Thank you for hearing me out. I am still one of your fans and think that your advice is usually right on the mark.

REV. RAYMOND RICKELS
DEAR FATHER RICKELS: I am all mea culpa'd out. Yours was one of the more generous letters I received. Thanks, I needed that.

DEAR ABBY: Several months ago you ran a column about a husband-to-be who asked if you thought his fiancée would object if he wore nylons, heels and ladies' attire in private. Our morning coffee group could not agree with your answer. Two were for, one was against, and I was undecided.

My loving, caring, nearly perfect husband of 48 years passed away last month. He was a retired portrait photographer. As I went through his things in his at-home studio, I got the surprise of my life! He had in the back of his closet women's lingerie, dresses, heels, makeup and wigs. I also found photographs which he had taken of himself dressed like a woman and looking beautiful. Even in his most recent photographs his legs were gorgeous in a miniskirt, hose and 4-inch heels. He could have been a hosiery model. I found diaries which he had kept since long before he knew me, and, Abby, he was not a homosexual — he just liked to get dressed up in women's clothing!

I regret that he was never able to share his fantasy with me while he was alive. He probably thought I would not have approved — or worse yet, that I would have thought he was some kind of freak. I have moved all his female attire into my dressing room closet where I can see them every day. Maybe somehow he will know that I would have approved had he told me.

Happy hoppers do fancy routines with jump rope

Happy hoppers do fancy routines with jump rope

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Fourth-grader Angela Gallagher had just finished her jump-rope routine for a downtown lunch crowd on Courthouse Square in a swirl of legs, arms and rope that could have passed for a martial-arts demonstration.

"Oh, that's just double-unders and criss-crosses," she said matter-of-factly, not noticing that her audience was a bit stunned.

For Miss Gallagher, 10, and 25 other members of the Happy Hoppers jump rope team at Whittier Elementary School it's everyday stuff to turn a piece of plastic rope and a quick-footed gait into a work of art.

"The nice thing about this is it doesn't matter how tall you are, how short, how fat or thin, you can achieve, and it gives you a great sense of achievement," said Woody Pumphrey, their coach and the school's physical education instructor.

"It doesn't matter, sex, race or whatever, kids meet kids and have fun. That's what it's all about," he said.

It's also about speed ropes, double-unders, Croucher moves, and double Dutch. It's jumping, doing Cossack dance moves and with pogo sticks, roller skates and bamboo sticks — anything to make the simple game of jump rope look like a museum piece.

Heather Hager, an 11-year-old fifth-grader, said Pumphrey gives team members, who range in age from 5 to 14, a book of 801 single-rope moves and 27 moves using two ropes, or double Dutch.

"We make up our own routines for competition," she said. Many are done to the Happy Hoppers' theme song, the Pointer Sisters' recording of "Jump (For My Love)."

The team is two years old, and has caught fire at the school, where Pumphrey said most of the students have bought a jump rope.

"I practiced a lot last year because my friends were on the team," said Miss Hager, who joined the Hoppers this year.

Karen Newson, 14, graduated from Whittier last year and is a seventh-grader at Kiser Intermediate School, but rides a bus across town almost every day to practice "cause it's fun."

"You get to travel a lot; show what I know," she said.

It's that pride — students learning they have abilities that go beyond jumping rope — that makes Pumphrey proud.

Pumphrey, 46, a graduate of Defiance College who has been with Dayton schools for 17 years, said the idea for the Happy Hoppers started when another school official saw a team from Colorado at a convention.

The schools invited that team and one from Richmond, Ind., for an exhibition one Saturday at the University of Dayton Arena.

Royals end 11-game losing streak, blank Orioles

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

It didn't have the same national impact as the birth of Drew William Sabershen last October, but the Kansas City Royals have good reason to remember the day Brandon Neal Jackson was born.

Last October, a day after his son was born, Bret Sabershen pitched the Royals to an 11-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals and the world championship.

And Wednesday night, some 15 hours after 8-pound, 8-ounce Brandon first saw the light of day, the Royals saw some light at the end of the tunnel when proud papa Danny Jackson teamed with Bud Black on a three-hitter, blanking the Baltimore Orioles 3-0 and snapping Kansas City's club record 11-game losing streak.

It was the first victory for the Royals since June 26, when they beat Oakland 9-2. That was almost as long as Jody Jackson was overdue. She had gone to the hospital five times with false labor, as doctors revised their estimate of Brandon's arrival from June 24 to July 2. So what's an extra week?

Jackson, 5-6, allowed all three Baltimore hits while walking three and striking out three. Black came in with two on and none out in the seventh and pitched hitless ball the rest of the way.

The loss went to Rich Bordi, 3-1, who made his first start after 26 relief appearances.

In other American League games, it was California 6, Milwaukee 1; New York 5, Texas 4; Boston 7, Oakland 6; Cleveland 6, Chicago 3; Detroit 7, Minnesota 4; Toronto 6, Seattle 5.

Angels 6, Brewers 1
Don Sutton, 8-5, and Donnie

Moore combined on a six-hitter as California won its fourth straight and opened a 1½-game lead over second-place Texas in the AL West. Milwaukee has dropped four in a row and 12 of 17.

The victory was the sixth straight and 303rd of his career for Sutton, who allowed one run on four hits in 7 2-3 innings. Milwaukee starter Teddy Figueroa, 10-7, gave up four runs in 3 2-3 innings.

Yankees 5, Rangers 4

Mike Pagliarulo hit a three-run homer in the fourth inning and Dave Righetti pitched out of a bases-loaded, none-out jam in the ninth. Jose Guzman, 8-9, was the loser.

Red Sox 7, A's 6

Third baseman Wade Boggs

atoned for two costly errors with three hits and Boston scored six times in the fourth inning to erase a 4-0 deficit. Rookie Jeff Sellers, 3-3, survived three Boston errors and scattered six hits over 7 1-3 innings. Joe Sambito retired all five batters he faced for his ninth save.

Indians 6, White Sox 3

Joe Carter hit a two-run double and Mel Hall followed with a two-run homer in the fifth inning while Julio Franco went 5-for-5 and 47-year-old Phil Niekro scattered six hits for his third consecutive victory, evening his record at 6-6.

Richard Dotson, whose record dropped to 7-8, was relieved in the fifth by Bill Dawley.

Search nears end for Pampa High School basketball coach

By PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Writer

The search is nearly over. Pampa schools Athletic Director John Kendall announced Tuesday that the number of applicants for the head boy's basketball coaching job at Pampa High School has been narrowed to five and a decision is expected by July 15.

Kendall and Supt. James Trusty have been searching for a replacement for Coach Garland Nichols since Nichols announced his resignation in June. Kendall said about 20 applications were received for the position.

In a meeting with the board of trustees Tuesday, Kendall said he and Trusty plan to make a recommendation at the board's July 15 meeting. The board agreed it would not need to meet with the recommended applicant before hiring him.

Several trustees asked if the individual would be qualified to take over as assistant athletic director, a position Nichols held, as well as basketball coach. Kendall said some of the finalists would qualify but added he and Trusty are interviewing applicants strictly on the basis of the coaching position.

The athletic director and assistant athletic director must have additional educational hours and be certified, primarily for their appraising duties.

Trusty said if the individual recommended does not qualify for the assistant athletic director position, the district may have to look at other athletic department staff members to fill the position.

"Our first priority is getting the best qualified basketball coach for our organization," Trusty said.

School board president Robert Lyle said he is "personally not interested" in having an assistant athletic director because, he said, the position was created to "keep feathers from being ruffled" when Kendall was named athletic director.

However, Kendall said the athletic director's position has become a time-consuming job that, without an assistant, would take time away from football coaching. He said Nichols handled most of the administrative duties in the athletic department during football season.

Lyle then suggested that the athletic director's position may be a full-time job and asked Trusty how that would balance financially with the current system.

Trusty said both the athletic director and his assistant each are paid a supplement for their administrative duties.

"That is far less than an additional salary would be for a full-time athletic director," he said, calling the system a "real bargain financially."

Trusty also said the shared duties have worked well for the past two years and are preferable to past years. He also noted that not enough time is left before the upcoming school year to change the system now.

"I would like to see this mode of operation continue at least through this next school year," Trusty said.

Kendall, noting that football practices are about four weeks away, agreed it is too late to consider the prospect of a full-time athletic director this year.

NFL players union files suit to stop drug testing

WASHINGTON (AP)—The National Football League's Players Association has gone to court to try and stop Commissioner Pete Rozelle's mandatory drug testing program.

The union filed a lawsuit in U.S. District Court here on Wednesday to prohibit the league from implementing the program, announced Monday by Rozelle, until an arbitrator decides its legality.

The union, which filed a grievance through their collective bargaining procedure with the NFL Management Council, the league's labor relations arm, on Tuesday, asked the court for a temporary and preliminary injunction to block implementation of the drug program pending arbitration.

The union said it had asked the court for a hearing on its request for today.

In filing the grievance, union president Gene Upshaw, a former All-Pro lineman with the Oakland and Los Angeles Raiders, said Rozelle was "making a grandstand play" by mandating random drug tests for players. Under the Rozelle plan, a player testing positive for drugs would be put under continual supervision for 30 days, then suspended for at least 30 days at half pay if tested positive again and permanently banned with right of appeal if he failed the test the third time.

Rozelle's plan also added two random drug tests to the mandatory pre-season urinalysis agreed to in the 1982 collective bargaining agreement, which expires after the 1986 season. The current agreement also allows an urinalysis during the season if there is suspicion of drug use.

Strawberry leads NL voting

NEW YORK (AP)—Outfielder Darryl Strawberry, one of three New York Mets voted to the starting lineup, was the leading vote-getter for the National League All-Star team, which was announced today by the Commissioner's Office.

Strawberry attracted 1,619,511 votes, more than 135,000 ahead of the next most popular player in the fan balloting — his teammate, catcher Gary Carter.

The third Mets starter is first baseman Keith Hernandez.

Also selected to the starting team for next Tuesday's game at Houston were second baseman Ryne Sandberg of Chicago, shortstop Ozzie Smith of St. Louis, third baseman Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia and outfielders Dale Murphy of Atlanta and Tony Gwynn of San Diego.

Strawberry was hitting .295 with 13 home runs and 45 runs batted in through Wednesday. He is the first NL player ever to start All-Star Games in his first three full seasons in the major leagues.

Hernandez, hitting .286, won his eighth consecutive Gold Glove Award last season and will be making his first All-Star start.

Carter is hitting only .241 but has 13 homers and 57 RBI. He won his 13th consecutive selection with 1,486,141 votes. Since 1970, when the fans regained the vote for the starting teams, only Carter, Johnny Bench and Ted Simmons have been selected as starting catchers for the National League.

Murphy earned his fifth straight starting assignment with a .273 average, 14 homers and 36 RBI. Gwynn held off a late surge by Montreal's Tim Lincecum to win by 82,848 votes for his debut as a starter. Gwynn, the 1984 NL batting champ, is hitting .335.

Sandberg makes his second start at second base. He has a .276 average with 43 RBI. Smith makes his fourth straight start at shortstop.

Rookie leads AL All-Stars

NEW YORK (AP)—As far as the All-Star Game is concerned, Wally Joyner picked the right year to be a rookie.

For the first time since 1970, when the fans regained the vote for the starting teams, rookies were on the ballot. And Joyner, the hard-hitting freshman first baseman with the California Angels, beat out an illustrious cast for the starting spot on the American League team, which was announced Wednesday.

"I've watched it almost every year," the 24-year-old Joyner said of the mid-season classic after attracting 917,972 votes to beat out the Yankees' Don Mattingly, the AL's Most Valuable Player in 1985 and a .330 hitter this year. "To think I'm going to be there is something special."

Joyner got into the lineup for next Tuesday's game at Houston with a .298 average, 20 homers and 66 runs batted in when the vote was announced. The Angels were so sure of Joyner's abilities that they didn't re-sign seven-time batting champion Rod Carew during the off-season and handed the first base job to the rookie. Joyner also had more votes than Eddie Murray of Baltimore and Kent Hrbek of Minnesota, both of whom are having fine seasons.

Joining Joyner in the starting lineup will be second baseman Lou Whitaker of Detroit; shortstop Cal Ripken of Baltimore; third baseman George Brett of Kansas City; catcher Lance Parrish of Detroit, and outfielders Kirby Puckett of Minnesota and Rickey Henderson and Dave Winfield of the Yankees.

Puckett and Joyner are the only non-repeaters from last year's team. Puckett edged out Reggie Jackson of California for the last starting berth with a late surge of voting support. In his third season and batting .340 with 16 homers and 49 RBI, Puckett had 736,328 votes, beating Jackson by 17,189.

Ripken, hitting .297 with 12 homers and 46 RBI, collected the most votes, 1,486,806—more than one million votes ahead of Alan Trammell of Detroit.

Brett had 84,903 more votes than Wade Boggs of Boston, who lead the major leagues in hitting.

Strange cursed by home course

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Some people may feel Curtis Strange has an advantage over the rest of the field in the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic, but the host professional thinks the opposite may be true.

"I would like to win here more than anything else, but that's a lot to ask of myself," Strange said Wednesday as he and 155 other golfers made their final preparations for the $500,000 event that was to begin today.

The tournament is held on the 6,746-yard, par-71 Kingsmill Golf Club, a hilly layout where Strange lives and serves as the host professional. Strange, however, has yet to finish higher than third in a PGA Tour on the course.

"I've had a chance to win it twice and I was in contention three different years," Strange said. "That's all I can ask for is a chance."

"It's not as easy as it might seem," he added. "People tend to forget there are a lot of distractions for me playing here, especially early in the week."

Another golfer who said he would be satisfied by playing well enough to be in contention was defending champion Mark Wiebe, who became one of 1985's 11 first-time winners when he beat John Mahaffey on the first hole of a playoff at the Anheuser-Busch.

"Different players play at different levels," Wiebe said. "Winning is nice, sure, but you have to play well first on a week-in, week-out basis. I see nothing wrong with finishing second. It's better than third."

For Wiebe, winning the Anheuser-Busch meant not having to return to qualifying school for a ninth time. He finished the season with earnings of $181,894, and this year has a second-place finish at the Byron Nelson and a third at Pebble Beach along with $169,397 in winnings.

Many of the tour's leading money winners have skipped the Anheuser-Busch to prepare for next weekend's British Open. Only three of the top 10 money-winners are here: fourth-ranked Hal Sutton, No. 5 Payne Stewart and Mahaffey, seventh on the earnings list. Calvin Peete, who is sixth in the earnings race, was entered but withdrew because of knee problems.

Other leading entries in this year's field include Lanny Wadkins, a three-time winner last year who is seeking his first victory of 1986, and Mac O'Grady, last week's winner at Hartford, who was ordered by a PGA appeals committee to serve a six-event suspension and pay a $5,000 fine levied in 1984 by Commissioner Deane Beman. O'Grady will be allowed to play this week and he has vowed to take his fight to court to avoid the suspension.

NBC will televise parts of Saturday's and Sunday's rounds.

Course offers challenge for women's open players

KETTERING, Ohio (AP) — A field of 153 has been assembled for the 41st Women's U.S. Open, but "only about 30" have a chance to win, according to Amy Alcott.

Her reason: the NCR Country Club course, 6,243 yards of rolling countryside playing to a par of 72.

"I think this is the best Open course I've ever played, and I've played in 13 of them," Alcott said of the course where play was to start today with the first round of the national championship.

"It is a demanding course in every area. It is a course that insures that you will have a good winner," Alcott said.

"It negates a good portion of the field," said Alcott, a winner of this title and one of the chief challengers in the chase for this year's $300,000 in total prize money.

The leading contender is Pat Bradley, who won the first two Grand Slam tournaments — the Dinah Shore and LPGA — earlier this season and now needs this title to keep alive her hopes of a one-year sweep of all the ladies' majors.

The duMaurier Classic in Canada later this month is the last of the Big Four tournaments and Bradley is the defending title-holder there. Should she win here — and she is considered a heavy favorite — she would be the first to hold all four titles simultaneously.

"She's having a fabulous year," Alcott said of Bradley. "She has reached a level in her career where she thinks she can win, believes she can win."

"This seems to be her year to shine."

Bradley, 35, has won three times this season and leads the LPGA Tour in almost all statistical categories, including earnings, $302,300 and stroke average, 71.0.

While Alcott declined to name the more prominent contenders, some of the leading figures include:

Juli Inkster, also a three-time winner this season; Mary Beth Zimmerman and Patty Sheehan, each the winner of two titles this year; Kathy Baker, the defending Open champion; and three-time Open winner Hollis Stacy.

And Alcott.

"It's been a good year, but not a great year so far. It is not marked by the consistency I've had the last six or seven years," Alcott, who scored her first victory of the year last week in Houston in a playoff, said.

"But I'm a perfectionist — I expect very high standards for myself. But I really haven't gotten going on the consistent level I have had in the past.

"I guess I just have to be patient," she said.

Her chances will be better, she suggested, if the forecast for continued hot, muggy conditions holds up.

"I tend to play better in adversity," said Alcott, who won the Open in extreme heat in Nashville in 1980 and won again in very high temperatures last week.

Golf clinic set

The Clarendon College Golf Clinic, conducted by Pampa High coach Frank McCullough, is scheduled for July 14-18 at the Clarendon College-Pampa Center.

Two sessions, one from 8 to 10 in the morning and the other from 6 to 8 in the evening, are planned. Interested persons can sign up for the clinic by calling McCullough at 665-7367. At least five persons must be signed up for each session.

Cost is $40 and clubs will be furnished if needed.

Goodwill Games

Johnson dominates Lewis

MOSCOW (AP) — They were the heroes of summer, the gold-medal stars of the 1984 Olympics.

Two years ago, Edwin Moses was skimming over hurdles and winning his second Olympic championship. At the same time, Carl Lewis was sprinting, leaping and passing the relay baton, a man winning four Olympic titles for the first time in 48 years.

Things have changed for both athletes since then, and it was apparent Wednesday night at the inaugural Goodwill Games.

The final day of track competition at the international festival was highlighted by Ben Johnson's victory over Lewis in the 100 meters in 9.95 seconds — the fastest ever at sea-level.

The United States and the Soviet Union women's basketball teams both registered closer-than-expected victories, and will meet tonight in a showdown of unbeaten squads.

And for the fifth time a world record was set, this time in cycling. A Soviet team lowered the world mark in the four-kilometer pursuit to four minutes, 12.830 seconds.

Moses, starting a comeback from almost two years of back and leg problems, sped away from the field to win his 11th consecutive 400-meter hurdles race in 47.94 seconds.

It was nowhere near his world record of 47.02, and even farther away from the sub-47 second clocking that he set as his goal. According to Moses, however, for someone with his recent experiences, it was fine.

"I was glad to be able to run under 48 seconds," he said.

Chidi Imot of Nigeria was second in 100 with Lewis, clocked at 10.06, third behind Johnson, a Canadian who now has beaten the American three consecutive times and just loves it.

Johnson, who finished third in the 1984 Olympics, blasted out of the starting blocks and finished just .02 seconds off Calvin Smith's world mark of 9.93. The time tied Jimmie Hines' winning mark in the 1968 Olympics.

Later, Lewis anchored the U.S. men's 400-meter relay to victory in 37.95, the third-fastest time ever. Lewis was the anchor on the two faster squads.

The U.S. women's 400 relay team also won, with Evelyn Ashford anchoring a run of 42.12 seconds.

Mike Conley of the United States won the triple jump with a leap of 58 feet, 1/2 inch. The world record holder in the triple jump, Willie Banks of the United States, pulled out of the competition at the last minute with an ankle injury sustained Monday at a meet in Finland.

Sports camp tells kids to stay away from drugs

HOUSTON (AP) — In an era when drugs have cast an ugly shadow over the world of sports, Clyde Drexler wants his summer basketball camp to be more than just another factory for churning out accomplished rebounders and shooters.

So each day this week, the former University of Houston standout who now plays for the Portland Trail Blazers leads his 8- to 18-year-old students to a classroom to learn why it's important for them not to get high.

"For a summer sports camp like this, it's the only continuous program on drug use that I've heard of," said Houston police officer Timothy McNamara, who has attended as a guest lecturer.

"Drugs pose a tremendous threat to the youth of America today, and I think it's very perceptive of the individuals running this camp to make this commitment toward educating our young people," McNamara said.

At Wednesday's session, the thumping sound of basketballs hitting the court ceased at about 4 p.m. Drexler ushered his 100 or so students upstairs and began by talking about a time when he was approached by a drug pusher.

"A guy came up to me and asked, 'Do you want to buy drugs?' I said I was 6-foot-7. That's as high as I want to be," Drexler said. "The key is peer pressure. Some of your friends may use drugs and think they are cool. But they aren't really cool. If you try it, chances are you'll want to try it again. It's up to you to say no."

Some campers say the recent deaths of professional athletes Len Bias and Don Rogers have made them want to learn more about the drug dilemma.

"I thought they were real good people," 13-year-old Alvin Jackson said. "I saw Don Rogers make some great tackles. I just don't understand why he would want to take a drug that could kill him."

Dairyman says his business a losing game

PECOS, Texas (AP) — The white-spotted dairy cow obviously had sensed the uneasiness of the city slicker even before his perspiring hands grasped her teats in an attempt to milk her.

But the 1,400-pound Holstein heifer soon was comforted by the caressing words of her owner and the familiar feeling of a mechanical milker.

The visitor watched with widened eyes as Pecos dairyman Charles Mitchell connected four rubber-lined suction cups to the cow's udder — another round in 31 years of twice-daily milking on the largest dairy farm in West Texas.

Life on the farm, however, has changed somewhat since the depressed 1930s, when a maturing Mitchell hand-milked cows by the light of a kerosene lantern.

And, consequently, Mitchell said he's not sure whether he would do it all over again.

"When you come to work day after day and lose money year after year, it's hard to have any enthusiasm for the business," the 60-year-old Pecos dairy farmer said. "If I could go back and see what all was going to happen, I'm sure I would do something different from being a dairy farmer.

"Don't get me wrong, I'm not crying over spilled milk. This business has been good to me, but it has also been a headache," Mitchell said as he peered through the window of his farm's small headquarters.

When his Reeves County business — Trans Pecos Dairy Inc. — opened Feb. 1, 1956, Mitchell said, he never imagined that the federal government would create an elaborate plan to reduce America's milk production.

But 31 years later, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has done just that.

The Dairy Termination Program, implemented last December by President Reagan, provides farmers with an incentive to dispose of their dairy cattle and cease milk production, Susan Schneider, a program specialist with the federal agriculture department.

The government agreed to pay $1.8 billion to 13,988 dairymen in the nation, including 376 Texas farmers, who opted to end their careers in what they say is a dying business.

"There is too much milk in this country and something has to be done to curb the problem," the USDA specialist said from Washington. "Because of this, we have contracted with producers to reduce 12 billion pounds of milk."

Mitchell said many dairy farmers have sided with the dairy program but didn't necessarily agree with it. "I'm sure many dairymen got into it because their bankers were pushing them," he said.

Mitchell admitted that he was among more than 270 other Texans who unsuccessfully applied to the program. He said the decision to try to leave the only career he has known since college was not made easily.

"With so many years in the business and at my age, I don't have much left here. And right now, there's not too much money to be made in the dairy business," Mitchell said. "So, I decided it couldn't hurt to try."

"My dairy is surviving solely on its equity — and that's all," he added.

Clad in a western shirt, blue jeans and dusty cowboy boots, Mitchell pointed out the window of his tan-colored pickup to his grazing cattle and described how the milk business has gone sour for many dairymen.

"The costs are more than what we're taking in," he said in a familiar Texas drawl. "There's just too much milk and not enough need."

Mitchell said that 60 percent of his revenues — which are earned through the estimated $1.03 he receives per gallon of raw milk sold to a milk producer's co-op group — are spent for cattle feed, while about 14 percent are used for salaries.

"At this point, I would have to say that I would like to find something different. This is a very demanding job," he said.

Fort Hood bans use of all tobacco

FORT HOOD, Texas (AP) — The use of all tobacco products, including smokeless tobacco, has been banned in most indoor areas and all Army vehicles at Fort Hood, an Army spokesman said.

The prohibition, which goes a step beyond Department of the Army guidelines announced in June, affects dependents and civilians as well as military personnel, said Maj. George Creach of Fort Hood's public affairs office.

The policy became effective late Monday with the release of a policy letter by III Corps and Fort Hood Commanding General Crosbie E. Saint.

Each Hood building now will have designated smoking areas, while tobacco will be banned from most areas.

Saint's directive prohibits tobacco in "common use areas" such as auditoriums, conference rooms, classrooms, restrooms, gymnasiums and all U.S. Army owned or leased vehicles. Tobacco use in dining areas is prohibited unless separate rooms are provided for tobacco use, the directive said.

The Army-wide guidelines, which were intended primarily to severely limit smoking in Army facilities, were supplemented recently by the Forces Command (FORSCOM) Headquarters in Fort McPherson, Ga., to limit the use of all tobacco.

FORSCOM units, the Army's combat units in the U.S. and Panama, were directed by FORSCOM headquarters July 2 to implement the stricter policies.

Creach said Tuesday that while the new rules may not be easy for some to accept, the rule will be enforced.

"It is the responsibility of the commanders and senior supervisors of each building and facility to enforce it," he said. "For military folks, what you're doing is giving them an order. If they violate it they're in violation of the Uniform Code of Military Justice."

Enforcement of the rules for civilians could be more difficult. Civilian employees on post are divided into two groups — "bargaining units" and "non-bargaining units" — and can be dealt with according to which group they are in.

Non-bargaining units, Creach said, are primarily senior employees, supervisors and managers, and interns of the civil service. There are "steps that can be taken" should such employees refuse to comply with the directives, although they are time-consuming, Creach said.

Bargaining units are "normal, everyday employees ... anyone who could join the union," Creach said.

The American Federation of Government Employees, is the civil servant's union.

Officials at both Fort Bliss, Texas, and Fort Sill, Okla., said those posts will follow DA guidelines only. A Public Affairs official at Bliss said that post had considered limiting the use of smokeless tobacco as well, but decided against it.

Fort Sill public information official Sheila Samples said the Oklahoma post followed DA guidelines as well. "We haven't deviated from that," she said, adding that Sill officials hadn't "addressed smokeless tobacco at all."

Clements gets help

AUSTIN (AP) — President Reagan will travel to Dallas on July 23 to campaign for former Gov. Bill Clements, his campaign manager said today.

Clements, ousted after one term in 1982, in May won the GOP nomination to challenge the man who beat him in the last election, Democratic Gov. Mark White.

Clements campaign manager George Bayoud said the president would appear with Clements at a rally at the Apparel Mart and attend a fund-raising function.
