Freed priest tells details of captivity

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP)—The Rev. Lawrence Jenco spent six months in chains in solitary confinement and then shared a small room for a year with other American hostages in Lebanon, he told relatives today in a reunion of hugs, kisses and tears.

The 51-year-old Roman Catholic clergyman was freed Saturday after nearly 19 months in captivity, and 10 of his relatives — three brothers, three sisters, a nephew and three in-laws — flew to West Germany for a joyful reunion.

Jenco, of Joliet, Ill., described his captivity to family members who met him at the U.S. Air Force Hospital in Wiesbaden, where he was flown from Damascus, Syria, where he was taken after being released in east Lebanon.

The priest, speaking in a voice choked with emotion, told reporters from the Wiesbaden hospital balcony: "I'm not too sure it's true, it's a dream come true. It's great to be back, to be loved again, to be back with the family."

Jenco also called for the release of the other Americans.

"When Terry Anderson, Thomas Sutherland and David Jacobsen come back again, that will be my great day of joy," Jenco said.

"Terry Anderson is one of you," Jenco called down to journalists, referring to Anderson's post as chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press. "Don't forget Terry Anderson, and David Jacobsen, ... and Tom Sutherland. There are people waiting for them, too."

Peggy Say, Anderson's sister, arrived in Cyprus today after nine days in Syria, where she worked for the release of her brother and the other hostages.

Islamic Jihad, a group of Shiite

Moslems, claimed responsibility for kidnapping five Americans, including Jenco. The group has said it killed U.S. diplomat William Buckley, 58, but no body has been found.

The other missing Americans are Anderson, 38; Sutherland, 55, acting dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut; and Jacobsen, 55, director of the university hospital.

Jenco was abducted Jan. 8, 1985, in Beirut, where he directed Catholic Relief Services operations that served both Christians and Moslems.

The relatives, speaking at a hotel near the hospital, said the reunion was charged with happiness. "It was a very emotional 10 minutes of hugs, kisses and a lot of tears" at the beginning of the two-hour reunion, said Andrew Mihelich, a nephew. "It was a very exciting time for the family."

The priest told his family about his captivity.

"He was never beaten, he was never brainwashed, he was treated with respect. But in the first several months until July 2, he was chained around his ankle and to the wall, and he had three feet to walk. He did not get too much exercise. He did not see light," the priest's brother, John Jenco, said.

Jenco and three other American hostages were kept together in a small room since July 2, 1985, and spent time reading and joked with their captors, John Jenco said. They did not know where they were being held and were blindfolded when their captors were present.

Relatives said Jenco never saw Buckley.

"The captors said, 'Is there anything that you would like, Father?' He and the other hostages would respond, 'a taxicab,'" Mihelich said.

Over three inches of rain answers Georgia's prayers

By POLLY ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

More than 3 inches of rain in Georgia was an answer to prayers for relief from a record drought, and a forecaster says a shift in weather patterns could ease the dry conditions that have cost farmers $1.9 billion.

Meanwhile, relief of another kind — 1,800 tons of hay for livestock in South Carolina — left Indiana on Sunday.

Columbus, Ga., which had not had rain in 47 days, was hit by a severe thunderstorm with winds exceeding 60 mph Sunday, the day Gov. Joe Frank Harris had set aside for prayers to end the drought.

The storm dumped nearly 2½ inches of rain on Columbus, knocked out electricity to more than 5,000 homes, and caused minor damage. At nearby Ellerslie, 3.4 inches of rain fell, said National Weather Service meteorologist Jim Helms. About 2 inches was recorded near downtown Greenville, S.C., on Sunday, and the same amount fell overnight in Macon, Ga.

Officials said the scattered thunderstorms of the past week across the Southeast had not ended the drought, but a high-pressure system known as the Bermuda High may be establishing itself in its normal position, near Bermuda instead of 500 miles west, over the southeastern United States. The shift could herald the beginning of better weather for the Southeast.

During the months it hovered over the Southeast, the high pressure system blocked the normal flow of warm, moist air from the Gulf of Mexico.

Forecaster Mike Sabones said scientists do not know how the shift will affect weather in the long term.

In Georgia, Harris had issued a proclamation last week calling for residents to set aside time Sunday to "join together as a state in lifting up to God our prayers for rain, which will replenish our water supply and nourish our land."

The Columbia, S.C., Ministerial Association planned a 30-minute prayer service for today, and Bob Jones Jr., the chancellor of Bob Jones University in Greenville, urged listeners in a radio broadcast Sunday to pray for rain.

"It's the Lord who turns the rain on and off," Jones said Sunday. "Sometimes God has to do things like this (drought) to shake people up. It could be a reminder that God's on the throne."

Agricultural losses throughout the Southeast are estimated at up to $1.9 billion and the deaths of 48 people there and in the Midwest have been blamed on an accompanying heat wave.

Hot weather hits Pampa

Staff and wire report

The South isn't the only part of the country with a heat wave. The National Weather Service is predicting some of the hottest weather of the year in parts of Texas, including the Pampa area, this week.

After local temperatures climbed to 101 Sunday, the forecast called for the mercury to hit 105 today and Tuesday, cooling off only into the 70s tonight.

Only the North Texas area was expected to be hotter as the forecast is for heat between 105 and 112 degrees and overnight lows in the 70s.

Early morning state temperatures were generally in the low 80s and 70s. The 4 a.m. temperature extremes were a low of 59 degrees at Marfa and a high of 83 degrees at Dallas-Fort Worth.

Money matters

Finances will be in spotlight as Congress reconvenes

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Money will dominate the congressional agenda this week as legislators try to figure out how to raise it, how to spend it and how much of it to let taxpayers keep.

In addition, lawmakers, hoping to make headway on other major issues before they leave town in mid-August for a three-week recess, will continue arguments over imposing economic sanctions against the white-minority government of South Africa. And the Senate will begin hearings on President Reagan's nomination of Supreme Court Justice William H. Rehnquist to be chief justice of the United States.

House and Senate tax writers trying to negotiate a final version of legislation overhauling the federal tax code were due to meet again today.

On Saturday, the Senate negotiators proposed a list of 14 items that would raise $26 billion over five years. That money would make up a $21 billion deficit in the Senate-passed version of the legislation and provide an extra $5 billion of tax relief for middle-income taxpayers being sought by House conferees.

However, the House negotiators appeared to be cool to the suggestions and were expected to ask the Senate to try again.

Agreement on this list will be only the start of the hard bargaining that will be necessary before the conferees can resolve the hundreds of differences between the versions of the landmark tax measure passed by each chamber.

Meanwhile, pending in the full Senate today is legislation to increase the government's borrowing authority by $244 billion, which would peg the national debt limit at $2.323 trillion.

The government has virtually reached its current borrowing limit of $2.079 trillion, meaning that failure to raise the limit soon will force the government to operate on a cash-only basis and could lead to a default. The House already has agreed to increase the debt limit.

Increasing the debt limit, action that has become an annual ritual, is complicated this time by an amendment that would restore the provision for automatic, across-the-board spending cuts in the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law.

Earlier this month, the Supreme Court struck down the provision.

Wrangling over the details of the amendment has stalled the Senate's work work on the entire debt-limit bill.

Across the Capitol, the House was considering routine legislation today. But the bulk of the House's time this week will be devoted to fiscal 1987 money bills for some of the government's major agencies, including the Department of Health and Human Services.

So far, Congress has completed action on none of the 13 annual appropriations bills necessary to finance government operations and programs for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

In other action this week, debate will continue on imposing economic sanctions against South Africa to force a change in that country's policy of racial segregation.

Many legislators have all but ignored President Reagan's opposition to such sanctions and the congressional debate is now focused on how harsh U.S. action should be.

On a major domestic issue, the Senate Judiciary Committee begins hearings Tuesday on Rehnquist's nomination.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., the committee chairman, has predicted Rehnquist, 61, will have little trouble being confirmed.

Nonetheless, some Democrats have said they will want to take a close look at Rehnquist's opinions since 1971, when he first became an associate justice on the Supreme Court, as well as a review of questions raised at his 1971 confirmation hearings.

Most judicial scholars have agreed that, if confirmed, Rehnquist would be the most conservative jurist to lead the high court in more than 50 years.

National institute honors Pampa man

NEW YORK — Pampa's Curt B. Beck, editor and publisher of the Four-State Environment-Energy Newsletter, has been named a fellow of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers.

In honoring Beck, a former energy and environmental consultant to the Cabot Corp. in Pampa, the institute's governing council cited his work in developing new, environmentally sound processes for the manufacture of carbon black, as well as his record of service to the institute and to community services.

A graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Beck joined the Cabot staff in 1945 as a junior chemical engineer in the research and development department. While advancing to such posts as senior chemical engineer and associate director of research, he co-developed several processes which produced carbon black products with greater efficiency and fewer polluting by-products than standard methods.

Beck holds seven U.S. and foreign patents for his work in this area, which also includes developing a process for the manufacture of conductive carbon blacks for batteries.

At the time of his retirement in 1985, he had achieved the title of corporate energy utilization officer. He was instrumental in organizing the company's pollution and environmental control division and the energy use and conservation program, charged with overseeing Cabot's worldwide operations.

Beck is a founding member and former chair of the institute's Texas Panhandle local section. He also has served as chairman of the Panhandle-Plains section of the American Chemical Society.

Other memberships include MIT's Educational Advisory Council, the Chemical Manufacturer's Association's air quality and energy conservation committee's, the Louisiana Chemical Association's environmental steering committee and the Texas Chemical Council's environmental committee.

Active in a variety of community service projects for many years, Beck is currently president of the advisory board for the Tralee Family Crisis Center. He also has represented the chemical engineering profession at several career clinics at Pampa High School and is a former member of the Pampa Independent School Board of Trustees.

In 1985, Cabot donated $1,000 in his name to the Salvation Army as part of its volunteer awards program.

A registered professional engineer in five states, Beck was previously honored with fellow status in the American Academy of Environmental Engineers.

OPEC meeting called 'positive'

GENEVA (AP)—OPEC ministers today began talks on a proposal aimed at cutting oil production to shore up falling oil prices, and the initial response was positive, the cartel's spokesman said.

The opening session adjourned after 90 minutes.

Delegates of the 13-member Organization of Oil Exporting Countries last met in June on the Yugoslav island of Brioni, where a majority agreed to establish an average daily production ceiling of 17.6 million barrels for the entire cartel this year.

Ministers today presented their governments' responses to that plan, which would require lower national output quotas. Auda said the responses were "very positive."

Saudi Arabia's powerful oil minister, Ahmed Zaki Yamani, asked before today's meeting if there were divisions within the cartel on the new plan, told reporters: "We'll see."

But Mana Saed Otaiba, the United Arab Emirates' oil minister, said he still thought the conference faced an "impossible task" in trying to gain the cooperation of oil producers inside and outside OPEC to prop up oil prices.

Fence Walker top country band

Crowd-pleasing local favorites Fence Walker won the top prize in Radio Station KSNZ's True Value Country Showdown contest Saturday night.

The band won the local top prize of $1,000 and the right to advance to the Texas Showdown in Fort Worth on Aug. 29 at Billy Bob's.

Members of the Pampa band are Bill Farriell, lead vocals; Archie Young, lead player; Ron Carter, bass; Monty Smith, drums; and Rick King, rhythm and backup vocals.

Fence Walker will be competing in Fort Worth for a chance to advance to regional competition where the top prize will be an all-expense paid trip to Nashville to compete on national television for $50,000 and a recording and booking contract.

Runnersup in the local competition were Gun Powder of Amarillo, first; Justin Mathias and the Tex Ederate Band of Lubbock, second; Ted Northcutt of Pampa, third; and Dean Anderson of Pampa, fourth.

KSNZ Program Director Dan Young served as the main master of ceremonies and presented the door prizes, including a $500 Wrangler wardrobe, watches and a jacket, during the event held at the Catalina Club.

General Manager David Webster introduced KSNZ personnel and other guests in attendance.

Webster praised the talent entries and noted that even if all were not winners at the event, some of their songs could go on to be recorded by other country artists.

Jeanie Ritchie, co-owner of the club with her husband Glenn Ritchie, thanked the radio station for bringing the contest to Pampa. "This is the first time it's been held here, and it's due to their (KSNZ's) efforts," she said.

A capacity crowd was on hand to cheer the more than 20 entries.

Serving as judges were Fred Ready of Happy, producer of Texas Trails and Tales radio program; Richard Haynes of Amarillo, owner of KIXZ-KMML radio stations; and Tommy Joe Henson of Pampa, owner of Henson Guitars and Amps.

Also serving as sponsors were Addington's Western Store and Pepsi Cola of Pampa.

Robbery suspect killed in gunbattle

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A man in a fleeing vehicle was shot to death early today in a gunbattle between two robbery suspects and pursuing police officers.

Investigators said more than a dozen shots were fired in the exchange that shattered the window glass of a patrol car, narrowly missing a patrolman.

The dead man was been identified as Charles Raymond Ford, 21, of Brownwood. He was dead on arrival at Medical Center Hospital of multiple gunshot wounds in the head and legs, hospital officials said.

A 17-year-old with a Boerne address was being questioned and charged but not filed immediately.

The incident began about 1:30 a.m. when a robbery was reported at a convenience store on the city's northwest side.

A description of two suspects and a getaway car were aired over the police radio. Moments later, officers said, an auto matching the one sought was spotted and the chase began.

Illegal aliens caught in INS 'sting'

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Eduardo Fuentes, a 35-year-old native of Argentina, said he drove excitedly in his station wagon from Amarillo to Midland after getting a letter that said he had won $1,000 and was eligible for a grand prize of either $25,000 or a new mobile home.

Along with several dozen others, Fuentes walked eagerly into a gaily-decorated warehouse at Midland-Odessa Regional Air Terminal Saturday morning.

They were disappointed. All they won was a free trip out of the country at the hands of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, which said it had been trying to track down Fuentes and other illegal aliens for several months.

Forty-four illegal aliens — all but Fuentes were from Mexico — were arrested after they presented their letters to plainclothes officers. Arrest warrants and travel documents had been prepared in advance for each of the aliens, and most of them were immediately deported.

Twenty-four relatives or friends of the Mexicans also were arrested when they were unable to produce proof of U.S. citizenship, officials said.

INS officials said the sting operation was devised because of widespread complaints of officials and citizens throughout West Texas that illegal aliens were getting jobs that should be going to residents that needed work.

INS officials said the sting was three months in the making. All of the aliens contacted, at their last known address, already had been ordered out of the United States after their deportation appeals were rejected "months or years ago," INS spokesman Mario Ortiz said.

Fuentes, until Saturday, had been working in Amarillo for Holiday Inn, receiving $350 a week as a chef and food decorator.

Leo Spriggs, food and beverage director of the Amarillo Hilton, said Fuentes "cannot be replaced."

"I've tried and never found anyone like him. Amarillo doesn't produce what I would call chef-quality people. Amarillo can't produce the kind of person he is. Why doesn't the immigration get the illegal immigrants ... who cause trouble. No, this is easier. Lure the intelligent ones with a prize."

Spriggs said he and other Hilton employees have been working on Fuentes' immigration papers.

"He let his student visa lapse and never could get his status worked out," Spriggs said.

Both Fuentes and his wife, Gloria, were arrested. All day Saturday they sat with their children, Hilda, 9, Melody, 5, and Eduardo, 18 months. Huge fans cooled the stuffy building.

INS and border patrol agents provided water from a jug and brought sandwiches.

State leaseholders donate to Mauro

DALLAS (AP) — Gulf Coast developers who got leases on state land from the land commissioner's office have donated thousands of dollars to Land Commissioner Garry Mauro's re-election campaign.

Three Gulf Coast developments were granted lease options from the state in recent months — allowing development of the land, while producing money for the state. In each case, Mauro got campaign money from the developers, the Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.

Mauro denied any preferential treatment and said all final decisions on lease options are made by the three-member School Land Board, which includes him and two other members.

"I did not seek contributions because they were doing business with the land office," Mauro said. "And I did not seek preferential treatment for anybody from either my staff, the governor or the other two appointees on that board."

But the matter has drawn criticism from some.

"Any time someone makes a donation they expect something in return," said Mary Lou Campbell, a Sierra Club leader in the Gulf Coast town of Port Isabel.

"They very seldom give them just because they want to be good guys. That is not being cynical. That's just being practical," she said.

The projects receiving approval were:

— The Playa Del Rio, an $8 billion super-resort, which required a lease of 416 acres of state land located right in the middle of the planned 12,500-acre resort city near Brownsville.

Under the deal, the state collects revenue from land that had been sitting idle.

Developer Art Nelson approached Mauro about the lease option last September, the Morning News said. About three months later, Nelson and his partner Porchie Grady donated $10,000 to Mauro's re-election campaign, according to campaign finance records in the secretary of state's office.

Two months after that, on Feb. 5, lease options were granted on the land.

Both Mauro and the developers deny any connection between the money and the lease.

The Playa Del Rio has drawn protests from environmentalists who claim it threatens plant and animal life.

— The Island Harbor project of Corpus Christi got a two-year lease option on March 14 to develop 654 acres of state land at Port Aransas on Mustang Island.

Gary Catham, president of Island Harbor Development Corp. of Corpus Christi and Ken Williams, executive vice president, each gave $1,000 to Mauro, and investors in the project have donated at least another $9,000.

— Island Development Corp. of Corpus Christi, which received a two-year lease option on Sept. 30 on about 60 acres of land on North Padre Island for a sea park as part of a 500-acre development to include hotels, restaurants and shops.

Project partners Ralph Durdén and Joe Fulton have given $1,000 to the Mauro campaign.

Mauro said his staff handled much of the work on the projects, which then were approved by the School Land Board without his intervention.

He said such developments can make millions of dollars for the state, which is facing a projected budget deficit of $3.5 billion.

Mauro, a Democrat, has raised $694,000 in his bid for a second term in which he is opposed by Republican M.D. Anderson of Seven Points.

In denying any connection between the lease options and contributions, Mauro's aides said he has received donations from numerous other executives whose projects have been sued or audited by the land commissioner.

San Angelo council hears debate on porn ordinance

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — The pastor of the Living Faith Foursquare Church says pornography is evil, and the owner of a bookstore says the same about censorship.

Both have had their say, and now it's up to the San Angelo City Council to decide in two weeks whether to approve a proposed zoning ordinance that would impose stiffer standards upon adult entertainment, literature and merchandise in this West Texas city of 85,000.

Charles Hall, a bespectacled 58-year-old bookstore owner, says he can't understand what all the fuss is about. He sells sexually explicit books, but notes that they are kept in a couple of cardboard boxes in the rear of the store.

Customers, he said, aren't confronted with the material.

"The books are wrapped and sealed. I don't advertise them. ... I'm committed to the belief that you and I have the right to read what we want — and to reject what we don't," Hall said.

Hall said he doesn't want his own standards safeguarded by someone else.

"I think it's ridiculous. I think adults should be able to read what books they want to," he says.

On the other side of the battle are a group of ministers, the chief spokesman of whom has been the Rev. Don Jackson, a trim, athletic-looking 38-year-old preacher, who says "We're playing Russian roulette with pornography."

Jackson suggests, "You're loading the gun with the bullet of pornography and somebody can get hurt."

The proposed ordinance, offered to the City Council a week ago, would ban the showing of adult movies and the sale of sexually explicit books and films within 1,000 feet of residential areas, churches and parks and within one mile of a school.

The ordinance would cover not only movie theaters, bookstores and clubs with topless dancing, but also hotels that show adult movies on cable television.

Both Hall and Jackson say they are reluctant figures in the anti-pornography war.

"I tend to stir these people up for some reason, and I don't know why," Hall says. "I really can't see what all the hullabaloo's about."

FDIC auctions Midland property

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Stuck with 165 pieces of property acquired through three years of bank closings, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. took just five hours to sell the assets.

The auction made about $1.2 million for the federal agency that acquires and manages the assets of closed banks, said Mike Cleghorn, general manager of the auction company that handled the sale.

Among the beneficiaries was a 45-year-old oilfield worker who bought a three-bedroom townhouse for $26,000 with hopes to sell it in a few weeks at a $10,000 profit.

"There are a lot of good buys here, but I'm looking for bargains. The house that I bought was definitely a bargain. It was so dad-gum cheap that I couldn't pass it up," oilfield worker James Cook said.

After the 1,350-square-foot house officially becomes his, Cook said he plans to put it on the market.

John T. Fell, head of the FDIC's real estate division in Midland, said all the property was auctioned off within five hours as hundreds of West Texans watched.

Grabbing an opportunity

There is one young businesswoman in Pampa who should go places when she becomes an adult if she keeps her initiative and imagination. This young lady has been operating a lemonade stand near the sidewalk in the 400 block of North Somerville during recent days as an opportunity to make some money during her summer vacation from school.

Of course, this in the area where workmen and large machinery have been busily removing the trees in the middle of the street and ripping up the concrete paving along a six-block area during the past two weeks, in preparation for rebuilding of the street.

The demolition work has reduced the amount of traffic along the six-block area of the street, but this young lady has been busy selling cold lemonade to the workmen on the recent hot days.

She reportedly plans on keeping her stand in operation as long as she can.

As a "crowd of one" I would like to congratulate this young lady on seeing an opportunity and grabbing it. Many of us adults could take an example from her.

Speaking of the construction work along North Somerville, I wonder if there is a specific reason for the large dump trucks, heavily laden with large chunks of concrete ripped from the street, to have been traveling along adjacent concrete paved streets last week.

My suspicious journalist mind made me wonder if the trucks were traveling along the other concrete streets in an effort to cause further damage to the pavement so there would be additional repaving jobs in future years.

If this was the case, they didn't have to bother because the crews of the city's utility departments cause enough damage without any added assistance.

All of those asphalt repair patches on North Russell, in my neighborhood, where concrete has been removed for water and sewer line repairs can attest to that fact. Seems the asphalt is always either above or below the concrete surface, creating a bump in the street.

A case in point is a large hole in the pavement in the 300 block of West Atchison.

A large area of pavement was removed by city personnel several weeks ago so that a leak could be repaired in a water line. Workmen filled the hole with dirt, but the occasional rains have helped traffic pound much of this dirt out of the hole resulting in a car-jolting chuck hole in the middle of the street.

I wonder if the city will ever get around to patching this hole. Until it is repaired it might be well to avoid the 300 block of West Atchison unless you want to have the front-end of your car realigned.

On a family trip last week we observed several deer in the area just north of the McClelland Creek bridge on Highway 273 while returning from McLean.

I'm glad to see there are deer still in the immediate area. I hope the hunters don't find all of them when hunting season starts.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

A way to save IRAs

Perhaps the most controversial feature of the Senate's tax reform package was its attack on Individual Retirement Accounts. Forty million Americans have opened IRAs, creating a potent constituency for this tax break. No one would disparage the deduction's worthier purposes, like encouraging people to save for their retirement. The question is whether the incentive is worth the price.

Critics insist the deduction doesn't increase savings, but that's hard to believe, given its tax value. Anyone can contribute up to $2,000 a year to an IRA and immediately deduct the full amount from taxable income. The interest also accumulates tax-free. Only when it is withdrawn does the owner have to pay taxes on the money. Last year, Americans put between $50 billion and $70 billion in these accounts.

The Senate bill repeals the break for anyone covered by a pension plan, eliminating about 60 percent of all workers. Though these Americans would be able to contribute as much as they can now, the investments wouldn't be deductible. But IRAs would still have a potent lure, since interest earnings remain tax-exempt.

IRAs are an appealing economic tool because they stimulate savings and encourage people to provide for their retirement. But they have disadvantages. One is that they favor the wealthy. Only 15 percent of tax returns list IRA deductions, and the richest 20 percent of taxpayers make nearly two-thirds of all contributions.

At a time of swollen budget deficits, they also cost the Treasury a lot of money. The Senate's change would capture some $25.5 billion in revenue over the next five years. Keeping the deduction would force Congress to boost taxes elsewhere to make up the difference or increase the deficit.

It's a tough choice: Promote savings or reduce the deficit? Encourage self-reliance among retirees or simplify the tax code. Fortunately, the choice can be avoided. The answer is to keep the IRA deduction — but only for those taxpayers willing to forego some of their Social Security benefits. The idea, my twist on a proposal by Social Security expert Peter Ferrara, serves all the valuable purposes of the current deduction. But instead of harming the government's fiscal health, it would actually improve it.

Social Security revenues wouldn't be affected. IRA contributors would still have to fork over their payroll taxes. But for every tax-exempt dollar invested in an IRA, they would forfeit a specified amount of Social Security benefits. In exchange for giving up some revenue today, the government would be relieved of a future obligation.

Why would anyone take this option? Because for today's workers, Social Security looks like a bad deal. Ferrara says the amount they can expect to get back on their payroll contributions represents a real annual return of 1 percent or less. IRAs, which are invested in stocks and bonds, promise a return several times higher. Most people would be better off with the trade. Those who shun IRAs, however, would be entitled to their full Social Security benefits. No one would be worse off than before.

The federal budget would also benefit. Granted, the immediate effect of keeping the deduction — assuming no compensating tax increase — is to enlarge the flow of red ink. But the eventual effect is just the opposite, namely to reduce the government's total liabilities. It's like trading a 30-year mortgage for a 15-year version. The monthly payments rise, but the total interest to be paid falls, producing a new gain for the borrower. To the extent that it stimulates savings, the deduction also fosters economic growth, which boosts tax receipts.

Reducing future expenses is especially important for Social Security. The 1983 bailout was supposed to keep it afloat permanently, but that forecast isn't plausible. The system faces an excruciating strain early in the next century, when the Baby Boom generation stops paying into the system and starts drawing benefits. By relieving the system of the need to support many of them, this change would greatly ease the burden on future taxpayers.

Given the public outcry for preserving the IRA deduction, the House-Senate conferees may feel compelled to give in. But they shouldn't sacrifice needed revenues without getting something in return.

Zimbabwe cutoff was long overdue

Despite American aid and overtures, relations between the United States and the southern African nation of Zimbabwe have been less than cordial since a hostile, Marxist regime took power there in 1980.

The U.S. Ambassador, David C. Miller Jr., resigned in April because of blatant anti-Americanism in that country and no replacement has been named.

Things have gone from bad to worse following a calculated Zimbabwean insult to the United States on July 4th. The scene was an Independence Day reception at the U.S. Embassy made notable by the presence of former President Jimmy Carter, his wife Rosalynn and daughter Amy. Such functions held at embassies around the world traditionally avoid policy issues in favor of a cordial get-together.

Foreign Minister Witness Mangwenda disdained to attend, sending instead a junior official, David Kariamaza, minister of youth, sport and culture, to deliver an incongruous speech in his name. This turned out to be a bitter 25-minute diatribe against U.S. policy in South Africa and an accusation that U.S. war planes deliberately bombed civilian targets in Libya.

This was too much even for Carter, a long-time friend of Zimbabwe and one who sponsored most of the $370 million in financial assistance provided by Washington since the nation gained complete independence from Britain six years ago. The former president, his family, U.S. diplomats and those from other Western countries walked out after only five minutes of the slanders.

"This was a social affair celebrating the independence of my nation," the former president said in a news conference later. "And the speech made by this minister was entirely inappropriate and an insult to my country and to me personally."

Exactly so. Quick agreement came from the Reagan administration, which never was a patsy for countries that consistently bite Uncle Sam's generous hand. Washington lost no time in suspending the $13.5 million in aid to Zimbabwe this year and will not restore it until the Zimbabwe government retracts its "unacceptable insult."

Few Americans would argue with that. U.S. taxpayers who long since realized their foreign-aid dollars did not buy friends abroad, can take belated satisfaction that anti-Americanism now carries a price for those who indulge in it. The worry is that the slander of a foreign minister is required to suspend millions of dollars in U.S. aid to a repressive Marxist government, which should not be receiving it in the first place.

Our nuclear insurance

Medical science is learning that preventing disease is much preferable to trying to cure it. Now, keeping ourselves strong, we seek to develop immunity to disease.

In military science, also, we must learn to prevent war, because there is now no kind of war we could win.

Nuclear war would turn the planet into a wasteland.

But such are the new conventional weapons of war that participants would die just as certainly and perhaps more painfully.

If President Reagan is not hurrying into further talks with the Soviets on limiting nuclear arms — is it because nuclear arms for the past 40 years have prevented war.

Assuming the elimination of all nuclear weapons, what's left?

Moscow, with her allies, commands 2.7 million troops.

NATO forces number 2.1 million. Beyond manpower, the weapons numbers become astronomical. For NATO nations, 20,300 battle tanks, 3,370 land-based warplanes, 880 surface to air missile launchers.

The Soviets command 2.5 tanks for every one of ours, 2.8 guided missile launchers for every one of ours, 3.2 heavy artillery guns to every one of ours.

Further, the Soviet Union is 10 times more prepared than we for gas and germ warfare; has 30 bases for chemical weapons presently deployed around Western Europe and the capability to carry chemical weapons over the United States within hours.

And the Soviet Union has recent experience with chemical weapons, which we have not; in Afghanistan, Laos and Cambodia.

Wishful Americans keep imagining that each new Soviet dictator will be more rational. Gorbachev, encouraging that optimism, is talking about mutual agreement for troop cutbacks, fewer missiles.

World opinion what it is, we must not appear to reject his olive branch —

But we can't afford to trust it, either.

World War II — without nuclear weapons — without chemical weapons — killed 80 million people.

Any future world war would be of holocaust proportions.

Even if we go back to fighting future wars with bamboo spears, our 6 percent of the planet's population would inevitably be overwhelmed by the limitless hordes of Asia.

Neither they nor we can win a nuclear war.

Certainly, we cannot win a conventional war. "War prevention" is the only viable option.

And until some better method of prevention is forthcoming, that nuclear club in our closet is the only insurance we have.

Writer meets a computer at long last

True conservative that I am, I have always taken a secret pride in the fact that I wrote my columns (and, for that matter, five books as well) the old-fashioned way: by hand, on legal-length yellow paper. To be sure, this luxury required the services of a typist to decipher my scrawl and transcribe it; but I have been blessed with wonderfully competent secretaries for nearly 40 years, so that was never a pressing problem. In a pinch, for that matter, I am a fast hunt-and-peck typist myself.

But I hadn't typed in many years, and I was looking forward to pushing a pen across a yellow pad until I toppled over. And then, as regular readers of these dispatches know, about two years ago I developed arthritis in my right thumb, which makes writing marginally painful. I tried every known pill and ointment, as well as a copper bracelet and a Chinese herbal lotion. All of them helped a little, but none enough. At this writing, acupuncture and hand surgery are the only things that remain untried.

Meanwhile my friends were zil-urging me to switch to writing on a word processor — which is simply a typewriter keyboard with some fancy extra capabilities, connected to machines that enable you to view and correct on a video screen, "remember" electronically, print, or transmit over telephone wires whatever you type. For some reason that is devilishly hard to recall in retrospect, I resisted the idea bitterly. At bottom, I think, I just didn't want to be pushed around: i.e., forced to revise one of my oldest habits simply because the computer age was here and demanded my fealty.

There came a day, however, when my resistance crumpled. But which word processor should I buy? Luckily my friends were unanimous about this too: It must be the good old Dingbat 3, a dependable machine on which they themselves all had teethered. Unfortunately it soon transpired that the man whose job it would be to train me to use a word processor simply wouldn't hear of my buying a Dingbat 3. It was, he said, a feeble-minded lemon that was being quietly phased out by its manufacturer. No, I must have the new and infinitely superior Interprong 15, which has the additional advantage of being compatible with IBM's long line of products.

So I succumbed and bought an Interprong 15, which turned out to consist of three pieces of machinery: a computer, a keyboard, and a monitor screen. But wait! I also obviously would have to have a printer, to print out the columns I composed on the monitor screen. And naturally I would need some sort of stand to house the entire array in. And when I sat in front of my monitor it slowly dawned on me that I would also need a new pair of bifocals, with inner lenses for viewing the keyboard and outer lenses of intermediate range for looking at the monitor.

Anyway, today, several thousand dollars later, I am the proud possessor of what looks like a huge brown refrigerator, which upon being opened can do the most miraculous things. I have written this column on the word processor. Punch a key or two and within three seconds it will give me the word count; almost as quickly, it will detect spelling or typographical errors. Then, on command, it will phone a number at my syndicate's office and transmit this entire column to it at the rate of about 10 words a second. Finally, it will print the blasted thing on paper in about two minutes more.

Am I a convert? Yes. Alexander Pope was right: "Be not the first by whom the new is tried, / Nor yet the last to lay the old aside." But if my thumb didn't hurt...

Reagan still won't make deals with terrorists

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, whose policy of "quiet diplomacy" was sharply criticized in a videotape from one of the four remaining American hostages in Lebanon, is not wavering from his stance of "no concessions... no deals" with the terrorist captors.

Reagan administration officials said Sunday they were studying the seven-minute videotaped plea by hostage David Jacobsen, who warned that "our release will be death" unless the Reagan administration negotiates with the Shiite Moslem kidnapers.

But Richard Murphy, assistant secretary of state for Middle Eastern affairs, said, "We have always said we would be willing to talk about safety and release but would not negotiate or compromise with terrorists. There is no change in that."

The Rev. Lawrence Jenco, who was held hostage nearly 19 months and freed over the weekend, carried the Jacobsen tape to U.S. officials.

Moslem extremists in Lebanon are demanding the release of 17 comrades held in Kuwaiti prison in exchange for the release of the four Americans.

Reagan, returning to the White House Sunday afternoon from his weekend retreat at Camp David, Md., refused to answer reporters' questions about the hostages.

White House spokesman Don Mathes said it was "too early" for the White House to react to the tape, portions of which have been played on national television. He did not know whether Reagan had seen it.

"We've got the full seven-minute tape and we're studying it," he said.

In the tape, Jacobsen said Reagan was "subservient to the political principle that the U.S. will not negotiate with terrorists."

The hostage asked Americans to urge the administration to negotiate, and asked Congress to investigate the administration's "quiet diplomacy" policy. He said it would be "better to have an investigation than to have an inequest."

Jenco's brothers, John and Joseph, travelling with other family members to Germany to meet the freed priest, said on a Washington stopover that they believed Jacobsen's statements on the videotape were forced.

Joseph Jenco said it appeared to be an effort to "embarrass the United States government." John Jenco noted the freed priest had waved a small American flag after his release, thus negating "anything and everything the American hostages have said against the American government."

Murphy was asked about the Jacobsen videotape as he travelled aboard the U.S. Air Force jet carrying Vice President George Bush to Israel, the first stop on the vice president's 10-day Mideast tour.

"... Anybody who's been held as long and under such conditions of deprivation as they have is going to feel that nobody is working for them — that they have been abandoned," Murphy said. "There's been a constant effort to pursue their safety and release through every channel open to us. That he (Jacobsen) does not know about that is not a surprise to us," Murphy added.

Jenco, a 51-year-old Roman Catholic priest, was kidnapped Jan. 8, 1985. Jacobsen, director of the hospital at the American University of Beirut, was abducted May 28 of that year.

The Islamic Jihad, a shadowy organization thought to be allied with Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, has claimed responsibility for kidnapping Jenco and other Americans.

The group warned in a statement on Friday that it would not free any other Americans and that there would be "grave consequences" if the group's demands were not met.

In addition to Jacobsen, the Americans still missing in Lebanon are: Terry Anderson, 38, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; Thomas Sutherland, 55, acting dean of agriculture at the American University in Beirut; and William Buckley, 58, a political officer at the U.S. Embassy in Beirut.

Islamic Jihad claims to have killed Buckley last year, but no body has been found.

Jason opens way to sea-bottom exploration

WOODS HOLE, Mass. (AP) — The vision of the Titanic mission came from human explorers, but the eyes belonged to Jason Jr. — a miniature mechanical marvel that gave the world intimate views of the world's most famous shipwreck.

The Navy-financed expedition yielded more than pretty pictures. Navy officials say the work of Jason Jr., a lawnmower-sized robot, brought them a step closer to safe searches for downed jets, sunken submarines or errant missiles on the sea bottom.

"I'd say (Jason Jr.) is a smashing success... it went out and did what we advertised it would do," said Stewart E. Harris, a research specialist at the Deep Submergence Laboratory of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, co-sponsor of the expedition.

The robot, remotely controlled by a tiny joystick similar to those on video games, did have some problems. Its 250-foot tether twice became entangled in Titanic wreckage, and it was idle for two days after water seeped into the motor compartment. But researchers said such problems are expected on a test-run.

Jason Jr., which probed deep inside the Titanic, actually is the prototype of Jason, a robot still on the drawing boards. Jason will have two mechanical arms, a 20-pound payload to take samples from the ocean floor and a twin-video camera system to create "stereo vision" images, said Harris.

The $1.5 million project should be completed by next summer. Scientists hope to tether Jason to Argo, a camera-equipped survey sled that would scan the ocean floor. Jason, "the flying eyeball," would be sent down for close-ups, especially in areas where access is difficult.

In the Titanic mission, Jason Jr. was attached to Alvin, a three-man research submarine. The unmanned Argo-Jason would permit long-range surveys without the time and safety constraints of manned missions, Harris said.

He said Argo, which helped a U.S.-French team find the Titanic last September, already proved its worth. The unmanned sled, working nonstop over 12 days, covered an area of the East Pacific Rise, a ridge west of Mexico, that took scientists doing manned surveys more than 10 years to examine, he said.

The Argo-Jason system will be able to cover more than 98 percent of the oceans' floors, said Capt. Edward Craig, manager of the program for the Navy.

The devices could be used to place monitors on the sea bed for long periods of time to detect geophysical changes, said Arthur Maxwell, director of the Institute for Geophysics at the University of Texas at Austin.

"The ability to do things remotely and oversee things remotely on the ocean floors is something we wanted to do for many years," Maxwell said. Harris said the equipment could help scientists probe the Mid-Ocean Ridge, a rugged, mountainous region that spans 40,000 miles from the middle of the Atlantic around the tip of Africa to the Indian and Pacific oceans.

Maxwell said he believes the most important result of the Titanic mission is the increased public awareness in the ocean it has generated.

Robert Sexton, assistant to the dean of oceanography at the University of Rhode Island, agreed.

"The public awareness of the oceans has kind of diminished in recent years," he said. "We haven't had a hero since (Jacques) Cousteau... I wouldn't be surprised if oceanography schools experience an increase number of applicants because of this."

House not ready to accept Senate's tax overhaul plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — House tax writers appear ready to send their Senate colleagues back to the drawing board for another try at coming up with a $26 billion list of additional revenue necessary to get negotiations moving on a final version of tax-overhaul legislation.

After taking Sunday off, the 22 congressional negotiators trying to write the landmark bill were due back today for their seventh day of work on the measure.

The immediate problem is how to fashion the legislation so that it does not add to the flood of federal red ink.

On Saturday, the 11-member Senate bargaining group proposed a list of 14 items that would raise $26 billion over five years. That money would make up a $21 billion deficit in the Senate-passed version of the legislation and provide an extra $5 billion of tax relief for middle-income taxpayers being sought by House conferees.

However, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the negotiations, said the Senate proposal needs more work.

Rep. Marty Russo, D-Ill., scoffed at one Senate proposal to raise $3 billion by changing tax tables to limit the deduction that can be taken for state and local sales taxes without substantiation. The Senate bill would repeal the sales-tax deduction for most people.

"It's basically an insult to our intelligence," Russo said.

Under the House bill, the top individual tax rate of 50 percent would be cut to 38 percent; most people would pay 15 percent but the plan has intermediate rates of 25 percent and 35 percent. The Senate plan, also would tax most people at 15 percent; the majority of others would fall into the 27 percent bracket.

The conferees have informally agreed that they are starting with the Senate rates as the basis for a compromise, but holding to those rates will be impossible unless the $21 billion shortage in the Senate plan is eliminated.

The conferees have indicated a desire to move up the effective date of the tax-rate cuts by six months, to bring them in line with the date that deductions would be limited. Eliminating this so-called "stagger" and maintaining the low Senate rates would cost $29 billion, meaning more revenue would have to be found.

In general, this money would have to come from increasing the tax burden on business. But some legislators are questioning whether the nation's overall economy would be harmed by going too far in levying the business taxes.

In addition to the sales tax provision, the 14 items on the Senate list included:

—Prohibiting the deduction of interest on a mortgage when a homeowner borrows against the equity in a home and uses the money for something other than home improvements.

—Reducing to $5,000 a year the maximum amount of wages a worker may forgo and the employer deposit in a pension plan known as a 401(k). Present law has a $30,000 limit; the Senate bill, $7,000.

—End the tax exemption of credit unions with assets over $10 million.

NASA still working on space projects

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Shuttle flights remain suspended six months after the Challenger disaster, but NASA employees are continuing their work in anticipation of resumed space travel, workers say.

Michele Brekke, a 33-year-old flight director at Johnson Space Center, said the work force remains busy and motivated, but she admits to missing the challenge and excitement of the actual space shuttle missions.

The shuttle flights have been scrubbed for at least another 18 months.

Since becoming a flight director in November, Ms. Brekke has helped plan and direct the mission activities of the shuttle crews. Now, she and other flight directors are reviewing each of their procedural manuals, conducting what she calls a "spring cleaning."

In addition, each week at the JSC Mission Control Center, flight directors conduct two integrated simulations, practice sessions with astronaut crews in shuttle simulators.

"We know that vehicle just doesn't fly itself," she said. "You don't just push a button and off it goes with everything working. It takes hours and hours of preparation."

For Harry St. John, lead engineer for mission simulation at National Aeronautics Space Administration, work has kept him so busy that he has had little time to keep up with continuing space agency developments.

"I'm curious, just like everyone else, about what's going to happen," he said of NASA's proposed space station reorganization plans. "But we know nothing more than what we read in the newspapers. People are calling my wife all the time wanting to know when we're going to move. I don't think we're going anywhere."

The 70 programmers, engineers, scientists and other technical employees working in NASA's simulation systems branch spend their days charting future situations in space. The department is composed of civil servants and contract workers.

"I can't speak for all of JSC, but the people I deal with here are all real, real busy," he said. "The message that I think should come across is that JSC is alive and well and remains a very busy place."

St. John said at the top of his work list is "taking a look at the shuttle's ability to abort from certain situations."

The Rogers Commission, which investigated the accident, recommended an in-depth study of procedures for aborting shuttle flights in emergencies. Simulating those abort situations became the responsibility of St. John's department.

But St. John said no abort technique would have saved the Challenger and its seven astronauts.

"We could never develop anything to save them from a tank exploding," he said.

Board members seek help in weeding out bad doctors

AUSTIN (AP) — Bad doctors are hurting the reputations of good physicians and causing unhappy patients to file expensive malpractice suits, a legislative committee has been told.

The Joint Committee on Liability Insurance was asked Saturday to help strengthen the policing of the medical profession in Texas.

More bad doctors could be weeded out if hospitals and physicians who inform on them could feel confident they could inform on them without being subject to a damage suit themselves, said Dr. G.V. Brindley Jr., executive director of the state Board of Medical Examiners.

Now, many hospital officials and fellow doctors fear that any information they give the board will be used in a damage suit against them, Brindley said.

Brindley told the committee that 231 physicians practicing in Texas have had three or more malpractice complaints filed against them.

"We're just asking for your help because we are in trouble," said Cindy Jenkins of Winnie, a public member of the State Board of Medical Examiners. "We're not protecting the public."

She added, "We have only one attorney as a prosecutor and sometime it takes 10 days to present a case. I would think the doctors in the state who pay $36 for a license renewal fee now would be willing to pay $200 to $500 if it takes that to get these bad guys and gals off the street."

She also said the present 15-member board was organized along the lines of looking for physicians involved in narcotics.

"All our investigators are former law enforcement men," she said. "We've got to get away from that and hire investigators who have a medical background and can spot a bad doctor."

Brindley and other witnesses appeared before a the Senate-House committee studying liability insurance problems.

Pipe makes adjustable lounger

By STEVIE BALDWIN

Dozing, chatting, tanning to a golden brown — all perfect ways to enjoy a patio chaise lounge. The only trouble is, you need more than one.

This terrific double-chaise unit features two loungers with a connecting tray that will hold drinks, suntan lotion and what-have-you right at hand. Remove the tray and you have two individual loungers.

Frames are made of easy-to-assemble PVC plastic pipe with plywood cushion supports. Backs adjust to four angles and the frames take standard size lounge cushions.

Always dry assemble a PVC project before securing the joints with cement or screws, as you want to be sure of the fit. Fittings made by different manufacturers often vary quite a bit, so it's a good idea to cut the pipe long and trim to fit.

To build the double chaise unit, you'll need 55 feet of two-inch PVC pipe and the following fittings: two double-T joints, 28 T-joints and 18 90-degree elbow joints.

Each chaise has one side section with an arm and one without. Four crossbars and a front span join the two sides.

First, assemble the side section with an arm. The rear portion looks like a large rectangle with an extra horizontal between the top and bottom.

Top horizontal is a 1 1/4-inch pipe with an elbow at each end. For the back leg, insert into one elbow a five-inch pipe, then a T-joint, an 8 1/4-inch pipe and an elbow at the bottom.

Double chaise unit has removable connecting table.

For the middle horizontal, insert a 4 1/2-inch pipe into the open end of the T-joint in the back leg. Add another T-joint onto the 4 1/2-inch pipe, then an 1 1/2-inch pipe.

For the bottom horizontal, insert a 1 1/2-inch pipe into the elbow at the bottom of the back leg, then add a T-joint and a 1 1/4-inch pipe.

Assemble the front leg separately: elbow at the top, 3-inch pipe, double-T joint, 8 1/2-inch pipe, T-joint. Fit the front leg onto the ends of the horizontal pipes of the side section.

Front portion of the side section looks like the letter "u" turned on its side. Starting at one end, assemble a 12-inch pipe, T-joint, 1 1/2-inch pipe, elbow, 8 1/2-inch pipe, T-joint, 12-inch pipe, T-joint, 1 1/2-inch pipe.

Turn this assembly with the open side toward the open joints of the previously assembled side section and fit them in.

The side section without an arm is the same, but the rear portion has no upper arm assembly. Four 19-inch crossbars join the two sides.

Front span that joins the two side sections is a 19-inch pipe with an elbow at each end. Use 1 1/2-inch pipes to connect it to the open T-joints at the front of the side sections.

Hinged seat and back are cut from 3/4-inch plywood. The back adjusts by means of a hinged plywood piece that fits into a grooved 2x4 block. Plywood table is attached to the frames using dowel pegs, so it can be removed.

You can build your own PVC chaise unit with the help of our detailed plans. They include a complete materials list, illustrated step-by-step cutting and assembly instructions and a section of tips and techniques on PVC pipe.

To order plans for the PVC chaise unit, specify Project No. 1940-4. Send $4.95 and mail to Makin' Things, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla., 74008-1000.

Dear Abby

Soldier socks it to Abby for hole in wedding plan

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I just read that letter signed "Not Sure in Louisiana," and I can't believe you took that letter seriously. I don't know what the socks smelled like, but that letter sure smelled like a phony to me.

I've been reading your column for at least 20 years in the St. Louis Globe Democrat, and if you believe that letter was for real, there's a bridge in Brooklyn I'd like to sell you.

FROM MISSOURI: SHOW ME

DEAR FROM: The following letter was received the same day yours arrived. I telephoned the sender to verify it, and he gave me permission to use his letter and his name:

DEAR ABBY: I think you owe me an apology for having caused the postponement of my marriage.

I am in the U.S. Army and just returned from two years in England to learn that my fiancée refuses to marry me until I receive some professional counseling. It seems that she wrote to you for advice after having received 203 pairs of dirty socks that I had shipped to her with the rest of my belongings. She wondered if she would be expected to do all the dirty work.

Let me explain: When I shipped the socks, they were clean. As cartons pass through certain countries, the customs people spray them with pesticides. This makes them smell "funny" and sometimes ruins the contents — an accepted hazard to us in the military. I had so many pairs of socks because when a foot soldier spends months at a time in the field, fresh socks are the only way to save his feet.

It was a great hardship being separated from those I love for such a long time. I served my country faithfully, and now I return home to find that you have alluded to me as a male chauvinist in need of counseling.

Having been raised by a divorced, struggling mother and three older sisters, I am well aware that every man must pull his own weight in order to have a successful home. Now I must wait even longer for happiness because of your support of my fiancée's misunderstanding. I am hurt!

GLENN SCOTT, HAUGHTON, LA.

P.S. Please respond quickly as I may be sent overseas again soon. I might even volunteer.

DEAR GLENN: Please accept my apologies for any distress I might have caused you, but it's not every day I receive a letter from a woman asking if she should marry a man who ships her 203 pairs of dirty socks to launder.

But be fair, Glenn — I did not say you were a "male chauvinist"; neither did I suggest that you needed counseling. My answer to your fiancée's letter was as follows:

"Dear Not Sure: I advise you to cancel the wedding plans until you know him better. Maybe your fiancé just doesn't like to wash his socks, which is evidence that he's lazy — or a bit of a slob. But to assume that he's a male chauvinist who will expect you to do all the dirty work may be unfair. So don't sock it to him until you're sure."

Please write again, Glenn, and let me know how you and your fiancée have resolved your problem, and thank you for allowing me to reveal your name in order to set the record straight.

Smart Money: contract goes both ways

By Bruce Williams

DEAR BRUCE — My husband and I recently signed a two-year lease for a garden apartment in our area.

We intended to live in the apartment until we could afford a home, but there was a death in our family and a house became available at a very good price — a price we couldn't refuse.

We took it and moved out of the apartment after letting the landlord know that we were sorry, but we just couldn't afford to pass up such a good deal. He is now suing us for the rest of the rent for a year and a half.

Can you believe it? How can we possibly pay a year and a half's rent on an apartment that we aren't even occupying? When we signed the lease, we fully intended to stay, but we didn't plan on my aunt dying.

The landlord says that's not his problem. We think he's being very unreasonable. Furthermore, we simply don't have the money to pay. How do we get out of this mess? — M.W., ROCKFORD, ILL.

DEAR M.W. — Contracts of this kind go both ways. Suppose, for a moment, that the new home had not become available and that the landlord knocked on your door three or four months after you and your husband had moved in and said, "Gee, folks, my son decided he wants to move to this area, and I have no vacant apartments. You people will have to leave so my son and daughter-in-law can move in."

I'm sure you would have said, "No chance, buddy. We have a lease for two years."

The landlord had the responsibility to provide a habitable premise with the appropriate services for 24 months at a pre-agreed-upon price. You, in turn, have a responsibility to pay the landlord that agreed-upon amount for 24 months.

Unless both parties are agreeable to breaking this contract, each party retains its respective responsibilities. Since you have moved out, the landlord will have to rent the apartment to someone else, and any expenses he incurs in the process are your responsibility.

I urge you to sit down with the landlord and try to work out a compromise. If the matter goes to court, your landlord probably will prevail.

You may be able to cut your losses by subletting the apartment for the remaining time on the lease, and I would investigate this possibility. That may mean paying for advertising and showing people the apartment. If you have trouble finding a subtenant, you might consider renting it to them for a little less than you're paying for it.

DEAR BRUCE — How can you get a will drawn up? Do they have some papers that show the different kinds?

I would appreciate it if you could answer in the newspaper, because I have been unsuccessful in finding an attorney to draw up my will. In fact, I can't even seem to get into a lawyer's office. — H.B., DUBUQUE, IOWA

DEAR H.B. — I am absolutely amazed. There are many, many attorneys in this nation, and the vast majority are looking for work. Many specialize in somewhat narrow areas, however, and perhaps the lawyers that you have talked to do not draw wills.

DRAMATIC DECORATING

Yes, you can have beautiful, exciting decor in your home by using some of the principles of dramatic decorating.

One of the ways to achieve dramatic decorating is the addition of one really outstanding piece of furniture to perk up the room and bring new excitement to it.

Or, how about a new color? Or, some outstanding new accessories.

Or, how about a new mixture of furnishings? You know, one of the great trends in home furnishings is the freedom to mix—the use of specific pieces of furniture to improve a room, with only certain restraints. It is what one decorator has called "disciplined freedom". That is, the freedom of being able to mix differing furnishings but with the discipline of harmony and good taste.

In this way, you can add dramatic highlights to your rooms and assemble the exact kind of things you like.

By using some dramatic decorating, you can create attractive, warm, appealing interiors for your home. And, remember we are here to help you with both the furnishings and the ideas, so stop in.

American Lemond wins Tour de France

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — A band played "The Star-Spangled Banner" on the Champs Elysees, while more than 200,000 spectators and French Premier Jacques Chirac saluted Greg Lemond, the first American ever to win the Tour de France cycling race since it was first held in 1903.

"Finally, everything went very well," Lemond said Sunday, after the 23 days of cycling over 2,500 miles, of rolling seaside fields and towering mountains in the world's premier cycling event. The final leg of the race, 158 miles from Cosne to Paris, was mostly level and offered more opportunity for last-minute color than drama.

Spectators lined the Champs Elysee, the most glamorous avenue in Paris, to welcome the 132 tired riders.

The racers entered Paris from the south, circled the Place de la Concorde, and went up and down the famed avenue six times before finishing near the presidential Elysee Palace.

Italian Guido Bontempi won the final leg, the sprint to the finish line, but all the other cyclists, including Lemond, were close enough behind to be awarded the same time of six hours, 51 minutes and 55 seconds, causing no alteration in the overall standings.

Lemond's composite time, for the entire race, was 110 hours, 35 minutes and 19 seconds. In second place, three minutes and 10 seconds back, was his teammate Bernard Hinault, who at 31 is already a legend in cycling with his five Tour de France championships.

Urs Zimmermann of Switzerland was third and American first-year pro Andy Hampsten finished fourth.

Hinault assumed the leader's symbolic yellow jersey after the 12th leg of the tour, which moves counterclockwise around France in 23 daily races that started on July 4. But Lemond, who lives near Sacramento, Calif., finished third in a grueling climb through the Alps in the 17th leg to take the overall lead from Hinault, who finished 13th that day.

In the 18th leg, Hinault set an early pace to eliminate Zimmermann, their strongest opponent, while Lemond conserved his strength. Then Lemond caught Hinault and thanked him for the pace-setting chores.

The two finished that stage in a side-by-side, arm-raising show of unity. Lemond allowed Hinault to edge ahead near the finish line, but Lemond still had the overall lead.

Hinault's final shot came in the 20th leg, a time-trial where cyclists compete individually, released from the team obligations that come first when the pack is racing together. Hinault only made up 25 seconds of his deficit, then declared Lemond the winner of the Tour.

Lemond, who lives most of the year in Belgium, won $25,000 in prizes, including a vase and a trophy. But the real payoff should come in future endorsements, sponsorships and exhibitions for Lemond, who already has a $1.4 million, four-year contract with La Vie Claire, a French health food enterprise.

Maria Canins of Italy won the women's Tour de France in a sprint finish down the Champs Elysee.

Jury still out on NFL suit

NEW YORK (AP) — Refreshed after a day off following 15 hours of intensive deliberations, a federal court jury resumes its deliberations in the USFL's $1.69 billion antitrust suit against the NFL.

The jury was scheduled to reconvene at 8:30 a.m. CDT today. Since the deliberations began Thursday afternoon, the jury has requested a raft of testimony transcripts and exhibits from the trial. All of it must be reviewed by lawyers for both sides, often to the accompaniment of haggling over what, specifically, the jury is to see.

The USFL is seeking $1.69 billion in damages, alleging during 11 weeks of testimony that its financial failures and inability to obtain a network television contract for its switch to a fall season was the result of a variety of anti-competitive actions by the NFL.

The NFL's defense is that the 4-year-old league's problems were of its own making and stemmed from overspending and what it called an ill-advised move to the fall.

While the five women and one man deliberate, each request for evidence raises speculation about what the request means. But lawyers for both sides and reporters with years of courtroom experience say it is almost impossible to determine.

However, one request that did raise eyebrows Saturday was a slip of paper signed by a single juror, Miriam Sanchez.

Frank Rothman, one of the NFL's lead co-counsel, said he had never seen anything like that before. However, USFL attorney Harvey Myerson said it was only unusual that the juror signed her name, noting that often a single juror's request will emerge as a request from the entire jury.

In a trial-related development Sunday, Jim Byrne, the USFL's former communications director and author of a forthcoming book on the league, wrote in the New York Times that "there is reason to suspect" that some of the league's problems were caused by the NFL.

But he added: "There is also little doubt that many of the USFL's problems were home-grown and that the league raised the self-inflicted wound to a new art form. Otherwise it is impossible to explain the carnage. To wreak the kind of havoc that befell the USFL, the NFL would have had to apply a strike force on the order of the Allies on D-Day and to have been about twice as subtle."

Aggies face more trouble

DALLAS (AP) — Three former basketball players at Texas A&M University say they took summer classes and stayed in dormitories for free at a junior college with close ties to the Aggie basketball program.

In today's editions, the Dallas Times Herald quoted former players Kenny Brown of Memphis, Reggie Roberts of McKinney and Brian Marshall of Windsor, Ontario, as saying they had attended Hill College, a junior college in Hillsboro, without paying tuition or dorm fees.

The Times Herald said neither A&M head basketball coach Shelby Metcalf nor athletic director Jackie Sherrill returned repeated phone calls.

Texas A&M President Frank Vandiver issued a statement earlier saying that in light of questions raised by the newspaper, "we have initiated an investigation."

NCAA rules prohibit "extra benefits" for student athletes that are not available to the student body as a whole.

Brown said he took the classes, which were considerably easier than at A&M, without paying tuition or dorm fees. He said Ray Roberts, the school's athletic director, taught some of the classes and gave him small amounts of cash for meals.

He and Allen Boehm, a dean at Hill College, said a large number of athletes from A&M and other schools took mini-courses at the college where they could obtain three hours credit in two weeks by taking a class four hours a day, six days a week.

Brown said he took a baseball class in which the instructors "just went over the rules and stuff. It was so simple. It was kind of ridiculous. It was kind of a joke."

Federation Cup

U.S. wins one for Martina

By LARRY SIDONS
AP Sports Writer

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — She has returned and conquered, and now Martina Navratilova says she's ready for more trips to the land where she grew up and learned to play tennis better than any other woman in the world.

Navratilova ended her first visit to Czechoslovakia since defecting in 1975 in triumphant fashion Sunday, beating Hana Mandlikova to clinch the Federation Cup championship for the United States.

"It's not pressure tennis, like Wimbledon, but it's a different feeling in my heart," Navratilova said. "It's a once-in-a-lifetime thing."

The 7-5, 6-1 victory brought the latest in a week of stunning ovations for Prague's prodigal daughter, and left her and Mandlikova in tears.

Navratilova later thanked the crowd, with an impromptu speech at the closing ceremonies. Mandlikova, meanwhile, complained that the fans deserted the home team.

"I'm somewhat disappointed," she said. "The public did not fully appreciate our efforts."

They certainly appreciated those of Navratilova and the rest of the U.S. team, which made a gift of the championship to the star come home.

"We all did it for Martina," said Chris Evert Lloyd, who started the day with a 7-5, 7-6 victory over Helena Sukova. "We dedicate this Federation Cup to her."

Pam Shriver, like Lloyd a close friend of Navratilova's and her doubles partner, said the experience was one that meant much more than just another title.

"We're here playing for our country, but it's been great to share this week with Martina," she said. "It was a special week for all of us, and I feel very fortunate."

Navratilova said she wants to do it many times again.

"I hope it won't be another 11 years before I come back," she said. "I'd like to come back some Christmas, or take my parents to the States for Christmas. I'd like to come back every year."

Her decision to return to Prague for this year's tournament, the first major women's tennis competition held in Czechoslovakia, created quite a bit of apprehension when it was announced last spring. For one thing, the home team was defending a cup it had won for three years in a row.

Navratilova said things should be easier the next time she wants to visit.

"It won't be the Fed Cup, and it won't be the first time," she said.

Navratilova and Mandlikova held serve through the first 11 games before Navratilova broke for the set on a double fault. Mandlikova was within one point of sending the set to a tiebreaker but couldn't finish it off.

In the second set, the American broke Mandlikova's service in the fourth and sixth games. Her game was in high gear, and Mandlikova was having increasing trouble with her own.

The final two points were typical Navratilova, power tennis at its best.

Navratilova moved to match point with a flying volley that hammered into the clay and brought a long ovation.

Then came the winner, another volley. It brought the crowd to its feet and left Navratilova beaming at her teammates, her arms thrust into the air in victory.

Martina Navratilova stretches for a volley during her straight-set win over Hana Mandlikova during the Federation Cup finals, which the U.S. won over Czechoslovakia in Martina's homeland.

Gentle Ben up again

Crenshaw's Buick win tops comeback

By HARRY ATKINS
AP Sports Writer

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — A year ago, Ben Crenshaw was a sick man and didn't know it.

"It was terribly bleak," Crenshaw recalled. "I didn't know what was wrong with me. I shook visibly and couldn't keep from losing weight."

Crenshaw dropped 18 pounds from his normal 170. He grew weak. He was two clubs short on all his shots.

His father and his wife, Julie, finally convinced "Gentle Ben" to go see a doctor. It turned out Crenshaw had a hyperactive thyroid condition.

"I had always had a tremendous appetite," the 34-year-old Texan recalled. "But, the more I ate, the more weight I lost. It was stress."

"It's the old thing. When you're in something like that, you just feel there's no way out."

The cure was almost as bad as the disease. About 2½ months ago, Crenshaw was treated with radioactive iodine and his health has been on the comeback ever since.

And, with his popular victory on Sunday in the $500,000 Buick Open, the 11th triumph of his professional career, it is clear that Crenshaw's golf game also is back.

"It feels so good to win," said Crenshaw, whose deep love for golf, its traditions and history have been well-publicized. "I have not been in position to win in so long. I've been in contention, but I didn't have the feeling."

"This week, I did."

It was clear, too, from the way he talked, that Crenshaw's old competitive fires were only banked, not extinguished, during the illness. Now that the flame is rekindled, he hopes to keep it burning long enough to challenge the likes of Greg Norman, Raymond Floyd and Jack Nicklaus in the PGA Championship, two weeks hence in nearby Toledo, Ohio.

"I want to continue to play well," he said. "I'm looking forward very much to the PGA now."

Crenshaw said he would play the Western Open, the PGA, the International and the World Series of Golf in the next four weeks.

"I've seen some good shots come off my clubs this year, but it's a matter of scoring," Crenshaw said. "The competition is so fierce out here."

But when your game is right, as it was over the weekend, at Warwick Hills Golf and Country Club, there's nobody better than Crenshaw. Proof of that is the way he overcame adversity on several occasions during the Buick Open.

During the second round Friday he hooked a drive out of bounds on the fourth hole and wound up taking a seven on the par four 401-yard hole.

"I thought about it a lot," Crenshaw said. "That does something to you mentally. When you see something like that happen, you don't forget. You'd like to say you do, but you don't."

"I told my wife that my ears got awful red for a while after that hole. I was as proud of the way I handled that as I've been all year. I was playing well. I had to stay in there and keep swinging and hitting the ball. I'm very happy and proud of that."

There were more mind games to be played in the final round after PGA officials warned Crenshaw's threesome about slow play as they walked up the 10th fairway. The officials timed them the rest of the way.

"It's tough playing in the group," Crenshaw said. "I was probably a little unprofessional. I got a little angry. I tensed up. I never did feel right after that. The next three holes were a blur."

The "blur" ended in dramatic fashion. When Crenshaw had to turn over a 9-iron and swat a ball left-handed from under a pine tree it landed three feet from the pin on No. 13 he birdied the hole to go 17-under for the tournament.

Crenshaw then birdied the hole to sew it up. "Believe me it was tough on my nerves," Crenshaw said, laughing. "All week long, I was just trying to get my rhythm back. I just couldn't slow down on that back side. I felt like I was playing too quickly."

"It wasn't that I was trying to protect anything. I was trying to do better."

The victory, worth $90,000, put Crenshaw's 1986 earnings at $157,702. His best year was 1983, when he finished seventh on the money list with $275,474. That personal mark might still be within reach as Crenshaw continues his comeback.

"Dave Marr is always kidding me that I'm on my 21st comeback," Crenshaw said. Welcome to No. 22.

Golfer Ben Crenshaw has been through some hard times in the past couple of years, including a hyperactive thyroid condition, but he officially ended them Sunday with a one stroke win in the Buick Open. Ben's back, and golf is a better game because of it.

National league clubs finish divisional series

By JONATHAN VITTI
AP Sports Writer

Well, at least we've seen the last of HIM.

Each of Sunday's losers in the National League could say that as each team completed a season series with an opponent from the other division.

The Expos could say it about Eric Davis, whose two-run single in the eighth gave Cincinnati a 9-7 comeback victory.

The Giants could say it about Rick Rhoden, who combined with Don Robinson on an eight-hit shutout — by fair means or foul — as Pittsburgh beat San Francisco, 7-0.

The Phillies could say it about Nolan Ryan, who struck out 10 batters and combined with Aurelio Lopez on a two-hitter in Houston's 3-2 victory.

The Braves could say it about three men — Gary Carter, Darryl Strawberry and Kevin Mitchell. The three hit consecutive homers, providing all the Mets' runs in Atlanta's 5-1 loss.

The Padres will not likely again see Andy Van Slyke, who gave St. Louis a 3-2 victory with a seventh-inning single, until 1987.

The Cubs could say farewell to Los Angeles' Mike Scioscia, whose single beat them 13-11 — but not to Wrigley Field, where an 8-5 game after seven innings turned into a scoreathon with 11 runs in an inning and a half.

The six season series, 12 games each, ended closely for the most part.

Houston and Philadelphia split 6-6 this year; so did Los Angeles and Chicago. St. Louis and Cincinnati won their respective series 7-5. San Francisco took eight of its 12 games with Pittsburgh.

Atlanta can make a somewhat pathetic case for having been tough on the Mets this year. New York won the series 8-4; "only" a .667 percentage, as opposed to the Mets' overall .681 success rate.

If the West clubs beat the East this season or vice-versa, don't look to these matchups. The 72 games split 36-36 between divisions.

Reds 9, Expos 7

Cincinnati trailed 7-2 after 6½ innings, but scored four runs in the seventh and three in the eighth against Montreal relievers.

Expos starter Floyd Youmans struck out seven Reds and allowed just four hits before leaving after the sixth with a stiff shoulder.

Pirates 7, Giants 0

Pittsburgh ended a five-game losing streak. Sid Bream hit a two-run double and a two-run single, backing an eight-hit shutout by Rhoden and Robinson.

Bream's hits gave the Pirates a 4-0 lead, then Pittsburgh added three runs in the eighth, two on a homer by Jim Morrison, who was 4-for-4.

Rhoden, 10-6, gave up six hits in 6 2-3 innings.

Mets 5, Braves 1

Carter, Strawberry and Mitchell hit consecutive home runs in a five-run third inning — the fourth time three Mets have homered consecutively in an inning and the first time since a July 20, 1974 game against the San Diego Padres.

Cardinals 3, Padres 2

Van Slyke's two-run single capped a three-run rally in the seventh inning. The Cardinals won their sixth straight, matching their longest winning streak of the year.

Dodgers 13, Cubs 11

Trailing 8-5, Los Angeles rallied for a 9-8 lead in the eighth, keyed by Len Matuszek's three-run homer. The Cubs scored three times for a 11-9 lead in the bottom of the eighth, but the Dodgers scored four times in the ninth, two on Scioscia's single.

The Dodgers had 21 hits in the game and the Cubs 13.

Houston Astros' perennial powerhouse pitcher Nolan Ryan delivers a throw during the team's 3-2 win over Philadelphia Sunday. Ryan, now 7-7, went five innings and gave up two hits before leaving the game with tenderness in his elbow. Aurelio Lopez came on and finished the Phillies off. (AP Laserphoto)

Astros' Ryan, Lopez toss Philly two-hitter

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — It was too hot for Aurelio Lopez, but he was too hot for the Philadelphia Phillies.

"I hate this kind of weather," the 37-year-old left-hander said after coming on in relief to help the Houston Astros to a 3-2 victory on a hot and muggy Sunday afternoon. "It's much too hot. I like the Astrodome where it's cool."

After Nolan Ryan developed tenderness in his right elbow and left after 5 strong innings, Lopez held the Phils hitless for the rest of the game and gained his fourth save.

The weather wasn't all that dissatisfied Lopez.

"The mound is very flat here," he said. "It doesn't slope at all, and I was uncomfortable with it."

Houston Manager Hal Lanier said Lopez "did a great job."

"He had a good breaking ball, a good fast ball, and a good change-up," he said.

Lanier was somewhat concerned about Ryan, who struck out 10 and allowed only two hits and two runs, despite pitching only five innings.

"Hopefully, it's just a little tenderness," said Lanier. "He's really been throwing the ball good."

Ryan, who was disabled from June 4th to June 24th because of a sprained ligament in his elbow, is hoping to stay in the rotation.

"I haven't been sound all year," said Ryan, 7-7. "Some days I can throw longer than others. If I'm capable of taking my next turn, I will." After the Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the first, on Mike Schmidt's RBI single, Houston tied it in the second on Craig Reynolds' fifth home run of the year.

Houston went ahead 3-1 in the third on an RBI double by Billy Hatcher and a run-scoring single by Kevin Bass.

The Phillies scored their final run in the fifth on Glenn Wilson's eighth homer of the season.

Phillies starter Kevin Gross, 6-8, who has not won a game since June 19, allowed only four hits over eight innings, none after the third.

"Kevin got mad at himself after Reynolds' homer," said Phillies Manager John Felske, "and he lost his concentration in the third inning. After that, he pitched very well."

Gross tried a no-windup delivery recently employed by teammate Charles Hudson.

"I just wanted to see if it would work for me," Gross said, "because right now, basically I'm just looking for a rabbit's foot."

"I'm just trying to get into a winning way. When you pitch eight innings, allow four hits and don't win, it's pretty darn frustrating. But I just have to try to keep battling and keep hoping I can straighten this out."

The victory, combined with Pittsburgh's 7-0 victory Sunday over San Francisco, enabled Houston to take a 2½-game lead over the Giants in the National League West.

Sutton betters Seaver again

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

Tom Seaver couldn't have cared less about his matchup with Don Sutton — the second this century between 300-game winners. He was more concerned with the plight of the stumbling Boston Red Sox.

"It has more appeal to the fans and the press," Seaver said Sunday after Sutton and the California Angels handed the Red Sox their 10th loss in 13 games.

The 3-0 setback reduced what had been an eight-game bulge on July 10th to a three-game advantage over the New York Yankees in the American League East. And the Red Sox, whose only victories in the last two weeks have come when ace Roger Clemens has pitched, are well aware of their predicament.

"The press in this situation, especially in Boston, has been negative," said Seaver, 4-9, whose career mark is now 308-201.

"That's something that probably means more to you guys and the people sitting in the stands," said Sutton, 9-7 and 304-235. "I might think about it later on, but today? During the game? I don't think it's that big a deal."

Then, thinking back to the days before both came over to the AL — with its designated hitter — Sutton added with a smile, "If this were still the National League, it might be different because he's a pretty good hitter." Elsewhere in the AL, it was Baltimore 11, Chicago 3; New York 4, Minnesota 1; Kansas City 5, Detroit 4; Milwaukee 6, Seattle 1; Oakland 1, Toronto 0 in 15 innings; and Cleveland 8, Texas 3.

The Sutton-Seaver pairing, a matchup of 41-year-old Hall-of-Fame-bound pitchers before a crowd of 61,559 at Anaheim Stadium, was their second this season. On June 9, while Seaver was still with the Chicago White Sox, Sutton also beat him 3-0, for his 299th victory.

Orioles 11, White Sox 3
Rookie Jim Traber may not make Baltimore fans forget about injured first baseman Eddie Murray, but his instant success as a hitter is easing the pain somewhat.

Traber's latest contribution, a grand slam that keyed a nine-run fourth inning was his fifth homer in nine games since being recalled from the minor leagues after Murray was sidelined.

"Everybody knows I'm not going to come up here and take Eddie's place, and I'm the first to admit that," said Traber, who has driven in 13 runs with 11 hits. "I just want to go out and try to produce."

"We'll find a spot for him ... no, doubt about that," Manager Earl Weaver said.

Yankees 4, Twins 1
A rehab assignment last week in Albany served Ron Guidry well. He came off the disabled list to win for the first time since May 10.

The New York left-hander, 5-8, celebrated his return by striking out nine batters in five innings, including the first five he faced.

Guidry got help from Dave Righetti, who got his 23rd save, and Rod Scurry. They combined to strike out four more, and retired the last 11 Twins.

Royals 5, Tigers 4
Coming out of the bullpen was a strange felling for Kansas City's Cy Young Award winner Bret Saberhagen, but as a winner he didn't mind.

"You just have to be a minute-man," he said of the difference between starting and relieving.

He had missed a start due to a tender arm, and was asked to pitch two innings.

Saberhagen, 6-10, won in his first relief appearance since 1984.

Brewers 8, Mariners 1
Tim Leary was a starter on the verge of losing his job. But in scattering seven hits over eight innings, he saved it for the time being.

"No doubt about it. If they pitch good they get another chance, if they don't they don't get to pitch," Milwaukee Manager George Bamberger said matter-of-factly.

A's 1, Blue Jays 0
Oakland's Alfredo Griffin didn't mind going 0-for-6 as long as he was taking one for the team.

"I wanted to get a base hit instead of a walk, but in that kind of game you just try to win any way you can," the Oakland shortstop said after his bases-loaded walk enabled the A's to edge the Toronto Blue Jays to extend their winning streak to seven games.

Griffin drew the walk with two out off reliever Stan Clarke.

Indians 8, Rangers 3
The heat was on in Texas, and Tom Candiotti felt fully cooked by the time he'd put in seven sweat-filled innings with the thermometer at 101 degrees.

"This is probably the worst heat I've ever pitched in," said Candiotti, 10-7, who shares the AL lead in complete games (9) with California's Mike Witt. "My legs felt like spaghetti."

Skater Blair sets medals record

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — As the temperatures climbed toward 100 degrees outside of the Summit and Sam Houston Coliseum, the skaters inside those arenas were hot enough to melt the ice they were performing on.

The U.S. Olympic Festival resembled an ice carnival Sunday as speedskater Bonnie Blair set a record for gold and total medals won by an athlete, a pair of Soviet ice dancers charmed an enthralled crowd and America's brightest figure skaters entered their names in the 1988 Olympic sweepstakes.

Blair, who won five gold medals at Baton Rouge, La., last year, earned her third and fourth of this competition with wins in the women's 1,000 meters and the 3,000-meter relay at Sam Houston Coliseum. That gave her 10 golds and 16 overall Festival medals — speedskater Gloria Bogacki won nine golds and gymnast Kelly Garrison collected 15 medals overall. Garrison is competing here.

Power and grace were most evident in the performance of Soviet ice dancers Marina Klimova and Sergei Ponomarenko. When they skated in an exhibition at The Summit Sunday, the 1984 Olympic bronze medalists and two-time runners-up in the World Championships became the first foreigners to appear at the Festival.

National champions Renee Roca and Donald Adair won the ice dancing, finishing first on all seven judges' cards in the long program.

With the United States' biggest individual figure skating stars absent, teenagers swept the titles here. Christopher Bowman, 19, of Van Nuys, Calif., took the men's crown in his first meet since a broken leg bone forced him out of the U.S. Championships in February. Bowman had 2.8 factorial placements after a strong freestyle program in which he placed first with all seven judges.

Jill Trenary, 17, of Colorado Springs, Colo., won the women's title with a solid final program. The 1985 national junior champion beat the '86 junior queen, Cindy Bortz of Tarzana, Calif.

There was plenty of excitement on opening night of the men's basketball tournament. Mike Mitchell of Fresno State sank a 19-foot jumper with one second to play to give the West a 93-91 upset victory over the South.

The East edged the North 91-89 in the other men's game as Doug West of Villanova scored 21 points. In women's play, the South, seeking its fifth straight Festival gold medal, downed the West 83-66 and the North rolled over the East 90-74.

Three-time sprint world champion Connie Paraskevin of Indianapolis captured her specialty. Billy Asmus of Lakeville, Minn., and Scott Jaffe of Lexington, Mass., won their second gold medals here, and 13-year-old Julie Kole of Forrest Hill, Md., Kole became the youngest competitor to earn a gold medal in Festival swimming. She took the 400-meter freestyle.

The previous youngest winner was Summer Sanders of Roseville, Calif., who won the 200 intermediate individual medley on Saturday.

Asmus added the 100 freestyle to his 50 free victory, and Jaffe captured the 400 individual medley after winning the 200 breaststroke on Saturday.

David Moreno of Houston, fighting for just one year, pressured 1986 U.S. Army and U.S. Amateur 125-pound champion Runnel Doll for three rounds to win a 4-1 upset decision to highlight the boxing.

Texas captures rodeo title

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) — Texas repeated as the team champion at the National High School Finals Rodeo Sunday, while Oklahoma finished second.

Terry Hook of Monte Creek, British Columbia, won the coveted all-around cowboy award and Jennifer Canik of Grand Chienier, La., repeated as the all-around cowgirl.

The all-around honor goes to the cowboy and cowgirl scoring the most points in two or more events.

Texas accumulated 2,808 team points to Oklahoma's 2,493. Last year's runnerup, Louisiana, dropped to eighth after Sunday's final performance at the Central States Fairgrounds.

Chris Mathison of Miles City, Mont., was runnerup to Hook in the boys' all-around competition, while the runnerup for all-around cowgirl honors was Jackie Barnard of Leedey, Okla.

The top 20 contestants in each event and the top 12 in team roping, based on highest accumulated scores or least elapsed time during the previous two go-rounds, competed for individual and team championships Sunday.

Thirty-three states and two Canadian provinces sent 1,197 contestants to the seven-day, 13-performance rodeo.

Car bomb devastates heavily populated area of east Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A car bomb devastated a densely populated area of Christian east Beirut during morning rush hour today, and police said the blast killed at least 32 people, wounded 140 and trapped others in blazing buildings.

Firefighters scaled mobile ladders to the upper floors of seven apartment houses set on fire by the explosion and rescued more than 40 people who screamed from balconies and rooftops for help.

Rescuers hunted for at least seven people feared buried in buildings toppled by the blast's concussion.

"My brothers, my two brothers!" screamed Josiane Azar as rescuers pulled two bodies out of the rubble of a clothing shop her brothers owned. She then fainted.

Many victims were charred beyond recognition.

"It was a mad scene," said Nawal Ghattas, an east Beirut resident. "People screamed. Motorists raced away, honking their horns, and the wail of ambulance sirens was deafening."

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the car bombing, the sixth and deadliest in east Beirut this year.

Public Health Minister Joseph Hashem, a Christian, was in tears when he inspected the damage. "Words are too weak a vehicle to express the adequate condemnation of such a barbaric crime," he said.

A huge black cloud of smoke hung over the area after the 8:28 a.m. explosion, which gouged a 6-foot-deep crater in Wadih Naim street near the Star cinema in Ein Rummaneh's Snoubra neighborhood.

Police said the car, a white Mercedes-Benz parked near the movie theater, had an estimated 440 pounds of TNT.

Firefighters brought the flames under control several hours after the explosion. Police were unable to say how many people were still trapped inside buildings.

Three apartment buildings were gutted. Many balconies were blown off their smoke-blackened fronts. About 30 buildings were pronounced uninhabitable and 20 shops were completely destroyed. About 50 cars were destroyed.

Chopped-off power cables dangled into the water that filled the street as firefighters fought to put out the blaze.

Civil Defense rescue teams, fire engines and ambulances crowded the scene of the blast. Christian radio stations broadcast urgent appeals for blood donations.

Police said at least 32 people were killed and 140 wounded, the highest casualty toll in a car bombing this year. A car bomb blast on Jan. 21 killed 30 people and wounded 133.

It was the sixth car bombing in east Beirut this year. A total of 63 people were killed and 405 wounded in the previous explosions, according to police. Christian spokesmen blamed the past car bombings on Syria's secret service, saying the attacks were part of a campaign to force Maronite Catholic President Amin Gemayel to step down.

Syria has rejected the charge. It has been at odds with Gemayel since January, when he scuttled a peace pact the Syrians mediated among the principal militias warring in Lebanon's 11-year-old civil war.

Group drops plan to patrol border

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—Members of a paramilitary group that held a band of illegal aliens at gunpoint in Arizona have decided to drop plans for a regular patrol of the Mexican border.

"It was decided it was dividing our assets and resources within CMA which isn't all that great to begin with," said Jim Kent, a retired Marine first sergeant who is spokesman for the Civilian Materiel Assistance.

"We want to redirect and focus our efforts into Central America and other areas where the anti-Communist freedom fighters have requested our assistance," Kent said.

Kent said that pressure from several state and federal law enforcement agencies had no bearing on the decision, which came during a closed meeting Saturday of CMA members attending the group's national convention.

About 100 people attended the convention, which began Friday. CMA officials say the group has about 5,000 members.

The CMA, originally known as Civilian Military Assistance, first drew the attention of federal authorities two years ago after two members were killed when a helicopter was shot down near the Honduras-Nicaragua border.

The organization was created to raise funds and collect supplies for the anti-Communist forces in Central America.

Leaders of the CMA proposed the patrols along the Mexican border in Texas, Arizona and New Mexico to intercept drug shipments.

Tom Posey of Decatur, Ala., the CMA president, supported the patrols, "because it's going to hurt the Communists financially."

In the incident earlier this month, a group of armed CMA members detained 16 aliens in Arizona until U.S. Border Patrol officers arrived. Later, CMA members in Texas said they planned to initiate patrols.

But the patrol proposals drew strong objections from state and federal officials, and some CMA members said Friday the plan would hurt the group's efforts to supply anti-Communist guerrilla forces in Central America.

Names in News

NEW YORK (AP) — DAVID LETTERMAN, the late-night NBC funnyman, is on a roll, but between wisecracks admits things are a bit uncomfortable at the top.

The Nielsen ratings for the 39-year-old Hoosier-born entertainer's "Late Night with David Letterman" have never been higher.

"It's like a tap on the shoulder from some ominous unknown force," he told The New York Times in an interview published Sunday. "To me, that's the position you don't want to find yourself in, the one you can't sustain. Now that the ratings are good, I feel a different kind of fear."

But he's taking his new problem in stride. "It's like a warning that I've got to do better, and keep doing better, or the ratings will go down and I'll be left a lonely broken shell of a human — like I am now," he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — New Jersey Gov. THOMAS H. KEAN says he didn't have a run-in with Frank Sinatra, but adds that Old

Blue Eyes is "not one I'd want to cross."

Kean, appearing on NBC TV's "News Forum" Sunday, described events of July 3 at Governors Island after Liberty Weekend opening ceremonies.

"So, as we were getting onto our boat, there was Frank Sinatra, standing sort of with his arms folded like this, sort of tapping his foot, and saying, 'Where's my boat?'"

"I complimented him on his performance ... and he sort of looked at me and said, 'Come on! Hurry up! I want to get my boat in,'" Kean said, laughing.

Kean said Sinatra was impatient, but not discourteous, and made "it clear that he wanted to get off the island, and he didn't really want anybody in the way. But that's characteristic, I guess, of Frank Sinatra."

"I would never want to have a confrontation with Frank Sinatra. I think he's a great entertainer, but he's not one I'd want to cross."

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Singer ELLA FITZGERALD was in fair condition after being admitted to a hospital, where she is being treated for congestive heart failure, officials said.

Miss Fitzgerald, 68, was taken to Niagara Falls Medical Center after becoming ill Sunday morning in her hotel room, said hospital spokeswoman Annie Chapman.

She said the hospital was issuing no comment or confirmation on the patient's condition, on the order of doctors. However, officials speaking on condition of anonymity said Miss Fitzgerald was diagnosed as having congestive heart failure and that she was expected to spend several days in the hospital.

Congestive heart failure occurs when the heart had been weakened and can no longer pump blood properly. It does not mean the heart has stopped, but that its efficiency has been lowered.

Miss Fitzgerald's manager, Pete Cavello, denied the singer had suffered a congestive heart failure. "It's a respiratory problem," he said. "Her breathing is not what it should be."

Earlier, Ms. Chapman said the problem was apparently heat exhaustion.

"She is in intensive care and she's doing pretty good," Ms. Chapman said.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — MARTINA NAVRATILOVA savored her Federation Cup victory and said so in English and Czech.

She led the American team to victory Sunday in her first return to her homeland since defecting in 1975.

Navratilova was speaking in English after the victory to emphasize her American citizenship, but was interrupted by the audience yelling "Cesky" — "Say it in Czech."

Leaders mourn Harriman

NEW YORK (AP) — Political leaders including President Reagan mourned the death of W. Averell Harriman, remembering him as one of the world's most accomplished statesmen and "one of the greatest Americans of his time."

Harriman died Saturday at his Birchgrove home in Westchester County, north of New York City, with his wife, Pamela, and other family members at his side. He was 94.

"The world has lost one of her most respected statesmen; the death of Averell Harriman closes a chapter in diplomatic history which only someone of his talent and stature could have written," the president said.

"On behalf of my predecessors whom he served with such loyalty and dedication, I join all who mourn his passing," Reagan added.

Senator Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., called Harriman "one of the greatest Americans of his time."

"I remember when my brother, Jack, first became president he announced that the torch had passed to a new generation of Americans," the senator said. "Then he turned around and realized that Averell Harriman still had it."

Gov. Mario Cuomo said Harriman left "a monumental record of public service" and added, "New York will remember him as a governor who led an administration deeply concerned with problems of mental health, civil rights and aging."

Earlier, Ms. Chapman said the problem was apparently heat exhaustion.

"She is in intensive care and she's doing pretty good," Ms. Chapman said.

Garbage Pail Kids come under attack

DUNCANVILLE, Texas (AP) — Liberty Libby is the Statue of Liberty, standing on a trash can, holding a leaky sack of garbage instead of a torch.

Curly Carla has wiry snakes coming out of her head.

Kayo'd Cody is a runny-nose kid with a black eye, bumpy head and a bloody mouth.

They are Garbage Pail Kids — a new craze in chewing-gum trading cards among children ages 8 to 10.

But despite their popularity, some schools and parents around the country consider the cards tasteless and seek to ban them.

Add Duncanville mother Betsy Jarvis, 31, to the list.

"I don't want things in the store that teach my kids or any child that it's OK to beat up on kids, bad-mouth their parents or not mind their principal," said Mrs. Jarvis, who has 5-year-old twin girls.

She said she has already collected 250 signatures on a petition to remove the trading cards from local 7-Eleven and Toys R Us stores and halt their manufacture by Topps Chewing Gum Inc. of Brooklyn, N.Y.

She hopes to collect 1,000 signatures by Sept. 1, when she will present the petition to the three companies.

Some of the peel-off cards have "wanted" posters on the flip side charging parents with "aggravated assault" or the school principal with "brain washing."

Some cards serve as puzzle pieces for a larger poster of a bruised and bleeding kid, she said.

Parental discretion is not enough, she said.

"Kids aren't old enough to decide what is good or bad for them, and once one child on the block has them others can see them and want them," Mrs. Jarvis said.

Officials with Toys R Us and Dallas-based Southland Corp., which owns 7-Eleven convenience stores, said they can't stock their stores fast enough to keep up with the demand for the 25-cent packs that include gum and five cards.

"It's pretty much one of our more popular items," said Karen Raskopf, public relations manager for Southland's North Texas area.

Eight people have called or written about Garbage Pail Kids, she said.

"We feel that everyone is entitled to their opinion," she said. "But we also have a responsibility to provide the products that our customers want."

John Suozzo, area general manager for Toys R Us, declined comment.

Norman Liss, a spokesman for Topps, said the company sees nothing wrong with the cards and neither do the kids.

"The demand is incredible — more than we can keep up with," Liss said. "And we wouldn't put it out if we thought it was bad."

Dish industry may survive scrambling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rural residents too far from town to get a good television picture and suburbanites tired of waiting for cable TV invested thousands of dollars in backyard satellite antennas in the first part of the decade.

But as 1986 began, cable stations found a way of scrambling their signals, consumers panicked and the dish industry almost died.

On Jan. 1, there were 1.5 million dishes dotting the landscape, 625,000 of them sold in 1985 to people answering ads promising free movies and TV sports events.

The signal scrambling began earlier this year. Without a special box in the satellite to decode the algorithm — a series of zeros and ones — the scrambled stations were unwatchable.

A lot of marginally financed dish dealers saw sales come to a virtual halt.

John R. MacDougall of Ocala, Fla., who confessed to being the video pirate (the so-called Captain Midnight) who took Home Box Office off the air one night in protest, said, "I was watching the great American dream slip from my grasp."

In the first half of 1986, only about 100,000 dishes were sold, compared with 265,000 for the same period a year earlier, according to a survey to be released this week by CSP International, a communications planning consulting organization in New York.

After analyzing the figures, Michael Tyler, president of CSP, said he thinks the industry has bottomed out. "A modest turnaround appears to have begun," he said, although he conceded the picture won't be clear until the normal fall buying season.

Dealers in rural areas are the first to be making a comeback, said Joe Boyle, spokesman for the dish industry group SPACE.

The CSP report predicts sales of 19,000 for the second half of 1986 and another 350,000 to 500,000 dishes next year, with 3.5 million to 5 million installed by the end of 1990.

"Widely held misconceptions include the ideas that it is necessary to buy a separate descrambler unit for each program channel," the CSP study said, "and that the descrambling standard may soon change, making present-day descramblers obsolete." Both beliefs are wrong, the study said.

Consumers did not understand that many TV services would never scramble and there would be a decoder — a single descrambling unit — to translate anything designed for viewing by the public, CSP said.

That unit is the Videocipher II, which sells for $395. So far, 25,000 have been sold by M-A-Com, Channel Master and Anixter. Another 50,000 are available.

Less expensive models will be built into new dishes at the factory.

A call to a toll-free number registers the customer and gets the descrambler turned on with a signal from space in a matter of minutes.

HBO, Cinemax, Showtime, The Movie Channel and the Cable News Network now scramble full time.

The advertiser-supported services retail for about $20-$25 a year. The movie services sell for prices between $7.80 and $12.95 a month, based on the type of package a subscriber chooses.

Stephen Schulte, Showtime senior vice president for direct broadcast development, wouldn't say how many customers he serves via dishes but he expects a jump in subscriptions Oct. 10, the day SelecTV, the other movie service scrambles.

HBO has 17,000 subscribers each for HBO and Cinemax. Spokesman Alan Levy said they had a noticeable increase in customers the day Showtime scrambled.

There have been no reports of a successful black market descrambler. But some consumers have already fallen victim to a new scam.

Someone buys legitimate decoders, signs up for program services, then resells the activated box at a higher price as an all-purpose, full-time descrambler.

After 50 years, they decided to die together

HIGHLAND PARK, Texas (AP) — Don and Betty Morris were a joyful couple who loved fishing, the outdoors and romance, and after 50 years of marriage decided to die together rather than die slowly apart, their children say.

Morris, a semi-retired psychiatrist, and his wife, a retired psychologist, both 76, were found dead by police in the bedroom of their home last Monday after the Southwestern Medical School received a letter explaining that they had taken lethal doses of Nembutal, a depressant.

After their long, blissful marriage and successful medical careers, the couple couldn't bear the thought of being separated or finishing out their lives in a nursing home, their children say.

Two suicide notes were found in the small bedroom of their modestly furnished home. In a note to his three surviving children, Morris said he feared that as his heart condition grew worse, he would be hospitalized, to die slowly instead of in a "decent and respectable manner."

Don Morris Jr., 49, a California

archaeologist, said, "The two of them together could function well, but not alone. If Dad had another heart attack, that would have put Mom in a nursing home. They didn't want that. They had seen too many friends who had been placed in nursing homes."

Ralph Morris, 38, described his parents as "a geriatric Romeo and Juliet," but said when Morris suffered a string of heart attacks in the 1970s, their lives "began to grow smaller."

Their daughter, Beth Eichenberg, 46, of Houston, said, "For 50 years, it was adolescent first love."

Last Sunday, on their last night together, the couple prepared a meal of all the things they had been forbidden to eat — scrambled eggs with cheese, lots of bacon, ice cream, and corn chips.

Then the couple went to their bedroom, sipped their favorite sherry, and lay down in each other's arms, waiting for the poison to take effect.

Along with the suicide notes, police said they also found a note with a menu of the couple's last meal and a list of poems reflecting on death.

"The problem of many deteriorating old people is obviously a new one — everybody used to die too soon," Morris wrote. "Therefore, as a society, we have not learned to deal with it in a decent and respectable manner."

The children said their parents told them they would eventually commit suicide. But in his suicide note, Morris said he regretted taking his life "surreptitiously ... under cover of darkness."

On Friday, a small group of family and friends gathered at the Morris home, toasting the couple with some of the pair's favorite vices: champagne, sherry and popcorn.

Morris requested that the bodies be donated for research to the Southwestern Medical School, where he was a faculty member, and that the children scatter the couple's ashes along Turtle Creek — their favorite outdoor spot in Dallas.

Morris, of Illinois, and Betty Dozier, born in Alabama, met in the early 1930s while attending graduate school at Yale University. The couple moved to Highland Park, an affluent suburb surrounded by Dallas.
