First POW Group Arrives Safely

Thousands On Hand To Greet Planes

LEFT BEHIND—The wrecked carcass of a U.S. helicopter rests on Highway 13 in South Vietnam, a vestige of the Vietnam conflict hopefully on its way to a final conclusion. Leaving such scenes behind them, U.S. soldiers withdraw under the cease-fire agreement reached last month. And leaving scenes of various prison camps, the first prisoner-of-war groups released by North Vietnam and the Viet Cong landed at Clark Air Force Base in the Philippines today.

By PETER ARNETT
Associated Press Writer
CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines (AP) — A total of 143 prisoners of war came back today under the Stars and Stripes, the flag some had not seen for eight years.

Most of the men flown to this base after release from Communist captivity in North and South Vietnam were reported in good physical condition as they checked into a U.S. hospital.

"We are honored at the opportunity to serve our country under difficult circumstances," said the first prisoner to step out of the first returning hospital plane, Navy Capt. Jeremiah A. Denton Jr. of Virginia Beach, Va. "God bless America."

More than 60 doctors on duty at the base hospital began examining the freed prisoners.

The first to arrive were 116 from North Vietnamese prisons, ferried on the 2 1/2-hour flight from Hanoi by three U.S. Air Force Starlifter hospital planes.

No emergency medical treatment was required and did not seem necessary, a spokesman said later. "On the most part the men were ebullient."

A second contingent of 26 men headed here from South Vietnam. They were released north of Saigon following a day-long dispute that delayed their departure. A 27th prisoner released with them remained behind at a Saigon hospital.

Spokesmen at Clark said large numbers of the returned prisoners requested a regular American dinner instead of the bland diet doctors had planned to nurse their digestive systems. And most got it.

The prisoners in South Vietnam — 19 servicemen and 8 civilians — were turned over at Loc Ninh 75 miles north of Saigon and flown to Saigon in U.S. helicopters for transfer to hospital planes and the 2-hour and 15-minute flight to Clark Air Base.

The releases at Hanoi and Loc Ninh left 341 American prisoners in North Vietnamese hands, 72 in South Vietnam and 7 in Laos, according to Hanoi's count supplied to the United States. The remainder are to be released at two-week intervals in groups about the same size as today's.

Both Goldberg and Rehnquist noted that the high court has virtually complete control over which cases it will hear and decide, regardless of the number of requests made.

Goldberg said that the present system enables "any citizen to knock at the Supreme Court's door."

TO EASE WORK LOAD

Goldberg Hits Support Of Mini-Court System

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Former Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg says he sees little support for a proposal to create a mini-Supreme Court to ease the work load of the nation's highest tribunal.

"I think it will fail," said Goldberg, an opponent of the mini-court concept. "Outside of the authors," he said, "I have not seen the bar come out for it."

Goldberg talked to newsmen Sunday after speaking at a non-denominational religious service held in conjunction with a meeting of the American Bar Association here.

A day earlier, Justice William H. Rehnquist told ABA members that changes in procedures to help cope with its case loads "are absolutely essential to its continued vitality as one of our important national institutions."

Rehnquist specifically declined to endorse the mini-court plan, saying any change should be subjected to "the fullest public scrutiny."

But, the justice said, the mounting workload of the high court presented "a significant problem."

He said it is open to debate whether the Supreme Court has sufficient time for its tasks now. If the caseload continues to mount, there will be less time.

"We surely must not shrink from facing the problem ... merely because an effective solution would require a change in the method by which the Supreme Court does business," Rehnquist said.

The new court was proposed by a committee appointed by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger in his capacity as chairman of the board of the Federal Judicial Center, the research arm of the federal courts.

The committee found that the number of cases reaching the Supreme Court has tripled in the recent years, from about 1,200 in 1951 to 3,600 in the last term of the court.

Both Goldberg and Rehnquist noted that the high court has virtually complete control over which cases it will hear and decide, regardless of the number of requests made.

Goldberg said that the present system enables "any citizen to knock at the Supreme Court's door."

DOLLAR CRISIS

Exchange Markets Shut To Cool-Off

BONN, Germany (AP) — Most foreign exchange markets were closed around the world today in an effort to cool off the dollar crisis. There was widespread speculation that there would soon be an international meeting, similar to the 1971 Smithsonian conference in Washington, to work out a new schedule of exchange rates for the non-Communist world's major currencies.

Sources in Basel, Switzerland, where the heads-of-the-major central banks held their monthly meeting Sunday, said the Japanese were pressing for such a conference this week in Paris.

Tokyo was reported under increasing pressure from the United States to revalue the yen upward. But the Japanese government was waiting for West Germany and the rest of the Common Market nations to act, and the Germans continued to insist they would not increase the value of the mark unilaterally.

Although West Germany's official foreign currency exchange was closed, trading continued on Frankfurt's open money market. Dealers said they expected the dollar to settle at 3 marks, a 5 per cent devaluation from the floor level of 3 1/2 marks which the West German government is pledged to maintain under the Smithsonian Agreement.

A statement by Chancellor Willy Brandt's government Sunday appeared to rule out an upward revaluation of the mark or an upward float of the mark against the dollar. But sources in financial circles believed the Bonn and Tokyo governments would permit changes as part of a general realignment of the world's currencies.

The German, British and Italian finance ministers met Sunday night in Paris with French Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing and Paul Volcker, U.S. Treasury undersecretary for monetary affairs. Volcker came to Paris after a swing through Tokyo, London, Bonn and Rome to discuss the monetary situation.

There was no word on what, if anything, was decided at the meeting.

Japan and Germany have so far refused to revalue their currencies upward unilaterally because that would make their exports more expensive in foreign markets.

The full House and Senate were to resume work at 11 a.m. after returning from a three-day weekend.

The appointment of 37 Texans to a constitutional revision committee shapes up as a gigantic talent hunt by Gov. Dolph Briscoe, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Speaker Price Daniel Jr. and three others.

Hobby already had received some 500 proposed names by the weekend. Daniel said he had gotten "several hundred" nominations, and Briscoe claimed "about 50 or 60" persons had been suggested to him.

Another member of the selection committee, Atty. Gen. John Hill, speculated they might receive thousands of names.

They hope to choose the 37-member committee this month to give it as much time as possible before the Nov. 1 deadline to report its proposals for changing the Texas Constitution of 1876. The recommendations will be submitted to the legislature in January 1974.

Former Rep. Frances Farenthold, a Corpus Christi lawyer who lost to Briscoe for governor in the Democratic primary last year, was suggested to Daniel by 20 House members after he encouraged the House to forward its choices.

Tom Cartledge, who hiked across Texas in an unsuccessful bid to win the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate in 1972, was in town phoning influential friends to support him for a place on the committee. Others also were looking for ways to get a headstart for a committee spot.

Some government officials are saying privately that anyone appointed to the committee will have to put aside their regular job for six months because the committee has so much work to do.

At Daniel's request, the first meeting of the six-member selection committee, set for 4 p.m. today, was moved from the governor's office to the Old Supreme Court room on the third floor of the Capitol. It will be public, but the room probably does not have space for more than 150 persons.

Joining Briscoe, Hobby, Daniel and Hill on the selection committee are Chief Justice Joe Greenhill of the Texas Supreme Court and Presiding Judge John F. Onion Jr. of the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

The first group of released prisoners stepped into freedom with sharp salutes, cautious smiles and their heads held high — their emotions thinly concealed behind the formality of the moment.

In gray jackets and dark gray trousers provided by their North Vietnamese captors, the men released from the "Hanoi Hilton" made their first contact with home as emotionally charged crowds chanted, "Welcome home. We love you."

The applause and cheers from the excited crowd of several thousand military personnel, dependents and newsmen were steady as the POWs, some of them limping, walked off the hospital planes at this base, their first stop on their 12,000-mile trip home.

One man produced a handkerchief-sized blue-lettered sign and held it up so the crowd and newsmen could see it. "God bless America and Nixon."

A tough-looking Marine major wiped his eyes. A two-star Air Force general waved both his arms high, the fingers on both hands forming the V-sign.

Out of the glare of the welcoming brass and the television cameras, the POWs seemed like an excited group of school boys — kids on their way to a high school football game, hanging out of the bus windows, waving and shouting at exuberant people who lined the one-mile drive from the flight line to the 250-bed base hospital.

Reporters were not allowed to interview the men, but one newsman shouted, "How does it feel to be back?"

"Great," yelled back a prematurely gray-haired man with a bright smile of yellowed teeth. "Wonderful!" beamed another hanging out of the next window.

Lt. Cmdr. Everett Alvarez, held nearly nine years, appeared trim and fit. He was the pilot with the longest experience.

"Welcome back, you guys," shouted a group of airmen along the route. "Thank you," the POWs yelled back, thrusting their arms and fists out of the windows to give a thumbs-up sign.

Lt. Col. Robert B. Purcell of Louisville, Ky., was reported to have given up his place to Cmdr. Brian Dunston Woods, 40, of Lemoore, Calif.

"There was an erroneous report," the spokesman said. "There were 40 men aboard the first plane from Hanoi, 39 on the second and 37 on the third."

The plane, one of three that had flown to Hanoi to pick up POWs, returned her son, Navy Cmdr. Roder Crayton of La Jolla, Calif., and 39 other American prisoners of war freed today and flown from Hanoi to Clark Air Base in the Philippines.

"I recognized his foot coming out of the door," said Jeanne Higdon, mother of Navy Lt. Kenneth Higdon of San Francisco. "There was no doubt about it. I could tell by the way he walked. He looked fabulous, like he's ready to come home now. I don't think I could be happier."

Mrs. Soledad Alvarez, mother of Lt. Cmdr. Everett Alvarez Jr. of Santa Clara, Calif., the American POW held the longest in North Vietnam, experienced an "inner happiness" when she saw her son get off the first airplane.

A family spokesman said she was "emotionally distraught. She's too emotional. She doesn't feel like talking about it yet. She's been through a lot. There's not a lot of screaming and shouting here. It is a moment of quiet, inner happiness."

Mrs. Crayton, Mrs. Alvarez and Mrs. Higdon joined the womenfolk of Air Force Col. Ronald E. Byrne Jr. of Kokomo, Ind., and many others across the nation in acquiring a new meaning of "freedom" — a word traditionally used today, Lincoln's Birthday.

"I decided when he was captured I'd save my crying for when he was freed," said Joanne Byrne, whose prisoner of war husband also was freed today. "and when that call came, Ron's mother and I each grabbed the Kleenex and each other."

Mrs. Byrne planned more than crying for her husband, who was shot down in 1965.

Her jubilation was ignited by an early morning telecast of the arrival at an American air base of the first planeload of American prisoners of war freed from captivity in North Vietnam.

The relatives watched the telecasts of each of the three planes that carried the men from Hanoi.

"I saw him land!" Mary Jane Crayton of LaGrange, Ga., exclaimed today. "I'm so happy he was among the first to arrive. I'm just thrilled to death!"

The President told reporters outside the church that he had no plans to see any of the returning POWs.

"Let's let them see their families again, and then, if they want to see anybody, the secretary of defense or the President, we will be available," he said.

He suggested that all Americans — townspeople planning homecoming welcomes, officials at the Clark Field Evacuation Center in the Philippines and the press — let the POWs alone as they are reunited with their families and readjust to freedom.

Nixon Requests 'Quiet Respect'

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon says the best way for the nation to welcome the American prisoners of war being released in Vietnam is "with quiet respect for their fortitude in the ordeal that is now ending for their privacy in the time ahead."

Nixon kept a close watch Sunday on developments relating to the first release of U.S. prisoners since the Vietnam cease-fire. After he was informed Sunday night that the airlift of prisoners from North Vietnam had begun, the Western White House issued this presidential statement.

"As the first group of Americans held as prisoners of war in Vietnam arrives home, the whole nation would like to be there to welcome them back to the country they have served so well."

"Let us remember, however, that this moment belongs above all to the returning men themselves and to the families waiting to welcome them. We can join most fittingly in that welcome, not with fanfare, but with quiet respect for their fortitude in the ordeal that is now ending and for their privacy in the time ahead."

"On the Veterans Administration Building in Washington are the words of Abraham Lincoln, whose birthday we are celebrating today."

The panel approved employment of Miss Audette Vaughn as assistant county home demonstration agent. Miss Vaughn is a native of St. Jo in Montague County and a graduate of Texas Tech University.

Other business transacted was of a routine nature relative to running county affairs.

The court will meet briefly Thursday to approve some routine bills the auditor did not have ready for today's session.

The next regular session of the commissioners court will be at 10 a.m. March 1 in the county courtroom.

A telegram from McCarroll in Canada to Bob Carmichael, president of the board, said: "A temporary job assignment is expected to cause me to have a prolonged separation from the Pampa community. Because of this, I submit my resignation from the Pampa Independent School District board of trustees."

"I have found the members of the board dedicated and hard working. I have found the administration skilled, professionally competent and of fine character. I am proud to have served with you all."

McCarroll's departure from the panel came on the heels of a paper submitted to board member Ben Sturgeon, Pampa attorney, outlining the legal ramifications of McCarroll's absence.

This paper quoted Article 16, Section 14, of the state constitution regarding legal residence. It also quoted the findings in the Prince case involving such a matter.

Authors of the paper submitted contented also, on the basis of the Education Code, Section 23-18, that there should be three positions on the board open in the coming election instead of two.

McCarroll's chief supervisor at the Celanese Corp. told the News that he considers McCarroll employed here. Though on a "trouble-shooting" assignment at a company plant in Canada, McCarroll is paid from this plant and his job is still open for him.

The News was also told that McCarroll sold his house because of plans to acquire a smaller one since he has no children at home now.

Neither McCarroll or Carmichael were available at press time for a statement. Therefore, it is not known what action the board will take in the matter of McCarroll's resignation today.

Members of the board and administrative personnel meet at 5:30 p.m. today at Carver Center for a "talk session." This is to be followed at 7:30 p.m. by the regular meeting of the board.

The meeting had been changed to this date to coincide with a trip by McCarroll to Pampa.

County Okays Depository Of Funds In Bank

First National bank of Pampa will be the county depository for the next two years.

Members of the Gray County Commissioners Court accepted the bid of the bank at today's meeting and authorized Judge Don Cain to execute such a contract.

George McCarroll Resigns From Pampa School Board

By RAY BAXTER
A new note was injected into today's school board proceedings by the resignation of George McCarroll from the panel.

Manager Gets Advice

City Manager Mack Wofford's mail today brought an invitation and a piece of advice.

The invitation came from The Big Texan, a restaurant on 140 East, Amarillo, to attend the annual Texas State Championship Steak-Eating Contest Tuesday, Feb. 20.

The letter from The Big Texan pointed out that the contest epitomizes the Panhandle area's supremacy in the production of fine beef.

The invitation to Wofford stated further: "We hope you will be present at this steak-eating extravaganza."

Wofford said he was uncertain whether he was expected to be a contestant or just an observer.

"I don't believe I would have a chance at the championship," Wofford said. "I'm not that big an eater."

The advice that reached the city manager today was this:

"If traffic problems, irate citizens and high costs are giving you the jitters, you should take one of those little round things that come in a cylindrical bottle, and put it in a martini." It was signed "Joe Prismo."

Commenting on this, Wofford said: "I'm not sure it would help any."

Investigation Considered For Prairie View A&M

HOUSTON (AP) — Alumni of troubled Prairie View A&M said here Sunday they welcome a legislative investigation of the school, despite prior telegrams sent to legislators allegedly by alumni leaders protesting such a probe.

Sam Prince, chairman of the alumni board, said Sunday a decision to back the proposed investigation was reached Saturday at a meeting in Waco.

Seven of the Texas Legislature's eight black members are supporting a resolution introduced by Rep. Paul Ragdale, D-Dallas, calling for an investigation. The call came after legislators received what they described as many letters about the school, its president, Dr. Alvin L. Thomas, an alleged lack of academic freedom, high faculty turnover and the need to remove Prairie View from the Texas A&M University system.

Telegrams protesting such an investigation were sent by persons who said they represented the alumni association to members of the House Education Committee. Rep. Dan Kubiak, D-Rockdale, chairman of the committee, charged that Dr. Thomas was behind the messages.

Sunday's statement by the alumni group said Ragdale's resolution was "a request for an official and impartial investigation of the situation at Prairie View. Any other statement released regarding this issue did not represent the National Alumni Association nor was approval granted."

Asked if he believes Dr. Thomas had anything to do with the earlier telegrams Prince said the association did not wish to discuss personalities.

The statement said an investigation was needed because of "adverse publicity surrounding the institution."

If an investigation is held, it will be the second within three years. In 1971 a Texas Senate committee looked into affairs at Prairie View after rioting rocked the campus. The committee recommended sweeping changes in funding and rule-making at the college.

Attacks Continue In Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Stray bullets fired by terrorists wounded a pair of young girls in Belfast, and two Irish Republican Army members were killed by their own bomb during the weekend in Northern Ireland.

Random attacks by gunmen and bomb blasts were reported Sunday in numerous towns across the province.

Gunfire from a passing car raked a group of men standing on a Belfast street corner. None was injured seriously.

Terrorists opened fire in the Springfield Road district of Belfast and two 9-year-old girls were wounded by ricocheting bullets. British authorities said. Both girls were hospitalized with minor wounds.

Authorities said that two IRA members — Leo Hanlon, 23, and Vivienne Fitzsimmons, 17 — were killed early Sunday when a bomb they were making or transporting exploded in a rural area 30 miles south of Belfast.

Militant Protestants reacted with defiance to a crackdown by British troops on them. A number of Protestant leaders are reported to have gone underground after the arrest over the weekend of five Protestant militants. Protestant extremists said in a statement Sunday that their leaders would be replaced "by working class Protestants" as fast as arrests are made.

DESPITE THREATENED WALKOUTS

Women's Group Has Shaky Unity

HOUSTON (AP) — Despite tensions and recurrent threats of walkouts by racial and political minorities, the National Women's Political Caucus emerged from its first national convention far more unified than before.

Some wounds were opened in the sometimes raucous and oft-times painfully tedious process of determining the future of the 18-month-old caucus.

But the Republicans unhappy at anti-administration sentiments freely expressed by some delegates and the Chicano hostile to the new chairwoman, Sissy Farenthold, opted to stay rather than part ways.

Many of the 1,300 participants said they were returning to their homes to run for office under auspices of the caucus.

Betty Friedman, a founder not only of the caucus but of the women's rights movement, summed up the feelings of many about the frequent but productive caucus clashes: "The real politics is when you differ with people and fight them passionately—and know that they fought so hard because they cared—and you love them anyway."

Not that there aren't problems ahead, both in keeping the coalition coalesced and in balancing the loss of every "superstar" founder—Friedman, Reps. Bella Abzug and Shirley Chisholm—and Gloria Steinem—with the enlarged input from grassroots leaders.

"It is an uncharted course," Ms. Farenthold said after her election.

She called the convention "an historic occasion" and said it expands the opportunities for the women's movement "to bring desperately needed change in our society."

The former Texas legislative reformer lost a race for Texas governor last fall, got the second-highest member of vice presidential votes in the Democratic convention at Miami Beach and spent much of the fall campaigning for Sen. George McGovern.

She is back practicing law now in Houston, teaching law at Texas Southern University and starting a series of fundraisers to eliminate a $60,000 debt from her campaign.

She has said she'll consider running for public office again.

Still as a Democrat, and her Texas fans among the caucus delegates were ambivalent about her taking the caucus leadership because of the potential perils to her own political future.

A forecast of what might lie ahead came within minutes of her election when Chicano delegates from Texas' third-party movement, La Raza Unida, challenged Farenthold to pledge her efforts to help them recruit members.

"She could not give us this pledge this morning," shouted Martha Cortera.

Farenthold huddled briefly with Abzug, Steinem and Friedman, supporters who were beside her as the challenge was issued. Then she pushed her way down the crowded aisle to tell the Chicanos "Every group in this body has my commitment."

The increasingly separatist Chicano movement poses one problem for the caucus, which has been dedicated to uniting women of varying ages, incomes and political affiliations for their common good.

The Chicanos stirred up a ruckus with a controversial proposal they pushed through during a marathon business session which stretched from 7 p.m. Saturday until 3:35 a.m. Sunday.

In essence, they got permission for segregated caucuses to recruit members of their own groups and to "carry out unique and pressing social goals."

"It gets more and more difficult for me to justify being here," said Martha Cortera of Crystal City, Tex. "This move is crucial to our existence within the whole caucus."

The reaction was hurt in some quarters, especially in Texas.

After approving separation of caucuses along racial lines, the delegates then voted a contradictory mandate to require all caucuses to take affirmative action to recruit minorities in proportion to their population, or face challenges at the next convention a year away.

Women's Group Has Shaky Unity

HOUSTON (AP) — Despite tensions and recurrent threats of walkouts by racial and political minorities, the National Women's Political Caucus emerged from its first national convention far more unified than before.

Some wounds were opened in the sometimes raucous and oft-times painfully tedious process of determining the future of the 18-month-old caucus.

But the Republicans unhappy at anti-administration sentiments freely expressed by some delegates and the Chicano hostile to the new chairwoman, Sissy Farenthold, opted to stay rather than part ways.

Many of the 1,300 participants said they were returning to their homes to run for office under auspices of the caucus.

Betty Friedman, a founder not only of the caucus but of the women's rights movement, summed up the feelings of many about the frequent but productive caucus clashes: "The real politics is when you differ with people and fight them passionately—and know that they fought so hard because they cared—and you love them anyway."

Not that there aren't problems ahead, both in keeping the coalition coalesced and in balancing the loss of every "superstar" founder—Friedman, Reps. Bella Abzug and Shirley Chisholm—and Gloria Steinem—with the enlarged input from grassroots leaders.

"It is an uncharted course," Ms. Farenthold said after her election.

She called the convention "an historic occasion" and said it expands the opportunities for the women's movement "to bring desperately needed change in our society."

Woman Glad At Release
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
"I don't believe it!" cried Joy Jeffrey of Dallas today as she watched via television the arrival of her POW husband at Clark Air Base in the Philippines.

Maj. Robert Jeffrey stepped from the C141, moved down the airplane ramp and smartly saluted the flag.

"He looks just the same," Mrs. Jeffrey said. "They all look so wonderful! They look okay."

Her hands reached out to the television set and traced his outline across the television screen.

Such was the household drama as three planeloads of American prisoners of war, several of them Texans, arrived from Hanoi after their freedom from captivity.

Jeffrey had been a prisoner since his plane was shot down in December 1965.

Among the first Texans released were two other Dallas men, Maj. Warren Robert Lilly and Maj. Jerry A. Singleton, Lt. Col. Samuel R. Johnson of Plano, Maj. Robert N. Daugherty of Del Rio, Lt. Col. Thomas J. Curtis of Houston, and Capt. James E. Ray of Longview.

Johnson walked briskly down the ramp after his arrival on the third plane, smiled, and saluted.

"I couldn't believe how marvelous he looked," said his elated wife. "He looked so young and his salute was so snappy."

Johnson had been held captive since his plane was shot down in April 1966.

Singleton virtually bounded down the ramp to greet officials and was whisked away in a waiting bus to the military hospital at Clark AFB.

Singleton, shot down in November 1965, has never seen his son Rick, who watched the telecast with his mother, Bonnie, in the privacy of their North Dallas home.

Drugs Taken During Theft
Thieves broke into Barber Drug, 1600 N. Hobart, in the early morning hours Sunday, taking an undetermined amount of drugs and $50 in cash.

The owner of the store ascertained that Darvon compound, Valium and Torazine were among the drugs taken. An inventory was underway this morning to determine the amounts missing.

The cash was taken from the cash register.

Also taken was a carton of 100 syringes, leading officers to believe the break-in was the work of a drug addict in the strictest sense.

Officers have what they term a very good suspect in the case but are pursuing the investigation along several avenues.

Senator Launches Crusade On Taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — As an Oklahoma senator and member of the Senate Finance Committee, Fred Harris says, he often heard from large financial interests on tax matters—but never the public.

Now, he is going to try to change that.

Having failed to produce "tax justice" as a senator and presidential candidate, the 42-year-old Harris this week launches a crusade to reform the system from outside the government.

"People's Campaign for Tax Action"

Harris starts on the assumption, which he said is borne out by public-opinion polls, that a majority of Americans think the current tax system is unfair, that the average person pays too much and the wealthy too little.

Closing loopholes that aid the wealthy and business could produce an additional $77 billion provided current rates are kept, Harris claims, adding he wants to cut rates for lower-income persons. Thus, he said, the country would get "not just tax reform but tax relief."

How Do You Test the Schools?

By RALPH NOVAK

NEW YORK—(NEA)—It is easy to tell whether or not the money you paid for your new car was well spent—either the car runs well or it doesn't.

It is easy to tell whether or not the money you paid for pork chops was well spent—either they tasted good or they didn't.

It is not so easy to tell whether or not the money you are paying to educate America's children is well spent—nobody is quite sure just what it is we expect our schools to accomplish, let alone being sure of how well they're doing.

Everybody will probably agree that schools should teach children to read and write. But read what and write how well? Children should learn arithmetic and math but to what level? They should know science and social studies but what does it mean to "know" them?

These uncertainties add up to an enigmatic $50 billion question: are we getting our money's worth from our schools?

The most ambitious attempt to answer that question—at least in measurable terms—is the National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP). NAEP is a $3 million-a-year operation funded by the federal government and operated by an arm of the Denver-based Education Commission of the States, a cooperative that includes representatives of 44 states and territories.

After five years of planning under a Carnegie Corporation grant, actual testing began in 1969. A changing nationwide sample of about 100,000 people—groups aged 9, 13, 17 and 26-to-35—is tested each year. And one test is given every five years in each of 10 areas:

Art, career and occupational development, citizenship, literature, math, music, reading, science, social studies and writing.

NAEP officials meeting here recently to explain their project to representatives of the Association of American Publishers continually stressed two points: NAEP is only just emerging from a period of "staggering" indecision about the directions it should take.

It will be years before a comprehensive body of information will be available, since measuring changes over time in test performance is a vital part of the program.

The whole NAEP approach in fact seems to be one of treading superlightly in the controversial area of assessment.

It is controversial in a lot of ways.

Local school officials often fear that national assessment is part of some kind of federally-dictated curriculum, which ranks somewhere just above a return to the Ice Age on their list of unthinkable eventualities.

Teachers are leery about any kind of assessment, since it is often linked with "accountability"—the idea that teachers' performance should be rated on a tangible but simplistic scale more or less akin to a batting average.

(Such is the teachers' distaste for assessment that a statewide testing program in New Jersey last year caused a bitterly emotional protest by teachers' groups. The New Jersey Education Association Review called the testing "a straitjacket procedure that can only curb imagination and innovation among children and teachers in our classrooms." The furor contributed to the ouster of the state commissioner of education. And the three local teacher groups are part of a suit filed to prevent the state from releasing the test results, charging that to do so would be an "invasion of constitutional and statutory rights, as well as the right of privacy.")

And educators in general have raised increasing doubts in recent years about the validity of standardized tests in general.

These factors have no doubt influenced NAEP to take the gingerly approach it has adopted.

The results and analysis published thus far—in five of the 10 subject areas—have supplied no great surprises. Those who have done worst on the tests are people who are black, whose parents have the least education, who live in the Southeast, who live in the inner city.

But the NAEP officials stress that the value of their project lies in something more than reconfirming educational truisms.

They have even refused to break down the results into any narrower group than region of the country (Northeast, Southeast, Central or West) to avoid the inevitable furor that would follow school-by-school or pupil-by-pupil ratings and thus help quiet opposition from local school districts and teachers.

A key aspect of the project, NAEP director of exercise development H. A. Wilson says, is the use of "objectives." These are lists of detailed goals for all the subject areas, drawn up by committees of educators, consultants, scholars and "interested laymen."

The reading committee, for example, decided a successful reader should be able to: Comprehend what is read, analyze what is read, use what is read, reason logically from what is read, make judgments concerning what is read and have attitudes about and an interest in reading.

Those objectives were subdivided and used as a basis for creating the reading test; which was designed to measure how well American schools are meeting those objectives.

The reading test itself is far from a rehash of the traditional "apple, radish as orange; carrot" questions. Among its 500 exercises was a section on reading a television program guide, and one on understanding street signs and billboards.

The results are phrased in an accented—the positive framework. (The usual standardized test, employs a national median score and then rates a student either above or below that median, which means that by definition half the students finish in the "lower 50 per cent.")

The NAEP results rely on the number of participants who successfully answered an individual question. On the reading test given in 1971, for instance, 37.3 per cent of the 9-year-olds were able to tell which of a group of programs in a television listing was a rerun, while 68.4 per cent of the 13-year-olds, 83.9 per cent of the 17-year-olds and 84.2 per cent of the adults successfully answered that question.

How America's schools will eventually use the data collected by NAEP is another question, of course. But not very many deny the need for that data.

"It's easy to tell how well a learn-to-swim program is going," said Paul G. Campbell, director of the Educational Testing Service's center for statewide educational assessment. "You have a kid who's in the program jump in a pool and you'll know if he fails because he'll start to drown."

"That's the kind of measuring device we need in the rest of our educational system."

Students Make Honor Roll

CANYON—Seven students from Pampa are among 291 students named to the honor roll for the fall semester at West Texas State University.

Among those honored were freshmen Vicki Cobb, Brenda Vick, Pamela Balay and sophomores Thomas Watson and Doyle Gercken. Junior Mary Watson and senior Royce Teague were also named.

Miss Cobb is the daughter of F. W. Cobb, 623 N. Faulkner.

Miss Vick is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Vick, 1206 S. Finley. Watson is the son of Mrs. and Mrs. T. W. Watson, 820 N. Christy. Miss Balay is the daughter of Mrs. Evelyn Balay, 601 E. Francis.

Miss Watson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd F. Watson, 2320 Aspen. Gercken is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Gercken, 1314 E. Kingsmill, and Teague resides in rural Pampa.

Television And Radio

NEW YORK (AP)—Well, a television network finally has done a music show the right way.

CBS is the network and the right way, broadcast Sunday night, was a 90-minute aural extravaganza called "Duke Ellington... We Love You Madly."

It was an excellent, long-overdue tribute to a man who began notching his place in American musical history more than 40 years ago and still is going strong.

The only flaw in the show came early, when a six-member singing group had a little trouble staying together on an Ellington tune. But they hadn't worked as a group before.

They usually work solo under the names of Peggy Lee, Samy Davis Jr., Joe Williams, Sarah Vaughn, Billy Eckstine and Roberta Flack.

It was a happy show, made more so by the fact that its producer and musical director was Quincy Jones, a former mainstay in the trumpet section of Count Basie's orchestra.

Jones, now one of Hollywood's most gifted composers and arrangers, was given a free hand in choosing the musicians for the Ellington show. He didn't waste the opportunity.

The guys he picked for the band represented a who's who of jazz giants—men like trumpeter Clark Terry, guitarist Kenny Burrell, drummer Louis Bellson.

Most of them now are successful studio musicians, but the show wasn't just another job for them. They played their hearts out.

"It's impossible to describe the feeling and emotion that went into the show," said Williams, a fine blues and pop singer who spent six years as a vocalist with the Count Basie band.

It was an incredible array of talent—the lineup included Ray Charles and Aretha Franklin—that played and sang such familiar Ellington tunes as "Take the 'A' Train" and "Satin Doll."

The Duke, now 72, put in an appearance at the end of the show and got a standing ovation from the black-tie audience at the Shubert Theater in Los Angeles, where the show was taped.

More importantly, he got a standing ovation from the people who really count—the musicians working the show.

Dear Abby

A tribute to Harry Truman

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: On Dec. 26, just a few moments after I heard that Harry Truman had died, your CBS radio program came on and the entire program was your personal tribute to Harry Truman!

Were you in the studio at the time? I can't believe you spoke extemporaneously about Mr. Truman for five minutes without some preparation.

I was always under the impression that you taped your radio programs weeks—perhaps months—in advance of their broadcast dates.

If your tribute to Harry Truman was taped in advance, did you have a premonition (thru E. S. P. or some kind of psychic phenomenon) that Mr. Truman was going to die on that day, or was it an incredible coincidence?

It was not only a beautiful tribute, it was interesting and informative. If you have a copy of that script, will you please publish it in your column? I would like to keep it, since Harry Truman was one of my heroes, too.

CURIOS IN L. A.

DEAR CURIOUS: My tribute to Harry Truman was taped at the Hollywood CBS radio station long before his last illness, and it was sheer coincidence that I scheduled it to be aired on the very day he died. Altho I have some fairly accurate premonitions, I lay no claim to having E. S. P.

I read it from a script which I had written months ago. And here it is:

"Mr. Truman has long held a very special place in my affection. Altho I do not collect autographed pictures of celebrities, there is one hanging on the wall of my den of Harry Truman.

"We never met, but we have a mutual friend—Mr. David Noyes, who collaborated with Truman on his book 'Mr. Citizen.' Mr. Noyes told me that Bess and Harry enjoyed reading Dear Abby in the Kansas City Star, whereupon I told Mr. Noyes that I was a Truman fan, too. For one thing, my late father bore a striking resemblance to Truman—particularly in photographs. Same broad smile, thinning hair, and spectacles. In addition, my father was a devoted Democrat. I can still remember the horse laughs Abe Friedman got back in Sioux City, Iowa, when he predicted that Harry Truman would beat Tom Dewey in 1948!

"SO I ASKED DAVID NOYES [who was on his way to Independence, Mo.] to ask Mr. Truman to please send me an autographed picture of himself. I received not only one picture—but TWO!

"The first bore a huge ink blot on the bottom, where Truman's old-fashioned fountain pen had leaked [about midway thru the inscription], but the second picture was neatly inscribed, 'With kindest personal regards to Abe's daughter from Harry Truman, July 30, 1964.'

"When the name of Harry Truman is mentioned, some of his detractors will remind you that he couldn't even make a success of a little haberdashery business in Kansas City. They fail to mention (or perhaps did not know) that Harry Truman refused to file bankruptcy and let his creditors hold the bag. He paid back every cent—and it took him 10 years to do it!

"Not many people knew that after Harry's graduation from high school in Independence he received an appointment to West Point, but was rejected because of poor eyesight. However, he enlisted in the field artillery in World War I, saw action abroad, and returned a captain.

"HE MARRIED BESS WALLACE, his childhood sweetheart whom he had known since he was 7 and she was 6. When they were married, Harry was 35 and Bess was 34. Harry went into politics in 1922 when he was elected as one of the three presiding judges of Jackson County. And while Truman was a judge, he took law courses at the Kansas City School of Law, after which he decided to run for the U. S. Senate. And he won!

"After only 10 years in the Senate, Truman was chosen by Franklin D. Roosevelt to be his running mate in 1944. Together they won, and Harry S. Truman was sworn in as vice president in January 1945. Three months later, Roosevelt died, and Harry Truman became the President of the United States.

"At his first press conference, he said to newsmen, 'Boys, if you've never prayed before... pray for me.'

"When history is written, I think Harry Truman will be remembered as one of our greatest Presidents."

king and when West had to play his ace, South had no trouble bringing his impossible contract home.

Jim: "It wasn't too good a play. It would have cost him a trick if West held ace-king-jack, ace-jack-four, or king-jack-four, and could only gain for him if East held the appropriate three trumps and made the mistake of covering."

Oswald: "South agreed to all that. He explained that West was the sort of player who would have doubled four spades with the ace-king of clubs and two probable trump tricks and anyway his play worked, while the normal play would have been a loser."

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Oswald: "There is nothing wrong with deceptive play provided the deception works."

Jim: "In other words, nothing succeeds as well as success."

Oswald: "Here is a good example of a little mild deception which wound up as highway robbery."

Jim: "I assume that West started by playing the king and ace of clubs, whereupon declarer ruffed; entered dummy with the queen of hearts and led the queen of trumps."

Oswald: "As usual, you have figured out exactly what declarer did. Furthermore, the play worked. East covered the queen with the

Your Horoscope
By Jean Dixon
TUESDAY, FEB. 13
Your birthday today: Relationships all have to be re-developed as you go along, if you are to continue in them. Today's natives prefer technical pursuits such as photography, scholarly study of history and ancient objects.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Early hours bring out any competitive or quarrelsome tendencies among associates—your serenity determines the outcome.
Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Enthusiasm seems lacking, so you must do your work on faith and according to plan, without forcing issues.
Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Casual contacts bring you interesting trivia, perhaps the answer to a long-standing question. Get in touch with energetic types.
Cancer [June 21-July 21]: Whatever travel you do should be started early. You can persuade everybody into going along with any coherent plan.
Leo [July 22-Aug. 22]: With special consideration for the feelings of those about you, press forward vigorously with personal plans.
Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Diligent handling of routines, continuing projects, brings exceptionally good results. Nothing can be safely rushed.
Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Nothing is going to be easy or simple. Start early and stay with the main thread of the day's business and those already involved.
Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Get-rich-quick ideas float freely—see that you aren't taken in. Be firm and persistent in dealing with younger people.
Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Your more fluent personal energy lacks a convenient or satisfying outlet, at least during early hours.
Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Be brief and to the point if you must declare yourself, or present any argument. Your surprise is not shared by others.
Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Events move rapidly, perhaps with deceptive smoothness. Expect some discrepancy between what is promised and what is likely.
Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Small talk gets to be a medium of expressing diverse attitudes. Serious talk is almost certain to drift into argument.

The public debate is far from settled. The controversy is certain to continue on moral and religious grounds. But the Supreme Court's upholding of the legality of abortion throughout the country does have one immediate effect.

Decision Spurs Interest In Clinics

(First of Two Parts.)
By HELEN HENNESSY
NEA Women's Editor
NEW YORK—(NEA)—On Monday, Jan. 22, 1973 the United States Supreme Court ruled that abortions are legal anywhere in this country during the first three months of pregnancy.

seen in the movie, "Alfie." So right or wrong morally, the court's decision does mark the end of a period when it wasn't only the fetus that lost an opportunity to live but, in too many cases, the mother lost her life as well at the hands of sleazy abortionists.

Those who believe that abortion at any stage is taking a human life consider this decision to be a tragic one. But since hundreds of thousands of women see abortion as the only way out of a desperate situation, the opportunity to have it done legally by a reputable physician in a clean facility removes agonizing fears. It is a far cry from what still had to be tolerated in many states—shady abortion mills or the horror of resorting to a filthy hideaway as was pro-abortion groups is a woman's right to have complete control over what she wants to do with her own body—a more sophisticated approach to the problem than is the plight of the poor girl who feels she has no option but abortion (legal or criminal), or shame and poverty. For both reasons, Dr. Allan F. Guttmacher, head of Planned Parenthood, called the decision one that will be remembered for decades as the day that women gained freedom of choice that they should have had long ago. And now the moralists, both pro and con, can accept the knowledge that legal abortion is fact.

The court's dictum should spur the opening of new abortion clinics in many states. And it should ease crowding in the existing clinics in states where abortion is already a legal procedure.

Dr. Michael Levi, director of OBGYN (obstetrics and gynecology) clinic in New York said, "More than seventy per cent of our patients come from all parts of the United States and Canada." The big issue among the en's Health—a nonprofit, community-sponsored abortion clinic affiliated with the Montefiore Hospital and Medical Center—could be a model for clinics in other cities in respect to the medical, psychological and social services it provides. And whether one is for or against legal abortion, this frightening statement from a doctor who was a pioneer in the clinics field clearly points out the need:

"The birth rate in New York alone has only declined a fraction of a per cent. This means that of 200,000 women who have had legal abortions about 190,000 would have had illegal abortions and about 50 per cent of these women would have had serious complications."

Women Executives Still Rarity

NEW YORK (AP) — Just a year ago, it seemed that feminists were making gains in one of their most basic demands: equal employment opportunity. It appeared that the days of automatically relegating qualified women to clerical positions were over.

Long live the woman executive.

The women's liberation movement and its attendant publicity had made more employers aware that qualified women were available for top jobs. Pressure from women's groups and women already employed was mounting. Last April, the U.S. Labor Department's Revised Order 4, requiring many federal contractors to actively recruit and hire women at all job levels, became effective. For the first time, many companies were virtually forced to seek women for executive positions.

Some anticipated a spurt of demands for qualified women.

Fordey, Andrews & Haskell, a New York executive search consultant, set up a women's division. The Ms. Exec division of Anita Reiser Personnel Service and the MS (Management Services) division of Newtime agency were established to place women in executive, management and professional positions. Female-oriented recruiting conferences, symposiums and seminars came into vogue. The whole employment industry prepared.

But the big rush never came. Elizabeth Weld, director of search for women executives for Fordey, Andrews & Haskell, said: "Although a lot of lip service has been paid, things are not as we hoped."

Anita Reiser complained that "things aren't moving quite as fast as they could be."

Why? Miss Weld said that, since the summer, government pressure on big companies to hire women has let up.

"People just aren't knocking themselves out to place women," said Frank Hastings of Frank Hastings Associates, an executive search firm.

"Not enough consideration is given the fact that women and minority groups have not had the same opportunities for success as white men," said Jo Ganz of Ms. Exec.

"Employers not seriously interested in hiring women can insist on experience and edu-tion standards difficult for many job-seekers to produce. "One way of getting around the law is claiming that you can't find qualified women," Miss Weld said.

Anita Reiser and Jo Ganz put part of the blame on the lagging job market. "The timing is right in terms of the idea but not in terms of implementing the law," Mrs. Reiser said. "In the green years on Wall Street, we had less trouble placing women than now."

But Mrs. Ganz is optimistic that "once the economy picks up, women will get a piece of the action."

Naivete on the part of women was blamed by Newtime's Joan Baeder. "There are women who have been at corporations for years, and they're so brainwashed. They make $10,000, and they think that's it."

She encourages women to be creative and resourceful in their approach to the business world and advises that women still in college devise a program that would give them practical experience in their field and "a handle" when the time comes to seek a job.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, Ph.D., M.D.

Dr. Masters forgets that America's leading newspapers have taught couples the sexual pitfalls that cause divorce. Notice the sexual problems listed below which you readers learned from this "Worry Clinic" ever since 1935, even though Medical Schools ignored them!

CASE W-525: Dr. William Masters discussed another so-called "crisis" at a recent meeting of the AMA. It deals with sexual counseling.

Training in sexuality and sexual problems he says, was not offered at any American Medical School before 1960. And he claims 25 percent of such schools still do not offer such courses!

"Theological schools," he adds, "lag even further behind in preparing their graduates for expert sexual counseling."

NEWSPAPER PIONEERS

But hundreds of American newspapers had "jumped the gun."

For 30 years before Dr. Masters published his challenging book on "Human Sexual Response," the more progressive American newspapers were already offering our readers this "Worry Clinic."

Herein I have been releasing the factual medical and psychological data that Dr. Masters now belatedly urges upon members of the American Medical Association.

You readers thus can be very grateful that newspapers still take the lead in pioneering even professional, medical and theological teaching!

A generation ago, therefore, I taught you readers about the "Ponce de Leon Complex" wherein panicky men past 40 start chasing around with younger females as a tonic to their frightened erotic ego.

Who, moreover, explained to scared women that their womb (uterus) is not a primary sexual organ?

And showed that it is figuratively "excess baggage" on their sexual anatomy, much as the vermiform appendix is not vital to their intestinal efficiency?

Among the dozens of additional sexual facts (and fallacies) that this progressive newspaper has already explained for the general public, note these:

(1) Even apparently innocent wives who enter the divorce courts are at least 50 percent guilty, due to their sexual sins of omission!

(2) The human male is probably 4 times as erotic as the female, so a successful wife must feign much of her pseudo passion in order to hold her husband in contented matrimony!

(3) Many wives are apparently sterile (often for 20 years) not because of organic reasons, but merely failure to cohabit during that 6 to 12 hour interval in their menstrual month when conception can occur.

(4) Many other cases of sterility seem due to excess acidity of the female vagina, which can be remedied by using a heaping spoonful of baking soda per quart of warm water as a preliminary douche.

(5) Supposedly passionate women (nymphomaniacs) are either "putting on" a show of excessive erotic ardor for money, as is true of all clever prostitutes and call girls.

Or to compensate for an inferiority complex, due to sterility, breast amputation and other anatomical defects (real or imagined).

(6) Homosexuality is NOT innate, but is due to environmental conditions (often the initiation of the young by an older member of the same sex).

(7) Exhibitionism is linked with early childhood memories of the "Oh" and "Ah" reaction when a toddler walked into the parlor, a la nude.

(8) Impotence and platonic marriage are usually due to psychic inferiority complexes and can be remedied in one night by more seductive aggression by an intelligent wife.

(9) Marking of babies is an ancient fallacy.

(10) Tobacco curbs eroticism markedly.

(Always write Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a 10¢ stamp, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Today In History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Today is Monday, Feb. 12, the 43rd day of 1973. There are 322 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1809, Abraham Lincoln was born in what was then Hardin County, Kentucky.

On this date: In 1554, Lady Jane Grey who had been Queen of England for 10 days, was beheaded after being charged with treason.

In 1733, English colonist led by James Edward Oglethorpe landed at Savannah, Georgia.

In 1809, the scientist who developed the theory of evolution, Charles Darwin, was born in Shrewsbury, England.

In 1912, China became a republic as the Manchu Dynasty was overthrown by Dr. Sun Yat-Sen.

In 1914, ground was broken for the Lincoln Memorial in Washington.

In 1953, the Soviet Union broke off diplomatic relations with Israel after terrorists bombed the Soviet legation in Tel Aviv.

Ten years ago: Britain said it was prepared to provide trained personnel or port facilities for a NATO fleet of Polaris submarines.

Five years ago: U.N. Secretary-General U Thant discussed Vietnam peace prospects with Soviet leaders in Moscow.

One year ago: Britain was crippled by a coal miner's strike.

Today's birthdays: General Omar N. Bradley is 80. Actor Lorne Green is 58. Housing and building developer Samuel J. LeFrak is 55.

Thought for today: If a man owns land, the land owns him, Ralph Waldo Emerson, American writer 1803-1882.

1040 U.S. Individual Income Tax Return Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q Is it true that this year's Federal income tax return asks questions related to Federal revenue sharing?

A) Yes. Your 1972 Form 1040 and short Form 1040A ask two questions related to the sharing of Federal money with state and local governments. One question asks the location of your principal place of residence (state, county, locality & township); the second question asks for the number of your dependents who are filing a return of their own or who did not live at your principal place of residence at the end of 1972.

You must supply the correct information in your answers to these questions to ensure that your state, county and local community receive their rightful share of revenue sharing funds.

Q Does every taxpayer have to give his state, county, locality and township in answering the revenue sharing question on place of residence?

A) All of this information may not be required. Only certain states have townships and these are specified in your tax form instructions. If your state is not listed there, you can leave this column of your tax return blank. Secondly, there are a few places, such as Baltimore City, Md. and St. Louis, Mo., that are not within a county. Once again, these areas are listed in your instructions.

Unless you lived outside the U.S. on Dec. 31, 1972, you must enter the abbreviation for your state in the column provided. In addition, if you lived inside an incorporated city, town, or village, print the name of the municipality in the "locality" column. If you did not live inside the boundaries of such a location, check the box in this column.

Q Can you give me some tips on how to guard against dishonest tax preparers?

A) The IRS offers the following advice to taxpayers seeking assistance from commercial income tax return preparers: never sign a blank return; do not sign a tax return prepared in pencil because it can be changed later; do not allow your refund check to be mailed to the preparer; avoid the advisor who "guarantees" refunds, wants a percentage of the refund, or supposedly knows all the angles; and avoid the preparer who advises a taxpayer to overstate deductions, claim fictitious dependents or omit income.

In addition, taxpayers should insist that the tax preparer sign the return he prepares and enter his tax identifying number. Finally, be sure to keep a copy of your return.

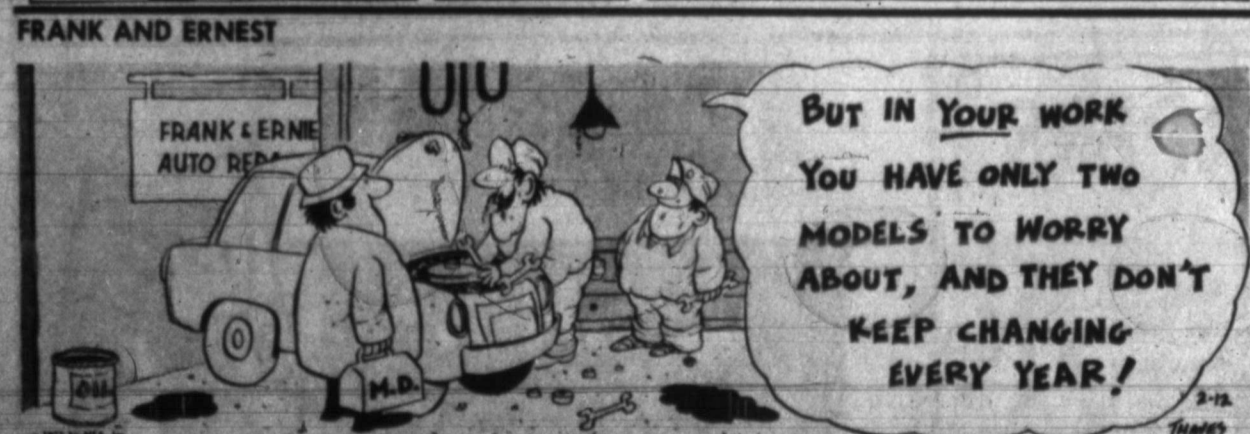

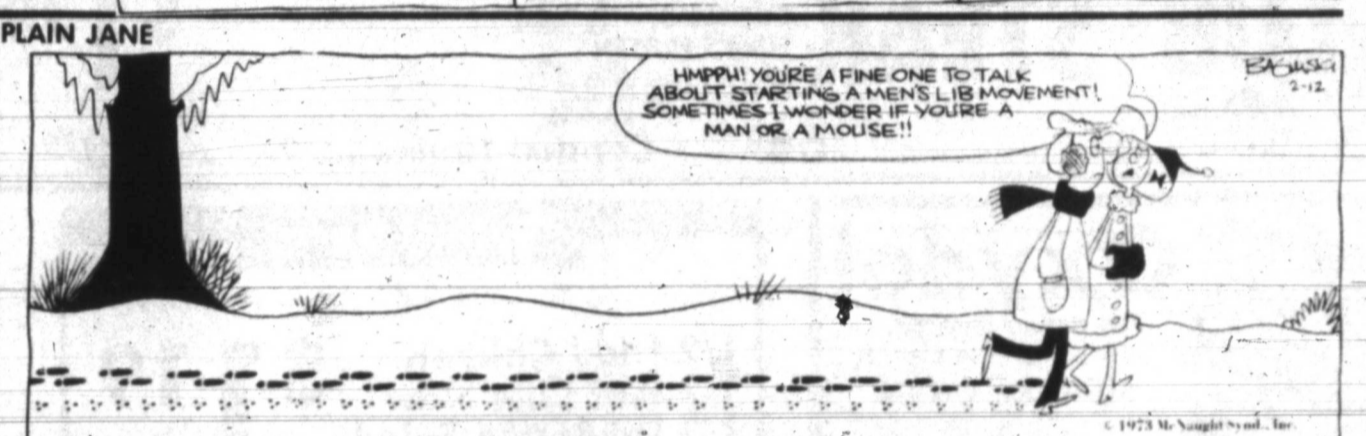

Q) What are the rules for deducting finance charges on department store revolving charge accounts?

A) You may deduct the "finance charge" levied by retail stores on your revolving charge accounts if the charges are based on your unpaid balances and computed monthly. Also, in the case of bank credit card plans, you can deduct the finance charge if no part of this amount is for service charges, loan fees, credit investigation fees, etc.

However, if you buy items on the installment plan and the carrying charges are separately stated, but the interest charge cannot be ascertained, deduct the lower of (1) 6 percent of your average unpaid monthly balance or (2) the actual charge for the year. For more details, see IRS Publication 545, "Income Tax Deduction for Interest Expense." Use the order blank on the back of your tax forms package to obtain a free copy.

Q) I had no income tax liability for 1972, but I'm filing a return to recover income tax withheld from my pay. Can I still designate $1 of the tax withheld towards the Presidential Election Campaign Fund?

A) No. You can only make the $1 check-off if you had an income tax liability. This does not mean that because you are getting a refund, you can't use the $1 check-off, but it does mean that you must be able to show tax on line 20 of your Form 1040 or line 21 of your short Form 1040A to use the check-off.

Ends 18-Month Drought

Palmer Wins Hope Golf

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — Arnie's back. The long, long victory drought is broken. Arnold Palmer is a winner again, the lingering doubts are gone, his head is up and the famed grin firmly in place.

Fittipaldi Wins The Brazilian Grand Prix

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil appeared well on the way today to another world championship driving crown after victory in the Brazilian Grand Prix.

The 26-year-old ace, who last year became the youngest driver ever to win the coveted Formula 1 crown, was delightfully cheered by the 150,000 fans who crowded the Interlagos Autodrome Sunday under sweltering Brazilian summer skies.

"Emerson, Emerson!" the fans screamed as their hometown idol waved a Brazilian flag as a sign of victory. Manager Colin Chapman of the John Player Special team leaped onto the track in joy as Fittipaldi crossed the finish line all alone in his Lotus 72D. "It was a good race," Fittipaldi said later.

Teammate Ronnie Peterson of Sweden, who won the pole position Saturday in record time, dropped out during the sixth lap after hitting a barrier.

The weather was cold, wet and windy for the final round of the $160,000 Bob Hope Desert Classic at Bermuda Dunes Country club, and Arnie was soaking wet. Yet, he said: "I thought it was a hell of a day, really. The sun shone all day."

Palmer had not won a tournament in 18 months before his final round of 69 produced a two-stroke triumph over the man who replaced him as golf's king, Jack Nicklaus, and 25-year-old Johnny Miller.

Nicklaus, who led or shared the lead all the way until the first hole of the last round of this 90-hole marathon, and Miller matched par on the rain-drenched course.

Palmer went ahead of Nicklaus by sinking an eight-foot birdie putt on the first green as Jack three-putted from 35 feet away. Later, however, came the suspenseful moments, and even Palmer, with all his experience admitted: "Well, I got a little excited. I was overly excited, I guess, coming down the 18th fairway."

Nicklaus had about a 30-foot putt for an eagle that everyone thought would force a playoff. The ball grazed the hole and Nicklaus said, "I thought I'd made it but it didn't go in."

Said Palmer, "Jack hit just a super putt. I had said to my caddy, since Jack had been putting so well, that he would make the putt. I was already intent on making mine."

"I asked Jack, 'what are you trying to do?'" he said, "I'm trying to beat you."

Then Arnie drilled a seven-footer into the cup for a birdie, eliminating all chance of Miller or anyone else following to catch him. He told Bob Hope, "Gee, I'm kinda shaking right now."

The victory, Arnie said, was his sweetest ever.

He credited a decision last week to go back to his old wrist-breaking putting stroke for his success.

Palmer, who had rounds of 71-66-69-68-69, 17 under par, collected $32,000. Nicklaus and Miller each won $14,800.

Edwards Signs

CANYON, Tex. (AP) — Tony Edwards, a 6-3, 230-pound all-state tackle at Tulia High School, has signed a pre-enrollment application with West Texas State University.

University officials said Edwards was sought by all the Southwest Conference schools, Oklahoma State and Oklahoma University.

"He is one of the top three defensive players in the state," a West Texas State University spokesman said.

Johnson Was 'Man of Rectitude'

Reporter Didn't Regret Thorpe 'Scoop'

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — It was not widely known that Roy Ruggles Johnson wrote what often is considered the greatest sports "scoop" of the first half of the 20th century. But the impact was worldwide and tragic and is still in the news.

Obituaries across the country carried the fact that Johnson, who died recently at age 89, wrote the story disclosing Jim Thorpe's professionalism.

Johnson was the county editor of the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram when he wrote the copyrighted story which broke on Jan. 22, 1913. He was tipped off that a man visiting relatives nearby was bragging that he managed Jim Thorpe on the Rocky Mount, N.C., baseball team in the Piedmont League. Johnson found the manager, who told him Thorpe, an outfielder, had been paid $15 a week. Johnson returned to his office, flipped through his Reach Baseball Guide and

The story resulted in the Amateur Athletic Union stripping Thorpe of medals and trophies he had won in the 1912 Stockholm Olympics (where he had won, incredibly, both the decathlon and the pentathlon).

Thorpe tried to explain: "I did not play for the money. I was not very wise to the ways of the world and did not realize this was wrong. I hope I will be partially excused by the fact I was simply an in-care schoolboy and did not know. I was doing what many other college men had done, except they did not use their own names."

His medals were never returned and his name has not been restored in the Olympic record book despite various efforts through the years. Today, a group headed by former Yankee pitcher Allie Reynolds, also an Oklahoma Indian, plans to petition

President Nixon to plead the case to the International Olympic Committee.

Don Johnson, son of Roy Ruggles Johnson, said in a phone interview that his father supported the idea that Thorpe's name and medals be restored.

"My father felt that the AAU was too strict," said Don Johnson, now an executive with the Worcester Telegram. "There were other athletes playing for money under assumed names in those days and Thorpe was simply guileless to that."

Did Roy Ruggles Johnson ever regret writing that story?

"I'm sure he didn't," said Johnson. "The old gent—that's what my brother and I called my father—was a man of rectitude and high moral principle. He felt it was his job as a newspaperman to write the story."

"He never boasted about the scoop. He rarely talked about it. In fact, I didn't know he had written it until I was in college."

And he never exploited it. He never wrote magazine stories about it. A year after the story broke he did get a job with the Boston Globe, but he didn't even get a writing job. He got a desk job, and I'm sure it had nothing to do with the Thorpe story."

It was the lone scoop in Johnson's life. He went on to write some 3,000 columns for the Globe on Yankee folklore. Meanwhile, he followed Thorpe's career, which went from football and major-league baseball to drunkenness, destitution, three marriages and, finally, death in an obscure trailer at age 64.

Johnson, himself a teetotaler, continued to believe in the sanctity of the free press, according to his son.

"It was the classic example of a dedicated newspaperman doing his job," said Don Johnson. "It takes a lot of integrity to tell the truth when the truth is unpalatable, as it so often is."

"I was always glad about one thing for my father. That was what happened when he met Thorpe. It was in 1952, forty years after the Stockholm Olympics. The Boston Globe sponsored a Sportsman's Show. Thorpe came, since he was a great flyer. Someone got the idea to bring him up to the office to meet my father. They had never been face-to-face before."

"My father said, 'Jim, I'm proud to shake your hand. I always thought you were the greatest athlete that ever lived.' Thorpe bore no rancor to my father. 'You were only doing your job,' said Thorpe."

Thorpe died one year later. In Washington, Grace Thorpe, a daughter of Jim's, said recently, "No, I don't think the loss of the medals or the fact that his name was taken off the record books made much difference to Dad. He felt that his achievements were proof enough of his abilities."

"But I would like to get the medals back to put in the Indian Hall of Fame in Kansas. And I'd like Dad's name restored in the official books. It would be for Indian kids, something for them to try to emulate."

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

JIM THORPE an Olympic standout and an All-American football player with Carlisle College in 1912, left. Then a reporter, the late Roy Ruggles Johnson, revealed that Thorpe had played pro baseball, which led the Amateur Athletic Union to strip Thorpe of his Olympic medals and records. But by the time of their first face-to-face meeting in 1952, Thorpe, at left above, could smile at Johnson.

Rutgers University Seeking New Football And Cage Mentors

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Rutgers University, which dismissed its football coach and athletic director two weeks ago, is in the market for a new basketball coach.

Dick Lloyd, who took over as head coach last year, announced Sunday that he was quitting at the end of the current season. Lloyd refused to disclose his reasons for leaving, but indicated in a statement that pressure from the fans and the press was at least partially responsible.

"This was a personal decision which I have been contemplating for some time," he said. "No pressure was applied by any administrator of the University."

"I am saying this because I

Rod Milburn Sets World Indoor Mark

HOUSTON (AP) — Olympic gold medalist Rod Milburn has plans to become a two-platoon man—pro football in the winter and pro track in the summer that is.

Milburn highlighted the fifth annual Astrodome Federation Indoor Championships Saturday with a world indoor record 13.3 time in the 120-yard hurdles.

He then spiced the conversation by suggesting he might parlay his track-and-football talents into a $100,000-per-year salary.

Milburn, who holds the world outdoor records in the 120-yard and 110-meter hurdles, said he should be worth about $65,000 or $70,000 for football and $35 to $40,000 on the pro track circuit.

"I don't expect to go out there and be a super star in one year," Milburn said. "But I think I've got the basic things and I can develop the other skills necessary."

Milburn, who played only one year of college football, his senior year, at Southern University, was drafted in the 13th round by the Los Angeles Rams as a wide receiver.

"It'll be just like track," Milburn said. "I dedicated myself to track and expected to be rewarded. I have been. I know I have the speed. That's one thing for sure."

Milburn's performance highlighted the fifth annual meet, run over the Astrodome's one-fifth mile track, the largest indoor track in the world. A record 15,394 crowd watched the show that also included two meet records.

Al Feuerbach, the world indoor record holder in the shot put, broke the Astrodome record with a heave of 68 feet 6½ inches. Olympic silver medalist George Woods was second.

Olympic long jump winner Randy Williams of Southern Cal extended the Astrodome record to 26 feet ¾ inch.

Other crowd-pleasing performances included Dave Wottle's 4:00.3 victory in the invitational mile; a 9.4 victory by Jamaican Olympian Don Quarrie in the 100-yard dash and world indoor record holder Steve Smith's winning 17-foot pole vault.

Basketball Roundup

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Here come the Boston Celtics. There go the Boston Celtics.

The Celtics had the Milwaukee Bucks coming and going Sunday with a fast-breaking offense and ran away with a 120-96 National Basketball Association decision.

"I guess you could say that we just ran out of steam," said Milwaukee Coach Larry Costello. "We were tired. We were also beaten."

John Havlicek, Dave Cowens and Paul Silas helped spark the racehorse offense as Boston charged to an easy victory over the Bucks, who were playing their fifth game in six days and their third in 48 hours. The Celtics clinched it with a 35-point third period.

In Sunday's other NBA games, the Atlanta Hawks whipped the Cleveland Cavaliers 115-107; the Golden State Warriors beat the Chicago Bulls 101-96; the Seattle SuperSonics beat the Buffalo Braves 128-125; the Los Angeles Lakers blasted the Philadelphia 76ers 108-90 and the Baltimore Bullets bounced the Portland Trail Blazers 102-97.

Saturday's NBA results: New York 107, Detroit 93; Chicago 102, Kansas City-Omaha 101.

Toscano Helps

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — Arnold Palmer was putting so poorly that he tried almost everything.

Finally, he said, he got a tip that helped him break an 18-month victory famine in Sunday's Bob Hope Desert Classic.

It came from a non-winning pro, a career struggler and a man who's putting so poorly himself that he's even turned around and is going after them left-handed.

That's Harry Toscano.

"I played with Harry in Hawaii," Palmer said. "He said, 'why don't you go back to using the stroke you used to have?'"

"So I did. I went back to wrist-putting, just like I used to. I'd been trying to arm-putt, keep the wrist locked. Hell, I tried everything."

"I guess this worked. I made the putts I had to make."

And Harry? Well, he missed the cut for the final round, didn't make a check, is still looking for his first tour victory—and is still putting left-handed.

Bullish on central air conditioning? Consider investing just a little more in a long-term, blue chip Gas air conditioning system.

Only a Gas air conditioning system pays you regular dividends for many happy years. That's because the heart of a Gas cooling system is a simple gas burner, rather than an electric, mechanical compressor. A clean-burning gas flame doesn't wear out—so there's less to go wrong, fewer maintenance calls, a longer life with no loss of original cooling capacity. And because natural gas is the prime energy source, you'll also save money on operating cost.

Call one of our air conditioning specialists this week—before the summer market becomes really active. He'll make a free, no obligation, survey of your home and give you a quotation on the cool investment.

Lincoln's Birthday

Lincoln's Birthday, February 12, calls to mind the life of a great American, the first President to repeatedly attack slavery as immoral, the only President who had to hold the States together under such trying conditions.

He had only one year of formal education. Whatever else he acquired he "picked up from time to time," he said, "under the pressure of necessity." That he was born in a simple log cabin is true, though his family was no poorer than the average small farmer in Kentucky in those days, struggling for food, warmth and protection against wild animals and inclement weather.

Though his mother died when he was nine, he later paid her one of the greatest tributes ever paid to anyone: "Whatever I am or hope to be, I owe to my angel mother." When asked by a reporter about his early life, he remarked that it would be a great peace of folly to attempt to make anything out of it. "It can all be condensed into a single sentence," he said, "and that sentence you will find in Grey's 'Elegy'—the short and simple annals of the poor. That's my life, and that's all you or anyone else can make out of it."

Yet when the renowned Senator Stephen Douglas agreed to debate him, Douglas confessed to his Chicago associates that in clarity, force, and dexterity Lincoln was the toughest opponent who could be brought against him. Douglas got a taste of Lincoln's repartee when he said to his towering, 6'4" opponent on the platform: "How long do you think a man's legs ought to be?" Lincoln replied: "I think they ought to be long enough to reach the ground."

Wrote the New York Evening Post: "Stir him up and the fire of his genius plays on every feature. And you have before you a man of rare power and of strong magnetic influence. He takes the people every time, and there is not getting away from his sturdy good sense, his unaffected sincerity, and the unceasing play of his good humor, which accompanies his close logic and smooths the way to conviction."

He kept referring to the containment of slavery and "its ultimate extinction." Seven slave states seceded from the Union between the time of his election and his inauguration. Four more states seceded later. His immediate problem was preserving the Union, an issue he settled once and for all. In 1864 he was re-elected with the overwhelming electoral vote of 212 to 21.

His second inaugural address was on the theme of reconciliation: "With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in, to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle and for his widow and his orphan, to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations."

Final victory came a little over a month later when Lee surrendered to Grant on April 9, 1865. Five days later he was killed. It was tragic loss, as events proved for the South as well as the North. May his memory never dim in the minds and hearts of all Americans, whose Union he preserved.

The Customers Always Write

Dear Editor:

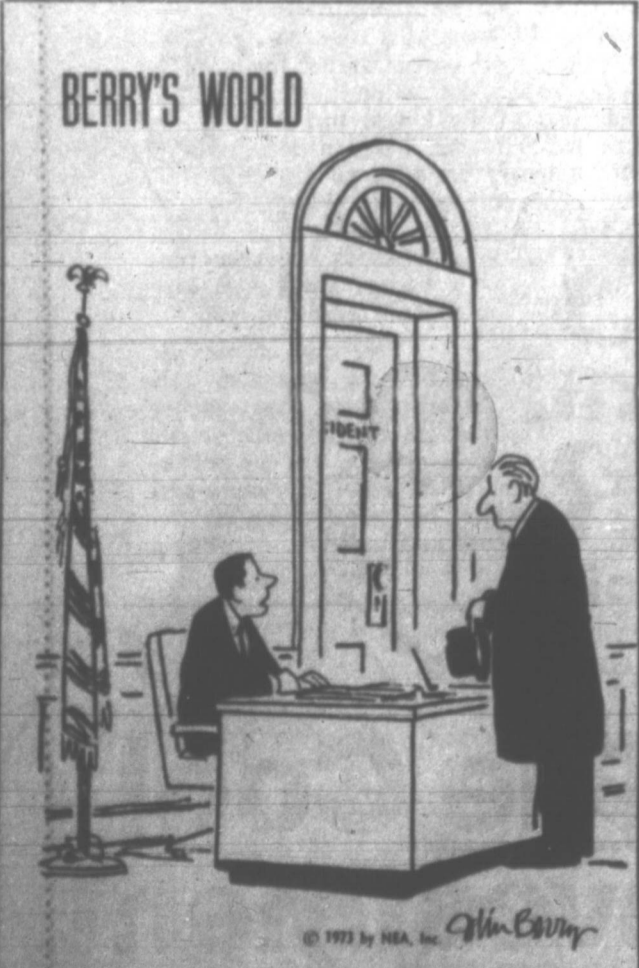

The United Nations has failed miserably to halt terrorists around the world. It has failed to take action against Uganda, where about 50,000 Asians are being deported. It has failed to take action against Russia and China for denying human rights and civil rights to their enslaved populations. It is a flop.

But don't think for a minute that the United Nations is idle. Through the United Nations Association, its propaganda arm, it is promoting a plan to enlarge its development fund for a total of $11,973,000 in five years. This fund is being developed "quietly, with little fanfare."

These tremendous funds are to be used to "redirect our national priorities...to stimulate citizen action...to activate cooperative programs commanding the attention of policy makers." Briefly, this is to furnish propaganda support for the ailing and ineffective United Nations.

Don't be "redirected" and "stimulated." Our government must not continue to pour billions down this rat hole, thus further increasing our already skyrocketing taxes.

Sincerely,
C. C. Moseley

Master Plot To Terrorize The Nation?

By PAUL HARVEY
Is there a master plot to terrorize the United States? There was in the 1940s.

There was a co-ordinated international Communist conspiracy with the avowed purpose of distressing our society and subverting our government.

It didn't. Instead, our American society demonstrated the vigilance and the resiliency to survive. And the conspirators, held to no gain, began fusing among themselves. Until what's left of world communism is a shambles of divisiveness, contradiction and intramural conflict.

But what of this new wave of terrorism? Is it co-ordinated? Were the suicidal snipers atop that New Orleans hotel who shouted "Power to the people" as they killed people part of a larger conspiracy? Louisiana's attorney general thinks so.

Louisiana's attorney general, William Guste, says he is convinced "there is an underground, nationwide suicidal organization of terror, the purpose of which is to foment dissatisfaction, to bring race against race, black against white, young against old, thus to create internal national chaos."

He got a promise from U.S. Atty. Gen. Richard Kleindienst to employ "the full force of the Department of Justice to determine whether there is such a national group."

Well, there is evidence that recent New Orleans violence is interrelated. Arson and shooting there the past two months do fit a pattern.

But mass killings during the past nine months have been worldwide. It was Japanese hired by Arabs who killed 25 and wounded 76 at that airport in Israel last May. At the September Olympics they were Palestinian guerrillas.

And stateside there appears to be no link between the sniper in the tower at the University of Texas and the butcher of student nurses in Chicago.

And the carnival of death by Manson cultists in California and the doctor who killed his family in Santa Cruz and the insane man who wiped out the Bentley family in Phoenix.

In June in Cherry Hill, N.J., it was a Pinkerton guard who shot at anybody, killed six, wounded six.

So if the recent rash of arson and murder in New Orleans is "organized," this other assorted madness appears unrelated—except "the devil made 'em do it."

And when all our criminologists and psychologists and sociologists have done their best to relate, to explain, to justify what they call "antisocial behavior," maybe they'll listen to the still small voice which they've been so determined to talk down.

Plentiful Pot

"Did you ever notice a story in a recent issue of the daily newspapers? It was the young man, I forget exactly where, that a few months ago had asked a judge to put him in jail so he could kick the drug habit. Now he's on record as asking the same judge to let him out of jail because drugs are easier to get and more plentiful inside the lockup than out. So what's the answer? I for one sure don't know, but I do believe as long as there is a lot of money being made in drugs, the traffic will never be stopped. If somehow the profits can be taken from drugs, the problem will just go away in a short time."

Nixon's Medicare Cost Rise for Aged A Congress No-No

By BRUCE BLOSSAT

WASHINGTON (NEA)—One of 1973's less likely prospects is enactment of President Nixon's budget-time proposal to saddle Medicare beneficiaries with a larger share of medical costs. The added burden might come to a billion dollars a year.

Social Security-Medicare is one realm where Congress has a successful record of bucking the White House. It has rammed big benefit increases down the President's throat, and has previously rejected cost-sharing propositions like the one now at issue.

In the administration's special budget analysis on Medicare, it asserts confidently that "cost-sharing provisions are being reformed to reduce financial burdens of lengthy hospitalization while providing stronger incentives against inappropriate or uneconomic use of services."

Translated, that means the White House thinks too many elderly, folk eligible for Medicare's hospital insurance seek hospital care, either on their own initiative or upon encouragement by doctors.

If the beneficiaries have to pay more in the early stages, it is argued, they'll be "more aware" of the financial load and more likely to seek other means of treatment.

But key men on Capitol Hill believe assistance under Medicare already has severe limits. They view any move to stiffen them further as possibly destructive of the law's purpose.

Under present law, anyone 65 or over and otherwise eligible for Social Security benefits automatically is entitled to Medicare's hospital insurance. Those eligible have to pay the first $72 of charges, but then Medicare picks up the tab for most services through the first 60 days of their hospital stay.

For 30 days after that, the eligibles must pay $18 a day toward their hospital expenses. Normally, the "benefit period" for a single spell of illness ends with that 90 days.

But the law also gives beneficiaries a "lifetime reserve" of 60 extra hospital days to draw upon. If an eligible person stays on beyond the 90-day period, he must pay $26 a day for each day used up. And, once the lifetime reserve is "spent," the beneficiary can never call upon it again.

In other words, if he returns to the hospital in a later spell of illness, Medicare benefits will end after 90 days.

Under Mr. Nixon's proposal, the beneficiary would begin by paying not a flat $72 but whatever a given qualified hospital chose to charge for the first day's room and board. It might be less, in the case of some municipal hospitals, but it is more likely to be more. The present $72 is Medicare's determination of "national average cost."

Furthermore, the President would have the beneficiary thereafter pay 10 per cent of all hospital charges, including room and board, for the first 60 days. As indicated, Medicare's insurance today covers most of those charges.

Some specialists in this field believe that this provision would encourage hospitals to load short-stay beneficiaries with charges for drugs, tests, radiological services, supplies, nursing and medical social services.

Mr. Nixon would also hit the beneficiary harder on Medicare's "medical insurance," covering doctor bills and other expenses. He would boost the initial deductible (cost borne by the beneficiary) from $60 to $85, and require him to pay 25 per cent of subsequent charges instead of the present 20 per cent.

It is a proposition with little appeal for a Congress that in 1972 adopted some 95 amendments directly aimed at getting hospital and doctor bill expense under some reasonable control. Charges have risen enormously since Medicare took effect in mid-1966.

Victory at all costs, victory in spite of all terror, victory however long and hard the road may be; for without victory there is no survival.—Sir Winston Churchill.

Inside Washington

Reputation Comeback: Shows Up in 1974 Budget

By ROBERTS ALLEN

WASHINGTON — Buried unnoticed in President Nixon's new budget is an unexpected nugget for some 900,000 military retirees.

It's a $360 million item earmarked "reputation of military retired pay."

Inclusion of funding for this long-sought objective is a total surprise. It was unknown even to members of the Senate and House Armed Services Committees—until apprized by this column.

Particular significance attaches to this projected allocation for two reasons: (1) It was incorporated in the budget expressly at the President's direction. A knowledgeable inside source is authority for the information that former Defense Secretary Laird did not favor reputation funding, and initially it was excluded from the budget. But this adverse stand was personally reversed by the President.

It is noteworthy that Defense Secretary Elliot Richardson, at his first press conference, in response to a question indicated he is not opposed to reputation.

(2) The President put money for reputation in the budget despite the recent special House Armed Services subcommittee report against reputation. Notwithstanding the strongly unfavorable findings of this five-member bipartisan panel, the President unequivocally opted for reputation by providing $360 million for that purpose in his otherwise "austere" budget.

Only one inference can be drawn from these revealing background facts: The President is prepared to approve reputation legislation if it is passed by Congress.

In other words, attainment of reputation is now squarely up to Congress.

That is clearly and conclusively signaled by the inclusion in the budget of the money necessary for a "one-shot" reputation formula.

This is the most promising advance in the decade-old fight for reputation.

Although the funding hasn't been fanfare and is still virtually unknown, it is now officially a part of the President's budget, and what happens next rests with Congress.

If it passes the required legislation, reputation of military retired pay will become a reality.

There is no lack of bills and measures for that purpose in both the House and Senate—including an Administration plan.

It is the product of an Interagency Committee, headed by former Assistant Defense Secretary Roger Kelley, that was set up by the President in 1971 to consider the reputation problem and what to do about it.

After months of deliberation, it unanimously recommended a "one-shot" plan based on Jan. 1, 1971 pay rates.

This proposal was submitted to Congress early last summer, but nothing was done about it—chiefly because of the opposition of the chairmen of the Senate and House Armed Services Committees. Finally, in October, when the special House Armed Services subcommittee held hearings on the issue, the Administration's formula was expounded by Lt. Gen. Leo Benade, Deputy Assistant Defense Secretary for Military Personnel Policy.

In his detailed presentation, Gen. Benade stated the Interagency Committee had concluded reputation was justified for two primary reasons:

"A one-time pay adjustment is called for because of the circumstances under which reputation was abruptly discontinued in 1958. Also because it is only in recent years that military pay has achieved a generally competitive level with pay elsewhere. The Interagency Committee believes the deficiencies in the present levels of retired military pay should be corrected, and thereafter the CPI (consumer price index) method should be used."

Gen. Benade conceded this plan does not "provide for a return to full, continuing reputation." But he held it "would equitably recognize the financial plight of our older retirees."

"The Administration," he concluded, "considers this a reasonable and responsible proposal to solve the financial problem experienced by our older military retirees. Early enactment of legislation along these lines is strongly recommended."

Under this formula, retired pay based on scales in effect Jan. 1, 1971, would be recomputed as follows:

Permanent disability retirees whose disability is rated 30 per cent or more would be recomputed immediately; less than 30 per cent—age 60 if retired with less than two years' service, at age 55 if retired with 25 or more years' service. Nondisability retirees at age 60 if retired with less than 25 years' service, at age 55 if retired with 25 or more years' service.

Under questioning, Gen. Benade estimated the present number of military retirees at around 900,000, of which 130,000 are officers, and 770,000 enlisted men.

Who's For It

Last October, in the closing days of Congress, the Senate by an overwhelming 82 to 4 majority attached an amendment by Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., to a multi-billion dollar military procurement authorization bill to recompute retired pay as of Jan. 1, 1972. Subsequently, this proposal was discarded in the secret deliberations of a House-Senate conference committee.

Strikingly indicative of such sweeping support by rank-and-file House members is the statement the other day by Rep. William Alexander, D-Ark., 40-year-old Korean war veteran. He bluntly told the House:

"The retired military pay system instituted in 1958 was a breach of trust with the men and women who have served our nation loyally and well in the armed forces. I say it is downright deceitful to encourage men and women to make military service a career with one kind of pension program in operation, and after they have retired, to change the rules to penalize them for their trust."

A number of other rank-and-file legislators heartily echoed these views.

MARLIN CAUGHT OFF CALIF.
SAN CLEMENTE ISLAND, Calif. (AP) — The first black marlin ever landed in California waters was harpooned recently by commercial fisherman A.C. Sears while he was hunting swordfish.

The 638-pound, 10-1/2-foot-long fish was caught east of San Clemente Island, at least 800 miles north of the species' usual habitat. Heretofore the tip of Baja California was considered the northernmost boundary for black marlin distribution.

Curacao, Aruba, and Bonaire in the Caribbean have inadequate rainfall that quickly drains away from the islands' porous soil, the National Geographic Society says. The islands must distill their fresh water from the sea.

Federal Regional Commissions Do Badly, Get Budget Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration is cutting off fresh money for all but one of the nation's federal-state regional commissions, once ambitiously deployed as part of Lyndon B. Johnson's Great Society.

Congress established the commissions in the mid-1960s as a conduit for money and plans for developing economically lagging sections of the country. The commissions produced plans in abundance, many prepared by well-paid officials and consultants. Much of the $175 million the commissions have spent went to studies on enhancing the economies of various regions.

The rest of the money was enough only to whittle away at economic problems besetting such regions as New England, the Ozarks, the Upper Great Lakes, the Coastal Plains of the South and the Four Corners section of the Southwest.

Created separately from commissions for these regions was the independently funded Appalachian Commission. The administration is keeping it alive and wants $273 million for it in the next fiscal year.

Independent studies and government audits have criticized the way that the other commissions monitored a number of their contracts and handled some of their millions. Audits of four of the commissions cited a general failure to require staff personnel to account for their time.

Another criticism is that no attempt ever was made by Congress or the executive branch to evaluate the estimated costs of the commissions' long-range development plans.

That criticism was embodied in a 1972 report by the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations, an independent federal agency.

Another report, by Arthur D. Little, Inc., a private firm, said the accomplishments of the commissions were disappointing and raised serious doubts whether they could achieve their objectives.

The commissions "are not taken seriously by the major federal agencies which administer large outlays in the regions," the report said.

Lull Gives Good Time For Check

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — The winter lull is a good time for self-examination, a good time to check up on whether you are forging ahead or falling behind in your career.

The really ambitious man does this constantly, but no matter how careless or slipshod the life you lead, you need to take a critical look at your life plan at least twice a year — either before or after you see your dentist.

Are you progressing or retrogressing? Here is a simple home test that will give you the answer and save you the trouble and expense of going to a psychiatrist or career counselor.

You're still climbing the wave of achievement if: You're such a hero to your valet that he asks you to sign a new page in his autograph album every morning.

When you go away on a trip, your wife still puts in your socks and pajamas little endearing notes such as, "I will always be your girl," and "sleep well tonight, lover boy."

At the other end of the journey, when your mistress unpacks your bag and finds the notes, she gets jealous.

Your name at the head of the list of contributors guarantees the success of any charity drive.

The golf pro at your country club seeks your advice when he finds that his putting game is a bit off.

Yes, sir, the world is your oyster. Keep going the way you are. But how do you tell if you're slipping? You might consider making major changes in your modus vivendi.

You don't even know what modus vivendi means.

Nobody else in your class shows up the evening you are scheduled to make your first speech in your Dale Carnegie course.

Every morning you have to borrow money from your fellow office worker so you can rush to the bank and make a deposit to cover the check you wrote the day before.

When you go into your favorite bar, the bartender you are too cheap to tip turns to another customer and says in a loud stage whisper, "Look who's here — Mr. Bad News himself."

After reading this column, you sit and brood about who could possibly have told me about you.

Questionable practices cited in audits of the commissions include:

—The Four Corners Commission turned over a $100,200 planning job to a contractor who provided a team without any trained planners to do the work.

—The same commission hired consultants without knowing in advance "what to expect in charges."

—The Coastal Plains Commission doubled the funding for a project without explanation after determining that at the original price the project wasn't worth the money.

—A $25,000 contract by Coastal Plains with the state of Georgia for a governor's intern program during fiscal year 1971 was renewed again in fiscal 1972 although "the project file did not contain any type of evaluation review regarding the performance and results of the project."

—The New England Commission frequently hired consultants at $200 per day, while Commerce Department policy limits such payments to about $122 per day.

—A $90,000 contract awarded by the Ozarks Commission included $42,000 for professional services, but the auditors said they found "no evidence in the contract file that the contractor was required to provide a detailed breakdown of the cost for professional services or other evidence that the proposed costs were reasonable."

The studies and reports spawned by the commissions called for the expenditure of billions of dollars to stem unemployment and improve the economies of the various regions.

But except for the Appalachian Commission, Congress never provided the huge funding the studies and plans called for. And it's doubtful if the Nixon administration would have spent the money if it were forthcoming.

While the commissions developed long-term plans for regional development, the Commerce Department, the commissions' parent agency, anticipated their demise. Last year it sought a relatively modest $40 million appropriation for the Commission that a department spokesman called "holding pattern" money.

That demise was signaled two weeks ago when the administration's new budget for fiscal 1974 lopped off new money for the commissions.

As such, the commissions are only one of several Great Society programs that the administration seeks to phase out.

Robert E. Ruddy, who oversees the commissions for the Commerce Department, said before the budget was announced that they were not in line with the administration's goal "of returning maximum decision-making to state and local governments."

So, instead of the commissions, the budget calls for each state to get $200,000 to help support economic development activities without federal involvement.

The only hope for a continued federal role in the commissions is in Congress, which plans a one-day hearing in February to consider extending them for a year. Chances for success of such an effort are up in the air.

Governors of 29 states affiliated with the commissions recently formed an organization to lobby for them.

Congress authorized creation of the other commissions after the Appalachian Commission was proposed. Many legislators wanted for their areas the same federally backed benefits aimed at Appalachia, one of the nation's poorest regions.

But unlike regions represented by the other commissions, Appalachia has received hundreds of millions of federal dollars in part because it includes 13 states which have notable combined political muscle.

Another reason the other regions never got the money Appalachia did was that their commissions "never designed the kind of things which would lead to (Appalachia-like) funding," according to Dr. J. L. Barry, a University of Chicago professor, who has studied the commissions.

Appalachian Commission projects have included highway development, vocational training and health programs.

Commerce Department audits, the independent studies and interviews with commission officials disclosed that:

—The commissions frequently did not determine the practicality or regional impact of their studies and proposals and often failed to follow up on projects or monitor contracts properly.

—About half of the commissions' $175 million went to supplement grants of larger federal agencies. But the commissions often did not insure that their specific requirements were included in contracts let by the larger agencies.

—The commissions rarely have initiated development projects by providing basic financing, as they eventually had the power to do.

Responding to criticism, spokesmen for most of the commissions say they have contributed to such facilities as industrial parks, airports and vocational centers in various regions.

And although tangible goals such as lowering unemployment and closing income gaps have been set by the commissions, the spokesmen say they haven't had the money to do much, particularly to follow up on planning.

Aside from the separate Appalachian Commission, the five original commissions are New England; the Ozarks (134 counties in Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas and Oklahoma); Coastal Plains (159 counties in North and South Carolina and Georgia); Four Corners (92 counties in Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico and Utah); and the Upper Great Lakes (119 counties in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan).

In one form or another, the manta is found in the tropical and subtropical parts of all the oceans and of the Mediterranean Sea.
