More than 2,000 killed in gas leak in Cameroon

YAOUNDE, Cameroon (AP) — At least 2,000 people were killed by toxic gas seeping from a volcanic lake in northwest Cameroon, and survivors were fleeing the area and being evacuated, the government said today.

There was no word on the number of injured. A 17-member Israeli army medical team arrived in this West African nation today as part of international relief efforts that the Cameroon government said would also involve the United States, Britain and France.

"As far as we know, volcanic activity is still going on," medical team leader Dr. Michael Weiner told reporters on the plane from Israel, which was carrying Prime Minister Shimon Peres for a state visit. There has been no official government report of volcanic activity.

Cameroon Information Minister Georges Ngango told reporters that military authorities in charge of rescue operations filed a preliminary report of at least 2,000 dead.

He said villagers from a wide area were being evacuated and others were fleeing, and that rescue workers were wearing gas masks. Ngango said the death toll could rise as rescue workers advanced into the affected area.

rea. On Sunday, the government said the toxic fumes killed 40, although travelers from the area said as many as 1,000 may have died.

The leak of hydrogen sulfide — a flammable, colorless gas which smells like rotten eggs — from Lake Nios near Wum, about 200 miles northwest of Yaounde, the capital, was a "geological castastrophe," a government communique said Sunday.

Hydrogen sulfide is often found in volcanic gases. It is often formed during the decay of animal matter decay. Lake Nios lies in a volcanic crater.

At least three villages were affected by the leak, which began Friday, according to a communique read Sunday over state television. President Paul Biya toured the region Sunday and declared it a disaster area, the communique said.

The Cameroon government called for international aid to cope with the disaster and said the United States and Britain agreed to supply logistical support for evacuation of villagers and "appropriate types of equipment." France offered unspecified help.

Foreign technicians and equipment were expected to "get into effective rescue operations" by today, Sunday's communique said.

Weiner said the Israeli team would try to set up a base outside the contaminated area and treat casualties as they were brought

Peres, interviewed during the nine-hour trip from Israel, said that when he offered to bring a medical team and supplies, Biya "was very excited and appreciative."

The back of the plane was filled with bottles of oxygen and boxes of medical equipment.

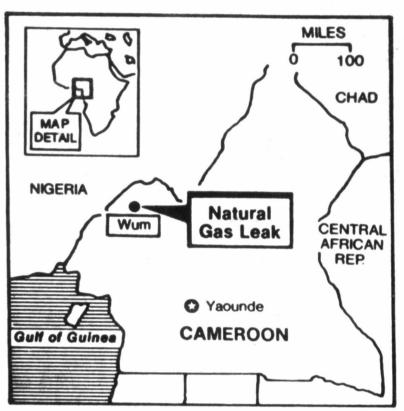

A Western diplomatic source, speaking on

A Western diplomatic source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said there was still no precise information on the disaster, adding, "Local attention right now is focusing on Peres. The issues are being treated next to each other, but in the capital, it (the gas leak) is less present."

Peres was expected to announce a resumption of diplomatic relations between the two countries during his four-day state visit to this tropical country.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman said Sunday, "We are prepared to provide assistance to the government of Cameroon based on what we've seen from press reports. The Cameroon government will be assessing the damage, and at that point we'll know what the needs are."

Cameroon is an oil-producing nation the size of California with natural gas reserves estimated at 3.5 trillion cubic feet. It has a population of 9.2 million, including the members of 24 tribes who predominately work in agriculture.

SPY ARREST — Gennadiy Fedorovich Zakharov, a Soviet employee of the United Nations, is led by FBI officials after he was arrested at a Queens, N.Y., subway station Saturday. Suspected of being a KGB agent, he has been charged with espionage after being set up by a defense worker he tried to recruit but who went to the FBI instead. (AP Laserphoto)

International conference to review Chernobyl accident

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A weeklong conference of 500 nuclear industry officials from more than 50 countries convenes today t dius a 382-a666221ern Ukraine is closed, but some of the contents of the report have already been made public by the news media and the Soviets.

"More information will probably come out in dribs and drabs during the course of the week," said an official of the sponsoring International Atomic Energy Agency, a Vienna-based U.N. organization that provides expertise and support for the peaceful uses of nuclear energy.

The Soviets have said human error was almost exclusively to blame for the steam and chemical explosions that tore open Chernobyl's No. 4 reactor on April 26.

nobyl's No. 4 reactor on April 26.
The accident at the plant 80 miles north of Kiev killed at least 31 people, released radioactivity over much of the world, forced the evacuation of 135,000 people and caused $2.8 billion in damages.

The 28-member Soviet delegation is headed by Professor Valery Legasov, deputy director of the I.V. Kurchatov Institute of Atomic Energy, the nation's leading nuclear power authority.
Western diplomats, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Legasov would likely be asked to elaborate on the report, which was prepared in two parts. The first explains the accident's causes and the second is a supplement describing the reactor design, medical and environmental consequences of the accident and the decontamination project.

The agency official said East-West tensions are unlikely at the conference because it will deal mainly with technical issues.

Legasov told reporters Thursday at a news conference in Moscow that shortly before the accident, workers at Chernobyl were testing how long a turbine could be kept operating during a simulated power failure at a nuclear reactor.

Workers committed six safety violations responsible for the two blasts, he said. For example, they turned off the reactor's automatic shutdown system and the emergency cooling system, he said

At the news conference, Soviet officials said the disaster dealt a serious blow to the country's nuclear power program.

Soviet spy developed contact legally

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1983, a Soviet employee of the United Nations chatted up a college student, but the relationship did not become illegal until three years later with an exchange of classified information, the FBI says.

The charges against Gennadiy Fedorovich Zakharov after his arrest on a subway platform Saturday night illustrate how the Soviets often maintain legal contacts with Americans before pumping them for secrets, the FBI says.

"The Soviets and their surrogates have an insatiable appetite for our scientific, technical defense information," Lane Bonner, spokesman for the FBI in Washington, said Sunday night. "Academic contacts are not unusual. Often, they are not outside the law."

The unidentified Queens College computer science student notified the FBI as soon as Zakharov approached him, authorities said.

Zakharov, who authorities said does not have diplomatic immunity, could be sentenced to life in prison if convicted on espionage charges. He's scheduled to be arraigned today in federal court. Zakharov, assigned to the United Nations Center for Science and Technology for Development, told the student he needed assistance in obtaining material on robotics and computer technology and for two years paid him thousands of dollars for unclassified information stolen from libraries and other sources, the FBI said.

After the student, a U.S. permanent resident, graduated, he went to work in September 1985 for a New York firm that is a subcontractor for defense contractors Bendix and General Electric, something Zakharov allegedly had encouraged him to do.

The company manufactures unclassified precision components for military aircraft engines and in radars.

On May 10, Zakharov offered his contact a 10-year contract that called for obtaining classified information that could not be obtained by a citizen of the Soviet Union, the FBI said. The informant signed the contract.

City commission to hear wastewater, economic reports at Tuesday session

Pampa city commissioners will hear reports on the wastewater treatment plant and an economic analysis of the city during their regular meeting at 6 p.m. Tuesday at Lovett Memorial Library

The evaluation study of the Pampa Wastewater Treatment Plant was prepared by CH2M Hill, Inc., of Dallas under contract with the city.

The study concerns needed improvements in procedures, equipment, repairs and facilities at the plant and recommends a number of projects to bring the plant up to state and federal standards.

CH2M estimates costs for the projects, including contingency funds and fees, at $771,000, but City Manager Bob Hart has stated he feels the actual costs, paid by revenue bonds, will be closer to $650,000.

The economic analysis of the city is jointly funded by the city and the Pampa Industrial Foundation. The report, to be presented by Terry Moore, is one of the efforts being undertaken by the city and local businessmen to devise an overall economic development program for the city, along with the Main Street Project and the TEXCEL (Texas Cities for Economic Leadership) program.

Hart said Pampa Industrial Foundation members, Pampa Chamber of Commerce members, Leadership Pampa graduates and other interested citizens are invited to attend the meeting to hear the economic analysis report awarding bids relative to the purchase of 6 inch and 8 inch PVC pipe;

In other new business, the commission will consider:

- approving and accepting art

city work to be located in Coronado Park;
nted - adopting on first reading an ordinance amending part of the Southern Standard Mechanical Code for the city;
- adopting on first reading an ordinance relative to levying ordinance relative to levying assessments against various persons for improvements in portions of the Rachel Addition (Harvester Street); -approving a resolution author-approving a resolution authorizing issuance of revenue bonds for the wastewater treatment plant projects; and lant projects; and

- approving two accounts payable.

In old business, commissioners will consider:

- adopting on second reading an ordinance granting a Specific Use Permit for a lot in the North Crest Addition for an automatic car wash; and

- authorizing warrants for payments to Wagner and Klein for architectural services, to Wiley
Hicks Jr., Inc., for City Hall rehabilitation work, to Kelley Engineering for engineering services and to Lewis Construction
Co. for street and drainage improvements.

Local school students must enroll by Friday

With the 1986-87 school year little more than a week away, Pampa students and parents have until Friday to enroll.

Assistant Supt. Jane Steele said students new to the Pampa district should contact their building principals as early in the week as possible to facilitate appropriate placement.

Schedules are being mailed to students already enrolled at Pampa High School and Pampa Middle School (grades seven through 12. Sixth grade students should report to the middle school auditorium at 8:30 a.m. Thursday for classroom assignments and orientation.

All elementary students (grades kindergarten through fifth) should report to their buildings from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m. Thursday for classroom assignments. Buses will run at their regular pick-up time and will begin taking students home at 10:30 a.m. on enrollment day. Classes begin Sept. 2.

High School Principal Oran Chappell said voluntary orientation for incoming freshman will be held in the high school library from 7:30 to 9 p.m. tonight and Tuesday. Chappell said the orientation is not required but any freshman interested in learning more about the high school is wecome to attend.

Pampa faculty began inservice education this morning in the Heritage Room of M.K.
Brown Auditorium, with Supt.
James Trusty in charge of the general faculty meeting. Building faculty meetings and departmental meetings will be held at designated times during the five-day in-service training.

Program topics this year include sessions and workshops on the Texas teacher appraisal system, child abuse, dyslexia and the discipline management plan.

'Business After Hours' today

The second monthly Pampa Chamber of Commerce "Business After Hours" will be held from 5:30 to 7 p.m. today in the foyer of the M. K. Brown Auditorium.

Chamber President Bill Duncan said it will be a come-and-go affair.

This month's event is sponsored by the Coronado Community Hospital.

Duncan said the "Business After Hours" occasion is relatively new to this area.

"It is an informal get-together of businessmen to meet prospects and customers, compare notes, relax, talk shop and, in general, have a good time," he said.

The first "Business After Hours" was so successful that the Chamber plans to hold one each month, Duncan noted.

Anyone, whether a Chamber member or not, is welcome and invited to attend, Duncan said. He urged everyone to bring their business cards to pass out to those in attendance.

Refreshments and hors d'oeuvres will be served. Admission is $3 for Chamber members and $5 for non-members. Chamber board members and Gold Coats will be present to act as hosts and hostesses and to visit with anyone about the work of the Chamber.

Admission may be paid at the door.

Newspapers new forum for finding adoptable children

WACO, Texas (AP) - When Bill and Marian decided to adopt a baby, they followed the lead of a growing number of people across the nation

They took out a classified ad. The Connecticut couple, working from a list supplied by an attorney, recently picked out about 20 cities across Texas, including Waco. Then in the newspaper section most associate with used cars and garage sales, they put in an ad for a baby.

Two similar advertisements ran beside the one that Bill and Marian — both of whom are in their late 30s, articulate and college-educated — took out in the Waco Tribune-Herald on Aug. 17. But why is the "baby chase" spreading to newspaper advertising's bargain basement? 'It works,'' says Laurel Strassberger, a volunteer with Families Adopting Children Everywhere, a group that dispenses information on private adoption. 'My first reaction was, 'How gross!' But I've gotten used to it," she said. "It seems viable once you get past the commercialism. A couple needs a child; a mother needs to place her child; and the child needs a home. It serves everyone.

One of the tricks to placing a successful classified baby ad, advocates say, is to advertise in rural towns rather than cities. For best results, though, they recommend advertising in any place that has a college Bill and Marian, who asked the Tribune-Herald not to use their last name, have received an average of one phone call a day since they placed their ads in Texas newspapers.

They says they chose Texas because it allows private adoptions. The couple's home state does not.

'We can have a finalized adoption, there and bring the baby back to Connecticut," Marian said. "Our state is perfectly wellpleased with the adoption at that point.' Couples who want to adopt babies are trying new ways to find them because of the delays they encounter at adoption agencies. It can take years just to get on an agency list. Once there, it can take several more years to get a baby, and some couples end up waiting more than 10 years. The National Committee for Adoption, which urges couples to adopt through agencies, estimates that 2 million couples each year want to adopt a baby. Somewhere between 50,000 and 80,000 couples do.

That has led to an unquantified black market, but "for the most part, couples are very careful to follow the law," Ms. Strassberger said.

"There's a simple reason for that," she added. "When they want to tell the child how the. adoption came about, most people would rather not say, 'I bought you on a parking lot.''

Placing an ad for a baby is illegal in Connecticut, Massachusetts, Delaware, Michigan, Minnesota and North Dakota.

States that do allow ads for babies restrict the flow of money between couples and a pregnant woman or "birth mother," as she is commonly called in the adoption field.

Couples may offer to pay medical expenses, hospitalization, rent and — in some states but not Texas — compensation for lost wages to a birth mother in return for being allowed to adopt

Adoptions are expensive, evenusing classifieds.

Weeds Fire Prevention responsibility

By BOB HART Pampa City Manager

The Fire Prevention Office, with Fire Marshall Tom Adams, has assumed responsibility for control of high weeds and all other potential fire hazards such as rubbish.

If you have problems or a combish, please call and report them to Adams at 669-6441.

Labor Day will be coming up one week from today, and city offices will be closed. However, the landfill will be open for your use and convenience. If you want to do that last-minute cleaning, the landfill will be open all day

Labor Day.

As you may recall, the city and the Pampa Industrial Founda tion recently voted to jointly fur an economic analysis of Pampa. The report will be formally presented to the Pampa City Commission at 6 p.m. Tuesday during the regular commission meeting at Lovett Memorial Library.

I would encourage you to n to attend the meeting to hear the presentation and to ask any questions you may have.

The M. K. Brown Swimming Pool will remain open until Saturday, Aug. 30. Many lifeguards are leaving to attend college, but we are making every effort to keep . the pool open through Saturday.

TEXAS/REGIONAL

Reviews are mixed on Sunday shopping

DALLAS (AP) — A sagging state economy has made it almost impossible to tell whether the repeal of the Texas blue law almost exactly one year ago has stimulated retail sales, officials say.

Sunday has become the day many families prefer to head to malls to shop together for clothes, electronic products and furniture—major purchases requiring joint decisions, retailers say.

But the state comptroller's office, which is working on a study of the repeal's impact, has found the slumping economy makes the statistics almost meaningless, says Tony Proffitt, the office's director of tax informa-

"I don't know that anyone has a handle on it," he said. "We're really unsure."

On Sept. 1, 1985, the 24-year-old blue law prohibiting sale of most goods on Sunday was repealed after the Texas Legislature voted for the change. Measuring the effect is tough; gauging opinions about it isn't.

Retailers' attitudes toward Sunday shopping are almost the same as they were last year, says Mickey Moore, executive vice president of the Texas Retailers Association.

Those who wanted the extra shopping day continue to like it, while those who opposed it still think it is a bad idea.

"Sunday business is good, but a lot of merchants will say it is transferring business from other days of the week," he said.

Sanger Harris spokeswoman Becky Powell said the department store hasn't seen a significant increase in business, but views Sunday as a popular customer service. Less than 10 percent of Sanger's weekly business comes on Sunday, she said.

"Our premise, as it was a year ago, is that people have X amount of dollars to spend, and will spend the same amount over seven days as over six. That is just what has hapneed."

At J.C. Penney, spokeswoman Ellise Pierce said Sunday sales are from 6 to 9 percent of weekly business — and only 2 percent of that is considered plus business Penney wouldn't have gotten on another day of the week

But not all stores see Sunday shopping as a Mervyn's is more positive: Vice President Rick Lodwick said he has seen minor increases, but enough to be beneficial.

"I feel good about Sunday opening," he said. "It gets better and better every week." And for stores selling popular and more expensive products such as electronic gear, Sunday is second only to Saturday.

"It's a superior day," said Scott Marlow, manager of a Federated Electronics store in Dallas. Sunday sales alone have boosted his store's sales about 18 percent over last year, he said.

But others say the expense of opening on Sundays cancels what they describe as little return.

"It comes out of our Saturday afternoon and evening business. It's not been beneficial, and it has added to our expenses," said George Gray, store manager at Woolf Bros. in NorthPark Center. "It helped during the holiday season, but the rest of the year it's a reduction of our weekday business."

Other stores are managed by owners who feel Sunday should be reserved for worship and for families. Dallas-based Weir's Furniture, which has run large advertisements on its position on Sunday shopping, doesn't care if it loses sales.

"We have a conviction about being closed on Sunday," said Dan R. Weir, son of Weir's founder. "We feel that it's the Lord's day ... and people should have a choice of worshipping the Lord."

A definitive answer on the effects of Sunday shopping, meanwhile, will take a while to form, Moore said.

Third execution within week scheduled

Wicker, who turns 38 on Thursday, faced lethal injection before dawn Tuesday for the August 1980 slaying of Suzanne Knuth.

The 22-year-old woman was abducted from a shopping center while walking home after her car had broken down. Eighteen days after her disappearance, she was found face down in a shallow grave on a Bolivar Peninsula beach near Galveston.

"That fellow is guilty as hell," said James Hury, who prosecuted the case. "He went and knowingly and willingly took that woman out of Beaumont and did horrible things to her and buried her. You don't bury somebody who you think is still alive. You don't bury somebody if you hope somebody can find them and give them a decent burial."

Wicker's execution would come seven days after Randy Woolls was executed for killing a drive-in movie cashier and four days after Larry Smith was put to death for killing a Dallas convenience store worker.

He would be the eighth Texas inmate to die this year and the 18th, more than any other state, since the Texas resumed the death penalty in 1982. Nationally, he would be the 65th to die since the Supreme Court allowed the death penalty to resume in 1976.

death penalty to resume in 1976. Wicker, whose record includes convictions for rape, aggravated assault on a female and auto theft, has won two previous stays of execution.

On Saturday, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans rejected his request for a reprieve, sending the case to the Supreme Court.

Bruce Griffiths, an American Civil Liberties Union attorney handling Wicker's case, said the appeal contends the death sentence in Texas is not applied equally on the basis of race.

Specifically, someone convicted of killing of white person is more likely to be sentenced to death, he said. Attorneys also are challenging the legality of confessions Wicker made to police.

State District Judge Larry Gist, who presided over Wicker's trial and set the Tuesday execution date, said the issue of the confession already was rejected on direct appeal. The question of race never was a factor in the case, he added. Wicker is white, as was Mrs. Knuth.

"In this case, Wicker had availed himself to every conceivable legal avenue to seek relief and was represented at all times by very competent lawyers," Gist said. "No court anywhere has ever found any merit in any of the contentions.

"I personally believe in making sure we've done the right thing. In this case, there comes a time when reviews have been so extensive there shouldn't be any more. The punishment should be carried out. It's appropriate in this instance."

Wicker, a Los Angeles native who had lived most of his life around Galveston, was arrested in Houston as he got off a bus from California. Family members who knew he was being sought tipped police to his arrival, Hury said.

"Police put him in a car, questioned him on the way down and he made all kinds of statements implicating himself," said Robert Coltzer, his courtappointed trial attorney.

Wicker, a ninth-grade dropout who served two years in the Marines in the mid-1960s, has refused repeated requests for interviews.

A psychiatrist who interviewed him testified that Wicker had been involved with drugs for several years and had been collecting pornography since he was

"He tended to spend a lot of time daydreaming and fantasizing about sexual activity," psychiatrist Edward Gripon testified.

Model builder makes buildings come to life

By DARYL WATSON Stephenville Empire-Tribune

STEPHENVILLE, Texas (AP)
— Building scale models of historical buildings sounds like serious business. But there is something light-hearted in the materials Wayne Sherrod uses for his replicas — Frosted Flakes boxes, Breeze detergent boxes, record album covers and milk jugs.

Sherrod had set his hobby aside for nearly eight years until some skeptical friends — building models of rockhouses using matchsticks and pebbles — didn't seem to take his high school hobby seriously.

To prove the replicas can be made of the throw-away materials, Sherrod pulled his dusty collection from the shelves and took it to the friends. One look at the detailed work and the skeptics were believing.

Returning to the craft, Sherrod hopes to finish a project that had several obstacles when he began in 1976.

Sherrod wants to complete a replica of the Baptist Church that used to be on Tarleton Avenue, but the fate of the church and a large house that was adjacent to the structure seems to be a mystery

"I can't figure out how a huge old house and a huge old church can vanish off the face of the Earth and people not know what happened to it." he said.

happened to it," he said.

Sherrod has replicated the front of the structure by referring to a picture he found at a garage sale and 1976 news clippings by local historian Dr. C. Richard King.

Sherrod said he can't truly recreate the back side of the church without more information.

One project that Sherrod didn't have so much trouble with was a replica of the Old Presbyterian Church.

Sherrod measured the dimensions while the structure was being moved to the local museum grounds. He actually helped with the church's belfry which gave him more insight, and he was able to construct the interior of the chapel.

The model, with lighting inside, has been on display at the relocated church, at an antique shop and other places, Sherrod said.

Stephenville High School art

Stephenville High School art students for the past seven years recognize Sherrod's work by another model that he donated to art instructor June Visstzky.

It's a scale replica of The Munsters television show's haunted house. The model is used by Ms. Vissotzky's students as a study reference in architecture.

How does one create a replica of something that's only flashed across the TV screen occasionally?

"I watched the Munsters a lot and sketched real fast," Sherrod said, "You've got about a 30second shot of the house every day."

We're just doing our jobs

Several years ago, while working on another of the Freedom newspapers in Ohio, I had the occasion to ask a county commissioner why he was not seeking a third four-year term.

This commissioner, a well-known businessman who had the ability to be a good county official as well as a fairly sharp politician, looked at me for several minutes before answering:

"When you have been in this job long enough and have made many decisions, eventually you make everybody mad. I feel I have reached that point."

Sometimes those of us in the newsroom area of the newspaper business feel the same way, when some of our readers continually complain about the job we are doing — or as those who often don't want their names made public contend — we are not doing.

As professionals we endeaver to gather all of the facts possible on any given story and present them as objectively and as fairly as possible. Often it is impossible to obtain all of these facts because they are either withheld from us or because of the pressure of time.

There is a a saving in the newspaper business that the press doesn't wait on anyone, so at times the story must be written with the facts which are available when deadline arrives.

A former editor of The Pampa News, James Dean, while we were working on that same newspaper in Ohio, used to tell members of the newsroom staff we were not doing our jobs unless we were making someone mad.

It seems that fact of life is one of the occupational hazards of the newspaper business.

If you are presenting the facts, without taking sides or showing favoritism to some person are group, it will always make someone unhappy. There are always those who want only their side of the story told, they don't want the other side of the issue made public.

There there will be those who do not want everyone else in town to know they have been arrested or those who do not want it known they are trying to undertake a questionable activity.

Then there are those elected or appointed public officials who try to keep their official actions from the public by having closed-door meetings or use some other means of keeping the tax-paying public from finding about all of their activities.

And, when we start writing about our personal beliefs or ideas in

And, when we start writing about our personal beliefs or ideas in these columns, it is almost impossible to not have someone disagree with you.

That is what makes the United States so great, each of us can have our own ideas and can disagree. Those of us working in the news business can write what we please without having some government official or censor tell us we cannot or force us to write only what the government wants the people to know.

It is this exchange of ideas and freedom of speech which has made our country different from most of the others throughout the world. In some of the other countries, we wouldn't even dare to think out loud, much less write what we think.

As Dan Murray noted recently, we put our names on top of our columns. It is only fair to ask that those persons writing letters complaining about what we write sign their names. If the letter is to be printed in the paper we must have the signature — we will withhold the name from publication if requested.

unless you put your name on a letter written to me, I won't even bother reading it.

And, unless you know me personally, please don't refer to my character or lack of it wooden tables and chairs.

Only the hospital beds and a wheelchair tip off visitors to what the grandmotherly founder says is the second hospice in the country to admit only dying AIDS patients.

"We want it to be homey, you see," explains Eleanor Munger, who turns 75 this week. She proudly gave a tour of the sixroom home in a tree-lined residential Montrose neighborhood during an open house Sunday.

during an open house Sunday.

The hospice, called Omega House, will provide medical, spiritual and psychological care for homeless victims in the terminal stages of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, she says.

An average of 15 to 20 AIDS patients in the Houston area need hospice care but can't afford it because the illness has cost them their jobs and depleted their savings, administrator Ken Durham says.

Omega House will take in patients regardless of ability to pay, and will start with three beds and expand to 10 when she and others raise more money, Ms. Munger

"We have a religious instruction to care for the sick and castoffs," executive director Michael Shuff says. He calls AIDs patients "20th century lepers." Omega House will get its first two patients within a week. One man will have a companion care for him in one bedroom, Ms. Munger says.

"The lover needs to work in the daytime but he wants to care for the patient at night," she says.

Dr. Robert Awe, who treats many AIDS patients as chief of pulmonary medicine at Jefferson Davis Hospital, will serve as Omega House's staff physician and will direct a volunteer staff that includes four other doctors.

About 16 volunteers will provide nursing and other patient care, Ms. Munger says, adding that she knows of only one other hospice caring solely for AIDS patients — the home Mother Theresa started in New York.

She says she decided to open the house when she visited AIDs patients at a hospital as a volunteer and heard many of them lament that they couldn't die at home.

"I felt called to do something instead of of sitting still and wringing my hands," she says. The grandmother of two who taught at a Montessori preschool until she retired last year says she does not fear caring for AIDS patients.

Everyone involved is determined to make the hospice succeed, although it is operating on a shoestring budget from money contributed by individuals and Episcopal and Presbyterian church, Shuff says.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Home work ban should be ended

Sol Chaikin, the president emeritus of the International Garment Workers Union, sat down with William Brock recently to try to convince the Labor secretary that if the government lifts its 43-year ban on commercial work in the home, all sorts of cruelties will result.

Brock, who is reviewing the ban and is expected by Washington insiders to favor its abolition, should seize the opportunity to strike a blow for free enterprise and come out in favor of striking down the archaic prohibi-

Indeed, it's hard to see how anyone other than a union official could support a law that makes it illegal to work in your own home. Nevertheless, that's Chaikin's position — and he's using the arguments most likely to appeal to government bureaucrats.

—The government will lose tax revenue. Because many home workers in the garment industry would become self-employed contractors for their former employers, it would harder for the government to collect income taxes since it would be up to each employee, not the company, to withhold tax money. No matter how attractive to bureaucrats, that really shouldn't be the reason for keeping the law in place.

—Another argument designed for no one but the bureaucrats is that work at home makes it nearly impossible to enforce labor laws. Chaikin warns that commercial work in the home is a close cousin of the garment district sweat shops of old.

But if the very people the labor laws were written for choose to ignore them, should it be government's job to tell them they are wrong? Of course not. Chances are, it is the particular law, not the worker, that is mis-

-Home workers threaten the jobs of plant workers. Sure, but plant workers can just as easily become home workers, if that's what it takes. The real rub here is that home workers tend not to be union members, while plant workers do. Home workers threaten union membership, not jobs. Work at home is also one of the benefits widely promised these days by the computer communications revolution. People working on computer terminals at home and communicating with offices via modem could well be happier, more productive, more efficient than workers in an office environment. This may not be for everybody, and perhaps it is unlikely that more than a relatively small percentage of the work force will ever be full-time "telecommuters." But why should those who prefer such an environment and can find somebody willing to pay them be precluded by law from the possibility? Supporters of this law seek to stand althwart progress hollering "Stop!"

'We're not living in sweat-shop days anymore," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who has introduced a bill that would repeal the ban. Indeed we are not. We anxiously await Brock's arrival on the bandwagon of free enterprise.

Jean Harris should be freed

WASHINGTON-I have been reading Jean Harris' abbsorbing autobiography, "Stranger in Two Worlds,"and now renew my appeal to New York's Gov. Mario Cuomo to grant her clemency. It is a terrible waste of a mind to keep her longer confined.

Memories are short, and most newespaper readers probably have forgotten Jean Harris. She is the former headmistress at the posh Madeira School in Virginia. In 1966, she fell madly in love with Dr. Herman Tarnower. During the rough course of their 14-year affair, he treated her with a contemptible combination of affection and cruely. Some men treat hound dogs the same way. Eventually, as author of the best-selling "Scarsdale Diet," he gained fame. On the night of March 10, 1980, she gained

That was the rainy night in which she drove from Virginia to Tarnower's home in New York. Distraught, despairing, half out of her mind with the pangs of disprized love, she had executed her will and tidied up her affairs at Madeira. In her purse was a pistol. Her intention was to bid him farewell and then to kill

Everything, by her account, went disastrously wrong. In a struggle, four shots were fired. Two bullets went wild, but one struck Tarnower in his right hand and another struck him in the chest. Early in 1981, a jury found Jean Harris guilty of murder. The sentence was 15 years to life. Since March 20, 1981, she has been New York State's Prisoner No. 81-G-98

It is pointless any longer to argue the question of "guilt" or to rehash possibly perjured testimony, or to review the errors of counsel. The jury did not believe her story. The jury evidently believed that she made the fatal trip intending to kill both herself and her faithless lover. Her story rings true to me, but let it go. Her book's remarkable value lies not in her selfserving defense, but in her gripping account of what life in a women's prison is all about. As she was told, "it ain't no tea party.

For the inmates, life is mostly an unlending regimen of small humiliations and frequently senseless rules. Her "security" is the be-all and end-all. Thus in the name of security, prisoners in 1983 could get homecooked chicken through the package room, but not corn on the cob. In 1984, they could get corn on the cob, but not homecooked chicken. One year, the women could wear their own sweaters in the visiting room but not their own blouses. Then the rule was changed: inmates could wear their own sweaters, but the sweaters had to be a solid color, but "any sweater with a monogram on it would be contraband.'

There was the matter of coat hangers. At one point the prisoners were ordered to turn in all metal hangers and get plastic ones. One can see the sense in that, but after a few months, the change-order was abolished. Plastic hangers became contraband. Their filmsy replacements broke at touch into three jagged pieces, "each a potential weapon," but these were OK. No explanation. "Prisons don't explain. They just make rules.

The prisoner's life is a life in line - in line for meals, in line for cell check, in line for a nurse or doctor. It is a life of locked doors, or numbing obscenities, or incessant noise, or meticulous 'procedures" enforced by correctional officers with mindless efficiency. Once Mrs. Harris was four minutes early for an appointment with a nurse. The inside guard decreed that she could not wait inside, she would have to wait outside. The outside guard decreed that she could not wait outside, she would have to wait inside. The dispute was resolved when both guards ordered her escorted back to her cell.

Most of the inmates have little education. Many of them have come to prison by way of prostitution and drugs. A few make an effort to improve themselves; they take courses or learn skills, but their attention span ordinarily is brief. In October 1983, Jean Harris made an entry in her diary.

"I think of all the many things that sadden me about these women, one thing that seems most pervasive is their inability to appreciate beauty, their unawareness of it, their inability to recognize it, their willingness to live without it. Perhaps willingness isn't the word I want-their unawareness of the lack of it.

Mrs. Harris has learned more about the realities of prison life in the past five years than professors of penology will learn in a lifetime. It is absurd to contend that she hasn't suffered enough or that she constitutes a danger to society. Gov. Cuomo ought to release her — and then appoint her, if she would accept, as state commissioner of corrections.

Edna Gardner Whyte started flying when nice girls didn't— in 1926

Today in her 80s she still does — and operates her own airport in Texas.

Evelyn Waldren learned to fly in a World War I Jenny - was an instructor for American airmen in World War II — and is still at in at 72.

These are women you should know The High Frontier was pioneered by bird-WOMEN also. And most are still around, sadly Amerila Earhart made aviation history but would she have without Neta Nook who taught her to fly when the instrument panel was a crude altimeter and a dollar watch?

When I set out to recognize the underrecognized women in aviation, I did not know that one of the most daring helicopter rescue pilots of the Korean war was Marcia Bagby.

Though women are restricted from combat, Colleen Nevius flew seven years for the Navy, three tours in Vietnam.

Then in World War II, the gallant women of the WASPS and of the ferry command. Volumes have been written about aviation's

It took pioneer women to tame the American Wild West. Then they ventured into the uncharted ocean of air. Then Sally Ride rode beyond the beyond.

All along the way some Christa McAuliffes. Thas is so...when the roll is called up yonder they'll be there, too.

Great opportunity for U.S. in India

By Don Graff

I'm beginning to think they may be getting to me. The Heritage Foundation, that is. For the second time in recent weeks, the super-conservative Washington think tank is out with a study with which I largely agree. The first was a release blasting the Immigration and Naturalization Service for barring the U.S. door to Cuban refugees This time, it is an analysis of U.S.-Indian relations which discerns an opportunity to ease, if not reverse, four decades of mutual disapproval. Heritage thinks the Reagan administration ought to seize it.

The study notes that low-key Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi has relaxed rigid policies that characterized his mother's rule. He has moved to liberalize regulation of foreign trade and investment and is pushing for closer ties with this country, already India's foremost trading partner.

There remain serious obstacles to better political relations, however. Gandhi shows no inclination to drop India's longtime Soviet connection. India consistently sides with the Soviets on key international issues - even on Afghanistan, which is uncomfortably close to its own borders. And there is Pakistan, which India views as threat No. 1 and which the United States is again building up militarily. Heritage advises the Reagan administration to convince the Indians that our Pakistani connection is short-term — a response to the Soviet presence in Afghanistan which will end when that intrusion does.

At this point, I have to interject a 'yes, but

Heritage omits some essential background: Washington, under successive administrations, shown a consistent preference for Pakistan over India

For example, when the late John Foster Dulles was remaking the world, he regarded not marching in lockstep with U.S. policy as tantamount to joining the enemy camp. India refused to march and was virtualexcommunicated. Pakistan dutifully marched - right into the anti-Soviet Central Treaty Organization, a paper alliance if there ever was one Then in 1971, another master of realpolitik chose sides for the United States in the third Indo-Pakistani war in 25 years. Henry Kissinger's inspired choice was Pakistan, which had brought on the conflict by years of misrule in Bengal.

Indians well remember the Kissinger "tilt," which succeeded only in tying U.S. interests to the losing side. It is going to take quite a bit to convince Indians to alter their views on the nature, ephemeral or enduring, of the American relationship with Pakistan

The counterproductive course of U.S. policy toward India over the years defies logic. Indians, admittedly, can be difficult. But almost alone among the nations that become independent after World War II, India not only chose democracy but, despite a brief aberrant period under Indira Gandhi, made it work Objectively, one would think we would be clutching such a success story to our political bosom.

But back to the Heritage study, it concludes on a note of hope. In principle, relations should improve "dramatically" under the Gandhi government. It sees this already in the economic area. Politically, however, the outlook is not so good "unless India begins to change its basic policies relating to the Soviet Union and its invasion of Afghanistan." © 1986, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

Rebellion adds to troubles of impoverished country

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The escalating rebellion in southern Sudan is adding to the deep economic and social crisis facing an African nation struggling to build democracy after more than a decade and a half of iron-fisted rule.

The 3-year-old revolt has intensified since early last year, especially in the provinces of Bahr el-Ghazal and Upper Nile, where the Sudan Peoples Liberation Army operates in the scrub bush plains and vast Sudd swamp - larger than all of Ireland.

Westerners familiar with the south say high schools in those areas, homeland of the 2 millionstrong Dinka tribe, are largely depleted of young men. They've "gone to the bush" with the rebels. The rebellion has intensified despite the April 1985 military coup against President Gaafar Nimeiri, who ruled Sudan for 16 years, and the election a year later of a civilian government.

SPLA chief John Garang, a U.S.-educated for-mer army colonel, denounced those elections, which produced a government dominated by the Moslem-oriented Umma and Democratic Unionist parties, which controlled political life in Sudan before Nimciri's 1970 coup.

Southern rebels, most of them animists or Christians, say they consider those parties part of the "corrupt, racist, backward, pseudo-Arab bourgeois system" they vow to destroy

During the last 18 months, the SPLA has slowly isolated major southern cities such as Malakal, Wau and Bentiu. Foreign relief agencies estimate at least 2 million people face starvation as food supplies there dwindle.

In Wau, a provincial capital of dust-choked streets and thatched mud huts, SPLA gunners hide in the mango groves and fire on anyone who ventures out to harvest crops.

Last week, a foreign relief worker, speaking on condition of anonymity, said people in Wau were surviving by eating leaves from trees.

Emergency food flights by the International Committee of the Red Cross were suspended last week after the SPLA shot down a civilian plane in Malakal on Aug. 16, killing 60 Sudanese.

Analysts believe the SPLA, which is backed by Marxist Ethiopia, wants to force civilians to flee the cities and then starve out army garrisons.

In the best of times, much of the south is a harsh, disease-ridden land, where tall Nilotic tribesmen wander in search of grazing lands for their cattle. A 19th century British traveler, Ewart Grogan, described it as a "God-forsaken, dry-sucked, flyblown wilderness ... a howling waste of weed, mos quitoes, flies and fever.'

Origins of the rebellion lie in the ethnic and cultural rivalries of Sudan, an impoverished country of 20 million people, 19 major ethnic groups and 115 languages. Southerners claim the northern-dominated government discriminates against them economically and seeks to impose Moslem Arab culture. The government estimates 70 percent of Sudanese are Moslem.

So great is the challenge of nation-building in such a harsh, diverse land - Africa's largest at 967,000 square miles — that the Sudanese have a saying: "When Allah made Sudan, Allah laughed."

and older brother were stranded for more than two hours after Frontier Airliens ceased operations. (AP Laserphoto)

Frontier ceases operation;

DENVER (AP) — Talks that could save Frontier Airlines from bankruptcy broke off today without agreement to resume, a day after the airline halted operations, sending 17,000 passengers scrambling for flights.

The talks between the union representing Frontier's 600 pilots and United Airlines began Sunday evening in a Chicago suburb.

Frontier's parent company, People Express, announced early Sunday that Frontier was shutting down and would file for bankruptcy today if no agreement was reached between United and the Air Line Pilots Association.

The shutdown of the Denverbased airline, which served 55 U.S. cities west of Chicago and four Canadian cities, idled nearly 4,700 workers, 1,000 in Colorado.

Last month, United had offered $146 million for the 40-year-old regional airline provided it could reach agreement with Frontier's five labor unions. Talks with the pilots' union. however, broke off over how soon Frontier pilots would receive the same salaries as United pilots, said United spokesman Matt

A Boeing-727 captain at Frontier makes about $68,000 a year compared with $115,000 at United, United spokesman Joe Hopkins said.

United's latest offer would have closed the gap in five years, but the union wanted it closed by April 1988, Hopkins said. "How many people do you know who get a $47,000 pay raise in 18 months?" he asked.

After a previous breakdown in negotiations, ALPA vice chairman Jamie Lindsay blamed United management.

In its announcement of the shutdown, People Express, which bought Frontier last fall, said it was taking the action because Frontier was out of money. "We deeply regret that this step had to be taken, but we were left with no choice," the Newark, N.J.-based company's statement

After posting a first-quarter loss of $58 million, People Express announced in July it would sell Frontier, which has lost $10 million a month in the first six months of 1986.

People Express had indicated it would delay bankruptcy proceedings if United reaches agree-bankruptcy being threatened ment with the pilots, United > spokesman Kurt Stocker said. People Express spokesman Russell Marchetta said Frontier would not resume operations once it filed for bankruptcy.

At Denver's Stapleton International Airport, hundreds of travelers lined up by midmorning Sunday at the ticket counters of Continental and United, which said they would honor Frontier tickets on a standby basis.

United also planned to hire 255 Frontier service and reservations agents to handle the increased load expected over the next two weeks, Hopkins said.

Continental will give pass privileges to Frontier employees stranded by the shutdown, said Continental spokesman Bruce E. Hicks in Houston.

American Airlines spokesman Dan White said it would accept some Frontier-issued tickets.

Analysts have said a Frontier sale would help cash-hungry People Express, but that the survival of the parent company would depend on whether it did well enough during the summer to get through the slower fall and winter months

Reagan may propose overhaul of federal budget process

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) - White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan, faulting the federal budget process as an inefficient, "Mickey Mouse system," says President Reagan is studying plans for a major overhaul of the nation's budget

Regan, in California with the vacationing president, said proposals to revamp the system put forward by top White House aides last week "definitely" caught the eye of the president.

The White House has found fault with the budget process for years, but has not put forward a specific reform package because of intense opposition in Congress, which jealously guards its budget-making authority.

The president would put his ideas before Congress in the next State of the Union address and make it one of his top priorities for his remaining two years in office. Reagan told reporters during a weekend meeting.

'We have a crazy hodgepodge of a budget," Regan complained "No state has a budget system, no other nation has a budget system like we do.

"We do many things in the federal level that would be considered dishonest and illegal if done in the private sector," the chief of staff said.

Regan, the former Secretary of the Treasury, was head of Merrill Lynch, the nation's largest investment firm.

'We say receipts coming into a trust fund are receipts to the federal government and count to the budget or budget deficit. That is not right by any budgeting sense," Regan said.

The chief of staff said concern on Capitol Hill, in the past wary of such proposals, may change because of the $200 billion-plus deficits and the pressures of the Gramm-Rudman budgetbalancing law.

"I think the atmosphere might be changng where people are saying, 'This is a Mickey Mouse system," Regan said.

He said the proposals included renewing a push for the balanced budget amendment, creating a separate capital budget for construction projects and eliminating trust fund receipts — such as for Social Security and unemployment benefits - from the general U.S. treasury.

Another possibility would be creating a two-year budget cycle instead of the current single-year system, Regan said.

Congress has consistently rejected Reagan's pressure for a line item veto - which would give the president authority to veto special items in spending bills. Under the Constitution the president is only allowed to veto entire Regan said the president's push for budget reform was expected to take second place, however, to his anti-drug effort.

"The analogy will be ... drugs will be what tax reform was to the first two years. That will be the major item, with other important ones under it, including budget,

Educator contends tax reform bill 'catastrophe' for higher education

AUSTIN (AP) - Higher education officials are attacking the latest federal tax reform bill, saying it could cost the nation's universities hundreds of millions of dollars in donations.

The tax revisions approved in committee this month are the 'greatest catastrophe for higher education in 25 years," says Sheldon Steinbach, counsel for the American Council on Education.

'As a matter of public policy it might seem like a good idea, but as a matter of social policy it's just terrible," said Steinbach, whose group represents 1,500 colleges and universities. Officials also are con that the tax bill would impair large private schools' ability to raise money for buildings and put new burdens on students who rely on financial aid.

A provision of the bill that most concerns educators would eliminate the current tax advantages of gifts of appreciated property, such as real estate or stocks that have increased in value since the donor bought them.

"Appreciated property is where many of the biggest gifts are coming from, but the change in the tax law would make it more expensive to give away your property than to sell it," said Patricia Hayes, president of St. Edward's University and chairman of a national tax policy committee for independent colleges and universities

Steinbach estimated that the change could cut as much as $600 million from the $6.5 billion in donations the nation's colleges receive each year.

In the University of Texas System, the change could affect up to 10 percent of the $100 million in gifts received each year by system institutions, said Don Leverty, who represents UT in Washington.

Higher education officials are also concerned about provisions of the bill that could make charitable gifts less attractive in general.

Taxpayers who don't itemize could no longer deduct charitable contributions, which might deter new alumni from getting into the habit of giving to their schools, officials said.

But Rick Eason, vice president for development at Southwestern University in Georgetown, said the lower tax rates could result in increased donations from some people.

'A lot of people budget their gifts to Southwestern monthly, so if their tax burden is reduced there is a possibility they will have more money to give away,' he said. "While I'm really concerned about the proposed bill, I also think it's too early to tell exactly what the net result is going

College officials also said students — especially in graduate or medical school - could be hurt by a provision that would alter the current tax exemption for scholarships and fellowships. Only the portion of a student's aid that was used for tuition or course-related equipment would remain tax-exempt.

Large private universities say their construction programs could be devastated by a provision that would bar them from issuing more than $150 million in tax-exempt bonds, which are generally used to finance new buildings or renovation projects Despite their concerns about the form of the bill that emerged from the House-Senate conference committee, education leaders said things could have been

Children of working mothers do better in school, study reports

WASHINGTON (AP) - Children of working mothers tend to do better in school, are absent for fewer days and have better communications skills, according to a nationwide study by four Ohio researchers.

But women who don't have jobs outside the homes are more likely to be confident they are good mothers, and their children report better relationships with them, the study said.

Overall, the child benefits when the mother works, said the researchers, who presented their findings to the American Psychological Association in Washington over the weekend.

"All significant differences in social and academic criteria favored children of employed mothers," they wrote.

The "traditional" American family — with the father as sole breadwinner and the mother a full-time homemaker - is becoming a rarity, the researchers

"By the year 1990, only 14 percent of the households in America will live in this family pattern," they wrote.

The five-year study was based on data gathered by school psychologists on 573 students from 38 states in the first, third and fifth grades.

The researchers said the children of working mothers tended to have higher IQ scores, less school absenteeism, were more self-reliant and rated higher by their teachers on academic achievement.

But working mothers, juggling the demands of parenthood and career, were more likely than their stay-at-home counterparts to worry about whether they were good mothers, the study said. Non-working mothers "expressed higher levels of satisfaction with their own parenting performance," it said. And working mothers may experience stress and strain in their marriage as a result of their dual levels of satisfaction with spouse support in parenting compared to ... employed mothers.'

Children whose mothers did not have jobs outside the home reported better mother-child relations, the study said. But working mothers seem to make an effort to spend "quality time" with their offspring, the researchers said, noting that they "participated in significantly more recreational activities with their children.

Fleas attack both man and animals and often become a maior problem during the summer months. We have had a lot of calls this year on fleas.

The tiny pests cause annoyances and discomfort and can also spread certain diseases. a major one being bubonic plague.

Adult fleas cause the most problems as they have piercing sucking mouthparts and suck bloods. Adult fleas may live from two months to two years. After each blood meal, females lay four to eight eggs, which hatch in two to three weeks. They may deposit as many as 500 eggs in their life-

Flea control may be difficult due to the circumstances under which the pests occur. Home infestations are often discovered a short time after a pet has been taken out of the home. Immature fleas have completed development and, with the absence of a normal host, turn to man for their life-sustaining blood meal.

Satisfactory control of fleas for any length of time depends on these factors:

1. Both adult and immature fleas must be eliminated from the home and yard by proper chemical control and sanitation measures, such as replacing infested bedding materials and cleaning carpets and stuffed furniture.

2. Pets must be rid of fleas by using registered chemicals. In the case of rat or mice fleas, these hosts must be eliminated.

3. Reinfestation must be prevented by protecting pets with flea collars or other preventative chemicals during times of likely infestations.

Chemicals registered for indoor flea control include Baygon, DDVP, Dursban, Malathion, Methoprene, Ronnel and SBP-1382. Use a coarse spray on floors and baseboards. Treat one foot up the walls and under the house where possible. Check product labels prior to use.

Chemicals registered for outdoor flea control include Baygon, Cygon, Diazinon, Dursban, Malathion and Sevin. Treat animals' bedding or remove and eplace with new material. Good coverage isnecessary for good

To control fleas on host animals, use Dursban, Lindane, Sevin or Vapona on dogs and Korlan, Lindane, Malathion, Phosmet and Sevin on cats. Since some of these chemicals have specific restrictions, be sure to read the label prior to use. Some compounds may be harmful to greyhounds and whippets. Do not treat nursing puppies or kittens or animals that are ill.

Here are some timely questions about vegetable gardening:

Q. Should you allow tomatoes to become fully ripe and red on the vine before harvesting?

A. Generally, yields will be increased by harvesting the fruit at first blush of pink instead of leaving them on the plant to ripen fully. A tomato picked at first sign of color and ripened at room temperature will be just as tasty as one left to fully mature on the vine. Picking tomatoes before they turn red reduces damage from birds.

Q. If tomatoes are picked green or before they are fully mature. how should they be handled to insure proper ripening and full

A. Never refrigerate tomatoes picked immature. Place them in a single layer at room temperature and allow them to develop full color. When they are fully ripe, place them in the refrigerator where they will store for several weeks. Those handled in this manner will be of high quality and full flavor.

Q. What causes a tomato to crack? Is there anything I can do to prevent it?

A. Crack is a physiological disorder caused by soil moisture fluctuations. When the tomato reaches the mature green stage and the water supply to the plant is reduced or cut off, the tomato will begin to ripen. At this time, a cellophane-like wrapper around the outer surface of the tomato becomes thicker and more rigid to protect the tomato during and after harvest. If the water supply is restored after ripening begins, the plant will resume translocainto the fruit. This will cause the fruit to enlarge; which in turn splits the wrapper around the fruit and results in cracking. The a constant and regular water supply. Q. My squash leaves are covered with a white, powdery substance. The plants die rapidly.

This is powdery mildew. It is a fungal disease that attacks squash, killing the plants. Some varieties tolerate this disease better than others. Powdery mildew is more of a problem in the fall than in the spring. The material benomyl, or Benlate (R), is the most effective fungicide for the control of powdery mildew. Mildew occurs most often on old foliage of declining plants. Succession plantings of squash will provide vigorous, productive plants and allow removal of older, more susceptible plants.

Nursing home thievery is cause for national shame

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm sure my letter will not command as much attention as Kirk Douglas' because I'm not a movie star, but after reading his letter, I had to write because I also had a mother in a nursing

Mr. Douglas' mother was in a nice nursing home. He could afford the best. My mother was in a convalescent hospital that was little better than a pigsty, although it cost a considerable amount of money. The poor souls were kept medicated to keep their demands at a minimum.

My family visited our mother three or four times a week, and we observed that nighties, sweaters, toiletries and slippers kept disappearing.

We give billions of dollars to foreign countries to upgrade their standard of living; we send billions for ammunition so they can slaughter each other. And on the Fourth of July, millions were spent to honor the Statue of Liberty. But where is the money to honor our own fathers and mothers? Shame on all of us for allowing this to happen

G.K., COSTA MESA, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: My husband spent the last three years of his life in a nursing home. During that time he experienced problems I never would have believed existed. It was shocking, frightening and sad.

When his condition was critical, an employee removed his wedding ring and wristwatch. His walker, hand-knit afghan and wallet also mysteriously disappeared, along with a basket of goodies he had just received for his birthday. My complaints to the administration were ignored. Only after I wrote to the state ombudsman and the editor of The Deseret News did all the missing articles mysteriously turn up! One week to the day, he was buried - with his ring on.

CLEO P. MOLLINET, SALT LAKE CITY

DEAR ABBY: Kirk Douglas advised people to go to their department of public health and demand to see the state inspection reports before deciding on a home. That is

I worked at a private nursing home that had a superior rating. Now let me tell you about the inspector. He used the side door because we locked up at 9 p.m., and he never arrived before 10 p.m. One night he arrived drunk (as usual) and fell over the nurses' station trying to hug his favorite nurse. He asked her to witness him signing the inspection form. She laughed and said, "Why, you devil, you haven't inspected anything," after which he picked up a wastepaper basket, peered into it, put it down and said, "There! I've made an inspection, and everything is fine!" He signed the form and left. So much for state inspectors.

EX-EMPLOYEE

DEAR ABBY: I could write a book about the thievery that goes on in nursing homes. Would you believe someone came into my mother's room and carried away her TV set? (Police report enclosed.) Her little refrigerator had been unplugged apparently that had been targeted as well. I took the owner of the home to Small Claims Court and won. I moved my mother to another home where I had to sign a form stating that they were not responsible for anything that was "lost." The help in most homes are paid peanuts. The work is awful. I couldn't do it not for a million dollars a day.

A GOOD WAY TO
WITH ONE KIND OF FURNITURE

You can really solve a lot of problems in decorating at one time with wall units or cabinets.

Wall units have the ability to change dull, wasted areas into useful and attractive areas.

First, the right kinds of wall units or cabinets can add beauty in themselves by filling an area nicely—and the books and accessories they hold also add good looks to any room.

So, right off the bat, you can make a room more appealing, both with wall units and with what they hold and display.

Then, too, wall units help solve the problem of storage and display space. Hardly anybody has enough storage and display space, and wall units supply a remedy.

Another advantage to regular

Another advantage to regular wall units—as opposed to the built-in kind-is that you can take them with you when you move, or you can move them around when you want to re-decorate.

All in all, wall units can be one of your best furniture buys, but, of course, the important thing is to get the wall units or cabinets that are best for you, and we stand ready to help you with both selection and ideas. Stop in.

Marvin' cartoon strip keeps artist young at heart

NEWBURGH, Ind. (AP) -Tom Armstrong has committed himself to a life of diapers and baby food. But the infant responsible for this domestic trap also puts food on the Armstrong dinner table. Armstrong's prodigy is Marvin, the amusing red-haired comic strip urchin who thinks nothing of flinging jars off supermarket shelves and tugging tablecloths in a restaurant. For four years, Marvin has charmed readers of more than 450 newspapers who follow his antics.

And for four years, Armstrong has done his research for Marvin in his suburban Newburgh back yard. If he draws a blank at his drawing board, he simply opens his office door and calls for his children. The inspiration for the cartoon strip is literally just a romp away.

The Armstrong children — 8year-old Jonathan and 4-year-old Jennifer — have provided much of the impetus for Marvin's adventures, particularly when they were younger.

"The syndicate jokingly told my wife, Glenda, to get pregnant every two years," Armstrong said with a laugh. "She's all for the business, but she's not that devoted.

"If I need ideas, I can always start hanging around day-care centers," he said. "What babies do never changes. That's why Marvin translates so well in foreign countries — because he's a

Smerek latest to fall as injury bug plagues Cowboys

IRVING, Texas (AP) — This is one ratio that could mean trouble for the NFL's Dallas Cow-

The club has lost four straight preseason games, and four key players have been sidelined because of injuries. The latest came during the 41-28 pummeling the Cowboys took from the Pittsburgh Steelers Friday night.

Reserve defensive tackle Don Smerek is expected to be out four to six weeks with a sprained right knee he suffered in the game, team spokesman Doug Todd said.

Smerek joined an expanding list of Cowboys who will be watching at least part of the regular season from the sidelines.

Defensive tackle Kevin Brooks may be out up to six more weeks after having arthroscopic surgery on his knee. Wide receiver Mike Renfro is expected to miss three more weeks because of a separated shoulder. And starting guard Kurt Petersen probably will be scratched for the season after a knee operation.

"It's a problem we'll have to tackle," said team President Tex Schramm.

Meanwhile, defensive back Dextor Clinkscale, who wants a new contract, still hasn't reported to the team.

"I really don't know what's going to happen," Clinkscale said. "Pretty soon, I'm going to have make a decision. I realize I might not play again. I might go to business school or take the test for law school. I don't know."

On Saturday, the Cowboys released three players and put wide receiver Jerry Parrish on the injured reserve list with a hamstring problem, a team official said.

Parrish, who formerly played with the USFL's Jacksonville Bulls, was hurt in practice, Todd said. Parrish also spent two years in the Canadian Football League after playing college ball at Eastern Kentucky.

Placed on waivers Saturday were second-year wide receiver Leon Gonzalez of Bethune Cookman; Troy Johnson, former wide receiver for the USFL's Denver Gold; and Scott Strasburger, a first-year linebacker from Nebraska.

The Cowboys have trimmed their roster to 60, which is 10 over the limit that must be reached by Tuesday, Todd said.

Sooners picked to repeat as champs

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) - If experience is the best teacher, then the Oklahoma football team should be way ahead of the rest of

The defending national champion Sooners begin the 1986 season as the preseason choice for No. 1, the same way they did last

Oklahoma received 44 of 60 first-place votes and 1,171 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters in results announced Saturday.

Michigan, which finished the season ranked No. 2, begins the 1986 season in the same place. The Wolverines had six firstplace votes and 1,016 points.

"Because we finished last season as the No. 1 team and we return 18 starters. I think we should be No. 1," tight end Keith Jackson said. "Oklahoma is the kind of team that loves to be on top and stay on top.

Other Sooners felt the same

"We don't feel the pressure from being No. 1, but what it does mean is that every team we play will be playing harder to beat us," fullback Lydell Carr said.

"I think being ranked No. 1 will put more pressure on us not to make mistakes," center Travis Simpson said, "but on the other hand, if our opponents want to play us close, they will have to play flawless football."

The Sooners have been choice six times in the preseason poll; on four of those occasions — 1956, 1974, 1975 and 1985 — they won national championships.

Since the AP preseason poll began in 1950, the only teams besides Oklahoma to win national championships after being ranked No. 1 at the start of the season were Tennessee in 1951, Michigan State in 1952 and Alabama in 1978. Miami of Florida is third in the preseason poll with one first-place vote and 976 points. UCLA is fourth with three firstplace votes and 972 points. The Bruins open the season at Oklahoma on Sept. 6.

Alabama, which opens the season Wednesday night against Ohio State in the Kickoff Clsssic, is fifth with 911 points.

Penn State, which ended the 1985 regular season No. 1 then slipped to third after losing to Oklahoma 25-10 in the Orange Bowl, starts 1986 in sixth place. The Nittany Lions received three first-place votes and 892 points.

Texas A&M, No. 6 last year, is seventh this time with one firstplace vote and 871 points. Then comes Nebraska, 11th last year, in eighth place with one firstplace vote and 826 points.

Rounding out the preseason Top Ten are Ohio State and Tennessee. The Buckeyes, who finished 14th a year ago, are ninth with 673 points and Tennessee, the No. 4 team in 1985, is 10th with

'Houdini' 'Pohls' WSG escape act

AKRON, Ohio (AP) - Dan Pohl was the first to acknowledge that he won the World Series of Golf with an escape act.

"I had a little bit of Houdini in me," Pohl said Sunday after he turned a scrambling, erratic 1over-par 71 into a one-stroke victory, his second of the season.

Pohl hit only four fairways and seven greens on the revamped Firestone Country Club course, constantly coming out of the woods and weeds, the trees and traps and trouble.

But he was never headed down the stretch as former World Series champion Lanny Wadkins couldn't get the putts to fall and Donnie Hammond disappeared on a string of five bogeys over the last seven holes.

"I don't know if anybody knew if they wanted to win the golf tournament," Pohl said.

'I was never comfortable out there. I was moving the ball around in my stance. I'd hit it left. I'd do something else, and I'd hit it right.

'But it was very rewarding to get it up and down when I had to, to make the shots I had to make when I had to make them.'

It was rewarding to the extent of $126,000, the winner's share of the total purse of $700,000, and a 10-year exemption into any PGA Tour event.

"Very rewarding," said Pohl, who was making his first appearance in this elite event and scored his second career victory with a 3-under-par 277 total.

The biggest check of his career pushed Pohl's earnings for the season to $440,563, more than double his best previous season.

"I wasn't thinking about the money. I really wasn't," he said. "A few years ago, when I was struggling, yeah, sure, I'd have been thinking about it.

"But this time I wasn't. It's been a successful season and I was just thinking about winning, about competing, about playing the shots I had to play.'

He won it with a scrambling par form a bunker on the 13th, dropping a 15-foot putt, while both Wadkins and Hammond the only men with any real chance of overtaking him - both made bogey. That gave Pohl a three-shot lead.

His various escapes, from a bunker on the 15th, from the woods and the gallery and the rough behind the green on the 16th, kept him there.

Wadkins, with a 2-over-par 72, eventually finished second at 278, closing to within one only when Pohl made a meaningless bogey on the 18th.

Rivers, 21, of Jersey City, N.J., was thrown through the windshield of a 1979 Chevrolet van driven by Barlow shortly after 1 a.m. Sunday, according to William Nowatzke, a dispatcher for the Elkhart County Sheriff's Department.

Rivers was taken to the hospital's intensive care after his surgery, the hospital said.

The 26-year-old native of Los Altos, Calif., not only had Patti Rizzo to contend with during the final round of the inaugural $225.000 LPGA Atlantic City Classic. She also had to deal with some fickle East Coast weather.

But Inkster adjusted to the swirling, gusting winds well enough to take a three-stroke victory over Rizzo Sunday at the 6,005-yard Marriott's Seaview Country Club course.

Inkster managed a par 71 over the final 18 holes to take the $33,750 top prize, while Rizzo slipped to 74 and 212 for the tourna-

NEW YORK (AP) — Defending champion Ivan Lendl and Wimbledon winner Boris Becker are the favorites to grab the men's singles title at the U.S. Open Tennis Championships, which commence Tuesday.

Even John McEnroe, just returning to the game since a nearly seven-month absence, is given a shot of gaining his fifth title on the hard courts at the National Tennis Center. But the New York left-hander doesn't see it that "I don't think at this stage I can win the Open," McEnroe said Sunday after losing to Lendl in the final of the Hamlet Challenge Cup. "I think Lendl, who has earned his No. 1 spot, or Becker will win." Sixth-seeded Jimmy Connors, a five-time U.S. Open champion who will turn 34 before the tournament ends its 13-day run, adds: "Don't ever count me out. You never know.'

The women's singles is considered a two-person race between six-time champion Chris Evert Lloyd, seeded second this year, and top-seeded Martina Navratilova, who has won this Grand Slam tournament twice. Yet, West Germany's Steffi

Graf, the No. 3 seed, captured her fifth title of the year on Sunday when she won the $150,000 United Jersey Bank Classic, giving an indication that she has fully recovered from the illness and injuries that have hampered her this summer.

Then there's fourth-seeded Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia who will be defending the crown she won last year by upsetting Lloyd in the semifinals and Navratilova in the championship match.

A number of key players face their first test on opening day Tuesday. The tournament gets underway at 11 a.m. EDT when Mandlikova takes on Marie-Christine Calleja of France on the main court in Louis Armstrong Stadium. Then McEnroe will face fellow New Yorker Paul Annacone, followed by Lendl against Glenn Layendecker, Navratilova against Czechoslovakia's Andrea Holikova Yannick Noah of France, the No. 5 seed who has played only one tournament since severely burning his ankle in May, is scheduled to face Scott Davis.

Other potential winners in men's singles who will play on Tuesday include eighth-seeded Henri Leconte of France, No. 12 Thierry Tulasne of France, No. 14 Tim Mayotte and No. 15 Brad Gilbert. The women's draw will see No. 10 Kathy Rinaldi and No. 16 Carling Bassett of Canada playing first-round matches Tuesday.

Argentina's Mariana Perez-Roldan, who lost in the final round of qualifying on Sunday, gained a spot in the main draw as a "lucky loser" when Ronni Reis of Miami pulled out of the tournament because of illness. Perez-Roldan will play West Germany's Eva Pfaff in her opening-round

Others who qualified for the men's singles draw Sunday include Israel's Shlomo Glickstein; Gary Donnelly; Christian Bergstrom of Sweden; Derrick Rostagno; South Africa's Craig Campbell; Mike Bauer; Chip Hooper; Ricardo Acuna of Chile; Luke Jensen; Paraguay Davis Cup star Francisco Gonzalez; Kelly Evernden of New Zealand; Marc Flur; Richard Acioly; Jim Pugh and Claudio Pistolesi of

It may have been a preseason game, but Saturday night's 20-15 Dolphins victory over the Eagles certainly sparked strong words from both sides.

NFL Roundup

Ryan, who was hired as head coach in Philadelphia after masterminding the Chicago Bears' 46' defense, was upset with what he considered a clear violation of the rules by Shula and his Miami team.

"The rules in the National Football League are that you can huddle 11 guys," Ryan said. "He huddled 15. This is crazy what they let him get away with just because he's on the rules committee. Shula and Pittsburgh's Chuck Noll are the only going to be looking at his won-loss record. They didn't do that when he was an assistant coach."

Aside from Miami's victory Saturday, St. Louis beat Chicago 14-7 in a game marred by a fight; the Los Angeles Rams took San Diego 20-17 in overtime; Washington took Tampa Bay 21-13; Cincinnati outscored Green Bay 34-12; Cleveland downed Atlanta 27-21; the New York Giants defeated the New York Jets 20-16; Indianapolis slipped past Detroit 20-13; Buffalo beat Kansas City 13-6; Houston clipped New Orleans 24-13; and Denver defeated San Francisco 14-9

On Friday, it was Pittsbugh 41, Dallas 28; the Los Angeles Raiders 24, New England 10; and Seattle 27, Minnesota 17.

The exhibition season concludes next week.

Dolphins 20, Eagles 15 Trailing 15-10, Miami took its first lead on Lorenzo Hampton's 19-yard scoring run with 8:22 left in the third quarter. That finished an 80-yard drive led by backup quarterback Don Strock, who played the second half in relief of Dan Marino.

Marino completed 10 of 17 passes for 123 yards and one touchdown. Cardinals 14, Bears 7

Except for the fighting, all of the action was packed into the first half. The Cardinals went ahead when wide receiver Roy Green took a lateral from quarterback Neil Lomax and hit J.T. Smith with a 31-yard touchdown pass in the first period.

Only 30 seconds later, Chicago's Mike Tomczak threw a 23-yard touchdown pass to Willie Gault.

Lomax' tie-breaking nine-yard touchdown pass to Ottis Anderson with 24 seconds left in the half was the winning score.

The brawl began with 4:40 remaining in the third quarter. Keith Van Horne of the Bears, who was ejected, claimed he saw teammate Keith Ortego Chicago tight end Pat Dunsmore came to their aid in front of the St. Louis bench.

Jim Laughlin outfought San Diego's Kellen Winslow for a pass 20 seconds into overtime and returned the interception to the Chargers' 10. Immediately, the Rams went for the field goal and Mike Lansford hit from 27 yards.

Redskins 21, Bucs 13

Washington overcame a 13-0 deficit as rookje safety Todd Bowles returned an interception 26 yards for a touchdown, then Rick Badanjek had a two-yard touchdown run.

A couple of former USFL players spurred the clinching 53-yard drive. Quarterback Doug Williams, who played for the Bucs before heading to the USFL, guided that march, which was capped by Kelvin Bryant's 22-yard run with under five minutes left.

Bills 13, Chiefs 6

The Bills won a preseason game for the first time since Aug. 11, 1984, snapping an eight-game slide in which they managed only one tie. Cornerback Ron Pitts intercepted a pass by Todd Blackledge and returned it 76 yards for a touchdown just before the end of the first half to give the Bills the lead for Oilers 24, Saints 13 Houston showed some offensive and defensive consistency for once, while New Orleans' passing game was abysmal. The Saints completed only

"I just threw my fastball, slider. That's how I pitch to everyone," he said of his scoreless stint, covering four innings.

"Just throw strikes. That's all you've got to do." In other National League action; San Francisco drubbed the Mets 10-1; Philadelphia edged San Diego 6-5; Cincinnati pelted Chicago 7-1; Pittsburgh nipped Atlanta 4-3 and Los Angeles beat Montreal 3-2 in 10 innings What Lopez found easy was not all that simple for Houston starter Jim Deshaies, 9-3, the first five innings.

Deshaies struck out two and walked six. Luckily for him, he permitted only four singles. St. Louis' run resulted from four of the walks in the fourth inning.

"I was struggling with my mechanics and nibbling at the plate," Deshaies said.

'(Second baseman) Jim Pankovits made a real good play. If he didn't make a great play, I think I'd have been out of there," the Astros pitcher said. "Basically that was the play that allowed me

> Deshaies' latter reference was to the player whose place the immortal Lou Gehrig took in the New York Yankees' lineup more than six decades ago.

Pankovits, clearly, was the Astros' leader. He went 4-for-5, with his hit total equaling a career high. And in the field, his exceptional play behind the bag to close the fifth on Alan Knicely's grounder thwarted the Cards' last bid.

"I really pride myself on my defense at second base. I haven't had an error there in two years," said Pankovits, whose start was his second since June 15.

"He does a lot of things well!" He's a good pinch-hitter," Lanier said of the 30-year-old Astros in fielder. "It was a good game for us to win."

Pankovits' steadiness in the field didn't apply to St. Louis starter Tim Conroy, 3-8, who was his own worst enemy during Houston's decisive second.

The Cards pitcher fielded Dickie Thon's grounder to the mound and threw wildly to second on a try for a forceout after Jose Cruz walked and went to third on Alan Ashby's single with one out. Next he picked up Deshaies' bunt and threw into the dirt at third base. permitting Ashby to score ahead of Billy Hatcher's RBI single that made it 3-0.

"I thought Conroy had good stuff. He just threw the two balls (and the game) away," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said.

In addition to the contest, the Cards may have lost their third baseman for an extended period when Terry Pendleton suffered a jammed left thumb in the fourth

Almost fittingly, it happened as he attempted to field Pankovits' third hit, an RBI line-drive single. "I think it's bad," Herzog said despite preliminary X-rays that were negative.

Orioles' Murray wants trade

WASHINGTON (AP) - First baseman Eddie Murray, who has more runs batted in over the past seven years than any other major leaguer, has asked the Baltimore Orioles to trade him, according to a published

Murray made his request at a meeting with Orioles General Manager Hank Peters Friday, The Washington Post reported in Monday's editions. Sources told the Post the announcement came as a shock to management

Both Peters and Murray refused comment, but neither would deny that Murray had asked to be traded.

Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver said he was unaware of Murray's request. Newspaper sources close to Murray have said he is upset with the way his medical problems — including an injured ankle — have been handled this season. This season, the 30-year-old Murray was placed on the disabled list for the first time in his,10-year career. He had pulled a hamstring, then reinjured it while testing the leg's strength on a Cybex machine.

When he told the club he was ready to get back on the field, he was instructed to wait an additional 48 hours. Murray, who before this season became the Orioles' first-ever captain, also has been booed at least twice at Memorial Stadium this season. According to his friends on the team, he's also upset by comments callers to nightly sports talk shows in Baltimore have made about whether he should be traded.

This season, although he is batting .303, Murray's extra-base hits have dropped off. He has 16 doubles and 12 homers in 98 games, with one home run in his last 27 games and six extra base hits in his last 26

Christmas comes early for dying 7-year-old

Nuckles may not live until Christmas, so a Texas group and a California man delivered Christmas in August.

The 7-year-old Nuckles boy, retarded and suffering from terminal cancer, spent the weekend with Santa Claus at Disneyland and Universal Studios.

Today, he'll join Saint Nick at a party that will also be attended by a 14-foot reindeer at a home blanketed with a ton of artificial

The Greensboro, N.C., youngster arrived in California Wednesday through the efforts of A Wish with Wings, based in Arlington. Texas, which grants the wishes of terminally ill children.

Robert George, 62, of Glendale, is the modern day Santa Claus who made the youngster's dream come true in Southern California - despite 90-degree-plus temperatures.

George, with his curly white hair and long matching beard. was appointed official Santa of the White House by President Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1956.

Mickey and Minnie Mouse greeted the Nuckles boy and George at Disneyland on Saturday. And on Sunday, a Mr. Tlookalike welcomed them at Universal Studios, where the boy also atured in the television series "Knight Rider."

"It was fun," the boy said in a telephone interview Sunday

The youngster heard about George through a mutual friend. When George found out the child wanted to spend an early Christmas at his red-and-white suburban home, dubbed "Santa's Dream World," he helped arrange the trip with a little help from Rep. Carlos Moorhead. R-Los Angeles, George said.

"We're giving him his Christmas dinner, his Christmas gifts because there's a big chance he won't be here at Christmas time," George said.

The 7 year old's cancer was diagnosed just two months ago, George said. Last month, the boy had a cancerous kidney removed and doctors gave him just months

Despite medication, the Nuckles boy is weak and had to rest frequently during his visit, George said. He returns home Wednesday. 'We don't know if it's three or four months," George said. 'He's slipping. He's lost his appe-

"It was a dream," George said, explaining why he built Santa's Dream World out of his home. "It's a sick world today. I'm promoting the memory of Jesus Christ, to love, to share and to give.'

George greets hundreds of visitors at his home each week and he often hosts young children like the Nuckles boy.

But Santa isn't the only celebrity heaping attention on young Nuckles. The child recently received a letter from President Reagan.

"I was sorry to learn that you have had to spend so much time in the hospital," the president wrote in the letter, dated Aug. 19. You have been very brave through some difficult times. Your family and friends are very George, a retired barber, dons proud of you because you've been an inspiration to all who know

Police launch self-defense program

DALLAS (AP) — Police who are worried about increasing injuries to officers have started a new self-defense program designed to teach what police academy didn't - how to survive on the street.

Vice Sgt. Tommy Wafer, for instance, says he emerged unhurt from a recent scuffle with a man trying to prevent police from arresting a cocaine dealer.

"He told me he'd lay me out." Wafer said, but moments later, the suspect was led away with two swollen eyes, a cut needing eight stitches and a split lip. 'That's called street fighting, not police training," Wafer said. "When I came through the academy (20 years ago), they weren't teaching self-defense." Police believe the new "Mini-

So far this year, four Dallas police officers have been shot and one killed. And 329 charges of assault on a police officer were filed in 1985, compared with 256 in Police said attacks on officers through June 1986 total 165, including two of the four shootings.

The increased attacks show a lack of respect for police and a criminal justice system that puts all but the most heinous criminals back on the street, said Assistant Chief Leslie Sweet.

The new safety training program begins this month for veterans and will be included in Dallas Police Academy courses over the next eight months, said Sgt. Danny Daniel of the intelligence divi-

"It's very extensive," said Chief Billy Prince.

Daniel said the self-defense program was necessary because many of Dallas' college-educated police officers were unlikely to have ever been in a street fight.

"Twenty years ago, (Dallas police) were large and mainly males. Now we've got everybody from a 5-foot-4 female to a 6-foot-4 man," Daniel said. "They didn't hang out in pool halls and street-fight. Daniel and Cpl. Frank Muscato spent nearly a year developing 90 safety recommendations for inclusion in the Minimum Risk Program, such as using a different safe-driving training course and buying a driving simulator.

Colvin was convicted in April 1983 of the July 12, 1982, armed robbery of a Shreveport delicatessen. Jurors, hearing a defense of insanity in Colvin's trial, deliberated only 13 minutes before discounting the plea and re-

Frontier folding leaves travelers stranded at D-FW

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) - William and Joyce Helland counted on being greeted by a smiling Frontier Airlines ticket agent when they reached Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport for a flight home.

But instead, they were met by a white posterboard sign that read, "Frontier Airlines has ceased operations. Contact other airlines for transportation.

Frontier, owned by People Express, shut down operations early Sunday morning because of financial difficulties. The only warning for many travelers were the signs at the airport.

The Helland family, of Minot, N.D., planned to take an 11:10 a.m. flight back home when they found the Frontier ticket counters closed.

"They stranded us," said Mrs. Helland, who was taking her first flight. After scrambling around the airport trying to find other airlines to accommodate them, the Hellands discovered that only Republic Airlines and 'what used to be Frontier' fly to their hometown. The trip home would cost them $240 each, but they only had enough cash for one ticket. "We have people on the other end trying to get money. As it is, if we get the other tickets bought up there, it will be 11 (p.m.) or so before we get there,'

Helland said. "They told us it (the possibility of a shutdown) had been in the news, but I didn't think we missed the news that much. We always had the car radio on," Mrs. Helland said. "It's a helpless feeling."

Continental, United and Braniff airlines honored Frontier tickets on a stand-by basis, while American Airlines said it would accept Frontier-issued tickets if they were purchased before Sunday and included travel on American.

American also said it would honor tickets including travel on Frontier that were issued by other Mayeax watched "Just how they (the inmates) got out, we don't know yet," said Blackburn.

Mrs. Mayeax was not injured and will probably return to Angola today, said Blackburn.

Angola is near the river in West Feliciana Parish, about 40 miles northwest of Baton Rouge, near the Mississippi line. Morganza is about 15 miles downriver from robbery in 1983. Weeks, of Monroe, La., was serving life plus 99 years for armed robbery. He was imprisoned in 1985.
