ORPHAN BOYS PREVENT TRAIN WRECK IN STORM

The wreck of a fast express carrying 500 passengers was narrowly averted at Passaic, N. J., during the height of an electric storm when six boy inmates of the Passaic Orphan Asylum stopped the train 50 feet from a washout in the embankment. The boys, seeing the washout from a window and knowing the train was due, ran a quarter of a mile in the rain to signal it to a stop. Gettin' Ready for The Big Meeting

News Glimpses At Preparations Being Made Throughout The Region For WTCC Convention Here May 11, 12 And 13

Big Issue

Biggest issue in four years of "West Texas Today" official West Texas Chamber of Commerce organ, is devoted principally to Big Spring, the convention city.

Local Gags Pop Off

Dons in color presenting a majestic picture is the municipal building photograph which graces the cover page. "Come and Get It" is Wendell Bedinek's message to members of other West Texas chambers. Shines hills, in characteristic style, tosses in an article headed "Come To Big Spring and help save the country."

What Again!

The Big Spring "big arrangers," E. J. Mary and Carl Blomsheld crash into limelight again with their cuts gracing a page of the issue.

Moving In

The convention is so near at hand you can feel it. The regular regional chamber office force moved in for the big meeting Monday afternoon.

Clara's Here; Nuf Sed

Clara Lively who has been in service of the West Texas chamber longer than any other employee, and Evelyn Warwick, office secretary, accompanied D. A. Bandeen, chamber manager, here. Miss Lively insists she is not the oldest employee, merely longest in the service. Both she and Miss Warwick rolled up their sleeves and started work only minutes after arriving.

Gus Taylor Com-...

Gus Taylor, past president of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce and president of the Citizens National bank of Tyler, plans to attend the convention here.

Sullivan May Get Here

Sullivan Evans, who has missed only one convention in the history of the regional chamber, is planning to attend from his duties as fourth assistant postmaster general long enough to come to Texas. And if he gets to Texas, nothing can keep him away from Big Spring and the meeting.

More Entries

There seems to be no end to entries in the My Home Town Contest. The list now has forty-five entries, Durrell Jones of Post and Bill Hayes of Amarillo having entered.

Decorations

Decorations are ready to be draped on local buildings to welcome visitors to the convention. American Legion members, in charge of decorating work, were shaking out moth balls Monday.

Works On Peave

Mrs. Lee Weathers continues to devote all of her time to the West Texas Revue, feature entertainment production of the convention. And she is getting results. Besides a chorus of beautiful vocalists, she will have twenty-five out of town girls appearing in the affair. That is eight more than last year.

Girls

Roscoe will be represented by Sid Grace who is to be Miss Canada, Ruth Holmes of Abilene will be Miss Egypt, and Cleo Ferguson of Toyah will be Miss Ireland, and Fort Stockton's Alice Till is to be Miss Italy, or Mussolini, whichever is appropriate.

Dr. Hardy Named

Dr. W. B. Hardy has been nominated as director in the West Texas chamber by Big Spring. When elected he will be the youngest director ever to serve from here.

W.T.C.C. Director

DR. WOFFORD B. HARDY, above, local dentist, Monday was named local director of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce for the coming year. The appointment was made by the president of the local Chamber of Commerce, who had been directed by the board of directors to select Big Spring's representative on the W.T.C.C. directorate.

Many Sales Must Be Made Within City

Goal Of 1,200 Must Be Reached Prevent Danger Of Deficit

Preconvention campaign for local registrations for the 65th annual West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention convening here Thursday, Friday and Saturday will end at 4 p. m. Tuesday.

Concentrated efforts will be exerted during the day to complete the Big Spring goal of 1,200 registrations prior to convention time. Approximately two-thirds of that number has been sold.

Unless the goal is reached prospects of Big Spring emerging from the convention without a deficit will be seriously endangered.

Many workers report a large percentage of their bills presented. They will be urged to complete sales Tuesday.

DARLING FOOL

by FRANK REICHERT

MONIE HERE TODAY
MONICA O'DARE is beautiful, is in love with DAN CARDIGAN, one of the town's rich young men. At a local dancing school where she has gone with her sister, friend, MARY DINA LAWRENCE, with a handsome and mysterious suitor, CHARLES EUSTACE.

HANDBA immediately takes charge of Dan, Monica, hurt at Charles to escort her home. When Monica's older brother, BILL, is arrested at the garage where he works she rushes to his aid.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER V
 Something in the policeman's tone stiffened Monica's trembling shoulders. She actually managed a laugh. "Bill arrested?" she echoed. "But that's absurd."

Bill's dark frown relaxed the moment Monica relaxed the satisfaction of seeing her mother straighten, look about her bravely. Absurd—of course it was absurd. Bill O'Dare under arrest! Why, he'd lived in Bolvedere all his 22 years. He was honest as the day was long! Everybody knew that. The big man who dominated the Hills scene found speech. He glared at Monica.

"Absurd, is it?" he belted. "And who, may I ask, are you?" "The big sister," Monica said, bringing the full battery of her flashing amber eyes to rest upon him. "Would you mind telling me what this is all about?"

Several people began to talk at once. The big man silenced them. "Maybe you don't know," he began facetiously, "that there's been a robbery down at the gas station—"

"It's not a lie you were drinkin' with the lot of them at last night," said the big man, enjoying the drama of this announcement. "He knows them. He was in on it. He left there early and he won't say where he went and who he was with. Guess that sounds guilty, don't it?"

"I didn't know them. They just worry. I'm sure everything's going to be all right."

 "Monica, I'm sorry," the older woman said in a low voice. "I'm not feeling very well."
 She swayed against the girl, her face lighted with a deadly pallor. Monica felt the world swimming around her for one dreadful moment. Then she heard a friendly voice, Charles Eustace's.

"Let me carry her to the car, Miss O'Dare."
 She saw him swing the slight figure of her mother over the running board. As in a dream, she followed him.

"That's right. You hold her head against your shoulder. She's just a bit faint. We'll stop by my uncle's office and get her something."
 The car flew along. Monica was conscious of curious faces along the way. How he had found her—how he had known where she was to be found or what the trouble was, she didn't even bother to consider. She was grateful from the bottom of her heart. She felt, in a vague way, that she had been a very special case of gratitude, that nothing she might ever do would repay this man for his kindness.

At last they were at home. Mrs. O'Dare, declaring herself able to walk now, had been assisted into the house, had willingly accepted the medicine Dr. Waterman had prescribed for her, and agreed to lie down for a short time. Monica went back into the living room where she found Charles Eustace, very big and masculine, among the ferns and looped curtains of her mother's domain.

"I don't know how to thank you. I suppose you've heard what fearful difficulties we're in."
 If she said any more, she was certain to cry. And she must not do that. She must keep her head at any cost.

"I did. I'm frightfully sorry. Can I help?"
 "You have already. Judge Cory is going down there." She ran her fingers nervously through her bronze curls. "You must believe my brother's innocent, Mr. Eustace. He couldn't have done this thing. It's not in him—I mean he simply couldn't!"

Her eyes challenged him. "I'm sure of it. Look here. I'll run down to see him—I haven't another thing to do. I'll stop by and let you know what I've found out. May it?"

"How kind he was! And she had only known him a few days. There was Dan who was supposed to be to Bill's innocence. Bill must be shielding her. That was why he wouldn't tell more about the night at Black Tree Inn. But maybe the woman would talk—and save Bill from disaster!"

Members of the senate Friday by unanimous vote adopted a concurrent resolution by Senator Duggan of this district, memorializing congress to so amend the Wagner bill as to allow use of federal relief funds for road building in sections of the state where the funds cannot profitably be used for reforestation, flood prevention or soil erosion control. The resolution was sent to the house. Senator Duggan introduced the resolution after a conference with Col. Lawrence Westbrook, state relief director. Under the present terms of the Wagner-Lewis half-billion dollar relief bill for direct grants to state, federal funds may be used only for reforestation, flood prevention or soil erosion control. Tiger Pitcher Strikes Out 20 In Sunday Victory Over Colorado Nine

Leonard Brunett, pitching for the Tigers, turned in a pitching masterpiece Sunday at Colorado, winning his game 5-1. His fast ball was too much for eleven Colorado batters, and Brunett piled up the high total of twenty strikeouts. Rector, Colorado third baseman, was the only player he failed to whiff. Brunett fanned three straight in the fourth, fifth, and ninth innings, and two in the second, third, sixth, seventh, and eighth innings. He opened fire in the first inning with a single strikeout. The splendid showing was spoiled by R. Cruz who held the ball too long after retrieving Scarborough's single. Johnny Brown scampered home blasting hopes for a shut out. Only four assists were turned in by Tiger fielders, and put outs behind the pitcher were held to seven. J. Garcia got the only extra base blow of the day, a double. Rector of Colorado led hitting with two for three. Box scores: TIGERS: ABRHPOAE Cruz, ss 5 0 0 0 0 0 Hernandez, 2b 4 0 0 1 1 0 Fierro, c 3 1 1 20 1 1 A. Meat, Potatoes and Gravy

MANY a meal is built around these three standbys—meat, potatoes and gravy. Invariably they are the first dishes that come to your mind as you plan your dinner. But in spite of their hunger-satisfying and nourishing qualities, this time-honored triumvirate can become monotonous unless it is supplemented by other dishes. However, it is often a problem to find these "side dishes" in your own head. Of course you can quiz your neighbor, or ask the members of your family what they would like. But even this source of information is often lacking in ideas.

The thing to do is read the advertisements in your newspaper. Every day your local markets display their foodstuffs on those printed pages. You'll read of new vegetables and fruits that have "just arrived." Your appetite will be aroused by the tasty creations of national food manufacturers. With pencil and paper you can make your market list and menus before you step out of the house.

Speaking of monotony, consider this. There are 11 different cuts of beef, 9 cuts of veal, 7 of lamb, 10 of pork; there are at least 20 different breakfast cereals sold in every store, 16 different canned vegetables, 6 canned fruits, a dozen or more canned meats and fish, numberless varieties of cakes and crackers. Why should there be monotony in meals with such a variety of foods available at your store and so many of them advertised in your paper?

Mrs. Tate Is Elected H. D. Chairman

Hooked Rug Demonstration Given By Midland Prize-Winner

A large group of rural women met at the City Federation building Saturday afternoon for the election of officers for the Home Demonstration Council and to hear Mrs. S. H. Gwyn of Midland in a hooked rug demonstration.

Mrs. F. C. Tate of Overton was elected chairman. Mrs. O. L. Thorpe, of Vealmoor, assistant chairman. Mrs. Wylie Davis of R-Bar secretary and Mrs. Jewel White, of Overton, reporter.

Mrs. Gwyn, whose hooked rug won first prize at the district convention recently held at Midland, brought the prize rug with her, along with a rug that had traveled to A. and M. College and to Washington, D. C. in a rug exhibit severed other hooked rugs and her working frame.

Mrs. Gwyn made the following suggestions: Hooked Rug Hints Use wool for floor rugs and alkis for wall hangings and pillows.

Don't cut strips too wide. Mrs. Gwyn cut hers about one-half inch. If goods is very thin use two strips instead of folding it.

If you are not going to clip the rug, cut the strips up and down, if you are clipping, it makes not difference how the strips are cut, whether around, bias or up and down.

Cliffon hose made good material and do not run as much as one would suppose.

Tear material instead of cutting when possible.

Old wool blankets make good material for wool rugs. Mrs. Gwyn displayed a rug whose background was made from a wool blanket the family wanted to use because it had been used to wrap every one of the ten children when they were babies.

Use Subdued Colors These colors do not look well on the floor, she said, and most women who have experimented with brightly colored rugs will bear out her statement. They are too bright for the rest of the rug and for the furniture. They put the spot of color in the wrong place.

Mrs. Gwyn advised bright colors for wall hangings and pillow tops but not for rugs. The rug which won the prize was one she had copied from "House Beautiful" and was very subdued with a decidedly neutral background.

She told women where to order patterns, how to make frames like hers.

She advised them to be sure that the bookers they bought would work with rags; some are made only for yarn.

She advised not clipping until the rug was finished, so that any change desired could be more easily made.

At the close of the meeting the women discussed the demonstration for the next open meeting, which will be held the first Saturday in June, commencing at 9 o'clock.

Chicken Demonstration Miss Myrtle Miller, home demonstration agent, will teach the women how to prepare chickens for market and how to dress them.

She suggested that every club bring a dress and a live chicken, a knife, dishpan, stew, towels and that there be at least two pressure cookers brought. The chickens, she said, should be culled, for advice killing only the culs for food.

She announced that she would give demonstration of chicken barbecue, chicken tamales and many other chicken recipes.

rapidly by granting discretionary powers. This is the inevitable procedure in dealing with a crisis of such procedure the test of good faith is that no permanent changes in the institution of the country should be made in the guise of emergency laws or by the use of discretionary powers.

For permanent changes should be made only after they have been fully debated and specifically authorized by congress. But in the use of temporary powers in an emergency there is nothing of a dictatorship.

Former Medical Student Given Opportunity For Reinstatement At School

AUSTIN (UP)—Thomas H. Foley, former student at the University of Texas School of Medicine at Galveston who was suspended on grounds of scholastic insufficiency, has been voted an opportunity for reinstatement, the university board of regents announced.

Foley was refused further study at the medical school because he allegedly failed to make a sufficient grade in biological chemistry.

He carried his fight for reinstatement to the state supreme court in a writ of mandamus to compel acquiescence to his reentry.

The board of regents voted that Foley be reinstated as a member of the sophomore class at the school of medicine in September, 1933, provided he passes, during the summer of 1933, the course in biological chemistry.

Limestone County Man Charged With Murder Angelo Man

STERLING CITY—Roger Thompson and Fred Moutray, both of Limestone county, charged in separate cases with murder in connection with the killing of H. M. Poland, oil boom days San Angelo gambler, are to go to trial here in district court this week.

Thompson is scheduled to face trial at 10 o'clock Monday morning and Moutray's case is to be called Wednesday morning.

The state, which will ask "the heaviest penalty" for Thompson, according to Glenn R. Robbery is the suspected motive.

Silver Inflation Starts Boom Of Prices Of Books

WASHINGTON (UP)—Silver inflation is making itself felt in Washington's second-hand book stores.

Book sellers who have watched their volumes on silver collect the dust of decades are finding a suddenly revived interest in them.

Many of the books were holdovers from the Bryan campaign. One book seller, Schiller, with held his books on money and economics when he sent a batch of books to a department store for a bargain sale.

A few years ago advocates of silver recoinage were like voices crying in the wilderness. The attitude was that the issue died with Bryan's defeat. That has changed.

Speaker Rainey of the house campaigned with Bryan and likes to describe himself as "one of the original 16-to-1 men." New reputations are being made and new careers given a stronger foundation.

Senator Pittman is in great demand as a silver expert and probably will be sent to the London economic conference next month because of his familiarity with silver and its relations to foreign trade.

TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LIPPMANN Has Congress Abdicated?

No congress, except in times of war, has ever enacted so many important measures in so short a time. Naturally, there is a feeling, in congress, and some feeling elsewhere, that such rapid legislation involving such concentration of powers in the executive is to be watched with considerable concern.

This is a good sign. It arises from a sound democratic instinct, which is, and always should be, suspicious of centralized power. The burden of proof is on those who believe that the present procedure is necessary and desirable and that there are adequate safeguards against the impairment of representative government.

Criticism of the present procedure turns very largely on two points. The first is that congress is legislating without adequate debate or understanding of the measures. The second is that it is granting large blanket powers.

The criticism that congress is legislating without knowledge is much less true than at first it appears. The only important example I can think of was the banking legislation at the beginning of the session when it is said that the house voted before printed copies of the bill were available. But this was literally emergency legislation. The banks were closed. The nation had no medium of exchange. Delay was not possible. Since the bill did not alter the banking system includes:

Amendment to the present law limiting labor of women workers to nine hours a day and 54 hours a week. The law was changed to insert penalties that had been omitted and amended to include employees of roadside lunch stands and beauty shops.

Repeal of the Emigrant Agency law passed when farm labor was scarce in Texas.

Extension of semi-monthly payday law to include all employers. The law is not effective now against a person or firm with less than ten employees.

Raising ban on child labor from 15 to 18 years.

Providing a $12 minimum wage for women.

Licensing automobile and airplane mechanics.

Amending plumbers law.

State law to forbid intrastate shipments that are prohibited across state lines by the national 30-hour-law.

Licensing electricians.

State law to duplicate national law against enforcement of "yellow dog" labor contracts which bind employees not to join unions.

Requiring bidders on state road work to specify what wages will be paid.

But these measures are inter-related. The economy bill, for example, is designed to balance the budget. But the budget cannot be balanced without knowing what is to be spent on public works or whether revenues are to be had from beer. The monetary measures are intimately related to the budget. They are also intimately related to the tariff and the war debts. In other words, the nature of the crisis is such that isolated measures are valueless. Only a program of measures dealing with all the elements of the problem could do any good. That meant that the program had to be carried through in, say, ninety days if the effects were to be realized before another winter comes around.

There was, therefore, no alternative to the procedure of legislating permanently, the abdication of judgment was mere common sense. But after the banking bill, it became increasingly less true to say that congress has not understood the laws it was passing. It evaded the economic bill. There is nothing pertaining to veterans' legislation or federal office holders that congress is not thoroughly familiar with. Congress knew quite well what it was authorizing when it passed that bill. There came the beer bill. There was nothing about that which had not been discussed thoroughly. There were the bills for relief to the unemployed and for the reforestation crops. Congress has been fully informed about the conditions which made federal action necessary.

Then there is the farm bill, which contains almost everything except the kitchen stove. The first third of the bill contains an assorted collection of farm relief plans which have been debated in congress and on the stump for nearly two years. The second third of the bill contains a plan of mortgage relief which is certainly not an unfamiliar subject. The final third of the bill contains the permissive inflation powers, and here, whatever else one may say or think, it cannot be denied that the will to inflate is the will of congress.

A number of other measures involving vast powers of control over industry have been talked about. But the event is likely to show that there is more talk than reality in them. There is Muscle Shoals which congress has been discussing for a decade. There remain as likely measures, a public works program which is no novelty, authorization to reduce tariffs and to deal with war debts. It cannot be said that congress has not considered tariff and war debts.

Thus it is, I think, fair to conclude that the program is not one which congress has had no opportunity to consider. There are, of course, now members who do not know much about these bills. But the older men have, for the most part, been legislating on matters that have been discussed at great length.

Turning to the criticism that congress, instead of making decisions, has been granting powers to come to the essence of the question. A choice had to be made. If definitive bills were to be introduced, and if congress was to render judgment specifically on each question of policy, it would have required months to draft the bills and debate them. This would have meant that congress would have had to sit continuously throughout the summer and autumn. It would have meant also that measures needed to deal with the crisis would have been enacted in a slow series, say, at the rate of one a month.

But these measures are inter-related. The economy bill, for example, is designed to balance the budget. But the budget cannot be balanced without knowing what is to be spent on public works or whether revenues are to be had from beer. The monetary measures are intimately related to the budget. They are also intimately related to the tariff and the war debts. In other words, the nature of the crisis is such that isolated measures are valueless. Only a program of measures dealing with all the elements of the problem could do any good. That meant that the program had to be carried through in, say, ninety days if the effects were to be realized before another winter comes around.

There was, therefore, no alternative to the procedure of legislating

PAGE TWO Big Spring Druggists

By Gordon K. Shearer

AUSTIN (UP)—Present Texas congressmen have no cause for complaint of the new redistricting bill.

A study of the new districts shows that every congressman's home town has been left in his old district and that a new district is carved around the home town of one of the three congressmen-at-large.

Dallas has two of the three congressmen-at-large in addition to its old district congressman so it was impossible to put each of them in a separate district. With that exception the new redistricting places no two present congressmen in the same district.

George E. Terrell, the third congressman-at-large, has a new district placed about his home town, Alto, in Cherokee county.

Congressman Hinton W. Sumners of the old Fifth District and Congressman-at-Large Joe W. Bailey Jr. and Sterling P. Strong all live in Dallas. Dallas county is made a district to itself in the new congressional map. Rockwall and Ellis counties, both formerly grouped with Dallas, are transferred to the Fourth and Sixth districts, respectively.

The fact that Dallas has three of the 21 congressmen was one of the arguments for redistricting.

Bexar county, which has been a part of Congressman Richard Kleberg's district, now becomes a separate district. Approximately 25 prospective candidates to represent it are already being mentioned.

Bexar county representatives in the state legislature, John K. Weber, Henry Hirschberg, Henry Diehlmann, Maury Maverick and Former State Senator W. A. Williamson are mentioned as possible candidates.

Many of the counties in the new Fourteenth district consider themselves aggrieved by the arrangement. Rep. J. P. Young, Cuero, said representatives from each county moved out of Congressman Manfield's old district into new ones objected.

Ross S. Sterling, former governor recently referred to in the house of representatives as "only a mad assmory," paid a visit to Austin May 2. He did not visit the capitol merely remaining at a downtown hotel. He was not here on any mission but accompanied Mrs. Sterling who was attending a club function.

Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson's signing the 22 beer bill is to be made an "event." Leading advocates of the bill have asked that the formal signing be postponed until arrangements can be made for sound and motion pictures.

Rep. Harry Graves, Georgetown, says he has letters from farmers in Williamson county, reporting that the federal employment camps are making farm labor scarce.

He cited letters in which farmers said men offered employment as cotton choppers replied that they preferred to enter the "forest Army."

State Labor Commissioner Jack Flynn has prepared a list of labor measures that have been placed before the 48th legislature. His list
