Report prompts police shakeup

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

A consulting firm's evaluation of the Pampa Police Department, which found numerous problems inside police headquarters, has led to a shakeup in the department's leadership and structure.

The consultant's report, which was discussed in a closed commission meeting in early September, has led to a revamping of the police command structure and the demotion of the department's No. 2 administrator.

The study also found terrible morale in the department, confusion created by conflicting orders issued by different supervisors and resentment of City Manager Bob Hart.

Roy Denman, a police captain for the past seven years, was demoted to the rank of lieutenant last week in a move that Stephens Management Consultants Inc. of Canyon, which conducted the $6,000 study, says will lead to greater efficiency within the department.

The study, which was based on interviews with department personnel over a period of about three months, criticized placing a captain over one of the department's three divisions, while the other two were being directed by lower-ranking lieutenants. Denman has supervised the department's all-civilian service division, which includes dispatchers, records clerks, traffic control officer, and the crime prevention-school liaison officer.

The report criticized having a captain over the service division when the other two divisions, the patrol and criminal investigations divisions, had a lower-ranking supervisor.

"In view of the fact that the patrol division is composed of 19 uniformed officers, and the CID division is composed of six officers, we cannot justify the position of captain for a division composed primarily of civilian officers," the report said. "Further, none of the organizational charts that are available to us indicate that the captain has authority over any division other than his own."

The study reveals that neither of the divisional lieutenants ever reported to Denman, but instead were directly responsible to Police Chief J.J. Ryzman.

"We believe that all three (divisions) should be headed by persons of equal rank," the study reads. "Since the two uniformed divisions are headed by lieutenants, we believe that the right and proper rank for the service division commander is that of lieutenant."

Ryzman said today that the change in Denman's rank was a demotion in name only, designed only to straighten out confusion over the department's chain of command.

"It's an efficiency move," he said, adding that Denman probably will continue to act as chief in Ryzman's absence, as he has in the past.

But Denman, who retains his previous salary, called the demotion unfair. He said it would have been smarter for the department to maintain the rank of captain until he retires in six years or so, then eliminate it.

"It's created an embarrassing situation for me because people think if you've been demoted in rank, you've done something wrong," he said.

He indicated he expects the report to be used to Recount coming in judge's race

CANADIAN — Don Schaefer, who lost to incumbent Hemphill County Judge Bob Gober by 15 votes in Tuesday's election, is seeking a recount, the Hemphill County clerk's office confirmed Thursday.

County Clerk Jerry Vandiver said the recount is scheduled for 9:30 a.m. Thursday, if she can get the election committee together. Vandiver expects the count to take all day.

Gober defeated Schaefer 774-759 in Tuesday's general election. Schaefer beat Gober in the May Democratic primary, but Gober turned around and ran as a write-in candidate for the general election.

Schaefer, a former president of the First National Bank of Canadian, confirmed this morning that he is seeking the recount but referred other questions to his attorney, Mack Sansing of Canadian.

"But I can tell you now, he won't have any comment either," Shaef said.

Sansing said his client is seeking the recount in the county judge's race because the vote was so close and that "there were a lot of ballots not counted."

Sansing observed that in the final tallies, there were 88 fewer votes in the judge's race than in general election. He explained that if a candidate loses by less than a 10-percent margin, he may ask for a recount.

"So, there can be a difference of 75 votes and still be a recount," Sansing said.

County names Roberts to magistrate's office

Gray County commissioners today appointed newly elected Justice of the Peace Wayne Roberts to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of David Potter.

Democrat Roberts was duly sworn in to the Precinct 2 post.

He will take office officially on Monday, nearly two months ahead of his January installation date after winning Tuesday's election against write-in candidate Margie Prestidge.

Potter, a Republican, submitted his letter of resignation effective Nov. 5. He has taken a position as jailer with the Gray County Sheriff's Department.

The Commissioners Court also approved the bond for Roberts.

In other action today, commissioners accepted the voting tabulations from Tuesday's election with a few minor changes, County Judge Carl Kennedy said.

Hostage returns home today; Reagan to welcome Jacobsen

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Freed hostage David Jacobsen flew to the United States today, returning home to a welcome from President Reagan after 17 months of captivity in Lebanon.

"It's a marvelous morning, and it's wonderful to be going home," he said.

Jacobsen and his family smiled and waved happily to reporters at Rhein-Main Air Base outside Frankfurt before boarding a C-141 Air Force plane for the trip to Washington.

home to the most wonderful country in the world," Jacobsen said in a brief departure statement.

He thanked the German people for their hospitality, and gave a "special thanks" to the staff at the U.S. Air Force Hospital at Wiesbaden.

Jacobsen, his three grown children and their spouses had left the U.S. Air Force hospital and hotel complex in Wiesbaden, near Frankfurt, before dawn.

They rode to the airport in an Air Force bus, escorted by military vehicles with blue lights flashing.

Jacobsen had been undergoing medical examinations and resting at the Wiesbaden hospital since Monday, when he arrived in West Germany a day after his Shiite Moslem captors released him in Lebanon. Doctors said he had no medical problem resulting from his captivity, but advised that he have routine follow-up tests back home in Huntington Beach, Calif.

Children found dead in dryer

MIAMI (AP) — A mother whose unattended children were found dead in a clothes dryer told police she left them alone when she went to work because she expected the baby sitter to arrive shortly.

Linda Grant found her sons, 4-year-old Anthony and 3-year-old Maurice, burned to death when she returned from work Thursday afternoon, said police spokeswoman Deborah Wilson.

Police said Grant, 32, had baby-sitting problems all week, and had called in sick to her job at an elementary school cafeteria Monday when she couldn't find anyone to stay with the children.

Grant told police she had made arrangements for a sitter Thursday, but left for work about 7 a.m. when the baby sitter did not arrive on time.

Ms. Grant found the bodies when she returned home about 3 p.m.

The dryer had been set to start when the door closed, and the children probably closed the door after climbing inside, said Detective Bruce Robertson.

Fire report

The Pampa Fire Department reported no fire runs in the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

Shakeup

make other personnel changes in the department. "I've been the first sacrificial lamb," Denman said today.

The study listed numerous internal complaints in the Police Department and City Hall that led Stephens Management to perceive morale in the department as "generally quite low."

The study first was presented to city commissioners in September during a closed session, Hart said today.

Even though Denman was demoted, the commission has taken no official action on the report, and Hart said he does not plan to recommend any.

"Their response was 'The police chief works for you, and you're responsible for the operation of the Police Department, and whatever it takes to straighten it out, you have our blessing,'" Hart said.

He said the original intent of the study was to provide an internal document to improve the department. He also warned against publicizing the report.

Both Stephens Management representatives who conducted the study have doctorates in areas of political science management and administration and have done similar studies in the past, Hart said.

Attempts to reach Stephens Management by phone were unsuccessful. A Southwestern Bell operator could find no telephone listing for the firm at its Canyon address.

Pampa Mayor Sherman Cowan also was unavailable for comment for his views on the report.

Among the reasons listed for low morale among Pampa police officers were an ineffective chain of command and Ryzman's failure to delegate authority to his subordinates.

"None of the upper-level management, the mid-management, nor the lower-ranking subordinates, felt that they had any sort of authority or discretionary responsibilities, at all," the report states. "They believed that all of the authority was being held at the commanding officer level and that they were unable to use the authority that they felt was needed to accomplish their task."

Subordinate officers felt "countermanded, unduly criticized" and victims of constantly changing policies and procedures "which whipsawed them back and forth, with no input into the decision-making process," the study reports.

Officers also felt subject to contradictory orders by their supervisors, according to the study.

Recount

"We don't know of any improprieties, nor are we looking for anything," he added. "If a ballot is not properly marked, it can be thrown out."

Sansing said that normally, the county judge is the presiding officer over a recount. But since incumbent Judge Gober is the subject of the recount, the duties will be turned over to the county clerk.

Vandiver said she appointed four county voters to the committee that will recount the votes Thursday. If a candidate is not satisfied with the committee's decision, he can contest it in district court.

When contacted election night,

Gober predicted that Shaeff would seek the recount, and this morning he said he wasn't surprised by the loser's decision.

However, Gober said that if the tables were turned and he had lost by 15 votes, he would not have sought the recount.

"If it had been by one vote, I would have, but not by as many as 15 votes," Gober said.

Unemployment holding steady

WASHINGTON (AP)—The economy created about 300,000 to 350,000 jobs last month, just enough to keep up with a growing labor force and hold the nation's civilian unemployment at 7.0 percent, the government announced today.

The Labor Department said its monthly household survey showed a job growth of 349,000 after seasonal adjustments, offsetting an identical decline in September.

But the labor force grew by 360,000 last month, the first increase since June. In the last year, 2 million people have joined the labor force in search of work, nearly 75 percent of whom were women.

In a separate survey of business payrolls, employers reported adding 298,000 jobs in October, 175,000 of them in business and hospital services and in retail trade.

But the household survey said that most of the job growth — 228,000 — was in part-time work.

Addressing the small growth in full-time jobs, the commissioner of labor statistics, Janet L. Norwood, told a congressional committee today that 5.8 million Americans who had sought full-time work had to settle for part-time employment last month.

She called that "a rather high number for this stage of a recovery."

She also commented that "almost all of the job gains occurred among women and teen-agers, a good deal of it in part-time jobs."

The White House continued to paint a rosy picture of the economy, with spokesman Larry Speakes saying that "the Reagan economic expansion is now nearing the 12 million mark in new jobs created."

"We expect the expansion to continue, and with the help of the recently enacted Tax Reform Act and shrinking federal budget deficits, today's growth may soon reach boom levels," Speakes said.

Altogether, 110,240,000 people were on the job last month, more than 20 million of them part-time workers. The working total represents 60.8 percent of the adult population, down 0.1 percentage point from the August record of 60.9 percent.

The government listed 8,242,000 people as officially unemployed last month, a decline of 87,000 from September but still well above the 8,027,000 in August, when the jobless rate was 6.8 percent.

The 298,000 increase in payroll workers was more than twice the average monthly gain of the previous five months. Mining, the oil and gas industry and manufacturing employment all rose slightly in October after falling a total 350,000 since the first of the year.

Manufacturing employment rose by 27,000, oil and gas by 1,000 and mining by 2,000.

The unemployment rate for adult men held at 6.2 percent, the level it has maintained for four of the last five months and the same rate as in October 1985.

Joblessness among adult women has fallen from 6.4 percent to 6.1 percent in the last year.

For other population groups, the Bureau of Labor Statistics gave these October unemployment calculations:

- Whites, 6.0 percent, unchanged.
- Blacks, 14.4 percent, down from 14.8 in September.
- Hispanics, 10.5 percent, down from 11.1.
- Teenagers, 17.6 percent, down from 18.7.
- Black teen-agers, 34.8 percent, down from 38.3.

An alternate unemployment rate, including the 1.75 million members of the armed forces stationed in the United States, also held flat last month, at 6.9 percent.

Auction scheduled Saturday at Groom

GROOM — A public auction to sell the contents of the vacant Groom Memorial Hospital will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday at the hospital.

Doors open at 8 a.m. for inspection of the items up for sale.

The sale is sponsored by the Groom Economic Development Corp.

Proceeds will go to convert the hospital — built by the community in the early 1960s — into a community center.

The community center will feature a meeting room for senior citizens in one wing and a clinic in the other wing.

The hospital closed in 1980. Several efforts to reopen the hospital failed.

TV reporters cleared in contempt procedure

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Two journalists cited for contempt of court avoided jail after meeting privately with the judge in a multiple murder case, who concluded they knew nothing that would help the defense.

"I feel good about the outcome, but I don't feel good about the way it came to this point," KGTV-TV reporter Steve Fiorina said outside court Thursday. "I think the defense attorneys were playing games and we were the pawns. ... It was a situation where we had nothing to offer and they kept pushing the point for no reason."

Fiorina and KGTV assignment editor J.W. August were cited for contempt in February when they declined to reveal unpublished information gathered in their coverage of the investigation leading to the arrest of David Allen Lucas. Lucas is charged with six murders and one attempted murder.

Superior Court Judge Franklin Orfield delayed action in the case while the station appealed. The finding was upheld in October.

On Wednesday, Orfield threatened to jail Fiorina and August for the duration of Lucas' trial unless they revealed the information sought by defense attorneys.

The newsmen argued that the state's Shield Law protects journalists from disclosing confidential sources or unpublished information gathered in the process of working on a story.

The judge stayed the sentence until Thursday morning when he agreed to a request by the journalists' attorney to question them privately in chambers without attorneys present. Lucas' defense attorneys objected to the idea.

Health textbook rejected Doesn't include sex education

AUSTIN (AP)—A widely used high school health textbook should be knocked off the state-approved list because it does not include sex education, State Board of Education members have recommended.

In a 7-3 Thursday vote, the board tentatively backed a critic's call to bar Texas schools from using "Modern Health." A final board vote is set for Saturday.

An official with Holt, Rinehart and Winston, publisher of the book, said the volume does not talk about sex education because many districts prefer it that way.

"There are areas that feel very uncomfortable with blatant sex education," said Dan Franck of New York, a senior editor with the publisher.

But board member Rebecca Canning of Waco said districts should not be allowed to use a health education book that does not include sex education information.

"It is necessary to talk about human reproduction," she said.

Textbook critic Elizabeth Judge of Houston told the board that "Modern Health" leaves students without crucial information about reproduction and sexually transmitted diseases.

"Students learning about reproduction from 'Modern Health' will not know the male has anything to do with reproduction," she told the board.

The board, sitting as a committee of the whole, recommended approval of four health education books that do include sex education information.

Also Thursday, the board voted to require all high school health textbooks to include a section on AIDS.

"Modern Health" has been the most widely used high school health textbook in Texas for several years, according to Franck.

"We have built our books based on extensive nationwide surveys of what teachers need," Franck told the board, adding his company's book meets all Texas requirements.

But Mrs. Canning said the volume is no longer adequate for a state with major problems with sexually transmitted diseases and school-age pregnancies.

Susan Nation, an Austin teacher and member of the textbook committee that made recommendations to the board, said "Modern Health" was placed on the list because some districts do not want to teach sex education.

"We had feedback from some committee members that a textbook with sex education would not be used," she said.

Vidal Trevino, textbook committee chairman and Laredo ISD superintendent, said "Modern Health" should be left on the list.

"I do not believe it is the responsibility of the state to dictate to 1,100 districts to what extent they will teach sex education," he said.

After the vote, Franck said his company would try to get back on the approved list by offering separate sex education book that can be used in conjunction with "Modern Health."

He said Thursday's vote could prove costly to his firm because $5 million worth of health education textbooks will be purchased by Texas schools. "Modern Health," which is on the current approved list, is used in about 40 percent of Texas schools, he said.

"They have taken a strong hand in directing that sex education will be taught in Texas schools," Franck said of the board vote.

Delayed warrant for arrest sparks fears for one family

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—Members of a San Antonio family say they lived in terror for six days because red tape delayed the issuing of an arrest warrant for a man charged with killing a loved one and her boyfriend.

Leopoldo Lugo and his family were armed and barricaded in their home starting Saturday night, when Lugo's daughter, Ester, and her boyfriend, were shot and killed.

Ms. Lugo and Armando Rodriguez were shot as they sat in a pickup truck in her sister's driveway.

Three witnesses identified the attacker.

But police could not arrest the suspect because the district attorney's office did not approve a warrant until late Thursday, two days after the police delivered the case file.

Meanwhile, the Lugos believed they knew the killer, and they feared that he might come after one of them.

Police Lt. Jack Summey said it took two days to investigate and prepare a file on the slaying.

Summey said the file was delivered to the district attorney's office early Tuesday.

Assistant District Attorney Therese Huntzinger said the file was not acted on immediately because the officer who delivered it did not tell her office an emergency warrant was needed.

Ms. Huntzinger said once she learned of the situation, a warrant was issued within hours.

Police have charged Ms. Lugo's ex-husband, Jose T. Zepeda, 32, with murder in connection with the incident.

He was being sought Thursday night.

Leopoldo Lugo armed himself with a rifle, a shotgun and two pistols to protect his wife, six children and 10 grandchildren until police arrested Zepeda, a family member said.

The family had obtained a peace bond June 10 ordering Zepeda to stay away from their home.

After the family had expressed concern, police provided protection at the funeral and parked outside their house until Tuesday, but there have been only routine patrols since then, said Gloria Lugo, Ester's sister.

Leopoldo Lugo, owner of a recreation center, said he has not worked since the shooting for fear of being killed.

Fear also prompted the Lugos to keep their six children home from school this week.

Government reports violations by Texas Rural Legal Aid

WASHINGTON (AP)—Officials at Texas Rural Legal Aid are being asked by the federal government to turn over documents detailing the program's operations within the next month or risk losing $4 million in annual grants.

The demand was made in a report from Legal Services Corporation, a non-profit watchdog organization set up by Congress to disburse federal funds to legal aid groups representing low-income clients.

Anthony Gomes, manager of the Legal Services Corporation monitoring division, accused Texas Rural Legal Aid of refusing to turn over a series of documents sought in a probe of the program's policies and procedures.

"TRLA's response is replete with unsubstantiated, self-serving assertions on matters for which TRLA has control of the most relevant documents and witnesses," Gomes said in a letter to Texas legal aid executive director, David G. Hall.

"Legal Services Corporation suspects that this was primarily a mechanism to obstruct the monitoring process."

Based on the information its monitors were able to collect, the government organization reported that TRLA has violated "numerous provisions of the Legal Services Corporation Act and its implementing regulations."

Among violations cited were that TRLA did not prohibit its employees from engaging in or encouraging public demonstrations, permit only TRLA employees to respond to governmental requests, and insure that funds were not used to initiate formation of unions.

The government report went on to demand a comprehensive corrective action plan showing the legal aid program is in complete compliance with federal law by Dec. 1.

The government is particularly interested in finding out what happened to $836,000 the program had transferred to the Texas Rural Legal Aid Foundation, an entity set up by TRLA, Gomes said in his letter to Hall.

"TRLA must account for those funds ... or repay Legal Services Corporation," Gomes said.

A U.S. Government Accounting Office study determined the primary reason the "mirror" foundation was established was to keep the government from recovering excess funding of $585,000 in 1982, $194,000 in 1983 and $186,000 in 1984, Gomes said.

Hall was unavailable for comment Thursday.

The probe of the Texas Rural Legal Aid program took place during October and November of 1985, at which time "Legal Services Corporation monitors encountered resistance from TRLA during the visits," according to the report.

Monitors were not allowed to continue their probe for the two weeks that they had intended, but were limited to only one week, and employees of TRLA were less than candid when questioned, the report says.

"Most importantly, TRLA established the requirement that almost all of the documents requested by Legal Services Corporation monitors were to be reviewed for the attorney-client privilege ... in a manner that caused extensive delays," the report states.

Study says federal agencies are harming the public lands

DALLAS (AP)—Ownership of public lands should be shifted to the private sector because policies and programs of federal agencies are killing wildlife and destroying forests, a study says.

"(The federal government's) track record shows it has been a very poor manager of many millions of acres of precious natural resources while taxpayers have been footing the bill," the study says.

Environmental economist John Baden prepared the report. He heads the Maguire Oil and Gas Institute at Southern Methodist University.

The white-tailed deer, the mountain lion, bobcat, wolverine and lynx have disappeared from Yellowstone National Park, and the Rocky Mountain gray wolf has become extinct, due to policies of the National Park Service, Baden said.

The study says groups such as the Audubon Society, the Nature Conservancy, the Environmental Defense Fund and the Wilderness Society could receive some lands by gift, trade or sale and manage them, while private firms would buy federal lands used mainly for commercial purposes.

Officials of the National Park Service and U.S. Forest Service said they had not seen the study and could not comment.

Baden said the National Park Service has tried to conceal its activities. He said Yellowstone Park officials have allowed studies on non-sensitive issues, but have discouraged research on other subjects that might show their policies have failed.

Baden also said the Bureau of Land Management has been responsible for destroying more than three million acres of wildlife habitat.

"The Forest Service is perhaps best understood as the world's largest road-building company," Baden said in the report. Under the auspices of the Forest Service, about 342,000 miles of roads have been built in national forests, said the study.

The mileage is more than eight times that of the U.S. interstate highway system, Baden said.

State appeals judge's order

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—The state of Texas has asked a federal appeals court to overturn a federal judge's order blocking the transfer of minimum security prisoners to a former National Guard fort.

The state says the move is necessary to help resolve overcrowding in the prison system.

At issue is the Texas Prison Management Act, which dictates that a ceiling of 95 percent occupancy be maintained by releasing prisoners at the ratio other felons are ordered behind bars.

After an hour-long hearing Thursday before the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, the inmates' lawyer, William Bennett Turner, said the law had never been put into effect because Texas Gov. Mark White did not want to be known as the man who set convicted felons loose.

Texas Assistant Attorney General Scott McCown, arguing that unprecedented arrests and convictions were aggravating the prison situation, said, "We would have more prisoners if we had built expanded facilities," and insisted that expanded facilities would be ready by next summer.

Turner responded, "I have learned from 12 years in this case ... that they (the Texas Department of Corrections) have never met a construction deadline."

No indication was given when the appeals court would rule.

On Sept. 10, White announced that 300 minimum security prisoners would be moved from state prisons to a National Guard armory at Fort Wolters, near Mineral Wells, Texas, to keep prisons within 95 percent of capacity and avoid early releases of inmates that would be mandated if that percentage was reached.

But U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice issued an order blocking the move.

Justice said the transfer would deny prisoners "adequate medical treatment, academic and vocational education, adequate space for visiting, outdoor recreation, and arts and crafts recreation."

Turner said the state law was drawn up to relieve a "grievous wrong": unconstitutional conditions violating the Eighth Amendment rights against cruel and unusual punishment.

He said the Texas Department of Corrections was 1,000 officers short and couldn't even provide basic necessities such as adequate clothing.

Three-day rally, counseling sessions planned

MCKINNEY (AP)—Organizers hope to draw at least 100,000 Vietnam veterans and family members to a giant rally and counseling session next spring in Dallas.

Stan Hall, one of the organizers of Nam Fest '87, said the City of Dallas has issued a permit for the nationwide reunion May 15-17 in the Trinity River flood plain.

"We hope to get all veterans and their families to come together and help them deal with whatever problems are left from the war," Hall said. "We want to help alleviate their feelings of guilt and depression, to deal with their past and bury the ghosts. We want to more or less welcome them back with open arms."

Hall said plans for the rally are not complete. But he hopes to have counselors there for veterans and their families. Hall also plans to invite experts to conduct panel discussions on the war, its causes and effects. He said Veterans Administration officials will explain delayed stress syndrome and will talk about Agent Orange, a chemical that was sprayed in Vietnam and is linked to diseases contracted by Vietnam veterans.

Hall also hopes to line up rock bands to play music popular in the 1960s. He also plans to invite politicians from the war era.

Hall said he and co-organizer Holly Peer are looking for donations and corporate sponsors for the event.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Socialism creates growling in Greece

Smart observers have known for a long time that socialism is a bust. It tends toward the kind of tight, centralized controls that choke economic growth and stifle entrepreneurial zeal. Socialist planners can't deliver better living standards and usually end up presiding over stagnating systems mired in recrimination.

Usually a long lag time, however, falls between recognition of economic reality and political disillusionment. Long after it has become apparent to systematic students that socialist politicians cannot deliver the goods, these same politicians may still be winning elections with promises, emotions, hope and nostalgia.

The defeat of candidates supported by Prime Minister Andreas Papandreu's socialist party, the Panhellenic Socialist Movement (PASOK), in three of the four largest cities in Greece indicates that the process of disillusionment is well under way in the "cradle of democracy." The Socialist mayor of Athens was expected to lose because the Communists had withdrawn support after a fraternal squabble, but most observers considered the Socialist incumbents in Salonika and Piraeus to encounter little trouble.

The disillusionment with Papandreu's Socialists seems to have little to do with the prime minister's occasional seizures of anti-Americanism. Rather, Greek voters seem upset with how the Socialists have messed up the economy.

A wage freeze has been in effect for two years, while rents and taxes have continued to rise. Inflation is down from a rate of 25 percent last December, but at 16 percent it is apparently unacceptable to most Greeks — especially those whose wages have been frozen. Unemployment has climbed to more than 9 percent. And Papandreu plans to continue wage controls and an austerity program to reduce the government's $3.3 billion budget deficit and $16 billion foreign debt.

Greek voters may not be rejecting socialism explicitly, and the "conservatives" of Greece's new Democracy party may not have any better solutions than the Socialists. It takes more than one election to implement policies that respect private property and encourage a market independent of political controls. At least in Greece, however — as in so many countries that have flirted with socialism — that failure of central planning is becoming obvious to most voters.

Hark! Condoms sold here

The battle against AIDS has encountered several common reactions, notably squeamishness, homophobia and simple lack of interest. That would be fine if the resulting ignorance were a defense against infection. In fact, it is a prime accomplice. Some of the people who have breezed along thinking themselves exempted by their heterosexuality or their monogamy are learning that they too are vulnerable.

A recent report published by the National Academy of Sciences summarized the evidence about the growing toll of this fatal, incurable disease. By the end of 1991, the report estimated, AIDS will afflict 270,000 Americans and will have killed 179,000. Most of these will be homosexual men or drug users, but roughly 7,000 victims will get the disease through heterosexual contact. Others will get it from contaminated blood used in transfusions. And, because AIDS can be passed from mothers to infants during pregnancy or childbirth, 3,000 children will be infected. AIDS no longer can be dismissed as the deserved fate of homosexuals who have defied nature. It is a disease that threatens literally everyone.

That's why preventive measures are critical. But prevention has gotten short shrift in the effort to contain AIDS. Because everyone knows the disease can be transmitted sexually, everyone knows that chastity and monogamy provide a high degree of protection. For many people, though, those aren't very inviting options. Only recently has it begun to seep into the public consciousness that there is another way to avoid getting AIDS through sex: condoms. Prudishness and hypocrisy have stifled the single most effective measure to slow the epidemic.

Both the NAS study and a recent report by the surgeon general stress the point. The former noted, "Condoms have been shown under laboratory conditions to obstruct passage of the virus. They should be much more widely available and more consistently used."

Surgeon General C. Everett Koop's report urges the use of condoms and includes a photograph of one for the uninitiated. His advice is blunt: "A condom should be used during sexual relations, from start to finish, with anyone whom you know or suspect is infected." The message can be made blunter still: Anyone who goes to bed with someone without being certain that he or she is free of the virus, and without using a condom, is playing Russian roulette.

Given the lethal nature of the disease, and the almost complete protection provided by condoms, you would expect their sales to be soaring. But demand has risen by only about 10 percent over the past year. The only explanation, barring an unnoticed outbreak of celibacy, is that most people still don't know how valuable condoms are.

Why not? Mainly because the mass media, particularly television, newspapers and magazines, have shrunk from the controversial step of allowing advertising for condoms. The three networks, along with many magazines and most newspapers, so far refuse to open this channel of communication, despite its vast potential for saving lives.

The policy would be more defensible if it reflected a principled stand in favor of old-fashioned morality. But anyone who ever tuned in to "Dallas" or "Moonlighting," to say nothing of the daytime soaps, knows that sex is no stranger to TV. Newspapers and magazines generally have no qualms about running articles on singles bars and steamy movies, advice columns on sex or racy lingerie ads. Those viewers and readers who object are mostly ignored.

There are some signs of change. The makers of Trojan condoms have persuaded 53 magazines to run their ads, including such wholesome publications as Family Circle and Modern Bride. But these reach only a small share of the people who need to be reached.

To spread the word far and wide, publishers and broadcasters both large and small ought to change their policy against condom ads. It won't cost them anything — quite the contrary — and it will help prevent a damaging erosion of their audience by premature death. As long as the ads are tastefully designed, they aren't likely to evoke anything more than a brief spate of public resistance, if that.

With all the talk about the need for an expensive government campaign of public education, we should welcome private companies that are willing to spend millions of dollars of their own money to help do the job, and do it much more effectively. In this war, federal efforts aren't likely to amount to much more than small arms fire. The heavy artillery is on Madison Avenue, and it's time to use it.

Blabbermouths in Congress

President Eisenhower once said the transition from a military command to the White House required some surprising adjustments. As a five-star general, his work was the last word. As commander-in-chief, he would pick up the Oval Office phone and say, "Do so-and-so."

And nothing would happen. Last April when President Reagan decided to make Libya's Gadhafi pay for his terrorist attacks on Americans — when the president decided to surprise-raid military targets in Tripoli — he was hamstrung. The White House and the Congress are forever engaged in a jealous defense of their prerogatives. The most sensitive issue of all is "the power to make war."

Congress, demanding some say-so in the long-term deployment of troops, has passed a War Powers Act that states that the president of the United States, before sending armed forces into "situations where imminent involvement in hostilities is clearly indicated," must meet with the Congress.

Probably that resolution is unconstitutional. The Constitution clearly defines the president as sole commander-in-chief.

More than a hundred times presidents have ordered our troops to attack without asking permission of Congress.

But rather than kick up a legal fuss, President Reagan last April elected to abide by the resolution. He summoned to his office several congressmen from both parties. He informed them of his plans. Not one opposed the idea.

That meeting took place between 4 p.m. and 5:45 p.m.

Everybody present was aware that the success of the raid depended on secrecy and surprise.

Yet, word got out that a raid was planned. On the 6:30 p.m. ABC news Sen. Robert Byrd was quoted as advising all Americans "to watch the president tonight at 9 o'clock."

And that same newscast went on to describe movements of American F-11s and KC-10 carriers in Britain and two of our carriers off Sicily.

At the same time, the Associated Press quoted both Sen. Byrd and Sen. Claiborne Pell as saying that something was up.

So much for the confidentiality of that White House briefing.

If the Libyans had been listening to our news, they could have gone on alert, ambushed our aircraft.

Sen. Robert Dole has now introduced a bill which would allow our President to respond to terrorists without consulting with Congress but that bill is stuck in committee.

Meanwhile, if the president wanted to clobber Gadhafi's terrorist headquarters today he would have to choose between risking a fust-fight with Congress and risking revealing his plan to potential blabbermouths.

West grows despite a water shortage

By Robert Walters

NAMPA, Idaho (NEA) — "Rain for Rent," proclaims the imposing roadside sign that promotes the wares of The Irrigation Store in southwestern Idaho's Treasure Valley, where natural rainfall averages only 11 inches annually.

Inside the store, area farmers (whose principal crops are potatoes and sugar beets) can rent or purchase every imaginable watering device, ranging from massive center-pivot sprinklers to unobtrusive drip irrigation systems.

From Idaho's arid mountain plateaus to Arizona's reclaimed desert, much of the West lacks sufficient natural supplies of water to sustain human activity. The region's survival long has depended upon its ability to transport water over long distances. When The Economist magazine recently reported on the subject, it observed that "God made the western United States to be a desert and man made parts of it bloom."

Westerners have always been aware of water's paramount role in shaping the region's politics and economics, the London-based periodical noted. "What is new," The Economist added, "is that water is becoming a matter of national concern."

Average annual precipitation in the eastern half of the country ranges from 30 to 60 inches. With the exception of the coastal areas of the Pacific Northwest, it is almost universally less than 20 inches in the West.

In the deserts of California, Arizona and Nevada, as well as in some portions of Washington, Idaho, Utah and Wyoming, yearly rainfall averages less than 10 inches.

Agriculture accounts for 70 percent to 90 percent of all water demand in the region, although only about half of all water applied to crops under center-irrigation practices is beneficially used by the plants. The remainder is wasted.

The amount of irrigated farm acreage in the West has steadily declined since the late 1970s, however. Pressure for increased water supplies now comes from the cities.

Continuing rapid population growth in the region "has caused almost every city... to import water from great distances" but those municipalities "refuse to accept the scarcity of water... as prescribing limits to growth," says a report on "Water in the West" issued last year by the Western Network, a research organization in Santa Fe, N.M.

Denver, for example, has been hauling water over the Continental Divide to supply a population that, in 1980, was slightly more than 1.6 million. By the end of the century, Denver's population is expected to reach 3 million — but there is no known source of available water to support that many people.

Almost 30 million people now live in the West, following population increases of 27 percent in the 1960s and 29 percent in the 1970s — growth that almost certainly will be matched if not surpassed in the 1980s.

As urban residents clamor for more water, the Western Network report notes, they increasingly come in conflict with rural farmers, Indian tribes and others who staked earlier claims on the valuable natural resource.

Virtually every major city in the region "has significant problems in either securing new water supplies or protecting existing sources," adds the report. If that trend continues unabated, it can only lead to a crisis.

Two Planes Collide in Tampa

Investigators search wreckage for clues to fatal plane crash

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Investigators today were studying the wreckage of a demolished twin-engine plane for clues to why its experienced pilot landed it on a fog-shrouded taxiway and was killed in a collision with a Pan Am jet.

William S. Bain, a 21-year veteran airlines pilot, may have been making his second attempt at landing Thursday morning at Tampa International Airport when his Piper Apache crashed into the Pan Am World Airways Boeing 727 with 23 people aboard, National Transportation Safety Board investigators said.

Three minor injuries were reported among those on the jetliner.

"It is my understanding that a first approach was made, but it has not been verified," said NTSB spokesman Joseph Hall, adding that he would not speculate on whether the pilot had been waved off or decided not to land.

Ground-level fog had cut visibility to one-sixteenth of a mile, said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Roger Myers in Atlanta.

Bain, 56, landed his plane on a taxiway, apparently mistaking it for a parallel runway about 400 feet away, officials said. The 727 was moving along the taxiway as it awaited takeoff clearance.

One of two engines on Bain's plane ripped into the nose of the jetliner and was left embedded there as the small plane slid clear of the jet and burst into flames.

"I was sitting down relaxing, getting ready to read the paper, and this ball of fire screamed alongside," said Joseph Martini, a passenger on the Pan Am plane. "What an experience. I can tell you I was shaking."

"The (Pan Am) pilot shouted something like 'Prepare to evacuate,' and about two seconds later he said 'Evacuate,'" said another passenger, Bill Moore. "When we got off the airplane you could see there was another airplane laying back there in rubble, burning real bad."

The charred wreckage of the small plane came to a halt 30 yards behind the jet.

The investigation would focus on weather conditions, the operations of both planes, air traffic control operations and the airworthiness of the Piper, NTSB officials said.

Documents show

Waldheim's unit was involved in deportations of Yugoslavs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The German army unit with which Kurt Waldheim served during World War II was directly involved in the deportation of 68,000 Yugoslav civilians to concentration camps, The Washington Post reported today.

The newspaper, citing captured Nazi documents, said the quartermaster of the Wehrmacht's Combat Group West Bosnia was assigned the duty of setting up collection points and transporting the prisoners to camps.

Waldheim, the former secretary general of the United Nations who now is president of Austria, admitted through a spokesman last month that he was "assigned as a special missions staff officer to the quartermaster" of the Combat Group West Bosnia.

Waldheim had denied for months previously that he was involved in the Yugoslav operation.

The Waldheim spokesman, Gerold Christian, has said Waldheim "had the duties of a supply officer" but was not involved in any fighting. The documents, which the Post said were in the U.S. National Archives, do not mention Waldheim. The newspaper said it found no evidence that Waldheim was personally involved in the deportations.

In 1942, the Germans decided to pacify the mountainous Kozara region of western Yugoslavia. In June of that year, 33,000 German troops surrounded the area, which was home to more than 80,000 inhabitants, including 3,500 armed partisans who opposed the Nazis.

By the time the 45-day operation was over, 68,000 people were sent to concentration camps, with many of them dying on long marches to their destinations. At the camps, 23,000 children under the age of 14 were separated from their parents and sent to special camps, where 11,000 of them died of starvation and disease.

In addition, more than 130 villages were burned to the ground, historians say.

The Post said a June 2, 1942, document issued by a Col. Munkel, the quartermaster for the commanding Nazi general in Belgrade, said prisoner deportations should be carried out by the Combat Group West Bosnia's quartermaster department.

It said the combat group should reach "an agreement with the government" of the Nazi puppet government of Croatia regarding deportations.

AMA endorses self-blood transfusions to eliminate risk of contracting AIDS

CHICAGO (AP) — People facing surgery should have their own blood collected in advance to provide the safest transfusions possible and avoid contracting communicable diseases like AIDS, says the American Medical Association.

Use of the patient's own blood is called autologous blood transfusion, and it eliminates the risk of contracting diseases from someone else's blood, said Dr. Ira Friedlander, a member of the AMA's Council on Scientific Affairs.

The council's report endorsing autologous blood transfusions, adopted as general policy by the AMA in June, was published in today's edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"The risk for hepatitis and communicable diseases that you can get through blood transfusions — and that includes AIDS — is pretty much in the public's mind right now," Friedlander said, explaining why the AMA decided to adopt the policy.

Of the 26,878 reported cases of AIDS in adults since 1981, 485, or about 2 percent, were contracted through blood transfusions, the national Centers for Disease Control says.

Among children, 48, or about 13 percent, of the 376 AIDS cases reported since 1981 were contracted that way, said CDC spokeswoman Jeanie Daves.

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, devastates the body's ability to fight disease and is believed to be passed through transmission of body fluids, primarily through sexual contact and use of contaminated needles or blood products.

Autologous blood transfusions, when administered under guidelines established by the American Association of Blood Banks, carry no risk of hepatitis, malaria or AIDS, the AMA report said. They also help preserve blood-bank stores, can reduce health care costs, and are particularly valuable to patients with rare blood types who have antibodies to common blood components, the report said.

Running on arms, amputee veteran completes marathon

NEW YORK (AP) — His time was the slowest ever — four days, two hours, 48 minutes and 17 seconds — but when Bob Wieland finished the New York City Marathon he became the first to run a 26-mile race on his arms.

Wieland, whose legs were destroyed on a Vietnam battlefield 17 years ago, shouted "We love New York!" and pumped his arms in the air after he crossed the Central Park finish line.

The marathon was run by 19,412 other participants Sunday. But race director Fred Lebow was on hand Thursday when Wieland reached the end of the course, claimed his finisher's medal and explained why he did it.

"For the same reason as 20,000 other people," the 40-year-old Californian said. "It's the greatest marathon in the country."

He cited three specific reasons: to show his born-again Christian faith, to test his conditioning and to promote the President's Council on Physical Fitness, of which he is a member.

"Success is not based on where you start," he said. "It's where you finish, and I finished."

"The first step was the most difficult," he added. "After that, we were on our way home. ... The joy has been the journey."

Wieland started Sunday morning at 8:23, 2½ hours before the main body of runners. But it took him as long to cross the two-mile-long Verrazano Narrows Bridge at the start of the course as it did for the champion, Gianni Poli, to run the entire race.

Wieland runs in a sitting position, using his muscular arms like crutches to lift up his torso and swing it forward. He sits on a 15-pound saddle and covers his clenched fists with pads he calls "size 1 running shoes."

Report Nofziger is subpoenaed by federal grand jury

NEW YORK (AP) — Lyn Nofziger, a former Reagan political aide under investigation for possible violation of ethics laws, has been subpoenaed by a federal grand jury along with his partner in a public relations firm, according to a published report today.

Nofziger's attorneys, E. Lawrence Barcella and Paul Perito, told the Daily News that the longtime adviser to President Reagan, and Mark Bragg, his partner in the Washington firm, were served with subpoenas last week from the grand jury meeting here.

Barcella, a former U.S. attorney, and Perito, a former congressional investigator, declined to discuss the inquiry.

However, the News said U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani and Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau are each investigating the involvement of Nofziger and other former Reagan officials in Wedtech Corp., a Bronx-based military contractor.

Nofziger is also being examined by the Justice Department in Washington.

Demonstration on Red Square

Soviets haven't sought to open border city consulates

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Soviet Union has not asked to open consulates in cities on the U.S. border or anywhere else in Mexico, a top government official said.

He said reports that the purpose of Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze's visit to Mexico last month was to discuss opening consulates in border cities were "absolutely false."

The official, who spoke Thursday with foreign reporters on condition he not be further identified, was well acquainted with the details of Shevardnadze's visit.

He also said there was no cause for concern in the United States about a planned trip by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to Mexico next year.

"In my judgment, there should be no reason for any worry," the Mexican official said.

He noted that Mexican presidents have made official visits to the Soviet Union in the past.

"This (reciprocity of visits) is absolutely normal in diplomatic relations," the official said.

U.S. administration officials in Washington say Gorbachev's plan to visit Latin America apparently is an attempt to penetrate peacefully an area where the United States long has been the dominant influence.

Gorbachev is expected to visit Cuba, Moscow's closest ally in the Western Hemisphere, next spring and also become the first Soviet leader ever to travel to Mexico, Argentina and Brazil.

The U.S. officials, who also spoke on condition of anonymity, said a long-term Soviet goal in Mexico is the opening of consular offices in northern Mexico, which would enable the Soviets to widen their intelligence-gathering capabilities in the southern United States.

Gorbachev's visit would come after a period of strains in U.S.-Mexican relations, especially over the drug issue.

Charges in Washington that Mexico is not doing enough in the war against the illegal narcotics trade and that widespread corruption here fuels the traffic have triggered angry denials by the Mexican government.

The Mexican official said U.S.-Mexican relations "are entering a phase in which the emphasis should be finding solutions." He also said a "political emphasis" has been placed on the conduct of Mexican relations in Washington.

Asked his opinion on the new anti-drug law in the United States, the official said it was necessary because of widespread drug consumption.

Officials: GM closings will bring more pressure on Japanese to limit exports TOKYO (AP) — General Motors' closure of 11 plants will bring increased pressure on Japan to limit auto exports, an official of the Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association said today.

America's largest automaker announced Thursday that it would close the plants over the next three years to cut costs. The plants employ about 29,000 workers, who will either lose their jobs, be transferred or retrained. "Because of these job losses, we expect another (U.S.) protectionist move to be accelerated," said Takayuki Imajo, a JAMA spokesman. "Japan will be under increased pressure to keep exports down."

However, he said JAMA believes restraints on auto exports from Japan must be removed. "We are a free trader. That's our position," he said.

Tatsuo Masuda, a spokesman for Japan's Ministry of International Trade and Industry, said his organization hasn't had time to study the impact of GM's decision. But other foreign automakers have decided to cut back on overcapacity to remain competitive, he said.

In October, Japanese auto manufacturers called for an end to six years of restraints on Japanese car exports to the United States, saying the surge in the value of the yen for the past year, which made Japanese products more expensive, had severely cut into their sales.

The Japanese government currently limits auto exports to the United States to 2.3 million vehicles annually. The voluntary restraints were urged because of American complaints that Japanese imports were hurting the U.S. auto industry.

Exports from Japan to the United States of cars, trucks and buses in the first half of this year rose 18 percent over the same period last year, to 1.7 million vehicles, according to industry officials.

America's overall auto trade deficit with Japan last year was $24 billion, or nearly half the $50 billion trade imbalance between the two countries.

In April 1985, Japan angered U.S. congressmen when it decided to increase automobile exports to the United States by 24 percent.

Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone later said the decision was an "error in judgment" about U.S. attitudes toward the U.S.-Japan trade relationship.

Shultz and Chirac discuss terrorism

PARIS (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz meets today with Premier Jacques Chirac and President Francois Mitterrand for talks expected to focus on conflicting French and American approaches to terrorism.

Shultz, stopping off in Paris on his way home from meetings in Vienna, planned to meet Chirac and Foreign Minister Jean-Bernard Raimond at the premier's office.

Later in the day, he was to consult with Mitterrand, a Socialist who has distanced himself slightly from the policies of Chirac's center-right government on terrorism, without making any open attempts to redirect them.

France has been criticized harshly in recent weeks for its eagerness to deal with Syria and Iran to win freedom for its hostages in Lebanon and to stop terrorist bombings in Paris.

But reports surfaced this week that U.S. envoys secretly made deals with Iran that brought American hostages home from Lebanon in exchange for military spare parts.

France recently announced a tentative settlement of its long-standing dispute over repayment of a $1 billion loan made by Iran before the 1979 revolution, and made clear it hoped to see some or all of its eight hostages freed from their Lebanese captivity as a result.

The effort seemed to be paying off a week ago, when rumors of an immediate release of at least two French hostages circulated in Beirut and Paris.

When only one hostage, American David Jacobsen, was set free, the French government welcomed his liberation in a statement.

But Paris commentators asked why the U.S. government's approach of refusing publicly to consider any concessions to buy freedom seemed to work better than France's negotiations.

Aquino fears no coup

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino said today the Philippine military was on maximum alert, but also said she was confident there would be no coup attempt when she leaves on a state visit to Japan in three days.

"Everytime I plan a trip aboard there is so much talk about a coup. If I believed there would be a coup, I wouldn't leave," she said, adding that she planned to depart for Japan on schedule Monday.

Mrs. Aquino, in a press conference, played down the significance of military alerts, saying they were relatively commonplace.

Slipping up on slope slang? school sets you straight

DENVER (AP) — If you have always thought a "mogul" was a successful business executive and a "snowplow" cleared the streets after a storm, you've probably never set foot on the ski slopes. Skiers have a slang all their own that is often bewildering to those unfamiliar with this popular winter sport, says Jim Isham, director of the ski school at Colorado's Copper Mountain resort 75 miles west of Denver. Isham offers definitions of these frequently used expressions to help non-skiers decode the conversations of their skiing friends or to give them a head start if they're planning to learn to ski this winter.

- Mogul: A small bump or hill in a run for skiers to go over.
- Snowplow: A method skiers use to check or slow down their speed by opening the tails of their skis into a "V" position and bringing the tips toward each other.
- Get into a wedge: This doesn't mean to adopt the latest hair style, but to perform a technique skiers use to slow down without changing direction. To make a wedge, you separate your skis, push the front tips together and form a "V."
- Follow the fall line: Although you might think this is the designated route for sliding down the mountain, the phrase refers to the shortest distance and most direct way down the slope. You can also ski across the fall line, by traversing the mountain, in order to slow down.

- Use a herringbone: This maneuver doesn't involve fileting a fish, but rather climbing up an incline while on skis. To do it, separate your skis but leave the back tips close together. Then proceed to walk up the hill by repeatedly lifting the backs of your skis one over the other. This results in a pattern in the snow resembling a spiny herringbone.
- Corn: Spring or warm-weather snow that becomes granular when subjected to alternating thawing and freezing conditions.

- Mashed potatoes: Snow that is wet and very heavy, a condition common in warm weather.
- Champagne powder: This is extremely light, dry and airy snow and is often found at Rocky Mountain ski resorts. It is considered by many to be the best condition for ultimate ski experience—even better than regular powder snow.
- Snow bunny: Generally this refers to a beginner skier, but many capable skiers can also be snow bunnies if they act timid, stay on the easier slopes and head for the lodge after an hour or two.
- Schussboomer: This is a reckless skier who can often be seen skiing wildly out of control at great speeds.

Man builds 3-story tepee

WACO (AP) — Tom Dooley likes the unusual. From driving 40 head of Texas longhorns from San Antonio to Dodge City, Kan., to building a 32-foot-tall, three-bedroom, wooden tepee, Dooley strives to be different.

"I just like to be different from anyone else. I'm just odd," Dooley said. "One time I almost built a house like a shoe. You know, like the nursery rhyme. But I didn't cause I never had the money to experiment before."

Since then, Dooley has bought 4.72 acres of land in Waco. He has been working as an automobile mechanic for Fred Binner Excavation Co. for several years.

And now, he's ready to do "a little experimenting."

Dooley said he is building on his land a three-story tepee that will include three bedrooms, a utility room, 1-1-2 bathrooms, an attic, a living room, a kitchen and central heating and cooling.

The tepee will have trailer doors and a drop ladder on each floor in case of fire, Dooley said.

Inside the tepee, stairs will connect the three floors, he said.

Dooley said he is taking it one step at a time.

"I can't get anything out of the books, so I'm just building it as I go," he said.

Using lumber for his frame, walls and floors, Dooley started building the third floor and the attic three weeks ago with a friend.

Working on weekends and weeknights, they nearly have completed the third floor and the attic.

"I wanted to build the top-half first to study the wind break, how easy it is to cool and how sturdy it is before I build the bottom half," Dooley said.

He said he plans to place plastic on the installation boards to make the tepee "rainproof" and then place stucco on the top.

"I want the outside to look like an old piece of rawhide," Dooley said.

Dooley said he plans to start living in the tepee.

Before finishing the tepee, Dooley said he wants to get more ideas about how to make his tepee more authentic.

"I want to go up to Indian country to get more ideas. From what people say, a tepee door should face the east. So I put my door facing east," Dooley said.

"I've been told that eagle feathers and a cow skull are placed inside the tepee to keep the evil spirits away," he said.

Dooley said he hopes to finish the tepee by the fall of 1987.

Dooley started thinking about the idea five years ago. "It just struck my fancy," he said. "I had carpenters come out here and shake their heads and laugh. Some said that it couldn't be done, but I'm crazy enough to try it."

Dooley began planning and drawing tepees about a year ago. "None of it works out here like it does on a piece of paper," Dooley said.

When he is finished, Dooley said he might sell Indian artifacts, Indian jewelry or even start his own tepee business.

"I might rent a bunch of them out like tourist cabins," Dooley said.

Or Dooley said he might start a tepee construction business.

"If I could find a way to do it, I could make steel portable tepees and mold them together like they do portable buildings," Dooley said.

Dooley traces his interest in tepees and Indian culture to his childhood days in West Plains, Mo.

General Motors Chairman Roger Smith, left, and President F. James McDonald talk with reporters after announcing the closing of 11 plants across the country.

Welcomed by Wall Street, bad news for auto workers

DETROIT (AP) — Industry analysts see the planned closing of 11 General Motors Corp. plants in four states as surgery needed to keep the nation's top automaker healthy, but for 29,000 workers it means uncertain times ahead.

Six final assembly plants and two body works will close by 1988 and three stamping plants by 1990 in a move that will reduce GM's fixed costs by $500 million a year, Chairman Roger Smith announced Thursday. The company showed an operating loss of $338 million for the year's third quarter.

A GM plant in Arlington, Texas was spared and officials announced plans to expand operations there.

Analysts said the cutbacks were necessary for GM and the U.S. auto industry as a whole, which is expected to be burdened with too much production capacity later this decade.

But that meant little to workers who fear losing their jobs, or to communities whose economies will suffer.

"It's going to be disastrous for Flint," said Earl Henry, president of United Auto Workers Local 598 in that Michigan city, where one plant is to be closed and another will lose one of its two assembly lines.

"Flint is a single-industry town. When people lose their jobs in it, they don't have another industry to go to," Henry said.

The plants to be closed, in Michigan, Ohio, Illinois and Missouri, are older facilities, and most had been facing shutdown for years as GM invested in newer, more efficient factories and renovated others.

"We've been hearing about it for a long time, so ain't nobody panicking now," said Donald Stuart, a 32-year-old worker at the Flint body plant, to be closed by the end of 1987. Workers there have been told since 1979 the plant was doomed.

But Pete Hoover, vice president of UAW Local 22 at the Clark Street final assembly plant in Detroit, said workers there "were very disappointed. They feel betrayed."

At the stamping plant in Willow Springs, Ill., UAW Local 558 President Emmet Cyrus said GM had gone back on a promise made in contract negotiations four years ago.

"GM told us in 1982 and laid out a contract and said, 'This is what we need. This plant will be here forever. We can be competitive,'" Cyrus said. "Well, we gave it to them and now they turn around and do us this way."

GM President James McDonald said the closings "are absolutely necessary to maintain our marketplace leadership and enhance the job security of the greater bulk of our workforce."

Financial analysts agreed. "It's a very constructive move on GM's part," said Gary Glaser of First Boston Corp. in New York. "I think as we go forward, there will be further closings."

"A bold strike had to be taken and this was it," said David Andrea, a research associate at the University of Michigan's automotive transportation office.

On Wall Street, GM stock rose $1 to close at $74.25 on Thursday on the New York Stock Exchange.

The plant closings were part of the first phase of a reorganization and modernization at GM, and other plants were being studied, said McDonald.

Until management can determine how many workers can be transferred or retrained, GM and UAW officials said they could not estimate the number who will be out of work.

UAW Vice President Donald Ephlin said a task force was being formed to help the workers get the benefits to which they are entitled. Benefits include training for new jobs, supplemental employment benefits and guaranteed income for those with more than 10 years' seniority.

About 500,000 Texas aliens could become citizens under the new immigration law

AUSTIN (AP) — Up to half the estimated one million illegal aliens living in Texas could qualify for amnesty under the new immigration law, according to federal officials.

"My guess is that 50 percent would be eligible," said John Abriel, deputy director for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in San Antonio.

The other half, however, would find it difficult to remain in Texas, Abriel said. Under the new law, employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens are subject to prosecution and fines.

The new law is expected to make sweeping changes in hiring practices for all types of businesses and to create special problems for those businesses that rely on illegal aliens as a plentiful and low-cost source of labor. Undocumented workers are used widely in construction, hotel and food service businesses in the state.

Employers who hired illegal aliens before the law was signed are not subject to fines for those employees.

The key features of the law are amnesty for illegal aliens who have lived in the United States since Jan. 1, 1982, and sanctions against employers of illegal aliens.

Abriel told the Austin American-Statesman that the INS probably will set up

"legalization centers" within six months in San Antonio, Austin, Corpus Christi and Laredo to process applications from illegal aliens for temporary legal residency.

Although immigration reform has been debated for years, the quick passage and signing of the law has caught many employers off-guard.

"Right now, we haven't seen a copy of the law, and we are not aware of what legal obligations we have," said Dell Talley, director of Associated General Contractors, an organization representing construction contractors. "We're sitting in limbo until we get additional information."

"There is a general need for education," said Richie Jackson, executive vice president of the Texas Restaurant Association. "Employers are concerned about what the law requires and how to ensure they are not out of compliance as far as discrimination." He said the association plans seminars around the state to explain the law to restaurant owners.

The law prohibits employers from discriminating against minorities on the basis of race or national origin, but at the same time requires employers to verify citizenship.

"Employers are caught in the middle as immigration policemen," said Austin immigration lawyer Paul Parsons. "One the one hand, there is a section on discrimination penalties. And on the other hand, they may be sanctioned by fines or imprisonment for not verifying employment authorization for all new employees."

Barbara Hines, also an immigration lawyer in Austin, said employers already may be overreacting to the new law.

"I'm getting clients saying their employers have brought them together and said, 'If you don't have documents, you've got to leave within a certain time,'" Hines said. "Anyone hired before enactment of the law can be kept on indefinitely. The employer is not liable."

Parsons said verification of citizenship imposes equally difficult burdens on employers.

"I think when American businesses find out about all of this, they are going to start a backlash that might lead to revocation of sanctions," Parsons said. "I think most small businesses already feel hindered by a lot of bureaucracy, and this will require burdensome record keeping."

Parsons also said he doubts the immigration service will have the resources to enforce the sanctions.

Utility commissioners won't quit

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov.-elect Bill Clements says he will ask for the resignations of the three state Public Utility Commission members, but all three say they will turn him down.

In his first post-election news conference, Clements said Wednesday he would make good on a campaign promise and "ask for a letter of resignation" from all PUC members.

But PUC Chairwoman Peggy Rosson and commissioners Dennis Thomas and Jo Campbell, all appointees of Democratic Gov. Mark White, issued a joint statement saying they intend to continue serving on the panel that regulates utilities in Texas.

"I think there was a clear mandate in the 1982 election. The voters supported Gov. White's programs and wanted reforms in regulation and lower utility rates. Bill Clements may view his election as a mandate for higher utility rates, but I don't," Ms. Rosson said.

Ms. Campbell said her nomination to the PUC was supported by both Republicans and Democrats in her Senate confirmation vote, so she sees no reason to step down.

Thomas said he planned to stay in office "as long as I can make a contribution."

Steve Mitchell, better known as the Singing Cowboy, provides entertainment at the Circle R Ranch at Flower Mound. (AP Laserphoto)

West lives in cowboy

By TOD SILLIS
Denton Record-Chronicle

BOYD, Texas (AP) — Sam Houston's last words, "Texas ... Texas ... Texas" are music to Steve Mitchell's ears.

Known as the Singing Cowboy, Mitchell provides entertainment at Circle R Ranch in Flower Mound. But his 10-gallon hat, cowboy boots, guitar and saddled horse are much more than props for the show. For Mitchell, they're a way of life.

The 31-year-old entertainer appears to be living in a time warp, stuck in the Old West by choice. He lives in a log cabin filled with his ancestors' belongings, cooks on an open campfire, heats his water on the fire and tells stories passed down through his family for decades.

"I'm certainly proud of my ancestry. It just enhances the opportunity for me to carry on singing western songs," he said. "When I sing, I'm not only singing it, but I'm living it."

Mitchell has a love for nature and Texas history. He dreams by a smoldering fire, hearing coyotes howl at night and tries to preserve a way of life.

"I've set my mind on carrying on the Western culture and to carrying out the spirit of our forefathers," he said.

To be successful as a singing cowboy, Mitchell said, he has to be consistent. That's one reason he moved from STM Ranch in Colleyville, where he owned 70 acres, to his 10-acre home in the Wise County town of Boyd. He still calls it the STM, but it's far far from the crowds and noises of Dallas and Fort Worth.

And if land developers start building in Boyd, which is northwest of Fort Worth, he'll move farther away.

He moved the lumber from his old Southern-style house, built in 1883, from the Colleyville ranch to his new property. He combined it with a simple, box-type house to build a 2,400-square-foot home. But the house sits empty.

The 120-year-old log cabin in which Mitchell lives resembles a museum. It stands behind the rebuilt house and also was moved from Colleyville. He said the cabin was used as a corn crib when he was a boy.

"I decided to preserve that old thing. I tore it down piece by piece and brought it out here," he said. "I took my mules and a block and tackle and hoisted those logs up. Then I went out and took Godgiven Wise County clay and mixed it with coastal hay for between the logs."

Two antique wagons sit nearby. He used one for a two-day ride with the Texas Sesquicentennial Wagon train.

"Buggies and wagons played an important role in our Western heritage. I'm glad we're in the sesquicentennial year. We ought to all sit down and remember what our forefathers did for us," he said, citing figures from Texas history such as Houston, Stephen F. Austin, Davey Crockett and William Barrett Travis.

"Great men in Texas made great sacrifices for this great state. Unless we carry on the tradition, it (the state's greatness) will soon vanish."

Inside the cabin, a picture of Mitchell's great-great-grandfather, who came to Texas from Tennessee in 1857, hangs on the wall opposite his own. Other historic items include a Confederate $100 bill and a fiddle he said was much older than the cabin.

Mitchell plays both the fiddle and guitar, but said he never had music lessons except for one voice lesson at Southern Methodist University in Dallas.

Other items in the cabin include a collection of books on Texas history, two of which were written by Mitchell's great uncle, dresses and a sewing machine that were owned by his grandmother, a wind-up phonograph and various awards won during his career.

The cabin and its contents will be placed in the Palo Pinto Museum when he dies, Mitchell said. But he's got a lot of entertaining to do until then.

He traveled with the Bobby Estes Lone Star Heritage Wild West and Rodeo Show for five years and performed with Clayton More and Slim Pickens. He also has performed for the crew of the television show "Dallas," Rex Allen and Al Hirt.

"I'd much rather be sitting around a campfire watching the glowing embers than sitting in the Sheraton hotel watching the city lights any day."

Houston's fund-raiser for AIDS fizzles

HOUSTON (AP) — The first high-society charity event in Houston to benefit the AIDS Foundation so far has generated little interest, with only 54 tickets sold of the 12,500 invitations sent out for the Sunday night jazz concert.

"We are dumbfounded by the lack of support," event organizer and advertising executive Beth Romney said Wednesday. "It's kind of heart-breaking."

Some observers of Houston's social scene blamed the stigma of acquired immune deficiency syndrome being associated with the homosexual community. Homosexuals and intravenous users are the leading victims of the disease.

Others blamed the poor sales of the tickets, which are going for $100 apiece to the champagne reception and the local artist jazz concert, on a lack of organization and publicity for the event.

"People can send out a mailing (of invitations), but there has to be a lot of follow-up," socialite Carolyn Farb said.

She said she was not planning to attend the event and was not sure whether she had received an invitation.

But Ms. Farb said she thought Houston's wealthy is ready to give to the AIDS cause.

"AIDS is a very serious problem, and I think that just because an event is not successful, it doesn't mean that Houston is not supportive of AIDS research," she said.

BAROMETER for the FUTURE

Webster says that a barometer is an instrument measuring the weight or pressure of the atmosphere, foretelling and measuring changes of weather and altitude.

If God were to place a barometer on our lives, would we be cold, lukewarm, or on fire for the Lord. The past we can not change... the future is up to us.

"... what doth the Lord thy God require of thee, but to fear the Lord thy God, to walk in all His ways, and to love Him, and to serve the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul." ATTEND CHURCH REGULARLY

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Each one should use whatever gift he has received to serve others, faithfully administering God's grace in its various forms. (1 Peter 4:10 NIV)

A friend is a Navaho Indian. She took her young son to an Indian powwow being held on a large reservation in Oklahoma. Television cowboys and Indians had considerably flavored the little boy's concept of Indians. At the powwow, he, an Indian himself, stood in the midst of hundreds of Indians and asked his mother in a loud voice, "Where are the Indians?"

While still a young girl, I came to the realization that God had some task in life designed uniquely for me. He didn't tell me specifics, so I embarked on a multiple-choice search for my "calling."

When I began working with children at church, I asked enthusiastically, "Is this it, Lord?" As the children grew, I grew in Biblical knowledge and Christian commitment.

I was awarded a writing assignment for Sunday school literature for children. Astonished by the opportunity and awed by the responsibility, I prayed, "Is this it, Lord?"

I added Christian books for children to my writing efforts and discovered publishers could reject even Christian endeavors.

Very often, through the years, I fell back on my first love occupation of fulltime mothering and homemaking. And I asked, "Is this it, Lord? Do you want me to devote myself to maintaining a Christian home?"

Through all my efforts and queries, God's answers seemed just beyond my hearing. But He smiled on me generously; I knew He was smiling because I consistently matured, and learned, and experienced great pleasure and satisfaction.

However, I continued to wait and watch for the "big one," the assignment I was sure God had reserved for me. When His Touch was accepted for publication, I was excited. With great anticipation, I asked, "This is it, isn't it, Lord?"

This time God's response was very clear. "When will you realize the answer has always been 'yes'?"

Humbled by the sudden revelation, I reflected on my search. I had been engulfed in God's service, wrapped in the cotton of God's benevolence and led by God's hand.

Like my friend's little boy, I had, all along, been in the midst of that for which I searched.

PERRY AND POLLY COWIN

New Life Worship Center to offer personality series

The New Life Worship Center, 318 N. Cuyler, will have Perry and Polly Cowin of Life Enrichment Ministries, Inc., for a three-day seminar series Sunday through Tuesday.

The Cowins, widely known speakers, will present their messages on "Rebuilding the Walls of Our Personality" at 10:30 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday and at 7 p.m. Monday and Tuesday.

The couple has gained national recognition for their seminars, classes and retreats to the church family, said Pastor John Farina.

The theme of the Cowins' message is based on the Book of Nehemiah.

"Nehemiah is a great picture of how God comes to work after we are saved," Farina said. "After regeneration, God begins to restore the territories that have been broken down by weakness and sin in the past, he noted.

"The broken-down condition of the walls left the people no defense against their enemies," Cowin said. "The walls that need rebuilding represent the soul, our mind, our emotions, our will."

Cowin added, "Even though this is a day of restoration and renewal, many born-again believers are still vulnerable to the attacks of their enemies — and they often seem to walk in real victory. Then through the weak or undefended areas, we are attacked and so often don't understand what's going on."

The seminar is designed to "go way beyond the problem and offer down-to-earth solutions," Farina said. "Over the past years Perry and Polly have proven this with intensive teaching practices."

The Cowins have the experience and background to speak with authority on problems that have caused the breakdown in the personality, he said. They have developed ideas and principles based on the Bible and explain in understandable language how to rebuild the broken-down walls, stone by stone, Farina said.

Mrs. Cowin said, "God has the time to do His work in our lives and has the materials needed to rebuild. He has the personnel to accomplish His work and complete the walls of our personality."

Life Enrichment Ministries is a ministry totally committed to the whole family. The Cowins have written many other seminars that are giving the family real answers about how to make life work in the home and outside the home, Farina said.

Farina invited the public to attend the seminar series.

'Kid's Crusade' scheduled

The Church of God, Gwendolen and Sumner, will present a special Kids' Crusade this weekend with programs at 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday and at 11 a.m. Sunday.

Rev. Joe Bruce, a specialist in children's ministries from Shamrock, will conduct the Crusade.

Rev. Bruce is a ventriloquist and will be using puppets during his presentation. A special feature will be his life-sized sidekick, Jeremy.

There will be special treats for all the children attending the special programs.

Pastor T.L. Henderson said all children and adults in the community are invited to attend.

Chapel plans revival series

The Pampa Chapel of the Apostolic Faith, 711 E. Harvester, will have revival services next week with evangelists Rev. Jimmy Wallis and his wife Lavonda of Tulsa, Okla.

Services will be at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday and at 7 p.m. daily Tuesday through Saturday.

Music will be provided by Russell Ball of Buffalo, Okla., and Janae Harris, formerly of Pampa and now music director of the Apostolic Faith Bible College in Baxter Springs, Kan.

Rev. Austin Sutton, pastor, invited the public to attend any of the revival services next week.

Religion Roundup

GLORIETA, N.M. (AP) — The head of a Southern Baptist peace committee says there is "more reason for hope for peace" in the strife-torn denomination than at any time in the past 18 months. But a resigned member disagrees.

The Rev. Charles Fuller, committee chairman, made his comment after a three-day prayer retreat here of the 22-member committee and a seven-point commitment by the denomination's six seminaries, pledging to enforce confessional statements, among other things.

Fundamentalists and moderates in the denomination have been battling for eight years over approaches to the Bible.

The Rev. Cecil Sherman of Fort Worth, Texas, resigned from the committee, saying its members seemed elated at its progress, but "I do not share their euphoria." Referring to the commitments by seminary presidents, he added: "What fundamentalists have wanted, the peace committee has helped them get."

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — The Canon Law Society of America has criticized the Vatican for its decision to limit the authority of Roman Catholic Archbishop Raymond Hunthausen of Seattle.

A resolution passed at the society's annual meeting said the action "seems inconsistent" with church law regarding bishops and the local church.

GOODWIN

Among the convention events, will be the naming of the Woman of the Year Award and a business meeting for installation of new officers. Delegates to the convention will be voting during the lunch period.

Preceding the convention meeting will be a leadership workshop at 2 p.m. Monday in the conference room at St. Vincent's offices.

The workshop is the first in a series to be offered under the direction of the National Council of Catholic Women. The first session deals with the individual as a leader and stresses the importance of good communication.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Everything has a way of balancing itself out for you today. Should you come up short in one area, you will show gains in another.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Friends will be willing to assist you today, but not in situations where they have to stick their necks out too far. Be sure your requests are reasonable.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't be afraid to make a big switch in tactics today if you discover the way you are trying to do something is unproductive.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't become unglued at the seams today if a problem develops with temperamental companion. Your cool head can calm him down.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Play to win today, yet don't make winning too important, because you'll lose admirers if you start to lose your poise. Grace is more important than aggression.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It may be wise today to schedule your complicated assignments for later in the afternoon. In the a.m., your thinking cap might not be properly adjusted.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This can be a materially rewarding day for you, provided you're prepared to work hard. If you think you'll be handed something for nothing, guess again.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Early-morning squabbles between you and your mate should be quickly dropped and forgotten. The evening can be fun if you concentrate on candlelight and roses.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Work being done around your place today requires personal supervision, whether it's being jobbed out to professionals or being performed by family members.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be patient if you're on a shopping excursion today and don't buy the first thing you see. By looking around a bit, you'll find the same merchandise at a better price.

Look for veteran ancestors

By GENA WALLS

Veterans Day is a reminder for everyone to show our pride in the men and women who served and are serving in our nation's military forces. Most of us have ancestors that were veterans. Many organizations depend upon this ancestor for membership into their society.

Have you traced your Revolutionary War ancestor? This war as well as the Civil War tore our country apart. It divided families forcing them to choose sides on important issues.

As genealogists, we tend to concentrate on those two wars, but many Texans were involved in the War of 1812, the Indian wars, and the Mexican War. During the past five years new material has been published containing the military records of individuals that fought for their country during this period. If you have not located an ancestor that was the age to have served, check again. It's possible that you will find the missing link now in some of the new material. Texas has a published index to the Civil War applications indicating those approved and those denied. Send a self-addressed stamped envelope to me before Nov. 15 and I will locate that index for you. The same information may be obtained by writing the Texas State Archives, Box 12927, Austin, 78711.

Microfilms of the Revolutionary War pension records are now available for purchase from the National Archives. The set consists of 898 reels arranged alphabetically and can be purchased for $20 per reel.

Several larger genealogical libraries already have a complete set. You might want to check with them before ordering a reel. This is a giant step in expediting receipt of these pensions. Many times the Archives had a three-month wait to obtain copies.

Now is the time to search for that veteran. Happy hunting!

KATHLEEN REAGAN ANDERSON

Pampan wins blue ribbons at state fair

Kathleen Reagan Anderson received 27 blue "Texas 150 Special Award" ribbons for her genealogy exhibit entered in the State Fair of Texas in Dallas.

Each ribbon represented documented proof of a direct line ancestor living in Texas in 1836 or before. A total of 165 of these ribbons were distributed among 31 entrants.

Anderson's ancestor was Margaret "Peggy" William Payne. This was her first time to enter the State Fair, she said, since she had begun her genealogical research in the early 1970s.

At the request of the Dallas Genealogical Society, Anderson's exhibit has been donated to the Dallas Public Library where it will be permanently housed in their genealogy department.

Hairdresser's greed bothers customer

DEAR ABBY: Recently my hairdresser had a birthday. She received many cards with checks, which she displayed so her customers could not miss seeing them. (I had given her a nice card without a check.) I took her display as a hint for clients who may have forgotten, or didn't know it was her birthday. Since then I've noticed a definite coolness toward me.

It started me to thinking: Why should hairdressers always be on the receiving end of the goodies? What do their clients get besides a raise in prices and a lot of waiting while they work in extra customers on the regulars' time?

A really smart hairdresser would keep track of her customers' birthdays and give each one a complimentary shampoo and set, then when her birthday came around, all her clients would reciprocate with a nice check or gift that would more than equal the price of a shampoo and set.

If you use this, sign me... SATURDAY STANDING APPOINTMENT

DEAR STANDING: At the risk of sounding like a broken record: Gifts are never mandatory. Also, many hairdressers give as much as they get, so don't tar them all with the same brush — no pun intended.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I read with great interest your letter regarding the policy of banks in Washington state concerning "dormant" accounts. They're lucky. Here in Texas, an inactive account is considered "dormant" after three years. Then the bank makes no effort to notify the customer either by phone or mail.

My two children's savings accounts were declared dormant by a local bank, and the first notice I had of it was when I received the quarterly bank statements showing a zero balance. When I asked the people at the bank if an error had been made, they said "No," and explained that the money had been sent to the state — that they did not have time to try to contact people and that they just published a list of names in the local newspaper in hopes that we would see our name there. They gave me a form to fill out and send to the state to reclaim the money. It was a typical government form — long and very tedious.

I told them that I felt that it was their responsibility to do this since they had not made any effort to contact me. The least they could have done was to have a message printed at the bottom of my children's statements the previous quarter telling me what was going to happen if some activity was not generated in the accounts. Apparently the state does not want people contacted. A banker friend of mine says that this practice puts millions of dollars into the state treasury. Get my drift?

J.W. (TRICKED IN TEXAS)

DEAR J.W.: Yup.

DEAR ABBY: You asked readers to send in their "family codes" to let families know of their whereabouts during World War II. You may want to go to your public library and check out a copy of "The Codebreakers" by David Kahn (Macmillan, 1967). Chapter 16 deals with several examples of just these types of codes.

First, you will likely enjoy Kahn's delightful accounts of chicanery vs. censorship. Second, "The Codebreakers" has been read by many, and it would be interesting to see if any of your readers had submitted an anecdote from Chapter 16 of that book and tried to pass it off as their own.

NEW JERSEY READER

DEAR READER: Thus far, I've had no repeats.

CONFIDENTIAL TO THE D'S IN WHITE PLAINS, N.Y.: If you want a baby only because:

1. You think it will "save" your marriage.
 2. All your friends have one.
 3. Your parents are hounding you to give them grandchildren.
 4. You want someone to take care of you in your old age.
 5. Susie wants a baby brother (or sister).
 6. You want to be "fulfilled" as a woman — or "prove" you are a man.
 7. You're trying for a girl (or boy) this time.

A mixed blessing

NEW YORK (AP) — During more than 80 years of growing equality between men and women, nature has increasingly favored women with longer life expectancies.

A woman aged 65 can now expect to live 19 more years; a man only 15 more years. It's a mixed blessing, according to the American Council of Life Insurance.

In 1984, women aged 65 or older made up 71 percent of the elderly poor in the United States, and the poverty rate for women 65 and older is 15 percent, the highest for any adult age and sex group in America, the council says.

The Oklahoma Kids, winners of a statewide talent search in The Sooner State, will perform The Will And The Wind, a musical history of their state, at 2 p.m. Sunday in M.K. Brown Auditorium. Tickets are available at the auditorium.

1985. Pampa 14, Canyon 7. At Canyon.

That result could well have been the final nail in the job of football coach Houston Powell at Canyon. That, along with some other complications, brought the Canyon School Board to the decision to make a change.

And in continuation of its philosophy for excellence, the Board didn't wait for the wind to blow in some applications. Instead, the people elected to direct the school's operation in a judicial, businesslike manner, sought out the individual they wanted. After all, the taxpayers were paying lots of money, the students were putting out their best effort, and the very least the Board could do was seek the most able person for the opening. That approach had already proven most successful in other areas....girls and boys basketball, baseball, tennis, band. The Board understood the benefits of winning programs in relation to hard dollars earned by increased game attendance, renewed community enthusiasm, and elevated student pride and morale, basic to classroom "book larnin'". It must have worked, because out of 281 high school athletes in all sports, only 14 failed a course the first six weeks, five percent.

As the search began, one member dug out fifty cents and called Greg Sherwood at Plainview, a proven winner. Sure, he was interested. But another had a different idea. Jim "Corky" Dawson had been a quarterback at Berger HS, West Texas State, and following an Air Force stint in Viet Nam, had gotten into coaching. He served as quarterback coach for Grant Teaff at Angelo State, and then filled the same job for Gene Mayfield at West Texas. One of his pupils there was Mike Wartes, whose father had been a coach since the game was invented. Dawson contacted his former star signal-caller, now 33 and head coach at Boswell HS in the Fort Worth area, a 4A school.

Dawson had at one time applied for the Pampa head job, interviewed, and for whatever reason which still confounds me, was not hired. John Welborn was, and did an outstanding job for five seasons, before moving into administration. His successor was Danny Palmer, who was dismissed after one season. A strong Pampa booster, learning in advance that Palmer's departure was to be announced the next week, contacted Wartes, then head coach at Muleshoe, urging him to seek the post. In a very Solomon-like response, Wartes, then only two years into his own career, said: "I'm not qualified for that big a job. I don't have enough experience yet."

What he might really have been saying was he didn't want to come to Pampa, which has a "graveyard of football coaches" reputation in the state. After all, up to that time, only one of the seven previous head coaches had ever served in a head coaching position again, then only briefly. And of all of them who ever served, excluding current Coach John Kendall, only one, Palmer, is still in the profession today.

Whatever, after all the screening, Dawson filibustered the Canyon Board until it finally agreed to Wartes in a meeting which took until 4 am to reach a decision. Then, with Dawson's knowledge concerning the importance of a staff, Wartes was given some freedom in hiring. He retained some coaches, keeping association with the present athletes; brought some from his old staff; hired longtime Amarillo system assistant Richard Eddleman to add experience and maturity; and capped it all with employment of Ted Giddens as first assistant. It was Giddens who built Valley HS into the athletic powerhouse it is today, and of whom one former Pampa HS head coach expressed the opinion: "Ted is the greatest motivator I've ever seen."

The Hereford High graduate, who served as an assistant at Berger from 1975-78, has compiled a 59-31-2 record as a head coach at Muleshoe, Denver City, Boswell and Canyon. He guided Muleshoe into the regional playoff contest twice, was elected coach of the year at both Muleshoe and Denver City, and was placed on the state coach's association board.

Wartes has turned programs around every place he has coached. And this first-year success at Canyon is obviously well worth the $43,200 salary plus car allowance he gets for the dual role of coach and athletic director. Attendance by the Canyon fans at tonight's encounter at Harvester Park will testify to that fact. One of those cheering the loudest, waving the Eagle flag, will be Dawson, who wanted the Pampa job and didn't get it, cheering for the guy who was asked to seek it, but said he wasn't ready. Tonight he knows he is, and will attempt to prove it....But from the east sideline.

Harvesters close out home season

The Pampa Harvesters, still frustrated in their search for a victory this season, are gearing up for their final home football game.

Pampa hosts Canyon at 7:30 p.m. tonight and the Harvesters still haven't given up hope of ending an 8-game losing streak.

"We've had some good practices this week," said PHS head coach John Kendall. "The players still want to win real bad."

Canyon still has a shot at a playoff berth with a 4-2 district record (6-2 overall) and Pampa would like nothing better than to pull off an upset, especially in the last home game. Kendall knows it won't be an easy task.

"Canyon is a much improved team over last year, especially offensively. They're throwing the ball more, but probably their biggest asset is their defense," Kendall said.

Shane Starke, a 190-pound middle linebacker, is one of Canyon's star defensive performers. He's had as many as 23 tackles in one game this season. Kasoy Huddleston, a 230-pounder, and Justin McClure, at 206 pounds, gives the Eagles plenty of beef on the line.

"Canyon is much bigger than we are, but it seems like they've always been a bigger ballclub," Kendall said. "Three of their front four on defense are over 200 pounds."

In their backfield, the Eagles are missing one of the district's better runners in 160-pound junior Tim Anuskiewicz, who has been out of action with an injury for the past two weeks. Anuskiewicz had 655 yards rushing before he was sidelined. "Tim's loss has definitely hurt us. He'll suit up, but I doubt if he'll be able to play," said Canyon Coach Mike Wartes.

Fullback Dustin Davis (185-pound junior) has rushed for 301 yards while Pat Cannon (160-pound junior) has 279. Quarterback King Hodson and split end Jon Baker make a good pass-catch team.

"I'm real proud of these players. They've done a good job all year long," said Wartes.

Canyon edged Berger, 21-20, last week to keep hopes alive, however slim, for a playoff spot.

"If Berger can upset either Lubbock Estacado tonight or Hereford next week and we can win all the rest, then there could be a coin flip for second place," Wartes said.

Canyon is a 20-point favorite over Pampa according to the Harris Ratings, but Wartes isn't taking the Harvesters for granted.

"Pampa has a fine team to be 0-8. They've been in some awfully close games and had a chance to win some of them. We're not going to take them lightly," Wartes said.

Most of the Harvesters will be at full strength for tonight's game, Kendall reported. Split end Billy Butler, who missed last week's game, returns but probably won't be at full speed.

Pampa suffered one of its most heartbreaking losses of the season last week against Dumas, 18-13. Leading at halftime and trailing at the end of three quarters, the Harvesters went on a strong drive in the closing minutes only to fumble the ball away on the Dumas 7 with 25 seconds left in the game.

Kendall was pleased with Pampa's defense, especially the play of defensive end Joel Farina and noseguard Wil Stanley.

"Farina had another good game and Stanley played perhaps his best defensive game all year," added Kendall.

"He was in on a lot of tackles," Farina, a 185-pound senior, threw a Dumas pass receiver for an 8-yard loss and also made a solo stop on the punter for a 10-yard loss after a bad snap.

Others with good defensive performances were Jon Roe, Brad Sokolosky and Chris Hazle, who replaced an ill Scott Rabel in the first quarter.

Tonight, the Harvester seniors will be honored along with their parents at 7:15 at Harvester Stadium.

NFL roundup

Montana returns to lead 49er attack

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

For the first time in two months, Joe Montana will be spending Sunday on the football field. For Marv Levy, the wait has been a bit longer.

Montana returns to the NFL battles this weekend, when he will lead the 49ers against the St. Louis Cardinals. The quarterback underwent back surgery on Sept. 15 and has not played since the Sept. 7 season opener, when he passed for 356 yards and a touchdown in a victory over Tampa Bay. He received medical clearance to return this week.

Jeff Kemp played well in Montana's absence but has been idled the last two weeks with a hip problem. Mike Moroski, who had been cut earlier this year, returned and started two games, but 49ers Coach Bill Walsh jumped at the chance to put a healthy Montana back in the lineup.

"It will be a test for him," Walsh said. "I don't think of it as me coming back to save the team. We just have to pull together," Montana said. "Little things have been keeping us out of the end zone, and those are the things we have to overcome."

Elsewhere Sunday, the Broncos and Jets, the NFL's 8-1 teams, are home against Denver and at Atlanta, respectively. Also, it's the Los Angeles Raiders at Dallas; the New York Giants at Philadelphia; Chicago at Tampa Bay; Cincinnati at Houston; Minnesota at Detroit; New England at winless Indianapolis; Seattle at Kansas City; and Washington at Green Bay.

On Monday night, Miami visits Cleveland. The 49ers are 5-3-1 and trail first-place Los Angeles by 1 1/2 games in the NFC West. The Rams are at New Orleans Sunday.

"They told me it would be eight to 10 weeks, minimum, and that was if everything went perfectly," Montana said of his speedy recovery. "Usually, there are some setbacks along the way. I had none. Everything just kept rolling."

The Buffalo Bills weren't rolling under Hank Bullough and, after falling to 2-7, Bullough was dismissed on Monday. Levy, who coached the Kansas City Chiefs from 1978-82, replaces Bullough, beginning with Sunday's home game against the Steelers.

Levy is the Bills' third head coach in 13 months. After Bullough took over for Kay Stephenson four games into last season, the Indianapolis Colts routed Buffalo in their next game, 49-17.

"Boy, you make me feel a lot better, I'll tell you," Levy joked when told of that fact. "I realize this is unsettling. And one of the things I said to the players was... don't try to please me, please yourself. My thought was be happy with how you're preparing for this opponent. Get your mind on the opponent."

Jim Kelly certainly has done that. The strong-armed quarterback who has been inconsistent in his first season as a Bill following a superb career in the USFL is from East Brady, Pa., near Pittsburgh.

"I can't wait," Kelly, ranked sixth among AFC passers, said. "I'm so excited. From my area, they've got about 20 buses coming."

The Bears once again will be without quarterback Jim McMahon, out with a shoulder injury, and could use Doug Flutie if Mike Tomczak, who has been named as the starter for Sunday, and backup Steve Fuller falter. Fuller and Tomczak combined for 11 of 27 completions, 130 yards and two interceptions in the 20-17 loss to the Rams last Monday night.

Chicago Running back Walter Payton, who has missed only one game in his career in which he has become the league's all-time rusher, also is questionable with a toe injury.

"I don't anticipate playing," Flutie said. "Right now, everything I know is from the playbook and watching films. The biggest problem would be putting it all together. I've been here only two weeks, and the other guys have been here all season."

Newest quarterback

Paul McDonald, left, the Dallas Cowboys' newest quarterback, shares a joke with Steve Pelluer during Thursday's workout. McDonald was signed to back up Pelluer after starting quarterback Danny White broke his wrist in Sunday's game against the New York Giants.

Finks tries to revive Saints

By Murray Olderman

NEW ORLEANS (NEA) — No one ever questioned Jim Finks' toughness. When he was an NFL quarterback with the 1949-55 Pittsburgh Steelers, Finks overcame a broken neck (sixth cervical disc), a broken hand, torn knee ligaments, ripped cartilage, a broken jaw and a smashed face to persevere through seven seasons.

The same fortitude has characterized his second career as a football executive. Finks has gone into franchise situations as bleak as a moon-cape and produced: He has built three pro football dynasties. This year, at the age of 59, he has taken on the challenge of building a fourth.

Finks is the president and general manager of the New Orleans Saints, who have never had a winning season — although they are now rounding out their second decade of play. Hired in January by Thomas Benson, leader of the group that acquired the franchise in 1985, Finks was given 3 per cent of the action.

After signing Jim Mora as the Saints' new head coach, Finks focused on the talent.

Almost his first action was reducing the $460,000 salary of Earl Campbell. Then when it was obvious in training camp that Campbell was not going to figure in the Saints' renaissance, there was no problem in getting him to retire.

"He lacked the desire," says Finks. "A lot of people get tired mentally and emotionally before they do physically. That's why Walter Payton is such an amazing guy. He plays like he fully enjoys the game."

Finks can speak authoritatively about the great running back of the Chicago Bears. In the first draft after Finks became general manager of the Bears, Walter Payton of unheralded Jackson State was his No. 1 selection. In fact, of the 22 current starters on the world champions in Chicago, 20 were brought in during Finks' nine-year tenure running the team.

He is one of the few front-office bosses in pro football whose experience encompasses virtually every facet of operating a franchise — player, scout, coach, general manager (and now president) of a team.

"I think I know when people are do-

'We don't have a good football team yet, but we're going in the right direction. If we're a good organization, we'll handle the losses.'

— Jim Finks, on the New Orleans Saints

ing a good job or not," Finks says bluntly.

When Finks, a slim 175-pounder, felt his body could no longer endure linebacker blitzing, he did a stint at Notre Dame as Paul Hornung's quarterback tutor in 1956, the year the Golden Boy won the Heisman Trophy. Then Finks hiked up to Canada, where he scouted and coached briefly for Calgary.

"The general manager, Bob Masterson, hit a player," recounts Finks, "so they said, 'Run the office until we can get somebody.'"

Finks stayed as general manager of the CFL Stampede for seven years, importing such notable quarterbacks as Joe Kapp, Jack Kemp, Tom Flores and Cotton Davidson. The struggling young NFL expansion team at Minneapolis lured him back to the States in 1964.

Finks brought Bud Grant down from Winnipeg to launch one of the NFL's distinguished coaching careers. He also stockpiled enough talent to get the Vikings into the Super Bowl twice in the next decade.

But the Vikings' ownership wouldn't let him buy into the club, so he looked south again, to Chicago, where aging George Halas needed a football man. Finks began the revitalization process that brought the Bears to Super Bowl XXI — after he left the club.

A Chicago sports editor called Jim in January 1982 and asked, "When's the press conference?"

"What press conference?" replied Jim.

Halas, the William Paley of football, had hired Mike Ditka as head coach without consulting the general manager.

By the end of the following season, Finks was gone, moving laterally to become president of the Chicago Cubs (who coincidentally won their division in 1984). But Finks wasn't directly involved in the baseball operation.

He tried public relations for a while as a consultant with Hill and Knowlton.

Then the Saints — on the recommendation of Wellington Mara (New York Giants) and Art Modell (Cleveland) — tapped Finks for their reclamation project.

This is how he outlines his master plan for New Orleans:

"Get good, competent people within the organization — coaching, scouting, marketing, public relations, financial. Clearly define their roles. And give them an opportunity to do their job."

"Regardless of what happens on a given Sunday, don't overreact."

"You're going to have adversity, but the system is devised to allow any sick club to get well — you don't lose your players like you do in baseball."

SMU (5-3, 4-2 SWC) at NOTRE DAME (3-4), 12:00 Noon (CST)—The Mustangs and Fighting Irish battle for the 12th time in history as coach Bobby Collins sends his squad against Notre Dame, coached by former Arkansas mentor Lou Holtz. SMU relives a bit of history as the Mustangs visit Notre Dame Stadium where they played in the opening game on Oct. 4, 1930, and fell to the Irish 20-14. SMU won the last game in the rivalry, though, as Collins' forces downed then-coach Gerry Faust's ND squad 27-20 in the 1984 Aloha Bowl to cut the Irish's series lead to 8-3. Collins stands 90-42-3 (14 years) overall at Southern Mississippi and SMU and 42-12-1 (five seasons) with the Mustangs. Holtz is 119-69-5 (17 years) at five universities and is in his first year at Notre Dame after arriving from the University of Minnesota. Holtz was 60-21-2 from 1977-83 at Arkansas and was also an even 3-3-1 in games against SMU during that era...The Mustangs base their high-powered offense on the passing artistry of junior quarterback Bobby Watters (108-for-199 for 1,513 yards and 11 TDs this year) while senior SE Ron Morris 44 (128 catches for seventh place on the SWC career list, see page 4) is the prime receiver. Senior RB Jeff Atkins is third in Mustangs' career rushing history with 3,236 net yards on 663 carries for 29 TDs and stands ninth (77 yards to move) on the all-time SWC list. The broadcast: Gary Gallup and Norm Hitzges on the SWC Radio Network.

HOUSTON (1-7, 0-5 SWC) at TEXAS (3-4, 2-2 SWC), 1:00 p.m. (CST)—The Cougars and Longhorns both look to return to the win column in a Memorial Stadium encounter, the 13th football game played between the rivals since Texas copped a 28-7 triumph at Austin in 1953...The Fred Akers-coached UT crew is 3-3-1 in Austin against the Cougars, who downed the Longhorns 29-15 in 1984 in the Texas capital. The Longhorns prevailed 34-24 at the Astrodome in 1985, and that win kept UT's mark perfect in Houston at 4-0-1...It's another battle of two of the nation's highly-respected coaches as UH coach Bill Yeoman takes a 160-105-8 (25 years, longest consecutive term at one university by any Division I-A coach) mark and a 51-32-2 SWC record into the game. Texas' Akers is 94-42-2 (12 seasons) overall, 84-29-2 (11 years) at Texas, and 58-18-1 in SWC contests. The combined SWC winning percentage of the two coaches is an outstanding .682. Texas has found new life in 1986 on offense behind QB Bret Stafford (120-for-224 for 1,446 passing yards and 7 TDs), whose favorite targets have been WR Gabriel Johnson (24 receptions for 408 yards and a 17.0 yards per catch average) and RB Eric Metcalf...Houston finds solace from a schedule which includes seven teams that played in 1985 bowls. UH has gotten solid defensive play of LB Gary McGuire, an All-America candidate with 127 total tackles in eight games, and LB Robert Harper, who had 122 total stops through last week's UH-TCU game. Sophomore RB Darren Norris of the Longhorns has been a catalyst in the running game while the Cougars rely on the option carries of QBs Mark Davis and Gerald Landry. The broadcast: Ron Franklin and Mike Edmonds on the SWC Radio Network.

TEXAS TECH (5-3, 3-2 SWC) at TCU (3-5, 1-4 SWC) 2:00 p.m. (CST)—The sizzling Red Raiders seek to extend a three-game winning streak and stay in outside contention for the SWC crown as they invade Amon Carter Stadium in Fort Worth to face the Horned Frogs, who also have momentum after a 30-14 triumph over Houston last week on the road. This game marks an anniversary of sorts as Tech QB Billy Joe Tolliver set a conference record by passing for 422 yards last Nov. 9 against TCU at Jones Stadium in Lubbock. Tolliver has teamed with Monte McGuire and Aaron Keesee to make the Raiders a continued "air force" as Tech owns team totals of 138 completions in 329 attempts (most in the SWC and a school season record) for 1,594 yards and six touchdowns. But the Tech defense, led by LB Brad Hastings and Michael Johnson, has continued to develop quickly. TCU has just a bit of series history on its side, though, as the Frogs hold a 20-19-3 edge in games played between the squads since 1926. TCU won 27-16 at Fort Worth in 1984, but the Tech is 2-1-2 in the last five games with the Horned Frogs. Tech coach David McWilliams is in his first season as a college head coach and has won five of eight games, including a 23-21 verdict over alma mater Texas last week...TCU coach Jim Wacker is 120-57-5 (15 years) overall, 16-24-2 (four years) at TCU, and 7-21-1 in SWC battles...Tech's Tyrone (Smurf) Thurman rolled 96 yards with a punt return against Texas last week. The broadcast: Brad Sham and Jack Dale on the SWC Radio Network.

ACC shoots for first place tie

DALLAS (AP)—Here are previews of weekend games involving Lone Star Conference football teams:

EAST TEXAS STATE (1-7-0, 0-3-0) at ABILENE CHRISTIAN (6-1-0, 3-0-0), 2 p.m., Shotwell Stadium (15,000), Abilene. A win for the Wildcats will put them in a tie for first with idle West Texas State (5-4-0, 4-0-0). Abilene Christian is ranked 10th in this week's NCAA Division II national poll after Saturday's 41-22 victory over winless Howard Payne. East Texas State won opener over Livingston, Ala., but has since lost seven straight, including Saturday's 21-6 decision to Eastern New Mexico. ACU jr QB Rex

Lamberti (Odessa Permian) broke his own ACU and LSC season records for TD passes in season after throwing for 382 yds and 5 TDs against HPU. That gives him 27 for season and 51 in career in 18 games as starter. He's thrown for 1,911 yds this season. His top receiver, sr WR Arthur Culpepper (San Antonio Roosevelt), has caught 42 passes for 728 yds and 13 TDs and is within 2 catches of ACU career record and 7 of LSC career record. Fr DT Bill Clayton (East Bernard) leads the Wildcats in tackles with 64. ETSU jr QB Mike Trigg (San Antonio Roosevelt) has thrown for 841 yds and 1 TD. His leading target is big sr TE Robert Giddens, who has caught 31 passes for 398 yds and 1 TD. Soph DB Aaron Muehlstein (Grapevine) leads his team in scoring. He's got 4 of the Lions' 8 TDs this season on 2 kickoff returns (97 and 98 yds) and 2 interception returns.

TEXAS A&I (7-1-0, 2-1-0) at EASTERN NEW MEXICO (7-2-0, 2-2-0), 1:30 p.m. MST, Greyhound Stadium (5,300), Portales, N.M. Must-win situation for Javelinas to stay in contention for 1986 LSC title with unbeaten leaders West Texas State (4-0, idle this week) and Abilene Christian (3-0, hosts East Texas State). A&I leads LSC in total offense (537.1), rushing offense (391.1) and scoring offense (44.8).

Sidelined TCU quarterback spends most of spare time in press box

By CHARLES RICHARDS Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP)—Quarterback Scott Ankrum spends his football Saturdays not on the field with his Texas Christian University teammates, but in the press box with Horned Frog coaches.

Penciled in as TCU's starting quarterback at the beginning of the past two autumns, Ankrum was sidelined in the fourth game last year with a torn-up ankle.

This year, he pulled a muscle in his upper thigh during pre-season conditioning drills and discovered after taking only 13 snaps in the Tulane and Southern Methodist games that he couldn't go.

The injuries cost the Horned Frogs a quarterback with sprinter's speed, feared more for his running than his passing, who had scampers of 51, 33, 32, 31 and 30 yards and pass plays of 99 and 41 yards in the seven varsity games in which he appeared as a freshman and sophomore.

The Southwest Conference is expected to grant TCU's application for a hardship ruling on Ankrum this season, which means head coach Jim Wacker would still have two years of eligibility left in the 6-1, 205-pound junior from San Antonio, who is also a team captain.

"When you lose your starting quarterback three days into practice, it's a blow obviously. But the situation he's in now could be the greatest thing that ever happened to him," offensive backfield coach Bob DeBesse said.

DeBesse said the forced redshirt season for Ankrum has allowed TCU coaches to bring him into the press box coaches' booth with them during games and give him insight into opposing defenses that he could never have gotten otherwise.

DeBesse said, "We rely on him to look at the opposing team's secondary to see anything they're doing other than what we were expecting, and we look for him to watch the defensive front at times to watch for certain stunts they might be running. He's done a real good job," DeBesse said.

As a hardship injury case, Ankrum said, "I'm done practicing for the year. It gets a little frustrating at times. I can't do anything with the team."

That means he has to work out on his own, along with another hardship injury applicant, junior Ricky Stone of Gilmer.

"We've got a routine he and I do. We go out and throw about 45 minutes. He's a tight end, so that works out pretty well. Then I lift (weights) a little bit, and I swim laps every day, for probably 35 minutes," Ankrum said.

After TCU's stunning 8-4 record in Wacker's first season at TCU in 1984, when Ankrum was a freshman, last year got off to a good start with a 30-13 victory over Tulane. Then came Wacker's dismissal of the Frogs' Heisman Trophy candidate, running back Kenneth Davis, and six starters or key backups on defense because of illegal benefits they admitted receiving from alumni.

The team won only two of its last 10 games last year, going winless in league play, and at the end of an NCAA investigation was told it could not win the SWC or go to a bowl this season. As a result, three defensive stalwarts—defensive end David Spradlin, noseguard Kent Tramel, and linebacker Floyd Terrell—opted to redshirt this season in order to play in 1987, when no such NCAA sanctions exist.

Ankrum said the ankle that he had to have surgery on last year after getting all the ligaments in it torn against the Arkansas Razorbacks is completely healed. He adds that the leg injury he's recovering from now "will be fine by spring. I have no doubts about it. It's just one of those injuries that takes time to heal."

Diving ship to search for helicopter's voice recorder

SUMBURGH, Shetland Islands (AP) — Rescue vessels scoured frigid North Sea waters today for survivors of what aviation officials say could be the worst civilian helicopter crash on record. Nineteen people were known dead, and 26 others were missing.

Two people survived the disaster Thursday when the twin-rotor Chinook heading for Sumburgh Airport carrying three crew and 44 oil industry workers from North Sea offshore rigs plunged into the sea and sank in 300 feet of water.

Nineteen bodies were recovered, the Royal Air Force said.

Ian Henderson, director of operations for Shell U.K. Exploration and Production, which operates the rigs, said late Thursday that it was "extremely unlikely" anyone remained alive in the 48-degree water. The Coast Guard said the outside temperature at the time of the crash was 43 degrees.

Henderson said no casualty list would be released until next of kin were notified. He refused to say whether foreigners were on board.

Six ships and six helicopters searched the crash site two miles south of Sumburgh overnight. A diving support ship was expected to arrive today to try to recover the Chinook 234's cockpit voice recorder, which officials hope will help reveal the cause of the crash.

The Coast Guard said visibility was 12 miles, waves were 12 feet high and winds ranged from 25 to 38 knots when the helicopter went down. It was ferrying oil workers from the Brent offshore field.

Alabama fugitive sought in two slayings escapes custody

WILMER (AP) — An Alabama fugitive sought in the slayings of two campers at a state park escaped from a police car where he had been strapped in with his hands cuffed behind him.

About 20 officers from five police departments and an Alabama sheriff helped in the search Wednesday and Thursday for David Woods, 23, who escaped from the Wilcox County Jail in south Alabama in April, 1985.

He has been sought by authorities on capital murder charges since early October when the bodies of the two campers were found at Roland Cooper State Park in Alabama.

Wilcox County Sheriff Prince Arnold, after learning of Woods' escape Wednesday, drove to Wilmer from Alabama to help in the search.

"We want people to know that there is a $28,000 reward out for any information leading to the arrest of this man," Arnold said.

Woods, who sometimes uses the name David Long, was charged with capital murder after the bodies of James Beasley Jr. of Seattle and Troya Bogard of Seward, Alaska, both 26, were found Oct. 5. Both victims had been beaten and shot and their bodies covered with sleeping bags. Authorities said the couple had been traveling around campgrounds in the Southeast.

Officer Michael Pigg and another officer responding to a disturbance report arrested Woods and two other men who had fired shots into a car at a mobile home park, Pigg said. Pigg said he took Woods to his car while another officer, Bobby Henry, took the other two men to a second patrol car.

A .41-caliber Magnum pistol was found on the seat of the stolen truck at the scene, Pigg said.

"I put him in the front seat of my car, strapped him in with the seat belt and then locked the door," Pigg said. He said Woods' hands were cuffed behind his back "with his palms up."

Pigg said he assisted Henry with the two other men and when he returned to his patrol car Woods had fled. The other two men arrested were identified as Thomas Wilkinson, 18, of Wilmer, and James Handlin, 22, of Lancaster. Both were charged with possession of stolen property.

"Somehow he managed to get his hands around, undo the seat belt and open the door," Pigg said. "This guy has nothing to lose. The underbrush he ran through was so tight you could hardly get a dog through it, much less a person."

Pigg said police soon received a call from a resident of the mobile home park who said he saw "a large black male in handcuffs run into the woods."

Officers from Wilmer, Dallas, Ferris, Hutchins and Lancaster used a helicopter and several canine units to search the dense woods in the Cotton Creek Basin Wednesday and Thursday.

Since Woods was charged in the Alabama slayings, his mother, aunt and brother have been charged with harboring a fugitive.

Camden, Ala. Police Chief Robert Rogers said last week that he exchanged shots with Woods after spotting him in a house.

State office readies for Clements

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the political pendulum swinging from Democrat to Republican in the Texas governor's race in this week's national election, staffers at the Texas liaison office here are bracing for some changes.

Some of those appointed or hired during the administration of Gov. Mark White said Thursday they expect the newly elected governor, William Clements, to bring in his own team to run the Texas Office of State-Federal Relations.

The office serves as the eyes, ears and mouthpiece for the Texas governor in Washington, but it is also charged with working for the state Legislature and private interests.

Under White's Democratic administration, the staff of five coordinators, four support workers and two executives focused primarily on education and banking issues, said associate director Claiborn Crain.

Many of those staffers face the loss of their jobs with the victory in Tuesday's elections of Clements, a Republican.

"It's uncertain what's going to happen," Crain said. "I think everybody's watching this to see what other kinds of jobs are out there and what opportunities will still be available here."

During Clements' previous administration, the state office staff concerned itself largely with pursuing and developing oil and gas legislation for presentation in the two houses of Congress.

"When Clements first came into office in 1978 he didn't look very closely at this office," Crain said. "Later he realized the value of the office that looks after state interests here."

Many of the Clements' staffers who were "more overt politically," were asked to leave when the White administration took over the governorship in 1982, Crain said.

Temporary hot line takes on life of its own

EDITOR'S NOTE—When a psychiatric hospital not far from New York opened a cocaine abuse hot line three years ago, it was expected to be temporary. It's turned out to be a valuable research tool that has, in the words of one official, "taken on a life of its own."

SUMMIT, N.J. (AP) — If you dial 1-800-COCAINE, the nation's most popular drug abuse hot line, there's a fair chance you'll get a busy signal.

There's a better than fair chance you'll get a recording, like when you phone the airlines, asking you to hang on until someone is available. If you hang on rather than hang up, as hundreds of thousands have done over the past three years, a trained counselor will get to you.

Today's news is that the current volume of hot line calls, like the innovative cocaine derivative crack, has reached a new high on the drug front.

"We've had brief periods in the past when the lines have been this busy," says Lisa Bensen, a representative of the hospital that operates the hot line, "but never before has it been as sustained as in the past several months. There's just no letup."

Those previous spurts have occurred during periods of depression, such as Christmastime — a phenomenon long observed by psychiatrists — and periods of anxiety, such as immediately following the drug-attributed death of the basketball star, Len Bias.

For example, the first holiday season the hot line was in operation, the volume of calls doubled a week before Christmas and doubled again on New Year's Eve.

"After Len Bias's death," Ms. Bensen says, "people called for help like crazy, but some also called to dispute the reason given for his death. They had their own theories. Denial, of course, is a typical symptom of an addict."

"Others called not so much for help in quitting but to ask us what we considered a safe dose."

"Even more startling was that some callers asked if we knew Len Bias's cocaine supplier. They figured if what he got was potent enough to kill, it must be pretty good stuff."

The 1-800-COCAINE hot line, then, continues to do what it set out to do when it opened on May 6, 1983.

However, guiding people over their drug problems, or simply telling them where to find help nearby, was really the hot line's second purpose. Its first was to gather information.

It was, and remains, a way to question users, to find out the extent of cocaine abuse in America, to learn something about the people using it — who, why, when, where, the sort of data you don't get from the census bureau or by mailing out a questionnaire.

"It started as a research tool with an obviously beneficial side effect," Ms. Bensen says. "It was Dr. Gold's idea. It was supposed to be a short-lived thing. Nobody figured it would last, but look at it now. It has taken on a life of its own."

Dr. Mark Gold, a specialist in drug abuse, is chief psychiatrist at Fair Oaks Hospital which operates the hot line.

Fair Oaks is a 144-bed psychiatric and drug treatment center located on 10 leafy acres in northern New Jersey — out of the way, but still convenient to New York City which hot line research confirms is one of the nation's two major areas of drug abuse. The other is Los Angeles.

About a third of Fair Oaks' patients are there for drug abuse. Some have been people whom anyone who reads the newspapers would recognize. The hospital is privately operated, for profit. Patients pay about $700 a day. The waiting list is long.

Fair Oaks is owned by a subsidiary of one of several chains of investor-owned psychiatric hospitals which are now among the fastest-growing segments of the nation's health-care industry. About 200 such hospitals across the nation took in $3 billion last year and expect annual revenue to more than double by 1988, a commentary on the times as revealing as the hot line volume.

When Gold set up the hot line they expected about 10,000 calls a year, a pretty good base for research.

Almost immediately the volume reached 1,000 calls a day and now is up to about 2,000. A pool of 40 counselors, some of them former patients, have taken the training the hospital requires of its hot line answerers.

Three or four are on duty at a time, answering six incoming lines in a windowless room on the second floor of the drug abuse unit. Each has handy directories broken down by states listing every hospital and drug abuse center in the nation.

"A lot of callers want counseling over the phone," says Ronnie Lonoff, the operators' supervisor. "But we're not designed to do that. What we do is refer them for treatment."

At times, when the volume is particularly heavy, operators try to speed things along by referring callers to another hot line, usually the one operated by the National Institute on Drug Abuse (1-800-662-HELP) which was started, according to a NIDA spokesman, precisely because "the government could not be in the position of making 1-800-COCAINE the only option."

Because of the number of calls from the New York area, operators also refer callers to that state's hot line, 1-800-522-5353.

"We know all the hot line numbers," Ms. Lonoff says, "and we also know who the specialists are in the drug field. For instance, if a call involves cocaine use and pregnancy we'll refer them to the prenatal clinic at Northwestern University."

Some telephone counseling, however, is inevitable.

"I had a call from a little boy, about 11 or 12, who said his school friends wanted him to try drugs and wouldn't be his friends if he didn't. He said he was afraid to talk to his parents about it."

"I talked to him quite a long time, longer than usual. I told him it was okay to say no, that those were not real friends, and persuaded him to talk to his parents. A week later he called me back to say he had new friends. His father got on the phone to thank me."

About half the callers, Ms. Lonoff says, are from people other than users — frightened parents, worried spouses, relatives. "Sometimes they will say they're calling on another's behalf, but we know they are talking about themselves. You can tell."

Confidentiality is strict. Any information the center sends to a caller is in a plain envelope marked Occupant, provided the caller volunteers his address. Ms. Lonoff did, however, persuade one caller to say where she lived. "She was attempting suicide and I had to get the rescue squad there."

Only about one in eight callers, the hot line operators say, is specifically looking for treatment.
