Coronado fails again

Alleged failure to document doctors' orders to discontinue patient medication may keep the Coronado Nursing Center from getting its Department of Health certification back.

The state health department decertified — ordered Medicaid funds withheld — the home in August citing deficiencies in patient care. The inspectors claimed the home failed to "keep the patient clean, dry and comfortable and to prevent skin tears (bed sores)."

The health department inspectors returned Wednesday, at the nursing home's request, and found that while the patient care "deficiencies" had all been corrected, there were problems with handling of medications.

Coronado Administrator Fay Lockhart deferred any reaction, explanation, confirmation or comment to Beverly Enterprises, an Austin-based firm that operates the nursing home. She added that any photograph of patients, staff members or other things at the nursing home would have to be cleared through the main office.

Beverly Enterprises spokeswoman Sharon Flippen explained today that the nursing home was cited in the latest inspection for not having doctors' signatures on requests to change patient medication.

"The main thing we do is to have the doctor come in and make the request to discontinue medication," she said. "But sometimes we get the requests

County bosses adopt expenses

Gray County commissioners this morning rejected a proposed tax increase and instead opted to keep the property tax rate at the same level as last year.

Commissioners also adopted a lower 1987 budget than initially proposed, and lower than the current $4.48 million budget.

The commissioners decided to retain the 21.6 cents per $100 valuation tax rate to fund the approved 1987 budget of $4.18 million.

The new budget is lower than the $4.36 million figure that had been under consideration before today's meeting.

Commissioners previously said a 2.1-cent tax rate increase was necessary to fund state-mandated indigent health care, which requires counties to spend up to 10 percent of their budgets on health care for the poor. The program took effect Sept. 1.

The county also faces a decline in taxable property values of about $160 million, according to figures released by the Gray County Appraisal District. Commissioners had also expressed concern over uncollectable taxes this year because of the current sluggish economy.

Commissioners today also tabled any action on a proposed public golf course.

The 1987 budget of about $4.18 million is about $300,000 lower than the current $4.48 million figure. The 1987 spending plan adopted today does not contain any wage or salary increases for county employees.

In other action this morning, the commissioners were to have considered alternatives on a public golf course vote, following a ruling by the secretary of state's office that such a binding vote, as planned for the Nov. 4 general election ballot, would be illegal.

Precinct 4 Commissioner Ted Simmons recommended today that the court seek the legislature's permission to put the issue on the ballot next year.

Commissioners took no action on Simmons' motion but opted to table the matter until the Legislature convenes in January.

The Pampa Public Golf Association has requested $650,000 in county funds left over from the sale of Highland General Hospital, plus county equipment and manpower, to help in construction of the course to be located north of Pampa on Texas Highway 70. Total cost to the county has been estimated at $1.1 million.

State Senate approves March primary

AUSTIN (AP)—The Senate has approved a bill to establish a March presidential primary in Texas so the state can jump in the front seat of national politics.

Texas would join 11 other Southern states in holding a primary on the second Tuesday in March in presidential years, starting in 1988.

The Senate bill was sent to the House on voice vote Thursday, after a test vote of 21-2 showed virtually no opposition.

"I couldn't resist a feeling of wry amusement watching that bill float through here when I remember 1979 and the Killer Bees and all that furor," said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

Hobby also presided over the Senate in 1979 when 12 senators hid for 4½ days, leaving that body without a quorum and blocking a bill that would have set up a presidential primary separate from the regular primary for state and local races.

It was Hobby who named the absent senators "the Killer Bees."

The new proposal would move all primary elections from the first Saturday in May to the second Tuesday in March in even-numbered years.

"I would much prefer to have a split primary — have a general state primary in August or September or something like that," Hobby told reporters. "But this does improve the position of the state in the presidential election process. The state now virtually has no voice in the presidential selection process."

Bill co-sponsor Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, said, "I think it's time that Texas takes its rightful place in the driver's seat in presidential politics."

"I think it's time that Texas, the third most populous state in this country, played a key role in setting the national agenda, the agenda on issues such as energy, agriculture, national defense, issues that are going to be absolutely crucial to the future of our republic."

"Let Texas be the big fish in the big pond. Let Texas voices be heard in the selection of the most important position in this country," Edwards said.

Gov. Mark White said he did not "have any plans at this time" to open the special legislative session to the presidential primary proposal. Edwards said he and co-sponsor John Traeger, D-Seguin, had met with White and the "governor has not said he would not put this on the call."

So far, 11 Southern states have voted to hold their presidential primaries on the second Tuesday in March, with two other states scheduling primaries for the following Saturday.

Market plunge pounds world money centers

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market continued falling early today in the wake of its worst one-day drubbing in history, a plunge that sent shock waves through markets worldwide and posed a major test for Wall Street.

At 10:30 a.m. EDT the Dow average had skidded another 28.97 to 1,763.92. Bond prices were generally lower, with prices of some long-term Treasury issues down by about $5 per $1,000 of face value.

The aftershocks of Thursday's selloff continued overnight in Japan, where the Tokyo Stock Exchange suffered the worst one-day drop in its history in response to the Wall Street skid. Prices also were down sharply in mid-day trading on European stock markets.

The market rebounded from other severe declines this year, but analysts said investors' willingness to bid prices higher this time could be seriously challenged following Thursday's nose-dive, in which the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks plunged a record 86.81 points to 1,792.89.

The stock and bond markets both were crushed by waves of selling.

Prices of some long-term Treasury bonds tum-bled $30 for each $1,000 in face value.

"It was constant, persistent, unrelenting selling all day long," said Alfred E. Goldman, vice president of the investment firm A.G. Edwards & Sons Inc. in St. Louis.

The selling also produced Wall Street's busiest day ever as a record 237.57 million shares changed hands on the New York Stock Exchange, surpassing the previous high of 236.57 million set Aug. 3, 1984.

Some market trackers attributed the sudden slide to a growing belief among investors that the economy is picking up steam.

An economic upturn generally would seem welcome, but in the financial markets worried investors previously had sent stock and bond prices higher on the premise that the economy would remain sluggish, which could lead to further declines in interest rates.

Stock prices generally go up as interest rates go down.

The prospect of a growing economy, however, dampened hopes that the Federal Reserve Board would continue to push rates lower.

Some economists said expectations of an economic rebound and that the Fed will not lower rates further to spark the economy appeared premature.

"I don't think there's much indication that the economy's picking up," said Gordon B. Pye, senior vice president of Irving Trust Co., a New York bank.

Instead, Pye suggested, the markets "overreacted in getting too pessimistic about the economy in July and August, and maybe now they're correcting that over-bearishness on the economy."

For the Dow Jones industrial average, the "correction" came only a week after it climbed to a record 1,919.71. The loss also shattered the average's previous one-day record setback of 61.87 points on July 7.

The markets' decline snowballed into dramatic proportions with the help of computerized trading programs that are increasingly being used by large institutional investors to quickly buy and sell huge portfolios of securities.

over the telephone. When the inspectors came, we had some that had not been signed or not been returned."
 "Also, on the day they were here, we had an exhaust fan that wasn't working. But the main reason was the medication handling," she said.
 "The ball's back in their court," said Ralph Howard of the health department's regional office in Canyon. He explained that the home would have to clear all its deficiencies to get recertified.
 Flippen admitted that the nursing home will have to improve its system "with more emphasis on getting those slips signed."
 "We may have to work out an extra step in which we have a board noting doctors requests," she said, adding that the staff should show "perseverance and seeing to it we get those orders signed."
 "We're going to get working on it very quickly," she declared.

 Decertification does not mean the nursing home is closed. It means simply that the state witholds Medicaid funds to the home until the problem is corrected. But with most of the patients dependent on Medicaid, continued decertification could be just as damaging as a lost license.
 "I'd say decertification is about as punitive as you can get," Flippen said. "Private pay patients make up only a minority of nursing home patients."
 Nursing homes get $32 per patient per day in Medicaid, Flippen explained. "We can't charge the patients if Medicaid had paid for them."
 Flippen couldn't specify how much money Coronado has lost since its Aug. 8 decertification, "but it's hundreds of thousands of dollars."
 The nursing home has 120 beds and 54 patients.
 Flippen said Coronado's problem is not necessarily linked to staffing.

 "We'd all like larger staffs, and if we got $400 per day like hospitals do, we'd be in better shape," said Flippen, who is lobbying for a 30 cent per patient per day increase in Medicaid.
 The nursing home was first placed on "vendor hold," the withholding of Medicaid fund, in November 1985, when inspectors found some patients were not given the same medicine their doctors prescribed. Another deficiency was written for not honoring residents' food preferences. That vendor hold was lifted Dec. 10, 1985, with a warning that if the nursing home were cited again, the Medicaid contract with the health department would be canceled.
 Inspectors in October praised the nursing home's program of activities and social events and "good bedside care of all patients."

Boulter plans Saturday stop

U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter is scheduled to appear for a town meeting in the Austin Elementary School gymnasium, 1900 Duncan, at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.
 The Amarillo Republican is challenged in the Nov. 4 general election by Democrat Doug Seal, a Wellington farmer.
 Ernie Houdashell, a Boulder aide, said citizens attending Saturday's campaign stop will have the opportunity to ask the congressman questions on the issues.
 Wednesday, Boulter joined a bipartisan group of oil state legislators and industry leaders to attempt to form a consensus on an oil import fee. Boulter said the purpose of the meeting was to combat the likelihood of the United States becoming more than 50 percent dependent on foreign oil.
 "The need for price stabilization in the petroleum economy has never been more acute," Boulter said. "In my mind, the best method to induce this stability is through the enactment of a well-structured oil import fee."

Board considers alternatives in appraising mineral values

Members of the Gray County Appraisal District board want to check out all the alternatives before they decide who's going to appraise county mineral values.
 The appraisal district's two year utility and mineral appraisal contract with the Amarillo firm of Pritchard & Abbott ends this year. Gray County Appraiser Charles Buzzard told board members Thursday that he's looking at four apparently less costly alternatives to continuing with the Pritchard & Abbott contract.
 Under the current contract, the appraisal firm values minerals, utilities and pipeline companies and such major area plants as Celanese and Cabot. The current fees are $49,820, with $38,280 of an extra person. This would include $26,000 for salary, $3,000 for auto allowance, $1,000 for training and $1,380 for materials. The district currently has two real estate appraisers who earn $21,240 each and a personal property appraiser who earns $16,200.

 According to Buzzard, a mineral appraiser almost has to "be a petroleum engineer" as well as know the appraisal process.
 "He has to know the types of minerals and the ups and downs of the petroleum and gas industries," he said.
 Board members seemed to agree the in-house appraiser appeared to be the best route.
 Board Chairman Benny Kirksey asked if any other appraiser districts have an in-house appraiser. Buzzard answered that Potter-Randall counties had one for a while but the board felt he was spending too much time on mineral evaluation.
 Kirksey suggested Buzzard check to see what districts in the state have in-house appraisers.
 In other business, the board delayed a decision on whether to "loan" the collection division $8,300 to pay off a note on a computer.
 Buzzard explained that the district was going to pay off the note with reserve funds from the appraisal division because there is not enough money in the collection budget to do that. Buzzard told board members that while the appraisal division has more money to afford the lease on the computer, it would be unfair to the taxing entities which do not use the district's collection service (which is all but Pampa city and school) to charge them.
 So, Buzzard recommended that the collection division "borrow" $8,300 from the appraisal division to make up for its deficit.
 Board members also tabled a decision to take bids on a telephone system and to buy two new typewriters. They approved a contract with Lewis Meers accounting firm of Pampa to be the district's auditor. The firm is expected to charge between $32,000 and 39,000.

In-house mineral appraiser would cost the district about $35,000 per year.

— Buzzard.

that going to mineral valuation. It will cost the district $47,850 to continue the contract.
 Buzzard believes that one alternative would be to just have Pritchard & Abbott do the mineral appraisals, at a cost of $38,280; all the other appraisals would be done by the appraisal district employees.
 Another alternative would be to contract with another appraiser, former Pritchard & Abbott employee Lewis Henderson. Buzzard said that Hansford, Ochiltree and Lipscomb counties are considering Henderson. Under that contract, Henderson would charge $32,000 for mineral appraisals, plus $11,540 if he is contracted to appraise other type properties.
 A fifth alternative would be just to drop the contracts and hire a mineral appraiser to work "in-house." Buzzard said the mineral appraiser would appraise other properties as well as minerals. He estimated that it would cost $35,000 to hire

Hospital reviews security after kidnapping of baby

TEMPLE, Texas (AP) — Officials at Scott & White Memorial Hospital said they will review security at the facility after an infant was taken from a viewing room at the nursery just hours after he was born.

But Executive Vice President Robert Mason and assistant nursing administrator Karen Cure said at a news conference Thursday that they won't recommend "knee-jerk" security enhancement that would detract from the festive occasion of childbirth.

"When someone comes in to have a baby, that's an exciting time," Ms. Cure said. "So we try to celebrate. We don't want to do anything so dramatic, to overreact in a way that would turn this into a prison."

Jeremy Scott Bobo was abducted from the viewing room about 12:30 p.m. Wednesday, eight hours after he was born. The child was found at a residence west of Temple Wednesday evening, and two suspects taken into custody, police said.

Valerie Elaine Dach, 19, was charged with kidnapping Thursday, and was being held at Bell County Jail on $100,000 bond. Her common-law husband was not charged in the kidnapping, but faces a charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle because the truck the couple were in was reported stolen from a Temple car lot, police said.

"We talked with her, and she indicated she acted alone," said police Capt. Dave Wilde.

Police said the woman had donated blood at the hospital's blood bank prior to the kidnapping, and received a free child car seat the hospital gives to donors. Witnesses told police they saw a woman matching the suspect's description at the hospital Tuesday evening, and looking at the baby just before his disappearance.

The 6½-pound boy was found unharmed at the residence, police said.

The child's father, Hank Bobo, said Thursday he was tired, and upset.

"Anger is not the word for it," he said Thursday afternoon as he and his wife, Laura Bobo, waited to leave the hospital. "You go through a lot to have a baby, and to take it out from under you — there's no excuse for it." He said he didn't blame the hospital, but added, "I do think they should do something a whole lot different than they've been doing so it won't happen again."

Executive Vice President Mason said prevention is difficult because it is "not unusual to see women carrying infants in the hall."

"If someone really wants to run off with a baby, they probably can do it," he said, but added, "We'll go over all our security procedures again."

Bobo said that the hospital had removed the doorknob from the viewing room door that officials believe the kidnapper walked through to get to the child.

Man confesses on roadside

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Two hours after a woman dying of multiple stab wounds told police her boyfriend attacked her, the boyfriend drove up to an officer on Interstate 20 and admitted the crime, officials said.

Arlington police were traveling to Fort Worth to find John Betliskey Jr., 22, suspected in the death of his 26-year-old Arlington girlfriend, when they received a teletype that he had been arrested in Ranger, about 90 miles farther west, said Arlington police spokesman Dee Anderson.

The suspect had pulled up behind a patrolman issuing a speeding ticket to another motorist on I-20 in Ranger and said he killed his girlfriend in Arlington, Ranger police said. Betliskey was charged with murder in the death of Jean Rochelle Gasner and was being held Thursday night in Arlington City Jail in lieu of $100,000 bond.

Police say Betliskey drove up to the Ranger officer about two hours after they received the phone call from the dying Gasner.

Governor's optimism about progress not matched by all

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White's optimism for progress made in the second special session has not been matched by some lawmakers.

After a visit to the House Thursday, White said he thought legislators were well on the way to solving the state budget crisis and they will find that the solution has to include a tax hike.

"I'm pleased by the progress he's making and I think we're going to see a resolution of our problem," the governor said after a chat with Speaker Gib Lewis.

Later, the Texas Conservative Coalition, which claims support from a majority of House members, reiterated support for Lewis' position against taxes in the special session.

"A tax bill this session would not balance the budget or stop hot checks from being written in November," said the coalition statement. "There is nothing to be gained by pushing through a 'temporary' tax bill this session."

The 10-member conference committee trying to settle differences between the Senate and House on 1987 spending cuts met Thursday but was unable to reach a final decision, as some legislative leaders had predicted.

The conference committee is scheduled to meet again Sunday afternoon. The House met today but the Senate is in adjournment until Monday.

White said that Lewis is "working to the bottom line."

The bottom line in balancing the budget must involve spending cuts and a tax hike, the governor said.

"My numbers indicate it won't quite cover with cuts," he told reporters.

White has proposed a temporary increase in the sales tax, raising it to 5½ percent from the current 4½ percent through August 1987.

Lewis has been the prime opponent, saying he would not consider a tax bill until spending cuts are approved.

Lewis said Thursday any tax bill brought to the House floor before the cuts are made would fail.

"The membership I talked to feels the same way that I do, that we have a well-defined and laid-out game plan, that we first try to make reductions ... and then at that point if we find ourselves short in reaching the end of this biennium without going into the red, then we will consider a tax bill," Lewis said.

Comptroller Bob Bullock has projected the state will face a $2.8 billion deficit when the current fiscal year ends next August.

Off beat

Bad blood, bad craziness

Two nights ago, I was in a local establishment, keeping quiet and playing pinball.

Two bikers and a mama were doing most of the talking, much of it racially discriminatory and announced drunkenly and loudly. The bikers, dressed in the standard stereotypical regalia and their Harleys outside, didn't like blacks.

"A fact's a fact, and a nigger's a nigger," followed by a self-indulgent cackle.

"You got it, baby," the girl said in a high, nasal voice. At first, I kept glued to the pinball machine.

Before long, a Hispanic guy wearing a fedora brought the biggest of bikers (he weighed probably 240 and wore long hair and a long beard and an aviator's cap with goggles, along with what you'd imagine bikers wear) to a screaming rage, apparently because of the way he looked at him.

The biker screamed and screamed, mentioning that he was a Marine Corps veteran and an American, and threatening assault. The waitress and his girl cooled him, and shortly the Hispanic guy had the good sense to leave.

Then he settled back for more drink and racial slurs, and not long after began bemoaning how people discriminate against bikers because they have long hair and ride Harleys.

I've never been accused of being the earth's most sane person, so I decided it would be intriguing to join the bikers and listen to their views on life, as they were.

It's not that I've never been around bikers. I have a number of friends around the country who consider themselves such, and those are, as they like to be called, "righteous people." Bikers are no different than the rest of us in that there are good and bad.

But I have never walked over and joined a drunken one who's been screaming and threatening half the people in the place. I did, and of course ended up buying.

We talked, and soon the subject was my working for this paper. "You're one of those (expletives) Pampa News (more expletives)," one said in loud horror. "Let me tell you what I think about newspaper (more expletives)."

Some years ago, the local law enforcement and the paper had given him what he considered a bad deal.

There'd been unspecified trouble at the club, and he ended up in county jail, where he says he was beaten by a certain lawman. The fellow said the newspaper printed the police's version, which he says was wrong.

It must've been, for all charges were dropped, after they'd held him for a year and a half, he said. He said he was told to leave town for good. He lives in Austin now.

Probably not using anywhere near the right approach, he came to the newspaper, wishing that his side of the matter be printed. He said someone here told him that he was a nobody and what he had to say didn't matter. If that's true, I don't blame him for hating us.

Now I was in no physical danger; he was just mad. We kept talking about why bikers hate cops. Some of their gripes I agreed with, and so do some of you. Citizens have sent letters to the editor complaining of police wrongdoings.

Most of them don't sign their names, claiming they fear retaliation from people in the position to inflict such harm. It's a shame to have that fear of someone who's an employee of you, John Q. Public, but the concept of public servitude seems to be gone from modern law enforcement. In some spheres, it's more us against them.

We all know that, for various reasons, there's discrimination in enforcing The Law, and the bikers seemed to think there was something I could do about it.

"Look at you, man," they said. "You're in the position to change all of this. You got power of the press."

They couldn't conceive it, but I tried explaining to them that the badge and the gun are a lot more powerful than the press. I can't pull anyone off the streets and have him arrested.

I also can't write the things I'd like to about law enforcement, local and general, here that I would like to. I have to live with the same fears you do, and I don't want the hassle. Also, like the rest of us, there are good cops and bad ones. I can't go lumping them all together.

The bikers, one of whom rightly said "the only free man is a dead man," don't want the hassle either, but some of them bring it on themselves. And it doesn't occur to them that they're discriminating against blacks, other nationalities and police for the exact same reasons people discriminate against them. Because of how they look and because of stereotypes.

After a while and with amiable farewells, the bikers decided to leave. One didn't make it. He stopped outside to urinate on the wall, and his name was in our arrest report Thursday morning.

McLean taxes unchanged, less budget seen

McLEAN — City taxpayers will be paying the same amount for what could be a smaller budget now that city commissioners have continued McLean's tax rate of 27.9 cents per $100 valuation.

Commissioners adopted the same tax rate for next year that's being levied in the current year. Also during their regular meeting Tuesday, commissioners looked at the proposed 1987 general fund and water-sewerage budgets but took no action.

City Secretary Stella Lee, who prepared the budget, expects that at a 95 percent collection rate, the adopted tax rate should bring $33,000 into city coffers. The city anticipates another $35,000 to come from refuse collection fees, $9,975 from street and alley rental fees charged to utility companies, $2,000 in sales tax and $39,000 in miscellaneous collection.

Lee declined to discuss the proposed budget with the press, mistakenly maintaining that it is not public record until it is approved.

In the budget, she estimates a total income of $120,575, plus a $20,000 carry-over from the 1986 budget. In presenting the budget to the council, Lee noted that at $122,575, the proposed general budget is lower than the 1986 budget, $125,300. She attributed the cuts to "a decrease in cost of some products, materials and operations."

City employees are in for a 3 percent salary increase.

Insurance costs in both budgets were removed from the departmental budgets and put in separate funds.

The largest cut is expected to come in the refuse department, down from $40,000 to $21,217. This is due to a decrease, from $18,575 to $1,075, in contractual service. Of the cuts, $6,000 was the insurance while $12,000 was equipment for the landfill.

The street department budget can expect a decrease from $27,242 to $24,283 although equipment maintenance is expected to double from $3,150 to $6,150.

The amount set aside for unforeseen expenses doubled from $4,038 to $8,412. Another increase is expected in the park and cemetery department from $4,925 to $5,275. This is due mainly to salary increases. The library budget may be up a bit to $11,996 because of salary increases and land maintenance.

The City Council expense is expected to remain at $3,550. Council members are paid a small fee each month. Also unchanged is the ambulance budget, which remains at $5,100.

The water-sewer and gas budget, which is funded through utility bills, is expected to drop to $370,000. The estimated expenditure for the 1986 fiscal year, which isn't over until Sept. 30, is $496,110. The budget plans for $350,000 with the rest of the resources coming from a $20,000 carry-over from 1986. No carry-over is expected at the end of 1987.

The largest expense in the budget is expected to be the gas fund with $227,960. City officials expect to have spent $328,584 by the end of 1985-86. Thanks to lower gas prices, the proposed allocation for supplies expected to drop $100,000 to $123,100.

The city plans to spend $58,733 on the water department, with $12,950 of that going to such contractual services as electrical power, freight and travel expenses. $15,300 is to go to maintenance of buildings and water storage tanks. The sewer department fund is anticipated at $5,139.

The city is also planning to allocate $38,107 for the city hall maintenance, $15,000 for insurance, $1,704 for contingencies, and $17,500 for retirement.

In other business, council members: — appointed Jerry Don Cook to the council to fill the vacancy left by member Brian Pohlmeier, who is moving.

— agreed to help move the volunteer fire department from its current garage to the west side of the vacant bra factory.

— agreed to charge $1 to residents' monthly utility bills to go for an anticipated purchase of a fire truck.

— hired Gordon Maddox as city auditor.

Potomac pushers peddling nonsense

One facet of the American constitutional system that is generally counted — at least in civics and political science classes — as something approaching near-genius, is the decentralism or federalism made possible by dividing power between state governments and the central government. With state governments doing a great deal of the day-to-day governing, the founders envisioned the states as a perpetual real-life laboratory experiment in good government.

In a federalist system, different states would be free to try different approaches to various problems or to test approaches that might work in one locality but not another. Good ideas would tend to be adopted by other states, while ideas that didn't pan out or proved harmful would be confined to those states that had tried them first.

A good deal for the reality of federalism has been lost in the last few decades with the extraordinary growth of the behemoth on the Potomac. Even so, it is still states (or localities) that interact most often with most citizens. State or local governments license our businesses, issue drivers' or marriage permits, set and collect taxes, make policy, make and enforce criminal law and perform a host of other functions. And there are still healthy variations from state to state. We haven't become entirely centralized and homogenized.

Not so long ago most conservatives celebrated this diversity and bewailed the efforts of centralizing liberals to undermine states' rights. Now that "conservatives" control a national administration, however, they seem just as adept at finding ways to increase the power of the central government at the expense of state and local governments.

The latest effort to subvert state power is part of the current enthusiasm to do something — anything — to reduce the use of certain drugs the authorities have deemed illicit. The method is familiar — using money extracted from taxpayers by the central governments to force state and local governments to toe the latest line.

Thus a White House panel — ironically enough one called the Private Sector Task Force — has proposed that federal funds be withdrawn from states that do not sponsor "adequate" (whatever that might mean) drug-prevention programs. The panel also recommends that money be withdrawn from states that have decriminalized the use of substances banned by federal law.

This proposal deserves to be shot down. The problem of drug abuse has so far not been reduced by any governmental program. Of all the challenges facing our society, this is one that might well benefit from having different approaches tried in different localities.

Wouldn't it be interesting if some states reduced penalties, while others increased them; some decriminalized certain drugs and others instituted the death penalty for pushers? After a few years of such diverse approaches, we would be in a much better position to judge which approach was actually most effective and what the unintended side-effects of various policies were in practice.

To eliminate the very possibility of innovative approaches by using the club of federal funds to impose a dull uniformity is hardly in the best tradition of enlightened conservatism.

Deregulation helps travelers

Airlines going bankrupt, midair collisions in congested skies, mergers and failed mergers, chronic delays in overtaxed airports — all these raise basic questions about our air transportation system: Was deregulation a mistake? Is it time to return commercial air travel to the tidier, more predictable environment that existed before?

No one thinks the existing system is beyond improvement, but the answer to both questions is no. Some of the more aggravating problems are temporary ones that have little to do with the deregulation enacted in 1978. And while it has produced a bewildering frequency, the new system is much better for air travelers than the old one.

The most dramatic change in the industry has been a sharp drop in fares, bringing air travel within the reach of millions of people who couldn't afford it before. Over the past decade, the average ticket price has fallen by 20 percent, after adjustment for inflation. Marvin Kosters, and economist at the American Enterprise Institute, estimates the yearly savings to consumers at between $5 billion and $10 billion.

One of the frequent complaints is that the new fare finding the lowest price. But it's not hard to find a bargain of tickets. These days, only the feeble-brained and last-minute travelers pay full fare. And a complicated fare system is still better than the old regulated system, which gave consumers no bargains at all.

The problems created by deregulation result from success, not failure. One big reason for the frustrating delays that plague number of passengers on commercial flights has risen by 100 million since 1980, an increase of 34 percent. The number of flights has grown by 31 percent. The bottlenecks largely can be alleviated by expanding existing airports and building new ones.

More air traffic controllers also would help. Despite the crowding in the skies, the Federal Aviation Administration has 12 percent fewer air traffic controllers than it did in 1981, when the controllers went on strike and were fired en masse. The money is there to hire them, but the administration refuses to spend it, lest it make the budget deficit look bigger.

Despite this reduction, safety apparently hasn't suffered. In the seven years from 1972 through 1978, before deregulation, 1,079 people died in accidents on scheduled carriers in the U.S. From 1979 through 1985, just 804 died — even though the number of people flying rose substantially. During that same period the fatality rate, which takes into account the increase in traffic, fell by 44 percent.

The recent demise of Frontier Airlines, like past closings, shouldn't be grounds for worry. Granted, a few air travelers are stranded briefly every time this happens, but it's a small price for the competitive pressure provided by deregulation.

Under the old system, airlines never went out of business, because their survival practically was guaranteed by the Civil Aeronautics Board. Today, airlines hustle to attract and satisfy customers because the alternative is bankruptcy. That's how firms operate in most other sectors of the economy. It's a potent motivator.

Some experts, including deregulation architect Alfred Kahn, worry that the disappearance of some carriers will lead to an oligopoly — a market dominated by a few big airlines charging unreasonably high fares. So far, that fear is a long way off, with about 100 carriers doing business, nearly three times as many as in 1978. Most of the actual and proposed mergers should help preserve competition by creating more formidable carriers to take on giants like American and United.

In any case, the best discipline is the constant threat of new competition. If a major airline, having eliminated its rivals on a particular route, tries to gouge its customers, it invites other airlines to swoop down and snatch them away. If American carriers should get fat and complacent, as Kahn notes, Washington always can open the domestic market to foreign airlines.

The transition from regulation to deregulation hasn't been painless, but overall it clearly has benefited consumers and the economy. Going back to the old arrangement is an expensive way to prove it.

English is spoken here

During our nation's Statue of Liberty birthday party we were reminded of the very many ways in which immigrants have enriched American life.

Limelighted for that occasion was an impressive procession of uncommon men and women in the arts, sciences, commerce, politics and professions who have been "transplanted" here.

Though some still speak with an accent, significantly all of these immigrants who have accomplished much have developed a masterful command of the English language.

Yet, presently we are engaged in a public debate over whether English should be made "the official language" of the United States.

All Americans, as Homer McKee used to say, "are mostly something else."
Several of our great cities and rivers have Spanish names.

The all-American menu now includes pasta and bratwurst, gyros and tacos, moussaka and espresso.

But in our passion for ethnic homogenization, we have forced bilingual education on public schools and the result is a national disaster.

In response to the largest influx of immigrants in this century many schools pressed into service teachers neither trained nor experienced as long as they could speak two languages.

Director Ron Perlman of the Illinois Resource Center says, "In our rush to put bilingual teachers into classrooms in the '70s we sacrificed academic integrity."

Further, the Chicago experience has been that bilingual teachers who have to give both native language instruction and English instruction may not have the time to dwell on the English.

Further contributing to permanent isolation of the immigrant population are radio and TV stations which broadcast exclusively in a language other than English.

Already, in some court proceedings involving non-English-speaking principals, jurors are being challenged if they can speak only English.

Unless a concerted effort is made to make English our official language, bilingualism is turning out the fire under the melting pot.

We have learned that immigrant students who do not learn English are more likely to drop out of school, have trouble competing for jobs, add to welfare rolls and pass on to the next generation problems in learning and living.

Robert Orben has a way of shucking right down to the cob. He says, "Aliens must learn to speak English or they can only wind up as laborers, dishwashers or economists."

Torturous fun and games in Panama

By Don Graff

Jack Sachs' first surprise was walking into the middle of a beauty contest.

He saw no reason to object. Quite the contrary. "See," he jokingly told a traveling companion, "when I lay something on, I do it first class."

That was early in the morning of Thursday, July 10. The two had arrived in Panama City to discover the Miss Universe Pageant in full swing at their hotel.

Sachs, a New York attorney, and his companion were representing a client in a banking transaction. They had an appointment the following morning with a Panamanian law firm.

They never kept it. The trouble began with a delay over their rooms at the hotel desk. They were finally assigned to different floors.

Then Sachs was handed a letter — left for him at the desk — that he instantly read as big trouble.

The two were told to leave Panama within eight hours. Their lives and those of their families were threatened if they did not.

Sachs took it seriously. He knows Panama well, has been there often and had been married to a Panamanian. He is fluent in Spanish. He believed the anonymous writer's warning: "You are in a country that tortures and kills people."

He booked space on the first available flight out. That wasn't until the next morning, after the letter's deadline. They would not leave the hotel until then.

About 6 that evening, there was a knock on the door and a group of men "flashing badges" pushed into Sachs' room. Luckily, Sachs' companion was on the phone with their client and alerted him that they were being arrested. They were ordered to pack their bags and check out of the hotel, immediately.

A five-day nightmare then began.

In the custody first of Panamanian security police, they were alternately interrogated and locked in cells. Requests to contact the U.S. Embassy and their families were denied.

"As far as I knew," says Sachs, "no body in the world knew where we were."

Ultimately, through the efforts of Sachs' client, word got through. An embassy representative and a Panamanian attorney were allowed to see them. On Monday, July 14, a court ordered their release.

Their captors did not give up so easily, however. Sachs and his companion were turned over to Panamanian immigration authorities and jailed for another night. They were told their freedom had a price — $30,000. Not as a fine, but simply as a favor to the immigration fellows.

They did not pay. Finally, they were freed after signing statements acknowledging that they were being deported.

Sachs, back in New York, says he still doesn't know what it was all about. Neither he nor his client know what, if any, connection it may have had with the business that took him to Panama.

His prolonged interrogation focused on whether he knew certain people, none of whom he did. It reached the point of absurdity when he was accused of arranging a room at the hotel on the floor reserved for Miss Universe participants.

"They said I must be a terrorist who had plans to either kidnap or injure one of the contestants, break up the whole thing."

Sachs is very much aware of the recent reports out of Panama, including allegations that strongman Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega may be involved in big-league drug-trafficking, money-laundering and gun-running. For that reason he heeded the advice of the anonymous letter to get out and did not seek the assistance of Panamanian authorities.

"Lighten up will ya, fella — can'cha see we're havin' a little party?"

Inflation likely to hit hard in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The nation's inflation rate likely will hit a record 100 percent or more this year, prompting fears among businessmen and others that the government has given up its fight to control skyrocketing prices.

Labor leaders already are demanding an emergency increase in the minimum wage to help workers recover some of their lost purchasing power.

In the first eight months of the year, consumer prices surged at an accumulated rate of 59.4 percent, not far off the 63.7 percent posted in all of last year.

Private analysts forecast that the inflation rate will top 100 percent by year's end. If true, it will be the highest since the government began collecting consumer price statistics in 1968.

With the economy in a fresh recession, government officials decided to follow policies designed to give the economy a lift and resume growth next year.

As a result, some analysts say they fear the government has abandoned the inflation battle.

"It's a worry that we have that they are going for growth and if inflation goes up, well, so be it, and that they can't really implement a plan in which we would have growth with gradually lower inflation," said Claudio X. Gonzalez, president of the prominent Business Coordinating Council, which serves as a spokesman for business.

"We are very concerned," he said. Private economist Rogelio Ramirez de la O said there's a "strong possibility" that the inflation rate will be even higher next year.

Jonathan Heath, senior economist at the private Mexican forecasting project of CIEMEX-Wharton in Philadelphia, said, "There's nothing that will bring it down."

"Economic policy is not geared any more toward fighting inflation," he said. "There's nothing we can really expect to help lower inflation right now."

He predicted an inflation rate of about 103 percent this year and nearly 120 percent in 1987.

Consumer prices shot up 98.8 percent in 1982. From April 1982 to April 1983, they skyrocketed 117.2 percent.

By 1984, the government had pared the inflation rate to 59.2 percent, but it bounced up last year.

President Miguel de la Madrid told the nation in his State of the Union address on Sept. 1 that inflation-fighting remained a high priority of his administration.

"We shall stand firm in the fight against inflation," he said. "Its structural roots and its dynamics oblige us to redouble our efforts to conquer it."

His administration, he said, "shall not discard any option (in reducing the inflation rate) that is viable and consistent, as long as it does not present illusions of short-lived progress coupled with permanent setbacks."

The president dismissed suggestions that government policies were to blame for the price kick. "This is incorrect," he said, "the basic cause of the inflation and recession we are now experiencing is the drastic decline in oil earnings."

A senior government official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the administration "will try to do everything possible not to let (the inflation rate) go above 100 percent, but some things are beyond our control."

The economy has been badly battered by the collapse in world oil prices that began at the end of last year.

Mexico, the world's fourth largest crude producer, had in the past counted on oil sales for about 70 percent of its foreign earnings, money used to help stay current on the nearly $100 billion foreign debt.

It gained $13.3 billion in oil sales last year but is forecast to earn only about half that this year.

With the fall in oil earnings, analysts say Mexico has had to boost prices controlled by the public sector and slash subsidies to make up for the lost revenue. Prices for tortillas, milk, gasoline and the subway system have shot up this year.

The peso currency also has depreciated rapidly against the U.S. dollar, making imported goods more costly and adding to higher prices for consumers.

Moreover, interest rates have remained high and labor costs have gone up, all boosting business costs, which are again passed onto consumers.

Workers won increases in the minimum wage of 33.1 percent in January and 25.1 percent in June. The minimum wage in Mexico City is 2,065 pesos a day, or about $2.85.

With the financial crunch, the government has been forced to negotiate a $12 billion rescue package with the international financial community for this year and next year. With the fresh money, officials hope to bolster the economy so that it will grow at an inflation-adjusted annual rate of 3 percent to 4 percent in 1987 and 1988.

Swimsuit gets super results at Miss America Pageant

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Common sense says that swimsuits bare all flaws. Ada Duckett, swimsuit maker to three Miss Americas, knows better.

Mrs. Duckett created the so-called supersuit, which pageant superstition says increases a contestant's chances of winning swimsuit competition.

Nine Miss America Pageant contestants this year purchased Mrs. Duckett's custom-made, $150 Lycra and cotton suits, with white being the overwhelming favorite color.

In the past year, Mrs. Duckett and her assistant, Ann Bogart, made about 200 suits for pageant contestants in 25 states.

Countless other contestants wear suits closely modeled after Mrs. Duckett's and stitched by seamstresses in Mississippi.

Of the 17 women in Wednesday night's preliminary swimsuit competition at the Miss America Pageant, 10 wore suits in the distinctive supersuit style.

"There's not one girl I fit I can call perfect," Mrs. Duckett, a war bride from Italy who now lives in Arlington, Texas, said during an interview here this week.

But by altering a seam, tightening a strap, or raising the suit's plunging back by fractions of an inch, Mrs. Duckett said she can compensate for what months of dieting, hours of intensive workouts, and nature have missed.

The result is a shape in the Miss America mold.

Mrs. Duckett boasts amusedly that it took her seven hours of work, but she was able to make one woman's bust appear two sizes smaller in the suit.

"Sometimes you put it in, sometimes you take it out," said the seamstress, who also has inserted padding for contestants.

The supersuit is simple with a V-neck and a rounded V-shape low back. The original had a bar strap across the back and attached to each of the shoulder straps. A variation without the bar strap is now available, too.

Underneath the bust is a band of material about two inches wide at the side seams, gradually narrowing toward the center.

Mrs. Duckett said she doesn't know who dubbed it the supersuit.

Debra Maffett was the first woman to wear a supersuit while competing in pageants in Texas.

She moved out of the state, and in 1982 was crowned Miss America while representing California.

Miss Maffett, who lived with Mrs. Duckett's family for seven months, wore a suit the seamstress bought off the rack and altered. She did a second one, and for five years those two suits, sizes 8 and 10, were handed around the country to be worn in countless pageants.

Last year, the first new suits were sewn, said Mrs. Duckett. Of the five women who wore them in last year's Miss America Pageant, all made the top 10, a wearer won each of the three swimsuit preliminaries, and one, Susan Akin of Meridian, Miss., became Miss America 1986.

Contestants this year groped to explain why they chose a super-suit style.

"They say it's made out of special material. It pulls your body in," said Miss West Virginia Shannon Renee Barill, 23, of Charleston.

The finals of the Miss America Pageant will be broadcast live Saturday by NBC-TV starting at 10 p.m. EDT.

Larger cars safer, less brittle, insurance study shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — The risk of injury and potential for high repair costs is significantly less in large cars than in small cars, according to an insurance industry examination of accident claims.

The study by the Highway Loss Data Institute, an affiliate of the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, shows small cars and many small or mid-size sport or specialty cars as having injury and repair costs of 30 percent or more above average. But, according to the study released Thursday, large cars, station wagons and passenger vans, and some of the large luxury cars, typically show 40 percent to 50 percent better-than-average injury and collision claim records.

Of the 37 large cars examined, including all models from station wagons to luxury cars, 25 provided substantially better-than-average injury protection and 18 had substantially better-than-average repair costs.

But of 56 small cars and small station wagons, none showed similar substantially better-than-average injury and repair records and 19 showed at least 30 percent poorer results.

The report compared the frequency of insurance claims and average repair costs of 185 vehicles with adjustments made for factors such as driver habits and characteristics.

Among the worst comparative claim records were those for three Mitsubishi models — the Tredia, Cordia and Starion — the Nissan Pulsar and 200 SX, Ford EXP, 2-door Toyota Corolla, Mercury Capri and 2-door Chevrolet Chevette.

These all had injury claim frequencies of 36 percent to 62 percent higher than average and repair costs of 33 percent to 159 percent above average. Generally, however, the large cars had the best claims records. For example, a 4-door Oldsmobile Delta 88 was found to be 41 percent less likely than average to result in occupant injuries.

Explosion rips Paris cafeteria

PARIS (AP) — An explosion ripped through the cafeteria of a department store in the La Defense commercial center west of Paris today, and initial reports said as many as 10 people may have been wounded.

The fire department said the blast in the Casino store looked like a bombing, but that could not be immediately confirmed.

Damage to the store was said to be serious.

If it was a bombing, it would be the second in the Paris area this week. On Monday, a bomb exploded in the post office on the ground floor of Paris city hall, killing one person and injuring 19.

Responsibility for the city hall bombing was claimed by a group calling itself the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners.

The group is seeking the release of three alleged terrorists now in French prisons and has vowed to continue its attacks until their demands are met.

On Sept. 4, a bomb failed to go off in a crowded commuter train in Paris at the peak of rush hour.

The committee also claimed responsibility for that attempt, as well as five other attacks in France earlier this year that killed two people and wounded more than 60.

Supreme Court voids Aquino acquittals

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Supreme Court on Friday voided December's acquittal of 26 people charged in the 1983 assassination of Benigno Aquino and ordered a new trial, the Philippine News Agency reported.

Chief Justice Claudio Teehankee and seven other justices voted to invalidate last year's trial of then armed forces chief Gen. Fabian C. Ver, 24 other military men and one civilian, the agency reported. Copies of the decision were not immediately available. Employees at the court clerk's office said they were not aware that the court had reached a decision although court sources said earlier the tribunal was to release its ruling Friday.

Aquino, a former senator and outspoken foe of Ferdinand E. Marcos, was shot on Aug. 21, 1983, at Manila International Airport.

Shultz says Daniloff must be allowed to leave Soviet Union

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials are revealing little about diplomatic efforts to free Nicholas Daniloff from a Moscow prison, but Secretary of State George Shultz says the administration will not settle for his temporary release to the American ambassador.

The secretary of state spelled out the American position on seeking the release of the U.S. News & World Report Moscow correspondent, whom the Soviets have accused of espionage.

"He is a hostage, he is not an agent," Shultz said. "He is a hostage to the Soviet Union as long as he is there, whether he's in jail or some other place. That doesn't change the fact that he's a hostage." Shultz, continuing his tough talk, also said the United States "will not become reconciled" to the continued detention of Daniloff.

Shultz made his comments to a group from the private Chautauqua Institution. Sponsors of the meeting at the State Department had declared the remarks off the record, but they were reported by Cable News Network, the Mutual Broadcasting System and in today's editions of The Washington Post.

The United States and Soviet Union both have linked Daniloff's imprisonment to the case of Genadiy Zakharov, a Soviet physicist jailed in New York on espionage charges.

The Reagan administration has publicly ruled out a trade for Zakharov, but has approached Moscow with an "understanding" that he would be released to the custody of Ambassador Yuri Dubinin if Daniloff were sent home, U.S. officials said earlier in the week.

It was not clear whether Shultz was ruling out release of Daniloff to U.S. Ambassador Arthur A. Hartman as a satisfactory, if temporary, arrangement to end the superpower stalemate.

Technically, Daniloff would be on U.S. territory if he were placed in Spasso, the American residence in Moscow.

The New York Times, in today's editions, reported that in three days of negotiations, the Soviets have turned down U.S. proposals because they do not treat the two prisoners equally. It also quoted State Department officials as saying the Soviets have said Daniloff will be allowed to return home only as part of an exchange for Zakharov.

Egypt, Israel agree on committee for international Middle East conference

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (AP) — President Hosni Mubarak and Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres today said they agreed to set up a committee to prepare for an international conference on Middle East peace.

The agreement, which was not in the official statement issued at the end of the two-day meeting, appeared to be the major achievement from the first summit between the two countries in five years.

"We have both of us agreed on an international conference and a preparatory committee," Mubarak told reporters. "Still, there are some issues to discuss. ... You can't imagine such a problem to be solved in 24 hours, but we made good progress."

Neither man mentioned details, but Peres said the committee would discuss procedure and composition for a conference.

Egypt and Jordan, which have tried for more than a year to break the impasse in the regional peace process, have favored an international conference to provide a framework for direct negotiations between Israel and the Arabs.

The United States, and Israel until now, has voiced opposition to an international conference because it would include the Soviet Union.

Two hours later, the two leaders entered a meeting room together.

Both Mubarak and Peres said after their three-hour private meeting Thursday that the talks dealt largely with how to bring the Palestinians into the Middle East peace process.

"We have concentrated heavily on the Palestinian issue, which is vital and important for the peace process," Mubarak said. "We will continue our discussion."

Peres told reporters at a late-night briefing both he and Mubarak agreed that "solving the Palestinian issue is essential for any movement on peace."

He told Israeli radio in an interview broadcast today that "the issue of Palestinian representation still constitutes a problem."

Israel considers the PLO a terrorist group and refuses to deal with it, and Peres promised his Cabinet before he left for Egypt he would make no concessions on the question.

Peres said Thursday the Palestinians have a right "to participate in the determination of their own future," underscoring a tenet of the Camp David accords signed in 1978 by Israel, Egypt and the United States.

Another American kidnapped at university in West Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Four gunmen today kidnapped an American accountant at the American University of Beirut, police and the school said. It was the second abduction this week of a U.S. citizen in the city's Moslem west.

A university statement identified the victim as Joseph James Cicippio, 56, the school's acting comptroller. He was kidnapped at the entrance to a building he lived in on campus at 6:45 a.m., the statement said.

The university has been plagued by kidnappings and assassinations since Moslem militias wrested control of west Beirut from the Lebanese army in February 1984.

Sources at the university said the four kidnapers hid behind bushes all night and grabbed Cicippio as he left his apartment to walk to work in a nearby college hall.

Police said the kidnapers bundled Cicippio into a waiting car near the seafont faculty gate and drove away.

The sources, who had originally identified the victim as Joseph Sesipiyoh, said he was a naturalized American of Italian descent.

Frank Herbert Reed, 53, the American director of the Lebanese International School, was kidnapped in west Beirut Tuesday as he headed to play golf.

A Lebanese janitor said he witnessed Cicippio's abduction and was taken at gunpoint to a faculty lodge after being spotted by the kidnapers.

The janitor, who spoke on condition he not be further identified, said he rushed to Cicippio's apartment after the abductors took off to tell Cicippio's 25-year-old Lebanese wife Ilham Ghandour and her mother that he had been kidnapped.

"They screamed and panicked," the janitor said.

Ms. Ghandour works at the U.S. Embassy in Christian east Beirut, embassy spokesmen said.

Cicippio's abduction was reported shortly after a Beirut radio station claimed that Shiite Moslem extremists of the Iranian-backed Hezbollah kidnapped Reed and smuggled him to the ancient city of Baalbek in east Lebanon's Syrian-controlled Bekaa Valley.

The Voice of Lebanon station of President Amin Gemayel's rightist Christian Phalange Party said Hezbollah fighters used a white van to take Reed Wednesday to Baalbek's Sheikh Abdullah barracks.

That barracks on a hilltop overlooking the city of ancient Roman ruins is used as headquarters for an estimated 1,500 Iranian Islamic Revolutionary guards based in the Bekaa. They maintain close cooperation with Hezbollah, or Party of God.

The other Americans missing in Lebanon are Terry A. Anderson, 38, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press; Thomas Sutherland, 55, acting dean of agriculture at the American University, and David Jacobsen, 55, director of the university's hospital.

Islamic Jihad, which espouses the fundamentalist Shiite teachings of Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, has said it killed a fourth American hostage, William Buckley, 58, political officer at the U.S. Embassy, but no body has been found.

Tom Mix festival draws thousands

DU BOIS, Pa. (AP) — Forget Roy Rogers, Rory Calhoun or John Wayne. To those at the seventh annual Tom Mix fan roundup, the raven-haired idol of radio and the silver screen was the most enduring Western star ever to saddle up.

"If you talk about Western stars, the first person you think of is Tom Mix, not Jon Wayne. John Wayne is at the bottom. Tom Mix is at the top," said Hal Verb, 56, of San Francisco.

Organizers expect 10,000 fans will arrive by this weekend.

Baylor honors nation's first woman orthopedist

By JOHN SARE
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS (AP) — Dr. Ruth Jackson scanned X-rays and examined patients on Monday, just as she has on thousands of days since she opened her orthopedic surgery practice in 1932.

To visitors, she pointed out the diplomas that line the walls of an examining room in the Oak Lawn clinic she designed at the end of World War II.

And she remembered — her voice still tinged with anger — the day in 1924 when she started work on her medical degree at Baylor University's College of Medicine.

"There were four women in the entering class, and the dean told us, 'You women, we don't want you here. You'll have to make 10 points higher than the men do to get the same grade they do," she said.

Ms. Jackson met Baylor's challenge, and on Tuesday, the same institution — now the Baylor University Medical Center — named its orthopedic library and conference center for the 83-year-old woman who once failed a class because she demanded the right to treat male patients.

She may have lost the battle, she said, but finally she won the war.

She became the first woman accredited by the American Board of Orthopedic Surgeons. Her pioneering book on neck ailments — The Cervical Syndrome, now in its fourth edition — has brought her international praise and dozens of speaking engagements. And her expertise has earned the respect of three or four generations of some Dallas families.

Surgery is the only professional function Ms. Jackson no longer performs; she gave that up in 1974.

In connection with the library dedication, Baylor officials sponsored an open house in the doctor's honor at the orthopedic surgery floor of Hobbittelle Hospital at Baylor.

But the doctor talked on Monday not about the honor but about her work, smoking one cigarette after another — but not inhaling the smoke into her lungs, she said — and looking intently at X-rays.

"That man is in pain," she said, pointing to bone spurs on the patient's vertebrae.

She complained that joggers do themselves at least as much harm as good and said foot problems are among the ailments she treats most frequently. Neck injuries, she said, have escalated in direct proportion to the hazards of Dallas traffic. She estimated she has treated 18,000 of them.

Her practice is nothing fancy, she said. She cuts her own orthopedic pads for patients' shoes, and she doesn't use any computers or lasers in her examinations.

"All this high tech just drives people up a tree," she said. "When they come here seeking a second opinion, they have been photographed and X-rayed but never touched. The patients just love the fact I will touch them. They trust that."

"He cures most successfully in whom the people have greatest confidence," she said, quoting the Greek physician and writer, Galen.

The quotation suggests that all doctors are men, and that assumption has affected Ms. Jackson's career at least as strongly as Galen's message.

"When I started at the University of Texas in 1920, I decided to take pre-med courses, and my father said, 'No. Absolutely not,' she recalled.

She honored his wishes by studying sociology and economics for a couple of years, but her resolve to be a doctor was strengthened when she traveled to an impoverished part of East Texas as part of a charity project.

"There, she met a man whose family was going hungry while he sat at home, immobilized by a knee injury.

"On my way back to Austin, I told myself, 'Ruth Jackson, anybody can do that charity work. You want to find out what's wrong with that man's knee so he can take care of his family on his own,'" she said.

So, she changed her major, wrote her parents to let them know.

"My mother approved, because she probably would have been a doctor if she's lived in a different time," Ms. Jackson said.

Mississippi firm supplies small segments of living history

EDITOR'S NOTE — Planning a Civil War battle? For $750 a cottage industry in Mississippi will supply a Reb or a Yank with everything he needs to set up camp, from boots to tent pegs. Even a deck of cards. And John Dale Jarnagin says his uniforms are more than just costumes. They are made to last.

By RON HARRIST
Associated Press Writer

CORINTH, Miss. (AP) — Tucked in the rolling hills of North Mississippi where the Rebels and Yankees once fought, the Jarnagin family is equipping armies to re-enact the great battles of another century.

In workshops not far from the Civil War battlefield of Shiloh just across the Tennessee border, the C. & D. Jarnagin Co. produces a variety of military uniforms and civilian clothing patterned after those in use from 1800 to 1876, with major emphasis on the Civil War period.

"The big push has been the 125th anniversary of the Battle of Manassas in Virginia," says Kentucky-born John Dale Jarnagin, founder of the company, as he inspects a pair of military boots still moist with black dye. "Everything else is taking a back seat."

Using both hand tools and modern machines, Jarnagin also produces such items as tents, lanterns, blankets, tinware, and even playing cards that would have been used by soldiers of the period.

The company offers items ranging from a $1.50 hand-forged tent peg to a $240 pre-Civil War wedge tent.

Jarnagin says a cap, coat and pants for a soldier would average about $150, while a full uniform and all equipment needed to set up camp would be about $750.

"That may sound like a lot of money but really this is much cheaper than most other hobbies," he says. "These items will last you 10 years or more if you take care of them."

Jarnagin's uniforms can be found on mannequins in museums and are featured in living history displays and battle re-enactments from New York to California. They are bought by individuals and are used by special military historical units both in this country and abroad.

"We are producing items that are historically correct and that can be used for the purposes they were originally intended," he said. "You can sleep in our tents and eat out of our tinware."

"Our tin cups and half-canteens can be used to dig entrenchments on the battlefield just like they were used during the Civil War. I would like to think someone could put on one of our uniforms, return to the Civil War period and not attract any special attention."

Jarnagin and his wife, Carolyn, closely monitor the production to make sure the fatigue jackets, forage caps, overcoats and other items are as historically accurate as possible.

"We get a lot of help from those who research the uniforms of that period and who are quick to point out a problem," Jarnagin says.

Jarnagin's designs reflect the styles most often found during the war. The materials used are as close as possible to those that were available during the period. Often, he says, his company must special order cotton and wool — the only material used for uniforms of that era.

Jarnagin and his wife began making Civil War uniforms "for fun" while living in Boulder, Colo.

"Carolyn was a 4-H sewing champion," Jarnagin said. "She was taught by her mother, who made the family clothes on the farm in Colorado."

The Jarnagins decided to turn their hobby into a business 10 years ago, selecting the Corinth area for the fledgling company. Not far away across the Tennessee border is the Shiloh battlefield where one of the bloodiest battles of the Civil War was fought.

What began as a two-person operation in a small building behind their house has expanded into a line of specialized shops for leather and metalwork and for the production of uniforms.

Jarnagin says the company has expanded about 10 percent annually, but he declines to discuss sales figures.

"We could grow a lot faster but we have set the pace," he says. "We have built this company on a pay-as-you-go basis."

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

NO LONGER Sewing

Once this home housed a family, was full of laughter, protected its members from the elements. Now it is an old abandoned home...decaying, and falling apart. No longer of any use to anyone.

A person away from God is like this old abandoned home, gradually decaying in spirit and serving no purpose in God's will. Return to a regular church worship with the Lord. Receive God's great love, and live a joyous full life.

"I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Glaeser said the public is invited and encouraged to attend the gospel meeting series.

HIS TOUCH

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Be still, and know that I am God; I will be exalted among the nations, I will be exalted in the earth. (Psalm 46:10)

I had the privilege of teaching in Children's Worship in my church for five years.

The experience was challenging to my creativity, my patience and my perseverance; it was, also, altogether wonderful! Many of the high points of my Christian life have been experienced in the midst of a host of God's little perpetual motion machines.

One Sunday, about 150 children, ages six through 12, had been gathered in the Fellowship Hall for a children's movie which illustrated a Christian theme. Such movies were excellent teaching tools and special treats for the children.

Usually, a movie was followed by applause and the noisy shuffling of children who have sat longer than their natures can endure. However, on this particular Sunday, when the movie ended, the prevailing atmosphere can only be described as a holy hush.

The presence of the Lord was so powerful at that moment that a roomful of energetic, restless children were brought to a still, silent awareness of the reality of God.

Central Baptist to host concert

The Music Ministry of Central Baptist Church, Starkweather and Francis, will present Earnest Alexander in concert at 7 p.m. Sunday in the church auditorium.

From humble beginnings in Alabama, Alexander has progressed to being one of the most sought after young Christian artists. At the age of 30, he has completed extensive tours to Europe, the Soviet Union and the Middle East.

Some of his recent opportunities have included singing with Robert Schuller at the Crystal Cathedral, performing in concert at Carnegie Hall and being guest soloist at the National Southern Baptist Convention in Los Angeles.

In January, Alexander will return as a soloist for the Texas Evangelism Conference at Dallas.

Groups unite in new war against porno

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Religious forces have united in a war against pornography, calling it a plague corrupting the nation's moral health, and leading the campaign is an amiable Presbyterian minister.

"We're facing a terrible situation, far worse than most people realize," says Rev. Jerry Kirk of Cincinnati, president of the National Coalition Against Pornography. "It's not just a religious issue or moral issue but a public safety issue. ... We have to do something."

To that end, Protestant, Roman Catholic, Eastern Orthodox, Mormon and Jewish leaders have joined in unusual solidarity to mobilize community resistance to the vast pornographic industry.

At a meeting in New York last week, they issued a joint statement, presented by Cardinal Joseph Bernardin of Chicago, denouncing pornography's dehumanizing "assault on human dignity" and adding:

"We are in unanimous agreement that hard-core and child pornography, which is not protected by the Constitution, is an evil which must be eliminated."

The coalition includes leaders of about 70 religious groups, totaling more than 100 million Americans.

Armed with the newly released report of the U.S. Attorney General's Commission on Pornography, the coalition pledged cooperative efforts to curb the tide, focusing on the worst elements of it, as did the commission.

Both disavowed censorship, meaning they aren't acting against material protected by the First Amendment, but only against obscene movies, photographs, magazines.

Kirk said the target — hard-core pornography involving children and that promoting the rape and degradation of women — has mushroomed since the 1970s, with many studies showing it deforms attitudes and actions.

The Meese commission's 1,960-page report cites numerous such studies, concluding that "substantial exposure to sexually violent materials ... bears a causal relationship to anti-social acts of sexual violence."

It's axiomatic that "what people think influences what they do," Kirk said.

Kirk, 55, largely on leave from his pastorate at Cincinnati's College Hill Presbyterian Church to head the interdenominational effort, said it had developed only as pornography reached alarming proportions.

Kirk said pornography now is estimated to be an annual $8 billion industry.

Unitarians get new minister

The Unitarian-Universalist Church of Amarillo announces the coming of a new minister beginning Sunday.

Rev. Carol Fincher will lead the morning services at 11 a.m. in the church at 4901 Cornell in Amarillo.

Rev. Fincher, a native of Oklahoma, is a graduate of Starr King Seminary. She has recently served in churches in Dallas and in North Carolina.

Church representatives said friends and visitors are welcome to come and share the new preacher's message. Children's classes will be provided during the service.

Religion roundup

RIDGECREST, N. C. (AP) — An "Awareness Document on Field Dangers" to American missionaries suggests precautions to take as safeguards against terrorism.

The document, to be sent by the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board to its more than 3,000 missionaries around the world, advises them, among other things, to be alert to local situations and potential danger, maintain simple lifestyles, vary daily schedules and travel patterns, and avoid provocative political statements.

Also, missionaries are advised to be such dedicated, contributing members of their communities that this would discourage attack from any terrorist seeking popular support. The document reaffirms the board's policy that it would not pay ransom in a hostage situation because doing so would expose other missionaries to the threat of such kidnappings.

Religion roundup

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — A 4,000-member order of nuns, the Sisters of Mercy of the Union, has reaffirmed its commitment to political ministry even though it has resulted in three members being forced by the Vatican to leave the order.

Its policy-making general chapter declared that political ministry is an appropriate expression of the order's mission.

The three who had to terminate their membership in order to keep their jobs are Ariene Violet, Rhode Island attorney general; Elizabeth Morancy, a four-term member of Rhode Island's legislature; and Agnes Mansour, director of Michigan's Department of Social Services.

ANNECY, France (AP) — The executive committee of the Young Women's Christian Association has chosen Elaine Hesse Greif, 41, as the new general secretary of the global, ecumenical, women's organization.

Born in the United States, she is a YWCA volunteer and has been principal since 1979 of St. Hilda's Collegiate School in Dunedin, New Zealand. She takes over her new post next January in Geneva, Switzerland.

Your material and organizational skills will be extremely pronounced in the year ahead. It's likely that you'll direct some type of operation, either for fun or profit.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're still in a strong up-cycle where your popularity is concerned, and you have the ability to win new friends of either gender. Keep on being a "good guy." Your finances and resources in the year ahead are predicted in your Virgo Astro-Graph. Get yours by mailing $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, PO Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Things have a way of working out to your ultimate advantage today, even in situations controlled by others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If your instincts urge you to get in touch with a special party today, don't put it off. Something fortunate is trying to get through to you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're still on a roll financially, so if you didn't get the type of returns you hoped for yesterday, try again today. Profit is in the picture.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Usually it's rather unwise to mix business with pleasure, but today could be an exception. When socializing with pals, it's OK to talk shop.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Information that could benefit you financially may come your way today through the least-expected sources. Listen carefully to what everyone has to say.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Things should work out well for you today in arrangements where your friends are directly involved. People who like you want to provide you with opportunities.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Place your most ambitious objectives at the top of your list of things to do today. Get an early start and don't be afraid to aim high.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Activities that present some form of fun challenge will be the ones you'll find the most enjoyable today. Don't take yourself or the events seriously.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If there is something you want to change in order to benefit yourself or your family, today is a better day to do it than tomorrow.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This is the right day to implement a carefully thought-out arrangement or contract. If it's fair to all concerned, it will stand the test of time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll be amply compensated today for work that you personally perform, even though there will be help of sorts in the background.

Father hands down Amish culture to son

ARTHUR, Ill. (AP) — Howard Schrock has spent most of his 21 years following in his father's footsteps.

Now they walk side by side. Howard and his 44-year-old father, David, operate a 120-acre farm near this east-central Illinois town.

The Schrock family is Old Order Amish. Following Amish custom, they farm with teams of horses and do without electricity, cars and telephones. They read in the glow of gaslight before going to bed at 9 p.m.

Up at 5 a.m., father and son dress alike in blue cotton, button-up shirts, jackets and trousers sewn by Lizzie Ann, Schrock's wife and mother of Howard and two daughters.

Howard says he has tagged behind his father "ever since I can remember."

"I remember the first time I handled a team in the field," he said, chuckling. "I plowed up a row of corn. I was so disgusted, I wanted to quit. But Dad said,

'You can do it.' I stayed with it."

Howard was about 12 then. Now, hands thickened with callouses, father and son work together from dawn to dusk without the help of hired hands.

They use teams of huge Belgian draft horses with strong, feathered legs to pull rotary hoes, cultivators, manure spreaders and plows.

Like most Amish children, Howard left school after eighth grade. Now he's settled into the life of a farmer. Rebelling crossed his mind, but only for a few fleeting moments.

"I thought a few times about going to town with guys my age, but I didn't. I could have gone, but I knew my dad wouldn't like it. I had too much respect for him, so I didn't go."

The Schrocks' life is more than sweat on the brow and exile from newfangled ways. They sometimes sneak off to the Kaskaskia River three miles away to fish for bluegill.

They also go to farm-closing auctions where, heads bobbing beneath straw hats, they ponder merits and demerits of equipment before bidding.

Howard won't have to buy a buggy. His parents gave him a new, $3,000 black covered buggy as a coming-of-age gift when he turned 21.

Howard polishes his buggy to a high sheen, and pampers it by riding his 10-speed bike to save wear and tear.

Someday he'll use the glistening black chariot for courting, but not yet. "I don't have a girlfriend," he said.

His father wears a short black beard showing that he's a married man. Howard, by custom, will be clean-shaven until he marries.

The land will one day be a legacy from father to son.

"Dad has taught me that if you make a mistake, 'fess up immediately," Howard said. "People take it better then, especially Dad. And do your best, but be content with what you have."

AT THE CAR WASH — Pampa High School choir members have their rags and pails ready for their free car wash, Saturday, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the Coronado Center parking lot. Freewill donations will be

Dear Abby

Woman becomes a wife in exile when stepdaughter comes home

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My world is about to fall apart. I'm 68 and "George" is 70. We both lost our mates, and found love again with each other. It was like a dream. Then this came to light: George has a 38-year-old, twice-divorced daughter who is self-supporting but has moved back "home" with a girlfriend to look after her father and run his house. "Stella" is spoiled rotten and bosses her father around as though he were a child. He's a kind, gentle man who had been bossed by his deceased wife for 43 years, and now this daughter is taking up where her mother left off.

George will not stand up for himself, hoping the situation will solve itself. He doesn't want Stella to know that he bought me a new car and a lovely piece of jewelry as a wedding gift. He told her I already had them. I don't like all this deceit.

We have been married for seven months, and we are not even living together because his daughter is there and he says it will be too crowded with me there, too. Abby, I am his wife!

I didn't know all this was going to happen. George says neither did he, but Stella is his daughter, and he can't say no to her. So where does that leave me?

HUMILIATED

DEAR HUMILIATED: That leaves you outside looking in, which is where you will remain unless George sends Stella packing and moves you into his home where you belong.

Unfortunately, this is hardly a realistic expectation from what you've told me. Face it, you married a kind and gentle man — but a weak one — who can't stand up to his daughter. Don't waste any more time waiting for the problem to solve itself. Give George a deadline. You're not his wife. You're his lady-in-waiting.

DEAR ABBY: Recently my mother was sitting in my kitchen when my telephone rang. She listened casually while I carried on a brief conversation with a friend. When I hung up, she said, "Do you want me to help you to be a more refined lady?" So I said, "Sure." Then she said, "You say OK too much. Your father would never allow his secretary to use OK. It's not ladylike."

I was dumbfounded and think my mother was wrong to criticize me. I am 45 and Mother is 73. What is your verdict, please?

OKEYDOKE

DEAR OKEYDOKE: If you need a verdict, I would pronounce your mother guilty of perpetuating a 45-year-old habit — correcting you for your own good. But since it was done with your consent, you should waive the right to complain.

...

DEAR ABBY: My problem may seem rather odd, and you'll probably think I'm weird, but here goes: I am going to be married soon and I have already designed my wedding gown and plan to make it myself. It's going to be black lace and taffeta. I've told only a few people and have already been ridiculed, asked if I was "crazy," and I was even accused of being a Satan worshipper. I am not. I believe in God, I just happen to like black.

I know from history that white was not always the traditional color for brides. In our culture black is worn by mourners, but I am not superstitious. In other cultures, white is worn for mourning, so why not black for weddings?

I have had only one positive reaction from a friend who heard I was going to be married in black. She said, "It figures. You always were different."

I would appreciate your opinion.

DIFFERENT IN INDIANA

DEAR DIFFERENT: What does your fiance think? His is the only opinion you need. If he has no objection, go with the black and good luck.

...

Traffic tieups irk motorists

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — "A traffic jam is like a haunted house — it changes a normal citizen into a monster," says Raymond W. Novaco, associate professor at the University of California at Irvine.

Novaco, who is an authority on transportation and the behavior of drivers and who had just had his first ride through Tucson, talked about "Traffic Congestion and Commuter Stress" here during a recent carpooling meeting.

And he told his audience that traffic congestion has been a worldwide problem since the Romans first used horse-drawn carts. Rome and Mexico City, he added, are the most dangerous cities for vehicle traffic.

"In Rome, a red light is merely a suggestion," Novaco quipped.

Gena on Genealogy: indexes make good sources

By GENA WALLS

The Texas State Library, Box 12927, Austin, 78711, does not have birth and death certificates. However, it has the collection of indexes to these records covering 1903 to 1973 and "probate" or delayed birth indexes from 1880 through 1940.

Both sets of indexes are excellent sources for finding family members. Indexes are arranged alphabetically by the last name. Remember to search all variable spellings and include name, county of birth or death, date of birth or death, and the certificate number.

With the information from the indexes, a copy of the birth or death certificate can be obtained by writing to the Bureau of Vital Statistics, 1100 W. 49th St., Austin, 78756. A fee of $5 is charged for each certificate. Do not send cash. To avoid a delay, a postal money order is better than a personal check for payment.

Many birth and deaths that occurred between 1903 and 1921 have been located in the county records and not in state files. The law went into effect in 1903 but

Couple builds career on advertising finds

Ralph and Terry Kovel have built a career on being there first when it comes to the field of antiques and collectibles. But when Ralph bought their first advertising collectible — a Grape Nuts sign — they almost parted ways.

"We had just bought a new house and the last thing we needed was a large tin sign," said Terry.

But, as has so often been the case with this collecting couple from Shaker Heights, Ohio, it all came out for the best. The sign is a bonafide advertising art collectible; its identical mate sold for $1,400 recently, and they have just published their 16th book,

"Kovels' Advertising Collectibles Price List," (Crown).

Nineteenth- and early-20th-century advertising signs, posters, packages and other items have become one of the hottest collectibles, prized for the nostalgic charm they impart to many decors. It's a development that has escalated in the last 10 years, says Terry. She recalled that "they thought we were crazy when we started buying this stuff in the '50s. In fact, one dealer had her young daughter collect items in a basket for us." When the couple bought, the mother and daughter were thrilled "because to them it was trash."

In the '50s and beyond, there were no advertising collectible shows, few dealers and virtually no competition from other collectors.

"But that soon ended. Nowadays there are enormous shows all over the country, one in Washington that attracts 800 to 900 dealers," she added. Though prices have escalated, especially for older examples of advertising, there is always something new to collect that is free for the taking, she pointed out.

Terry, for example, is amassing fruit stickers, those tiny trademarks that are often found stuck onto fresh fruit.

"I used to put them up on the wall in the kitchen, but now I'm making a serious notebook; once I started looking, I was surprised at how many I found," she said.

Advertising has taken many forms over the years and nowadays virtually all of them are collectible. Among some that turn up regularly at antique shops and auctions are signs, posters and packaging such as canisters, baskets and boxes. Other items include sports cards, promotional giveaways such as bookmarks, matchbooks, calendars, stuffed dolls, tin advertising trays, signs, pot scrapers, puzzles, recipe books, ashtrays

IT'S THE LONGEST RUNNING series in Pampa High football history, 62 games. It used to be the centerpiece of a mid-September Saturday afternoon, a happening of such import that stores closed and merchants dismissed employees to attend.

Now it has been relegated to an early season, non-conference game. The Pampa Harvesters vs. the Amarillo Sandies! Football fan ties travelled hundreds of miles to see the encounter. Tonight, for most of the Panhandle it will be just another school-boy grid game fighting for audience, along with about 25 others, at the War, Miami Vice, and local shopping centers.

But for the athletes garbed in the Green and Gold and the Gold and Black at Dick Bivins Stadium, it is all important. The Sandies want to build a winning streak over the Harvesters that would match the two longest the Amarillo school has held, nine in a row, built in the 1920s and repeated in the 1930s. Coach Larry Dippel's squad must also prove more worthy of the pre-season acclaim than the 6-6 opening game tie with a weaker-than-usual Clovis Wildcat team last Friday night, a game the 'Cats should have won but for a mis-handled extra-point snap.

For Pampa it is the season opener, the first time in the history of the series that has been true. For Dippel, however, it will mark the fifth time he has faced Pampa for the Harvies' lid-lifter, having done it four times as head coach at Hereford. He split those four, and added a bi-district victory, which coupled with an 8-1 record at AHS, gives him an 11-3 mark against Pampa. Harvesters coach John Kendall is seeking his first win in the series in four previous starts.

It's a tough way to go for Pampa, since the re-alignment of the UIL necessitates the start of district competition next week. That just mentioned Hereford team, dropping back from 5A, comes to Pampa, after opening with a most impressive 28-0 trouncing of a veteran Andrews squad. That game will mark renewal of a series which has been in hiatus since 1983.

Last year, Pampa took the early lead against Amarillo High, trailed at halftime 13-6, but wound up a 33-18 loser. Perhaps the best offensive showing of the year, 300 total yards, paired with a strong defensive first half, were the lone bright spots in the PHS team effort. Amarillo went on to win the district 3-5A title with a 9-1 season record before succumbing to Midland Lee in bi-district, 13-7. Off that team, 22 lettermen, but only four starters return. The inexperience is one of the factors that led to the opening game tie. AHS is a heavy favorite.

HAFF. The game, along with all varsity contests, will be broadcast on KGSZ (1340 AM) with former Harvester athlete Earl Davis calling the action....A Coach's Corner show with head coach John Kendall can be heard Friday mornings from 8:35-9....The Harvester Booster Club will meet in the Athletic Building each Monday night at 7:30, with plans to show film of the Varsity, Junior Varsity, and Ninth Grade games each week....Efforts are being made to obtain eligibility for two foreign exchange students, one from West Germany and one from Sweden, after both expressed a desire to try American football, which is becoming very popular in Europe...."The kids came back to school in the best shape and with the best attitude since I've been here," said Coach Kendall. "I guess the poor economy kept them from getting summer jobs, so they spent the time working out...." Ex-Harvesters playing in college include David McGrath at UT-Austin, Brent Croyer at Panhandle State, Gary Wayne Jernigan and Michael Parker at Dodge City (Kansas) Junior College....All opponents this year are on home-and-home contracts, meaning six home games next season with the road foes of this year....Is Sandie quarterback Dod Clapp the son of former Amarillo HS football coach Kenney Clapp, who once qb'd the Borger Bulldogs and WTSU Buffaloes? He's also a key cog in the AHS basketball defending state champions....Could the City of Pampa please repair the deep hole on Worrell Street immediately north of the football stadium, left over from a Water Department job several months ago? Or is it there as a speed-breaker for kids escaping at noon and day's end?...Volleyball hosts Tascosa tonight, while the JV squad conducts a tournament tomorrow.... Gene Mayfield may have the district darkhorse, Levelland rolling to 500 yards total offense in the 42-18 win over Lamesa last week. Frenship hiked 423 total yards in blasting Brownfield, 49-6, behind senior Tuan Lee, quarterbacking for the first time since his freshman year. And No. 1 ranked Estacado held Plainview to 93 total yards.

Patriots shoot down Jets, 20-6

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — It might not look that way on the scoreboard, but everyone at Giants Stadium knew the New York Jets had been manhandled by the New England Patriots.

The final score Thursday night was 20-6. It could have been 40-6 for all that it mattered. The AFC champion Patriots dominated the Jets, who also lost star running back Freeman McNeil for four to six weeks with a dislocated right elbow.

"We can do that to anybody," claimed linebacker Don Blackmon. "We never take a thing for granted out there. We haven't made a lot of changes, we play a basic defense and they know we're coming at them every play."

The Patriots, who got a pair of touchdown catches from Tony Collins, have allowed only three field goals in two games. They are 2-0 and will lead the AFC East regardless of Sunday's results.

"We're more confident this year," Blackmon said after the Patriots held the Jets to 33 and 47-yard field goals by Pat Leahy and didn't allow New York close to the end zone in the second half. "We believe in each other, that we can do anything we put our minds to."

The Patriots' offense put the Jets in ideal position on the third play from scrimmage when quarterback Tony Eason fumbled when hit by nose tackle Joe Klecko. Linebacker Lance Mehl dived on the ball at the New England 10.

But it took the Patriots' defense just one play to get the ball back, as nose tackle Toby Williams stripped the ball from fullback Tony Paige and end Brent Williams grabbed it.

"(Safety) Fred Marion came out on the field and said we can't let them score, we got to get a turnover," Blackmon said. "First play, we got an arm in there and the ball popped loose. I think that set the tone."

The Patriots nearly scored on an option pass by Craig James to Irving Fryar later in the period, but Fryar dropped the ball. Still, New England continued to drive and Collins sneaked into the left flat to haul in a 6-yard pass from Eason.

"Tony just faked a handoff to Craig and nobody went with me," Collins said.

Jets quarterback Ken O'Brien, who hit on 16 of 30 passes for 180 yards, threw the first of two interceptions — he also was sacked four times — on the next series. Cornerback Ronnie Lippett tipped, then caught a pass intended for Al Toon at the New England 15.

Tony Franklin missed a 49-yard field goal try, then the Jets moved 53 yards in 13 plays for Leahy's 33-yard field goal. On that drive, in which New York had the ball for 7:28 after holding it for only 4:33 in the first quarter, McNeil suffered his injury. He fell on his right arm when tackled following a 7-yard gain.

"Freeman's a big part of our offense," Johnny Hector, his replacement, said. "But I don't think anyone said, 'Let's give up because Freeman is out.'"

The Jets, now 1-1, managed another decent drive, covering 26 yards in six plays following a 14-yard punt return by Kurt Sohn. Leahy extended his team record to 14 consecutive field goals with a 47-yarder, making it 7-6 at halftime.

But the Jets had nothing in the second half. And the Patriots had a trick play in their repertoire that clinched it.

With a fourth-and-1 on the New York 10, New England called time out to discuss what to call. The play, called by backup QB Steve Grogan, was "438 pass," another option throw by James. He rolled right with a handoff from Eason, the linebackers and secondary bit at the run, and James lofted a pass to a wide-open Collins at the goal line.

"They're not trick plays," James said. "It's part of the offense. We try to keep the defense guessing."

That play clinched the win because the Jets were having no success against New England's staunch defense.

Notre Dame vs. Michigan

Holtz steps into Irish pressure cooker

By The Associated Press

Itz on Saturday becomes the latest head football coach to step into the pressure cooker known as Notre Dame.

As the 25th coach in the history of the Fighting Irish, Holtz begins his reign at home against third-ranked Michigan.

"There are probably no teams playing this year with greater football traditions than Michigan and Notre Dame," said Bo Schembechler, opening his 18th season at Michigan and 24th as a head coach. "I wouldn't want to play them later in the year, because it's too tough a game and could detract from the Big 10 season."

Two games pitting Top Twenty teams against each other are also on tap for Saturday — No. 10 Ohio State at No. 17 Washington and No. 7 Texas A&M against No. 14 Louisiana State. But the biggest share of the attention will be in South Bend, Ind., where the Wolverines tackle the Fighting Irish on national television.

"Anytime you play Notre Dame in South Bend in the opening game of the season, it wouldn't make any difference who's coaching. There will be tremendous enthusiasm," Schembechler said, speaking of Holtz. "We can offset that with our own enthusiasm."

Former Notre Dame Coach Dan Devine says of Saturday's confrontation:

"The circumstances of this game — Lou's first game and playing Michigan — could be unequal to anything."

Michigan is a 6-point favorite over Notre Dame and has a 12-5 advantage in the series.

"There are lots of pluses and minuses to opening with a team like Michigan," Holtz said. "If we want to be the best we've got to beat the best, and Michigan may be the best team in the country."

Michigan, 10-1-1 last year — the Wolverines' best record since 1974 — finished second in the Associated Press rankings to national champion Oklahoma.

In other games involving Top Twenty teams, No. 2 plays host to Texas Tech, No. 4 Alabama will take on Southern Mississippi at Birmingham, Mississippi State is at No. 8 Tennessee, New Mexico is at No. 11 Brigham Young, Louisiana Tech is at No. 12 Baylor, Mississippi takes on No. 18 Arkansas at Little Rock, Duke is at No. 19 Georgia and No. 20 Michigan State travels to Arizona State.

Ohio State is coming off a 16-10 loss to Alabama in its season opener in the Kickoff Classic. But the Buckeyes are a slight favorite over Washington in the Huskies' first game of the season.

"I hope we're a better football team than we were two weeks ago," said Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce.

Shockers rout Borger in junior varsity game

Sophomore quarterback Jason Garren scored two touchdowns and passed for another as the Pampa Shockers routed Borger, 29-6, in a junior varsity football game at Harvester Stadium Thursday night.

The Shockers started fast, and were leading 21-0 when the first quarter ended. Garren scampered 35 yards for the Shockers' first score and then passed to Jason Cameron for a 20-yard TD after Cameron had got the ball back with an interception on Borger's first possession.

Brandon McDonald plunged over from two yards out with 0:43 left in the quarter to increase Pampa's lead to 21-0.

Pampa was held scoreless in the second quarter and Borger scored its only touchdown in the third quarter, but missed on the conversion to cut the lead to 29-6.

Pampa's last score and the final TD of the game came on another keeper play by Garren, who scored from 40 yards away with 3:32 left in the third quarter.

McDonald kicked an extra point for the Shockers. Garren passed to John Collingsworth twice for conversion points. Garren also completed two passes for 35 yards. Tailback David Fields also did an outstanding job of running and broke several tackles for big gains.

Pampa's aggressive defense didn't permit Borger many scoring opportunities. Garren, along with Jeffrey Osborne and Chris Ickles, recovered fumbles for the Shockers.

Chris Didway, Chris Hazle and Terrell Welch were among the outstanding tacklers for the Shockers defense.

The Shockers, 1-1 for the season, will host Palo Duro JVs next Saturday night.

In ninth-grade action last night, Pampa opened the season with a 24-12 win over Perryton. Pampa's ninth-grade team will play Dumas next Thursday at Dumas. Their next home game is Oct. 2 against Borger.

The rest of the Shockers' schedule is as follows:

Canyon, Sept. 25, home; Amarillo High, Oct. 2, away; Caprock, Oct. 9, home; Alamo Catholic, Oct. 17, home; Canyon, Oct. 23, away; Dumas, Nov. 1 home; Nov. 13, Borger, away.

Wheeler, Shamrock tangle for 'county' championship

By DAN MURRAY
Sports Writer

WHEELER — The Wheeler County Championship is on the line when Class 1A's top-ranked Wheeler Mustangs and the Shamrock Irish clash at 8 p.m. here tonight.

If things go like they usually do the championship will stay in Wheeler, but Shamrock's coming off a 32-0 win over McLean and has plenty of incentive. The Irish are more than a little jealous of all the ink and regard head coach Preston Smith's Mustangs get. "They feel like Wheeler's got a lot of notoriety, and they kinda resent it," Smith said. "Not that they don't want us to have it, but they want those things for their town."

"They've got their motors running. They sure will be when they come over here."

Shamrock's confidence is high after its 32-point shutout of McLean, while Wheeler is 1-0 by virtue of a 2-0 forfeit by Highland Park. The Mustangs miss having that game under their belts, plus their scrimmage with Clarendon was called early when the Broncos' quarterback went down with a broken collarbone. Smith's ready for his highly-regarded club to play some football.

"We feel like we're not at the point we were at this time last year," he said. "We want to get through this first game and get those things behind you that happen to you in the first game. Penalties, mistakes, handling the ball and things like that... I want to get that behind us."

Against McLean, Shamrock rolled up 298 yards rushing with Eddie Garza scoring two touchdowns, quarterback Chuck Daugherty two and running back Kenneth Marran one.

"Shamrock looked pretty good," Smith said. "They've got some quick little backs and if you don't tackle 'em you get in trouble in a hurry. You've gotta tackle them or they'll go score."

"Their quarterback (Daugherty) is excellent. He's a competitor and he runs their football team. He's got a lot of things you look for in a quarterback."

Daugherty scored on runs of 34 and 22 yards, while Garza's offensive touchdown was from 49 yards out. Every Irish score came from beyond 20 yards.

Shamrock's inexperienced in the lines, and the Irish will probably have defensive fits stopping Wheeler's vaunted running attack, led by all-state potential Dicky Salyer.

The 5-10, 195-pound Salyer lives in the all-district bracket, and was the Class A Coverboy in Dave Campbell's Texas Football magazine. He already has 3,110 career yards, and with his 4.6 40 speed and barring injury, he could threaten 5,000 this season. He's something, and he's not alone.

All-district Cody Wiggins is back there, along with Grayson Benson. Augie Hennard will take over the quarterbacking reins, while Richard and Bubba Smith, and Stephen Meadows, who's nursing a sore knee, anchor the line.

Smith's concerned about not having Toby Collins in the middle of his Black Death defense any more, but Richard will be more than adequate in his place and the rest of the starters are just as mean.

Shamrock'll need a once-in-a-lifetime performance to beat these guys. The Harris poll says Wheeler by 40. Smith says just hurry up and get it on.

"We don't have the backups to really push our starters in practice," he said. I want our first units to be challenged a little bit more.

"Not having a game last week, we weren't at the emotional level I wanted them to be at. This week we've had two real, real good workouts. This week they seem to have really picked up. They're emotional and real attentive and getting ready to play."

"We need to play a football game."

Injury-plagued Canadian plays at Fritch tonight

By DAN MURRAY
Sports Writer

CANADIAN — Good health is gradually easing back into the Canadian Wildcats' roster, just in time for an 8 p.m. battle tonight in Fritch with an Eagles' team certain to be wild-eyed.

Junior running back Jeff Kirkland is 100 percent healthy again, and senior tackle Shawn Spoon's back from an injury that forced him to miss the Wildcats' 27-6 season opening win over White Deer.

"Spoon's back this week and Kirkland's full speed," head coach Paul Wilson said. "I'm tickled with that."

Still out are tight end Luke Thrasher, who returned to practice but then suffered severe stomach pains that forced him into the hospital, and of course David Carter and Dan Dockray, whose seasons may be over. Still, the 'Cats are getting healthier.

"Overall we'll be healthier than we were last weekend," Wilson said.

Which could be important against Sanford-Fritch, which moved from Class 2A to 3A this year. The Eagles were beaten 13-0 last week by arch-rival Stinnett, which Canadian beat in a scrimmage, and Wilson says they'll be wide-eyed and angry against the 'Cats.

"This game is a pivotal point for them, and I'm sure they know it too," Wilson said. "With the folks they have to play, this game will determine how their season's going to go."

"I think they're going to throw all the marbles at us Friday night because I think it's the key to their season. We feel like we'll have our hands full."

The Eagles were 9-2-1 bi-district champions in 2A last year, but got hit by graduation and still haven't found the missing pieces. Stinnett burned S-F for 347 yards on offense, 205 rushing and 142 passing, while limiting the Eagles to 150 total yards.

"Fritch is still hunting their strong suits," Wilson said, "but they're improving every game."

The Eagles have 13 returning lettermen, including 196-pound all-district tackle Rodney Valle. Second-team all-district running back Kenny Burks, who gained 973 yards last year, leads the S-F option attack, which will be run by quarterback Damon Andrews. Guard Troy Rollins (5-10, 186) is also back on offense.

"We've got to be able to shut off Fritch's option game down," Wilson said. "I think their inside-outside running will give us fits, and I really think they'll try to throw the football on us too."

Defensively, S-F returns Rolins, tackle Jimmy Thompson and cornerback Lonnie Taylor, but the Eagles had better be a lot less porous than against Stinnett if they're going to stop Shawn Wright and company.

Wright zapped White Deer for 139 yards and three touchdowns and the Wildcats finished with 351 total yards, 128 of them passing. Wright's certain to handle the ball frequently against the Eagles.

With Spoon back and Lance Cates and Mike Wagner earning starting spots, Canadian's defensive line should be more solid, though White Deer gained but 106 yards against the Wildcats.

Wilson, who's preparing his team for a rugged district slate, says the 'Cats are making progress.

"We've got to get settled before district because I think that our district's going to be tougher than we expected," he said.

"We feel like our emotion's a little bit better than it was last year and we have a little more dedication within the team as far as mental toughness. They still don't know what 100 percent dedication is, but some of them are coming on."

Wilson says that mental toughness may be necessary against a rabid Sanford-Fritch squad.

"Any time you've been a little bit successful," he said, "they tend to get after your butt."

Red Sox lose to Orioles but still widen lead in AL East

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Even when the Boston Red Sox lose, they win.

Boston's 11-game winning streak ended Thursday night with an 8-6 loss in Baltimore, but the Red Sox still increased their lead in the American League East, because runnerup Toronto dropped a doubleheader to New York. Boston's margin over the Blue Jays grew to nine games.

"We weren't going to get hurt even if Toronto split," said Boston Manager John McNamara. "But with New York winning both, that's a bonus for us."

The third-place Yankees, with their 3-1 and 7-5 victories, moved within 10 games of Boston. The Red Sox begin a three-game series in New York tonight.

"The three games this weekend against Boston mean a lot more now," said Yankees Manager Lou Piniella, a member of the New York team in 1978 that overtook the Red Sox in the final month.

In other AL games, Minnesota beat Texas 8-2, Detroit routed Milwaukee 8-0, Oakland defeated Chicago 2-1 and Kansas City got by Seattle 2-1 in 10 innings.

The California at Cleveland game was rained out. The Angels lead the AL West by nine games over Texas.

In Baltimore, the Orioles scored twice in the seventh for a 6-6 tie and then won it in the eighth.

A double by Mike Young, a walk to John Stefero and an error by Steve Crawford, 0-1, on Floyd Rayford's sacrifice bunt loaded the bases in the eighth. Pinch-hitter Lee Lacy's single off Joe Sambito drove in the tiebreaking run and Juan Beniquez hit a sac-rific fly against Bob Stanley. Don Aase, 6-7, pitched two innings for the victory.

Monaghan leads Safeco Classic

KENT, Wash. (AP) — It took Kris Monaghan four tries to get onto the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, but now that she's made it, the 26-year-old is on her way to establishing herself as a force to be reckoned with.

She birdied her first hole and three of her first four, then eagled her fifth en route to a 5-under-par 67 to take the first-round lead in the $200,000 Safeco Classic Thursday.

Her first-round showing on the 6,222-yard Meridian Valley Country Club course was her best as a professional, giving her a one-stroke lead over early finishers Hollis Stacy, Juli Inkster and Amy Benz.

"I had been pressing after getting a couple of bogeys and shooting 75s and 76s," said Monaghan, who has missed the cut in seven of her first eight tournaments this year, six of them in a row.

Lauren Howe, Jan Stephenson, tour rookie Deb Richard and Betsy King were tied at 69. Mary Beth Zimmerman, Janet Anderson, Bonnie Lauer, rookie Sis Seaman and M.J. Smith tied at 70.

Sauter resigns as CBS shakes up the embattled news division

NEW YORK (AP) — Ousted CBS News President Van Gordon Sauter was caught between a Black Rock and a hard place, between the bottom line and the legacy of Edward R. Murrow. It's a conflict that is likely to shadow the next CBS News boss as well.

Sauter, two-time president of CBS News, resigned under pressure Thursday, a victim of the continuing tug-of-war between the profits required by CBS' New York corporate headquarters, nicknamed Black Rock for its black marble exterior, and the journalistic traditions embodied by Murrow.

The departure followed by one day the resignation of a Sauter ally, CBS chairman and chief executive officer Thomas H. Wymann, who was replaced by CBS founder William S. Paley and Laurence A. Tisch, a major CBS stockholder.

Paley, 84, will be chairman; Tisch, 63, will be chief executive officer — both temporary positions while a search committee seeks successors.

In his tumultuous 10-month second term, Sauter presided over the loss this summer of 70 news jobs and the demise of the "CBS Morning News," which is supposed to lose three quarters of its two-hour time slot to an entertainment show in January.

Sauter's critics, including CBS commentators Bill Moyers and Andy Rooney, say Sauter, who was also a corporate vice president, didn't fight hard enough against the corporate auditors and permitted entertainment values to creep into the house that Murrow built.

"Tax policy had to compete with stories about three-legged sheep, and the three-legged sheep won," Moyers said in a published interview, adding that he would leave the network when his contract expires in November. One source said Moyers' gripe was with Sauter and he might rethink his position. Moyers did not return phone calls.

The mood Thursday at CBS News was upbeat, even before Sauter's resignation, because of Tisch and the return of Paley, who many there believe will insulate CBS News.

Tisch, however, had supported the cost-cutting that so agonized the news division and even thought it should have come faster.

"I think the news division needs independence from the rest of the network," Rooney said. "I think Tisch would see fit to put somebody in to protect the news division from people like Mr. Tisch."

"I think we will return to traditional values, particularly in the news department," said Walter Cronkite, former anchor and CBS board member.

In a speech to network bureau chiefs this summer, Sauter said his moves at CBS were dictated by a new economic and competitive climate, and that anyone else would have to cope with the same conditions.

"There is a feeling that I did not adequately represent the news division at Black Rock," Sauter said in that speech. "I increasingly feel I did not adequately represent the forces of the outside world to the news division."

Some see Sauter as more victim than villain, a victim of the layoffs he exacted in a period when declining ad revenues and lower profits were hitting all three networks.

"A lot of his problems had to do with perception, not reality," said Phil Jones, chairman of CBS' affiliates board. "In situations affecting the bottom line, quite often the messenger is killed as well."

"My 18 years at CBS were joyful and rewarding, and while the difficulties of the past 10 months constituted an irreversible endgame, I leave with pride in my work and respect and fondness for my former colleagues," Sauter said in a statement.

There was no indication whether a new news division president would be selected before a new CBS chief executive is named.

Law officers wage local battles against drugs

By ARTHUR BUCKLER
Associated Press Writer

As the House of Representatives wrestled with a bill filled with new weapons in the war on drugs, law officers like those in New York, California and Tennessee fought local battles against the illegal narcotics trade.

A new anti-narcotics team conducted a sweep of New York City housing projects, making 183 arrests in 23 hours, while multi-million-dollar amphetamine laboratories were shut down next to an elementary school in California and at a remote farm in Tennessee.

And California's attorney general and schools chief said Thursday it's all right for children to turn in their drug-using parents.

The House late Thursday gave final approval to a bill providing new weapons for the war on drugs, including required use of the military and reinstatement of the federal death penalty for some drug dealers.

In New York, raids at 53 of the city's 275 housing projects ended Thursday afternoon and resulted in the confiscation of 85 tins of cocaine, 739 vials of the powerful cocaine derivative crack, 634 glassine envelopes of heroin, 345 bags of marijuana, one ounce of hashish, three guns and $21,815 in cash, authorities said.

In El Cajon, Calif., police raided a home next to an elementary school Thursday to break up a $120 million methamphetamine operation, authorities said.

Mark Humphrey White, 29, was arrested and booked for investigation of narcotics violations and possession of stolen property, authorities said.

"It's incredible. We were not at all aware of it," said Allison Cummings, principal of the Anza School, whose playground abuts the house.

"The children play on the playground ... all the time. That could have been so dangerous," Cummings said.

Police took precautions in removing the contraband because of the volatile nature of ether and other chemicals used to make methamphetamine. "According to a DEA (Drug Enforcement Administration) agent, an explosion of the chemicals would flatten a city block," police Lt. Randy Narramore said.

In Tennessee, four men were arrested Thursday at a farm north of Jasper as authorities raided a sophisticated drug lab.

Reagan's speech may be delayed by football

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC and the Cable News Network plan live coverage when President and Mrs. Reagan address the nation Sunday about combating drugs, but on CBS and NBC, football may take top priority.

CBS and NBC say they may resort to tape delay if the 8 p.m. EDT speech threatens to interrupt professional football coverage.

PBS will offer a live feed to public television stations to use as they wish.

NBC said some West Coast affiliates may carry the speech by tape delay.
