Nicaragua says Americans shot down

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist government claimed a survivor from a downed rebel supply plane identified himself as a U.S. military adviser based in El Salvador and said the three dead crew members were Americans.

There was no U.S. confirmation of the crew members' identities, and U.S. embassies in Central America refused to comment.

The Sandinista newspaper Barricada today said the plane was "proof of the open participation of the United States in the war of aggression against Nicaragua.

'We now have Americans dying in Mr. Reagan's dirty war being waged against Nicaragua," Alejandro Bendana, secretary-general of the Foreign Ministry, claimed in an interview from Managua broadcast today on ABC's "Nightline."

"This brings us closer to a direct Nicaragua-United States confrontation," Bendana said.

"Nightline" reported that Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams denied the plane could have been a U.S. military aircraft because Congress has prohibited such aid to the Nicaraguan rebels, known as Contras. The United States supports the Contras and a bill authorizing $100 million in aid is pending in Congress

Bendana later told ABC's "Good Morning Amer-"When we're talking about a U.S. plane, we're not saying it's a U.S. Army plane, but it's obviously a CIA operation with CIA operatives." The United States stations 55 military advisers in nearby El Salvador to train its forces in putting down leftist rebels, but these advisers are banned from going into combat there. El Salavador is north of Nicaragua.

The Nicaraguan Defense Ministry said the plane, believed to have been a C-123 tactical transport, was shot down with a Soviet-made surface-toair missile at 12:45 p.m. Sunday.

In a statement, the ministry said the plane carried at least 50,000 rounds of ammunition for AK-47 automatic rifles, dozens of rifles, an unspecified number of rocket-propelled grenades and other equipment for the Contras.

The statement said the surviving crew member identified himself as Eugene Hafenfuf, 35, and said he was a U.S. military adviser in El Salvador.

It said the survivor had identified the other crew members as Americans, but gave no further details about Hafenfuf, his whereabouts or about the three dead

Presidential press secretary Manuel Espinoza said in a phone interview today that poor visibility prevented helicopters from reaching the crash site in heavy jungle about 35 miles north of Costa Rica and 91 miles southeast of Managua.

He said the survivor still was at the crash scene but would be brought to Managua as soon as

In Washington, Maj. Eugenia Thornton, a Pentagon spokeswoman, said she had no report on the plane incident, no confirmation that it had occurred, and no identification of any individuals who might have been aboard such a flight.

The gloves come off White, Clements tangle over economy

HOUSTON (AP) - Gov. Mark White accused challenger Bill Clements of hiding and Clements accused White of showboating as the pair concentrated on Texas' ailing economy in an hour-long debate

The two squared off Monday for their first and perhaps only face-to-face confrontation before the Nov. 4 election.

They broke little new ground while answering questions about taxes and budget cuts, prisons, college tuition and utility rates. Most of their responses to questions from a three-member panel of reporters, however, returned to the theme of economic

"He's a show horse, and I'm a work horse," Clements said. "I have a proven record. My only purpose is to help guide Texas through this difficult period. Mark

White is the candidate who will say and do whatever it takes to get a vote.'

White, meanwhile, said Clements had no plan to deal with the state's budget deficit and was not present when he and the Legislature hammered out a tax boost and budget cut program to culminate a second special legislative session.

"He hid out, he dropped out," White said. "Frankly, he wasn't there to debate the "Overall, I wanted to stay with the facts," Clements said. "I did very good, fine. I'm delighted.'

White said he wished he had more time but also said was pleased.

While Clements' aides hustled the candidate away from reporters following the debate, White answered several questions and continued to defend his record.

'Nobody likes to raise taxes, but the fact is we either did that or we'd cut into education, cut highways. He attacks me for building revenues that go into highways and improving our schools. The reverse is to take revenues out of those. The guy talks around the issues and never gets down to how you get to balancing the budget.'

Experts claim environment not threatened by submarine

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has no plans to attempt the recovery of a Russian nuclear submarine lying 3½ miles beneath the Atlantic and doesn't believe the Soviet Union could raise the vessel either. Pentagon officials say

Moreover, because of the age of the vessel, there is little of any military significance to be learned by raising it, the officials added.

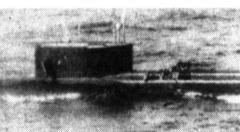

"It would be quite a feat (to raise it)," Vice. Adm. Powell F. Carter Jr., the staff director for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said in a briefing

Monday. "I don't think you could."

Carter and Lt. Gen. Richard A. Burpee, director of operations for the joint staff, discussed the fate of the Yankee-class submarine after the Pentagon announced it had sunk more than 1,000 miles east of North Carolina before dawn Monday

Its crew having abandoned ship for a nearby Soviet merchant vessel, the sub sank to "a fairly rocky area" about 18,000 feet below the ocean's surface, Carter said.

The sub was believed to have carried 16 nuclear-tipped missiles and was powered by two nuclear reactors. The warheads atop one of those missiles could very well have been blown into the sea and sank when the submarine experienced a fire and explosion

Rig count rising

From Staff and Wire Reports

HOUSTON — The number of working oil rigs in the United States rose for the sixth week to 818, an increase of 12 from last week, Hughes Tool Co. officials

Last year at this time, the count was 1,934, company officials said Monday

The count increased by 42 last week.

The rig count rose by one in the Texas Panhandle last week. Doris Harrison of the Oil and rig count was 18 last week, up one from the 17 reported for the previous week.

Teachers honor Ramona

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

One could tell that people at Pampa High School were excited to hear of Ramona Hite's selection as state secondary business education Teacher of the Year for 1986

While this reporter was trying to interview her Monday, another teacher popped through the doorway to say, "Tell everybody we're really proud of her. Principal Oran Chappell dropped in to give Hite some praises. A student walked up to her and hugged her, saying, "She's my favorite teacher." And when the final school bell for the day rang, a voice came over the intercom asking Hite to be sure to come by the office and pick up her flowers

But Hite, who was named District XVI business education teacher of the year last November, still seemed awed by her selec-

"I didn't think I had a chance," she said. Chance or not, Hite received the honor this past weekend at the state Texas Business Education Association convention in El

"I'm no different than anyone else, or so I probably like to think," said Hite, who began her teaching career here in 1969 as a student As Hite continued to talk, it was obvious she had one thing going fo. her: enthusiasm about her career Hite explained the selection process, which began with a nomination by the business education faculty at PHS. The nomination, with Chappell's approval, was sent to district. The district winner then became a state candidate for the honor. With some modesty, Hite said she felt part of the reason for her selection was that she keeps good files. You have to tell everything you've done in teaching in the past five years," she said. Having taught filing procedures to her students, Hite has a large file collection she could turn to to help fill out the required Her files enabled her to include information about what she has done in the classrooms, what committees she has served on. what school-related activities she has participated in, what course curricula she has

she has had over the past five years. 'The des really helped," she said, adding that they had jogged her memory in a num-

helped develop and what other experiences

After she got the award, Hite said, one of the state officials said she comes from a good-sized town to have acquired a lot of ex-

Hite acknowledged that. At meetings with other teachers, she has learned that there's a lot of latitude available in the Pampa schools for being able to do new things in the classroom, with a number of opportunities often unavailable in larger districts.

"I've always been lucky, lucky" to work with administrators such as Chappell and former principal Paul Payne, Hite said.

"I've never felt like I've been squelched" in being able to try something new

The school board has been very supportive, too, as long as curriculum changes or the purchase of new equipment were justified, she said

'That helps, to have people who are very supportive," Hite said.

Hite also praised her family for their support. Her husband Bill and her children 'don't question that I work for the school,' she said. "They don't pull me away from it" when she has something to do.

Currently teaching beginning typewriting, short hand and advanced typing-word processing, Hite is a graduate of West Texas State University with a degree in business administration. In her years at PHS, she also has taught business math, business communications, personal business management, notehand (quick writing) and office procedures.

Hite said she feels a lot of her happiness in teaching comes from the courses she teaches. Since they are elective courses, student motivation is higher, "and that makes my job easier," she said.

"I really think they learn as much from seeing how you do something" as they do from books or just classroom instruction, Hite said "If you're organized, for example, they'll be more likely to become better organized themselves," she said.

Though she obviously loves her job, she See HITE, Page 2

PHS schedules homecoming activities; 'Nerd Day,' queen selection on agenda

Students at Pampa High School will be "dressing up" for three days this week in preparation for Friday's Harvester homecoming football game with Frenship.

Student Council sponsor Bill Potts said some unusual school attire can be expected.

Wednesday will be "Nerd Day;" Thursday, "Hippie Day;" and Friday, "Kid Day," with students and faculty members encouraged to drag out the costumes and old clothes.

Homecoming activities will kick off Friday evening, with the crowning of the Homecoming Queen at 7:15 p.m. prior to the game at Harvester Queen candidates are Lauri Anderwald, Kelly Cross, Jennifer Graves, Summer Hudson, Leslie Leggett and Beth Queen.

After the game, a dance will be held in the PHS gym with music provided by Z-93, Potts said.

Gray Co. tax statements mailed to Pampans today

County tax statements for Pampa residents were mailed out this morning, the earliest mailing in five years, Gray County Tax Assessor-Collector Margie Gray said.

Gray said she mailed rural county statements last Wednesday and Pampa statements today. She attributed the earliest mailing since 1981 to a new computer system in her office and hard work on the part of her staff.

"It helps to get the money in the bank so we can get the interest,'

As an incentive to local taxpayers to make their payments early, the county will be offering discounts in October, November and December. All taxes are due by Jan. 31. Those paying before Oct. 31 will receive a 3 percent discount; those paying by Nov. 30 will get a 2 percent discount; and those paying before Dec. 31 will obtain a 1 percent discount off their total county tax bill, Gray said.

Taxes per $100 valuation in the Pampa area are 21.6 cents for Gray County; 64 cents for the city; and 71.8 cents for Pampa Independent School District.

In McLean, the school tax is $1.08 per $100 valuation, while the city tax is 27.9 cents.

Lefors taxpayers will pay 86 cents per $100 for the school district and 32 cents for the city

Other school tax rates in Gray County are 67 cents in Alanreed and 28.51 cents at Grandview-while submerged on Friday, Carter said. Asked if the sunken submarine posed a threat to the environment, Carter responded: "Really, if you're talking about radioactivity or a nuclear explosion, none.

Burpee said the United States had already conducted some sampling in the vicinity of the sunken submarine "and the initial or preliminary results of the air sampling and the water sampling have proved negative results.'

Brian Gorman, a spokesman for the National Marine Fisheries Service in the National Oceanic and Atomospheric Administration, said the possible effects on marine life are minimal at that distance and depth.

"Even if there were some damage to the reactor containment vessel, you've got such an enormous volume of water compared with a relatively miniscule amount of potential radioactivity, there would be almost no effect on the environment," Gorman sisted the state's economic problems were triggered by plunging oil prices. Clements, the Republican who lost to White four years ago, insisted the role of oil was minor and instead accused White of having a tax-and-spend Numerous polls gave Clements a wide lead over the incumbent earlier this year. White, however, has closed the gap, with one recent poll showing the race virtually a dead heat.

"The fact of the matter, tax revenues are down today," White said. "You've seen the price of oil. It's down, not up. He (Clements) shouldn't mislead the people of this state. Bill, you know it, too.' "The price of oil is not really not the issue at all."

Clements retorted. "Let's talk about the slice of the pie in the budget. Oil tax revenues represent only 8 cents of every tax dollar." Clements attacked White for increasing taxes and allowing utility rates to increase, saying the Democrat four years ago had promised not to do "He promised to not raise taxes and he did — the largest in history," Clements said. "He promised not to raise taxes. It's up 400 percent. He promised not to raise utility bills, not to raise the gasoline tax. This just goes on and on and on. White said if taxes weren't raised, meals would cut out for children and senior citizens, and health care for senior citizens would have been slashed, along with teacher salaries and school Asked where he would make cuts, Clements said they would come from luxury items in various

"There's a full menu that tells you spending is totally out of control," Clements said. "What we need to do is get back to basics."

Other questions dealt with utility rates, prisons and Clements ties to Schlumberger, an oil firm that does business in Libya.

"I can't believe this has become in an issue in this campaign," Clements said.

White said the prison crowding problem was a direct result of Clements' veto of a prison construction plan during the Republican's term in office. Clements said White's statements about increas-. ing prison bed space was a result of programs implemented during his own administration.

White insisted utilty bills are down and challenged Clements to check his personal electric bills. Clements said he did and found them more than 23 percent higher than 1983

On the tuition question, White defended increases in rates at state colleges, saying anyone who wanted a college education could get one because grants remained available to assist st dents

In his closing statement, White repeated his efforts to improve education and highways, water resources and care of the elderly.

"Everything we've done has been designed to save vital programs. Even in tough times, living in Texas is better than living anywhere else in good times," he said.

Clements, in his final remarks; described himself as a poor boy who started out in the oil fields and White as a professional politician who has all the rhetoric down.

Rig

More than 1,000 rigs have been idle since December, when oil prices began to decline, falling as low as $9 a barrel. Since Dec. 23, the rig count had dropped steadily from 1,995 before beginning an upswing last month, officials said.

In contrast, 4,500 rigs were active in December 1981.

T. Boone Pickens Jr., general partner of Mesa Limited Partnership, said last week's active rig count, which was up 42, is following a typical pattern for the fourth quarter of the year. Historically, the rig count has increased during the fourth quarter as oil companies and individual investors have sought to spend their remaining budgets and generate tax deductions prior to year's end.

Pickens said this seasonal trend is likely to be more pronounced in 1986 than in prior years in light of recently enacted tax simplication legislation. The new tax bill significantly lowers tax rates and, consequently, the value of tax deductions, beginning in 1987.

Because tax deductions will become less attractive after 1986, Pickens said the traditional decline in first quarter drilling activity may be unusually sharp

FBI agent Byron Sage said his office was investigating the incident along with the Texas Department of Public Safety

'We have the device. It is being forwarded to our laboratory in Washington, D.C., for analysis both technical and for latent fingerprints," Sage Clements campaign manager George Bayoud on Monday said the device was found by private investigators Sunday night behind a picture in the office of Karl Rove.

Rove, an Austin-based political consultant, is chief strategist for Clements' race against incumbent Democratic Gov. Mark White.

Neither Bayoud nor Rove said they knew who placed the device in Rove's office.

'We don't know. We may never know. I do know for a fact, certain, who benefits most from the kind of knowledge you'd get from listening in on my telephone conversations. That's our political opposition," Rove said.

Rove is working for several political candidates this year. But he said his role in those campaigns is confined to direct mail and fund-raising efforts not something that would make it worth planting a bug to obtain.

"I'm not accusing anybody," Rove told a news conference. "I would find it hard to believe that this was aimed at collecting information for candidates outside of this gubernatorial (race).'

A spokesman for White said directing any allegation at the governor's re-election campaign would be "bizarre and incredible."

"If they found a bug, that's a serious matter. But if they're blaming us, it's a bunch of bull," said White spokesman Mark McKinnon.

'I'm here with all the key people of this campaign. There was absolutely no knowledge of it. I heard about it when you called," McKinnon said in

McKinnon noted that Clements' staff announced in their only statewide televised debate of the campaign.

"I think it's clear this seems to shift the focus of the debate," he said.

However, during the hour-long debate Monday night, neither candidate mentioned the listening device

Rove said the bug was discovered during an electronic sweep of his office, conducted Sunday evening by investigators from a Fort Worth security

Rove's office is located about a mile north of downtown Austin. Clements' campaign headquarters is in a different office building downtown, and Bayoud said a check of those offices failed to uncover any bugs.

Rove described the device as a matchbook-sized radio transmitter, capable of sending a signal about a half mile.

He said it was fastened to the back of a framed needlepoint picture of an elephant, which was hanging on a wall about four feet from his tele-

"We don't know when it was placed there or how long it's been there," he said. However, Rove and Bayoud said they grew suspicious in recent weeks because confidential information from the campaign was leaking. "Over the last five or six weeks, there have been a disturbing number of instances in which closely held, privately held information was becoming a matter of public record," Rove said.

"Both of us, I think, at that point still thought we had a problem with somebody inside the campaign simply overhearing things, talking out of school or sharing information with a roommate. Neither of us expected to find what we found last night," Rove

The Clements officials said they decided to hire investigators after two pieces of information leaked in recent days — details on planned purchases of television time and discussions about hiring Lee Atwater, a political operative for Vice President George Bush.

Rove and Bayoud said they are confident the bug wasn't planted by someone on their staffs.

Canadian expands its Fall Foliage Festival

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

CANADIAN — Folks looking for small-town fall entertainment may as well stay around here during October, when just about any week-end will be highlighted by some type of fair, festival of fall

And that doesn't even include the Canadian Wildcat football or other school activities.

Canadian's annual Fall Foliage Festival is being expanded to two week-ends — Oct. 11-12 and Oct. 18-19 — this year, Chamber of Commerce manager Diane Black said.

Antique and classic cars and trucks, and street rods will be featured at a car show this Saturday and Sunday at the Show Barn of the Hemphill County Exhibition Center, southwest of Canadian. Dash plaques will be awarded to all entries and trophies will be awarded to the winners. Show times will be from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday

At the same time, a Collectors' Showcase will be held at the exhibition center meeting area.

'Collections of all kinds wil be on exhibit and trophies will be awarded in three categoties,' Black said.

Those planning exhibits should pre-register with the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, 323-6234, designating the amount of space needed for the col-

Also this weekend, the second annual River City Revue will be held at 7 p.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday at the Canadian Middle School Auditorium. The revue will feature hometown talent and will be directed by Jim Jughes of Guymon, Okla. Admission will be $5 for adults and $2.50 for chil-

The next weekend's festivities will feature a chili cook-off 10 a.m. Oct. 18 at the city park, Highway 60-83 North. A free concert, featuring Frankie McWhorter and Ridgeway will follow at 1 p.m. with food and game booths sponsored by local organizations.

Across the highway, at 1 p.m., The Northeast Panhandle Team Roping Championship will feature ropers from Hemphill, Lipscomb, Ochiltree, Gray, Roberts and Wheeler Counties in Texas and Ellis and Roger Mills counties in Oklahoma. Those interested in participating may contact Donnie Johnston at 323-6439

The Tour of Homes, Oct. 19, will feature three of Canadian's finer homes, Black said. This year's tour features the old homes of Dr. Malouf and Therese Abraham, 520 Nelson; Dick and Gail Waterfield, 406 N. Sixth; and Wayne Haygood, 923 Hillside. Tickets will be on sale for $5 at the city auditorium from 1to 4 p.m. Oct. 19. Children accompanied by an adult will be admitted free.

The Fall Foliage Tour features an unescorted drive and walk around tree-laden Lake Marvin. There, tourists may sample and view the variety of plant life in the area. Information and maps will be available at the city auditorium.

The Women's Service League will sponsor its Hobby Show and Kountry Kitchen bazaar at the auditorium.

Lawyer: NBC show depicting custody battle is 'fiction'

BRYAN, Texas (AP) — An NBC docu-drama about a former Bryan resident's custody fight for his daughter was a "highly, highly ficitionalized" movie, the father's lawyer said.

'It brushed up against the truth in a couple of instances, but mostly it was just fiction," said Bryan attorney John Hawtrey. "I think my wife said it best, 'It was tinselized."

The docu-drama "A Fight for Jenny" revovled around the still ongoing custody fight between Linda Palmore and her exhusband Anthony Scott.

When the two divorced in Florida in 1980, Mrs. Palmore was awarded custody of their only child Melanie.

Mrs. Palmore, who is white, was remarried to Clarence Palmore, who is black

Two years after the divorce Sidoti tried to get custody of his daughter, saying his wife was neglecting Melanie and having relations with a number of men.

A Tampa circuit judge awarded Sidoti custody of the child saying in an opinion, "despite the strides that have been made in bettering relations between the races in this country, it is inevitable that Melanie, if allowed to remain in her present situation, will (become) more vulnerable to peer pressures (and) suffer from the social stigmatization that is sure to come.

But the Supreme Court ruled the argument invalid in April 1984, declaring, "The Constitution cannot control such prejudices, but neither can it tolerate them.

Shortly after the verdict, Sidoti moved to Bryan, where he worked as an air-conditioning repairman. He also had his lawyers pursue custody again.

Hawtrey said the NBC movie had several inaccuracies The time of Mrs. Palmore's

Judge orders preacher arrested for contempt AUSTIN (AP) - Sheriff's deputies have been ordered to arrest the Rev. W.N. Otwell, a Tarrant County preacher who has denied court orders to obtain a state license for his church-run

State District Judge Paul Davis of Austin issued the arrest order Monday after Otwell left the courtroom prior to a contempt hearing.

'If they are going to arrest him, they are going to have to find him," said Pastor Aubrey Vaughan of Houston, an Otwell backer.

Otwell conducted a rally near the Travis County courthouse and was in the courtroom shortly before the hearing, but was not on hand when Davis convened the proceeding.

Davis instructed deputies to find Otwell and bring him to the courtroom. Travis County authorities said late Monday night that he had not been apprehended and that Tarrant County authorities had been notified to arrest

Davis ordered a continuation of the $100-a-day fine against Otwell for violating the state law requiring youth homes to get state

He also ordered Otwell to allow the state to survey his Community Baptist Church in Tarrant County. Assistant Attorney General Sue Berkel said the state wants to sell a portion of the property to cover the civil penalties.

The state also wants Davis to assess a $500-a-day fine against Otwell for defying the March order to get a license or close the boys' home. A hearing on that request will be conducted when Otwell is taken into custody, Davis said.

Otwell has said he is resisting the order because he sees it as improper state regulation of a church facility. Vaughan said the preacher chose not to attend the Monday hearing for the same

"He says the court does not have any jurisdiction over the church," said Vaughan, pastor of the Grace Baptist Church of

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Confiscating more guarantees failure

A public opinion poll conducted in July and August by the Louis Harris organization shows that three out of four American adults believe today's children face tougher problems than they themselves faced during their own childhoods.

Most of the problems cited in the poll are school-related — having to do with education, drug prevention, day-care and recreation programs. Paradoxically, however, an even larger majority of adults told the pollsters that increased taxes to fund more extensive government interference in the schooling of children would be a suitable solution to these problems.

Yet the use of the power of taxation — the use of force to obtain revenue — hardly seems necessary in a case where almost everyone has expressly declared his willingness to pay for increased services. If, as Harris tells us, 76 percent of American adults are willing to pay more to improve their local schools, why is it necessary to seize those payments? Why can't all those adults simply contribute what they feel they can afford to the project, which could then be run by a private organization?

Such an approach would have the virtue of not forcing the small minority of adults who don't wish to participate in the project to do so against their will. It would also probably be more effective than any government program would be. After all, government educational programs appear to be a major cause of at least some of the increased problems children face

Our public schools have long lagged behind private schools, even those in poor, inner-city areas that charge low tuitions and serve mostly working-class families. Two decades ago, when the mediocrity of the public schools first became a major national issue, the federal government began enormously increasing the amounts of public money poured into the schools. It also began launching new programs designed to improve public education in a number of different ways.

During the following decade, an entire cabinet-level department of the federal government was devoted to improving the public schools. Yet the more resources the government has poured into them, the worse those schools have become. If today's children have more problems with inferior schooling than their parents did, government is at least partly to blame. Is it realistic, then, to consider government the proper institution to remedy the situation?

As Louis Harris himself has noted, the fact that 'people think something (such as problems facing the nation's schoolchildren) is on the rise does not mean that perception is correct." He might have added that just because people think increased taxes and new government programs are the solutions to whatever problems actually do confront the schoolchildren of today, we should not assume that that perception is correct either.

Speed limit lost its purpose

WASHINGTON — The Senate struck a blow for common sense and sound government when it voted on Sept. 23 to deep-six the double nickel. On certain rural interstate highways, the 55mile per hour speed limit may soon be a thing of the past.

When Congress imposed the double nickel in 1974, the 55-mile limit had a rational purpose. This was at the peak of the Arab oil embargo, and fuel conservaiton was a national cause. Sometime in the future, if petroleum imports again are in jeopardy, a 55-mile limit again could be defended.

The double nickel is indefensible now. Under the Senate's proposal, sponsored chiefly by Idaho's Steve Symms, the states would be authorized to fix speed limits up to 65 miles per hour on interstate highways "located outside of an urbanized area of 50,000 population or more."

That makes sense. On the congested interstates of New Jersey, jammed with hundreds of thousands of cars a day, a 55-mile limit is acceptable. It's a different story out West. The Wyoming motorist who takes I-80 east out of Rawlins is likely to see no more traffic than four rabbits loping toward Cheyenne. The Symms amendment leaves it to state officials, familiar with local traffic conditions, to decide what is appropriate on rural interstates in their own states. Such decisions lie at the very heart of

During the Senate debate, statistics ricocheted like handballs off the chamber walls. Defenders of the double nickel repeatedly cited a study by the Transportaiton Research Board that reached a highly conjectural conclusion: The 55-mile limit was responsible for preventing 2,000 to 4,000 highway fatalities a year between 1974 and 1984. In this 10-year period, the death rate per 100 million miles of travel dropped from 4.24 to 2.48. We may all be thankful for

As they apply to the Symms amendment, the figures have little relevance. Highway death rates per 100 million miles have been dropping ever since Henry Ford produced the Tin Lizzie. True, the death rate dropped sharply in the year after the 55-mile limit was imposed, but the rate has dropped sharply in other years when the speed limit has remained unchanged.

To argue that the double nickel alone has saved all these hypothetical lives is to engage in hocus-pocus. Dozens of factors have played an indeterminate role. Young drivers are better educated; automobiles are structurally safer; highways are better engineered; tires are less prone to blowouts; drunk driving statutes have been more strictly enforced; the use of seat belts has steadily increased. Doubtless a slower average speed has contributed to the saving of some lives. Beyond that reasonable surmise we get into pure conjecture.

The 55-mile limit on rural interstates promotes a contempt for law. Studies by highway, engineers, using speed sensors embedded in roadways, indicate that 85 percent of the interstate motorists flout the law. In many states the effective speed limit on these highways is 65 and everyone knows it. It is a ridiculous waste of time and manpower for state troopers to attempt rigid enforcement of a law so widely disdained.

The Transportation Research Board estimated that the 55-mile limit costs 1 billion additional hours of passenger time every year. That figure is as shaky as some of the other figures. Even so, a great deal of time obviously is lost because of the limit, and time has economic Nebraska's Sen. James Exon provided some data that was a little more solid. During 1985, Nebraska recorded 207 fatal highway accidents. Of these, only seven occurred on the interstate system. In not one of those fatal accidents was speed cited as a contributing cause. In the nation as a whole, police in 1984 counted 39,622 deaths on the highways, but more than 90 percent of them occurred on primary and secondary roads.

If the tradition of federalism were to be purely observed in this area, Congress would make no attempt to fix a nationwide speed limit. Ideally, it is contended, states should be free to fix any limit they wish - or as on the autobahns of Europe, no limit at all. I don't by that argument. The interstates have been financed with "federal dollars," and Congress has power under the Commerce Clauses to set conditions on how those dollars are used. The Symms selective ceiling of 65 miles per hour is a reasonable compromise between federal authority and state discretion. This is a law that most of us can willingly obey.

'A dark and stormy night'

For years, I've been trying to write a novel. but I keep bogging down when it comes to the

First, I thought of:

"It was a dark and stormy night..." That's not bad, but I seem to remember I've read that in the beginning of someone else's novel. I never steal another writer's material unless it becomes absolutely necessary to do so.

My next opening went like this: 'As the sun cast its warming spell upon Hilda's goddess-like body, Garland searched up and down the TV dial for 'Wheel of Fortune.'

But I thought why would Garland want to watch "Wheel of Fortune" with Hilda acting goddess-like? Vanna White is terrific on TV, but when you've already got Hilda right there beside you, what's the point?

I know what you're thinking. You're thinking: no puzzle here, Garland is gay.

You're wrong. My novel isn't going to have gay people in it. I want to write something un-

Later, I thought to myself, why not write a novel of mystery and intrique? First paragraph went this way:

'Agent 009 crouched in the alley as Natasha, the KGB's deadliest operative, searched in the eerie darkness for him, crying out sensually, 'I know you are here somewhere. I smell the haunting scent of your Aqua Velva. Come out, wherever you are, so that I may kill you.' But what sort of secret agent would wear

Aqua Velva? Even the dunce Garland would have more class than that. Next, I decided on a novel set in some faraway exotic locale, like in a jungle. I wrote: 'Startled, Sabu turned around just a heartbeat before a runaway rougue elephant stepped on his head and stomped him flat. "How many for dinner tonight?" Sir Henry asked Raamad, the cook.

"'One less than last night, Sahib.' Raamad replied, as he attempted to scoop what was left of his good friend, Sabu, into a Hefty bag.'

Not bad. Not bad at all. Except if you wrote an entire novel about jungles, you would have to think of a lot of jungle name, and Sabu and Raamad are the only two names I know like

What I finally decided to do was to begin my novel with the best parts of all the aforementioned openings. I decided on this:

"It was a dark and stormy night as Hilda and Garland watched 'Wheel of Fortune' in their apartment, which overlooked the alley where agent 009 crouched, as Natasha, the KGB's deadliest operative, thought she smelled an

"Startled, she turned around just as Sabu, who smelled like an elephant because he had been so busy tracking her down he hadn't had time to take a shower for days, hit her over the head with a Hefty bag full of Raamad's empty Agua Velva bottles.

In the next scene, Sir Henry kills Vanna White when she cannot successfully name all five

Women demand convenience in living

By Rusty Brown

My shopping list was as long as my day yesterday. The shopping cart was loaded to the max and the clock said 6 p.m., so I detoured to the supermarket's deli department and ordered a pound of fresh crab salad for dinner.

Ready-to-eat food has affected our lives as much as the introduction of ready-to-wear clothes once did. Sure. the crab salad was more expensive than something I could have made at home "from scratch," but, like a lot of scurrying women these days, I'm more protective of my time than my money.

The home-made meal is a twice-aweek event at our house - and then, prepared mostly out of guilt or for special occasions. The rest of the time, it's whatever can be put together in less than 30 minutes, popped into the microwave, or ordered off a restaurant menu

Happily, the food industry has been responsive to our needs and is paying attention to the voices of women consumers. The Campbells Soup Co., for example, asked us what we wanted in convenience foods, and we answered: Foods that are quick and easy to fix and taste like mom's. We also want "ready food" to be low in calories, cholesterol and fat, and moderate in salt. Oh yes, portions must be ample enough for the men in the family. It was pressure from consumer groups that persuaded McDonald's Corp. to fry Chicken McNuggets and Fillet-O-Fish sandwiches in pure vegetable shortening, instead of the highcholesterol, artery-clogging beef fat that was being used.

And the more we all learn about good nutrition, the more we insist on being able to buy fresh fruits and vegetables. Our taste has gone from red to green - less beef and more broccoli, please - a fact that has vexed the cattle ranchers to no end. Studies show that per capita consumption of fresh produce has risen 12 percent over the past 10 years, while purchase of beef has plummeted 16 percent.

Speaking of fresh produce, there are still some unanswered questions I have as a consumer. Like why are those cucumbers glistening with wax? Is that some noxious preservative? I also want my grocer to level with me if the so-called fresh produce has been sitting around in ripening rooms, losing so much vitamins and flavor that it would be better nutrition to buy canned or frozen counterparts. I also want 1-pound boxed brown sugar to be soft at time of purchase. Who wants to be bothered with baking it beside a cup of water, as the package recommends? On the other hand,

I don't want a chemical added-Consumer input is affecting other areas of our lives as well. A New Jersey homebuilder about to design a new development asked 15 working women to tell him what they wanted in housing. A computer consultant told him: "We all end up doing some work at home, and you need a separate place to do it." So the builder's 1986 plan calls for a woman's study, 13-by-11-feet, just off the living room. Women also said they wanted a smaller living room, larger kitchen, an exercise room and "his" and "hers" closets with more space in hers.

Committee to recommend Perkins for ambassador

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Foreign Relations Committee is ready to recommend the Senate confirm Edward J. Perkins as the first black U.S. ambassador to South Africa.

Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., chairman of the panel's African subcommittee, said the Senate could act as early as Wednesday on the Perkins nomination.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., said he anticipated no serious opposition from the Democratic side, and Perkins said if confirmed he would take up his new post in Pretoria in November. During testimony Monday, Perkins was asked whether he supports the sanctions approved by Congress and enacted into law over President Reagan's veto. "It's not a question of whether I support the sanctions," he re-

Also charged were LaRouche's two presidential campaign committees and three other LaRouche-linked organizations. including Caucus Distributors Inc. and Campaigner Publications Inc. Those two corporations conduct fund raising, solicit loans and sell publications associated with LaRouche.

LaRouche himself, a frequent fringe candidate for president, was not charged and remained out of sight. His home, a $1.2 million estate outside town that is owned by an Oklahoma oilman, was not searched.

Federal agents were posted outside its gates but did not enter. U.S. Attorney Robert S. Mueller III of the District of Massachusetts said the investigation by his office continues and that it extends beyond the credit card fraud scheme outlined in the indictment. He declined to elabo-

The indictment said more than 1,000 people around the nation were defrauded of more than $1 million by making mo 2,000 false charges on the individuals' credit cards between March and November 1984.

During that period, LaRouche was running for president of the United States. He has already announced his candidacy for the 1988 elections as a Democrat. Jeffrey Steinberg, 39, and Michelle Steinberg, 36, both described as members of LaRouche's "security and intelligence staff," were arrested in Leesburg. A federal magistrate in Alexandria, Va., ordered them held pending a bond hearing Thursday on charges of conspiracy to obstruct justice.

A third high-rankingLaRouche associate, Paul Goldstein, 37, also a member of the security and intelligence staff, was charged with conspiracy to obstruct justice but was not taken into custody. Justice Department spokesman Pat Korten said there was reason to believe he was out of the country

Another facing the obstruction charge, Roy Frankhauser, 47, was arrested in Reading, Pa., where he lives.

He was identified by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai Brith as a former grand dragon of the Pennsylvania Ku Klux Klan and associated with other extremist groups

He was described in the indictment as a security consultant to the Steinbergs and Goldstein.

Court to decide if civil rights laws protect Jews and Arabs

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court, agreeing to decide whether race may involve more than skin pigment, will determine whether federal civil rights laws aimed primarily at helping blacks should protect Jews and Arabs against discri-

The court, beginning its 1986-87 term Monday, agreed to consider giving an expansive meaning to the term race in two cases from Maryland and Pennsylvania.

The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith said it was pleased by the court's announcement.

Although the league rejects the notion that Jews should be classified as a race, it is our hope that the Supreme Court will find that the civil rights statutes must be construed to cover acts of racism directed toward Jews," said Michael E. Schultz, a B'nai B'rith

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist presided and Antonin Scalia took his seat as the court's newest member as the justices issued orders Monday in more than 1,000 appeals and began hearing arguments in cases already under re-

In the new discrimination cases, the court said it will consider whether Jews should be allowed to use federal civil rights laws to sue vandals for defacing a synagogue and whether an Arab college professor is entitled to the laws' special protection.

The professor, Majid Ghaidan Al-Khazraji, had been an associate professor at St. Francis College of Loretto, Pa., for more than five years when he was denied tenure in 1978.

A U.S. citizen born in Iraq, Al-Khazraji sued the college for alleged discrimination under the Civil Rights Acts of 1964 and 1866. He said the college improperly considered his ethnic background as an Arab and his religion, Muslim.

A federal judge threw out his suit. But last March, the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reinstated the case

The appeals court said Arabs may be considered a protected minority under federal civil rights law even though it was enacted primarily to safeguard the rights of blacks.

The appeals court acknowledged that the race of Arabs is Caucasian.

But, it said, "When Congress referred in the statute to 'race,' it plainly did not intend thereby to refer courts to any particular scientific conception of the term."

The law is intended to apply to members of any group that is "ethnically and physiognomically distinctive," the appeals court

In the other case, members of the Shaare Tefila Congregation of Silver Spring, Md., invoked the civil rights laws to sue those who spray-painted their synagogue in November 1982 with anti-Semitic and Nazi-type slogans and sym-

Vandals wrote "Dead Jew" and "Death to the Jude" and painted swastikas, a skull and crossbones and Ku Klux Klan symbols on the outside of the building.

The congregation filed suit against eight men in 1984. But last March, the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., ruled that federal civil rights laws do not apply to Jews because they are not a separate race but are part of the white race.

Panel says spy defenses lax

WASHINGTON (AP) - Following a two-year study, the Senate Intelligence Committee said today the United States has paid too little time, attention and money to protecting the nation's secrets from foreign spies.

'The hostile intelligence threat is more serious than anyone in the government has yet acknowledged publicly," the panel said in a 141-page staff report, "Meeting the Espionage Challenge."

It estimated that the Western lead over the Soviets in high technology had been whittled by spying from "10-12 years a decade ago to about half that today.

The public version of the report, missing the secret sections also submitted to the Senate, reviewed in one place for the first time the damage publicly acknowledged from the spate of spy cases in the last two years.

The panel took the government to task for ignoring defensive security measures designed to thwart spying. Among a wide range of examples, it highlighted a little-publicized, recently discovered lapse which allowed the 1978, to get access to electric typewriters shipped to the U.S. Embassy in Moscow and to plant bugs in them.

"For years, the Soviets were reading some of our most sensitive diplomatic correspondence, economic and political analyses and other communications," the report said

On the separate question of hunting down spies, the committee had kinder words. It noted that from 1984 to 1986, 25 people were convicted or pleaded guilty to spying against the United States. One other, Soviet United Nations employee Gennadiy Zakharov, pleaded no contest, and former CIA agent Edward Howard defected to the Soviet Union rather than face spying charges.

"As a result of significant improvements in recent years, the nation's counterintelligence structure is fundamentally sound," the report said.

Nevertheless, it called for better policy direction of the FBI, the CIA, the Justice, State and Defense departments, but stopped short of calling for a counterintelligence czar. It commended the administration for beginning work on a national counterintelligence strategy

Pope John Paul II prays in front of the Saint Francois de Sales tomb.

Pope calls on the Catholic clergy to remain firm in their religious beliefs

ANNECY, France (AP) — Pope John Paul II today hammered home his urgent call to Roman Catholic priests and nuns to remain firm in their religious beliefs, saying the church "counts on your loyalty.

The leader of the world's 800 million Catholics arrived in this lakeside city in the Alps on the last day of his four-day visit to France.

Once again he invoked the example of a French saint, St. Francis de Sales, as a means to inspire a French church that is weakening steadily and losing its clergy.

"I would like to say again how much all of the church counts on your loyalty to the praise of God ... and on your constant action," the 66-year-old pontiff told an early morning gathering of nuns and priests at the Basilica of the Visitation in Annecy, where St. Francis de Sales was bishop in the 16th

Mass was said in an open park on the lake before an estimated 80,000 people.

The pope made the 60-mile journey to Annecy from Lyon by car, since fog prevented the planned use of a helicopter.

Most of Monday's activities also were devoted to what the pontiff said was the urgent need for a revival of the faith in France.

"In a world where bad morals are justified by pretexts that serve certain causes, the Christian must continue to call evil that which is evil, never accepting that the end justifies immoral or terrorist means," the pontiff told religious and lay officials at a seminary outside Lyon Monday night.

It was a double-barreled message from a pope concerned both about the dwindling strength of the Catholic church in France and a world he perceives as in moral decline.

During the third day of his sojourn in France, John Paul repeatedly exhorted priests to help stem "a notable decline in religious pratice" and to combat problems in the church he described as "immense. pressing.

Traveling to the tiny village of Ars on Monday, the pontiff paid tribute to its famous son, St. Jean-Marie Vianney, and said modern churchmen could follow the example of a man he considers a model for parish priests around the world

The 19th-century saint brought numerous Frenchmen back to the church after an era of anti-clericalism following the French Revolution.

More recently, the French church has seen a sharp drop in the number of practicing Catholics as well as priests. And many French Catholics resent the Vatican's moral positions, especially on sexual issues.

In France, the number of those joining the priesthood has plunged from 1,000 a year in 1951 to about 100 annually, according to the Vatican. The total of seminarians has dropped by about half since 1970, from 3,106 to

"The harvest is abundant, but the workers are few," the pope said at an afternoon outdoor Mass in Ars, before a crowd estimated at just under 10,000.

Earlier in Ars, addressing a meeting of priests, seminarians and bishops, John Paul said he was putting to them "an urgent call ... to remain faithful to your sublime vocation," guarding against doubt, discouragement and

Jewish activist trying to protest at summit

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) -A U.S. Jewish activist says Iceland's government has banned him from flying in Jewish leaders for a protest gathering planned at the site of this week's U.S.-Soviet summit.

Jerry Strober, spokesman for the National Conference on Soviet Jewry, said Monday he was negotiating with Iceland's Justice Ministry over the issue and would meet with its officials

Icelandic Television said the ban was issued by Thorsteinn Giersson, a senior Justice Ministry official. Repeated attempts to reach Giersson were unsuccessful

Strober said he had been denied permission to bring in a chartered plane carrying 50 Jewish leaders who he said wanted to

Italy and Libya swap prisoners

ROME (AP) - Libya freed four Italians during the night in exchange for three Libyans convicted of killing or trying to kill fellow Libyans in Italy, the Foreign Ministry announced today. An International Red Cross plane flew the Italians to Rome, the Foreign Ministry said.

The Libyans left Italy late Monday, but it was not immediately clear whether they also were flown home aboard a Red Cross plane. Two of the Italians had been held since 1980 and sentenced to life on charges of plotting against Libya. The other two were serving 10-year sentences for drug possession.

The Foreign Ministry identified the freed Italians as Bruno Castelli and Edoardo Seliciato, who were arrested in August 1980 on charges of participating in a plot against the security of Libya, and Mauro Piccin and Massimo Caporali, held on drug charges.

In exchange for their freedom, Italy granted pardons to Jussef Uhida, sentenced to 26 years imprisonment for killing a fellow Libyan in 1980, and to Mohammed Sidki Sajed Dous and Juma Mohammed Ali Mezdawi, sentenced to 14 years and 11 months each for trying to kill a Libyan government opponent in 1983.

Strober, who arrived in the Ice landic capital discreetly last week, said the plane carrying American Jews was to arrive Friday, the day before President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev are scheduled to have their first meeting.

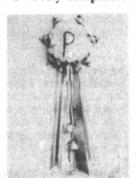

The American Jews would stay just "three or four hours" and then fly out in order to be home before the Jewish Sabbath, Strober said. But Icelandic authorities refused to grant landing rights, he

U.S. advisers aim to train themselves out of a job

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) - An unofficial motto of U.S. military advisers in El Salvador has come to be, "Train ourselves out of a job." They

The government forces now hold the upper hand in the battlefield against leftist guerrillas. It wasn't like that five years ago when the Americans began arriving amid cries that their presence was the first step toward direct U.S. troop intervention in this Central American nation.

"There was a lot of concern there would be another Vietnam," said an officer of the U.S. Southern Command based in Panama.

"So we set a limit of 55 trainers, and as it turns out it's been an

The Americans say their job is to "train the trainers" and in doing so "train ourselves our of a job." They say the progress they have made is indicated by the progress of the Salvadoran armed forces in holding the edge in the guerrilla war that now is nearing its seventh year.

When U.S. military advisers first arrived the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front guerrillas posed a serious threat to the country and a government military force accustomed to fighting only on a 9 a.m.-to-5 p.m.

The Associated Press conducted about 25 interviews with U.S. military personnel in El Salvador, Honduras and Panama on the status of the American training mission here. Because of the sensitive nature of their work and the security threats here, they insisted they not be identified. Salvadoran authorities praise the relationship with the Amerget better.' Three-man U.S. teams are assigned to each of El Salvador's six military bases. Other Americans work with the navy, the air force and the joint chiefs of staff. About 10 U.S. advisers are based at the military training school in easternmost La Union

"We try to influence them to do it themselves," said an American officer there. "So maybe we are more advisers than trainers.

The program for the Salvadoran soldiers, which includes everything from patrolling to counterinsurgency techniques, was drawn up from military courses offered not only in the United States, but in Venezuela, Colombia, Israel and Britain. "We came up with a superduper program," one U.S. captain said. "The idea is more sweat in the training and less blood in combat."

The Americans are banned

from going into combat with the Salvadoran troops and are occasionally withdrawn from areas where guerrilla activity is reported

A young U.S. captain at an eastern base said he sees the results of his work when the troops return from a battle.

'It's more gratifying to see them come back smiling. Not everyone can be a Rambo.

Although complaints of human rights abuses continue to be made against the armed forces, the Americans said troop training teaches proper conduct.

Southdale Center in Edina, Minn., observes 30th anniversary.

First indoor shopping mall celebrates 30th anniversary

EDINA, Minn. (AP) - Americans by the millions eat in them, hang out in them, and shop, shop, shop

It's been 30 years this week since the indoor shopping mall made its debut, and retailing hasn't been the same since.

Southdale Center opened Oct. 8, 1956, as a totally enclosed, climate-controlled complex of shops, stores and restaurants in this well-to-do Minneapo-

'People came in and looked and their mouths opened. The impact was phenomenal. There was nothing like it," said Herman Guttman, who supervised Southdale's construction and worked with the architect, the late Victor Gruen.

Before Southdale, shopping centers usually were built along a strip, with stores facing the street. After Southdale, thousands of suburban malls sprang up across the country and changed the shopping habits of a nation. The mall is Main Street in a space ship. It's an attempt to recreate the nostalgic Main Street within a totally controlled environment," said William Severini Kowinski, author of "The Malling of America

A few developers had tried two-level centers before Southdale opened, such as Baltimore's Mondawmin Shopping Center and Northland in Detroit, Kowinski said in his 1985 book.

But the modern mall was invented at Southdale.

"After Southdale it was clear. The shopping center was going to be the center of everything for suburbia," writes Kowinski, who has criticized malls as "selling machines.

About 3,000 enclosed malls the size of Southdale operate in the United States and 100 in Canada, according to John Riordan, executive vice president of the International Council of Shopping Cen-

In 1985, malls and shopping centers accounted for $600 billion in sales, or 55 percent to 60 percent of all U.S. retail sales, excluding automotive sales, Riordan said.

Shopping mall construction peaked in the early 1970s, when 50 or 60 a year were built in the United States, Riordan said. Last year, only 18 malls were

"A large regional mall takes a lot of space." Riordan said. "There aren't that many sites left that are totally new sites.

Shopping malls also have become a cultural phenomenon, a place for teen-agers to hang out and senior citizens to exercise by walking laps in the enclosed area before shops open. Malls offer everything from weight-reduction classes to con-

Court: Texas teachers can do union business on school time

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas school districts may not ban teachers from discussing or participating in union business during school hours, the Supreme Court ruled Monday.

By a 6-2 vote, the justices upheld a ruling that struck down such a ban imposed by school officials in Garland, Texas

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justice Byron R. White voted to hear arguments in the case, but the court's majority ruled on the merits of the case after receiving written briefs only.

The decision is binding national precedent, just as if the justices had granted review, hear arguments and issued a full opinion.

Today's opinion was one sentence: "The judgment is affirmed. Justice Antonin Scalia, the court's newest member, did not participate in the case. The Garland Independent School District, which operates 46 schools and employs about 1,700 teachers in suburban Dallas, prohibited its teachers from discussing "employee organizations" business during their free time between 8 a.m. and 3:45 p.m.

The school district also prohibited teacher union representatives or teachers from using any school's mail system, bulletin boards or public address system to recruit members or conduct union business during those hours.

Those prohibitions were challenged in 1981 by representatives of the Texas State Teachers Asso-

A federal trial judge ruled for the school district officials. But the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled last December that the school district's policy, as applied, unconstitutionally interfered with freedom of speech and freedom of association.

The appeals court said the ban generally may be applied to outside union representatives only — not to teachers who use free time to conduct union business at their schools

The ban may not apply "to private teacher conversations and use of school media facilities by teachers employed in (Garland) schools as those media facilities are otherwise available to teachers for their personal messages," the appeals court said.

It noted that Garland teachers had been allowed to communicate with each other via the mail system or bulletin boards "on any subject, including purely personal matters, except for subjects relating to employee organizations.

BankAmerica is studying merger plan

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) -Directors of ailing BankAmerica Corp. say they are reviewing a $2.7 billion merger offer from First Interstate Bancorp.

The approximately $18-a-share proposal, unveiled late Monday, would join the nation's secondand ninth-largest bank companies.

BankAmerica, plagued by problem loans that have contributed to nearly $1 billion in losses during the past year, had $118.5 billion in assets at the start of the year, while Los Angeles-based First Interstate has used an aggressive expansion program to build its assets to $49 billion.

The announcement came on a day in which BankAmerica's board of directors appointed Frank N. Newman vice chairman and chief financial officer to replace John Poelker, who resigned last summer.

Newman had been executive vice president and chief financial officer of Wells Fargo & Co. in San Francisco.

San Francisco-based Bank-America also announced that lucrative severance packages have been approved for president Samuel Armacost and 10 other top executives.

School supplies go contemporary

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE

NEW YORK (AP) — You may have noticed in your trips to the discount store that school supplies aren't what they used to be. They've gone contemporary.

The covers of notebooks and folders - once limited to dull colors, landscapes, sports heroes, cute animals, and cartoon characters - now are festooned with zebra stripes; paint-like splatters of colors such as turquoise, hot pink and lavender; the fake marble look; and airbrush illustrations

'Fashion'' - through graphics has arrived in this $750 million industry. And the opportunity presents an interesting challenge to manufacturers, who must know what's hot and what's not.

That is no easy task, considering how finicky teen-agers can be and how the companies must begin developing their products 18 months to two years in advance.

"Kids have become the real trendsetters in our society," said Mark Rexroat, product development manager for Dayton, Ohiobased Mead Products, which calls itself the largest school supplies manufacturer and the only national distributor.

What's important to remember is that "students carry them (school supplies) under their arms and on their chest and they're making an outward statement about themselves," Rexroat said.

Three years ago, Mead launched its "Designer Series" after market surveys showed most junior and senior high school would buy a fashion product if they found the design they liked, Rexroat said.

"It's been quite a positive response," Rexroat said, declining to disclose sales. He also declined to discuss pricing strategy and gross margins.

Most school supplies are sold in the six-week, back-to-school period from late July to early September and in January and February, as the second half of the school year begins.

Which fashions have had staying power?

Tropical design, Rexroat said. What was a passing fad? Acidic, fluorescent colors, he LAREDO, Texas (AP) - From 1969 to mid-1971, Antonio Alcantar Jr. was a U.S. Marine in the demilitarized zone of Vietnam.

While in combat, he suffered napalm burns over his left side and was also wounded.

Honorably discharged with two purple hearts, he returned to Laredo where he spent two years doing odd jobs and going nowhere.

The ex-soldier was thinking about re-enlisting in the service when a friend living in Denver, Colo., encouraged Alcantar to come to Denver with him.

Once there, Alcantar decided to attend the University of Colorado at Boulder and join the United Mexican-American Students. The group was trying to set up an organization for Chicanos to obtain financial aid during a time of high prejudice toward Chicanos, he said.

He was in Denver for only a few months before tragedy struck.

"I really started getting into it after the accident in Denver. I just wanted to do some of my own self care. I felt helpless. Everyone wanted to do stuff for me, so I decided to do it for myself. I used to get mad at the doctors about it," he said.

Last August he made a step toward caring for himself and others — he obtained a licensed vocational nurse certificate from LJC.

The year-long program combines lectures and hands-on experience designed to prepare students to take on the primary care role of an LVN, says Ramiro Rodriguez, vocational couselor.

Students acquire on-the-job training at Mercy Hospital and Laredo State Center, Rodriguez said. Additionally, becoming an LVN has helped him try to forget his Vietnam ordeal.

'I was shell-shocked for a while. I'm still trying to adjust. In a way it helps you forget. The mere fact of seeing other people worse off than you are (helps). I lost one leg, but I had a patient that lost both," he said.

While working with the less fortunate has aided Alcantar in sorting through his troubling wartime memories, his physical handicap remains with

"We always worked as a team and not as an individual. Then, at the same time, I didn't expect any preferential treatment and I wasn't given any. That's what's bad, people see that you're handicapped and right away they want to feel sorry for

"It's hard, but knowing that there's something you're going for like graduation — it gives you a feeling of accomplishment," he said.

Computers protect gas revenue flow

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) - Improvements in electronic flow computers as an option for measuring gas well flows have enabled several area companies to replace mechanical circular chart and strip recorders with them, particularly at remote gas well and plant sites.

Warren Petroleum Co., a Tulsa-based division of Chevron USA Inc., has replaced approximately 300 mechanical recorders with flow computers in its western area covering eastern New Mexico and West and West Central Strip recordings from erratically flowing wells are difficult to integrate and even a small percentage of error can add up quickly, notes Wayne McDowell, western-area engineer for Warren in Tulsa.

"There is a variety of thought on how to integrate the erratic or banded chart. Nevertheless, you are always working with an estimate," McDowell says.

"On the other hand, EFCs eliminate integration time required by mechanical recorders and improve their accuracy of measurement by taking readings based on very short increments of time."

Fred Van Orsdol, manager of gas measurement for Warren, cites several key considerations in converting to a flow computer: ease of operation and servicing, reliablity, accuracy, audit trail data, security and user compati-

Of these considerations, accuracy is most critical. Measurement accuracy of the EFCs used by Warren has been verified by an outside testing consultant to plus or minus 0.5 per-

Flow rates are sampled at onesecond intervals by the EFC, which measures static and differential pressures and temperature. These readings are integrated 3,600 times an hour and stored in the unit's memory

McDowell notes that electronic metering avoids many of the problems inherent in mechanically driven circular or strip charts. "Pens freezing or running out of ink, charts snagging or tearing and clocks stopping can all cause an error in flow measurement and integration with a mechanical recorder," he

In addition, EFCs are designed for unattended operations, and do not require on-site data collection. Data can be transferred by radio or computer modem link or a direct cable connection.

Units equipped with radio retrieval equipment can generally be interrogated from up to 500 feet away, which makes the EFC suitable for geographically or topographically isolated sites.

Even without remote retrieval capabilities, well operators can reduce labor, because an EFC can hold up to 35 days of hourly data, while mechanical recorder charts must be changed every seven or eight days.

The event is sponsored by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce and proceeds will go to that organization. Tickets are $5 for adults. Children under 12 are admitted free if accompanied by an adult. Tickets will be on sale at the City Auditorium from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Included in this year's tour are two period homes: The Citadel, home of Dr. and Mrs. Malouf Abraham Jr., at 520 N. Nelson and the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Waterfield at 406 N. 6th; and the newer home of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Haygood at 923 Hillside.

THE CITADEL

When Dr. and Mrs. Malouf Abraham Jr. bought the old Baptist Church on New Year's Day 1977, announcing they would turn it into "The Citadel" — their fortress in the city, people thought they were crazy. That's why Mrs. Abraham put a sign out frong saying, "We think you're crazy,

The building had been erected in 1910 as the First Baptist Church. By 1977, however, it was an empty and abandoned. No one wanted it for anything except the scrap lumber and brick. The Abrahams saw the project as a real challenge to the imagination. They did all their own architectural and design work. More than three miles of new wiring was installed along with two full kitchens and five bathrooms.

Dr. and Mrs. Abraham would meet each morning with their large staff of workers and give the instructions for the day. While the local staff was working on the building, other artisans were working in across the country on pieces the Abrahams had commissioned such as the big hand woven wreath in the living room carpet, the massive front door or the beveled glass pieces or custom furniture.

Work has never really stopped for long on The Citadel. During the past six months, a balustrade has been built around the highest part of the roof. Local carpenters, Rob Brown and Robert Ezzell, have done that work. Dr. Abraham, who considers architecture one of his main hobbies, says he knows that Thomas Jefferson would agree with him that the building was totally dificient until the balustrade was added. Other additions are planned.

Every corner of this massive building and the carriage house the activities of this busy family. The three boys are usually over in the carriage house welding or in the basement re-loading shotgun shells. Dr. and Mrs. Abraham are more into planning large-scale social events in the big living room, such as Dr. Abraham's 40th birthday party when the entire Donna Fargo Show was presented in the living room. This house gets lots of use.

Many of the pieces in the house include family heirlooms such as the mother of pearl inlaid game table from Lenanon. Many pieces are antiques and art objects the Abrahams have found on their world travels, such as the mosaic cross blessed by Pope John Paul II as the Abrahams held it in their hands in Rome, or the grand piano played by Van Cliborn in Chicago, or Norman Rockwell's painting of First Day of School. Guides throughout the house can tell you about the items in each

The Citadel has been featured in four different magazines. Texas Homes called it "the Panhandle's most talked about

DICK & GAIL WATERFIELD HOME

Dick and Gail Waterfield's home was built in 1904 by John ching family and the Waterfield's great-aunt and uncle.

The block house was finished in three years at a builder's cost of $2 per day wages for three workers. Two years after completing of the home, landscaping and sidewalks were added. The date 1909 is inscribed in the sidewalk. still in use and in excellent condition. Also in the front sidewalk are the baby footprints of Nellie Jones (McMordie), daughter of John and Anna Jones, and of Labena Jones (Beard), a first cousin and playmate.

In 1909, the house was surrounded by native elms, two of which still stand at the entrance to the home.

The original floor plan remains, with the exception of a master bedroom and bath suite to the rear of the home in 1970. Most of the windows and all of the woodwork, fireplaces and doors are originals.

Staircase, fireplaces, doors, windows and woodwork were shipped, pre-fabricated, by rail from Kansas City. The first floor ceilings are 11 feet high. The house has 3,700 square feet of living space.

A double garage was added in the 1920s. The house is on a quarter-block lot located in the originWaterfields have lived in the home since 1967.

Country Victorian in style, the old home is traditionally decorated, a blend of old and new which includes antiques from the families of both Mr. and Mrs. Waterfield

The home of ranchers Wayne and Gayle Haygood, 923 Hillside, reflects the family's heritage and primary interest — raising prizewinning Hereford cattle. The brick modified ranch-style home was built about 12 years ago. The Haygoods have lived there for five years after returning to Texas from New Harmony, Ind., their home for 17 years:

Mrs. Haygood's parents, Lee George and the late Katie George, longtime Hemphill County ranchers, welcomed the younger generation back to Texas by establishing the Indian Mound Ranch

Western paintings by noted Panhandle artist Jack Sorenson hang over both of the large fireplaces in the Haygood home. Other art works include a Ben Konis Indian portrait and a Tom Gibson rodeo scene. Art and needlework by Mrs. Haygood and daughter Leslie are also displayed.

Earth tones are usted throughout the home, with accents of gray blue and other colors. A large tiled area near the entrance allows for display of live greenery

Several antique pieces, some purchased at farm auctions in Indiana and refinished for the Haygoods, show the simple Quaker lines of their origin. Off of the large living room is a den opening onto a lawn and garden area brightened during the summer months by colorful flower beds. In the den a large trophy shelf wall holds some of the many awards won over the years by the family's Hereford cattle.

Also on the ground floor are a formal dining room where family china, crystal and silver pieces are displayed; a large kitchen, master bedroom suite, an office, bedroom of teenage daughter Mary, and guest bath.

Son Lee's upstairs bedroom again reflects ranching interests with banners and trophies won by the young Hereford raiser. A quilt on the bed, embroidered by his two grandmothers, depicts Lee's varied interests and activi-

The second upstairs bedroom is more feminine, suitable for daughter Leslie, now married and living in Oklahoma.

A number of heirloom quilts and bedspreads as well as some of recent piecing, will be on display during the Tour of Homes.

DEAR ABBY: I wish to express my concern and dismay about two phrases that I hear and read more and more often in the media. I refer to the words used to inform the public about terrorist activity: "takes responsibility for," and even worse, "claims credit for." These phrases denote respectability for despicable acts.

In my opinion, such phrases as these are changing our feelings and attitudes toward terrorism in a very subtle but frightening manner. The Random House Dictionary defines terrorism as "the use of violence and threats to intimidate or coerce, especially for political purposes." To imply that the aforementioned is honorable, or something to be proud of, or claim credit for is, at best, ludicrous and, at a form of insidious brainwashing.

It would be far more factual and also testified before Rep. Claude D. accurate to state that a specific group or organization is "to blame" for acts of terrorism. One of the meanings of the verb "to blame" is "to censure or condemn.

This seems a more fitting description of terrorists and acts of terrorism. I would urge that people in the media give this serious thought, and make the appropriate changes when reporting terrorist activities to the public.

Largent, Joiner set pass-catching marks in Seahawks' 33-7 win over Chargers

By JIM COUR AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE (AP) - Steve Largent of the Seattle Seahawks got his record and was

The San Diego Chargers' Charlie Joiner got his record, too, but wore a sober expression.

"The record is all right, I guess," said Joiner. "It would have been better at home. I just wish it could have been under better circumstances.'

For Largent, the circumstances were excellent. He extended his remarkable streak of catching a pass in 128 straight regular season games in a 33-7 Seahawks' victory over the Chargers before a Monday night national television audience and a Kingdome crowd of 63,287

The lopsided Seahawks' win gave them a 4-1 start while the Chargers suffered their fourth consecutive defeat to drop to

"If I could have written it. I guess I couldn't have written it better unless it was throw a touchdown pass to Byron Franklin," said Largent on the night he erased Harold Carmichael's name from the NFL

The 11-year veteran from University of Tulsa caught four passes for 78 yards, including a 15-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter as Seattle overcame a 7-6 halftime deficit with a 17-point barrage. He also threw an 18yard pass to Franklin on the second play of the fourth quarter to set up Krieg's third touchdown throw of the game, a 2-yarder to Eric Lane.

Joiner, the second-oldest player in the NFL, made four catches for 39 yards to go past Don Maynard into first place in all-time receiving yardage with 11,855 in his 18-year professional career, 21 more than Maynard's old mark. He now has 728 career catches, also an NFL record.

Carmichael, who caught passes in 127 consecutive regular season games with Philadelphia from 1972-80, watched Largent's feat from the sidelines and took part in a brief on-field ceremony after Largent's record catch at 4:16 of the second quarter.

"It's a tough record to break because you've got to stay healthy," said Carmichael.

For the Seahawks, who now have a short week to prepare for their Sunday game with the Raiders in Los Angeles, their 4-1 record matches their 4-1 start under Chuck Knox in 1984 when they went 12-4.

"I think we probably played our best football of the year, especially in the second half,' said Knox. "We're very happy for Steve Largent to get his record on a night like this when our team won.

San Diego, which hasn't made the playoffs since 1982, suffered its ninth consecutive defeat on the road and Chargers' head Coach Don Coryell said it was an especially tough

"It was a real shock to all of us because our team was really fired up and ready to play,'

The Chargers beat Miami 50-28 in their season opener against Miami, but have averaged less than 14 points in their last four games. The Seahawks went ahead to stay, 9-7, 4:24 into the second half on Norm Johnson's 54yard field goal, his third of four, and they broke open the contest with a pair of Krieg touchdown passes in a 13second span in the third quarter after recovering two Lionel James' fumbles.

The first fumble recovery was by Eugene Robinson after a hit by Kenny Easley after James gained six yards. The Seahawks scored three plays later on a 46-yard pass from Krieg to Franklin at 5:56 of the third quarter.

James fumbled the ensuing kickoff after being tackled by rookie Patrick Hunter and Lane fell on the ball on the San Diego 15. On the next play, Krieg and Largent combined on their 15-yard touchdown pass at 6:09 of the third Krieg completed 21 of 35 passes for 284 yards with three touchdown passes and two interceptions while 14-year veteran Dan Fouts was 20 of 31 for 231 yards with no touchdowns and three interceptions.

Johnson, who equalled a club record he shared with Efren Herrera with his 54-yard field goal, also booted 29, 30 and 20-yarders to tie the Seahawks' team record he shared with Herrera

Roger's Ready Game I of AL playoffs tonight

BOSTON (AP) - Roger Clemens, who led the major leagues with 24 victories this year, says he's "always ready to go out there and pitch" and tonight will be no exception when the Boston Red Sox take on the California Angels in Game 1 of the American League playoffs.

"My arm's 100 percent," Clemens replied to questions about the right elbow bruise suffered when he was hit by a line drive last Wednesday night. "I'm going to go right after people. It's up to me to go out there and go get 'em.

"I've pitched my share of big games this year and I'll be trying to do the same as always: take the momentum away from the other team. I want to establish momentum for us, get our guys in the dugout thinking about hitting.

California's Mike Witt, who was 18-10 — 1-2 against Boston also said he would try to pitch his normal game.

"I don't worry about left field (the short wall), who's up or whatever," the 6-foot-7 right-hander

"I'm going out there to win, even though I lost two games here this year. I've pitched well here, but the wins haven't come. I just want to go out there and pitch the same way."

Witt downplayed the matchup against Clemens, who was 3-0 against the Angels during the regular season.

"My thinking is that I'm not facing Roger Clemens," Witt said. "I feel I'm facing the Boston hitters." Clemens had similar comments when asked about facing 40-year-old slugger Reggie Jackson, who has earned the title "Mr. October" for his postseason 'Reggie is in a class by himself," Clemens said. "He's Mr. October and he'll be a major force for them. But I can't think of just him. I have nine guys I have to concentrate on.

Jackson, who hit one homer this year against Clemens, has mixed feelings about facing the hard-throwing Boston righthander who lost only four games while compiling a league-leading 2.48 earned run average this

Both teams come into the playoffs with five-game winning streaks. The Mets won 14 of their last 18 games to tie the 1975 Cincinnati Reds with 108 victories, the most since divisional play started 17 years ago.

The Astros won 15 of their last 19 games for 96 victories, a club record.

Astros Manager Hal Lanier knows the Mets will carry the favorites' role, but he's come to feel comfortable as the underdog.

"They're probably saying in New York that the Mets are already in the World Series, Lanier said. "But that doesn't bother me. In fact, I hope we are the underdogs. That would be nothing new.

"I couldn't be more ready to pitch," Scott said. "I get nervous before every game I pitch. I'm not there yet.

Ripken named O's boss

BALTIMORE (AP) - From the first day he managed a minorleague team in 1961, Cal Ripken Sr. had aspirations of taking over the Baltimore Orioles one day.

The 25-year-old dream culminated Monday when Baltimore's third base coach was given a oneyear contract to replace Earl Weaver, who resigned on Sunday for the second time in four years.

Ripken, 50, is the father of Baltimore shortstop, Cal Jr., and the father-son, manager-player combination will be only the third in history. The others were Connie and Earle Mack of the Philadelphia A's and Yogi and Dale Berra of the New York Yankees.

Another Ripken son, Billy, was an All-Star second baseman in Class AA Southern League in 1986, and he will be invited to training camp next spring.

Ripken's initial goal was to play in the major leagues as a catcher, but a sore arm forced a change in career plans.

"I wanted to manage the Orioles, but it wasn't an obsession," said Ripken, who was bypassed twice during his 11 years as a coach before getting the job. "I waited, and it's my turn now

"I thought I had a shot in 1982," he said, "but I didn't worry when I didn't get it. I wasn't antsy then, and I wasn't this year.'

Joe Altobelli got the job after Weaver's first retirement and he managed the Orioles to a World Series championship. When Altobelli was fired on June 14, 1985, Weaver was lured back out of retirement.

This time, Ripken was chosen over fellow Baltimore coach Frank Robinson, who had previous major-league managing experience with Cleveland and San Francisco. General Manager Hank Peters said Ripken and Robinson were the only candidates interviewed in person, although he talked to others by

There was also concern over the conditions of quarterback Danny White and running back Tony Dorsett.

White, who missed the Denver game with a pulled thigh muscle, and Dorsett, who has a sprained ankle and knee on the same left leg, are also questionable.

Scott was injured in a collision with teammate Ron Fellows in the third quarter.

Scott said after the Denver game he was determined to play with a cast on but doctors nixed that idea. The Cowboys will have to make a roster move to get another defensive back. They only recently released rookie Cornell Gowdy, who could be brought back since he wasn't claimed.

The Cowbovs were so short in the defensive line that they put up only a three-man rush against Denver quarterback John Elway.

Mark Tuinei, who had moved to the offensive line in the offseason, played in White's defensive right tackle spot although he hadn't practiced at the position. "I had a lot of pain and we'll just have to see how it goes," said All-Pro Randy White. "I hope to play against Washington but you can't tell with a pulled hamstring. They are tricky. Dallas could be forced to activate Don Smerek this week. Smerek has been out a month with a severely sprained ankle.

AP ranks Stanford, Mississippi in latest top 20 football poll *

By The Associated Press

While there was no surprise in the continued ranking of Miami as No. 1, the inclusion of Stanford and Mississippi State among the Top Twenty is a rarity to be sure.

"It shows us that Stanford football is heading in the right direction," Coach Jack Elway said Monday after his Cardinal made The Associated Press' Top Twenty for the first time in five years. "We knew at the start of the year that we would be good, have a winning season and possibly go to a bowl game."

Elway said beating Texas in Stanford's season opener was a confidence-builder.

"Its nice to be ranked and thought of in that manner, but really we can't worry about that right now," Mississippi State's Rockey Felker said of his Bulldogs, also ranked for the first time since 1981. "I hope that at the end of the year we will be somewhere in the rankings. And that will tell us what kind of a year we had."

Stanford, 4-0 after beating San Diego State 17-10 Saturday, entered the rankings at No. 18, one spot ahead of 4-1 Mississippi State, a 34-17 winner over Memphis State. Clemson, 3-1, also got on the board as No. 20 after beating The Citadel 24-0.

Miami, which reached the top of the rankings last week after beating Oklahoma, routed Northern Illinois 34-0 for its fifth consecutive victory. The Hurricanes received 55 of 58 first-place votes and 1,155 of a possible 1,160 points from a nationwide panel of sports

Second-ranked Alabama also raised its record to 5-0 by whipping Notre Dame 28-10. The Crimson Tide received two first-place votes and 1,084 points. Last week, also with 58 voters participating, Miami led 56-1 in first-place votes and 1,156-1,058 in points.

The first nine teams were unchanged from a week ago. No. 3 Nebraska edged South Carolina 27-24 and received 988 points while fourth-ranked Michigan got 959 after downing Wisconsin 34-17.

* No. 5 Penn State, which knocked off previously unbeaten Rutgers 31-6, received 937 points and the only other first-place vote.

Oklahoma rebounded from its loss to Miami by crushing Kansas State 56-10 and received 867 points to remain No. 6. Auburn stayed seventh with 828 points by blasting Western Carolina 55-6, Arkansas held onto eighth place with 726 points by whipping Texas Christian 34-17 and Southern California remained No. 9 with 709 points thanks to a 35-21 triumph over Oregon.

Arizona was idle, but slipped from 10th to 11th, exchanging spots with Iowa, a 24-21 winner over Michigan State 24-21. The Hawkeyes got 614 points.

The 12th through 17th positions were filled by Washington, Baylor, Texas A&M, Arizona State, LSU and North Carolina State.

Last week, the Second Ten was Iowa, Washington, Baylor, Texas A&M, UCLA, Arizona State, Michigan State, LSU, Fresno State and North Carolina State.

St. Louis Montreal

HOUSTON (AP) — Jerry Glanville spent Monday looking for silver linings and pluses.

He says he found some.

"We're fortunate to be in a division that's not going to be a sprint, it's going to be a marathon," Glanville said.

"Whoever has the most mental toughness and hangs in there has a chance to win it."

The Oilers have lost four straght games, including Sunday's 24-13 heartbreaker to Detroit despite outgaining the Lions in total yards 454 to 234 and a 398-yard passing performance by quarterback Warren Moon.

"Your errors are magnified and you have to hunt for the pluses," Glanville said. "A good coach hunts up the pluses.

"I've been in a lot of games where we won the game but made a lot of errors. The errors weren't magnified because we won."

Glanville couldn't overlook one minus. The Oilers are still losing the battle of giveaways and takeaways.

"We took it away yesterday but we had to give it right back," Glanville said "I see us being a

"We just have to do a few more things right."

The Oilers turned good plays into bad ones.

Oiler safety Bo Eason returned an interception to the Detroit 35 yard line but it was wiped out by a roughing call against Avon Riley.

Defensive end William Fuller apparently had stopped a Detroit scoring drive by recovering a fumble at the Oiler three. But Detroit kept the ball and scored because Doug Smith was offsides. "Some people say we're a terri-

The Oilers gained 56 yards rushing on 24 carries. Moon was the team's leading rusher with 24 yards, including 19 yards on one scramble in the closing minutes.

"I don't think you can be satisfied with the way anyone is playing," Glanville said. "We'll meet with each of our players and show them how they could have helped us win the game."

The Oiler return to the Astrodome Sunday to host defending Super Bowl champion Chicago, 5-0. The Bears shut out Minnesota 23-0 Sunday.

Carson County 4-H'ers are honored at banquet

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

PANHANDLE — The awards presented at the annual Carson County 4-H Club Gold Star Banquet Monday reflected the variety that today's 4-H has to offer

The traditional projects of livestock showing, food preparation and sewing were well represented. But the scope has now broadened to include electricity, dog obedience, child development, consumer awareness and dealing with alcoholism. And the traditional barriers between "boys' projects" and "girl's projects" was almost unseen.

Take, for example, the winners of the Gold Star. Award, Karen Wyatt of the White Deer-Skellytown 4-H Club and Taff Tyler of the Gold Star 4-H Club. The Gold Star winners are judged by leaders living outside of Carson County and are presented with a $100 scholarship.

Wyatt, the 16-year-old daughter of Dean and Jackie Wyatt of White Deer, earned the award through her work with livestock judging and showing, planning the annual county Electric Camp and the Foods Show and as a county district delegate to the State 4-H Club Roundup. Wyatt also earned a seven-year pin and a special awards pin for her work with sheep. This year, Wyatt's sheep have earned Grand Champion at the White Deer Stock Show and the Carson County Stock Show. Karen Rayl, recipient of the Rosemary Detten Award, has been active in foods & nutrition and riflery in her/six years in the Gold Star 4-H Club. The 15-year-old daughter of Albert and Sheila Rayl of Panhandle, Karen placed first in the Carson County Favorite Foods Show and a Blue Award in the District Show. She has an expert ranking in riflery and attended the State 4-H Congress, Leadership Camp and the Electric Camp.

Lauri Meaker, a nine-year veteran of the Gold Star 4-H Club, received the Teen Leader Award. The Teen Leader is chosen by members of the County 4-H Council. The 17-year-old daughter of Diane Meaker of Panhandle, she also was emcee for the banquet. Among the activities Meaker has been active in were the Farm Bureau Citizenship Seminar, the 4-H State Round-up, the Favorite Foods Show, various stock shows, club leadership and photography.

Also honored were 49 county 4-Hers in the 1986 Parade of Champions. Award recipients from the Groom Wings 4-H Club were Loretta Kuehler for food and nutrition and Katie Fraser for food and

Rare operation Public Notices done on fetus

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - A team of surgeons seeking to correct a fetus' urinary tract defect opened the mother's womb and pulled out the baby's legs to perform a bladder operation.

The baby was only the third to undergo openwomb surgery, and, at age 1 year, is the longest survivor of such an operation, according to surgeons at the University of California at San

The operating team was headed by Dr. Michael Harrison, who in 1981 helped pioneer surgery within the womb.

Harrison said the latest operation, which involved actually opening up the womb, partially removing the fetus and then returning it to the womb, took place quietly last year on an unidentified Texas woman.

Harrison said fetal blockage of urine was preventing the formation of amniotic fluid in the mother's womb, threatening to collapse her uterus and preventing the normal growth of the fetal

The operating team opened the uterus and moved the legs and lower body of the fetus to the outside of the womb. The upper part of the fetus' body remained attached to the placenta inside the The surgeons made an incision in the fetus' abdomen, created an opening in the bladder and stitched a flap of the bladder to the abdomen so the urine could drain without passing through the obstructed urethral canal. Harrison then returned the fetus to its proper position and closed the uterus.

The infant, called "Baby Mitchell," was born in a Texas hospital nine weeks later.

Harrison said the birth was normal. Last week. the surgeon closed the flap in Mitchell's bladder and removed the obstruction blocking the urethra so the baby could urinate normally. Harrison also corrected the child's undescended testicles.

McFadden gets change of venue

GILMER, Texas (AP) - The central Texas city of Belton has been designated as the site for a Nov. 3 trial for Jerry Walter McFadden, charged in the strangulation slaying of a Hawkins teen-ager.

State District Judge Virgil Mulanax agreed to allow the change of venue in light of intense publicity surrounding the case.

McFadden's attorney, Vernard Solomon, said Monday the change wouldn't be completely established until he questions potential jurors in Belton. If Solomon's voir dire proceedings turn up prejudiced candidates he will ask for another change

"I would say that half the state of Texas knows my client escaped from jail," he said. "Regardless of whether he was guilty or not they think they know he did it. That obviously prejudices their opinion.

Solomon has said he doubts if the trial will be held in 1986. He says there is too much evidence scattered between Dallas and Gilmer by lawmen, that still has to be viewed. He predicts the case will go to trial early next year.

Solomon said moving farther away from the Hawkins community will help his client but the change of venue can be a hindrance, also.

"I know how the people of East Texas think and feel," Solomon said.

McFadden is charged in the strangulation death of Suzanne Harrison, 18, who disappeared along with three friends while returning from Lake Hawkins May 4.

McFadden is also a suspect in the deaths of Harrison's companions — Gena Turner, 20, and Bryan Boone, 19. — who were abducted along with Har-

eisurely floats perfect for city slickers

By DORALISA PILARTE Associated Press Writer

Park reservable frame recess

RIOGRANDE VILLAGE, Texas (AP) - For city slickers with their hearts bent on communing with the wild, rafting on the Rio Grande in this remote part of West Texas at Big Bend National Park is just the ticket.

You won't experience hair-raising, heartstopping, white water as the river winds its way through the desert, marking the boundary between Texas and Mexico. That kind of excitement is farther north in Taos, N.M., and southern Colorado, where the Rio Grande begins.

Here, the agenda consists of leisurely floats between sheer cliff walls 1,800 feet high, gourmet meals cooked over coals under starry Southwestern skies and vintage wines out of tin cups while squatting in the brush.

Any raft trip, though, is sure to offer some degree of excitement.

On a recent three-day, two-night trip that ended at this camping village at Big Bend National Park. one incident broke the gentle pace punctuated by

'No accidents, but there's been upsets at the Rockslide," said Steve Harris, president of the Terlingua, Texas,-based Far Flung Adventures. "It's where the canyon wall came off and it's 300 yards of rocks. You have to scout it and know where you're going and not enter blind alleys. It may be impossible to get out." The Tight Squeeze at Mariscal Canyon can get rafters in a tight spot. Two boulders, each about the size of a van, block the river, leaving a space in between just wide enough for a raft to pass through. The trick is that the opening is at an angle, the water flows with great force and the raft guide must maneuver quickly and expertly to avoid getting smashed against the rocks

Trips can be as short as half a day or as long as a week. Many customers are wet behind the ears when it comes to rafting, said Beth Garcia of Big Bend River Tours, with headquarters in Lajitas. Texas. For them, she recommends the half-day

"Some people are afraid of the water, or it's their first time," she said. "We get mostly novices. The real experienced people go on their own."

Rafting season starts in March, when the cactus blooms and the weather turns warmer. September is a slack month, but business picks up in October and November and some companies have a Christ-rest, including tents, first-aid kits, life jackets and drinking water.

Those who think a trip to the outdoors means eating roots and small insects will find a new meaning to the concept of "roughing it."

"A lot of people think they're going to get freeze-dried food," said Ms. Garcia.

The smells of fresh-brewed coffee and sizzling bacon next to the river make even a late sleeper want to crawl out of a snuggly tent at dawn. When the desert sun reaches its highest point in the sky, rafts are beached and a folding table is spread on the banks with just-made guacamole, salads, lunch meats and crackers.

At the end of the day, rafters sit on rocks, splash their toes in the cool water and consider chucking a city job to become a river guide. Texas-sized Tbone steaks grill over a fire, the guides open bottles of Bordeaux and prepare black forest cake for de-

"You get a real cohesiveness on the river," said Ms. Garcia. "People who don't know each other become friends. It's because you're all having a different experience, together.'

Old library now doubles

as museum VINLAND, Kan. (AP) - On a recent Sunday afternoon Martha Smith gave visitors a tour of the one-room Coal Creek Library.

"This building was built in 1900 for the library. These are the original shelves ... The green window shades kept the books from fading ... That's the original Mrs. Smith said.

The Coal Creek Library was established in 1859 — even before Kansas became a state - and is believed to be the oldest subscription library in continuous use in the state. Mrs. Smith, whose ancestors founded the library, has served as its librarian for most of the last 60 years.

On Nov. 22, 1859, the Coal Creek Social Library Association held its first meeting to draw up a constitution and bylaws. The handwritten minutes are still in the Articles written over the years give slightly different versions of the library's beginning. One report says that two 17-year-old daughters of pioneers from New England became bored with Kansas farm life and decided to start a literary society.

Mrs. Smith, 80, is the greatniece of George Cutter, who is listed as one of the founders of the association and served as its first librarian before turning the job over to his sister, Sarah, a few months later.

For the first 40 years, the library and social events were held in the homes of its librarians. For a time, the books were kept in the Grange Hall.

Coal Creek later became known as Vinland. At the turn of the century, arguments were heated, historians say, over whether the library's name should be changed to the "Vin-land Library." The traditionalists won and the sign outside still reads "Coal Creek Library."

Library membership peaked between 1880 and 1910, when about 50 people used the facility. At times during the library's early years, Mrs. Smith said, membership exceeded the number of books. "They had to draw lots."

Five of the library's first 10 books are still on display under glass. Many of the library's first 100 books remain on the shelves.

After a succession of librarians, Mrs. Smith took over the job in 1926. Recently she ran across a card showing that she was paid $15. "I don't know if that was for the year. Probably was."

Her duties went beyond checking books in and out and included taking care of the building and the wood fire.

She gave up the job in 1944 while raising her son. During her 12-year leave, there was no official librarian. But the key to the library was kept at the Vinland grocery store and borrowers helped themselves.

In May 1956, Mrs. Smith and some assistants again set regular hours for opening the library. She became the sole librarian again

The library opens in April each year but closes before Thanksgiving because of the cold. Funding for the library is meager. And books are no longer purchased.

"We get donations and we used to have fines. But we don't fine them any more," Mrs. Smith said. Likewise, the library's membership fee was eliminated

"In the summertime the children couldn't borrow from the school libraries," she said. "And they weren't borrowing here at 10 cents a month. So I said just come and get 'em. So they would read and read. Being here in the vil-lage they didn't have much to

But now, Mrs. Smith said, there are few children left in Vinland, ugh one family occasionally ecks out an armload of chilen's books.
