Group to attack police shakeup

Hart 'has everybody scared'

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

A group of Pampa residents are hoping that the City Commission will throw out a controversial Police Department study and that City Manager Bob Hart will confess to what they feel has been a mistake on his part.

The Citizens for Better Government group met Monday night to discuss disagreements with Hart's handling of a consultant's report that led to the recent demotion of former police Capt. Roy Denman to lieutenant and a decrease in the officer's base pay.

The local lobby group's meeting Monday provided a preview to tonight's City Commission meeting.

Ken Elliott, a member of the better government group, had asked the City Commission to discuss the consulting firm's report.

Listed on the commission's agenda for its regular meeting at 6 p.m. today at City Hall is Elliott's request for commissioners to consider the management study of the Police Department conducted by Stephens Management Consultants Inc. of Canyon.

Elliott also has asked the commissioners to review the city's personnel policy manual and employee appeal procedures.

The citizens group had planned to take an official stance on the Police Department issues at their meeting Monday at the Western Sizzlin' restaurant, but no quorum of officers was present to permit an official vote.

Instead, the meeting became an informal session in which members and guests voiced their gripes, complaints and hopes concerning Hart's management.

Elliott said his main goal is to convince the commission "to take a hard look at the study" and "throw it out." Elliott also said he hopes the commissioners will reverse Denman's demotion.

"I have more faith now in our City Commission than I do our city manager," Elliott said Monday, adding that he feels the commissioners would be more likely to admit mistakes and correct them than would Hart.

Hart

Group member Don Reed agreed, saying he feels the commissioners "are good, honest men" willing to admit to mistakes and change course.

Much of the discussion centered around the validity of the consulting firm and its report and around Hart's ability to deal with city employees.

In addition to Denman's demotion, the consultant listed about 15 recommendations designed to improve efficiency at the Police Department.

Group member Floye Christensen said Monday that she contacted the state attorney general's office, but that the representative said he couldn't give any legal views about the consulting firm and its study. However, the spokesman did suggest some questions for Christensen to ask the firm, she said.

Christensen said she was able to talk with the consulting firm's president, Bill Stephens, to ask him the suggested questions concerning the firm's backgrounds in business, law enforcement, management and administration of employees.

She said Stephens, a professor at Amarillo College, claimed experience in management through work with an insurance firm for a number of years. But he admitted he had little or no experience in business, law enforcement or administration, she claimed.

"So he fell well short, the way I look at it," Christensen said.

Christensen said Stephens said the firm had been hired not to evaluate the Police Department's law enforcement methods but its paperwork and morale.

Christensen criticized the firm's credentials and methods of study, saying the consultant compared Pampa city management only with cities of similar size.

Others group members criticized the report's recommendation that Denman, who heads one of three divisions in the department, be demoted instead of promoting the other two division supervisors.

But most of the group's discussion seemed to center around Hart's managerial capabilities, especially his relations with his employees and "lack of personal finesse."

Many expressed disappointment with the way Hart treated Denman's demotion in public statements, claiming he overreacted to Denman's statements made to The Pampa News.

"Mr. Hart handled it poorly," Elliott said. Elliott said Denman's statements weren't "that bad," but that Hart made sarcastic comments to a newspaper reporter about Denman and the situation. "Those statements are not a fitting public statement" to make about an employee, Elliott said.

Inflation running at 1.5 percent annual rate

WASHINGTON (AP)—Consumer prices rose 0.2 percent last month as higher new car prices offset a dip in gasoline prices, the government reported today.

The increase in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index followed a 0.3 percent rise in September and meant that, over the last 12 months, prices have risen at an annual rate of 1.5 percent.

The October increase, which is seasonally adjusted, would amount to an annual inflation rate of 1.8 percent if last month's rate held for 12 months.

For all of 1985, consumer price advanced 3.8 percent. Analysts expect this year's increase, once the November and December figures are added to the tabulation, to be about 1.7 percent.

While this would be the lowest inflation rate since a 7.2 increase in 1964, analysts said they expect inflation to rise to 4 percent or more in 1987 now that the precipitous drop in world oil prices has run its course, economists are predicting.

Gasoline prices fell 2.4 percent in October, after a 2.5 percent drop the previous month. Such prices have fallen 30.8 percent so far this year, with most of the drop being recorded in the early months of 1986.

New automobile prices rose 0.8 percent last month after a 0.2 percent increase in September.

The higher prices for new cars were largely the result of the introduction of more expensive 1987 models following inventory-liquidation sales on 1986 models that included low-cost financing packages.

Financing charges, after dropping 6.1 percent in September, rose 3.4 percent in October.

The government has said that the average new 1987 model cost $776 more than a similarly equipped 1986 version of the same vehicle.

Overall food costs in October increased 0.3 percent after rising 0.4 percent in the previous month. Grocery store prices were up 0.4 percent; restaurant prices gained 0.2 percent.

The largest increase in grocery prices was a 0.9 percent boost in the price of fruits and vegetables.

Both the dip in gasoline prices and the rise in automobile prices had already showed up in the Producer Price Index for October, which registered an overall boost for the month of 0.3 percent.

Analysts say that this year's inflation figures, which have been edging up since April, mask the fact that prices of nearly all goods and services — apart from those directly related to energy — have been rising steadily throughout the year at about the same 3 to 4 percent pace they recorded last year.

The government provided these additional specifics on October price activity:

■ Fuel oil prices declined 1.4 percent while natural gas costs rose 0.9 percent.

■ Beef prices gained 1.5 percent as pork prices dipped 0.2 percent and poultry costs dropped 0.7 percent.

■ Housing costs were unchanged.

■ Medical care costs were up 0.6 percent.

negotiations with the United States and receipt of U.S. weapons.

The public disagreement came during an unusual congressional hearing Monday even as Reagan was saying he would not heed the advice of critics and supporters by admitting he made a mistake when he sent arms to the radical Moslem nation. He also said he would not fire some of his staff.

"I'm not firing anybody," Reagan told reporters during a picture-taking session in the Oval Office. "I didn't make a mistake."

Reagan met with his top foreign policy advisers Monday to discuss ways to end the controversy which erupted two weeks ago when the secret negotiations became public.

Hostage was a spy

WASHINGTON (AP)—William Buckley, one of the Americans kidnapped in Lebanon, was the chief of the CIA's Beirut operations at the time of his 1984 capture, The Washington Post said today.

The CIA tried for a year to find Buckley, 58, and his reported death after torture led President Reagan in 1985 to order intensified efforts to find and free the American hostages, the newspaper reported.

The Post, quoting knowledgeable U.S. government sources, said Buckley was one of the agency's leading experts on terrorism whose capture prompted the CIA to spend a "small fortune" on informants, satellite photographs and other measures in hopes of finding him and the other American hostages.

After torture and a long period of medical neglect, Buckley died in Beirut, apparently in June 1985.

He also expressed concern about Hart's warnings that Denman, Police Chief J.J. Ryzman and others could face disciplinary action and even firing for going to the media with complaints.
Elliott said he feels Hart was making a public threat against his employees, something that could certainly create some fear and uncertainty among city employees. Such a stance serves to cut off input from employees to the city manager, Elliott said.
"He has everybody scared of him," Elliott said. Another man said he has heard from at least two city employees "that they don't enjoy talking with (Hart)," since Hart reportedly seems to talk down to them and seems unwilling to listen to disputes or disagreements with his policies or decisions. Consequently, too many "are scared of their jobs and afraid to cross him" or voice objections to any of Hart's decisions.
"(Hart) is sorely lacking in personal finesse," the group member said Monday.
Another member claimed Hart is acting too dictatorial, expecting his decisions and policies to be implemented "the way he wants" without any questioning. The complainer implied Hart "even has the commissioners scared of him" since "they

Deal

John C. Whitehead was criticizing Reagan during a House Foreign Affairs Committee hearing. It was the first of what are likely to be a series of congressional hearings into the U.S.-Iranian dealings.
"I don't like to have to differ with my president, but I believe there is some evidence of Iranian involvement with terrorists," said Whitehead, the No. 2 State Department official. He did not spell out what that evidence was.
Later he said, "There continue to be terrorist acts in Iran of the type that we find to be reprehensible."
White House deputy press secretary Dan Howard said there would be no comment on Whitehead's testimony.
Those Americans are Frank H. Reed, director of a private school in Beirut; Joseph J. Cicippio, acting controller of the American University in that city; and Edward A. Tracy, a writer.

always vote the way he wants them to."
Reed expressed some reservations that those statements may be too harsh. Reed said he has been able to talk with Hart and express differences of opinion "and then we can sit down and talk about them." He said he has found Hart "to be a reasonable, intelligent man."
But, another member told Reed that "you're not one of his employees."
Christensen said people need to get together and let the city manager — whether Hart or anyone else — "know that we don't like our city employees so scared they're afraid to voice any complaints."
But though many group members had obvious disputes with Hart or even dislike him, others expressed hopes that Hart could become an even better city manager.
One member noted that Hart had come before the citizens' group to discuss the problems with driveway pipe removals a couple of years ago. "He listened to us, and we got them put back in, something that cost the city a lot of money," the man said.
Said Elliott: "If he can admit he's wrong on this — and I think most of Pampa thinks he is — then he can move forward."

Press, sent an open letter to Reagan expressing "my support and deepest gratitude" for his efforts in behalf of the captives.
"You placed the lives and freedom of American citizens over all other considerations," Peggy Say wrote the president.

In Philadelphia, WCAU-TV reported that Drew Lewis, former secretary of transportation, was offered Regan's job but turned it down.
But Whitehead, who said he was speaking with the knowledge and support of Secretary of State George Shultz, said there is evidence Iran is linked to the kidnapping of three Americans.

National security adviser resigns over Iran deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today announced the resignation of his national security adviser as his attorney general disclosed that as much as $30 million in money collected from Iran for arms was transferred to forces in Central America, presumably Contra rebels.
Attorney General Edwin Meese III, ordered by Reagan to conduct an inquiry into the Iranian arms sale, said that investigation disclosed another White House official, Lt. Col. Oliver North, was responsible for diverting from $10 million to $30 million to the "forces in Central America."
National security adviser John Poindexter, a vice admiral in the Navy, asked for reassignment and North was "relieved" of his duties, Reagan announced before turning a White House briefing over to Meese.

North was a principal deputy to Poindexter.
Meese said $10 million to $30 million obtained from the sale of weapons to Iran had been diverted to the Contra rebels, presumably at the direction of Lt. Col. North.
"The only person who precisely knew about this was Col. North," Meese said.
Meese said Poindexter, who has been in his post slightly less than a year, was generally familiar with North's actions, but not in detail.
Asked whether North faced possible legal action, Meese said, "We are presently looking into the legal aspects of it as to whether there was any criminality involved."

Gorbachev seeks closer Soviet-Indian relationship

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, making his first Asian trip, arrived today for a four-day visit to solidify ties with India and push his proposal for an Asian-Pacific security arrangement.
Gorbachev and his wife, Raisa, were greeted by Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and his Italian-born wife, Sonia.
Women in traditional costumes scattered flower petals as the Gorbachevs walked along a red carpet to a canopied stand for welcoming addresses.
Two Indian schoolgirls presented them flowers. Gorbachev hugged one of the young greeters, but quickly removed a garland of red flowers she had placed around his neck.
Gorbachev was greeted by a 21-gun salute and reviewed an honor guard made up of 150 men from India's army, navy and air force.

pressing problems of Asia and the Pacific Ocean in the context of efforts to prevent nuclear war and create a healthier international environment," Gorbachev said.
Posters of Gorbachev and his wife Raisa, traveling with him, were hung along with portraits of Gandhi on the 10-mile route from the airport to the Presidential Palace, where the Gorbachevs will stay. At the palace, he was saluted by Indian troops on camels and horses.
Police said they took into custody 40 Afghan refugees who tried to approach Gorbachev's route into the city to protest the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.
In December, 1980, a year after the Soviet Union sent troops into Afghanistan, violent demonstrations by Afghan refugees forced a sudden change in the route for the late Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.
India and the Soviet Union have had a treaty of friendship since 1971, signed by Gandhi's mother Indira Gandhi, who was assassinated in October 1982.
India is one of the most powerful of the 101 countries in the non-aligned movement, and friendly to both the United States and the Soviet Union. Gandhi's first foreign trip as foreign minister was to Moscow in May, 1985, and his second to the United States.

"We hail you, Mr. Secretary General, as a crusader for peace," Gandhi told Gorbachev in a welcoming statement that noted Soviet contributions to India's economy. "You respect our non-alignment. We respect your consistent commitment to peace."
Gorbachev said the Soviet-Indian relationship has always been "a factor in international stability and peace."
"We shall focus on Soviet-Indian relations and Filipino peace talks planned

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The government said substantial progress was made today in peace talks with Communist rebels, and officials on both sides said an announcement was imminent.
"They (the negotiators) seem to be rejoicing," said a source close to the negotiators. "It looks like they've got a cease-fire."
Negotiators for President Corazon Aquino's government and the Communists have met intermittently since August. On Sunday, after the military foiled a coup inspired in part by opposition to her peace policies, Mrs. Aquino set a deadline of Nov. 30 for a truce to be reached.
Arno Sanidad, a lawyer for the National Democratic Front, which has negotiated on behalf of the rebels, said after today's eight-hour session, "Both parties agreed they will make an announcement, the final announcement." He refused to elaborate.

The front, a Communist-dominated umbrella group, is negotiating on behalf of the New People's Army, which has carried out a 17-year insurgency.
Maris Diokno, a staff member for the government team, said an announcement would be made tomorrow but gave no further details.
Today's meeting was the first between the two sides since the National Democratic Front suspended the talks two weeks ago. The front said then it felt unsafe after the murder of leftist labor leader Rolando Olalia.
Leftists blamed the murder on Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, who has criticized Mrs. Aquino as not being tough enough against the rebels. Mrs. Aquino fired Enrile on Sunday after the coup was foiled.

Carson panel tables requested DPS office

PANHANDLE — Carson County commissioners on Monday discussed but took no action on a request from the Texas Department of Public Safety for a Groom office.
County Clerk Sue Persons said the DPS has requested office space, a copy machine and a secretary in Groom, where three troopers are stationed.
The troopers handle accidents in the county along Interstate 40.

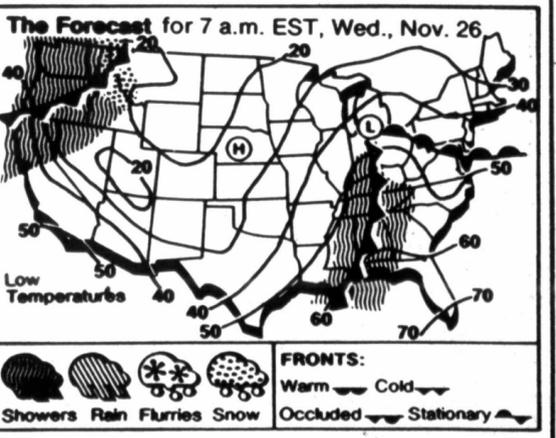

In other action, commissioners accepted the resignation of emergency management coordinator Mary Alice Robbins, effective Nov. 30. Persons said she did not know the reasons for Robbins' resignation.
Commissioners also established a holiday schedule for the county. The courthouse will be closed Thursday and Friday for Thanksgiving and will be closed from noon Dec. 24 through Dec. 26 for the Christmas holiday.

Refugee house will move

BROWNSVILLE (AP)—A controversial shelter for Central American refugees has found a new home, but controversy appears to be following the shelter.

Casa Oscar Romero, sponsored by the Roman Catholic Church, has less than two weeks to move from nearby San Benito, where neighbors protested its high number of occupants.

The Brownsville diocese recently was granted building permits to locate several mobile homes outside the city to house refugees. Now the diocese faces losing those permits.

Protests by residents of mobile home parks near the new site have prompted the Cameron County Commission to consider temporarily removing the permits.

Commissioners were to meet in an emergency session today to discuss the permits, issued last week by county engineer Jack Brown.

"I assume they are for Casa Romero. Everyone assumes that's what's going there," Brown said Monday. Brown said the diocese had not told him the Casa would be moved, to the land outside Brownsville.

"They're laying low," he said.

Hernan Gonzalez of the Catholic Diocese of Brownsville, which runs Casa Romero, said the shelter should be moved in time to meet a Dec. 5 deadline to leave San Benito.

Gonzalez said he "didn't anticipate the strong reaction from the people in the mobile home parks. Some of it is unfounded."

Brown said the diocese was granted permits to locate five mobile homes on the site and to build a restroom.

Gonzalez said the diocese bought six acres in Cameron County outside the Brownsville city limits and has ordered double-wide mobile homes to accommodate the refugees.

Casa Romero has been under fire from San Benito authorities for housing more people at the shelter than building standards allow.

The diocese and San Benito agreed earlier this month that the Casa would be moved by Dec. 5. In the interim occupancy at the shelter would be limited to 50 aliens a night.

Casa Romero has housed up to 500 people at a time.

Official: Bilingual education has problems but not dead yet

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—There may be some problems with bilingual education in American schools, but it is not headed for extinction, according to an official of the U.S. Department of Education.

"Bilingual education is in no danger," said Anna Maria Farias, deputy director of the Office of Bilingual Education and Minority Languages Affairs. "The secretary doesn't think bilingual education should be ended. The secretary wants children to learn English quickly."

Farias visited children in the bilingual education program Monday at Leal Middle School in the Harlandale School District and 4-year-old preschoolers at East Central Development Center.

San Antonio is not experiencing the difficulties of other cities because the bilingual programs here deal almost exclusively with Spanish-speaking youngsters, Farias said. But cities such as Denver are having trouble communicating with and teaching students who speak as many as 80 different languages, she said.

School districts cannot justify hiring a teacher to instruct one or two students in their native tongue until they learn English, Farias said.

Farias said she was pleased with the programs here.

The students at Leal were split into classes by ability, a sign of a good bilingual education program, Farias said.

Farias also was impressed as she watched two preschoolers work with a computer inside a make-believe castle at the development center in the East Central School District.

"If we can get 4-year-olds who don't speak English working on computers, within two years they should speak English," Farias said. "Children this young see it as a game. They have fun and learn. That's what we want."

Moves to name English as the official state language should not hurt bilingual education programs because a Supreme Court ruling requires states to provide education for all children, regardless of their language, Farias said.

The Education Department has not taken a position on states striving to name an official language, she said.

Report says:

Oil prices leave OPEC short of 1985

HOUSTON (AP)—The oil price collapse will cause members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to earn up to $50 billion less in 1986 than in 1985, according to a recently released world oil study.

The loss, however, is helping to motivate the OPEC nations meeting next month in Geneva to push prices up to $18 a barrel, instead of the $15 it has been averaging, officials said.

Oil prices in the next six to 12 months probably will experience $2-$4 swings around the $15 range, according to World Oil Trends, a report released Monday by Arthur Andersen & Co. and Cambridge Energy Research Associates.

The study said that even if key OPEC members were to retreat from their year-old "market share" strategy, establishing criteria and a durable system for production management would still be a difficult task.

"In short, there's no obvious recipe for stability" in the oil industry, Daniel Yergin, president of Cambridge Energy, said from Washington. The price risks will continue to impact the industry along with the more familiar geological and political risks, he said.

Richard Adkerson, managing director of Arthur Andersen's Oil and Gas Industry Services Program, said companies in the industry will continue to analyze costs to help cope with the unpredictable conditions.

"The industry will live with it as we've seen in the past," said Adkerson, adding that not all companies will be able to survive.

Depressed oil prices have led to sharp declines in oil exploration and development, particularly in North America where demand for oil is increasing, he said.

U.S. net oil imports were 30 percent higher in the first nine months of 1986 than in the same period the year before, and the current situation points to continuing increases in such imports, according to the report.

In addition, the report noted that companies have dramatically reduced investments in North American oil and gas projects. Major companies are allocating a greater portion of their capital budgets to other regions of the world because of lower per-barrel costs of exploration, development and production, the report said.

The report also indicates the industry will have to brave more intense market competition.

"The volatility is not likely to be changed in the near term," Adkerson said. "It seems we're clearly talking about the next year."

Yergin said oil companies will see the "same kinds of heavy pressures" during the coming year.

"We can't count on any kind of quick return," Yergin said. "Since revenue is their number one concern, they realize the value of selling a little less oil at $18 per barrel than at $12."

Meanwhile, industrial countries importing oil have benefited from depressed oil prices, with savings for 1986 estimated at $80 billion, the study said.

Woman held in thefts involving spiked drinks

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP)—A San Antonio area woman named in theft charges in St. Louis and Dallas is under investigation by nearly a dozen police departments across the country in connection with so-called "Mickey Finn" robberies, police say.

Jacqueline L. Edmonds, 27, of Universal City, was arrested Monday at her home by police who had her home under surveillance for more than a week, police said.

She was charged with felony theft on an arrest warrant issued two weeks ago in St. Louis, Mo. She was being held in the Bexar County Jail without bond pending her extradition to Missouri to face formal charges.

Earlier, Edmonds was arrested in February in the Dallas suburb of Flower Mound on a felony theft charge. She was accused of stealing more than $2,000 from William D. Phelps, director of travel for the Dallas Cowboys.

Phelps told police at Dallas he met a woman in a nightclub there last Dec. 20 and accepted an invitation to meet her later at another location and have a drink. Phelps said his drink was spiked and when he awoke the next morning he found he had been robbed of the cash and seven credit cards.

The woman is accused of picking up a businessman at a plus St. Louis hotel and going to a room and giving him a spiked drink. University City Police Lt. Chuck Dewey said she allegedly took off with $5,000 in cash and jewelry.

A traffic violation just outside the St. Louis hotel was what led police to the Texas woman, Dewey said.

The patrolman kept her Texas driver's license until the ticket was paid. The next day the businessman filed a complaint and described a woman matching the license.

Mine reopening rumors spur job applications

FORT STOCKTON (AP)—With area unemployment running at near 13 percent, rumors that Comanche Creek sulphur mine near Fort Stockton may reopen sent hundreds of applicants scurrying to the Texas Employment Commission in search of jobs at the mine.

Recent rumors that the Texasgulf mine, closed since 1983, would reopen and create about 100 jobs have generated 20 to 40 applications a day, said Lewis Robison, a Texas Employment Commission spokesman.

Rumors that Texasgulf would reopen the mine have persisted for a year and a half, but "we would like to believe this time they are true," Robison told the San Angelo Standard-Times.

"You know we have been pretty hard hit out here," he said. "We have no diversification."

A Fort Stockton newspaper recently quoted a Texasgulf spokesman as saying the company is considering reopening the mine.

"We are considering reopening, but the go-ahead hasn't been given yet by the board of directors," said Clinton White, manager of government and public relations at Texasgulf's office in Newgulf. White was not available for comment Monday.

He was quoted as saying that the directors would examine the worldwide sulphur market before deciding whether to reopen the Fort Stockton operation, and that the decision would be made after Thanksgiving at the earliest.

Since the mine closed, Texasgulf has kept at least two employees at the mine, about 15 miles from Fort Stockton, to maintain it.

When the Comanche Creek mine shut down, it employed 99 persons and had an annual payroll of more than $2 million, according to information on file at The Pioneer newspaper in Fort Stockton.

TDA: Thanksgiving dinner no treat for farmers

AUSTIN (AP)—A typical Thanksgiving dinner this year, while costing consumers about the same as last year, will be no treat for the farmers who raised the food, agriculture officials say.

A dinner of 11 Texas-grown items will cost consumers $2.79 per plate, but farmers will net only 8 cents of that, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said Monday.

"Texas farmers will be left with table scraps after providing millions of thankful consumers with another bountiful Thanksgiving feast this year," Hightower said.

The Texas Department of Agriculture again this year analyzed the farm value of 11 Thanksgiving menu items grown or raised by Texas farmers.

On a per-plate basis, the cost is $2.79, about what it was last year, Hightower reported. Of the 11 items, Hightower said, seven either resulted in no profit or a net loss to farmers — stuffing, mashed potatoes, corn on the cob, grapefruit, green beans, milk and ice cream.

The total loss suffered by producers for those seven products was 3 cents per serving, Hightower said.

Farmers received a net profit on the remaining four items — turkey, lettuce, tomatoes and pecan pie. However, Hightower said, only the turkey showed any sizeable return to farmers with 6 cents per serving.

Hightower said that even the total 8-cent return to farmers was misleading.

"That ridiculously low return is inflated when we consider that 70 to 80 percent of our state's turkey production is controlled by one company. It is virtually the only one to realize any gain on our Thanksgiving dinner, leaving the vast majority of struggling Texas farmers with very little to be thankful for," he said.

The department calculated the net returns to producers and farmers based on the average retail food prices published by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics and production costs detailed in sample crop and livestock budgets prepared by Texas A&M University.

In calculating its figures, the agriculture department used fresh produce where applicable because the price spread between what the farmer receives and what the consumer pays in the store is less than for canned or frozen produce, officials said.

JOINT PROBLEM AND MUSCLE PAIN

If you've developed symptoms that make you think you have arthritis, it would be wise to have an examination to see if the muscles in the affected area are out of balance.

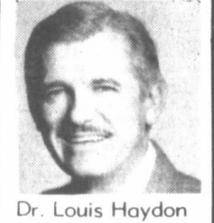

Muscles help keep a joint stable and assist it through its normal range of motion. But if the muscles on one side of the joint are weak, this puts a strain on the joint. It may also cause arthritic-like symptoms.

The doctor of chiropractic will test the muscles to determine their balance and strength. He will also evaluate nerve patterns and may take an x-ray to study the joint structure involved. Perhaps some laboratory procedures will also be needed.

If the problem is in the muscles around the joint, treatment can be given to strengthen and return them to proper balance. Once this is achieved, the arthritic-like pain and discomfort may be greatly relieved or eliminated.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Diplomacy in secret began with Franklin

Whenever a politician tries to explain a previous statement, he will almost certainly have to spend his every waking hour, until the bounds of the media finally lose interest, devising explanations for his explanation. So it is when a president, figuring he can stanch all the wild conjecturing about whatever activities he has been keeping under wraps, promises to tell all, once and for all.

Probably President Reagan is perplexed, as the pundits paw over his every attempted clarification of his former national security adviser's mission to Tehran. How can he flat-out deny those reports whose origins were Danish seamen and Italian port authorities? Why did he not mention Israel, which figured so prominently in all the previous speculation? If the relevant cabinet officials were indeed kept abreast of the operation, why all the revelations from unidentified sources at Defense and State? Was there an arms-for-hostage transaction, or was the equation more Byzantine than that? And so on.

Hardly Watergate, this. Even if Ronald Reagan did reverse his own policy, and he almost made his denial of a reversal sound plausible, who said a president can't reverse a policy in the face of new geopolitical developments? If the effort to find a confluence of interests with Iran can be determined to be folly, history — and voters weighing the next GOP presidential nominee — will have the final word.

The early book is that it was indeed folly. "Moderates" among the mullahs? Come on. The whole Iranian regime is barbaric, and batty to boot. To think that some elements in the Islamic republic are somehow strokable enough to lead to better post-Khomeini relations is so much hooey, both cynics and conservatives are saying. Better to get behind the young shah and his romantic anachronisms, much as we've gotten behind the contras, some American hardliners propose. But that is on the order of sending in Chiang Kai-shek's troops, as late as 1972, to make quick work of Chairman Mao. Talk about folly. But who are the hardliners now? Senator Byrd?

How about the McFarlane mission's secrecy? Those who push tell-all journalism imagine that such missions can be conducted in the bright sunlight, convincing themselves that lives are never jeopardized if reporters are standing by, a particularly stupid kind of hubris. Well, secret diplomacy goes back to Benjamin Franklin. Vernon Walters wrote an autobiography, before he became U.N. ambassador, all about a lifetime of secret missions — one of the most fascinating yarns of the century. Some of the missions yielded frustration, as probably Robert McFarlane's mission, but for the liberation of David Jacobsen, will yield frustration.

That doesn't make the effort worthless.

ERA goes down in flames

WASHINGTON — Among the minor election returns that got lost a few weeks ago in the Tuesday night shuffle was Vermont's vote on a proposed equal rights amendment to the state constitution. The voters shot it down in flames.

It was a surprising outcome. Vermont, once a bastion of New England conservatism, is panting hard on the steps of Massachusetts to become the most liberal state in the nation. The proposed amendment had the ardent support of the state's feminist governor, Madeleine M. Kunin. Democratic Sen. Patrick Leahy urged its adoption. The state government mailed a packet of pro-amendment material to the public schools. The Vermont Coalition for the ERA, a bipartisan umbrella group, worked hard for approval. The state has relatively few of the fundamentalist voters whose opposition has figured so heavily in the South.

Both Leahy and Mrs. Kunin easily won reelection to their offices, but when the votes were counted on the ERA, the amendment failed by 95,547 to 84,426, a margin of more than 11,000 out of nearly 180,000 cast. There's not much arguing with a 53-47 split.

The Vermont referendum was a bitter disappointment to such militant feminists as Eleanor Smeal, head of the National Organization for Women. She had hoped that a victory in Vermont would galvanize the incoming 100th Congress to revive the federal Equal Rights Amendment next year. No such prospect appears likely. No state has voted in favor of an ERA since Indiana voted in 1977 to ratify the then-pending federal proposal. Meanwhile state referenda have failed in Wisconsin, New York, New Jersey, Florida, Iowa and Maine. Nine years is a long time between drinks.

Patterned directly after the federal proposal, Vermont's ERA would have provided that "equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the state of Vermont or any of its political subdivisions on account of the sex of the individual." Why was the proposition defeated?

The short answer is that Phyllis Schlafly's Eagle Forum mounted a powerful campaign against it. Leahy charged that her troops had waged "one of the most vicious, most negative campaigns" he had ever witnessed. "I have never heard so many distortions. I have never heard so many downright lies." With deference to the senator, this is hogwash. Opponents raised the same legitimate questions that were raised during the 10 years that the federal proposal was being debated.

Whether at the state or federal level, no authority can say decisively what an ERA means. The lame answer given by proponents, when they are hard pressed, is that they will leave the matter of meaning to the courts. That is one terrible way to go about amending a constitution.

It is entirely fair to ask if "sex" or "sex of the individual" embraces the meaning of sexual preference. If it does, then the amendment would endow homosexuals with the same "equality of rights under the law" accorded to others. Such an interpretation leads inexorably into murky waters the boaters are unwilling to enter.

Suppose that "sex" means merely "gender." At both the state and federal levels, wherever public funds or tax exemptions are involved, that interpretation raises other valid questions. Because only women may undergo abortions, would an ERA amendment require public funding for abortions just as other health needs are met? Many religious denominations and charitable organizations discriminate "on account of sex." Do girls have a right to join the tax-exempt Boy Scouts? May boys sue for a place on the girls' hockey team?

These are not frivolous questions. Adoption of a constitutional amendment is about as clear an expression of "public policy" as anyone could ask, and the Supreme Court has held that "public policy" is controlling in matters of tax exemption. No college, whether or not it refuses federal aid, may discriminate "on account of race" if it wishes to preserve the deductibility of contributions. That is a demonstrable "public policy."

As the night follows the day, it follows that under an ERA, the whole body of law created by "on account of race" would be absorbed into "on account of sex." Now we are talking about military service, automobile insurance rates, laws on adoption, coeducational dormitories, and just about everything else.

As the record of the past nine years abundantly demonstrates, the American people are not prepared to buy this pig in a poke. Vermont's voters are in the mainstream. The militant feminists are somewhere else.

The authorities are hosers

David Housel, one of my favorite people, works for the Auburn Athletic Department. He is fond of saying that when Auburn and Georgia meet in football "it's like two brothers in a fight."

Georgia's coach went to Auburn. Auburn's coach went to Georgia. There are many other family connections.

On Nov. 15, a Saturday night, it was little brother winning the fight. Georgia went to Auburn with very little chance to win, but they won anyway.

"Dare we dream?" asked Georgia fans, as the game wound down.

And after the game, an incident. The stadium public address announcer had said repeatedly, "Please stay off the playing field after the game is over."

But some Georgia fans, mostly students, I would guess, did run onto the field at game's end. They had been asked not to, but they did it anyway.

If you're at somebody else's house, and they ask you not to wear your shoes on their carpet, as overly fastidious as that might be, in a polite society you don't do it.

But if you do, all you deserve is a polite reprimand, not a slap in the face.

I'm just guessing, but I would say the Georgia revelers on the field numbered somewhere between 100 and 200.

This was not a mob. Nobody tried to tear up the playing field. And how could a few students do any more damage to 100 yards of grass after 880 giant athletes had been running up and down it for a couple of hours? Also, nobody tried to tear down the goal posts.

The public address announcer said again, "Congratulations on your victory, but please leave the playing field."

He was ignored. So somebody ordered water hoses turned on the fans on the field. Water hoses.

A little extreme for sure, but OK, the fans had been warned not to go onto the field.

There were, however, many Georgia faithful still in the stands at the time. Why leave? You can't get out of Auburn for a couple of hours after a football game anyway, and the moment was right for celebration.

Then, somebody ordered one of the water hoses turned on the celebrating fans in the stands. In the stands.

I saw an elderly man trying to get out of the way of the water slip and fall. I hope he wasn't hurt.

This wasn't exactly a demonstration against police brutality in Birmingham or a march of workers in Warsaw. This was a few football fans kicking up their heels.

A year ago, some Auburn pranksters ripped off pieces of the hedge that surrounds Georgia's field. To the victors go the spoils.

Two years ago Georgia Tech quarterback, John Dewberry, had his picture taken at Sanford Stadium with a piece of the hedge. But nobody turned on water hoses.

Several Auburn fans came up to me after the game and apologized. "Those hoses were a little too much. We're sorry," one said.

Auburn fans have class. It was the jerk who ordered the water hoses turned on who doesn't. Bull Connor would have been proud.

Perhaps the ends will justify the means

By Ben Wattenberg

Let's play "Suppose."

Suppose the Ayatollah Khomeini died tomorrow. Suppose, further, that there was a power struggle in Iran, and a somewhat more moderate and rational faction won out. Suppose this new government was not unfriendly to the United States, asked us for technical help to open up the oil fields, was wary of the Soviet Union, was willing to negotiate an end to the slaughter of the Iran-Iraq war, and did not intend to topple other governments.

Suppose it then became known that the Reagan administration had engaged in secret contacts with the group that had come to rule Iran. Suppose that we had even shipped some spare parts to Iran and allowed Israel and other nations to ship more. Suppose that this process of contact with Americans had helped the less-radicals come to power.

If all that happened, how would Reagan's secret dealing be regarded? You need not suppose an answer. It would be hailed as an act of diplomatic genius. No one would worry much that the Congress and the departments of State and Defense had been cut out of the action. Iran is one of the great geo-strategic prizes: a large buffer state standing between Russia and the Persian Gulf, from which flows the oil that drives the modern world.

Well all that has not happened. No yet, although it is not impossible that something like that still may happen.

Suppose now another set of supposes. The ayatollah dies. The faction that takes over is radical. The Iran-Iraq war goes on. Iran starts losing and slips into anarchy. The country splits up among several ethnic groups. Pro-communist factions gain an important role.

What would the reaction then be in America? You don't have to suppose that either. Critics would demand to know why we didn't plan ahead for the post-Khomeini world. Hadn't we learned the lesson in China — when we had no diplomatic contacts with Mao's communists during the civil war? Hadn't we learned the lesson of Iran — when we had no contacts with the ayatollah?

The point here is simple. Should a superpower try to do something, or do nothing?

The Iran party has blown up in Reagan's face partly because it leaked out. It sounds like we traded arms for hostages, that we were preaching anti-terrorism but practicing terrorist appeasement. Reagan says that's not so.

But was it a smart plan?

Only when we know the answers to these questions may we begin to sense whether the Reagan team were geniuses or bumblers. My sense is that, for all the blunders, they are trying to reassert a strong version of America's superpower role, and that is wise.

More families, children on food lines this holiday

By The Associated Press

In Nashville, they came for jobs they couldn't handle. In Phoenix, they were drawn by stories of Sunbelt prosperity. In Kansas City, they went from the farm to the food line.

They are the new poor, these newly unemployed, and they are seeking help in increasing numbers this Thanksgiving.

More and more, they include women and children, whole families.

"What's changing is the kind of people we're seeing," said the Rev. Kenneth Fox, director of the Open Door Mission in Rochester, N.Y. "Women in crisis, teen-agers, the elderly, it's not the typical person everyone thinks."

Across the country, organizations are preparing Thanksgiving meals for armies of the homeless, the lonely, the poor. In the farm and oil belts, organizers are preparing for more people than they've seen before.

In Kansas City, Mo., the Rev. Maurice Vanderberg, director of the City Union Mission, said people from farms and rural towns are increasingly among the homeless.

"I think it has to do with the farm economy," said Vanderberg. "Farms don't require the manpower they used to."

And in New Orleans, "the typical person we're working with now, compared to maybe a year or two years ago, are the new unemployed," said Jess L. Duncan of the Salvation Army.

"The trend we see is the number of intact families thrown into homelessness," said Mike Moreau of New Orleans' Traveler's Aid. "Three or four years ago, that wasn't a problem."

In Tennessee, where construction and new auto plants are drawing the hopeful, Nashville's Union

Rescue Mission is catering to a larger and younger clientele.

"A lot of people across the country are hearing that Nashville is on a building boom and they're coming here for the jobs, and they're not skilled right for the jobs," said the Rev. Richard Kritsch of the mission.

Social agencies in Phoenix, Ariz., are also finding that migration to the Sunbelt has its downside.

"People are coming to Phoenix for the weather," said Teresa Coury-Davia of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, which is preparing 2,500 dinners, up from 1,500 last year. "It's all over the newspapers that Arizona is the place with a lot of jobs."

But many people arrive and find they are not qualified for the work available, she said.

Elsewhere, traditional Thanksgiving generosity will feed thousands.

In Los Angeles, 3,000 people are expected at the Union Rescue Mission, including a growing number of women and children. "More families are making their way to the streets," said spokesman Mark Holthaus.

In New York City, where 1.7 million people live below the federal government's poverty level, the city welfare agency and more than 20 religious and community agencies will provide dinners to about 26,000 homeless people living in city shelters. The Salvation Army plans to serve more than 7,000.

And in Plymouth, Mass., site of the first Thanksgiving meal some 350 years ago, the Salvation Army will welcome the needy to its center at Cole's Hill, a Pilgrim burial ground overlooking Plymouth Harbor.

"Half the Mayflower folks didn't make it through the first winter. It's significant that we're on this site where those people died," said Stephen Carroll of the Salvation Army.

The community of Snoqualmie, Wash., has been evacuated since the Snoqualmie River started to flood the area.

Stranded skiers wait liberation

GLACIER, Wash. (AP) — Some scrambled across logs and others paid for helicopter rides out, but nearly 1,000 stranded skiers eyed forecasts for more rain today and waited for liberation from this town cut off by flooding.

The National Weather Service said that rain would continue across the Pacific Northwest, and flood warnings were in effect for seven major rivers west of the Cascade Mountains.

Melting snow and several days of rain have left highways and rail lines in western Washington impassable and forced families from their homes. Officials in King, Lewis and Snohomish counties declared states of emergency.

Workers used heavy equipment Monday to clear a small mountain of debris blocking the Mount Baker Highway, a section of which was washed out Sunday by the swollen Nooksack River near Glacier.

The road was expected to reopen today, said Jan Leonardo, director of the Whatcom County Department of Emergency Services.

While most of the skiers on Mount Baker, who were staying in homes, a church camp, the firehouse and a couple of small motels, remained stranded today, a few of the hardy scrambled across the river on logs and some Canadians paid $150 each for helicopter rides home, officials said.

A heavy tractor crossed the washed-out portion of the highway on Monday to ferry food and other supplies to the skiers, Ms. Leonardo said.

"It hasn't been too bad," Pete Norie, 23, an electrical engineer from Vancouver, British Columbia, said Monday night in a telephone interview. "We're having a tough time now because we've run out of beer. Food is not the program. We need beer. There's no liquor to be sold anywhere."

The other 34 members of his ski club had gone ahead while he stayed to ski more on Sunday. The club's bus was on the other side of the washout with his money and clothes.

"We're vehicle-less and money-less," he said, "but we showered tonight. We're a lot better off than a lot of people here who've been in their ski clothes for two days — wet ski clothes."

Mark Edson, 23, a Western Washington University student who works at the resort's ski shop, said a few people sneaked across the Nooksack River on logs.

Murphy reportedly said Israel may have had dual arms policy

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel may have become entangled in a dispute between the White House and the State Department over whether to sell weapons to Iran, U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy was quoted today as saying.

Israel might have denied to Secretary of State George Shultz that it was selling weapons to Iran, and at the same time been doing so with the knowledge of President Reagan, Murphy was quoted as telling the Haaretz correspondent in Washington.

"Israel may have acted according to the dual policy of the U.S. administration," he was quoted as saying.

The report comes amid growing State Department recriminations against the White House for concealing its arms dealings with Iran, and pressure here against the government to disclose its Iran dealings.

Deputy Secretary of State John C. Whitehead told the House Foreign Affairs committee Monday that he had no knowledge of any Israeli arms shipments to Iran, and that as far as he knew the United States had not asked Israel about such dealings.

Murphy also told the committee Israel had consistently denied to State Department officials that it had sold weapons to Iran.

Haaretz, quoting Israeli and U.S. officials in Washington, said Foreign Minister Shimon Peres told Shultz several times during the past year that Israel was not selling Iran arms.

President Ronald Reagan has said a third country was involved in the operation, but has not named Israel.

The Israeli government is under growing pressure to disclose its role in the arms deal. The pressure stems from both left- and right-wing legislators demanding that parliament implement its watchdog role over government actions.

News reports say the Israeli decision to supply arms to Iran was taken by one or two senior leaders, without any Cabinet or parliamentary debate.

An Israeli columnist wrote that the entire arms project was initiated by former defense minister Ariel Sharon, who sought to triple Israeli arms exports soon after he entered office in 1981.

Yoel Marcus wrote in Haaretz that the United States would have had to have known and turned a blind eye to the trickle of weapons reaching Iran.

"But now that everything has come out into the open...the subject must reach a Cabinet debate. After all, we're a state, not a bunch of arms merchants," Marcus wrote.

Peres reportedly told a parliamentary committee Monday that while it was not Israeli policy to sell Iran weapons, Israel might have acceded to a request from a "friendly country."

Peres refused to elaborate to the 26-member panel, but promised a full disclosure to the Knesset (parliament's) Armed Services Subcommittee at some future date.

On Wednesday, the full 120-member parliament will debate several motions by left-wing legislators on the subject.

Bikinis progressive, newspaper says

PEKING (AP) — The wearing of bikinis by women bodybuilders is a great advance in Chinese sports and a challenge to feudal thinking, the country's leading intellectual newspaper said today in front-page commentary.

China recently joined the International Bodybuilding Federation and the State Physical Culture and Sports Commission approved the use of bikinis.

Letter to hostage from his brother

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Beirut newspaper today published an open letter from American Thomas Cicippio asking the kidnappers of his brother Joseph for "just a sign" that he was alive.

The letter was addressed "to my brother Joe," said the Arabic-language independent daily An-Nahar.

"I write to you hoping you will be able to receive my letter. We are all well, your family and brothers, and think of you constantly," the letter said.

"We are mostly worried about your health. Are you well treated? We just want a sign that you are alive and in good health," he added.

"Just a short letter to your sister Rose who is seriously ill," the letter concluded.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A business deal you attempt to make with a friend today might not jell. Keep your pal as a pal and seek commercial links elsewhere. Looking for some great Christmas stocking stuffers? The Astro-Graph newsletter for the year ahead is perfect for the entire family. Mail $1 each to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state zodiac signs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You may be a bit reluctant to take the initiative today, yet be wary of delegating assignments to others. Save the ulcers and do it yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your faith in your abilities will strengthen as time ticks on today. If you have something important to attend to, schedule it for the afternoon.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In career situations, even if you are dealing with persons you trust, it's wise to clarify all the terms to avoid any misunderstandings later.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Today you may be tempted to take the easy way out and renege on an agreement you made with another. You'll like yourself more if you do what you promised.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This can be a productive day for you, provided you channel your energies toward a specific target. Without a goal, you might just spin your wheels.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In your associations with friends today, don't let one who has an axe to grind involve you in his or her petty peevishness. Keep on the best of terms with everybody.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't procrastinate today where your responsibilities are concerned. Once you get on a roll, you'll discover your duties weren't that bad after all.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Associates will have greater respect for you if you don't talk unfavorably about someone today who it not present to defend himself or herself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Financial situations may be likened to a will-o'-the-wisp today. What you acquire in one venture may fly out the window in another.

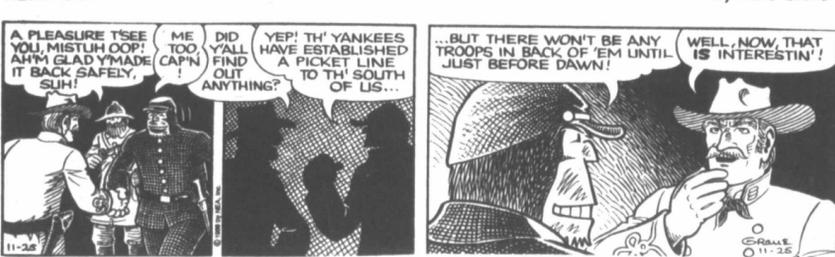

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Avoid persons today who prefer to vegetate instead of getting up and doing things. You'll be happier with pals who make things happen.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The doubts you are experiencing regarding a financial matter are of your own making. All will work out OK if you view the situation optimistically.

Crime does pay producers of staged murder mystery

By JENNIFER JUER GENS
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Murders are committed at the Rutherford House nearly every night — and during brunch Saturdays and Sundays. Lord William Rutherford wouldn't have it any other way.

As the script goes, Rutherford stipulated in his will that a party be thrown in his honor for five consecutive years after his death. And during each party, sequined and tuxedoed "friends" and "family" of the late Rutherford witness two "murders" while they enjoy their champagne and smoked salmon.

There's a catch. Guests pay a price for an evening of dining, dancing and a new type of dinner theater that gets everyone into the act.

"Murder at Rutherford House" is produced by Murder a la Carte, perhaps the largest producer of murder mystery events in the country. For three years, the company has brought murder and mystery to hotels, country inns, cruise ships and trains.

When guests arrive at the elegant mid-19th-century townhouse, the scene of "Murder at Rutherford House," they are given new identities and occupations. Among the crowd are such luminaries as Audy O'Visual, a teacher from Englewood, N.J.; Judge I.D. Termine; Ivy Nettle, the R.N.; Rick Shaw and Sale Price.

Packets of information on the Rutherford family and each guest's relationship to the Rutherfords are handed out. Guests are reminded to keep their wits about them at the party; they will be called upon later to help solve the crimes.

"Everyone is tied to everyone," says Tom Chiodo, one of the producers.

Chiodo wrote and directed the show, along with Peter DePietro. Chiodo says they change the script every few months to keep it fresh.

Guests mingle, using their new identities. Newspaper reporter Deffa Mayshon and May O. Naze, a perpetual party planner, chat about what goes into making a great party.

Lady Millicent Rutherford breezes in wearing a clinging black satin and sequined number, her blonde hair held flapper-style by a black headband. She waves her cigarette holder around as she greets guests.

Soon, guests stop mingling and start observing.

Other characters arrive. Among them are William's brother, Oswald Rutherford, a blind man in white tux, and a Mae West look-alike with whitish-blond hair and a white satin dress, complete with plunging neckline. It is the German-accented Baroness Greta von Keppsemtrumfloppen whose botched pronunciation of her name becomes a running gag. She introduces herself as "the well-traveled, well-endowed."

The baroness whispers to a guest that there is no love lost between her and Lady Rutherford. (The baroness once had an affair with Lord Rutherford.)

The guests listen intently. As Lady Rutherford tells guests about her "dear William's death," three shots ring out. Not missing a beat, the guests stampede up the stairs to find Sarah, Lady Rutherford's daughter, sprawled out dead on the floor.

Then dinner is served and during the multicourse meal, things get a tad confusing.

Other characters are introduced and the baroness gets up to sing. Oswald is directed toward the front of the room to join the baroness and he is shot.

The "police" come in and the guests have a chance to use the information they've been absorbing all evening. Justin Time asks the police a few questions. Audy O'Visual tries to bribe Aunt Hermoine for information with the $50 all the guests were given in their packets for just that purpose.

Justin Time gets nowhere. O'Visual has no luck. But it doesn't matter. This is exactly what the producers want to see.

Rather than having people there who just want to be entertained, "What we want is someone who involves himself," Chiodo says.

After the guests vote on who they think committed the crimes, the rest of the show is acted out and the culprit is revealed. Some guests dance, others shed their party personae and get acquainted.

Says May O. Naze, a.k.a. singer and playwright Dina Sage, "It's so much more interesting than going to Broadway."

Heart says aye; head, nay

DEAR ABBY: I am a 30-year-old single woman, attractive, successful (real estate) and, like most people who write to you, I have a problem. I have fallen in love with a charming, handsome 29-year-old man who my friends tell me is feeding me a line.

He came here from Ireland, his visa expired and now he is an illegal alien. My friends say he's only using me so he can remain in the States and bring his girlfriend over from Ireland.

He told me about the girl back home, but says he really loves me and will break off with her when he can tell her in person because he doesn't want to hurt her. Abby, I have been in love before, but never like this. We have a wonderful time together, and the chemistry between us is perfect.

Now for the bad part: He has borrowed money from me — yet unpaid; I've caught him in several small lies; he drinks more than he should; and he has a bad temper. I know all his faults, but I am drawn to him like a giant magnet. I need an objective opinion. A half of me says, "Follow your heart," and the other half says, "Forget him."

What do you say?
IN LOVE IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR IN LOVE: Listen to the half with the brains in it and forget him. What you call "love" is a temporary emotional condition brought on by a physical reaction to a biological urge.

Progressive Homemakers meet

Fay Harvey hosted a recent meeting of Progressive Extension Homemakers in her home. Helene Hogan recited a Thanksgiving poem to open the meeting. Pat Murray presented the devotional followed by President Marilyn Butler who gave the Council report and future events.

An officer training course is set for 1 p.m., Dec. 4, at the Gray County Courthouse annex. Each one is to bring a "holiday goodie" and the recipe.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My supposed sister-in-law and I are having an argument about our relationship. We are married to brothers. She says she is not related to me.

Last Christmas she gave my husband a beautiful woolen scarf, which I thought was wonderful, but, to my distress, there was no gift for me, even though I had given her one. She says she is not related to me but she is a sister-in-law to my husband. I say we are sisters-in-law. What do you say?
SISTERLESS OUT EAST

DEAR SISTERLESS: The big issue is not whether your brother-in-law's wife is your sister-in-law; it's her rude insistence that she is not related to you when you claim her as your sister-in-law.

I don't know how they figure relationships "out East," but "out West," where I come from, my husband's relatives are mine, and mine are his.

DEAR ABBY: One more comment about introducing children as "step," "half," "own" or "adopted": Charles, my husband's son from a previous marriage, came to live with us. Three days after Charles moved in, my own son trooped through the living room with an entourage of his peers to join Charles and me, who were talking. Son paused long enough to make the proper introductions, identifying Charles as his "brother."

As his friends moved on toward the den, I held my son back briefly, explaining that Charles was his "stepbrother." He quickly shushed me with, "Look, Ma, if somebody's going to live in your house and share your parents, he's your brother — unless, of course, it's a girl, in which case she's your sister!"

DONNA JONES,
STONE MOUNTAIN, GA.

DEAR DONNA: From the mouths of babes ...

CONFIDENTIAL TO FAITHFUL READER IN NORWICH, CONN.: Your letter is filled with "they say." Pray, who are "they" who pass along this gossip? Ask those "they-sayers" to tell you who "they" are, and if they cannot tell you, then you tell them you cannot accept as truth what "they say."

Losing season doesn't worry Akers

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP)—Texas A&M, 8-2, will play for a Southwest Conference football title and host spot in the Cotton Bowl on Thanksgiving. What will Texas, 5-5 and going nowhere, play for?

"To win, to upset a decided favorite—an old rival," says Texas coach Fred Akers.

"I think there's enough motivation to do your best to win this game just on who they are and who we are," Akers told a news conference Monday.

Texas is faced with the possibility of its first losing football season in 30 years, but Akers says he has not had any thoughts that Texas' game with A&M might be his last as coach.

The Longhorns' last losing season was 1-9 in 1956. Darrell Royal became coach the next year and won for 20 years. Akers replaced Royal for the 1977 season and is completing his 10th year.

Akers, whose 2-9 year at Wyoming in 1975, was his only losing year as a coach, said, "We turned that around pretty quick."

Asked if he had considered that he might not get a chance next year to turn Texas' so-so season around, that A&M might be his last game, Akers said, "No, not really."

"I've had too many other things to think about. I've been too busy getting our football team ready to play—this week even more so because it's a short week," he said.

Akers was asked if his job security had been brought up with the players, and he said, "Lord no. I guess they hear that stuff outside. They sure don't need to hear that from me."

He also was asked if he worried that his players might feel they were playing the A&M game for him and would be "more tense than normal."

"No. I've told them often enough they don't play for me, they play for themselves. They're the ones that invest the most in it. I've never asked a football player or team to play for me. And don't intend to start," he said.

Akers said Texas players know A&M has "put together quite an outfit over there. It's going to take a heck of an effort to stay on the field with them."

"We've taken a patched up football team and made it a good football team. When I say 'we,' our players have... they simply have refused to let anything bother them or become an excuse for them. But you have to be concerned. We've taken some big hits," Akers said.

Nineteen Texas starters have missed at least one game with an injury, and five starters are out for the season.

"I hope these guys have one more (game) in them. If they don't, they've already given more than anyone can expect, I'll tell you that," Akers said.

Sooners, TCU fall in NIT semifinals

By The Associated Press

Two victories over ranked teams in the preseason National Invitation Tournament have Nevada-Las Vegas Coach Jerry Tarkanian feeling pretty good.

"We're going to be good, but I just don't know when," Tarkanian said after his fifth-ranked Rebels topped No. 7 Oklahoma 90-81 Monday night to advance to the NIT semifinals. "We have beaten two nationally ranked teams to start the season."

Senior guard Freddie Banks scored 24 points, leading four UNLV players in double figures against Oklahoma. In the first round, the Rebels defeated 19th-ranked Arizona 92-87.

"One reason I think we're doing so good is that we have depth this year," Tarkanian said. "We're still not playing smoothly, but I forget it's only November and at this time last year, we hadn't even played a game."

In other quarterfinal games Monday night, Temple beat Villanova 80-73, Western Kentucky edged Texas Christian 96-90 and Memphis State defeated Michigan 82-76.

UNLV will face Temple at Madison Square Garden in New York in a semifinal game Friday night. Western Kentucky and Memphis State will meet in the other semifinal, with the championship game on Saturday night.

Oklahoma rallied from a 17-5 deficit to make the game close in the second half, but the Sooners couldn't recover from a 14-5 stretch run that gave the Rebels an 87-77 lead with less than a minute left.

Oklahoma's Tim McCalister led all scorers with 32 points before fouling out in the final minute of the game, played before a crowd of 14,836 at the Thomas and Mack Center.

Memphis State 82, Michigan 76

Center Marvin Alexander carried Memphis State to a big lead in the second half, and the Tigers survived a late Michigan rally.

Alexander, who had 21 points and nine rebounds, scored six of Memphis State's first 10 points in the second half as the Tigers turned a 31-28 halftime deficit into a 38-33 lead. Memphis State went on to a 72-51 advantage with 5½ minutes remaining before the Wolverines started a late rally that fell short.

Western Kentucky 96, TCU 90

Western Kentucky also got strong center play, as Tellis Frank had a career-high 25 points and 12 rebounds against TCU.

The Hilltoppers led only 83-81 with 3½ minutes left, but Frank keyed a run of six consecutive points with a jumper and a tip-in, giving Western Kentucky an eight-point advantage with 2:41 remaining.

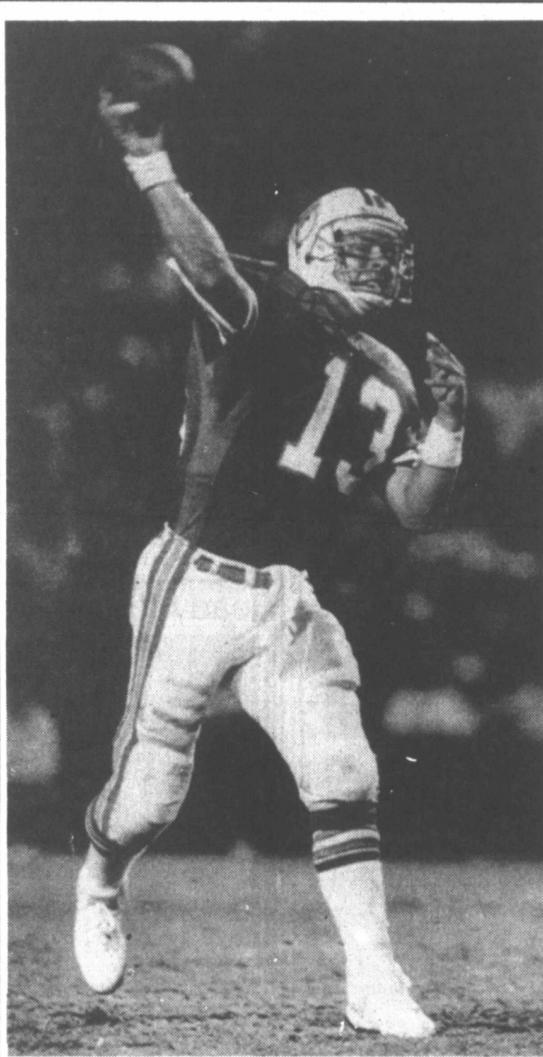

"Obviously, we're thrilled to death," Western Coach Murray Arnold said. "This is a great tournament. But you know that every time you win, the next team you play is going to be even tougher."

Temple 80, Villanova 73

Temple won a battle of Philadelphia teams, as Nate Blackwell shook off a cold-shooting first half to carry the Owls past Villanova.

Blackwell, just 1-for-10 from the field in the first half, scored 14 of his 18 points after intermission. He had eight points during an 11-2 surge that turned a 61-60 deficit into a 71-63 Temple lead 71-63 with 3:08 to play.

Mike Vreeswyk finished with 19 points and Howard Evans added 14 for Temple. Kenny Wilson scored 21 points and Doug West 19 for Villanova.

Marino set an NFL passing record

Miami upsets Jets

By JOEY HOLLEMAN
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI (AP)—The Miami Dolphins and New York Jets didn't really switch uniforms Monday night in the Orange Bowl. It just seemed that way.

While the least productive rushing offense in the NFL ran for 189 yards on 36 carries against the league's best rushing defense, the 27th-ranked defense held the fourth-best offense to three points—and the Dolphins, now 6-6, trampled the AFC East-leading Jets 45-3.

The Dolphins, who had been plagued by ill-timed penalties and turnovers all season, also benefitted from several costly penalties and four turnovers by the Jets, who had avoided those kinds of miscues while winning 10 of their first 11 games.

The personality transformation started early, as a strong rush forced Jets quarterback Ken O'Brien, the most proficient passer in the league, to throw wildly on a third-and-3 play on their first possession. Then, on the Dolphins sixth offensive play, halfback Lorenzo Hampton burst up the middle for a 54-yard touchdown, the longest Miami run since 1980.

The tone had been set, and the Jets couldn't do anything to alter it.

Hampton finished with 148 yards and two touchdowns on 19 carries, the first 100-yard rushing performance by a Miami player in 41 games.

Meanwhile, the Miami defense allowed only 280 total yards, with just 89 coming on the ground. In two games against the Dolphins last year, Jets running back Freeman McNeil ran for 280 yards by himself.

Could this be the same Dolphins team that lost to the Jets 51-45 in overtime early in the season and entered the game without a victory over a respectable opponent?

"They looked like the same team we played earlier when they took the field," McNeil said. "But they didn't play like it."

The only similarity was Miami quarterback Dan Marino, who passed for six touchdowns in the overtime shootout and four more Monday night. Hampton and Bruce Hardy each caught 1-yard TD passes and Nat Moore caught a pair from 21 and 22 yards as Marino hit 29 of 36 for 288 yards. The four-year veteran also became the first NFL player to throw for 30 or more touchdowns in three seasons.

Miami's other score came a 1-yard run by Hampton and a 39-yard field goal by Fud Revez as the Dolphins scored on seven of their first eight possessions.

The Jets finally got on the scoreboard late in the third quarter with a 45-yard field goal by Pat Leahy to cut the gap to 28-3. But they could earn only one first down on their next two possessions as the Dolphins pulled away.

"I always felt we were better than our record indicated, but we never proved it," said Miami Coach Don Shula. "Tonight, I felt we proved it."

The jubilant Dolphins were talking playoffs, although their 6-6 record makes them a real longshot. Across the way, the Jets didn't sound like a team that's still tied for the best record in the NFL.

"We got beat pretty bad and we got beat in all phases," said Jets Coach Joe Walton. "Now we'll see the character of this team. We got knocked down tonight. We've got to get up off the floor."

Mustang problems worry SWC recruits

DALLAS (AP)—Southern Methodist's recent problems with the NCAA are causing several top high school football prospects to think twice about attending the school.

One local high school player says he will stay away from all Southwest Conference Schools.

Duncanville running back Barry Foster said SMU's latest trouble could cause him to cross the school off his list.

"If the football program ends, what's the use of going there?" said Foster, who is considering UCLA, Ohio State,

Southern California and Arkansas. "It's a good school and I'm sure I'd like it, but I want to play football, too."

But Dallas Carter's Darren Lewis, considered one of the nation's top high school running backs, said he won't play in the SWC at all because too many of the league's schools have been hit with allegations of recruiting violations.

"I don't want my football career to end because some other guy takes money," Lewis said. "With all their schools getting in trouble, I think I'll have to stay away from the Southwest Conference."

Lewis told the Dallas Times Herald that the latest round of allegations against SMU didn't affect his decision.

SMU's football program, which the NCAA placed on three years' probation in August 1985, could be suspended for up to two years if the recent allegations are verified by the NCAA.

Texas Christian also is on probation, while other NCAA rules violations have been alleged at Houston, Texas Tech, Texas and Texas A&M.

SMU Coach Bobby Collins said he is concerned that slow action by the NCAA will hurt his recruiting efforts.

"I'd love to see it cleared up next week, but I know it won't happen," he said. "We've got to demand action will be taken. We've been crucified already. Somewhere in the world there has to be fairness."

Dallas Carter linebacker Jerome Pipkins said that unless the SMU case is resolved soon, "I won't go there," a sentiment shared by Carter lineman Dwayne Phorne, considered to be a top prospect in North Texas.

"If it's still up in the air, I'd be nervous about going there," Phorne said.

But McKinney fullback Randy Simmons said the situation would not affect his decision about a college.

"I'm going to school for an education," he said. "If they don't have football, I'll still get my education."

Cotton Bowl bound

James "Hoss" Brock, executive director of the Cotton Bowl football classic, places a cowboy hat on Ohio State University football coach Earle Bruce during the team's awards banquet Monday night. Ohio State, after losing to Michigan and a chance to play in the Rose Bowl, will play in the Cotton Bowl in Dallas Jan. 1.

Tradition takes a new twist at Cowtown horse auction

By JAMES NORMAN
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH (AP)—Fort Worth is Cowtown and traditions of the Old West are kept alive in the Stockyards, where the first indoor rodeo was staged in historic Cowtown Coliseum in 1918.

But the ancient arena, now renovated, never had seen the likes of what Benny Binion brought to the North Side over the weekend. Binion, owner of the Horseshoe Hotel and Gambling Casino in Las Vegas, trucked in 180 wild horses from his Montana ranch and staged a one-of-a-kind bucking horse sale.

Cowboys paid an entry fee to mount the horses, were judged for their efforts, then the animals were auctioned off to the highest bidder immediately after each ride. A few bucking horse sales are held throughout the country, the most prominent being in Miles City, Mont., but to buck and sell almost 200 horses under one roof in two days never has been done.

"It's the biggest single dispersal of bucking horses ever," said Tex Whitson, coordinator for the event. "It's something that may happen a couple of times in a lifetime," said Neal Gay, producer of the Mesquite Championship Rodeo and the annual Fort Worth Exposition and Fat Stock Show Rodeo.

"Bringing together this many quality horses at the same time is something special," Gay said. "There were a lot of prospects and anytime somebody in my business can get a look at that many horses, they appreciate it."

Binion's horses were fresh off the Montana range and exhibited a free spirit and wild bucking style that created problems for the cowboys but provided thrills for the spectators. Rearing up at the gate, high, hang-in-the-air bucking, falling down and running into fences were common feats for the wild bunch of horses.

"It's wild and I love it," said Rusty Riddle of Weatherford, a judge for the event. "You never know what they're going to do. I like to see the rank ones buck, the ones that might be at the NFR (National Finals Rodeo) in a year or two."

But Riddle, many-times an NFR performer in bareback riding, admits judging is sometimes difficult.

"Many of them look sensational, but have no power. They give you a lot of wild action. For instance a horse may rear up and look good to the crowd, but the rider can't spur when that happens and he doesn't score high. The secret to judging is watching the full eight seconds."

The competing riders ranged from a former NFR standout to the beginner. Bob Logue, who has been to the National Finals six times and finished seventh in the world standings in 1985, won the second go-round Saturday with a 76 score. Mark Garrett won the first go with an identical marking.

Logue, who failed to make the NFR in 1986, said he was on hand "to sharpen up for next year." "I didn't have anywhere to go and thought this would be a good workout," Logue said. "You stick to the basics and ride 'em jump for jump. You can't anticipate because they are so unpredictable."

A&I tailback helps his challenger

By COY SLAVIK

The Victoria Advocate
KINGSVILLE (AP) — When highly-touted tailback Johnny Bailey arrived this summer on the campus of Texas A&I, he wasn't exactly greeted with open arms by Heath Sherman.

Sherman had enjoyed a record-breaking freshman year as tailback for the Javelinas in 1985 and was looking for bigger and better things his sophomore campaign. Then along came Bailey.

Bailey originally wanted to attend Iowa. But the all-stater from Houston Yates scored too low on his SAT and had his NCAA Division I eligibility snatched from him by Proposition 48.

Attending A&I, a Division II school, was his alternative. There were thoughts on the Kingsville campus that the Javelina backfield wasn't big enough for the Bailey and Sherman.

"It had Heath on edge a little bit," said Javelina offensive backfield coach Don Pittman. "Everybody here was concerned about him being unhappy and the two trying to upstage one another. But Heath is a low key guy. He'd do anything for the team to win, he'd never complain.

"But I know he still wanted to show his stuff this year."

Sherman has done that and more while swallowing a little pride in the process. In switching to fullback, the former El Campo all-state performer rushed for 234 yards and two scores in A&I's 36-19 upset Nov. 15 of Abilene Christian that ran the 8th-ranked Javelinas' record to 8-2.

But Sherman's greatest contribution to the team has been his unselfishness and his tutelage of Bailey.

Thanks largely to Sherman, Bailey has set an NCAA record for freshmen rushers with 2,010 yards. Herschel Walker held the old record of 1,616 yards his first year at Georgia.

Together, Bailey and Sherman are averaging 316 yards rushing per game to give A&I one of the youngest and most potent backfields anywhere in the nation.

"Heath has helped me more than a lot," said the 5-9, 180-pound Bailey. "He's helped me and I've helped him. I'm satisfied down here mainly because I don't think Iowa has the type fullback A&I does."

"Johnny and I have a lot of fun on the field," Sherman said. "When we're together in the backfield, we can do a whole lot of things."

Like Bailey, Sherman was anticipating playing for a major college power. Sherman was being heavily courted by Nebraska his senior year at El Campo before A&I even knew of him.

"I was driving down the highway during a recruiting trip and listening to an El Campo game on the radio," Pittman recalled. "All I heard on offense and defense was Heath Sherman. So I decided to go see one of his games. It was just amazing what he could do on the football field."

"I started working on him from there. Every chance I had, I went to see his high school coach and I saw some of his basketball games. He could dunk any way he wanted to. I knew then he was a complete athlete."

Pittman's hard work paid off after Nebraska withdrew its offer just before the signing date. A&I suddenly became more attractive to Sherman.

"I didn't want to come to A&I at first," Sherman admitted. "But then I thought about it being closer to home. So I decided to come down here and visit. Now, I'm happy I made the decision to come here."

Perhaps, no happier than Pittman. As soon as Sherman signed the dotted line, Pittman had the former Ricebird pencilled as a starter.

"I knew he could start right away," Pittman said. "But some of the other coaches here didn't believe me until he got here in the summer. The first time he touched the ball, they were convinced. They knew he was something special."

Sherman didn't start until the Javelina's second game of last year. In that contest, he rushed for 224 yards and 2 touchdowns in a victory over Stephen F.

Austin.

"I had to wait a couple of games, but when they finally inserted me into the starting lineup, I showed them what I could do," Sherman said. "I knew I could play college football. It was just a matter of getting into the lineup."

Sherman finished his first year with 1,111 yards and seven touchdowns. For his career, he has 2,478 yards and 28 touchdowns.

"I don't see any weaknesses in his game," Pittman said. "I saw the recruiting coordinator at Nebraska and he said that not signing Heath was the biggest mistake he'd ever made."

"Some of the big schools were worried about his speed because he runs so smooth. But he hasn't been caught from behind yet. Heath can do anything."

Bailey agrees.

"He's unbelievable," Bailey said. "I have never seen a fullback get so many yards and still block so well. I think we have the best fullback in the nation. And the best tailback. We're two great backs...together."

Tyson is ready for all comers

Sports Analysis
By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Boxing Writer

Mike Tyson, the 20-year-old who is the most exciting fighter in the world, would like to be compared with John L. Sullivan, who was the first modern heavyweight champion.

There is a similarity between the youngest man to win a heavyweight championship and the last of the bareknuckle champions.

John L. Sullivan always said he could lick any man in the house and he believed it right up until the time he lost to James J. Corbett.

"I'll fight any man alive," Tyson said after knocking out Trevor Berbick in the second round Saturday night in Las Vegas, Nev. to win the World Boxing Council title.

"I refuse to get hit, to get hurt, to lose," Tyson said. "I told everybody I expected an early knockout because I believe in myself."

Some boxing people think that Tim Witherspoon, an excellent defensive fighter who is strong and takes a good punch, might be able to beat Tyson on March 6 in Las Vegas if Witherspoon keeps the World Boxing Association title against Tony Tubbs on Dec. 12.

Perhaps. But off his title winning performance, beating Mike Tyson might be an impossible task for some time.

Tyson demonstrated destructive punching power, tremendous hand speed and good foot speed.

Of the left to the side of the head that knocked him down for the second time in the second round, Berbick said, "I think I saw it coming... but it was quick."

Moments later Berbick said, "I didn't see the punch."

Berbick also said if had it to do over again, "I would employ different strategy. I would box him more."

But boxing to win, not just to last, is a difficult task against a fighter who knows he will find a way to win. Tyson has gone the distance twice in 28 professional fights.

"This was my best fight," Tyson said. "I was so intense. I was out for blood."

It was his best performance... to date.

"I'm just a fighter coming up," Tyson said. "I'm learning."

That's another of Tyson's strengths. He's willing to work at his profession. Perhaps success and money will some day rob him of his desire, but for now boxing is his life.

Two knockout heavyweight fighters Tyson is being compared with are Rocky Marciano and Smokin' Joe Frazier.

Marciano had been a pro 54 months and had fought 175 rounds when he won the title. Frazier had been a pro 56 months and had fought 114 rounds when he became champion.

A&M security chief says football players to be arrested soon

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Five Texas A&M football players will be arrested next week on charges they used long-distance telephone access codes illegally, the director of campus security says.

Robert E. Wiatt, director of the A&M campus police, said one of the five players will be charged with a felony, but he declined to name any of the players.

Theft of any amount more than $750 constitutes a felony. The other four will be charged with misdemeanors, Wiatt said.

Jackie Sherrill, head football coach and athletic director at Texas A&M, said, "I don't know anything about it." His team plays its final regular-season game Thursday against the University of Texas in Austin.

Howard Perry, an associate vice president for student affairs, said his office had not heard of any complaints against players.

Wiatt said his office received complaints from three long-distance services that do business in College Station — University Communications, MCI and Star Tel — at noon Monday. Formal charges will not be filed until next week because his office cannot complete the necessary paper work until then, Wiatt said.

The five football players are among 10 A&M students named by the companies who will be processed within the next week "unless the phone companies pull the rug out" and decide not to prosecute, Wiatt said.

Harvesters home

The Pampa Harvesters boys varsity basketball team, including Troy Owens, will open at home tonight at 7:30, meeting Amarillo Caprock. The varsity game will be preceded by junior varsity and sophomore contests.

The girls squads will be playing at Sanford-Fritch tonight. Friday the Chamber of Commerce Pampa basketball tournament will open.

Bears QB sidelined for season

By JOE MOOSHLI
AP Sports Writer

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — No one can say for sure if the slam Chicago Bears quarterback Jim McMahon took from Green Bay nose tackle Charles Martin was the blow that may sideline the quarterback for the remainder of the season.

A sore-shouldered McMahon said Sunday after the Super Bowl champion Bears' 12-10 victory over the Packers that the slam didn't help the injury.

Then on Monday, Bears Coach Mike Ditka announced McMahon had seriously aggravated a rotator cuff tear that has bothered him all season long, and added that "I doubt if we will have his services the rest of the year."

"I'm sure the flagrant foul affected him," Ditka said Monday of the Martin slam, "but he was having problems before that."

McMahon was scheduled to leave for Los Angeles today to meet with Dr. Frank Jobe, an orthopedic specialist.

In the second quarter of Sunday's game, Martin slammed McMahon to the ground — earning an immediate ejection from the game for the personal foul by referee Jerry Markbreit.

"The ball had been thrown, the quarterback was at rest and he (Martin) came in and took the quarterback, picked him up and stuffed him," Markbreit said.

McMahon, making his first start in nearly a month, landed on the injured shoulder.

In Green Bay on Monday, Packers Coach Forrest Gregg reviewed films of the game and said Martin "was wrong, and he was thrown out, which should have happened."

"We don't teach dirty football.

We teach aggressive football," Gregg added.

Martin admitted he made a mistake.

"I did the wrong thing, true enough, and they took me out of the game for it," Martin said. "I think I got a little too rough."

National Football League official Dick Maxwell said the NFL automatically reviews plays involving ejections, and Martin faces possible fine or suspension.

McMahon, who had run-ins with NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle over headbands last season, cautioned "I'd be surprised if they gave him anything, seeing it was me he slammed."

McMahon discussed his situation with Ditka and Bear trainer Fred Caito.

"He told me after practice last week he was getting better," said Caito.

Angels, Jackson splitting

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — It's official — Reggie Jackson won't be back with the California Angels next season.

Jackson and Angels' General Manager Mike Port met at Anaheim Stadium for about 90 minutes Monday. After the meeting, Port announced that Jackson would not be back with the American League West champions in 1987.

Such a development had been rumored for several months, but Port said he didn't make the announcement earlier as a matter of courtesy.

"As great a player as Reggie Jackson has been and what he has meant to this club, I certainly owed it to Reggie to sit down with him, man-to-man and face-to-face," Port said. "Trying to get together took some doing, but like last year with Rod Carew, I wanted to deliver that message in person."

Jackson, 40, who joined the Angels as a free agent in 1982 and whose five-year contract with them expired at the end of the 1986 season, said that if he doesn't sign with another club, "I'll step aside with dignity."

After meeting with Port, Jackson released a prepared statement that said: "Things just didn't work out for 1987. As to what offers there will be in '87 depends on the other clubs."

Jackson, who served mostly as the Angels' designated hitter this year, batted .241 in 132 games, with 18 homers and 58 runs batted in.

Alaska oil plan draws mixed reaction

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department's draft plan for development of Alaska's oil-rich, environmentally sensitive Coastal Plain faces outright hostility in the House and a wait-and-see attitude in the Senate.

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., chairman of the House Interior Committee, will sponsor legislation banning development there and declaring the 1.5 million acre tract along the Arctic Ocean a federal wilderness area, an aide says.

The aide, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, said Udall plans to reintroduce a 1986 bill that garnered 61 co-sponsors and which would be initially handled by his committee.

When he submitted the bill last June, Udall said that "intensive oil and gas activities could seriously affect this internationally important wildlife treasure."

On the Senate side, Bennett Johnston, D-La., says any formal proposal to open the Coastal Plain to oil and natural gas development will be viewed with "the greatest care and caution" by the Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

"The stakes are great, both for the environment and for the energy needs of this country," said Johnston, who becomes committee chairman in January. "There will, therefore, be no rush to judgment but a thorough, cool-headed, dispassionate review of the facts before we recommend legislation to the Senate."

An Interior Department study released Monday has drawn fire from environmental groups and support from the American Petroleum Institute, which said tapping the Coastal Plain's resources "is in the nation's economic and energy security interest."

The study, mandated by Congress in 1980, said, "The area is clearly the most outstanding oil and gas frontier remaining in the United States and could contribute substantially to our domestic energy supplies."

But it also warned that "oil and gas development will result in widespread, long-term changes in wildlife habitat, wilderness environment and native community activities."

Interior Assistant Secretary William Horn told a news conference that "we think we can kind of have it both ways. ... You have here the potential for super-giant oil fields. ... We see substantial economic and substantial national security benefits."

The study said geologic tests indicate that as many as 9.2 billion barrels of oil could be recovered from the Coastal Plain, which abuts the 18 million acre Arctic National Wildlife Refuge.

This production level would rival the nearby Prudhoe Bay fields that account for about 20 percent of the nation's production and would represent about 589 days supply at current consumption levels.

The Fish and Wildlife Service study was forwarded to Interior Secretary Donald Hodel, who plans to make a formal recommendation to Congress early next year following a public comment period and hearings in Alaska and Washington.

Supporters rally for farmer jailed in foreclosure case

MOUNT CARROLL, Ill. (AP) — About 60 people picketed Monday outside a courthouse in support of a farmer who was jailed on a contempt charge after he failed to turn over a tractor and plow to a lender that foreclosed on him.

Duane Kruse was jailed Sept. 25 after he failed to produce the equipment sought by the Production Credit Association, which filed for foreclosure this spring.

Kruse and his wife, Doris, contend the tractor had disappeared from a field on their farm in May and they thought the credit association had taken it. The lender has said it does not have the equipment.

"I'm so glad that people think enough of us to support us," said Mrs. Kruse as the pickets walked outside the Carroll County Courthouse carrying signs reading "Jailed without a trial in America?"

Man carrying bombs arrested near where Pope appeared

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — A former mental patient who said he wanted to firebomb Pope John Paul II because he "has too much money" was charged today with threatening the pontiff's life, police said.

Police inspector Fred Angus said the 24-year-old man was grabbed outside city hall with five gasoline bombs seven hours before John Paul visited the downtown building.

Assistant Police Commissioner Ron Redmond said the man was from Sydney and had recently been released from a mental institution in New South Wales. Police would not release his name. Redmond said the man would appear in Brisbane Magistrates court Wednesday.

Police sources said that if the court determined the man was mentally unstable, charges would be dropped pending psychiatric treatment.

The pontiff, who also celebrated an open-air Mass for about 70,000 people at the Queen Elizabeth II stadium, spent about six hours in Brisbane before heading to Sydney, the third stop of his Australian tour.

In Sydney, an eastern seaboard city of 3.3 million, the pope met a group of young people at the Sydney cricket ground.

During the one-hour meeting, he urged his audience to "act as peacemakers" because justice in the world depends on the young and "must begin with the purification in your own hearts."

Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro, asked if the pope was informed of the Brisbane incident, replied: "No comment."

Redmond said the man arrested by police came to Brisbane three days ago, and said he said he intended to kill the pope "because he's got too much money."

He was arrested at around 9 a.m., two hours before John Paul arrived in Brisbane, a city of 1 million, and seven hours before the pontiff visited the renaissance-style city hall and blessed crowds from a balcony.

Redmond said the man had tied five large soft drink bottles together, filled them with about a gallon of gasoline and attached a wick. Redmond said the man "cased the building" intending to throw the firebombs at the pope from an elevated position.

On May 13, 1981 Turkish terrorist Mehmet Ali Agca shot and wounded the pope in St. Peter's Square. A year later during a pilgrimage to the Fatima shrine in Portugal, a Spanish priest lunged at John Paul with a bayonet but the pope was not injured.

Groups file suit to enforce speed limit law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two consumer groups, saying the federal government hasn't been tough enough on states that let motorists exceed the 55 mph speed limit, are suing to force the withholding of some federal highway money.

The lawsuit by the Center for Auto Safety and Public Citizen called on the court to order the Transportation Department to withhold highway funds immediately from Arizona and Vermont, both of which have been found to have too many speeders for two years running.

The lawsuit also accused the department of not moving quickly enough to determine whether others states such as Maryland, New Hampshire and Rhode Island are violating federal regulations requiring that at least half of a state's motorists comply with the speed limit.

Arizona and Vermont did not meet the federal requirement in 1984 or 1985. Maryland failed in 1984, but its 1985 figures are in dispute, although the federal government contends the state was in violation that year as well. New Hampshire and Rhode Island flunked the federal tests in 1985.

But so far no federal highway money has been withheld, although the law says the Transportation Department may keep up to 10 percent of a state's highway assistance if more than half of a state's motorists are found to be speeding.
