ommissioners receive PAC funds

Senior Staff Writer

Two Gray County commissioners running for reelection have received $500 contributions from a political action committee started by Vice President George Bush.

The last candidates' contribution and expense statements filed before Tuesday's election reveal that commissioners Ronnie Rice and Ted Simmons each received $500 from the Fund For Amer-

Both commissioners switched to the Republican Party in February, before mounting re-election campaigns.

GOP County Clerk candidate Carol Peet also received $100 from the fund, which is a PAC founded by Bush to distribute funds to candidates at the grass roots level, according to Susan Eberle, campaign coordinator for Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo.

Statements filed last week cover the campaign period ending Oct. 25.

Rice had far outspent his Democratic opponent Jim Greene, documents filed throughout the year show. The Precinct 2 incumbent had spent $3,720. of which $2,915 was spent in a May primary race with three challengers.

Greene had spent a total of $1,480, including $715 in his three-way primary race and subsequent run-

On the plus side, Rice had raised $4,175 to Greene's $410. The incumbent reported raising $2,970 of that amount before the primary, while Greene said he did not raise any money during the primary season.

In Precinct 4, incumbent Simmons also had outspent both of his opponents, Democrat Tony Smitherman and write-in hopeful Buddy Epperson, in what has become the most expensive local

A total of $6,610 had been spent by the Precinct 4 candidates through the reporting period. Simmons reported spending $3,195 — $2,625 of it in the primary — to Smitherman's $2.900. The Democrat said he spent $1,805 of that amount in the Epperson had reported expenditures of $515 but had not filed his latest statement, due last Tuesday, by Friday afternoon. The write-in challenger reported contributions of $230, compared with $490 for Smitherman, all since the primary, and $3,970 for Simmons, of which $2,465 was raised prior to Republican Peet's race with Democratic incumbent County Clerk Wanda Carter was close behind as the second most expensive race this year, with a total of $6,605 being spent through the period.

Carter reported spending $4,795 to Peet's $1,810, while Peet stood as the year's top money-raiser with $4,880, to Carter's $710.

The child, daughter of Claro and Carmen Sigala, 712 E. GOP gains ground in area campaigns

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

The easy years are over for area Democratic officeholders

For years, they went about their business, secure in the knowledge that they'd be re-elected unopposed or with weak competition. They seldom bothered to do much campaigning or take out ads.

But this year, with Republicans gunning out of nooks and write-in challengers creeping through crannies, Democrats have discovered they now have to spend a little more campaign money and do a little more gladhanding than in the past. Partisan politics have hit the homefront

In Roberts County, the hottest race is a nonpartisan county judge's contest between Democratic nominee J.T. Webb and write-in Frank Heare. The 56-year-old Heare said he's running as a write-in because he didn't want to oppose incumbent Roberts County Judge Newton Cox. So. Heare waited until after the May Democratic Primary and got his chance when Cox was defeated by Webb in the May Democratic primary.

"We need to hold on to what we have and keep costs down." Heare said. "We need to cut in places but I just don't know where, yet.

"I've kept up with what's going on," said Heare, who often sits in on commission meetings. "And I feel I am qualified for the job. Webb, 65, has also "done a lot of listening" during his campaign. He was also reluctant to go against Cox, but was encouraged to go ahead. Webb believes that the counties are losing too much of their power to the state. 'We need someone to go in and start kicking cans." Webb said

'I feel good about the election; but not confident enough to quit working," he added. In other Roberts County races, Republicans are threatening the offices of the Democratic incumbent county clerk, justice of the peace and sheriff. The county's GOP party also reportedly tried to solicit candidates for county treasurer and county

"I've learned not to take anything for granted." said incumbent County Clerk Jackie Jackson, 54, whose last opponent showed up when she first ran for office in 1970. "Any time you have a challenged race, there's that element of chance.

Jackson's new challenge comes from Ione Jones, 57, a former oil field company secretary who also sought the Miami city secretary job earlier this year. Jones says she's had a lot of encouragement, but she's not placing any bets either.

The county's only justice of the peace. Mildred Cunningham, 76, is facing a challenge from Fannye J. Greenhouse, 56. Sheriff Lando Brown, 63, who was appointed last year to replace retired Sheriff Eddie Brines, faces a challenge from Ronnie Wright, 39 County Treasurer Sarah Gill is unopposed as are Precinct 2 Commissioner Ronnie Gill (no close relation to Sarah), and Precinct 4 commission candidate Clyde Hodges, who defeated incumbent Sam

Condo in the May Democrat primary. CARSON COUNTY Although election fever is also hot in Carson for the position being vacated by Bud Jones. The rest of the candidates are all write-ins who want a second chance for election after being defeated in the May Democrat primary.

County, partisan politics are not to blame. Only one Republican, Precinct 2 commission candidate C.E. Williams of Panhandle, is seeking an office. He goes up against Democratic candida C.F. Williams and write-in Richard Robinson.

Carson County Clerk Sue Persons said there are more Carson County write-ins this year "than I can ever remember

Persons added that write-ins seldom muster

Fireman accused of arson returns to fight city fires

By PAUL PINKHAM Senior Staff Writer

A Pampa firefighter, who had been accused of torching his own car and smashing it with a baseball bat three years ago, returned to fighting fires for the city Saturday following a plea bargain agreement reached Friday in district court.

Calvin Farmer, a six-year veteran of the Pampa Fire Department, was back on the job at 7 a.m. Saturday, after receiving a six-month deferred adjudication from 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhany on a lesser charge of hindering secured Farmer pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor charge in exchange for dismissal of two felony arson charges pending against him.

The fireman was first indicted on an arson charge by a grand jury in April. He was accused of setting his car ablaze in 1983 in an attempt to collect insurance money. Another arson indictment and the charge of hindering secured creditors were returned in September

The hindering secured creditors charge involves First State Bank of Miami, which the indictment claims had a security interest in the vehicle.

In addition to the deferred adjudication — which McIlhany said means the charge will be removed from Farmer's record if the firefighter properly completes standard terms of probation - the judge fined Farmer $100. Farmer also must pay court costs and probation fees

Pampa City Manager Bob Hart said city officials met with Farmer on Friday afternoon, after learning about the agreement, and decided to reinstate him Farmer had been on suspension without pay, pending resolution of the case

The firefighter will take a regular shift, Hart said, and Farmer was on duty at the Central Fire Station Saturday morning.

Hart would not say whether the city planned to take any further disciplinary action against

Farmer had attempted to strike a plea bargain once before in the case, but failed after he became caught in the middle of a jurisdiction dispute between Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton and county court officials.

In July, Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy essentially rejected a plea bargain agreement worked out by Hamilton and Farmer's lawyer, Rowdy That agreement would have given Far mer a $250 fine and deferred adjudication in exchange for a guilty plea on a misdemeanor attemp ted theft charge, stemming from the same inci-

But after hearing the Farmer plead guilty to attempted theft. Kennedy found the firefighter not guilty, saying: "After I heard his testimony, I just decided he wasn't guilty

County Attorney Bob McPherson later made it clear that he and Kennedy did not feel they should be bound by a plea bargain made in district court.

Bowers said Friday that the latest agreement is essentially what should have been done in county court in July. He said he was pleased with the MIAMI — Lando Brown and Ron Wright enjoy having coffee together occasionally at a local cafe. This sense of cordiality has spilled over into their relatively clean race against each other for Roberts County sheriff.

If Brown, the Democratic incumbent, or Wright, his Republican challenger, have any accusations. claims or anything bad to say about each other. they're not making their feelings public

Both say they want to run a clean campaign, and they just want voters to compare their back

Roberts County has the only sheriff's race in the area this year because of the 1985 resignation of Sheriff Eddie Brines.

Brown, Brines' deputy, was appointed sheriff in September 1985 The winner of the November race will serve only two years until the regular sheriff's election in

Wright, 39, can look back at a 10-year law enforcement career from 1970 to 1980.

Wright has a certificate and 142 hours basic law enforcement training. His training also includes 24 hours of schooling in advanced narcotics investigation, 24 hours of criminal law, 60 hours in court procedure, 60 hours of jail management, 40 hours firearm training, 40 hours in criminal investigation and 60 hours for juvenile offenses. Wright also took courses in FBI defense tactics and traffic in-

Wright has served with police departments at Childress, Floydada, Wellington and Monahans. He served with the Hemphill County Sheriff's Department until his brother, C.H. Wright, took over as sheriff. He also served with the Andrews County Sheriff's Department and the Olney Police Department. Wright returned to Miami in May 1976 to serve one year with the Roberts County Sheriff's Department.

Brown

He worked with the Ochiltree County Sheriff's Department for four months in 1979, then he left law enforcement "to work in the oil patch."

Now a heavy equipment operator, Wright said he's ready to get back into the law enforcement

"I love law enforcement," Wright said. "I love helping people. And I've had a lot of people come up and express their support for my campaign. Quite a lot more than I expected.

Wright admitted that Roberts County doesn't have much major crime to fight,

"We don't have too many problems here," he said. "We're a low-key community. We have a little drug problem and a little thieving going on; but not as much as in other towns. We're fortunate.'

"I want to work with the people in Roberts County so we can have a safe community," he said, adding he'll have to wait and see if he gets elected before he makes any changes with the fivemember sheriff's office.

He had no comment on the way the office is cur-

American hostages moved; release may happen soon

LARNACA, Cyprus (AP) — Hostage negotiator Terry Waite dropped out of sight Saturday after announcing progress in efforts to free Americans kidnapped in Lebanon. A Lebanese television station said six American and two French hostages already were in Syrian hands.

The Lebanese Broadcasting Corp. said the eight hostages were in Anjar in east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, and that the Syrians would release the Frenchmen before Nov. 10. It said the Syrians were considering releasing two of the Americans, but did not say which two.

The station, which speaks for the anti-Syrian Lebanese Forces Christian militia, has good Lebanese security sources but has proved to be inaccurate in the past. It's report could not be independently confirmed.

In Damascus, Syrian Information Minister Yassin Rajjouh, asked about the reports of an immiment hostage release, said only, "Everything will be announced in due course.

'Syria is continuing to exert all its efforts' to secure the hostages' release, he said.

Seven Americans and 13 other foreigners remain missing in Lebanon, kidnapped by various underground groups. A Shiite Moslem group called Islamic Jihad, which says it is holding three of the Americans, claims it also killed one in October Waite, a personal envoy of Anglican Archbishop Robert Runcie of Canterbury, telephoned The Associated Press office in Beirut on Friday to disclose that he was in the city. Later Friday, he flew to Cyprus and told reporters, "Something may happen in a day or two. But I don't know for sure.

His whereabouts Saturday were not known. The U.S. and British embassies disclaimed knowledge of Waite's activities. Eve Keatley, a spokeswoman for Runcie, said in a telephone interview from London that Waite's plans were uncertain but that "he expects to be on 'He is cautiously optimistic about the possibility of further hostages being released," she said. In Damascus, Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati of Iran met with President Hafez Assad of Syria. Iran is believed to have ties to Islamic Jihad, but it was not known if Velayati's visit was connected to hostage negotiations.

The Lebanese television said that two French hostages, diplomats Marcel Carton and Marcel Fontaine, were taken to a meeting with Lebanese Justice Minister Nabih Berri in Beirut and then were brought to Anjar on Thursday. It did not say when the American hostages were brought to

Two Christian radio stations in Beirut reported Friday that six Americans, Carton and Fontaine were to be released, and that the Frenchmen had been turned over to Syrian officials in the Bekaa.

The radios stopped broadcasting the report Saturday, and a news editor at one, the Voice of Lebanon, said he was awaiting further information. In Paris, the French Foreign Ministry said there was no basis for the radios' report.

Two unmarked planes, a Learjet and a Boeing 727, were parked at the runway of the international airport at Larnaca. Airport sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said the Learjet was chartered by the U.S. government.

The latest expectations were raised not only by the presence of Waite but by the recent pullout of more staff from the U.S. Embassy in Beirut and predictions that Syria would exert its influence to free hostages in order to counteract Britain's charges it is involved in terrorism.

However, a senior U.S. Embassy official in Beirut said the partial pullout of embassy staff was 'merely a precaution' and that they would return from Cyprus in two to three weeks.

Islamic Jihad has said it is holding Terry A. Anderson, 39, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press; David P. Jacobsen, 55. director of the American University Hospital in Beirut; and Thomas Sutherland, 55, the university's acting dean of agriculture. All were abducted

It said in October 1985 that it killed U.S. diplomat William Buckley, 57. Lebanese Shiite and Western intelligence sources said Buckley might have died earlier. No body has been found. Islamic Jihad, which means Islamic Holy War, has demanded the release of 17 Shiite Moslems jailed in Kuwait for bombing the U.S. and French embassies in 1983. Frank Herbert Reed, 53, director of a private school in Beirut, was kidnapped Sept. 9, and a pro-Libyan group called Arab Revolutionary Cells Omar Moukhtar Forces claimed responsibility.

Joseph James Cicippio, 56, the American University's acting comptroller, was abducted Sept. 12, and the Revolutionary Justice Organization claimed responsibility. On Oct. 21, the group said it had kidnapped Edward Austin Tracy, 56, a writer.

Carton, 63, the French Embassy protocol officer. and Fontaine, 46, the vice consul, were kidnapped

Neither woman faced a primary challenge. The top spender locally is Republican district clerk challenger Vickie Walls, who had spent $4,895, while her opponent, incumbent Democrat Mary Clark, had spent $1,275. Walls had raised $4,750 to Clark's $555, the documents show.

In the county treasurer's race, Democrat Lodema Mitchell had outspent Republican Scott Hahn by about $300. Mitchell reported spending $2,725 while Hahn reported expenditures totaling $2,415. Hahn had raised $2,735 to Mitchell's $495.

In the Precinct 2 justice of the peace race, where Democrat Wayne Roberts is challenged by writein candidate Margie Prestidge, neither candidate listed any contributions. Prestidge reported spending $800 while Roberts has spent $290.

Those Amazin' Mets

Please forgive, if you will, a bit of yankee arrogance from a native near-New-Yorker, but I'm gloating this week.

Those Amazin' Mets, as we used to call 'em back in '69, won a thrilling World Series on Monday night, thus bringing the world championship trophy to the Big Apple, where it has always belonged. And although I'd rather see the trophy in Yankee Stadium than at Shea, I can't help but bask in the glory of it being home again. Houston? Great town, but a second-rate baseball city. Same goes for Boston and Anaheim. Ah, but New York. Now there's a town that loves its baseball. Why else would they have torn up the stadium like they did when the Mets clinched their division title back in September.

While the rest of the world was saying "typical New York arrogance," I was saying "Hogwash!" New Yorkers still think Texans are the most arrogant people in the world (although, to be truthful, I've lived in or near both places and New Yorkers are definitely the more arrogant of the two breeds, to say nothing of Californians, who would win an Arrogance World Series hands down!)

Nobody except someone who has sat in the stands at Shea and the House That Ruth Built and cheered the likes of Mays and Mantle on to victory can understand what it'd be like to see the home team go all the way

I can well imagine the scene at Venturi's, down in The Bowery (best pizza this side of heaven trust me!), when the final out was made. Or Fat Tuesday's. Or any number of working class bars in the city. These are their Mets; they are world champs and nobody can take that away!

For a night, at least, the crusty longshoreman and the accountant in the fancy business suit share the same moment of happiness. They hug. They are one in victory. And, for that one flickering moment, all their cares and worries are cast aside.

At Cutter's Bar and Grill, on the South Street in my hometown of Morristown, New Jersey, the scene is most likely the same. Another working class bar, a place where proud, wrinkled, Italian men gather after work to trade laughs and stories about "The Old Country" and kids like me used to sneak in and try to get old Joe to sell us a beer, even though we weren't old (or wise) enough

But tonight is special. Tonight there's beer and meatball hoagies on the house. Tomorrow will come soon enough with all its toil, but tonight the Mets are world champs of this great American game called Bas-e-ball!

Ah, the memories a Series evokes.

The memory of '69, when no one thought they could do it, and the shock when they did, in five, over a much better Baltimore team. A smiling Ed Charles circling the basepaths, another Seaver strikeout, a Shamsky or Swoboda catch in the out-

The memory of '73. Flaky Tug McGraw pumping his glove against his right thigh, leading another sellout Shea Stadium crown in his patented "You Gotta Believe!" chant. The legend, Willie Mays, ing this is his last hurrah on-deck circle, pleading with the umpires after a close play at the plate. An aging legend who summoned the last bastions of his strength just to hit one more out, not even knowing what it meant for a short, shy kid from Jersey, sitting in the upper deck, to be able to see his hero do it And now we can add to that the memory of '86. They'll be talking about it in the Big Apple for years to come, I reckon. Young Daryl Strawberry tipping his hat to a taunting Fenway crowd. Staring oblivion in the face. Tenth inning singles by Carter, Mitchell and Knight, to spark an utterly unbelievable, two-out, two-strike, three-run rally to make the difference between a year that never

United Way smashes goal; final totals due this mor

By LARRY HOLLIS News Editor

Mopping up" actions are expected to bring the Pampa United Way's 1986 drive over its goal of $286,021, Drive Chairman Dean Copeland said after more than 99 percent of the goal was in

By the time the last volunteers had brought in their reports to the Victory Celebration Thursday in the Pampa Community Building, $283,679 had been collected, amounting to 99.2 percent of the goal

Even during the party, the totals kept changing. Copeland had already announced 99 percent had been reached and projected the drive would reach and even exceed its goal.

But after that announcement, latecomers continued to trickle in, adding additional $830 to the total pushing the percentage even higher as the final check-in wound up.

Copeland said there are still reports to come in, with some major firms yet to turn in their figures and volunteers out "mopping up" the last pledge cards.

He said final figures will be available sometime in November. At that time, "we will know exactly how much over the goal we have gone," he said.

Helping the United Way reach its goal Thursday was a 47 percent increase in donations from J.C. Penney employees, along with matching funds from the First National Bank employees had a 100 percent participation, with donations up 13 percent from last year, reported United Way office executive Jan

Cabot turned in $11,510, up from last year with more donations yet to be re-

Lyle said Titan Specialties, with fewer employees, matched its 1985 donations

The Major Firms Division, with cochairmen W.A. Morgan and Brian Vining, has reported $185,967, nearly 118 percent of its division goal of $158,000.

Lyle said employee groups in major firms have really been a big reason behind the drive's success, with company volunteers conducting good drives and with many employees taking the agency tours.

Also exceeding its goal to date is the General Individual Division with Evelyn Johnson as chairman. Her division volunteers have turned in $21,688, more than $1,660 above the division

White Deer volunteers turned in their first report, with $250 checked in. Workers in White Deer became involved in the Pampa United Way drive last year because most of the agencies supported by UW funds also assist many surrounding area residents beyond Pampa and Gray County.

Other division totals following Thursday's check-in were Commercial, $23,782; Professionals, $10,085; Public, $12,422; and Special Gifts, $29,585.

Providing refreshments for the Victory Celebration was Titan Specialties. Reed Echols brought the decorations of streamers, party hats and horns. Mike Kneisl provided entertainment by playing "victory" records, with Showcase Rentals donating the use of stereo equipment.

As the last check-in was ending, one agency representative was overheard saying she was going to miss the weekly meetings since they had become such an enjoyable activity.

Under the direction of Betty Brown of High Plains Epilepsy, the check-in meetings have offered food, fun, entertainment and a chance for volunteers, agency representatives and members of the public to visit as they waited for the latest figures to be announced.

Absentee ballots

DILLEY (AP) - All of Frio County's absentee ballots have been impounded in the wake of allegations of fraud and forgery, County Attorney James

By the close of the absentee voting period Friday, a total of 1,033 votes had been cast countywide, a turnout that some officials said was unusually heavy.

County Clerk Mona Hoyle said about half of those were cast at the absentee box in Dilley's Precinct 4. There are about 1,800 registered voters in the precinct, where about 1,000 ballots were cast in the May primary elections.

"There are suspected irregularities," Smith said, adding that he obtained the impoundment order from District Judge R.L. Eschinburg because of allegations of election fraud and the possible forgery of some voters' names.

Voting was not interrupted by the impounding order, which authorized Sheriff Benny Sanders to take the ballots for safe-keeping overnight during the absentee voting period.

He is to retain custody of the ballot cans pending a court hearing on the controversy Monday.

"Some people are saying they haven't voted and yet there are ballots for them," said Roger Trevino, an attorney for two county candidates who sought Monday's hearing.

"I'm not saying they shouldn't be counted, but if there are two ballots for the same person, that person will have to tell us which is the real one,' Trevino said.

State District Judge David Berchelmann will preside at Monday's hearing in Pearsall. The hearing was sought by Rudy Alvarez, a write-in candidate for Precinct 4 county commissioner, and Precinct 4 Peace Justice Honorio Gonzales.

Alvarez is challenging Democratic nominee Humberto Berrones and Gonzales is defending his seat against write-in candidate Ernesto Berrones. The Berroneses are brothers.

Alvarez and Gonzales are seeking a temporary restraining order to end what they claim is improper assistance being given to voters, the altering of absentee ballots and other irregularities.

Their suit names the Berrones brothers and Hoyle as defendants, among others.

was and a year that, well...just ask a New Yorker! County accepts resignation of magistrate David Potter

By PAUL PINKHAM Senior Staff Writer

Although Precinct 2 Justice of the Peace David Potter will be stepping down Wednesday to go to work for Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan, county commissioners decided to wait until Friday to name a replacement Commissioners accepted Potter's resignation Friday and agreed to wait until Nov 7, when they meet in special session to canvas votes, to replace him.

Commissioners expect the name the winner of the justice of the peace election to fill the remained of Potter's term. Potter, a 40-year-old Republican elected in 1984 to fill the unexpired term of Nat Lunsford, who resigned because of health problems, said he plans to go work as night jailer for the Sheriff's Department, beginning Wednesday. He said his resignation was hastened because the sheriff is holding the job open for him. Potter had not sought re-election, meaning he would have stepped down Dec. 31. He had run for Precinct 2 county commissioner, finishing fourth in the May GOP primary.

His justice of the peace seat is being sought by Democrat Wayner Roberts, 32, 700 E. Craven, and write-in hopeful Margie Prestidge, 55, 1020 E.

Neither candidate could be reached for comment Saturday but Roberts' son said his father is prepared to go to work early if he wins Tuesday's election.

Although Potter's resignation will leave the county with only one justice of the peace for two days, Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy said he could help fill the void by setting bonds. Kennedy added that Precinct 4 Justice of the Peace R.C.

Parker of McLean should be available if needed. Parker, a Democrat, is unopposed in his own re-election bid.

In other business Friday, commissioners heard a progress report from County Surveyor Gene Barber on a $700.000 renovation project at Perry Lefors Field, and later toured the site with Barber The project, which includes overlaying the main runway, taxiways and aprons, is being jointly funded by the county and the Federal Aviation Administration.

Barber said he was pleased with progress of the

'Without a doubt, this is the nicest, showiest project we've had in a long, long time," Barber

Commissioners also met with Pampa Emergency Management Coordinator Steve Vaughan concerning an upcoming disaster drill Nov. 12. Vaughan said the drill will be held in conjunction with other Panhandle communities and will involve city and county officials, the Police Department, the Sheriff's Department, the state highway department and Department of Public Safety. Pampa Independent School District, the Red Cross and the Salvation Army.

Both local radio stations also will be involved, as will First Baptist Church's communications facilities, Vaughan said.

'This'll probably be the most extensive test of the county (emergency management) plan that we have ever undertaken," Vaughan said. "It's a test of the state's plan as well as the county's plan."

In other action, commissioners: accepted bids of $475 for the sale of a used pickup truck in Precinct 4 from Billy Bybee of McLean, $84,900 for a new tandem-powered motor grader for Precinct 2 from West Texas Equipment Co. of Amarillo, and $12,500 for a new 1-ton pickup truck for Precinct 3 from Culberson-Stowers Chevrolet of Pampa.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXÁS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Conservatives rate media's ugly label

H.L. Mencken, the great American journalist of the early 20th century, believed that objectivity in newswriting is impossible, so reporters should at least be open and lively when they insert their biases into a story. Most journalists of today would beg to differ, but Mencken may have been on to something.

The publication Newswatch has uncovered a fascinating piece of evidence that America's major news media hold a bias against conservative organizations. Newswatch, a monthly newsletter from the National Conservative Foundation, studied the national news magazines Time and Newsweek through the Nexis computer system.

Nexis combed through every issue of Time and Newsweek from January 1980 through June 1986, searching for stories about either Common Cause, a liberal lobbying organization, or the National Conservative Political Action Committee (NCPAC for short), a conservative organization.

The results of the Nexis search were enlightening. Time and Newsweek mentioned Common Cause 21 and 24 times, respectively, during those 61/2 years. But not once did either publication attach the label "liberal" to Common Cause. NCPAC was a different story. In 21 mentions in Newsweek, NCPAC was labeled ideologically 71 percent of the time. Not content with merely labeling NCPAC "conservative" (which is certainly true), the magazines called it and its staff the "bad boy of American politics, "far right," an "alien extremist group," "political terrorists," "political commandos" and quick-trigger ideologues. The standard is clear: If your group is liberal, Time and Newsweek will not call it liberal ("grass-roots citizens lobby" is more likely). But if your group is conservative, watch out. Yours will be called conservative, if you're lucky, but more likely the label will be something harsh. We suspect H.L. Mencken would be amused.

hy we win Nobel Prizes

We've done it again! Of the 18 Nobel Prizes that have been awarded to economists, Americans have been the winners 14 times. What's most exciting for me is that this year's winner is James M. Buchanan, professor of economics, at my school, George Mason University - just 13 miles from the nation's capital — in suburban Fairfax, Virginia.

Although he's a native of Tennessee, Buchanan's spiritual home is Virginia, where my great grandparents were slaves. But we didn't meet in Virginia. We met in 1968, nearly 3,000 miles away, at UCLA. He was a visiting professor, and I was a Ph.D. student.

Those were years of troubled times on the nation's campuses. Students were rioting, taking over buildings to protest racial discrimination and the Vietnam War. Even though I disagreed with some of their tactics, I had some sympathy for the objectives of the campus

Into this setting pops a demanding, uncompromising James Buchanan to teach courses in public finance. Buchanan's rigid style was no big problem for me. Living under my mother's roof I had become accustomed to that kind of training. The problem was Buchanan's being demanding, uncompromising and rigid with a dignified southern drawl. I had been with enough southern boys in the Army to know that this spelled trouble

The long and short of it all is that I was wrong. We hit it off quite well. Not only did we have a good exchange of ideas in class, but I passed his merciless Ph.D preliminary exam. Moreover, there is something basically decent about people who are in their office, ready to work, at 6:30 in the morning. And we've enjoyed that same good relationship over the years, despite his erroneous claims that he taught me everything I

Professor Buchanan won the Nobel Prize for his path-breaking work in analyzing the economics of politics, a field known as public choice. His hypothesis is that politicians and bureaucrats do not lose their self-interested behavior upon assuming public office or attaining civil servant status. What does change are the restraints they encounter; that's the "bottom line." Many of our national problems are a direct result of politicians not having a bottom line. The benefits and costs of private decisions are focused and concentrated. In other words, if you don't maintain your house, you lose; you don't get as much when it's sold. If you maintain it, you win: you get more if you resell.

In politics, it's an entirely different story. If a politician or bureaucrat wastes national resources, the cost is spread over the entire nation. If he makes good decision, the benefit is similarly dispersed. This produces socially perverse incentives. The "best" time to waste money is when it belongs to somebody else. And the best time to save is when it's your own. When politicians spend, guess whose money it is?

Buchanan's analysis suggests it's a waste of time trying to elect "good" politicians because everybody will behave roughly the same when faced with the same restraints. It's like gravity. Republicans fall at 32 feet per second squared, and so do Democrats. In Buchanan's lesscompromising moments, he might recommend we change the rules to give politicians greater private incentives to act in the national interest. Buchanan would be a strong advocate for a spending limit being written into the Constitution.

Yes, Buchanan is a great scholar. What's greater is the freedom we Americans have in the market place of ideas. It's this freedom that produces great scholars and explains why we walk away with most of the Nobel Prizes.

Daddy always had a crewcut

I happened to be in a gathering of all males recently, and I don't remember how the subject came up, but a man said, "I'm just glad my daddy didn't live long enough to see me getting my hair cut in a beauty parlor.' I immediately thought of my own father, who died before I stopped getting my hair cut and started getting "styled."

I used to go to Grover's Barber Shop. Now, I have followed other modern men, and I get my hair shampooed, conditioned and styled at a place called "Blowout."

Melissa does my hair. Quite often, there are ladies on each side of me having their hair done. too. That's all the place needs to be a bona fide beauty parlor

I had become fairly comfortable in that setting, but after what the man said about his father, I somehow felt I had betrayed my own.

My father was a military man. He was wearing a crewcut the day I was born, and he was wearing one the day he died.

I have to temper this story a bit for a family newspaper, but a man who served in the Army with my father told this:

'We had some new recruits in around '54, and the captain (my father) had them standing at attention.

"He went down the row, asking each recruit where he was from, and he came to a kid with what was considered long hair back then.

'The captain said, 'Soldier, how long has your hair been in that condition?'

"The kid replied, 'Since I started high school, sir.' The captain said, 'I want you to report to the post physician right away. Do you understand?' 'The kid said, 'Yes, sir, but what do I do when get there?' The captain replied, 'Ask him to give you a complete physical to verify whether or not you're in the wrong outfit and need to be transferred to the WACS. My hair is not that long by today's standards, but if Daddy could see me now, I am certain he would be shocked. I can hear him now: "In the name of God, son, Liberace doesn't have that much hair." My father considered Liberace to be the epitome of the lowest form of male life.

There are a number of things I do today that would shock my father were he still alive. Besides the hair on my head, I have a mustache and a beard.

"Only movie stars and homosexuals have beards," he likely would say, "and I haven't seen any of your movies lately. I play golf. He abhorred golf.

'Silly game,' he'd say. "Hit the ball and then go find it."

I don't wear socks very often. After my father left the Army, he became a teacher. I saw him send two 10th-graders home during a basketball game, telling them not to return until they were wearing "the proper footwear."

And I get my hair cut in a beauty parlor. If you're listening, Daddy, forgive me.

And consider this: At least I don't use hair

Indian women lead with strength

Friendships with Indian women have added a rich dimension to my life during the six years I've lived in the Southwest.

I've come to know Pueblo potters who shape bowls in the manner of their foremothers from clay along the Rio Grande

I know an Indian poet with the lovely name Luci Tapahonso who paints our unique landscape with the words: "And the ragged red cliffs, flowing hills and wind echoes are only extensions of a never-ending prayer.

I have written about the remarkable Annie Wauneka, who can shear a sheep as well as any man, and who was the first woman elected to the Navajo Tribal Council. Indian women can be as diverse as a grandmother weaving saddle blankets on an ancient loom or a well-schooled young woman directing an Indian radio station

Now, I have met Wilma Mankiller, 40-year-old chief of the Cherokees, a tribe of 71,000 living mostly in Oklahoma. The first woman to head one of the country's largest tribes, she prides herself on her partnerships with men. Her name in no way reflects her philosophy. "Mankiller" has been handed down from a Cherokee warrior noted for his bravery generations ago.

With flat-voiced irony and the hint of a smile, Mankiller says she shocks those who think Indian chiefs must be male, covered with feathers and riding a horse. Until she was 11, she lived in rural Adair County, Okla., on a 160acre farm belonging to her father's family and called Mankiller Flats.

When drought devastated the land in the late '50s, the family migrated to San Francisco, where her father worked on the wharves and became a union organizer. "Family arguments at our house were always about politics, not who used all the bath towels. she recalls. "It was understood that community involvement was the expected way of life for us."

She earned a degree in social science, married an Ecuadorean accountant, and had two daughters. The marriage dissolved in 1975, however, and Mankiller returned to the farm in Oklahoma. With her three dogs and her daughters, 19 and 20, she loves to walk the land, grown abundant with oak and sycamore, coyotes and deer. She rose to prominence because of her successful community-development projects, which were a significant accomplishment for a tribe troubled with unemployment, declining oil prices and inadequate health care.

In one small rural community, Cherokees lived primitively, in poverty and despair, blaming outside forces for the meagerness of their lives. She persuaded them to look to their own capabilities and capacities and inspired the community to build a 26mile water system and to rehabilitate their homes.

"These are not just physical changes, she says, but attitudes changes too. The people felt a new sense of power and control over their lives.

Mankiller related this turnaround to women who often find themselves sterotyped as inadequate and incapable. "We need to look to our inner resources and abilities and draw on our own strengths to make things happen for us.

She feels women bring two unique qualities to leadership: A willingness to collaborate. "When women make a decision, they consult many people in the process. Men are more apt to make unilateral decisions and charge ahead." · A nurturing management style.

"Women care about others and are more involved with the personal than the abstract. As chief, I am part CEO and part social worker.'

Her leadership seems to be approved. She recently went to a rural meeting with 200 elderly Cherokees: "When I walked in, they all stood up and clapped. I was so surprised, I honest to God, turned around to see who was behind me."

Indian women, like women elsewhere, are evolving - coming into their own. Yet, as poets, potters or chiefs, they preserve their heritage.

Need more channels

I have information that Garden City, Kan., a We have allowed them the right to twist our Bill town about the size of Pampa, is getting 25 channels from Denver Cable TV for $14.25, while we pay $13.69 for 12 channels.

> The 25 channels include a weather network. I am sure our city manager, Mr. Hart, and the City Commission will look for a better cable TV organization to deal with when this franchise comes up for renewal.

Between the gas stations' prices and the cable TV, Pampa is sure getting a rip-off. Ralph T. Gardiner

Damaged reflectors

To the editor:

Whose responsibility? As I drive to and from Amarillo, a question comes to mind in regards to the damage of many of the posts and-or reflectors at the side of the highway. If this is the responsibility of the contractor employed by our state highway department, surely the cost of such damages can be recovered. If it is the responsibility of our own state highway department, perhaps an additional "fee" can be located to take care of the situation.

A Christian rip-off

To the editor:

It was too good to be true, wasn't it? For a little while, it looked like there was a chink in the gasoline pricing armor.

Maybe the hot breath of the state attorney general's office melted a little of the icy resolve off the gasoline cartel's rip-off mentality.

Now it is business as usual. The ho-hum price for regular in Pampa is pegged at a uniform 79.9 cents per gallon.

We should be grateful for 10 cents relief? Maybe so, but my gratitude sticks in my craw when I see gasoline for as much as 20 cents less in Amarilo.

I don't have any idea who is responsible for Pampa's gasoline pricing. I wonder if the responsible person professes Christianity?

It is so difficult sometimes, to make the Christian transition from worship place to marketplace. Loving God, and ripping off your brother, are inconsistent.

ives find husbands much too predictable

By DEBRA FOWLER Killeen Daily Herald

Maybe someone can tell me what happens to men when they get married.

What happens to these supposedly strong and independent creatures who seemed to have it all together when they used to pick you up for a date?

If you ever overhear a group of women talking about their husbands, you'll find that married men seem to have quite a few common characteristics. Look at married men when they're sick, for ex-

When a man gets a cold, he jumps in bed and stays there for days, almost any woman will tell you. And the whining that comes out of his sick room is unbelievable. He wants soup to unstuff his

"Every move he makes is painful — it must be, for all the moaning he does," a friend of mine said about her husband, who was, at the time, wallowing in misery with a sinus infection. "He says he doesn't sleep a wink all night — but his snoring keeps me awake. And he claims nothing tastes good — after he eats three pieces of pie.

'No, I'm lying in a pool of blood at the bottom of the stairs," I answered. 'This is the first chance I've had all day to call

Nation's Democrats hope to grab control of Senate

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Blizzards of polling data and conflicting partisan predictions are marking the final weekend of the 1986 campaign. Democrats are saying voters will return the Senate to them, but Republicans are predicting they'll keep control by a narrow margin.

An ABC News analysis on Friday of a massive survey sponsored by the network and The Washington Post gave encouragement to the Republicans. The Post's interpretation of the data, however, contained good news for the Democrats.

ABC said the interviews with more than 10,000 registered voters showed the likeliest result in Senate races would be a three-seat pickup by the Democrats, one short of the number they need to regain the majority they lost in 1980

But the poll's other sponsor, The Post, interpreted the figures as showing Democrats leading in races for six Republican-held Senate seats while Republicans were leading for two Democratic seats — a result that if accurate would give the Senate to the Democrats.

ABC said it believed Senate races in Idaho and North Dakota were tossups, while the Post said Democrats were leading in the two contests.

The Post said its findings were based on its estimates of probable turnout, providing one source for differences between its interpretations and ABC's.

Barry Sussman, in charge of polling at The Post, said in a telephone interview that it was not unusual for separate analyses to come up with slightly different findings based on the same raw polling

President Reagan was in California for the weekend and planned appearances for Rep. Ed Zschau, who is waging an uphill campaign to unseat Democratic Sen. Alan Cranston

Back in Washington, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., questioned the power of presidential coattails in this non-presidential election

"I don't see the coattail effects of the president making any great change out there," O'Neill said Friday as Reagan campaigned in Washington state and Idaho before heading to California.

'Can anyone say, 'Let's have two more years of this kind of farm policy?" said the House speaker. O'Neill, who is retiring this year, told reporters he expects the Democrats to add about 10 seats to their House majority, and added, "I'd be surprised Republicans hold a 53-47 edge in the Senate, but must defend 22 of the 34 seats at stake.

if the Senate doesn't go Democratic.'

If the Senate should be split 50-50 after the elections. Vice President George Bush would be able to break the tie in favor of the Republicans.

David Johnson, director of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, said his party's candidates were leading or even in nine states that have Republican incumbents. "We're going to win" and wind up with 53 seats in the new Senate, Johnson listed the nine as Florida, Maryland, Nevada, North Carolina, North and South Dakota, Idaho, Alabama and Washington. Democratic seats where the races are close include California. Colorado, Missouri and Louisiana, he said.

But Tom Griscom, head of the GOP sena committee, predicted his side would emerge from the election "with at least one more than they've got. That means we'll still be in control of the U.S.

The ABC News poll analysis said the trend in House races was in the Republicans' favor, which would be a remarkable outcome in a midterm election. Normally, especially in the second term of a president, midterm elections result in heavy losses for the party in control of the White House.

The ABC analysis said GOP House losses might well be only three seats and "the Republicans now have a chance of actually gaining a few House

Shultz to hammer Soviets with concessions at Vienna

By BARRY SCHWEID AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz will be looking for Soviet concessions on "Star Wars" and human rights and for cooperation in the war against terrorism when he meets this week in Vienna with Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze.

The "stock-taking" session in the Austrian capital Wednesday and Thursday also could wind up with an invitation to Shultz to visit Moscow later in the year for further talks, two U.S. officials said.

There is little indication, however, that Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev will come to the United States for a summit meeting with President Reagan by the end of December, despite the stepped-up dialogue

A senior U.S. official, who discused prospects for the Vienna talks with a reporter under conditions of anonymity, said Gorbachev's Oct. 11-12 meeting with Reagan in Iceland had already established a basis for agreements on a wide range of issues provided the details could be worked out at lower levels.

"Both sides have their motives to keep going," said the official of the drive for reducing nuclear weapons that stalled in Reykjavik over the U.S. anti-missile program, known popularly as "Star Wars.

The officials said they doubted the Soviets would let their objections to field testing of American anti-missile technology scuttle negotations now under way in Geneva to slash superpower nuclear arsenals.

Gorbachev forced a breakup over the issue at the summit meeting with Reagan three weeks ago. He has denounced the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative as a threatened extension of the arms race to a * new sphere. Since then, sweeping U.S. proposals for sharp cutbacks in both strategic and mediumrange nuclear missiles were sent to Geneva and presented to Soviet negotiators.

The Soviets have not put any proposal of their own on the table. Nor did they respond to the package approved by Reagan after Reykjavik, officials

The first reaction could come from Shevardnadze in the talks with Shultz, which will be held during a 35-nation review of the 1975 Helsinki

While the Soviets seek to impose constraints on the U.S. program, they do not want to be saddled with the responsibility for a breakdown in the Geneva negotiations, the senior official said.

Referring to the Soviet walkout from Geneva in November 1983, which touched off a 15-month suspension of arms control negotiations, the official said: "They don't want to have to work their way back to the table again.'

The Reagan administration considers that walkout, which was designed to force the U.S. side to negotiate over Star Wars, a public relations defeat for the Kremlin.

The review of the Helsinki agreement is an apt setting for Shultz to press Shevardnadze on human rights. The agreement called for freer movement of people and ideas across the East-West divide in Europe. It has given the United States more leverage to demand wider emigration from the Soviet Union and improved treatment of Soviet citizens.

On terrorism, the Soviets are credited with taking a more helpful stance, including public denunciations of hijackings. Assistant Secretary of State Rozanne L. Ridgway and Yuri Dubinin, the Soviet ambassador, met quietly twice last week on terrorism issues at the State Department.

The administration is hoping Moscow will use its influence with Syria, which the United States accuses of supporting terrorist groups

This August, 13 months after Webb returned to the United States on a Polish passport, the State Department rejected his petition for citizenship. Without U.S. citizenship, the 55-year-old Webb has little chance of bringing his Polish wife and two teenage daughters here.

"The Department of State ... finds that your naturalization as a Polish citizen in 1970 constituted formal recognition of a long-standing intent on your part to relinquish your U.S. citizenship," the department said in a letter.

SOME GREAT THING

'And his servants came near. and spake unto him, and said, My father, if the prophet had bid thee do some great thing, wouldest thou not have done it? How much rather then, when he saith to thee, Wash, and be clean?" (2 Kings 5:13.) Naa-man was afflicted with the dreaded disease of leprosy. He had come to the house of Elisha, the prophet in hope of having his disease cured Elisha sent instructions to him that he should dip himself in the Jordan River seven times and he would be healed of his leprosy. Naaman became angry because he had ex-pected some miraculous working on the part of the prophet. He had already made up his mind as to how the working of God was going to, or perhaps, should be. Many of us today are like Naaman in that we have pre-conceived ideas as to how God is supposed to do things and when He doesn't con-form to our ideas we become disatisfied with God. The prophet Isaiah records: "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith Jehovah. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts" (Isaiah 55:8-9.) The apostle Paul writes: "but God chose the foolish things of the world, that he might put to shame them that are wise; and God chose the weak things of the world, that he might put to shame the things that are strong: and the base things of the word, and the things that are despised, did God choose, yea and the things that are not, that he might bring to nought the things that are: that no flesh should glory before God'' (I Corinthians 1:27-29.) Without man's approval, in fact in spite of his interference, God brought His Son into the world and allowed Him to die in order to man's salvation. Certainly this was not in accordance with man's ways but it accomplished His eternal purpose.

One of the greatest lessons we have to learn is to be content with God's ways and have faith that they will accomplish His will without our help. He knows all about us and better than we, does He know what

Small wells produce profits despite economic

By ANNE REIFENBERG The Dallas Morning News

LYTLE, Texas (AP) - Some of the more than 5,000 pump jacks perched in the wheat and maize fields of southern Bexar County have been pulling sweet crude oil out of the ground since Eisenhower was president. They've rocked back and forth through boom times and bust, making a barrel or two a day, covering shallow wells that are, while trustworthy, more than a little dull.

But if they weren't, Robert Condit and Owen Good would not have chosen to add 112 pump jacks to the Bexar County collection this spring and summer. The sickening suspense that fills the moments before drilling stops on a wildcat is not for them. They are not adventurers, only businessmen, and they relegate their gambling to the tables of Las Vegas.

"We know in advance what it's going to cost us to drill and complete a well," Condit said recently, sipping coffee in the Little Brown Hut cafe, which, along with the cab of his pickup truck and the den of his house in San Antonio, serves as headquarters for C.G. Oil Co.

"We know what it's going to cost to produce a well and how much it's going to produce every day. There isn't a chance we're going to hit a gusher and get rich.

Neither Condit, an International Business Machines Corp. salesman for 18 years before he quit to launch his new career, nor Good, an independent producer since 1970 and Condit's friend since elementary school in the late 1940s, seem to mind. When a barrel of oil is worth no more than $15, the sure and steady course is the one they intend to follow.

'What we do is like going to a bank and buying a CD," said Condit, who with Good has owned C.G. Oil for five years. "It's that exciting. We're not taking risks. But we're still drilling wells."

They are not alone. Although the number of drilling permit applications filed at the Texas Railroad Commission has dropped by 55 percent since oil prices began to tumble in January, drilling

Some of those projects will be launched because leases require a certain number of wells be completed within a certain period of time or, as Tenneco Oil Exploration and Production Co. president Philip Oxley said, because a company wants "to keep a certain amount of the pot boiling." Some still are launched to make

"To drill in Texas in this environment, generally there has to be a relatively low investment said Greg Clock spokesman for Amoco Production Co, "But even at $13 a barrel, there are some prospects that can be profitable and even provide a reasonable rate of return on your investment. Relatively shallow-depth producers drilled in established oil production areas are still profitable.

The search for oil has not stopped, only slowed considerably and changed course. Drilling is not only less intense than in the past but less frequently of the chancy kind that discovers hydrocarbon deposits and adds to proven reserves.

"There are 800 rigs running out there," said Dallas independent operator Steve Lyons, "and you can bet that 99 percent of them are drilling the safe stuff.'

The "safe stuff" is in known zones, close to already productive wells and often close to the surface, and drilling for it is more popular than drilling into the unknown. The number of permits issued across the country for exploratory wildcat wells is down 53.4 percent from this time one year ago, according to Petroleum Information Corp., while the number for development wells is down 49.7 percent.

Drilling in the Anachaco formation of the Fairfield Field in Bexar County is developmental and considered quite safe. Said Roger Carlton, a longtime Lytle drilling contractor: "It doesn't produce a whole lot at a time, but you can depend on it, and it lasts forever.

So confident of the Fairfield Field's profitability were Condit and Good that when West Texas intermediate crude oil was wallowing in April at its 7-year low of under $10 a barrel, they were in the midst of drilling a 30-well package north of Lytle.

The Anachaco formation and others in nearby fields have been drilled so often and so successfully that the partners said they had no trouble scaring up the average of $30,000 needed to complete eafch well.

Putting up an undisclosed sum themselves, they obtained the remainder from friends and backers who are in the oil business, too. Said Good: "If you're depending on doctors and dentists and little old school teachers to put their life savings into an oil well these days, you're dead in the water.

The shallow C.G. Oil wells will give the investor an 11 to 15 percent return on his dollar, said Good, taking lunch, as he did breakfast, at the Little Brown Hut. He worked it out on a paper napkin: A well that cost $30,000 to drill and complete and produces two barrels a day of oil that sells for $15 a barrel will earn nearly $11,000 in a year, lease costs aside

Additional 1986 wells are planned by C.G. Oil Co. and will probably be drilled by its subsidiary, C.G. Drilling Co., created in February when Condit and Good bought out a small San Antonio energy company and obtained its two drilling rigs

But although they own two companies, operate more than 100 projects and are responsible for hundreds of thousands of dollars (they've not yet celebrated their first $1 million revenue year), the partners said they do not plan to acquire any of the other trappings of the oil business that might increase their overhead and, in their view, lessen their fun.

'The people who are in trouble (from the oil price collapse) have got company cars. They've got engineers and geologists on staff. They're flying around in private planes. They've got gold jewelry dangling from their necks. They've got walnut-paneled offices," Condit said.

We don't even have an office. We have two pickup trucks."

The two men do not, at first glance, belong in the portrait of the swaggering Texas oilman that was painted, accurately or not, during the late 1970s and early 1980s. They are likely to wear deck shoes as cowboy boots out into the field.

But Good sported a Rolex watch on a recent visit to one well site, where an eight-man crew from Dowell Schlumberger Inc. was at work with $800,000 of equipment, preparing the limestone formations underground for the pumping out of oil by one of C.G. Oil's pump jacks.

The job was not inexpensive, and neither was Good's Rolex. He was quick to point out, however, that hiring Dowell Schlumberger was a necessary business expense and that the watch was a gift, from Condit.

"I had visions of getting rich, Good said, referring to his move from Wichita, Kan., to Texas in 1970, when he entered the oil business with another partner. "I learned that this is not a get-richquick scheme. But the return on your investment here (in the Fairfield Field) is as good or better as with a 200-barrel-a-day well, just without the high glamor or the risk."

All 112 of the C.G. Oil pump jacks should be bobbing up and down across southern Bexar County any day now. None of them are expected to pull more than five barrels a day out of the ground at the beginning, and all are expected to pull fewer than two barrels a day after the first

Condit and Good said they are confident their Bexar County collection will continue top produce for generations. They said they would be satisified should their wells never average more than even one barrel a day

Texas coaches back Clements

CHILDRESS (AP) - The president of the Texas High School Coaches Association predicted Saturday the association's efforts to elect Bill Clements governor will pay off at the ballot boxes next Tuesday.

The coaches have worked against White because of his stand on the controversial nopass, no-play rule that sidelined players who had failing grades.

But they do not have an ironclad promise that Clements can do away with the rule they oppose.

"It is fourth quarter time, and we are doing everything we can for the former governor," said coaches association president Charlie Johnston of Childress.

We have talked to Clements several times about the problems with House Bill 72 and although he has not promised the coaches anything, he says he will be openminded about changes," Johnston said. "That's more than what we received from White."

"Four more years of Mark White would be disastrous for Texas and worse for athletics as we know them," Johnston said. 'It would be denying students an integral part of their youth.'

The coaches are also calling

Group seeks organ donors

AUSTIN (AP) - Transplant surgeons and parents groups met Saturday to begin pushing a law that would require hospitals to ask families of brain-dead patients if organs can be taken for transplant.

The proposed "required request" bill would make it easier for medical officials to handle a delicate situation, according to Lin Johnson, director of the Organ Donor Program at the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio

"No one wants to ask the question. You have a family in the throes of tremendous grief and people feel that this is an additional burden," Johnson said of asking families about taking organs from their deceased loved

Under current state law, the attending physician decides whether to ask a deceased patient's family about the possibility of taking organs for transplant.

A similar bill failed to win approval in the Texas Legislature in 1985. The renewed effort on behalf of the bill began Saturday at a Capitol meeting sponsored by the health science center, Project ABC (Any Baby Can) and the Children's Transplant Association, a San Antonio group of parents whose children have been transplant recipients or are awaiting organs.

"In the 29 states that have now passed this type of bill, there has just been a tremendous increase in the number of recognized organ donors," Johnson said. "With a law like this, almost everyone who dies in a hospital is a possible organ donor.

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, will sponsor the bill, said Laura Smith, Farabee's aide. Farabee and other lawmakers are awaiting input on how to write the bill, she said.

Nationwide, it is estimated that only 13 percent of potentially useable organs are recovered.

White ignores polls, predicts victory

By MICHAEL HOLMES Associated Press Writer

HARLINGEN (AP) - Democratic Gov. Mark White, shrugging off new opinion polls showing him still trailing Republican Bill Clements, said Saturday that Tuesday's vote will be a rerun of the 1982 election.

'I've been reading about the polls. I want to assure you these polls are not accurate," White said during a campaign swing across South Texas.

'The only poll that counts is the poll that's going to be taken on Tuesday, Nov. 4. And that poll is going to say that Mark White has been re-elected by the largest majority in Texas history.'

New polls commissioned by several Texas news organizations continue to show White behind Clements, although White aides said the margins were narrower than four years ago. Then, Clements' own poll showed him handily ahead near the election, but White ousted him from the governor's mansion.

At stop after stop, the governe. reminded crowds of cheering supporters about that 1982 elec-

"Four years ago, Bill Clements went to bed Monday night and his own pollster said they would win by 12 points. Well, they lost by seven," White said.

The latest surveys, he noted, were taken during the past week. "I don't think that's going to be the result next week," White

As he stumped for votes in the traditional Democratic stronghold of South Texas, White was joined by San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros and Corpus Christi lawyer Ruben Bonilla, chairman of Mexican American Democrats of Texas.

Shouting until his voiced cracked, Cisneros said Hispanics have only one choice for governor.

"From our standpoint in the Hispanic community, from our standpoint in the major communities of the state ... this is the best governor we've ever had in the modern history of Texas," the mayor said.

Cisneros told the crowds that they owe White their votes as payment for leading the fight to get improvements in education, health care, roads and water.

"If we don't stand with him, then on Tuesday he might suffer a little bit, personally. But we are going to suffer ... a lot for four years," Cisneros said.

"If a man stands with us that way and then on election day we sit it out - or in any way, shape or form abandon him — then who in the world is ever going to step forward and help us with these critical questions again?'

Bonilla told audiences that the state's high unemployment rate was due to President Reagan's refusal to impose a tariff on imported oil. He called it an insult to Texans that Reagan now is endorsing Clements.

The Republican's campaign this week began airing Reagan's personal pitch for Clements.

"How dare he enter our living rooms in the state of Texas and tell us to vote for that other man?" Bonilla asked.

Bonilla said White - not Clements — is the answer for jobless Texans, adding that Clements "is not among the unemployed, but he will be after Tuesday.

Gov. White and San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros speak to Hispanics in East Houston Saturday. The gathering was an attempt to rally support for the incumbent. The governor discounted polls showing him trailing challenger Bill Clements, and White predicted a landslide victory over the Republican.

SPAYING YOUR DOG

QUESTION: My dog is in heat. Male dogs are constantly in my yard! How long will this last? Should I have her "fixed" and, if so, when?

ANSWER: The heat period is about three weeks. It occurs about every six months. Between her heat cycles would be the best time for surgery. We prefer to do the surgery when the dog is not in heat. There is more bleeding and risk to the dog when she is in heat. If you can last another week or two, she'll be ready for mains in the running as a possible site for the 1988 Democratic National Convention despite its unfinished convention center and the possibility of Texas electing a Republican governor, party officials said Saturday.

"Houston has got what it takes," Paul Kirk, Democratic National Chairman, said Saturday. "Houston, despite the difficulties this community has gone through, has extended itself beyond expectations.'

The Democrats' Site Selection Committee must decide among six cities vying for the chance to host the party's national convention. About 120 committee members, party officials and guests arrived Thursday and are scheduled to stay in the Houston area through Sunday

One concern was the unfinished George R. Brown Convention Center, set to be completed next year. Kirk said it is crucial that a city have a facility large enough to accomodate the convention.

On Friday, Houston officials offered to buy a $5 million insurance policy from Lloyd's of London payable to the Democrats in case the center is not ready for the convention. If it is ready, Houston would give the Demo-

I think we all agree that Houston will remain in our minds for a long time," Landow said at a Saturday press conference. "It would be a wonderful place for the Democratic Party to launch a victorious campaign for the presidency.'

Landow said committee officials have been meeting with city officials to discuss technical aspects such as lodging and transportation.

"We couldn't find anything (wrong) to date," he said.

Kirk on Saturday also urged voters to re-elect White, but he would not say whether he would want the 1988 convention in Texas if a Republican is elected gov-

"I would like to work for all of Roberts County, not just Miami," Wright stressed. "Every vote is needed."

Brown, 63, survived a heated challenge in May from District Juvenile Probation Officer Larry Gill to become the Democratic nominee for sheriff.

"I feel like I'm well qualified for the job," Brown said. "If I didn't think I was qualified, I wouldn't have asked for the job to start with.'

Brown's law enforcement career started when he was a warden at the Oklahoma State Penitentiary after World War II. He has 315 hours of law enforcement training. After 21 years with American Zinc Co. at Dumas, he served as Sunray chief of police for a year and a half before city officials fired him in 1978 for shooting at the tires of a fleeing automobile. A grand jury no-billed him.

In 1978, he joined the Roberts County Sheriff's Department, where he eventually became chief deputy before taking over as sheriff when Brines resigned in 1985.

The same day he was appointed, he was placed on a 90day deferred adjudication for hitting an employee at a Pampa implement dealership. After serving his sentence and paying a fine, Brown was cleared.

"We're fixing to do some minor improvements to the office," he added, reporting that when members of the Texas Jail Standards Commission inspected the jail, a 72-hour holding facility, the agency's only recommendation was to install a small smoke detector in the kitchen.

Brown added that he has a good working relationship with the commissioners and the county judge. He said his tough primary race may have put him at an advantage this time. He's now made two visits to Roberts County residences.

"When you visit them twice in their house, you get better acquainted," he said.

Wright has not brought up -nor does he intend to bring up -Brown's dismissal from the Sunray Police Department or the incident at the farm implement dealership. And Brown is not bringing up Wright's 1983 charges - which were later dismissed - for allegedly bilking Wheeler lawyer Lowell Lasley of more than $10,000 in oilfield business deals

"I have no idea what went on. and I never asked anyone about it," Brown said. "I haven't said or heard anything. And I hope I never will."

Bitter gubernatorial rematch overshadows state races

DALLAS (AP) — The battered Texas economy is likely to be on the minds of many voters going to the polls Tuesday to elect a governor and a slew of other statewide candidates and congressmen. Also on the ballot are four constitutional amendments, including one that would permit branch

Most of the contests have been overshadowed by the gubernatorial race, a rancorous replay of the 1982 election when Democrat Mark White upset incumbent Republican Bill Clements

This year, the tables are turned, and Clements, a 69-year-old retired Dallas oilman, seeks to unseat White, a 46-year-old former state attorney general and Houston lawyer.

The campaign has been marked by negative advertisements, sharp rhetoric, the discovery of an electronic bugging device in Clements' office and two difficult special legislative sessions in which White found himself proposing higher taxes in an election year.

'Blame me,'' the governor said in successfully urging the Legislature to approve a temporary sales tax hike.

Clements has done just that, calling White a "Mondale Democrat" who wants to "tax, tax, spend, spend." White, meanwhile, accuses Clements of being willing to cut social programs and education in order not to raise taxes.

Also seeking the governorship is Libertarian candidate Theresa Doyle, a San Antonio housewife and travel agent.

In the race for attorney general, Republican state district judge Roy Barrera Jr. of San Antonio is trying to become the first Hispanic elected to statewide office, by ousting incumbent Democrat Jim Mattox

"This campaign is not as intense and feverish as what it was in 1982," Mattox says. "And the race in 1982 in the general election I described as the easiest race I ever had."

Barrera notes that he has been vastly outspent by Mattox, and one recent poll gave the incumbent a 26-point lead.

But Barrera has attacked Mattox's ethics, pointing to an indictment in which Mattox was accused of threatening to use his office to block the public bond business of a Houston law firm.

Mattox was acquitted and says it was his aggressiveness that prompted the indictment, adding, The polls show people believe I was not guilty and I didn't do anything wrong.'

Also on the ballot is Libertarian candidate Mike Stephens, a Dallas computer systems analyst. In the lieutenant governor's race, Democrat Bill Hobby, who has held the post since 1972, faces Austin business consultant David Davidson, a Republican, and Libertarian candidate Bill Howell, a Dallas bookkeeper.

In the land commissioner's race, Democrat Garry Mauro is worried that Republican M.D. Anderson Jr.'s name has too familiar a ring to it - namely, the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston.

Mauro, a one-term incumbent, also faces Libertarian Honey Sue Lanham

Agriculture commissioner Jim Hightower, a self-styled populist, faces Republican cattleman Bill Powers of Austin, executive vice president of the Texas Poultry Federation, and Libertarian candidate Rebecca Reed, a student at the University of Texas at San Antonio

Three men are vying for the open seat on the Texas Railroad Commission, a spot vacated by Buddy Temple, who resigned in March

State Sen. John Sharp, D-Victoria, and state Rep. Milton Fox, R-Houston, a 14-year veteran of the House, both describe themselves as convervatives and support an oil import fee. Libertarian candidate Chloe "Jack" Daniel of Farmers Branch is the third candidate seeking the six-year term on the commission, which regulates trucking, oil and gas and railroads.

State treasurer Ann Richards and comptroller Bob Bullock, both Democrats, drew token opposition from Libertarian candidates. Ms. Richards faces Robert Reid of Fort Worth and Bullock is opposed by George Meeks of San Antonio.

In thé Supreme Court races, incumbent Raul Gonzalez, appointed to the bench two years ago, also could become the first Hispanic elected to statewide office. He faces Republican John Bates, a Waco lawyer, for Place 4.

The battle for Place 1 pits Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, against Republican Charles Ben Howell, an appeals judge who has filed suit claiming Mauzy improperly disclosed a campaign loan.

Democratic incumbent Robert Campbell is challenged by Nathan White, a Plano lawyer, for Place 2, and in Place 3, James Wallace, another of the nine Democratic incumbents, faces Dallas lawyer Wiley Rawlins, a Libertarian candidate.

Unopposed for seats on the Court of Criminal Appeals are Rusty Duncan and Justices Marvin O. Teague and Mike McCormick, all Democrats.

The most well-known congressional candidate is veteran Democratic U.S. Rep. Jim Wright of Fort Worth, who is in line to become the next speaker of the House

Wright, 63, has held his congressional post since 1954. He is being challenged by Alvarado businessman and rancher Don McNiel, 46, a Republican.

In other congressional races, two freshmen Republicans are viewed as vulnerable, while three Democrats are being portrayed as out of touch with their constituents

Democrats say they have a good chance of unseating Reps. Mac Sweeney of Wharton and Joe Barton of Ennis. Sweeney is being opposed by Greg Laughlin, a West Columbia lawyer, while Barton faces Fort Worth attorney Pete Geren.

Republicans, meanwhile, have targeted Democratic incumbents John Bryant of Dallas, Jake Pickle of Austin and Ron Coleman of El Paso as being too liberal for their constituents

Bryant faces Mesquite lawyer Tom Carter in the 5th District, Pickle faces former Austin Mayor Carole Keeton Rylander in the 10th District, and Coleman is challenged by accountant Roy Gillis in the 16th District.

In the sprawling 21st congressional district that covers much of West Texas, veteran state Sen. Pete Snelson, D-Midland, and former Bexar County Commissioner Lamar Smith are locked in battle. The seat was up for grabs after Republican Tom Loeffler abandoned it to make an unsuccessful run for the GOP gubernatorial nomination.

In legislative races, House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, is seeking re-election to a ninth term. He faces Republican K. Wayne Lee, a Fort Worth builder.

Lewis' critics claim his initial anti-tax stance during the special legislative session was prompted by opposition from Lee, who is backed by the religious right. But Lewis denies that and says he doesn't think Lee poses much of a threat.

Possibly the hottest state Senate race is the one between Judy Zaffirini of Laredo, vice chairwoman of the state Democratic Party, and Republican Bennie Bock of New Braunfels, a former Democrat. They are vying for the seat vacated by state Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin, who retired.

In addition to branch banking, the other three amendments on Tuesday's ballot would change the state Legislature's subject caption requirement on legislative bills, grant some mutual insurance companies permission to sell policies to political subdivisions, and allow counties to value rolling railroad equipment — tanks, boxcars and engines

Souped up car stereos not for the weak of heart or ear

By PHIL LATHAM Lufkin Daily News

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — The inside of David Allen's car is not for the weak of heart, or, for that matter, the weak of ear.

With approximately 144 decibels coming from the eight 15-inch woofers powered by 800 watts of amplifiers in Allen's car, the song Flashdance will move you — literally. At that sound level, the song's bassy opening creates "sound pressure" that will blow your hair and actually press you Forget about hearing a pin drop. At 144 decibels you couldn't hear a plane drop.

The stereo in Allen's car is the creation of Jarrell Martin and Derrick Vines, owners of Radioactive, a local firm which mostly installs regular car

However, the company is designing a growing number of car systems for competition in national "Crank It Up" contests that award prizes for stereos that produce the loudest music with the least distortion.

Lufkin will get its own "Crank It Up" contest sponsored by Radioactive this weekend.

Until a week ago Martin and Vines held the record for having the loudest car stereo in the "world" at 144.9 decibels, or about 20 decibels louder than a live concert or the takeoff of a jet aircraft.

"It does get loud," Martin acknowledged, "but you could be doing this or you could be souping up your car and hot rodding it and putting your life and others in danger. This doesn't hurt anybody. It is just a little loud.

Some of Radioactive's neighbors might disagree with the word, "little. "We get a lot of complaints," he said. "We try to do our work in the daytime, but sometimes we get to working and forget about the time and turn it on at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. It's just about 45 seconds. It sounds like thunder.

Martin said during a test several weeks ago, the sound knocked a vase off a television in a house three blocks from the shop

Martin said he is careful to warn those even thinking about purchasing such a system about the dangers of hearing damage if the system is played too loudly for too long.

Most of the people who buy these systems never turn them up more than a quarter of the way,' Martin said. "It isn't really how loud the system is, it is the quality of the sound."

During an actual "Crank It Up" contest, Martin or Vines are protected by ear plugs as they attempt to get the most out of a 1,000-watt system. They also use a portable monitor to help them adjust volumne and quality during the 45-second test.

"The idea is to make it sound as much like a concert as possible," he said.

The 20 or so speakers that make up a system, including midrange and tweeter speakers, can be made to fit into most cars, though the driver can usually forget about having a back seat or much of a trunk. The large amplifiers are powered by one or two additional automobile batteries that must also fit in.

Vines said it can take months to design a large system and clients must leave their cars for the installation during that time.

Customers who want the really powerful systems must also be prepared to leave behind a good deal of their money. The pro system Martin and Vines use to compete with costs more than $12,000. not counting the car. Other systems with several hundred watts up range from $3,000 up. Some of the smaller contest-type systems, at about 90 watts, are affordable to more people, Martin said, with prices ranging from $700 to $1,200.

The secret studio of Tarleton State University art performance halls.

STEPHENVILLE, Texas (AP)- Tarleton State University's Clyde Wells Fine Arts Center, christened in 1980, has been mostly known for its state-of-the-

But it has a somewhat more secret asset, a high-tech recording studio designed by internationally-known accoustician Rolly Brook, who pioneered the transformer-less sound mixer and other advances used in professional recording studios.

Richard Denning, the Wells Center's technical director for the past two years, hopes to give the studio a higher profile, complete some renovations and get it into full service to musicians on and off campus by Tarleton's spring semester. The studio houses more than $100,000 in professional equipment. In the main studio, one of four, as many as 12 microphones placed virtually anywhere in the building can be recorded directly on tape. Indirectly, sounds from hundreds of microphones can be recorded on one tape.

Among the studio's assets are a $16,000 Neotek mixing board, and three smaller mixing boards. It also has a $6,000 Sequential Circuits "Prophet Five" synthesizer, with a computerized keyboard that can imitate almost any sound

Despite the elaborate set-up, assistant technicians Carl Nowotny and Grantlan Goodman decided the studio needed some changes to make it more functional Nowotny and Goodman — both musicians as well as recording engineers - had manned the controls in the studio for more than five years. They began making small changes; re-wiring, rearranging and turning a smaller studio into an isolation booth.

'The way it evolved was really neat," Denning said, "Everyone's idea went into it. Each idea led to another idea.

Brook had accoustically designed the smaller studio formerly used to record the choir for a pleasant sound atmosphere. Nowotny and Goodman felt the accoustics should be put to wider use, especially since the main studio had the power to do everything the choir studio could at the flip of a few switches. All the equipment was taken out of the smaller room and microphones were set up in the space. The result "sounds professional," the technicians said. Goodman, who has a bachelor's degree in music and is music minister at Harvey Baptist Church, says he now feels more comfortable on both sides of the

fore coming to Tarleton, says his main concern was that the studio be functional and kept working.

Currently, any musician can have a shot at the studio for $25 an hour, plus technician fees and other expenses. The base price of $25 an hour will remain the same when the renovations are Antonio's "Positive Sound" be- finished, Denning said.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - The tour group was hushed as it walked through the funereal hallway, where black cloths covered the mirrors, into the parlor where burning tapers surrounded a coffin draped in black

However, museum workers hadn't had time to shroud the front door of the Hermann-Grima Historic House in black, the guide told the 25 tourists.

'Well thank heavens!" muttered a pinkcheeked woman.

Cholera and yellow fever made an everyday occurrence of death - and big business for shops that sold mourning accoutrements in mid-19th century New Orleans, guide Sallie Hoy told the group.

In addition to coffins, the shops sold blackedged handkerchiefs, black armbands, and the drapes hung over mirrors to keep them from reflecting the dead person and creating bad luck for survivors.

"If you were of means, you bought a special dress or suit for the funeral," she said, pointing to the puffy-sleeved gown on a mannequin in the bedroom where Mrs. X. Albert Grima, a widow, had died at the age of 96.

The clocks were stopped at 5 p.m., the time of her death, just as they were when she died on Oct. 15, 1850.

The dining table was set with dishes edged in lavender, considered an appropriate mourning color. It is likely that some of the servants passed out handbills on the street to invite people to Mrs. Grima's funeral, Hoy said.

Creole society followed the etiquette of mourning with great care, Hoy said.

Widows stayed in mourning for about a year and six weeks, she said. For the first four months, they could wear only dull black, with shiny black allowed for the next eight months, after the first year, she said, widows could add gray, black and white to their war-

Jewelry was restricted to pearls, onyx, garnets, amethysts and diamonds. Some women wore brooches with strands of a loved one's håir inside.

Men whose wives had died wore mourning for six months, but their servants had to wear black for a full year.

With their black suits, men wore black top hats encircled with a white ribbon. "You might have thought those were prayer beads," Hoy said, looking toward a strand of black beads on a bedroom dressing table. "But actually they were used as a watch chain, to replace gold chains considered inappropriate for someone in mourning.

Even children and their dolls were dressed in mourning, said Hoy, noting a small pair of black-trimmed pantaloons.

On the day of the funeral, the owners of the house, rather than servants, answered the door too usher in well-wishers, who also were dressed in black. Visitors brought flowers white only - and gifts of food.

The coffin was displayed in the parlor, to the side of the fireplace, with the body lavishly dressed in black and adorned with jewelry.

During the deepest mourning, Creoles would restrict their social life, staying away from balls, theatrical performances and other activities.

A few people have said that the exhibit is too morbid, but most find it fascinating, said Charles Macke, the museum's director. 'It's not an average tour of a house, with

EDITOR'S NOTE - In a socioeconomic experiment in one state in West Germany, low-interest government loans are available to communal businesses in which all employees have a voice in management. The idea is to give a break to young entrepreneurs who lack the collateral to secure private loans.

By GEORGE BOEHMER Associated Press Writer

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) - Bucking West German business tradition, the state of Hesse is helping finance young entrepreneurs dedicated to collective ownership, equality of the sexes and opportunities for foreigners.

Beneficiaries of the "Alternative Economic Forms" law range from computer shops to a leftist magazine whose driving force is a former radical student leader of the 1960s, Daniel "Danny the Red" Cohn-Bendit.

Young people in West Germany have often complained that the country's rigid financing and business structure thwarts innovative new enterprises because most of the young do not have the collateral to get private

So Hesse last year passed a law providing low-interest financing for cooperative businesses with three or more people. Under the law, all employees must have a voice in management and women and foreigners must also have a

"It's what we need because the private sector cannot create enough jobs for the young, and we don't have enough security to put up for private loans," says Dieter Nau, a financial adviser to three alternative businesses taking advantage of the law.

The law is unique to Hesse, the only West German state where e environmentalist Greens party is a partner in the state government. The leftist-oriented Greens helped to secure the law's passage in the state legislature.

The states of Hamburg, Bremen, West Berlin and North Rhine-Westphalia have programs supporting new business ventures by the young, but they are directed more at providing advice or serving as loan guaran-

Since it was passed in August 1985, the Hesse law has provided cheap credit to communal carpentry shops, an electronics firm, a hardware business and other group-owned enterprises. It specifies that where applicable, the businesses must be environmentally sound.

State Economics Ministry spokesman Reinhart Raach said he did not know how many people had received money under the new law so far. But the state has earmarked $6 million for communal business projects and has received 200 loan applications.

The law provides for loans of up to $150,000 to be paid off in 10 years at a 6 percent interest rate. There is a two-year grace period for the first payment. However, if such a business employs trainees, the grace period is extended to three years and the interest rate cut to 4 percent.

Three enterprises in Offenbach, near Frankfurt, are typical of the program. They were founded by former unemployed make the communal concept work. They are Mainwerkstatt, an electrical firm which has 14 trainees and five instructors: Bauhof, a woodworking business with 18 trainees and five instructors, and Faprik, a hardware store with five trainees and three instructors.

The businesses' inventory cost about $250,000, said Nau, who is the financial adviser for all three enterprises.

The businesses are located in one large building provided by the city rent-free. None is making a profit yet, but Nau says they expect to begin making money within three years.

'Everyone has a say in the operation," says Alec van Fersern of Mainwerkstatt.

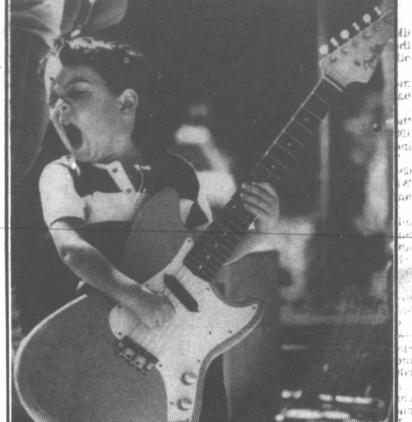

Another recipient of the credit was PflasterStrand, a Frankfurt leftist weekly magazine which stresses environmental problems, women's rights, disarmament and communal enterprises. The co-publisher is "Danny the Red," well-known for his former leftist activities in Paris and Frankfurt. PflasterStrand got a credit of $100,000 to expand to other West German cities. There are about 300 communal businesses in Hesse, according to Burkhard Bluem, spokesman for the Association of Alternative Companies.

About 70 of them are duespaying members of the association, which advises them on how to apply for funds, Bluem says.

Separated by Medicare snarl, pair reunited

LEWISVILLE, Texas (AP) -An elderly couple has been reunited after two congressmen intervened to unravel a case of Medicare red tape

Alton Marlowe, 77, flew Thursday from Colorado to Texas to reunite with his wife, whom he left two months ago after welfare officials ruled his Social Security check was too high to qualify for reimbursement of nursing home

American Airlines provided the free flight.

Two Texas congressmen intervened to clarify federal regulations, however, and Marlowe was told earlier this week he could move back into the Twin Pines Nursing Home at Lewisville, 20 miles northwest of Dallas.

At least two other elderly couples in Texas are affected by an amendment to Social Security law that was passed by both the U.S. House and Senate last weekend and which President Reagan has promised to sign, an aide to Rep. Dick Armey, R-

Texas, of Denton said Thursday. The change will allow state agencies to calculate the income of couples together, rather than separately, to determine if they qualify for Medicaid reimbursement of nursing home costs.

Marlowe and his wife, Irene, 75. had lived in the nursing home for two years when the Texas Department of Human Resources informed him that his monthly Social Security check was $78.70 too high for him to qualify for $265 in Medicaid reimbursement.

As a result, Marlowe moved out of the nursing home two months ago and went to Colorado to live dogs at Pecos' Maxey Park. 'The pool was just sitting there, all filled with dirt, so we put a fence around it and started catching the prairie dogs," said

Pecos parks foreman Tom Rivera. Rivera's idea actually takes care of two problems. Not only does it utilize what otherwise would have been a wasted facility, it also gets the prairie dogs out of the public park area. Prairie Dog Park was built more than 15 years ago with fencing and landscaping in a small area of Maxey Park. Apparently, no one foresaw that the animals would dig under the fence and take over the entire park. Although there are only about 20 prairie dogs, more than 100 holes — about one every three feet in some places - dot the public park area.

'People want to be able to run, play frisbee, flag football, but they have to watch out for the holes or break an ankle." Rivera said. "And the animals were starting to spread out to the ball-

Acknowleging the new prairie dog home "doesn't look very pretty now," Rivera has plans to must be rounded up. With a cat trap used in city animal control, workers have been catching one or two prairie dogs a day and relocating them in their new home, which now has about 15 of the animals.

"I think it's really better for the animals, too," Rivera said. 'They get fed more - corn and rabbit pellets — and get fresh wa-

People who have visited have enjoyed being able to observe the prairie dogs at close distance.

CAYUGA, Texas (AP) - With two games left on the schedule, Eric Moseley is already thinking about next year's squad.

"We're going to lose a lot of key players through graduation," he says. "We've got some strong seniors that we're going to lose. We've got some good sixth-graders coming up, but they will have some big shoes to fill."

Sixth-graders? Playing on the high school football field Friday night?

Not exactly, Moseley says. The Cayuga High School band is open only to students in grades seven to twelve.

Deep in the heart of football country, Cayuga's band has managed to acheive the same status as the king of Texas sports among the school's teachers, administrators and students.

"About half of the junior and senior class are involved in the band," Moseley says.

Moseley, the school district's music teacher and band director, says he lost 11 players to the state's no-pass, no-play rule but can still field an 87-piece band, more than twice the size of the average AA high school band.

"We've gone up against other bands as small as 18 and as large as ," he says. "The average we see is about 40.

"But I tell them if the band they're facing that week is strong or not. I try to tell them they don't want to embarrass themselves."

Moseley says the band has received a standing ovation during halftime of every football game since the second game of last year.

"People aren't used to seeing a band as large as ours," he says.

Moseley says he gets his students interested at an early age by showing films of his band marching during games. Students start handling instruments in fourth grade and begin playing in fifth grade

He says the board of trustees has been supportive in funding the band, which gives any interested student an instrument to play.

"That's the philosophy of this school," Moseley says. "We give every kid a chance."

WAL-MART

Pharmacy

He says it is this same school spirit that allows varsity football players a chance to play at halftime of their own games.

"We don't make them choose between football and band," he says. "We give students every chance to let them choose what they want to do. John Marcum, a varsity tackle and one of the band's trombone players, says players at other schools aren't as lucky.

"When we played Overton, they told us they weren't allowed to do both," he says.

Marcum says that band practice doesn't interfere with football and that his coaches have been supportive of his decision to participate in both.

'They tell us to get involved,' he says. Head football coach Bob Arnold says band participation has a positive effect on his players.

Garbageman takes new route as author-publish

Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - For Steve Warren, leaving the backbreaking work of hoisting overflowing garbage cans to write his first book and start a publishing company wasn't as great a leap as he'd figured.

With publication of "Drat! Mythed Again: Second Thoughts on Utah," Warren left behind a 640-home refuse route to clamp the lid of truth on a host of apocryphal tales about the state that many take for gospel.

But the garbageman turned author says he doesn't feel he's strayed too far afield.

"A couple times I was off with a sore back and felt if I continued collecting garbage for too much longer, I'd be off a much longer time," he recalls.

"It's not too big a transition from being a garbageman to being an author.'

In April, Warren, a 38-year-old journalism graduate of Brigham Young University, quit his sanitation job to devote full attention to writing and running his suburban West Valley City Altair Publishing Co.

Altair's only release to date is Warren's paperback. So far, about 500 copies have been sold enough to allow Warren to breathe a bit more easily about his plunge into the world of literature. which he had experienced before only through occasional free-lance articles.

"It's looking as though we will be able to stay with this full time," he says. Warren can also take some fiscal comfort in the part-time job his wife, Ja Niece, holds at a hospital blood bank labora-

"Drat! Mythed Again" debunks myriad myths, some more than a century old, that have been woven by time into Utah's historical and cultural fabric. His work covers a wide range, from local history and politics to the role of pioneers and the Mormon Church in shaping the state.

One of the first myths Warren attacks is the idea, accepted unquestioningly by many Utahns, that Mormon pioneers came to the Great Basin in 1847 and turned a barren desert wilderness into a fertile Eden through hard work and miracles.

In fact, Warren points out in quoting no less an authority than Mormon Church President Wilford Woodruff, the region that first met pioneer eyes was a "vast, rich fertile valley ... a glorious valley abounding with the best fresh water springs, riverlets, creeks, brooks and rivers ... the grandest and most sublime scenery that could be obtained on the globe.

Still, Warren, an active church member, emphasizes he doesn't want to convey the idea that Utah's Mormon forebears simply flopped down under shady fruit-laden trees when they arrived in the Salt Lake Valley

"In leaving Missouri and Illinois, they were really in desperate circumstances," he says. "They may have settled in a fertile area, but they still didn't have much and had to work hard to do what they did.

Warren's book also pokes fun at the idea that Utahns, 70 percent of whom are on Mormon Church membership rolls, follow the political advice of the faith's leaders like a flock of vacuous

Businessman's motto: Unrome sweet chrome

The Arlington Heights Daily Herald

PALATINE, Ill. (AP) - Ask someone from Palatine about Ye Olde Junke Shoppe on Northwest Highway, and they will probably draw a blank.

Mention hubcaps, however, and they may respond, "Oh yeah, that place with all the hubcaps on the wall!"

The shiny disks cover one entire outside wall of the building and form a hard-to-miss patchwork of chrome.

More hubcaps line a fence in front and fill up half the inside of the building.

'It seemed like everybody had a couple of hubcaps and would bring them in, and I'd give them a dollar or two dollars apiece for them," says owner Lee Little.

"I'd sell them for whatever I could get for them, and this went on and on, and the first thing you know I've got 5,000 hubcaps," he

But hubcaps are not the only attraction at the Ye Olde Junke Shoppe. The other half of the building is filled with antiques of every description, from silverware and bottles to steamer trunks and furniture.

"I've got one butter churn that goes back to 1840," says Little. 'It's called a rocker churn. That's probably the oldest thing out there that I can date although a fella did come by the other day and drop off a washing machine that's 60 years old.'

Looking like a historical society attic, the shop contains smaller pieces stacked upon larger ones and worn or broken chairs hanging from the ceiling.

The unlikely combination of antiques and hubcaps makes up the antique business that the 72year-old Little and his wife, Ida, have run in one form or another at that location since 1953.

But the couple now wants to retire, and Ye Olde Junke Shoppe is up for sale. The land is prime commercial property, and Lee thinks it doesn't look good for the hubcap-antique shop.

"I think they'll probably tear it all down and put up some kind of a new business here," he says.

The Littles came to Palatine from Evanston in 1953 looking for a small grocery store or a restaurant to open. They bought the

"I don't diagram plays on wet paper," a football coach once explained, complaining about the disadvantage his team was going to be placed under due to the rainy weather. The other team, of course, also had the same uncomfortable playing conditions. It was an act of God, over which neither coach had control.

However, gaining every conceivable edge is something many coaches seek, stretching rules, playing conditions, whatever, to the maximum. Here is a check list of things to look for, known to have been used by or against teams and coaches I have known.

Wet down the field....Sprinklers are "accidentally" left on by maintenance people. Tactic used when opponent has exceptional speed. Sometimes done only near sidelines to prevent sweep plays. Tall grass....Let it grow, again to cope with speed problem.

Color of football....In the early days of lighted football fields, the pigskin was painted white. Home team wore white jerseys to hide the ball. When brown football was used, teams with somewhat similar color wore that jersey for the same effect. (Still today.) Pampa's gold jersey's became a much darker gold. Midland's Tugboat Jones used it against his own cousin, PHS Coach Tom Tipps, one night at Midland and told Tom he was going to do it. Over or under inflated football-

Depending upon whether you wanted accuracy or distance. Officials check the ball before the game, but it is surprising how the play before a critical kick sometimes runs right into the home team bench, where a quick, unnoticed exchange of footballs

The playing field and facilities-.Sometimes it gets mismarked. Did you know teams going south at Harvester park are running uphill? Then there is always the quick (or slow) fingered clock operator: the local fan which is part of the chain crew (and can assist in close measurements); the bench phones to the press box, which don't always work properly the entire game (and some say have been tapped); problems with the lights, making it dark in areas a passing team likes to throw the ball (blame it on a blown fuse); taping of players' hands, wrists, forearms always leave suspicions of training room manufactured weaponry, though it is pre-game checked by the offi-

The officials....For nonconference games a major prob-

1em, and even for some conference contests. Relatives, former players, or coaches teammates are a possibility. Then, with a pay scale related to crowd size, officials want to work the games with biggest attendance. Consequently, there could be a tendency to lean toward the home team with favorable calls in close situations, hoping to get the other large-crowd assignments. I remember two teams who could never agree on local officials, and had to get them from downstate. One that generally showed up (and a good one) was the fatherin-law of a former captain of one coach's team (the other coach never found out)

Film....Find a friendly coach (or one who needs you to upset the next opponent) and get film of that foe. Or use cameras in the press box to get instant still photos of pass coverages for study and use by the offensive coordinator. Or better still, as one coach did, video-tape the first half, rush the film to the dressing room at halftime, where the entire team can study and make necessary adjustments. U-Texas has a huge theatre-area as part of the football dressing room complex, as do many schools. While most teams will trade film, some flatly refuse to do so, or delay the shipment, assuring late arrival, leaving little time to study and implement or practice necessary adjustments or plays.

Bands....You try to place your home team band behind the bench of the visiting team, and then play, play, play as loud as possible during every time out. Meantime, an ominous, metronomic beat of the bass drum the rest of the time surely gets on an already agitated coach's nerves and makes clear thinking that much more difficult.

Other....The catch-all category includes such things as stealing playbooks (many times they have been found in the pocket of a charter aircraft, laying in a parking lot, in a dressing room); scout the opponents practices, by whatever means; re-write a player's birth certificate (Tipps always thought Borger did that to one star player).

Those are just a few, as the ingenious masterminds always look for a little edge. Is the reason visiting teams are now dressing in the Fieldhouse facilities so we can use the "bug" that's in that dressing room, and has been so successful for basketball? Just kidding, visiting coaches. Or am

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Tyrone Thurman, Texas Tech's tiny terror, stung Texas with a 96-yard punt return Saturday as the Red Raiders stumbled through the rain and fog to a 23-21 Southwest Conference victory over the rallying Lon-

Texas quarterback Bret Stafford ran 20 yards for one touchdown and threw two scoring shots in the fourth quarter as the Longhorns struggled back from a 23-7 deficit.

Longhorn safety Stephen Braggs intercepted three Tech passes in the second quarter, but only one led a touchdown. The verdict fanned the flames of a bowl bid for the Raiders. 5-3 and 3-2, and gave rookie coach David McWilliams a cherished triumph over his longtime Longhorn mentor, Fred

The loss dropped the Longhorns, 3-4 and 2-2, out of the SWC title chase and left them flirting with their first losing season during Akers' 10-year regime.

A crowd of 44,820 had barely snuggled into the damp seats when Thurman, a 5-3, 130-pound sophomore, took a punt at the 4, slipped from the grasp of two Longhorns, tiptoed down the sideline and raced into the Tech record book.

The punt return was the longest in Red Raider history and second in the SWC archives only to a 98-yarder by Bob Goode of Texas A&M in 1945.

Tech I-back James Gray ran 20 yards for a touchdown to cap a 51-yard scoring drive and stake the Raiders to a 14-0 first-quarter lead.

Stafford tossed a 28-yard touchdown pass to Anthony Byerly with 5:41 left and then hit Tony Jones with a 19-yarder with 3:12 remaining Texas Tech's Scott Segrist kicked field goals of 24, 38 and 28 yards in the second half.

emons shock Harvesters, 18-13

By L.D. STRATE Sports Editor

DUMAS - Pampa gave Dumas' Matt Padwick the right of way at the wrong time and the 167-pound senior followed a 66-yard route to the end zone that paved the way for an 18-13 Demons' victory Friday night.

Turnovers, better known as tricks on Halloween, haunted the Harvesters throughout the District 1-4A game. But it was Padwick's long scoring scamper to start the third quarter that did the damage on the scoreboard.

And then there was that heartwrenching fumble in the closing moments that permanently preserved the Dumas victory.

Dumas turned two Pampa fumbles into scores the first half, but the Harvesters still owned a 13-12 lead at halftime on a pair of Mark Williams' TDs. However, on Pampa's opening kickoff in the third quarter, the Demons' Cliff Williams gave his team good field position with a 21-yard return to the Dumas 34. It really wasn't needed though as Padwick took the handoff from quarterback Kacey Cain, found a big hole in the middle of the line and outran the Pampa secondary to the end zone. Dumas missed its third conversion try, but owned an 18-13 lead.

'Padwick's touchdown came on a counter-crossbuck and we just fell asleep on it,' said PHS head coach John Kendall. "He got into our secondary before we could react to the play.'

Padwick wound up with 114 yards on 13 carries Both teams stalled out until late in the fourth quarter when it appeared Pampa's winless season might come to an end. After a Dumas punt with 5:12 to go, the Harvesters started on their own 26 after a Kerry Brown return of 16 yards and marched to the Dumas 7. The pass-catch combo of quarterback Dustin Miller and tight end Joel Farina was working to perfection in the drive as the pair hooked up for three first-down plays, including a 15-yard pass interference call. With 50 seconds to play, Miller faded to pass and finding all the receivers covered, took off himself for a 6-yard gain and a first down at the Dumas 7. But Pampa's hopes died on that spot. After three of his passes fell incomplete, Miller fumbled in the backfield and Dumas' Kevin Black pounced on the ball with 25 seconds remaining.

Dumas took a 6-0 lead in the first quarter after Victor Tarin recovered a Pampa fumble on the visitors' 40. Two plays later, Cliff Williams, on a halfback option pass, fired a 30-yard touchdown strike to Mike DePaul.

Pampa came right back, using a Tommy Cathey interception and a 15-yard facemasking penalty, to take a 7-6 lead in the first quarter. Cathey's interception of a Cain pass covered seven yards to the Dumas 34, and on the very next play, the Dumas face-mask infraction netted the Harvesters 15 more yards. Three plays later Williams went up the middle from six yards out, and Bret Mitchell's PAT made it 7-6 with 2:58 left in the first quarter.

Both teams capitalized again on each other's mistakes for second-quarter scores. The Harvesters were on their own 25 when Samford Kelly fumbled and Dumas' Eric Appel recovered. The Demons marched in again on a 6-yard run by Waylon Ward.

Dumas forced Pampa into a punting situation on the Harvesters' next possession, but the ball got away from the Demons return man and Derrick Smith came up with the fumble on the hosts' 11-yard line

Pampa almost stalled out on the Dumas 5, but pass interference was called on a Miller to Robert Perez pass, moving the ball to the Williams, two plays later, dived over a pileup for the score. The extra point try was blocked, but Pampa had a 1-point edge going into the dressing room at halftime.

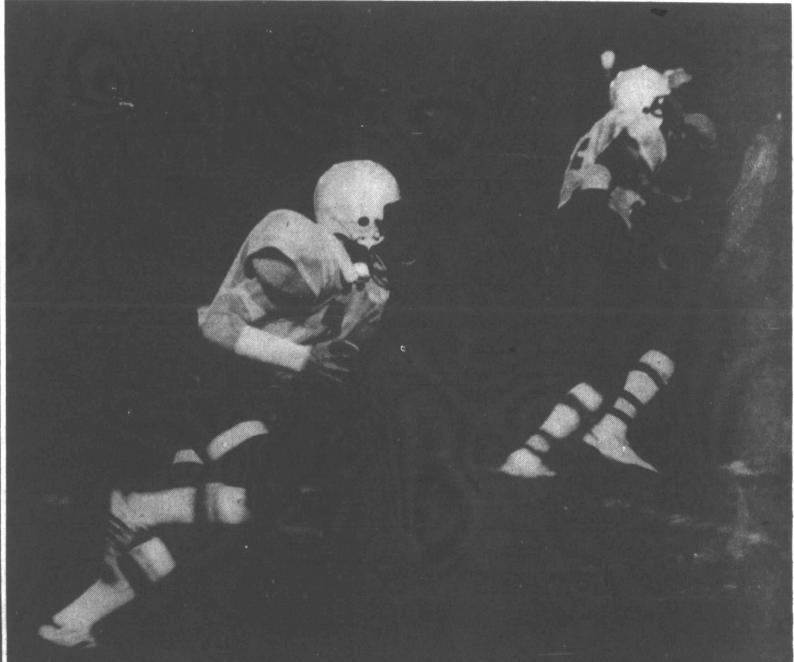

Williams, who left the game with a twisted ankle in the fourth quarter, was Pampa's top rusher with 75 yards in 26 carries. Kelly added 67 yards on 16 steps.

"We had some mental letdowns that cost us both offensively and defensively, but we had some players who looked good for us,' Kendall said. "Farina (185-pound senior) had a super game. "He made two great catches that helped us move downfield on our last series in the fourth quarter.

Farina, who played with a cast on his hand due to a sprained wrist, caught 4 passes for 47 yards.

Pampa is now 0-8 for the season (0-6 in district) while Dumas won its first game in seven tries

"We had Dumas going, but we made a couple of mistakes that really cost us. I thought we played pretty well overall, except for our lack of concentration at times,' Kendall said.

Pampa's Brad Hinkle returns a punt in Friday night's District 1-4A game against Dumas.

SMU went ahead 35-32 with 7:33 to play after wingback Ron Morris ran 23 yards for a touchdown. But Murray, who had hit running back Keith Woodside with a 50-yard touchdown pass earlier in the fourth quarter, wouldn't back down.

A critical roughing-the-passer penalty moved the Aggies to the Mustang 34. Woodside worked free downfield, caught the ball and received a block from Rod Harris to score. Murray completed 17 of 34 passes for 278 yards, and SMU quarterback Bobby Watters completed 17 of 30 for 173 yards in their aerial duel before a homecoming crowd of 58,125 fans in Texas Stadium. SMU led 21-17 at halftime in a wild offensive show that included a controversial touchdown by the Mustangs' Jeff Atkins.

With A&M leading 10-7, Atkins was credited with a 1-yard run for a touchdown, although he had fumbled the ball forward and it was recovered by the Aggies in the end zone.

Television replays showed Atkins didn't have control of the ball as he approached the goal line.

The stung Aggies drove 73 yards to go ahead 21-17 on Roger Vick's 1-yard run on fourth down. Watters' 10-yard scoring pass to tight end Hogs' split end Donnie Centers heads for a touchdown after a pass reception.

Arkansas pounds Rice

By JAMES JEFFERSON Associated Press Writer

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas quaterback Greg Thomas completed five of six passes for 152 yards in the first quarter, including a 77-yard touchdown toss to split end Donnie Centers, to lead the 13th-ranked Razorbacks to a 45-14 victory over Rice on Saturday

Thomas, who had completed only seven of 14 passes since suffering a wrist injury against Texas Tech three weeks ago, finished with seven of 12 for 177 yards as Arkansas upped its record to 7-1 and 4-1 in the Southwest Conference. Rice dropped to 2-6 and 1-5.

Arkansas scored on each of its first four posses-

Joe Johnson's 1-yard touchdown run with 9:44 remaining in the first quarter ended a 13-play, 80-yard drive that included six first downs on the first eight plays. Thomas completed three of four in the drive. Johnson added two short touchdown runs in the second half.

Rice, behind the passing of Mark Comalander, took the ensuing kickoff and drove from its 24 to the Arkansas 5, but safety Steve Atwater tipped Comalander's second-down pass and linebacker Erik Whitted intercepted in the end zone.

Arkansas made a first down, but a procedure penalty and a sack of Thomas left the Razorbacks facing third-and-17. They came up short, but were called for holding and Rice took the penalty. Then, on third-and-27 from the 23, Thomas lofted a perfect strike to Centers behind the Owls' de-

Thomas added a 3-yard touchdown run early in the second quarter, set up by Leshon Browne's fumble recovery at the Rice 43 and a 37-yard pass from Thomas to James Shibest. Browne was playing in place of Tony Cherico, the Razorbacks' All-Southwest Conference noseman who was nursing a shoulder injury.

Kendall Trainor's 30-yard field goal made it 24-0 midway through the second quarter.

Rice scored with 1:57 left in the half on a 2-yard keeper by backup quarterback Quentis Roper. That ended a 13-play, 50-yard drive

Schoolboy legend Sugar Land's Kenneth Hall: One in a million

By KARL O'QUINN and TIM GRIFFIN San Antonio Express-News

FREDERICKSBURG, Texas (AP) - In the entire history of football, how many high school running backs have there been? Hundreds of thousands? A million?

If so, that would make Kenneth Hall one in a million, literally, for no other high school gridder has come close to the rushing records he established in the early 1950s at Sugar Land, 25 miles southwest of Houston.

Not Billy Sims. Not Earl Campbell. Not Warren McVea. Not Tony Dorsett. Not Herschel Walker. Not Jimmy Brown. Not O.J. Simpson. Not Walter Payton. Not anybody

Hall ran for 11,232 yards and passed for 3,326 in four seasons at what was then a Class B school in a small town. That's 14,558 yards in 38 games — 382 yards per outing. He also is the most prolific scorer in high school football history with 899 points, more than 200 ahead of the second-best.

His 11,232 career yards are far beyond the 7,738 Billy Sims compiled from 1972-75 in the East Texas town of Hooks. Herschel Walker accounted for 6.137 yards at Wrightsville, Ga., in 1977-79.

Hall not only holds the national mark of 4,045 yards in one season, he also has the second-best mark of 3,458 yards, which he gained his junior year in high school

Hall, now 50, runs a barbecue restaurant a mile south of Fredericksburg, about 70 miles northwest of San Antonio. There are clippings and photos on the wall in a display put together by his mother, and on the outside wall is a drawing of a man in a green football jersey with No. 31 on it. He has talked about the schoolboy exploits enough to last a lifetime, he says "I think there have been times when I look at it as 'Not again! Do we have to talk about it one more time?' But people do like to talk about it, and if they want to bring it up, I'll talk," Hall said.

surprise to all, Hall said.

His explosiveness on the football field came as a

"I played as an eighth grader about as poorly as anybody could play. I didn't want to play football. I just didn't like it. But I could kick the ball, and I could throw the ball," he recalled.

"I only kicked, and I only threw" during the first half of his freshman season, Hall said. Then, in a game late in the season, there was no one to throw to, so he ran the ball, he said.

"I scored, and that's kinda when it got started." After a string of losing seasons, Sugar Land wasn't used to winning. But over the remaining 38 games of Hall's high school career, Sugar Land went 37-0-1, easily claiming three district titles and three regional crowns.

"He set things afire. We hadn't seen anything like him," recalled T.C. Rozelle, retired personnel director at Imperial Sugar, the town's largest employer. Sports writers labeled Hall the "Sugar Land Express.

There's no telling how many more yards Hall could have gained or how many more points he could have scored, Rozelle said

In some games, Hall played only a quarter, and he seldom played in the second half because Sugar Land was so far ahead by then that the coach turned the games over to substitutes, Rozelle said

"I thought he was the finest athlete I had ever seen," said L.V. "Dugan" Hightower, the only member of the Sugar Land coaching staff during Hall's career who is still living. "We marveled at all of the things that he could do.'

Hall was also a versatile track star. He scored 38 points in one state meet, which was a national record at the time. In four years, he scored 84 points at the state meet, and Sugar Land won the state track championship twice. He ran a 9.7 100yard dash. He also starred in baseball and basketball and was voted "Most Handsome Boy" of his

If Hall's mother and band director James Gary had their way, he would have been a musician.

"I remember the night he broke the record for yards in a career, we had a concert for the school band. He woke up at 5:30 in the morning the next day and rode the bus to Austin to compete in the marching band contest. He had to play; he was the best trumpet player I had," Gary said.

'He had the ability to be as good as any high school musician in the state. But athletics was the thing for him.

The regional level was as high as Class B football teams in Texas could advance in those days, but Hall caught the eye of a legion of college coaches across the United States.

'I can remember we had a group of four assistants who came from Notre Dame and started crying when they spoke about the reverence, tradition and spirit of Notre Dame," Hightower

Hall was not impressed and finally narrowed the field to Texas A&M and Rice before deciding to sign with the Aggies, who were coached by Bear Bryant

Some townspeople — and Hall — feel he might have been a college All-American if he had gone to another college. At Texas A&M, he became embroiled in a personality dispute with Bryant, and Hall left the team without achieving the greatness that had been expected of him.

'He (Bryant) rode him and he rode him and finally he (Hall) left," Hightower said. But several townspeople said they never heard Hall complain of Bryant's treatment of him.

Well, it was one of those things where maybe had I gone to another college it would have been better," Hall agrees.

Hall was twice clocked in 9.4 seconds in the 100 while at A&M. As a freshman, Hall scored the first time he carried the ball and wound up with five touchdowns in five games, tops in the Southwest Conference. He gained 206 yards in 26 carries — 7.9 yards per play. But Bryant demanded more than offensive ability from a player.

"I knew when I went there that I was not that good a defensive player, but I thought I could carry the ball," Hall said.

'Coach Bryant's theory was, 'You play defense and we'll find a place for you on offense.' He was trying to get me to play, and I was trying to play, and we never got together. And I wanted to play. I wanted to play very badly," Hall said.

'There were some times when maybe I'd do excellent in practice. Then, come game time, I would play very little. That became discouraging

So, Hall left the team. He went home and married his childhood sweetheart, Gloria. She was a steadying influence on him, he said, and he had more confidence when he went back to A&M. He talked Bryant into taking him back

But it was more of the same, and when he left the team a second time, his college days were

Bryant later would concede he mishandled Hall. In his book, Bryant said it was the biggest mistake he had ever made. He wrote Hall a letter of apology after an article on the Sugar Land standout appeared in a San Francisco news-

Hall played one year with Edmondton in the Canadian Football League and then played with the Baltimore Colts, the Cardinals (both in Chicago and St. Louis), and with Houston.

After football, he returned to Sugar Land for a while to work with Imperial Sugar, the town's principal employer. Later, he moved to California to climb the management ranks of two sweetener companies.

For many years, Hall had loved cooking barbecue and had eyed it as another career after retirement. Earlier this year, after touring much of the country, looking at different styles of barbecuing, he and Gloria came upon the barbecue place outside Fredericksburg that he decided to buy

Erving calls

By RALPH BERNSTEIN AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Julius Erving said he wanted to go out while he's still on top — and that he had a gut feeling he wanted to step aside "while I was in control of my own destiny.

Erving's disclosure Friday that he will retire after this season, his 16th in pro basketball, didn't follow the usual script for such events. There was sion cameras or dozens of tape recorders on hand.

Erving and the Philadelphia 76ers were several minutes into Friday night's 1986-87 NBA opener against the Indiana Pacers when a four-page statement was distributed in the press box.

'Julius Erving tonight announced that he is playing his final season in the National Basketball Association," the statement began. "Erving ... said he intends to remain in Philadelphia as a base for both his home and his business interests. Consequently he intends to devote more time to his family.

Later in the game, Erving got a standing ovation when his decision to retire was relayed to the crowd by the public address announcer.

The most surprised person was 76ers' coach Matt Guokas

"It shocked me," Guokas said after Erving scored five key points down the stretch to lead the 76ers to a 108-104 triumph over the Pacers. "It came out of the blue," said Guokas. "I was trying to figure out combinations to get us going."

Guokas also said Erving probably could play longer if he wanted to.

"He recently played 42 minutes and scored 29 points. He had the crowd on its feet," said Guokas. "He can do that for stretches of time. There is still life in those legs

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Sophomore halfback Bobby Humphrey rushed for a school-record 284 yards and three touchdowns as eighth-ranked Alabama routed No. 19 Mississippi State 38-3 Saturday to stay unbeaten in the Southeastern Alabama, rebounding from a 23-3 loss a week earlier to Penn State, pushed its record to 8-1 overall and 4-0 in the SEC. Humphrey scored on runs of 4, 20 and 9 yards in shattering the one-game rushing mark of 233 yards set by Bobby Marlow against Auburn in 1951. Humphrey carried the ball 30 times.

Alabama, which totaled 514 yards on the ground, reeled off touchdown marches of 78, 88 and 47 yards in the first quarter alone — without throwing a pass.

Gonzalez leads Greyhounds past East Texas State, 21-6

COMMERCE, Texas (AP) -Quarterback Tommy Gonzalez ran for one touchdown and passed for another to lead Eastern New Mexico to a 21-6 Lone Star Conference victory over East Texas State Saturday.

Gonzalez, a sophomore from Lubbock, completed 10 of 19 passes for 223 yards. He scored the first points for Eastern New Mexico on a 1-yard keeper in the first

All the scoring came in the first half, and the last touchdown was a 32-yard pass from Gonzalez to Robert Griggs with 1:05 left in the half. Griggs, a sophomore wide receiver, led all receivers with 122 yards on four receptions.

Eastern New Mexico is now 7-2 for the season and 2-2 in the LSC. ETSU is 1-7 and 0-3.

Canadian caught in three-way tie

Sports Writer

WELLINGTON - If the Canadian Wildcats had their minds elsewhere Friday night it didn't show,

While the 'Cats were dismantling the Skyrockets of Wellington 35-14, over at Memphis, Quanah was faltering 34-12. The loss by the Indians throws the District 2-2A race into a three-way tie and Canadian Head Coach Paul Wilson doesn't expect any of the top three to lose next week.

"It's going to be coin flip," Wilson predicted Saturday, noting that the three top teams will be meeting underdogs in the final regular round of the 1986 season.

If Quanah had stopped the Cyclones this past week, the Wildcats would have needed only to win their last two games to be assured of a playoff berth. Now even a pair of Canadian victories will most likely leave the district crown question up in

All three squads have 3-1 records going into the final week of play.

Canadian wasted little time Friday in taking command of the game. The Wildcats posted a 28-0 margin in first quarter, then spent some time checking with fans in the stands on the progress of the Quanah-Memphis contest.

Shawn Wright opened the scoring for the Wildcats with a 4-yard run and Jeff Kirkland kicked the first of five extra points posting the 'Cats to 7-0 lead with the game only minutes old. Denny McLanahan, a 135-pound senior, scampered 15 yards for the next Canadian touchdown.

The Wildcat defense provided what proved to be the winning points when Lance Cates intercepted a Skyrocket pass and returned it 34 yards, lifing Candian to 21-0 margin.

The winner

Wright got in one more touchdown run, 11 yards, before the horn sounded, ending the first quarter. Wright was the workhorse of the night for Canadian, picking up 158 yards on 19 carries to go with his three scoring runs.

It was also Wright, early in the third quarter with a 27-yard run, who posted Canadian's final margin. "We came out real strong," Wilson remarked of the 28-point first quarter. "Our running game was as good as it's been all year."

He noted that the three Wildcat running backs, Wright, McLanahan and Kirkland, all had a good night, but attributed much of their success to the efforts of the offensive line.

"Our offensive line is getting quite a bit better," Wilson said. "We found holes we could run in."

It wasn't until the fourth quarter, facing the 'Cat reserves, that the Skyrockets fizzling attack finally took off. Curtis Nash scored on runs of 69 yards and one yard to put Wellington on the scoreboard. After Nash's second touchdown, Alex Johnson caught a pass from Lee Souder for a couple of extra

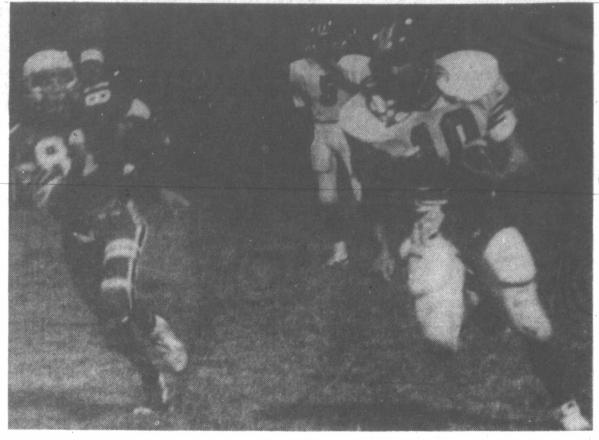

The victory over the Skyrockets lifted Canadian to 5-3-1 overall and 3-1 in district play. Wellington is

With the playoffs a game — and probably a coin flip — away, Wilson looked ahead and noted, "We are about where we would like to be going into the

In the other District 2-2A contest, Shamrock fell to Clarendon 15-12.

Next week, the Wildcats will host Shamrock while Wellington journeys to Quanah and Clarendon and Memphis tangle.

Wilson said the only chance of breaking the knotted district race would probably be the Wellington-Quanah match and that would be a long shot.

Dorsett finding frustration a part of life this season

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) - Tony Dorsett was annoyed when the Dallas Cowboys paid Herschel Walker a lot of money before the season and he's just as annoyed by the suggestion that Walker is now the team's No. 1 tailback.

"I've been proving what I can do for 10 years," Dorsett said in a telephone interview. "I expect to come back and fall right back in where I left off. I'm the starter now. I've earned that.'

However, there is no question the season has been frustrating for Dorsett. He has missed three games and been taken out of two others this year because of ankle and knee injuries. The latest absence came last week against St. Louis, but Dorsett said he expects to return Sunday for the NFC East showdown between the Cowboys and New York Giants at Giants Stadium. The two teams enter the weekend tied with Washington for first place in the division, all with 6-2 marks.

Walker, the former University of Georgia and New Jersey Generals star, has been outstanding replacing Dorsett. He has gained 483 yards on 101 carries and caught 40 passes for 415 yards. He has scored nine touchdowns.

"Herschel is a great athlete," Dorsett said. "He has been productive and filled in extremely well. I don't know if we'd be in the same position now if he wasn't there to fill in.

Fill in is the key word in Dorsett's vocabulary for now.

'There's going to come a time when there will be no Tony Dorsett around," the former Pitt star said. "When that day comes, Herschel will have it all to himself. But now it's my job and I don't expect to have to win it back.

Dorsett, who needs 100 yards rushing to surpass O.J. Simpson for fifth place among the NFL's all-time leading rushers, has carried just 77 times this season for 304 yards and 2 TDs. He has caught nine passes for 92 yards and another score.

"When I got hurt, I was running and catching the ball," said Dorsett. ''I wasn't onedimensional. I was being used more. But when I got hurt, they didn't want to overwork me, so I didn't get the ball as much. Now that I'm coming around, I want to get back to that.

Dorsett may not want the ball that much against the Giants, who come into the game as the conference's top-ranked defense, and No. 2 overall in the league. New York is yielding just 65.4 rushing yards per game.

"They simply played better than we did in the fourth quarter," said Giants linebacker Carl Banks. "They made the play when they needed them. Out offense gave us enough points to win and our defense, we didn't play well in the fourth quarter. That's when they beat us.

Wheeler's Mustangs, cruising along undefeated in District 1-1A, got handed a bit of surprise Friday when unheralded Booker dropped in from back in the pack and stunned the Ponies with a shutout.

It was but one of several unusual events in East Panhandle Friday Football Wars. Others included Lefors scoring 47 points and still losing and McLean scoring more points in a single game then the rest of the year . . . and

Wheeler is faced with the possibility of the District 1-1A title being decided by the flip of a coin next week after they were dramatically upset at Booker 29-0. 'We just played a good football team," Mustangs Head Coach Preston

Smith said Saturday. "They decided to play and lined up and whipped us." The loss, coupled with Sunray's 42-8 stampede past Follett, sets up the district with a three-way tie for first.

Wheeler, Booker and Follett. "It was just one of those games," Smith said. "We were flat and they were sky high."

Smith also noted that the Kiowas were a physically bigger team than the Mustangs and that last week Wheeler had a big game (which they won) with

"We were concerned because they (Booker) hadn't played well all year and we knew they were due to play well," Smith said. He also noted that untimely penalties and errors played a major role in the loss.

"We moved the ball real well in first half and could have been ahead 14-10 at halftime," Smith said.

McLean 28 PHILLIPS - While the McLean Tigers haven't been a real threat to anybody this year, the Blackhawks almost rolled over and played dead. Phillips needed a last quarter touchdown to keep McLean out of the winning column for another week.

The 28 points the Tigers collected in their 35-28 loss more than doubled their total points for the 1986 season. Going into Friday's game, McLean had scored only 20 points all year long.

Phillips took a 28-0 edge in the first all belonged to the Tigers. In the third quarter McLean collected 20 points and closed within eight of the faltering Clint Herndon scored the first touchdown for the Tigers with a 4-yard run

Green led on the receiving with two catches for 102 yards and a TD. He also carried 16 times for 99 yards. Herndon rushed 15 times for 78 yards and Anderson ran 12 times for 50 yards.

"We were pleased with what our kids did in the second half," Tiger Coach Bill Phillips said Saturday. "We came out and ran the offense the way it's suposed to be run. We only had one incomplete pass in the second half.

"It was one of those situations where we couldn't do right the first half and and anything wrong the second half," Phillips said.

Phillips was mare than a little elated by his team's performance. "The kids said the coach was walking about three feet above the ground," he remarked.

"We had pretty good night," Grooom Coach Terry Coffee said of the events that moved the Tigers to 7-2 overall and 2-2 in District 1-1A South play. The victim of the night, Kress is 0-8-1 and 0-3-1.

"The defense played a super good good ball game," Coffee noted. They intercepted two passes and ran them back for touchdowns."

Free safety Bruce Thornton nailed the first interception, in the first quarter, and returned it 11 yards for six points. Outside linebacker Stoney Crump got the second interception when he made a 31-yard return in the fourth quarter.

Offenslively, Brent Thornton headed the attack, rushing for 175 yards and three touchdowns. Jack Britten ran for 130 yards and a touchdown. Bruce Thornton also had a hand in the victory with 75 yards rushing and 63 yards passing, including a touchdown toss to Crump.

But the real key to Friday's success was the offensive line, according to Coffee. He cited Daniel Lambert, center. James Miller and Tony Homer, guards and Travis Homer and Jason McCoy, tackles for their efforts.

The heart of last night (Friday) was the line. Our linemen did a super job,' Coffee remarked. "There were holes all night. I can't say enough about these LEFORS — Although Lefors racked the most yards in a single game that it has all year, 454, Harrold got 558 yards and a few more points in a game that saw 105 total points put on the board.

'The kids were fired up and wished it was Sept. 5." Lefors Head Coach Brent Fountain said of the scoring explosion. Kirk Kerbo rushed 206 yards on 13 carries and scored four touchdowns. He also completed 11 of 12 pass attempts for 185 yards and one touchdown. Kent Kirbo scored two touchdowns and carried 16 times for 66 yards.

"Kirk was set free by blocks by Kent and Kevin Howe," Fountain said of his star back's scoring efforts.

Herrold went ahead 16-0 on two quick touchdowns in the first quarter, but Lefors battled back to take the lead briefly,33-30, late in second round. The Hornets recovered in time to hold a 36-33 halftime advantage. Miami 60.

MIAMI - A non-district tilt saw Miami easily win its homecoming contest over West Texas Christian Academy, 60-14. "It was kind of about what what we expected," Warriors Head Coach Curry McWilliams said.

McWilliams said WTCA lost one of their good running backs and moved their quarterback to running back to fill the vacancy. That left a freshmn in the quarterback's slot.

"We got to play our little ones quite a bit," McWilliams said, noting that seven players scored the Warriors' eight touchdowns White Deer 42,

Miami fears Oilers quarterback Moon

MIAMI (AP) — Although Houston Oilers quarterback Warren Moon is one of the lowest ranked passers in the NFL, the Miami Dolphins are mighty worried about

The Dolphins don't put much stock in Moon's poor statistics of 17 interceptions with only seven touchdowns passes this year. What they remember is the 270 yards he passed for last year to lead the Oilers to a season-opening 26-23 victory over Miami.

They get another chance at Moon Sunday when he leads the 1-7 Oilers against the 3-5 Dolphins in the Orange Bowl at 1 p.m. EST.

'He's a great athlete who has really come along as far as being a drop-back passer," Dolphins Coach Don Shula said of Moon. 'This makes him doubly dangerous because of his tremendous ability on rollouts by design and his ability to scramble when receivers are not open. He just makes things

Unfortunately for the Oilers, many of the things he has made happen this year have been negatives. In addition to the high interception total, Moon has completed only 52 percent of his passes and has been sacked 26 times for 205 yards in losses. His rating of 59.2 is 26th among the league's starting quarterbacks.

'I think I've been trying too hard to get a win," said Moon, in his third year with the Oilers after an ultra-successful career in the Canadian Football League. "We're starting to press, and that gets you in trouble. It hurts that we always seem to be playing from behind."

The Dolphins can sympathize with the Oilers on that point. They've been behind more than they've been ahead this season.

Shula said he was encouraged by Sunday's 17-13 victory over Indianpolis, partially because the Miami defense came through with several clutch plays near the end of the

'Hopefully, the monkey is off our back, we'll start to get some breaks and we can go from here," he said.

The Oilers have given up hope for this season, but not the individual games.

"We're just going to try to get some wins," Moon said. "We're going to put the first eight games behind us and try to see what we can salvage from this season.

Though the two teams in the Orange Bowl Sunday will be a combined 4-12, the game promises to be interesting. Moon has thrown for more yards, 2,035, than all but one quarterback in the league. The guy he's behind is Miami's Dan Marino, who has thrown for 2,326 yards.

Northeast Louisiana tops Stephen F. Austin

MONROE, La. (AP) — Sophomore safety Cyril Crutchfield tied a school record with three fumble recoveries, two of which resulted in touchdowns, in leading Northeast Louisiana to a 28-7 college football victory Saturday over Stephen F. Austin.

Crutchfield also had an interception as Northeast covered four fumbles and picked off sharpshooting quarterback Todd Whitten four times in dealing SFA its fourth straight loss, while extending the Indians' winning streak to three games.

It left each team with a 4-4 re-

More than 300 Gray County 4-H'ers and their families filled the Heritage Room of M.K. Brown Auditorium, Oct. 25 for the 1986 4-H Awards Ban-

The annual banquet came as the finale of National 4-H Week. During the awards ceremony, 4-H members and leaders were recognized for their achievements during the past year.

Heather Kludt and Sherri McDonald were named this year's recipients of the Gold Star Award, the highest honor that can be given in 4-H.

Kludt is the 14-year-old daughter of Fran and Eileen Kludt of Pampa. She has been a member of 4-H for five years and now serves as chairman of the Gray County 4-H Council. Her strongest 4-H project is the Dog Project, but she is also active in clothing, foods and nutrition, and consumer decision making projects. She has participated at the state level in the State Food Show, Method Demonstration Contest and the State 4-H Dog Show. She has served as teen and junior leader in various projects for the past three years. Kludt is an Ahonor roll student and active member of her school, church and community.

McDonald, daughter of James Lee and Katie McDonald of Pampa, has been active in 4-H for for half of her life — seven years. She has participated in recreation, clothing, and foods and nutrition projects. She is a member of the Gray County 4-H Recreation Team and attended Longhorn Recreation Lab at the State 4-H Center. She has led 4-H members in recreation training at the club, county and district levels. For the past four years, McDonald has shown her leadership qualities by serving as teen leader for clothing, and foods and nutrition projects. She is also outstanding in method demonstration, record books and consumer decision making contests. She is active in her school. church and community

Outstanding Leaders awards were presented to Jake and Ida Hess of McLean who work with the 4-Clover 4-H Club. Jake has been one of the leaders working with the McLean Stock Show, helping secure the new show barn there. He has been 4-H beef leader in the McLean area for six years and has served as vice-chairman of the Gray County 4-H Adult Leaders' Council.

Ida is vice-chairman for the Adult Leaders' Council and organizational leader for the 4-Clover 4-H Club. She is also advisor for the newly-formed Gray County 4-H Fashion Club. Last year Ida not only helped many Gray County 4-H'ers complete record books, but also assisted Roberts and Donley counties 4-H'ers. She is active in district and state level training activities for 4-H'ers and leaders.

Applause rang through the auditorium as Roy Lott named Don Morrison the recipient of the Friend of 4-H award. Morrison has hosted the Gray County 4-H Trail Ride and County Camp on his ranch for the past two years. He was active in Gray County 4-H while his sons were members. He was also chairman of the District 1 4-H Adult Leader Council. He has helped other area counties to organize 4-H Adult Leaders Associations. Now, though no longer actively involved in the Gray County 4-H. he continues to give his support to the program.

Donna Eakin was honored with the Outstanding Teen Leader award. This award is presented to a 4-H member who assumes full leadership responsiblity of a project group. The recipients are nominated by an organizational, adult or project

Pampa Police Chief J.J. Ryzman said he had been wondering for several months what he could do to help some of the 30 percent of his officers that smoke to quit.

But it was not until Coronado Community Hospital Public Relations Director Linda Haynes casually mentioned a hospitalsponsored smoking clinic that Ryzman's idea came to fruition.

'I know it's not easy for somebody to put (cigarettes) down,' said Ryzman, a former threepack-a-day smoker. "I don't think a non-smoker, a person who's never smoked, can understand what it's like for someone to quit smoking.

Ryzman can, though, and describes his quitting experience 12 years ago in one word: "Rough."

"I had tried two or three times before then," he recalled. "One time I quit two or three times in one day

But, he adds, the experience

Sunday Series - Part 1

"Now I jog, I have a little spending money in my pockets, I don't have little burn holes in my clothes or smell like an ashtray,' he said.

Twenty-seven city employees who smoke and local business people, have signed up for the class which met for the first time Thursday.

Their habits range from one who smokes four packs a day, to a few who say they smoke less than a pack. They include a woman who began smoking at age 11, and another who began at the age of

But they all have one goal in common: cigarette freedom.

The course, entitled I Can Quit, was developed by a psychologist at Presbyterian Hospital in Oklahoma City, part of the Hospital Corporation of America, of which the local hospital is also a part.

It is being taught for the first time locally by Haynes, one of three representatives from CCH who attended a training session in September to learn to teach the course. The course meets once a week for an hour, culminating with the Great American Smokeout on Nov. 20. Haynes has taught smoking cessation classes developed by the American Cancer Society and others for the past

"The difference in this program and the one we taught before is this is a shorter program," she said. "For lots of reasons, for working people, this is a more convenient type set-up.

The program helps smokers remember why they started and asks if those reasons are still valid. Most of the time, they aren't, she said.

Like Ryzman, Haynes is also a former three-pack-a-day smoker for 23 years — until she quit cold turkey six years ago, something she said she did not think would ever be possible. She said she began smoking as a 16-yearold college freshman to look older and because she was shy and added that, at 39, she suddenly realized her reasons were not valid anymore.

"I was one of those people that was convinced other people could quit, but not me," she recalled. "I used to look at people and wonder how they quit.

But she said she decided one day: "If I was going to live, by God, I wasn't going to feel that

The experience was difficult, she said. She remembers experiencing nausea, nightmares, bleeding gums and one time, several weeks after quitting, even found herself sweating nicotine from her pores.

"Let's call it by what it really is," she now tells her classes, "We're talking about a drug. It's an addiction.

Haynes begins the course by rattling off some of the everpresent scary smoking statistics. The number of people dying cigarette-related deaths annually is comparable to three jumbo jets crashing every day for a year; $47.5 billion is spent annually on cigarette-related health care — this list goes on.

She tells the class of a man who signed up for one of her classes, too late — he died from lung cancer a few months later. When he called Haynes to his deathbed, he had but one request: "I wanted you to take a picture of someone dying from lung cancer that came from cigarette smoke.'

"Most intelligent people accept the pysician's opinion that it is hazardous to your health but they always think it's going to happen to someone else," Haynes says, "(But) if you smoke, you will have; health problems.

The class also views a video, stressing the reasons people start smoking and the tapering-off method that is the focus of the program.

Smokers have four major reasons for lighting up, Haynes later explains - physiological; social, psychological and habit.

Next week: The challenge begins — beginning to cut back.

(Pampa News Senior Staff Writer Paul Pinkham is currently participating in a cigarette smoking clinic sponsored by the Pampa Police Department. For the next four weeks, each Sunday, he will share his fears and feelings about quitting smoking with readers.)

Now being without you Takes a lot of getting used to Should learn to live with it... I'm addicted to you You're a hard habit to break

Chicago

I'm not a heavy smoker. I smoke probably less than a pack a day of a relatively low-tar brand cigarette. Nevertheless, there are times when I feel I need a nicotine fix, times when I just want a cigarette, times when I light up completely out of habit.

I'm finishing up a cigarette right now, as I write this, only because I felt like taking a break a few minutes ago.

But there are also times when I want to give it up, this habit I've had since college

I worry about my health — what I'm doing to my body. I'd like to start exercising again but every time I do, I start coughing. I'd also like to set a better example for my new stepchildren.

"Tomorrow," I say. "Maybe some time next year. Or when I turn 30."

I used to say I could quit anytime I wanted, that I continued only because I wanted to, but today I realize that's no longer completely true, if it ever

So, when the assignment came along to cover a smoking clinic from the inside, as a participant, I responded both with enthusiasm and anxious-

I've tried to quit before...and failed. This time, with a lot of prayer and hard work, I hope to make

My smoking profile, which course director Linda Haynes asked us to complete in class Thursday, says my addiction is more a social and psychological one than anything else. I smoke to relax, to relieve stress, to be sociable in a profession in which tobacco use runs rampant. I also smoke when I'm angry or upset. Why, I don't

We were also asked to complete a smoking cessation profile — listing reasons why we want to quit - and the results bore out what I thought: my health, our kids, the cost.

This week, as part of the clinic, I'll be keeping a record of every cigarette I smoke — where I was at the time, what I was doing and how badly I felt I really needed the smoke.

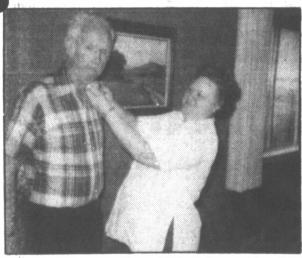

I'll also be listing ways that smoking affects me negatively and the positive effects of quitting. The list will include some important reasons and some trivial ones.

For instance, I've already determined I probably spend upwards of $350 a year on cigarettes. Even if I didn't have that money to spend on myself, I keep thinking of what it could do to aid some worthy organization.

(On the more trivial side, I'm tired of feeling like I have to carry a pack of cigarettes around, especially when I happen to wear a shirt that has no pockets!)

Cigarettes started out, for me, as an enjoyable college pastime, then a way to break the loneliness that comes from moving halfway across the country, 1,200 miles from those I loved

But I have my own great family now and those reasons are no longer valid.

We have three clocks in our house, and each of us has a wristwatch. If you want to know what time it is, you'd find out faster by driving over to the bank or calling Time of Day.

The clock on the VCR blinks on and off at 12 a.m. That is because the power went off in the house last spring and when the continuity is broken, that's how the clock lets you know that the continuity is broken.

We had every intention of resetting it until we saw the directions. I was to hold down the clock button while my husband performed steps 1 through 5, but he screwed up by pressing the hour-minute button BEFORE he pressed the day button and after a while, we figured we were too old to start again at Step 1, so we let it blink.

The clock in the bedroom is hooked up to all kinds of things including a radio and a speaker phone. It blinks too because its continuity was broken, so we never know what time it is. We are only sure that every morning at 6, a disc jockey awakens us with a promise to maintain our pool with premium service. We don't have a pool. We also don't have to get up at 6, but we can't figure out how to make him go away.

The clock on the oven hasn't had the right time since we owned the stove. That is because without my glasses I cannot see what I am twirling and mistake it for the timer. Thus is it is 4 o'clock and I put a roast in the oven, I inadvertently reset the clock to 4:45. I have been known to lose as mush as two and a half hours on a busy day in the kitchen. I have a wristwatch that gives Possibly the only source of time in the entire house is my husband's watch. It's a runners watch, which means it looks like a time machine that is ready to blast off. He can give you the time if you have the time to wait for it. He must depress a small knob with a sharpened pencil and subtract four or five hours from the time he bought it depending on the season and whether we are on daylight saving time. It sounds like a lot of fiddling, but to reset it, he would have to climb in the car and make sure the owner of the shop where he bought it is in.

A couple came over the other night and innocently inquired, What time is it?'

My husband said, "I don't have my calculator with me. You tell

HELPFUL HINTS

In all the time we've spent with brides, we've heard just about every wedding problem — and have helped with a solution. Here are some hints we'd like to share.

When you make arrangements with a wedding photographer, don't forget to ask for a replacement photographer to be named. It's a rare occurrence, but you won't want to be stranded without professional photographs if the photographer you hired has a sudden illness or accident. To guard against an organist (or other wedding musician) who gets sick or forgets to show up, you might ask a talented friend to be available to sit in. Cautious brides have also been known to arrange for a friend to bring a tape of the Wedding March, and a player, "just in case."

Your mind may rest easier if you (or your mother or bridesmaid) carries a bride's "emergency kit." This can in-clude: a nail file; nailpolish to touch up chipped nails (and runs in stockings); extra stockings; bandaid (good for blisters); lipstick; bobby pins; self-stick fake fingernail (pre-polished in your

These Christmas cards, designed by Panhandle students, are a major fundraising project of the Junior Service League and the Circle of Friends. Funds raised support League community projects and cancer patients and their families in times of crisis.

Circle of Friends is a non-profit volunteer organization founded to support the philosophy and goals of the Don and Sybil Harrington Cancer Center. The Cancer Center was established and opened in 1981 because of the generous support of thousands of people throughout the High Plains. That support is still vital today to continue programs in cancer treatment, research and education. The Circle of Friends s a vehicle for that support. Beyond that, it is a means to assure that those founding communities continue to benefit from and be aware of the Center's services and programs.

Friends provides opportunities for volunteers to:

(1) Support educational efforts, such as community health fairs and Cancer Center tours:

(2) Assist in patient information and referral;

(3) Increase awareness of Harrington Cancer Center programs and services:

(4) Provide financial support through membership;

(5) Help organize and participate in fund-raising events;

(6) Help continue and expand interchange between the Cancer Center and area communities:

By 1940, PTAs had come to Pampa and the children of most of the club members had grown up. So Child's Study Club evolved into Varietas Club. "We chose that so we could have a variety of programs," Mrs. Harrah remembered. "We didn't want to stay with one theme.

"For a number of years we sent a great big Christmas box to the mental hospital in Wichita Falls," she recalled. Today the organization sends gifts to Girls Town U.S.A. in Borger as their Christmas project.

Guilt-free chocolate cake?

NEW YORK (AP) — Genesplicing may soon produce lettuce that fights disease, peaches that don't grow on trees, or perhaps most importantly — calorie-free chocolate cake.

Local participants in the American Intercultural Student Exchange and American Field Service will be starting off their year in the United States with an adult dance Saturday.

Proceeds from the dance as well as a shotgun and cash give-aways, selling Christmas items, student dances and a car wash in the spring will be used to fund a trip for the six area students to see more of the United States before returning to their homelands in June.

chocolate cake and ice cream that taste exactly like the real thing but contain few calories, Miller said Thursday at a conference on food safety and nutrition sponsored by the FDA and the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Eventually, he said, the technology could produce foods with all the tastes, textures and odors of the originals, but zero calories — "the ultimate anorectic food. You eat it and you're satisfied, and you starve to death with a smile on your face." Gene-splicing, the technology that allows scientists to put the traits of one organism into another, also may produce lettuce that combats viral illnesses, or corn that can be grown underground. Or it may produce peaches from something other than a peach tree.

Gene-splicing might be used to create new species of shellfish that can survive in waters far from the ocean — "so they can have fresh oysters in Minneapolis," Miller said.

lawaiian sculptor turns sand into castles

By MIKE GORDON Star-Bulletin

HONOLULU (AP) - With tourists digging in all around him, lily white and bent on getting the perfect tan. Joe Maize grabs a strip of broken Formica and sets to work building the perfect sand castle.

The morning sand is still cool and moist, the tide just beginning to recede. A light breeze carries the scent of man-made "cocounut oil," the signature fragrance of Waikiki Beach.

Maize is a 30-year-old free-lance food designer who works primarily for the Royal Hawaiian Hotel carving butter sculptures and buffet table centerpieces. But every Saturday and Sunday — tides and weather permitting — Maize stakes out a prime chunk of real estate in front of the Pink Lady and becomes god to an ephemeral kingdom-by-the-

From morning to sunset, he will sculpt capricious mounds of wet sand with the fury of a sand crab and the concentration of a zen master.

The finished product will be an astonishing collection of miniature towers, pyramids, chimneys, arches and statues - and Maize will have to destroy it all before he heads for home; it's the law.

His friends call him "The Sandman of Waikiki" but Maize has an international reputation as a professional sand sculptor. Each summer his sponsor, Moose McGillycuddy's, sends him abroad to compete in national and international sand sculpting championships. In 1983, he was the world champion. In July Maize finished third in the U.S. Open Sandcasting Competition in San Diego.

Turning sand into "art" requires a blend of sure, bold strokes and a delicate, almost tender, attention to detail. The combination doesn't come easy when one is working against Nature's tidal clock. An art major who never finished college, Maize was living in San Diego when he built his first sand castle in July 1976. Four years later, he was in Hawaii, spending most of a 31/2 week vacation building sand castles.

"I got into food design by building sand castles," he recalls. "One of the chefs from the Royal Hawaiian came out and asked me to make some butter carvings. A week later I had more money in my pocket than I came with. I decided to stay.

Maize grabs a 5-gallon bucket that has had the bottom removed, places it on a 4-foot-high mound

"The water will filter down and bind the sand below," he explains.

Using a tall plastic drinking cup, Maize then adds another cylinder of sand.

"I could put another cup on top of this, but the only problem with that is the wind," he says. "These things can't sway in the wind. One good gust and it's goodbye."

Scraping sand with Formica strips and kitchen tools, Maize quickly produces a foot-tall statue of a lion. He uses a toothpick to line its mane and a straw to gently blow away excess material. Then he takes a sprayer filled with watered-down gelatin and "seals" the sand. The whole thing has taken less than 14 minutes to do.

Drive-in church is appealing

EDITOR'S NOTE - In the comfort and privacy of their own cars and trucks, worshipers can sing loudly and off-key without annoying others. Parents can shush their fidgeting children. Invalids and the elderly don't have to worry about getting in and out of the sanctuary. The drive-in church is an idea that appeals to many in mobile America.

By BOB DVORCHAK Associated Press Writer

ARMBRUST, Pa. (AP) — Harry Bisping parks his orange Volkswagen Beetle in the gravel lot of Armbrust Wesleyan Church, turns on his radio, and waits for Sunday services to start.

"Vans, Trucks And Campers Please Park In Rear," says a sign over the pulpit.

Bisping's church is a drive-in, inspired by outdoor movie theaters and fast-food restaurants, and he thinks it's a fine idea.

"There are softer seats for one thing," Bisping, 74, says from the bucket seat of the 1974 Beetle that has traveled 156,000 miles.

For the past 10 years, the Rev. J.L. Clark has preached in his outdoor chapel in this rural Westmoreland County village 35 miles east of Pittsburgh. Attendance averages about 100 for the 8:45 a.m. service.

Clark's pulpit is a redwood gazebo. Worshipers tune their radios to a special channel to hear the choir and the sermon.

Vehicles park in rows in the church's lot, which has a basketball backboard with a bent rim and is surrounded by wooded hills and newly mown hayfields.

"The outdoor service fulfills a need for vacationers, campers, the handicapped or people just going out of town for the day, Clark says. "It's an opportunity to drop by and worship in casual

The minister says worshipers are encouraged to "come as they are.'

"Some stop before the service to buy coffee and doughnuts," he says. "Some come with their children still in their night clothes.

Inspired by the drive-in movie concept, Clark held his first outdoor service in 1952 when he was based in Indiana County. The idea has been popular with the 450-member congregation here, although a regular service is held at 11 a.m. for traditionalists.

"I enjoy speaking in the open air," Clark says. "It's exciting to be out under the sun. It's a pleasant Sunday morning experi-

In the comfort and solitude of their cars, people can sing loudly and off-key without annoying others. Parents can shush their fidgeting children by rolling up their windows. And invalids and the elderly don't have to worry about getting in and out of the sanctuary.

'I'm trying to revise our methods to minister to the people of this day," Clark says. "Traditional methodology just isn't reaching some people. People are not going to stuffy churches.'

Elizabeth Kunkle, 70, attended a recent service with her daughter, Brenda Meyers of New Stanton, and her springer-spaniel, Heidi, who poked her nose out the car window but refrained from barking during services.

"The dog never misses," Mrs. Kunkle says. "She goes everywhere we go. We could never bring her to a regular church."

Rain can be a nuisance, but church officials say no outdoor service has ever been canceled by bad weather.

East Texas dairymen buck the trend

By GAIL WEATHERLY Nacogdoches Daily Sentinel

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) - Down a secfuded paved road, where large Holstein cattle graze lazily in the shade among dozens of white egrets, an East Texas family dairy is finding success in an era of agricultural hard times.

LLEDROC Farms, formed three years ago when Joe C. Cordell and his son, Joe Wayne Cordell, merged their two herds, is the largest dairy in Nacogdoches County with the largest volume of milk production. LLEDROC — Cordell spelled backwards — operates on what the owners call a progressive management policy, a departure from the conservative idea that a dairyman himself must be everything from a farmer to an animal nutritionist and veterinarian.

'We spend more time hiring the right people to buy the right product," the younger Cordell said.

"We are not farmers. We feel like we can make more profit in spending our time doing what we know best.'

"We lean on a lot of people with knowledge a lot," his father added.

The new LLEDROC dairy is on the same location where the elder Cordell bought a dairy in 1962 after leasing for four years.

The Cordells have a rolling herd of cows actually being milked that numbers 285. A recent analysis of their milk showed it contained 3.7 percent butterfat. The state average was 3.6 percent in August for dairies in the Texas Dairy Herd Association. The measure determines the price dairies get for their milk, says Sonny Arnold, county agricultural extension agent. For more than 3.5 percent butterfat dairymen are paid extra, and for less than 3.5 percent they are paid less money, Arnold ex-

Joe Wayne Cordell, 35, who started milking cows at age 7, was recently honored by the local Farm Bureau as outstanding young farmer for 1986.

"If I didn't have a good family and a good wife, I probably wouldn't be doing what I am doing," he said. "There's always, always somebody behind you that helped.'

Cordell says his success in an industry plagued by problems also may lie in the fact that he enjoys what he is doing. "I love what I do from the time I get up in the morning until I go to bed at night," he

But it takes more than loving the business to make it go, says Arnold. With a milk surplus in the United States, increasing production costs and prospects of lower milk prices, dairymen have to be excellent managers to survive.

Arnold says the trend in Nacogdoches County has been a move away from small dairies. He said in the 1950s there were more than 300 small 30- to 40-cow dairies in the county. Today there are 40 averaging 160 cows each. But he says those 40 dairies generated about $9 million in gross receipts last year, more than all the beef cattle in the

Joe Wayne Cordell has a goal of getting young people involved with working with cattle, a love that began for him in high school when he showed cattle all over the state in Future Farmers of America competition.

Working with two other dairymen on a committee, he helped raise more than $1,000 in prize money for the dairy division of the 1986 Piney Woods Fair, adding to the prize money put up by the Chamber of Commerce to allow a $30 cash prize for youngsters winning a blue ribbon, and proportional amounts for those winning other prizes.

Analyst says diversification is one answer to tough times

WASHINGTON (AP) - One of the most respected bastions of modern agriculture, the specialized farm operation, is being questioned by a government economist who says that maybe the old ways weren't so bad after all.

Michael Salassi of the Agriculture Department's Economic Research Service says it may be time for some farmers to "turn back the clock and reconsider the advantages of diversification" in their production.

'Producing three or four commodities in place of one or two will not guarantee a profit, but it is one method of reducing price risk in an uncertain economic environment," Salassi said in the agency's Farmline magazine.

For many years, particularly during the expansion boom of the 1950s and 1960s, farmers were advised to "get bigger or get out" and to consider specialized production — a larger hog farrowing operation, for example, instead of a few sows, cows and chickens.

But today, following the financial crunch of the early '80s, many farmers are turning to varied means of survival. A recent study by the Council of State Policy and Planning Agencies says there is a new entrepreneurial spirit entering American

The study cited examples of farmers turning to direct selling of farm produce at roadside markets, pick-your-own operations and other ways of earning money. At least 20 states have initiated some sort of program involving direct marketing. agricultural promotion or market development, the study found.

Mixed-enterprise agriculture once was the norm for the traditional American family farm. But since World War II, the typical unit has been gradually transformed into specialized production, with most farm families buying eggs, milk and other groceries at supermarkets

Salassi said the relative security of rising government price supports helped turn the diversified Midwestern farms of the 1940s and '50s into the highly specialized corn-soybean operations of the 1970s and '80s.

In developing a diversification strategy, some common sense guidelines were recommended:

Commodities having different price patterns should be selected. Two crops may be no better than one if prices of both plunge together.

■ To the extent possible, new enterprises should complement existing farm enterprises. For example, select a new crop that can be produced with existing, easily borrowed, or inexpensively leased

TEXAS BRUCELLOSIS PROGRAM CHANGES

The commissioners of the Texas Animal Health Commission during their meeting on October 17 approved two major Effective November 15 calf-hood vaccination fees paid by the TAHC to veterinarians will be reduced from the current rates.

TAHC payments will be made only for heifers vaccinated at veterinary clinics and in the field.

It is anticipated that veterinarians will charge a fee for brucellosis vaccination in addition to that provided by the state. Vaccination of heifers for brucellosis by veterinarians will not be free beginning November 15. As of this month, the federal government is no longer supplying the vaccine to the states. The TAHC will continue providing the vaccine free to the veterinarians until their supply is depleted, at which time veterinarians will have to purchase the vaccine from drug companies which will cause an increase in the charge to cattle owners.

The TAHC will submit a proposal to USDA-APHIS by November 1 requesting reclassification of Texas to a Class B Brucellosis State. The current classification of Texas is B-C.

For the period of September 1, 1985, to August 31, 1986, the herd infection rate for the state was 1.11 percent, and the adjusted market cattle percent and the adjusted MCI is below 0.30 percent for a 12-month period — Texas qualifies to be a Class B State.

The TAHC expects to receive approval of the proposed request by February of 1987.

Group looks forward to return engagement

By PAUL PINKHAM Senior Staff Writer

Jeff Wilhite and his two brothers performed at a banquet in Pampa three years ago and were hoping to get the chance to return someday.

Thursday night, they'll get that chance when the Pampa Police Officers Association brings the Wally Fowler Country Music Jubilee to M.K. Brown Auditorium at 7:30 p.m.

The Noblemen, as the three singing brothers are known on stage, will be featured as part of the star-studded jubilee show, which also includes the popular Ozark Country Jubilee, which performed in Pampa last year, and Jeanette Lunsford, known as the queen of gospel music.

The Thursday night show also will feature the Stars Of Tomorrow talent contest at 6 p.m., with winners in four categories and a grand prize winner who will receive $100 and will perform with the jubilee that evening.

Thursday's show will mark the first show The Noblemen will have done with the Fowler, whom they met while performing in Branson, Mo. But the brothers. Larry, Marty and Jeff, have been singing together since they were teenagers in Lexington, Okla.

"My father started it as a four-part gospel group," Jeff said. Indeed, the group was begun as a local men's gospel quartet 17 years ago in Noble, Okla., by Keith Wilhite, who later took the group on the road with his son Larry, then 15, as lead singer. Marty and Jeff joined up when they reached high school age, Jeff said.

By the time their father was ready to retire from active performing, the three brothers were all accomplished veterans who wanted to continue singing together. Jeff said when they contacted their management in Nashville, Tenn., they were advised to continue but with the three brothers up front in a progressive country format.

That format apparently was the right way to go, as the group's first single release, "I Wouldn't Trade America for The World," received national airplay and rose to song number 12 on the country music charts.

The group's latest release, Who's That Girl," has also begun receiving crossover airplay on KISS, a Top 40 station in Their concert repertoire ranges from western-flavored Sons of the Pioneers songs to Ray Price classics to contemporary hits by the country stars of today, including pop, gospel and original material, Jeff said.

Jeff said The Noblemen were "discovered" in Branson, developing a local following and earning the nickname "The Miami Vice of Branson" because of their bright and flashy outfits. 'The town named us that," he

Also featured in Thursday night's show will be the Ozark Country Jubilee, also from Branson; master of ceremonies and featured vocalist Larry Elkins, a Stars Of Tomorrow winner himself; fiddler Tokyo Matsu, a native of Japan who conrted from classical to country music; gospel artist Jeanette Lunsford, also a Stars Of Tomorrow winner; the group Stetsen; and, of course, veteran gospel singer Wally Fowler, who, among other things, penned Eddy Arnold's first hit, "That's How Much I Love You.

Auditorium Manager Danny Parkerson said the Stars Of Tomorrow contest will feature winners in vocal solo, vocal group, instrumental solo and instrumental group. The contest is open to the first 15 acts who enter and nine or 10 have already signed up, he said.

And grand prize winner will perform with Fowler and the iubilee Thursday night.

"Many times, this is the way they've picked up some of their stars in their show," Parkerson

Parkerson said the contest will be judged by three local judges. whose names will be announced after the competition. Acts are limited to three minutes and Parkerson will serve as master of ceremonies for the contest

Proceeds from the event will benefit the Tralee Crisis Center, Good Samaritan Christian Services, Pampa Senior Citizens, the special olympics and other local organizations.

Tickets for the Wally Fowler Country Music Jubilee are available at the Pampa Police Department and M.K. Brown Auditorium. For more information on the show or the talent contest, contact Parkerson at 665-4841.

Oklahoma Kids to perform here

A fun-filled afternoon for kids of all ages is planned next Sunday as M.K. Brown Auditorium welcomes the Oklahoma Kids Talent Search, presenting its original musical history of Oklahoma, The Will And The Wind.

The show is slated to begin at 2 p.m. and tickets are available at the auditorium. Auditorium Manager Danny Parkerson said tickets also will be distributed freeof-charge to all Pampa elementary school pupils.

The Will And The Wind features a 35-member cast of youngsters age 4 to 17. Parkerson said it is a "good, clean, wholesome" musical production featuring country-western and gospel music, rope-spinning and dance. He added that a pre-show will give those youngsters performing a chance to show off their many unique talents.

The Kids come from all over they have participated in a statewide talent search, the finals of which were broadcast Oct. 18 on Oklahoma Public Television (Channel 12 in Pampa). Their performances raise money for organ transplants and donations in Oklahoma.

Ex-employees charged in kickback scheme

DALLAS (AP) - A Mesquite contracting company and five individuals, including four former employees of Warner Amex's cable television system, have been charged in connection with alleged kickbacks and rigging bids for cable construction.

After a lengthy Internal Revenue Service investigation, felony conspiracy charges were filed Thursday against Global Contracting Co. Inc. through its president, Don Laney; Stephen W. Magnuson, a cost-analysis manager in Warner Shammas, described by federal prosecutors as a 'middle man'' who formed a dummy corporation to launder kickbacks from Global, which is no longer in business, officials said.

Willie H. Walls, Julian N. Kelly and Carl N Underwood, all former cable construction inspectors for Warner Amex in Dallas, were charged with misdemeanor blackmail charges for allgedly demanding money from Laney for not informing on him, Assistant U.S. Attorney David B. Lewis

According to the charges, Magnuson, Laney, Walls and Kelly began meeting in March 1983 to establish secret interests in a cable construction company

Two months later, Laney, who was not charged personally, began making kickback payments through Global to Warner Amex employees and NAS Corp. — a dummy firm that Shammas set up to launder the kickbacks, which were disguised as consulting or administrative fees, according to the charges.

Magnuson is accused of using his position to rig the competitive bidding process to ensure that Global and selected contractors were chosen.

Warner Amex, which sold its cable television interests in the Dallas area to Heritage Cablevision about a year ago, was unaware of the alleged criminal activities and later cooperated with investigators, said Wayne Hill, a spokesman for Warner Communications

Dairymen must dump milk as they make cornbread living

EDITOR'S NOTE — It began as a way for dairy farmers to save a few bucks on their feed bill. They bought a mash byproduct from seed being used to make gasohol. It turned out to be contaminated by the banned pesticide heptachlor. That discovery came last February and dozens of dairy farms are still under quarantine, their milk declared unsafe

By SCOTT CHARTON Associated Press Writer

LINCOLN, Ark. (AP) — At sunrise on Dwight Baugh's dairy farm in the Ozark Mountains, the chug of milking machines blending with the chirping of crickets sounds sort of like a car stuck in

The comparison isn't lost on Baugh, a second generation dairyman whose operation, like 77 others in three states, is under government quarantine because of contamination by the banned pesticide heptachlor.

Quarantine means the milk must be dumped. "Our milk's just going down the drain," Baugh, 53, says as he watches raw milk gush into yellowed five-gallon jugs for scattering across a dewy pas-

"We're just making a corn bread living," adds Baugh, fetching a crumpled pack of cigarettes from a pocket of his bib overalls. "It's been tough."

Farmers in the three states — Arkansas, Missouri and Oklahoma — have received nearly $2 million in compensation under the federal Dairy Indemnity Program, but they have no assurances about nature's timetable for cleansing their livestock of heptachlor, which is suspected of causing Heptachlor was banned as a general use pesticide by the Food and Drug Administration in 1983. Authorities say heptachlor-treated seed, dyed red as a warning, was used by J.E.W. Inc. to make gasohol at Van Buren, Ark., and that a mash byproduct from the process was sold by co-owned Valley Feeds Inc. to farmers like Dwight Baugh who fed it to their cows. Federal officials say they're not certain how long the feed might have been distributed because of incomplete sales records. Spokesmen for the

Van Buren companies, shut down in March by a federal injunction, say they didn't know the feed contained heptachlor. U.S. Attorney Mike Fitzhugh of Fort Smith savs an investigation of the Van Buren mill's operations is almost complete, but no charges have been filed. Eddie Christian of Fort Smith, attorney for Valley Feeds, says his clients would not comment until the federal investigation is complete. Baugh's 156 Holsteins were among 140 herds quarantined in the three states last February. By March, dairy products suspected of heptachlor contamination had been removed from store shelves in eight states and breast-feeding mothers were warned not to drink milk until an all-clear was given.

By late summer, officials said, 51 dairy farms and 27 beef and swine farms were still prohibited from selling milk or meat.

Scientists say heptachlor settles in fat cells of animals and humans. The only way to remove the pesticide is by milking the cows until levels fall below the Food and Drug Administration's limit of .1 part per million.

Baugh's latest tests showed .2 ppm.

Since Baugh's father started Triple B Dairy in 1942, the family has contended with poor markets, increasing production costs and foul weather. They say the quarantine nearly broke the har

Baugh took a $2,000-a-month job hauling milk from farms around Lincoln to recover lost income, and the family borrowed against savings to pay mortgage interest.

Baugh credits his family's economic survival to interest-free loans from Mid-America Dairymen, a milk marketing cooperative which voted in late March to make $218,000 available to quarantined

Baugh estimates the dairy was grossing $15,000 monthly before the quarantine. "We've had to give up entertainment, because we can't afford it and don't have time for it," he says.

A dozen miles away in Westville, Okla., Tommy Murray, 31, rises early to milk about 100 quarantined cattle before moonlighting at two livestock sale barns. He has five children and zero income from the farm.

Instead of dumping contaminated milk, he's feeding it to calves and hopes the heptachlor will cycle out of their systems over time. Murray's most recent test showed a heptachlor level of .6

Walt Coleman estimates a loss of $1 million and incalculable jarring of consumer confidence because of product recalls by his family-owned Coleman Dairy, in operation in Little Rock since 1862.

"It has taken a period of time for everyone to develop confidence again," Coleman says. "With the advertising we have done, the confidence is back. But we got a lot of products back that people just were scared to eat, even though we assured them it wasn't contaminated.'

Coleman doesn't know whether some of the recalled products may have been edible. "I guess it just depends on what you consider contaminated." Baugh says he would drink the milk his sons dump twice a day. Murray says he would be hesitant, "but I don't know if there's a real danger from it. If I wasn't feeding it, I guess I'd be dumping it. These calves will be good and fat if I can ever sell them."

Sam McCroskey of Springfield. Mo., vice president and general manager of southern operations for Mid-Am, says, "It's a slow process to clear the animals.

The cooperative had 11 farms in Arkansas, Missouri and Oklahoma under quarantine. No milk has been accepted from the farms, McCroskey says, "but I would be hopeful that the majority will be producing again by next summer. McCroskey says all but about $20,000 of the loans have been repaid.

"It was a bridge to give them some income from the time they started dumping milk," he says. "We felt optimistic we would get the indemnity funding. There was about a three-month period before that happened, and if we had not done this, they would have had no income at all as they dumped their Murray says he's thankful for financial help and food from neighbors and the Oklahoma Council of Churches. He received his first federal indemnity check in late summer.

Murray bought mash from Valley Feeds in December 1985 after other farmers told him it was a cheap way to fatten cattle. "They were milking good on it, and saving a little on the feed bill. No way I would have fed it if I'd known.

Baugh is participating in a class-action suit against the Van Buren companies. Murray isn't. "There's nothing we can get out of them. You can't get blood from a turnip," says Murray, who estimates his losses at $100,000.

Attorney Danny Elrod of Siloam Springs, who represents Baugh and 14 other farmers in Arkansas and Oklahoma, says a similar action is pending in U.S. District Court in Missouri.

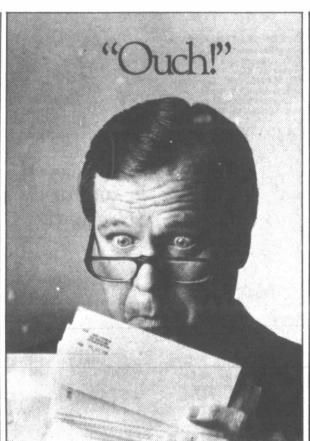

"Nobody has damages computed at this point," Elrod says. "But we will seek damages for lost milk production, lost value of herds, and any other damages that stem from this.

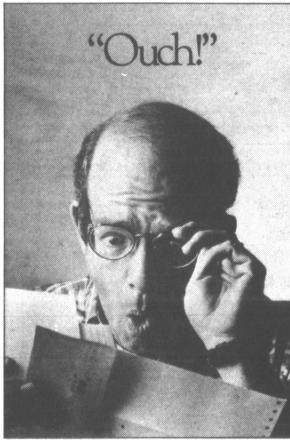

Valley Feeds' insurance company has asked a federal judge to decide whether the feed situation is covered by the company's insurance policy.

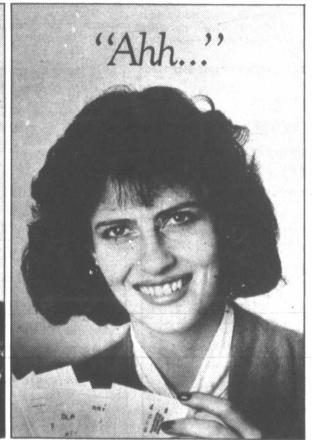

Clarence Domire, a U.S. Department of Agriculure indemnity program specialist in Wash says that under the Dairy Indemnity Program, 'We will indemnify farmers for loss of milk production, for the market price of milk that is taken off the market for any contamination for which the producer was not responsible."

The stipulations, he says, are that the milk must have been taken from shelves or ordered dumped by a government agency and that the farmer's lack of fault must be investigated and substanti-

Revisionist views of Reykjavik

By BARRY SCHWEID AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seasoned American diplomats were struck by the heavy concentration of Soviet publicists at the negotiating table in Reykjavik.

They concluded Moscow was prepared from the start for a worldwide propaganda campaign if the Reagan-Gorbachev summit failed to reverse the nuclear arms

Since the Oct. 12 breakdown at Reykjavik, the Reagan administration has tried to make up for lost time in the public relations arena.

Top U.S. officials shuttle from one television network to another and take to the stump to defend the administration position and to put the onus on the Soviets for the lack of a final agreement on arms reduction.

An AP News Analysis

Still, the administration has not managed to seize the initiative from Moscow.

The focus is on the issue of credibility. The debate is centered on whether President Reagan offered to try to eliminate all strategic nuclear weapons by 1996, or just ballistic missiles.

At least two U.S. officials told a reporter this week Reagan may have registered an interest in banning all strategic weapons. After all, the president's ultimate goal is a world free of nuclear arms.

But, the official said, Reagan also made clear to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev several times in Iceland that in the next 10 years he would like to concentrate on wiping out ballistic missiles.

After all, that is U.S. policy.

Reagan backed it up in the arms control package he sent to Geneva this week. It includes a ban on ballistic missiles, as well as 50 percent reduction in U.S. and Soviet strategic weapons in the first five years.

The problem is the administration has not produced a record of the conversations to support the U.S. interpretation of what Reagan said to Gorbachev.

Moreover, Secretary of State George Shultz, referring the night of the breakdown to "the agreement-that-mighthave-been," said, "During this 10-year period in effect all offensive stratetic arms would be eliminated.'

And Donald Regan, the White House chief of staff, told reporters also on Oct. 12, "We said to the Soviets we will do away with all nuclear weapons — nuclear bombs, nuclear shells for field artillery. Everything was on the table.

- Balanced budget- Doug Seal believes the budget must be balanced and that the needs of people must be respected in the process.
- Strengthened National Defense- Our national defense must be kept strong but without the $500.00 claw hammers that have made the military
- Re-vamping farm policy- Current farm policy bankrupts not only the farmer but the taxpayer. Doug Seal has a comprehensive plan for re-vamping U.S. farm
- Import Oil Policy- The U.S. needs an oil policy of, by, and for the American people. An oil import fee would keep us from being held hostage by foreign interests, and would immediately create exploration and iobs in the domestic oil industry. jobs in the domestic oil industry.

WHAT THE DEMOCRATS STAND FOR

The Democratic Party of Texas represents the vast majority of the people of Texas, and we promote the goals, desires, and aspiration of all Texans.

The platform of the Democratic Party of Texas States the goals for the Party, listed below are some of the main goals to be achieved.

EDUCATION: The Democratic Party of Texas has always believed that equal access to a quality education is a basic right for all Texans.

AGRICULTURE: Texas agriculture resources have played a leading role in the development of Texas for all our history. We want it to stay that way. HOMESTEAD PROTECTION: We support the Texas Homestead Law and oppose any changes in homestead protection.

BUDGET AND SPENDING: We commend our state Democratic Leadership for continuing our longstanding tradition of passing balanced budgets every legislative session while maintaining low state taxes, currently the second lowest in the nation.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT AND HOUSING: Every day the American dream of owning the family home becomes just that — a dream. Far too many Texans are unable to overcome the many practical and economic hurdles encountered in purchasing a home. We commend the Texas Democratic leadership for their efforts in addressing the vital housing needs of the Citizens of the state of Texas.

CONSUMER AND WORKER PROTECTION: The Democratic Party is proud of its long-standing support of the consumer, small business, professionals and people who earn their living by working.

DEFENSE: The highest priority of our people is establishing true and lasting world peace, and no effort should be spared in our search for peace. Therefore; we must maintain a strong defense to protect ourselves and discourage anyone who might seek to do us harm. DRUG AND ALCOHOL ABUSE AND PREVENTION: Drug abuse is a national epidemic that threatens every Texan of all ages. The Democratic administration in Texas has led the fight against the flow of illegal drugs into Our Country and Our State. ENERGY: Texas continues its unique leadership position and responsibility in the field of energy, and should lead in the development of a national energy policy. ENVIRONMENT: The quality of the environment is a fundamental concern for all Texans. We consider it to be a major responsibility of our officials at all levels to preserve and protect our environment. HEALTH CARE: We support continued state assistance for handicapped citizens, for the elderly, and indigent in need of health care. We support a system which will provide public shelter for those of our state who are mentally impaired.
