Gorbachev reaches summit; 'destiny of world' at stake

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev, promising to search for solutions "to the burning problems" of the world, arrived today for a summit with President Reagan hailed by both sides as a chance to make progress on arms control and other issues.

Gorbachev held on to his hat to keep it from being blown away by blustery winds as he stepped off his Aeroflot jet with his wife, Raisa, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and other officials.

In brief comments at Keflavik Airport, Gorbachev said, "We have arrived here to start this meeting imbued with a sense of responsibility" owed to people around the world.

"We of course hope that the same sense of responsibility for the destiny of the world is the feeling brought here in the capital of Iceland by the president of the United States," he added.

He said Reagan's call on Thursday for a successful summit was a good foundation for the meeting.

The Soviet leader said the ultimate hope should be "the final elimination of nuclear weapons by the year 2000."

From the airport, Gorbachev traveled in a motorcade to his summit headquarters: a cruise ship docked in a Reykjavik bay for use by Soviet officials. They were hampered by a hotel room shortage in this country of 250,000 people.

Before Gorbachev reached Reykjavik, Andre Grachov, a Soviet spokesman, said, "I believe that the success of the Reykjavik meeting, which we all wish, will set a date" for a follow-up meeting in the United States.

Reagan and Gorbachev are to confer at three two-hour meetings Saturday and Sunday.

Reagan arrived here during a windy storm Thursday and spent the night at the U.S. ambassador's modest home, which will be the U.S. headquarters during the president's three-day stay.

Reagan's pre-summit day called for several hours of final strategy sessions with Secretary of State George P. Shultz, White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan, National Security Adviser Vice Adm. John Poindexter and other aides.

The only public meetings on his agenda were courtesy calls on Icelandic leaders.

"I think the president is well prepared."

Coronado clears inspection

Inspectors with the Texas Department of Health gave Coronado Nursing Center an unofficial "thumbs up" for recertification today.

The nursing home at 1504 W. Kentucky was decertified — cut from state Medicaid payments — in August for deficiencies in patient care. Inspectors claimed the home failed to keep the patients dry, clean, and comfortable.

When inspectors toured the home again Sept. 11, they found that while the patient care deficiencies had been corrected, the staff apparently was not documenting doctors' orders concerning patients' medication.

When TDH inspectors toured the home Wednesday and Thursday, they found that all the deficiencies had been corrected and that no new ones had popped up.

"Everything that needed correcting was corrected," said Joyce Wheat, health facilities specialist with the TDH regional office in Canyon. "The facility looked very good."

Wheat explained that her team has recommended that the home be recertified to receive Medicaid funds and placed on a probationary contract for about 30 days. This means that, subject to approval from the state office — approval which is expected early next week — the state will resume sending Medicaid payments to the home. Under probation, payments are made for patients already at the home but not for any new patients admitted during the probation. At the end of the probation, the team again inspects the home to see if it is still in compliance.

The positive recommendation was good news to Coronado Administrator Beverly Clark, who was on just her second day on the job when the inspectors showed up Wednesday morning.

"I'm very pleased; it's a great home," Clark said this morning. "The inspectors were here for two days, and they did a lot of work. There was a lot of paperwork they looked at, and the patients, of course."

Clark spent 11½ years with the Pampa Nursing Center. While there, she worked in the kitchen, with activities and in the main office, before getting her nursing home administrator's license. Clark left that job in December 1985 to become house mother at Pampa's Hughey Home for the mentally retarded.

"We're going to the top, right where we need to be," Clark said of the nursing home over which she has assumed command. "We're not going to have any more deficiencies."

Clark said she is very pleased with the facility and that the patients looked "very well groomed."

"We're well staffed, but we can sure use volunteers," she said.

"I feel good, relieved, whatever you want to call it," said Sharon Flippen, Austin director of government relations and official

Two-year-old Allen Smith of Modesto, Calif., is pulled from the Stanislaus River Thursday by Oakdale Rural Fire Department Chief Tim Hubbel after the boy was submerged for nearly 90 minutes. ## Judge impeached, loses tidy salary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Harry E. Claiborne was back in prison today, stripped of his judicial robes and his $78,700 salary by a Senate conviction that left some senators troubled over claims that he was the victim of a government vendetta.

After a 10-day impeachment trial, the first in more than half a century, the Senate overwhelmingly pronounced Claiborne guilty Thursday of three of the four articles of impeachment the House unanimously approved July 22.

Flanked by his lawyers, Claiborne sat with arms folded across his chest as the Senate convicted him of "high crimes and misdemeanors" by willfully cheating on his 1979 and 1980 income tax returns.

The roll call votes on those two counts were 87-10 and 90-7, with Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, voting "present."

The Senate also concluded on an 89-8 vote, with Stevens again voting "present," that Claiborne had "betrayed the trust of the people of the United States ... and thereby brought disrepute on the federal courts and the administration of justice."

In that instant, the Senate effectively removed Claiborne from the federal bench and took away his salary, which he had been collecting while serving a two-year prison sentence in Alabama for failing to report $106,651 in legal fees on his 1979 and 1980 tax returns.

Bonfire!

Reviving a tradition on their own, Pampa High School students gathered five miles west of the city Thursday night for a bonfire pep rally for tonight's homecoming game. The school district had eliminated the bonfire on school property, but students renewed the traditional fire. Activities at Harvester Stadium get under way at 7:15 p.m. today with the queen coronation prior to the 7:30 p.m. homecoming game with Frenship. After the game, students will have a homecoming dance in the school gym.

Suspect crashes following chase

A high-speed chase that started in Shamrock this morning ended when a pickup truck rolled over south of Kingsmill.

Bobby Dale Wren, 21, of Parma, Mo., was being treated in the Coronado Community Hospital emergency room about noon today after the pickup truck he was driving rolled over on a county road about a mile south of Kingsmill.

Hospital spokeswoman Linda Haynes said she did not know the extent of Wren's injuries.

Gray County Sheriff's Deputy Doug Davis said Wren was wanted in connection with the theft of gasoline in Shamrock and was being chased by Wheeler County deputies and Texas Department of Public Safety troopers.

A Herrington-Richardson shotgun was found at the site of the wreck, but authorities couldn't confirm whether the suspect had fired any shots. Davis said he "heard some return fire" but did not see anything.

DPS and Wheeler County law enforcement officers were still investigating the incident this morning and said they could not comment on it until later today.

Captured American swears he flew weapons to Nicaragua for the CIA

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Captured American Eugene Hasenfus, contradicting U.S. authorities, said the Contra rebel supply flight shot down by Sandinista forces in Nicaragua was coordinated by CIA agents.

The U.S. Embassy, meanwhile, criticized as "ghoulish" the way Nicaragua handed over the bodies of two Americans killed in the plane's crash.

The 45-year-old Hasenfus of Marinette, Wis., who was captured by Sandinista soldiers after bailing out of the C-123 transport, said in a news conference Thursday that he had been on 10 such arms drops: four that left from Aguacate air base in Honduras and six from Ilopango air base in El Salvador.

Both Honduras and El Salvador are staunch U.S. allies.

President Reagan and other American authorities have denied any connection between the downed supply flight and the U.S. government, which said Hasenfus told his story under duress.

Nicaraguan authorities on Thursday handed over to the U.S. Embassy the bodies of two Americans killed when the plane was downed by a surface-to-air missile Sunday.

A U.S. official, who commented on condition of anonymity, said the Nicaraguan government and the embassy had agreed that the bodies would be delivered through the embassy gates by truck.

Instead, the truck parked half a block away and the gray wooden coffins were carried to the gate. The coffins remained on the ground outside the closed gates for about five minutes before Nicaraguan employees of the embassy carried them inside.

"Their behavior showed an unwillingness to provide even a sense of decency," the official said.

A statement by the embassy said it "abhors the ghoulish behavior which characterized the Sandinista government's return of the remains of the two Americans this afternoon."

Nicaraguan officials have said Hasenfus faces up to 30 years in prison, but have not yet filed charges against him.

Nicaragua says pilot William J. Cooper and co-pilot Wallace Blaine Sawyer Jr. were killed when the plane crashed. A third victim has not been identified, but is believed to be American.

Hasenfus said he was employed by Corpo-

Amarillo council approves closure of Pampa office

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Llano Estacado Council scout leaders voted unanimously Thursday in Amarillo to consolidate with the Adobe Walls Council, affirming the action that will close the Boy Scout headquarters office in Pampa.

Jack E. Bryant, vice president of Region XI of Boy Scouts of America, said the merger will go into effect on or about January 1.

The consolidation is immediate "as far as management is concerned," Bryant said, but the two councils probably will continue their separate programs until the first of the year.

Bryant will head a meeting of the combined councils and executive committees at 3 p.m. Monday, Oct. 27, at the Llano Estacado Council center in Amarillo to form a combined management team.

Bryant said the team will adopt a calendar regarding the consolidation and the program operations of the two councils for the remainder of the year.

While it's likely that the two councils will continue their separate programs for the next two and a half months, that decision will be made at the Oct. 27 meeting, Bryant said.

Until that meeting, all council meetings, executive board meetings and other meetings are canceled.

On Sept. 25 in Pampa, members of the Adobe Walls Council executive board, members-at-large and scouting coordinators voted by a 2-to-1 margin to approve the merger.

Leaders of both councils have expressed that the consolidation is necessary for economic reasons, with both councils facing financial straits due to decreased funding. The merger into the Amarillo office is seen as a means to deliver services at less cost and more efficiently.

Adobe Walls faces a shortage of more than $30,000 by the end of the year, plus a $25,000 loan and interest to pay off. Llano Estacado expects to be about $26,000 short this year.

Bryant has estimated the consolidation will save about $80,000 a year in operations expenses.

The consolidation will close the Adobe Walls Council office at 815 N. Sumner in Pampa by Dec. 31. The council already is without a council scout executive since Jerry Outlaw was transferred to Sioux City, Iowa, in August.

The scout executive now will be headquartered in Amarillo, along with other council staff, record services and supplies center.

Kiowa District Executive Tary Clump will remain in Pampa, operating out of his home, as some district executives already do. He will have to get supplies from Amarillo after the merger and attend staff meetings there, along with other district executives and executive board members.

The new scouting council will be the largest one in the south central region, involving all or parts of 24 counties in the Texas Panhandle and three in Oklahoma.

The decision to merger affects nearly 10,000 scouts now under one authority.

Talks on the consolidation had been discussed as a possibility for the past several years, but serious considerations began this past summer. In August both groups held meetings and appointed study committees; both committees recommended the consolidation.

The merger actually recombines the two councils. There was only the one council some 60 years ago.

He said the company personnel "consisted of flight crews, maintenance crews, drivers and there were two Cuban nationalized Americans that worked for the CIA that did most of the coordinating of these flights and overseeing all of our housing projects, transportation projects, also refueling and some flight plans."

He identified the Cuban-Americans as Max Gomez and Ramon Medina.

Pampan released in reported rape

A Pampa man arrested in connection with aggravated sexual assault has been released pending a grand jury review.

Police Chief J.J. Ryzman said this morning that Carl Wayne Dunn, 31, of 336 Tignor was released Thursday without arraignment on the charge brought by a 25-year-old woman.

Ryzman said the case will be presented to a grand jury to see if an indictment is warranted.

Dunn was arrested Wednesday night at Ruby's Drive-In, 700 S. Gray, in connection with the reported rape of a woman at gunpoint in a mobile home in south Pampa.

The woman had called the police and claimed she and Dunn had been riding in his car about 10 p.m. Wednesday. She claimed that when he stopped at the mobile home, he took her inside, threatened her with a gun and raped her, police reported.

Summit

White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters on the flight from Washington. "He is confident that he is taking the right approach that can lead to a resolution of the problems that divide the two countries."

Preparations for the summit, Speakes said, "form a basis for face-to-face discussions that hopefully will lead to some progress."

That hope was echoed by Nikolai Shishlin, deputy head of the Kremlin's propaganda department, who said the summit "is a moment of truth, a meeting which will demonstrate the readiness of both sides for wide-ranging and productive discussions."

"We're interested in results and no more so than the United States," Shishlin said.

He and other Soviet officials said Gorbachev was prepared to discuss all the issues that were raised when the leaders first met last November in Geneva.

Shishlin said, as the Americans have, that progress in Iceland could lead to the more formal summit Reagan wants to hold in the United States — perhaps as early as December.

On his arrival Thursday, the president's motorcade swept past the treeless and sparsely populated landscape between the airport and the capital.

Small groups of people — some holding candles and signs endorsing peace — clustered at various points as the motorcade reached the city and the people who watched his arrival at the residence of Ambassador Nicholas Ruwe were undemonstrative.

The government of this island nation of 250,000 people has called on peace groups and anti-Soviet demonstrators to limit their activities, and their plea has been aided by a scarcity of hotel rooms for anyone trying to come to the city.

Nevertheless, leaders of Jewish groups seeking increased emigration of Jews from the Soviet Union have scheduled protest meetings to coincide with the summit.

Before leaving Washington, U.S. officials said Reagan would hold firm on his arms control proposals — refusing to yield to Soviet demands that any agreement include an end to the president's "Star Wars" missile defense plan.

At the same time, they repeated the view that agreement is possible — with a few concessions — on a deal to limit medium-range missiles in Europe.

Teachers use test questions for study

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Some East Texas teachers are using copies of competency test questions obtained from other teachers to study for later exams, the Tyler Morning Telegraph reported.

Some of the teachers have reported paying as much as $5 a page to get the booklets from unauthorized sources, said the copyright story.

The newspaper said it had learned that an unknown number of test booklets from tests given in March and June had gotten into the hands of several East Texas teachers.

Dr. Nolan Wood, director of teacher assessment for the Texas Education Agency, said in Austin Thursday that the TEA was investigating.

He said that if any test questions are found missing, those booklets will not be used in any future Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers, which is given every four months. "We have evidence that we did get back all our tests on March 10," Wood said. "When we went into the tests, we just assumed we would not get all the booklets back."

On the TECAT test, each teacher is given a booklet of questions and records his or her answers on a different sheet. Teachers are instructed to return both documents to the test supervisor.

The teachers, along with a representative from the Texas State Teachers Association, claim many educators had copies of the TECAT before the test was readministered June 28. They said the copies were used as study aids, the Morning Telegraph said.

Two former East Texas teachers who asked to remain anonymous said copies of the tests came from a Houston educator, who supposedly left a test site with a booklet in March.

Neither teacher could provide the identity of the original source.

Some educators said they paid up to $5 a page for the copies. One teacher, who failed the exam but plans to take it again, claims what she bought was the test she took June 28.

"If they took the test in June, they took a totally different test," Wood said. "This test version is secure. There are no copies of it out."

Vance Rogers, regional representative for TSTA, said he was contacted in August by several East Texas members claiming the TECAT was out and he was provided copies of various tests.

Food drive for local service agencies to be held Saturday

A hunger drive to collect food benefitting Pampa human services agencies will get underway Saturday morning, with volunteers going door-to-door. Sponsored locally by Agape Home Health Service, the drive is an effort to help the High Plains Food Bank in meeting the needs of Pampa residents.

Drive coordinator Suzie Wilkinson said church and youth group members and others will be meeting at St. Vincent's School parking lot at 8:30 a.m. to be assigned routes for the collection.

Groups will head out into the city at 9 a.m. and return to the school for lunch at noon.

Wilkinson said all the collected food will be kept in Pampa to aid local residents. Agencies sharing the food will be Good Samaritan Christian Services, Meals on Wheels, Tralee Crisis Center, the Salvation Army, Genesis Houses for Boys and Girls and the Community Day Care Center.

Volunteers will be identified by badges, with vehicles having food bank posters on their windows. The volunteers also will be handing out leaflets, Wilkinson said.

Wilkinson said anyone is welcome to come out and help with the drive, with vehicles and drivers needed to take youth volunteers on the routes. Anyone wanting to help just needs to show up tomorrow morning, she said.

She reminded residents that the volunteers can only accept commercially prepared and packaged foods in good condition. These may include canned goods; food in paper containers, such as flour, sugar or cereal; food in jars, such as peanut butter, pickles, catsup and the like; or other packaged foods such as rice, beans and macaroni.

Home-canned goods will not be accepted. Also, fresh or frozen goods cannot be taken since no proper storage facilities are available.

The local drive last year collected more than 4,000 pounds. Wilkinson said volunteers hope to collect even more this year. She noted that the food gained last year ran out by the end of December.

The High Plains Food Bank, located in Amarillo, serves area communities throughout the Panhandle, with other cities also conducting hunger drives this month.

In a related effort for the food bank, western singer Michael Martin Murphey will be presenting a concert at 8 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 18, in the Palo Duro Canyon amphitheater. Tickets are $8 a person, with the proceeds benefitting the High Plains Food Bank.

Martin also will be filming a video in the amphitheater at 6 p.m., with concert-goers invited to come early. The video also will aid the food bank.

Local, area bands compete in marching contests Saturday

BORGER — Thirty-seven high and high school bands will take their first steps Saturday on what they hope will be a march to Austin at the University Interscholastic League District 1 Marching and Twirling Contest.

The bands will strut their stuff in half-time like performances on the football field at Borger High School's Bulldog Stadium. Band judges are Harris Brinson of Angelo State University of San Angelo, Lay Lashaway of McCarey High School and James Mallow of Bryan High School, both of Bryan. Cheryl Hines of Colorado City will judge the twirlers in the parking lot of First Savings and Loan.

Admission to the contest is $1 with students in band uniform admitted free.

The Pride of Pampa High School Band, under the direction of Charles Johnson, competes at 5:15 p.m.

Appraisal district to pay off note

The Gray County Appraisal District board agreed to pay NCR computers $26,966 to pay off a note for a computer system used by the district's collection division.

In order to pay the note, the district must take $5,400 from funds allocated to its appraisal division.

Gray County Chief Appraiser Charles Buzzard explained that the district would pay off the note with reserve funds from its appraisal division because there are not enough funds in the collection division account.

Just two taxing entities, the city of Pampa and the Pampa Independent School District, contract with the district for tax collections, while all nine taxing entities in the county are served by the appraisal division, and Buzzard felt there was inequity in the funds transfer between the divisions.

In other action, the board tabled action in switching firms for mineral appraisals.

The district's two-year contract with the Fort Worth-based firm of Pritchard & Abbott ends this year, and the board is seeking an appraisal firm that would charge less for the mineral appraisals.

Among the alternatives is hiring a mineral appraiser for the district's staff. The board also is considering retaining Pritchard & Abbott for mineral appraisals only, eliminating the firm's contract for utilities and pipeline companies, and contracting with former Pritchard & Abbott employee Louis Henderson of Amarillo. Roberts County gave its mineral appraisal work to Henderson in September.

Board members met with part-time Hartley County appraiser Troy Stephens, who told them the advantages and disadvantages of hiring a staff mineral appraiser.

The board took no action on the mineral appraisal contract because board members Ken Fields and Benny Kirksey were absent, and members felt the full panel was needed before deciding such major action.

The board intends to call a special meeting, not yet set, to decide on the mineral appraisal issue.

Otwell appears by videotape only

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Clad in a burlap slipover like the sackcloths of biblical times, a fugitive fundamentalist preacher vowed not to turn himself in to authorities until God tells him to.

The Rev. W.N. Otwell, wanted on a contempt-of-court citation for refusing to license his church-run boys' home through the state, appeared at a Thursday press conference by videotape only as he continued his attack on Attorney General Jim Mattox.

"God didn't tell me to go to jail," the 49-year-old Otwell said as Tarrant County Sheriff Don Carpenter looked on with the two deputies he'd brought to arrest Otwell if he showed up.

The preacher has eluded authorities since Monday, when he disappeared before a court hearing on the contempt charge.

After the half-hour videotape — which was played at Otwell's suburban Fort Worth church and showed him clad in the burlap sack vest that has come to symbolize his protest — Otwell answered reporters' questions by telephone.

"I will turn myself in when my mission is accomplished," he said. That mission is "to inform people what's happening in the judicial and political system, that the church is being attacked."

A warrant for Otwell's arrest was issued after he failed to appear at the hearing in Austin before State District Judge Paul R. Davis, who had ordered the closing of an unlicensed boys home operated by Otwell's Community Baptist Church in suburban Forest Hills.

"God didn't tell me to go to jail," he said, adding that he knew in advance of the hearing that he'd get six months in jail if he stayed. "I don't want to go to jail, but if that's where God leads me, he'll see that I wind up there."

Carpenter said the search is still on for Otwell and that he doesn't think the preacher has left Texas, but "you can't arrest somebody if you can't find him."

Mattox, who has led the fight to force Otwell to license his boys' home, again drew the preacher's wrath Thursday.

Following a cooks' party and dance in the park tonight, the chili lovers will be up early tomorrow morning to get their creations under fire.

Registration will begin at 10 a.m. Show teams will be on from noon to 2 p.m., with judging of the chilis getting underway at 3 p.m.

Ten chili trophies and three showmanship trophies will be awarded.

The cook-off is being conducted under Chili Association Society, Inc. (CASI) and Tolbert rules, with the cooks accumulating points toward participation in the national cook-off.

Also happening during the day will be games, drawings for prizes donated by local merchants and individuals, and entertainment provided by local country-western band Fencewalker.

Sure to be one of the highlights will be the auctioning off of cream pies, with high bidders getting the chance to use one of four city leaders as targets. Putting their faces on the line will be Police Chief J.J. Ryzman, Fire Chief J.D. Ray, Asst. Fire Chief Ray Fisher and Environmental and Emergency Management Director Steve Vaughn.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Childhood diseases must be eliminated

Sometimes, amid the news of terrorism, plague, war, revolution, famine and corruption, it is helpful to note a positive development or two. One that deserves attention is an ongoing program to immunize all the world's children by 1990. Thanks to a lot of people working quietly in the public, private and independent sectors, this goal now seems within reach.

According to the World Health Organization, about 3.5 million children die each year of six vaccine-preventable diseases — measles, tetanus, whooping cough, polio, diphtheria and tuberculosis. Measles alone takes about 2 million lives each year, though a dose of measles vaccine costs about 6 cents. A full course of immunizations, from manufacture to injection, costs between $5 and $10 per child, depending on how remote the child's location is.

The goal of immunizing more of the world's children has come to seem possible not so much because the money is available but because persuasion and publicity have helped to foster commitment. For the second year in a row this year, the fighting stopped in El Salvador on three separate days so that children could be immunized. In India, where about a million children per year die because of vaccine-preventable disease, President Rajiv Gandhi has announced the goal of immunizing all India's children by 1990 and gained support from many of his most fervent political opponents for this project.

The world being what it is, much of the money to finance this project is coming from taxpayers. Much of the money and most of the commitment, however, is coming from private sources. Rotary International has agreed to pay for all the polio vaccine needed between now and 1990. The Kiwanis support the campaign with people-power and money. Other civic organizations here and abroad are working diligently to build support, raise consciousness and raise money.

An interesting sidelight to this campaign is its implicit rejection of the simplistic premises of the population-control advocates who have implied for decades that people, in and of themselves, are the main problem human-kind faces. Those who seek to save the lives of children view people as a positive good, not a problem. They also tend to embrace a more sophisticated view of population growth, understanding that over time, as more children survive and have hope, families will have fewer children.

The U.S. government has supported this program through the Child Survival Fund.

It is too bad that any taxpayers' money is spent on foreign-aid at all. Recent events from Live Aid to the concerts for Amnesty International suggest that money for worthy projects can be raised voluntarily. But if, alas, some spending on foreign aid is inevitable, it would be nice if a slice were spent on something constructive — and the Export-Import Bank is a worthy candidate for cutbacks.

God forced him to confess

On Aug. 18, 1983, Francis Connelly walked up to a uniformed police officer in downtown Denver and said he had killed someone and wanted to talk about it. "Despite being informed of his right to remain silent and to have a lawyer, Connelly insisted on telling how he had murdered a young girl nearly two years before and showing the police the building where the crime had occurred.

An open-and-shut case? Not quite. Charged with murder, Connelly was found insane and thus unable to stand trial. After six months in a mental hospital he was certified as competent to proceed. But his lawyer argued that he was insane when he confessed and that both his statements and the evidence they yielded should be thrown out — which probably would destroy the prosecution's case and let Connelly go free. Two lower courts have agreed.

The final judgment will be made by the U.S. Supreme Court. If the court upholds the lower court decisions, it will overstretch the protections guaranteed by the Constitution and seriously impair law enforcement.

Connelly may very well have been insane when he confessed. He told a court-appointed psychiatrist that while in Boston, he heard the voice of God commanding him to return to Denver and tell the police what he had done. Once there, he had second thoughts, but he heard the voice telling him that he had only two choices — either confess or kill himself.

The 5th Amendment says that no one "shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself." That provision has been interpreted to mean no one may be compelled by the government to incriminate himself. But the Colorado Supreme Court ruled that the Constitution forbids the use of all "involuntary" confessions. Connelly's confession was involuntary because God's demands, as he heard them, gave him no reasonable alternative.

This distorts the Constitution's protections beyond recognition. It is entirely proper to discard evidence that is obtained through unconstitutional police behavior — failing to tell a suspect of his or her right, searching a home without a warrant. Otherwise, the police would have an incentive to ignore the Constitution. This is the only reliable way to deter official misconduct. But there was no misconduct here. It was Connelly who approached the policeman, not the other way around. As soon as Connelly made his startling admission, the officer read him his Miranda warning. A detective who arrived later repeated it. At any stage, Connelly could have stopped talking or demanded to see a lawyer. No one claims that the police officers did anything wrong in questioning him or in pursuing the leads he provided.

Nor did they callously take advantage of a helpless man. Connelly didn't behave like a lunatic, and, lacking psychiatric training, the police had no way of knowing he was insane. And though Connelly may have been deluded in hearing commands from God, he apparently was lucid enough to understand the warnings he was given by the police and the consequences of disregarding them.

It could be argued that any confession from an insane person is bound to be unreliable, which might justify a blanket exclusion. But what Connelly told the police was accurate enough to produce corroborating evidence of his guilt. Even if the confession is thrown out, the value of that evidence ought to be judged independently.

To throw everything out not only would free a confessed killer, but it would do so for no important social purpose. The police would not be induced to behave better. The Constitution would not be rendered any more secure.

Worse still, the practical consequences would undermine the whole criminal justice system. Anyone rash enough to confess to a crime would be able, at a later date, to claim he was insane at the time, with the prosecution obliged to demonstrate he was not. And if compulsion by imaginary voices is enough to make a confession "involuntary," then any type of pressure that induces an admission of guilt, from feelings of guilt to a spouse's demands, also may be illegitimate.

This is a perilous route that the Supreme Court would be wise to avoid. The Constitution's protections of criminal suspects, like most of its guarantees, make sense only as restraints on the government. When the government has respected the rights of the accused, justice demands that the prosecution be allowed to go forward with all the sound evidence it has.

Bring the U.S. guards home

Uncle Sam, trying to save money, is contemplating all manner of economies and all possible sources of extra income.

Government assets may be sold to pay the bills.

If we are that desperate to deal with the deficit, then it is time to consider phasing out the billions of dollars we are spending to maintain American troops in other countries.

We can build a carrier or a bomber or a tank, and the money it costs recirculates through the pockets of American workers in Detroit and Cleveland, Fort Worth and San Diego and Wilmington.

But the money we send overseas to maintain our world police force — that money is gone forever!

The dictators of the world are kept at arm's length by our thousands of nuclear warheads.

It is this devastating club in the closet which has prevented major war for 40 years.

Now the destabilizers of the world have resorted to hit-and-run guerrilla weapons — car bombs and skyjacking.

Traditional war fronts have been breached; the fighting is now behind the lines.

American troops overseas, rather than a deterrent to terrorists, are an encouragement to them — and an increasingly vulnerable target.

Maintaining most of a million American troops overseas now costs more than we can afford.

In Europe, 322,283 American troops on "guard" duty.

In East Asia and the Pacific, 114,670.

In our home hemisphere but outside the United States, 19,455.

And on ships afloat off foreign shores, another 52,372.

We are trying to do now what bankrupt Britain and France did half a century ago. Our reach is exceeding our grasp. We are spending so much to feed, fortify, protect and police the rest of the world that back home we are drowning in red ink.

Experts in military weapons, tactics and strategy can surely defend our deterrent force of American ships and planes and missiles and what troops are essential to protect their bases.

But there is no longer any reason that Western Europe cannot supply its own "border guards."

Our Pentagon computes the average cost of maintaining one American soldier overseas at as high as $1,000 a day and, again those billions stay overseas.

Modern military mobility has outdated any need for a permanent American presence in the world's coffin corners.

Besides, right now our nation's security is most in jeopardy from insolvency.

Phone companies rip consumers' pockets

By Robert Walters

MADISON, Wis. (NEA) — At a time when the profit margins of the nation's leading corporations average 10.6 percent, Wisconsin Bell Telephone Co. is guaranteed 14.3 percent — and it is clamoring for more.

"They're making out like bandits," says Kathleen F. O'Reilly, executive director of the Citizens' Utility Board, a private organization that claims 100,000 dues-paying members in Wisconsin.

Wisconsin Bell's bloated profits are typical of the country's major telephone companies, according to the Consumer Federation of America, which represents more than 200 national and local consumer groups.

CFA recently produced a study that argues convincingly that the Bell telephone companies (the firms that were the operating subsidiaries of American Telephone & Telegraph until the break up of AT&T) are overcharging their customers by $3 billion annually.

During the first half of this year, the return on equity — a standard measure of profitability — was 10.6 percent for the country's 900 largest corporations and 10.8 percent for the nation's non-Bell utilities, according to CFA.

The comparable rate for the Bell companies was 14.1 percent. Further, their profit is guaranteed because the prices they charge are fixed by state regulatory commissions to assure them a specific rate of return.

The Bell companies argue that they need greater profits because they have entered an era of unprecedented competition. They say they compete with each other and other firms in a variety of businesses, including the publication of telephone directories and the providing of telephone toll service.

But critics note that the core of their business, providing local telephone service, in most instances is a lucrative monopoly protected by state regulatory agencies.

"They face no international competition and little or no competition domestically," says the International

Communications Association, which represents 600 major corporations and other institutions that spend $15 billion annually on telephone service.

That organization — whose members include General Motors, General Electric, Westinghouse and Du Pont — has endorsed the CFA study and its conclusions.

Similarly, the General Services Administration, which purchases telephone services for the federal government, has complained to regulatory commissions in approximately 30 states about the Bell companies' inflated profits.

The situation in Wisconsin is typical. Three years ago, on the eve of AT&T's dismantling, Wisconsin Bell asked the state's Public Service Commission for a $162 million rate hike, by far the largest proposed increase in its history.

Like Bell telephone companies elsewhere, Wisconsin Bell argued that the court-ordered breakup of AT&T would deprive the local firms of the financial protection and indirect subsidies long provided by the parent company.

But O'Reilly notes, "There is nothing about the breakup of AT&T that should result in increased local rates." Her Citizens' Utility Board (like similar groups in Oregon and Illinois) is dedicated to preventing utility companies from gouging their customers.

Nevertheless, the state PSC granted Wisconsin Bell an $89 million rate increase in late 1983. AT&T was split up at the beginning of 1984.

Within less than a year, it became apparent that Wisconsin Bell's profits were outrageously high. O'Reilly's organization successfully petitioned the PSC for a $24 million refund, resulting in a $14.65 credit on all residential bills.

But Wisconsin Bell remains undeterred. Last year, it sought (without success) another rate increase that would have given it a 15 percent return on equity — far more than most companies enjoy.

Voice of Big Tex

Don Schafer poses in front of the official greeter to the State Fair of Texas, Big Tex. Schafer is the new voice for Big Tex.

Man behind big voice

DALLAS (AP) — Some things never change at the State Fair, and nothing is more reliable than Big Tex.

"Howww-deeee," Tex says, his 42-pound jaw falling open as he lets out the cheerily lobotomized rumble that's been his trademark for 34 years.

Despite his new threads — caught up in the Sesquicentennial frenzy, he's donned a Texas-themed shirt this year — Tex is still the same old hay-seed who hitches up his jeans and greets the masses from a stand of prairie grass between the Tower Building and what is now known as The Grand Plaza.

His legs are still bowed, his hat pushed back, his face still open and eager and refreshingly naive. He still has those big, workman-like hands, each contorted into that weird way that seems to halt and welcome at the same time. He still has a line-backer's level shoulders and a hay-baler's full chest. His black hair still sweeps across his forehead with a little-boy curl, and his cowboy boots are still way too big for his feet, leaving him what looks like acres of room for stuffing his pants' legs.

But it turns out that something is different about Big Tex this year. If you listen closely enough, you might notice that his voice runs a little quicker than in the past — that it's out of sync with his jaw in a slightly different way than it's been out of sync before.

"Even though you think you're talking slow, you're still not talking slow enough," explained Don Schafer, a 45-year-old country music promoter who's the new voice of Big Tex. "So what it boils down to is, you can't talk too slow."

"He (Big Tex) can't talk in sentences," Schafer added. "He has to talk in syllables. Like a word like 'Centennial Building' — he could never get that out all at once. Or a word like 'Embarcadero Building.' But certain words are natural for him to break up. Like Bud-weis-er. But when you get into Cen-ten-ni-al, you find yourself helping him along to get him over the hump."

Schafer says he's still trying to get comfortable with the weight of being Tex's voicebox. Retired radio personality Jim Lowe was the voice of Tex for most of the Big Guy's lifetime, with a few stand-ins helping out the past four years. But when last year's voice left this year for Oregon, Schafer, who also books the music acts at the Fair, was recruited. He's a longtime worker at the Fair, a kind of "Fair junkie" who lives at the Fair practically day and night during its run. Schafer likes to say, "I'd do anything for the Fair — except jump off the high-dive into that little pool of water."

So Schafer sees the job as Big Tex as a "reward." He makes as many as 30 live or recorded announcements a day, each done from a crowded production studio crammed inside a little shack behind the Coca-Cola stage. The announcements are boomed out over the Fairgrounds by four 12-by-23 speakers screwed inside Big Tex's chest.

Schafer admits the requirements for the job as voicebox are pretty minimal. But he also says he comes by them naturally.

"The people at the Fair said, 'Let's find the guy who speaks the worst English we can find, who talks real Texan,'" he explained.

"And there ain't but one of those around here, and that's Schafer."

Schafer doesn't mind looking and sounding down-home. Born and reared in Waco ("a Brazos River rat," he said of himself), he moved to Dallas more than 20 years ago to start what eventually would become Don Schafer Productions, a booking company based in Dallas that handles country and western acts at fairs, rodeos and clubs throughout the Southwest. Schafer says he's always worn a cowboy hat and boots and sounded a little funny to an outsiders' ears.

Committee agrees on water projects

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional conference committee has reached agreement on a comprehensive $15 billion national water projects bill that would be worth $724.5 million to Texas, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen announced.

Construction of eight new Texas water projects to provide flood control, navigational aids and recreational facilities are partially funded under the version agreed to by the conferees, said Bentsen, D-Texas.

If the compromise bill is passed by both houses and signed into law by the president it would be the first major water projects bill passed in ten years. Bentsen's office said total funding for the bill would be around $15 billion.

"I am pleased that the first major water projects measure since 1976 — the Water Resources Development Act — includes eight new Texas projects valued at $724.5 million," Bentsen said.

In addition to the eight new projects, the water resources bill would grant $143 million to pay for modifications to existing water projects, Bentsen said.

Texas taxpayers would be asked to share the cost of most of the projects, but the bill requires the federal government to pay fully for two of them.

Texas projects authorized for construction under the bill are:

- Brazos Island Harbor, a $31.8 million deep draft navigation and recreation project in the Port of Brownsville.

- Texas City Channel, a $199.7 million navigation project in Galveston Bay.

- Boggy Creek, Colorado River and tributaries, $23.9 million for a flood control and recreation project in the Austin area.

- Lake Wichita-Holiday Creek, $39 million for urban flood control in Wichita Falls.

- Lower Rio Grande Basin, $195.7 million for a joint Corps of Engineers-Soil Conservation Service flood control project in Hidalgo, Willacy and Cameron Counties.

- Sims Bayou, $126 million for flood control and recreation within the city limits of Houston, South Houston and Missouri City.

- Buffalo Bayou and tributaries, a $92 million flood control project providing protection to suburban Houston.

- Cooper Lake and channels, $14.8 million for mitigation of anticipated habitat losses from construction of the Cooper Lake project near Commerce.

Project modifications included in the agreement include improvement of the Denison Dam on Lake Texoma, full federal funding of the Red River Chloride project to clean up naturally occurring chloride, and full federal funding of a diversion channel at the mouth of the Colorado River.

White: let's debate again; Clements: probably not

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White is eager for a debate rematch with challenger Bill Clements, and the incumbent says he favors a revised format.

White wants to go one-on-one with Clements, with the candidates questioning each other rather than fielding queries from reporters as they did Monday in the campaign's only scheduled televised debate.

"I'd like to be able to do it with him just as quickly as I can,"

White said at a Thursday news conference.

"The fact is it would be fine to go one-to-one with him. Then he wouldn't have time to waltz around so much up there and talk about all his fine business practices," White said.

Asked why he favored a one-on-one format, the governor said, "I just enjoy the man so much I think it would be just a real nice opportunity to have a warm discussion with him."

But Clements campaign spokesman Reggie Bashur said another debate is not a "realistic option."

"The schedule for the next 3½ weeks is jam-packed," Bashur said. "We're not surprised that Mr. White today wants another debate. He was beaten Monday night and he is desperately looking for another opportunity."

Clements and White have appeared together at six events this year, according to Bashur.

Texas voters know about all they need to about the candidates, he said.

"They both have about 98 percent name identification. One is the incumbent and the other is a former governor. They are both well-known," Bashur said.

Asked about the one-on-one format proposed by White, Bashur said that idea had been discussed before the Monday debate but rejected as a plan that "could turn into a free-for-all."

Prime Minister Shimon Peres, right, hands in his letter of resignation to President Chaim Herzog Friday in Jerusalem.

Peres resigns as Israeli prime minister, Shamir will take over

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres resigned today, beginning an unprecedented transfer of power to his rival, Yitzhak Shamir. Hours before the resignation, both men underscored the fragility of the next government.

Peres, leader of the left-leaning Labor Party, will head a caretaker administration until Shamir, currently foreign minister and head of the rightist Likud bloc, is sworn in by Parliament, probably on Tuesday or Wednesday.

"Mr. President, I respectfully hand in my letter of resignation as prime minister according to the existing coalition agreement," Peres said in a brief statement outside the office of President Chaim Herzog, to whom the resignation was submitted.

Herzog replied: "I wish you well and congratulate you on all you have done."

Peres and Shamir trade jobs under an arrangement made in September 1984 after an election stalemate made it impossible for either party to govern alone.

Peres, speaking on Israel Radio hours before handing in his resignation, said a Shamir-led government would not last if it failed to pursue his Middle East peace initiatives.

If Shamir's government "does not keep to the (peace) policy guidelines, it may endanger itself," he said.

Shamir told Army Radio that he would stick to the coalition accord, which calls for trying to persuade Jordan to enter into peace talks.

Shamir nevertheless said he expected the government to last through his scheduled 25-month term because "this is the national necessity at this moment."

200 feared drowned in ferry sinking

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — At least 200 people, many of them women and children, were feared drowned in a ferry sinking in western Bangladesh, newspapers reported today.

The Bengali daily, the Ittefaq, and several other newspapers reported that the single-deck ferry was carrying more than 300 passengers when it sank Thursday in strong current in the Kajla River near Narail district, 171 miles west of Dhaka.

The Ittefaq said only 100 people, mostly traveling on the upper deck, managed to swim ashore.

Official says Sandinistas coerced captured American

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top State Department official says Nicaraguan authorities coerced a captured American into making a false claim that CIA personnel are illegally involved in re-supplying anti-communist rebels.

Hours after the detained American, Eugene Hasenfus, made the allegation at a Managua news conference Thursday, Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams said, "I hope no one will believe anything Hasenfus says until he can speak freely."

In a telephone interview, Abrams also reacted angrily to what he said was the Sandinista refusal, in violation of international law, to grant U.S. consular access to Hasenfus since his cargo plane was shot down in southern Nicaragua last Sunday.

"There is only one reason to keep a man from our consul, and that is to keep the pressure on," Abrams said. "I'm confident they (the Sandinistas) are telling him, 'If you say the things we want to hear, you'll be out in no time.'"

"If you don't cooperate, you'll be in prison for 30 years," he added.

At the Managua news conference, Capt. Ricardo Wheelock, chief of intelligence of the Nicaraguan army, was asked if Hasenfus had been treated well since his capture Monday.

"Mr. Hasenfus is being treated under the best possible conditions ... for a prisoner of war," Wheelock said.

Nicaraguan officials have said Hasenfus faces up to 30 years in prison, although no charges have been filed.

Meanwhile, in a separate interview here, Abrams' chief deputy for Central American affairs,

William Walker, said Nicaragua has been receiving instruction from East German experts on prisoner interrogation and that this was reflected in the alleged falsehoods Hasenfus told.

Hasenfus said that before his cargo plane was shot down, he had taken part in 10 such flights from Honduras and El Salvador. He said 24 to 26 CIA personnel had participated in the operation in El Salvador.

Hasenfus, 45, of Marinette, Wis., said four of the flights were made from Aguacate air base in Honduras and six from Ilopango air base in El Salvador.

Abrams insisted that the re-supply operation was carried out exclusively by private citizens.

"This was not a U.S. government operation," he said. "It was not U.S. financed. It was not CIA." His denial was echoed by CIA spokeswoman Kathy Pheron, who noted that CIA involvement would violate congressional restrictions.

Abrams also claimed that the Sandinistas allowed Hasenfus' wife, Sally, to visit him for only 30 seconds since she flew to Managua from her Wisconsin home after the Sunday plane crash.

The incident also claimed the lives of two other crewmen, William Cooper and Wallace Sawyer, both Americans. A third victim was not identified.

The Nicaraguan government returned the bodies of Cooper and Sawyer to the U.S. Embassy on Thursday.

Walker said the embassy staff was "outraged" by the manner in which the bodies were returned, claiming that a government vehicle "pulled up in front of embassy and dumped two bodies down in partially opened containers."

"It was totally disrespectful, quite disgraceful," Walker said. Meanwhile, the sponsorship of the Sunday flight remained a mystery, with the U.S. government and private groups denying responsibility.

Beer collectibles don't stop with cans

By MARY LEIGH BEST
Longview Morning Journal

LIBERTY CITY, Texas (AP) — Collecting beer cans can barrel out of control if you're not careful, according to beer can connoisseur Andy Guinn.

"It might start off with you collecting all kinds of different brands of beer cans. Then you might start specializing and collecting only one particular brand."

"Then there are all the other things that get involved. Like the beer coasters, post cards, glasses, steins, can openers, bottles, advertisements, posters, salt and pepper shakers," Guinn said. "I've even got neon signs."

Guinn, of Liberty City, started collecting all types of beer cans around 10 years ago, he said. Then, about four years ago, he started collecting only beer cans made in Texas. Two years ago he started collecting only Schlitz cans because "I started running out of space. I had to specialize and I chose Schlitz because the majority of Schlitz cans have dates on them. They dated their cans until 1976."

According to Guinn, Schlitz was the only brewery that had a thorough dating system. "Another reason I chose Schlitz was because you can collect Schlitz cans without spending a lot of money, since they were the top seller for so long."

Guinn has beer cans that range in value from 25 cents to $700. Included in his collection is the first version of Schlitz Lager ever made. The can, which sells for $200, was found in the attic of an old hotel in Illinois, Guinn said. The can is yellow and brown and has the words "Scientific-Sanitary-Safe" written in small letters on the side, while "Sunshine Vitamin D" is printed in bold letters on the front.

An employee of an Australian-based oil company, Guinn is especially proud of a 16-ounce Burgermeister can made in Longview. "You see, Burgermeister is a west coast brewery that Schlitz bought out in the early 1960s. They say that Berger-meister was never made except in California, yet I have a Burgermeister can with a Longview label on it. It's a pre-1966 can."

Guinn also has a 16-ounce Schlitz can made in Longview between 1966 and 1968 before 16-ounce cans could be sold in Texas. "They made them and shipped them out. I found this one in Hot Springs, Arkansas," said Guinn, who also has a 10-ounce Schlitz can never sold in Texas but made in Longview. "I found that one in Ohio."

"I was told by people who worked in the Longview Schlitz brewery in 1966 that a lot of oddball beers came through during that time."

The first beer can ever made is a Krueger's Special Beer with the date 10-15-33 scratched on the top. In January 1935 Krueger Finest Beer became the first beer can ever marketed. Schlitz produced the first cone-top can in the summer of 1935, according to Guinn. "Schlitz was the first to put beer in 16-ounce cans in 1954," Guinn said. "In 1956 they were the first to put beer in 24-ounce cans. Schlitz was the first to have the flat top and easy-to-open super-soft top cans in 1960. In 1962, they were the first to use the pop-top can."

Guinn displayed a two-piece Crowntainer called "Fehr's" made around 1940. "Most of the Crowntainers were silver. The first can I ever owned was a Crowntainer. They're harder to collect than others because it's hard to find one in good condition. They were either white or silver and rusted real easily."

According to Guinn, Pearl Lager Beer cans are worth $1,000 and since there are only three known to exist, they are the highest sought after by collectors.

"There's something in this hobby for everyone," he said. "See, I don't even hardly drink beer. In fact, half the collectors I know don't drink. We even have a priest in the club."

The club Guinn spoke of is Beer Can Collectors of America, which boasts a 5,000 membership of which 40 percent are women.

Overpass planned to ease Guam's traffic

AGANA, Guam (AP) — Guam is joining America's fast lane.

Or at least island traffic engineers hope it will with its first highway overpass, intended to ease the small U.S. territory's terminal case of gridlock.

There no longer are rush hours on this western Pacific island, said Doug Kenudson, chief traffic engineer for the Guam Department of Public Works. Instead, Marine Drive, the island's major thoroughfare, is a daylong mass of traffic that slows to a four-lane snarl at noon and 5 p.m.

"Traffic is growing at a critical rate," Kenudson said recently.

Marine Drive now carries 60,000 cars a day, up from 52,000 just two years ago. The problem, though, isn't just the growth of traffic; it's the topography.

Guam's capital, Agana, and its commercial center, Tamuning, lie on a narrow strip of land between a line of cliffs and the shore of the Philippine Sea. There just aren't any other roads for drivers to use to reach the two villages, and everybody — but everybody — has to pass through Agana and Tamuning to reach most of the other villages on the island.

"We're caught between the water and a hard place," Kenudson said. The proposed $8 million Interstate-style overpass should ease the problem, at least for the next decade, Kenudson said. It will separate traffic bound for Agana from that heading on into Tamuning. If all goes right, it will eliminate the twice-a-day traffic jams at Agana.

"It's a chunk of money but it'll probably do more good than anything else we could do," Kenudson said. Funds for the project will come out of a $30 million highway bond, and construction should begin within a year, he said.

Newlyweds

When we first married, our hopes for the future were so high. They still are, but since our wedding Jerry has been laid off of work due to the Panhandle's economic slow-down. We're still making it, but only by doing all kinds of odd jobs and tightening our belts. We pinch our pennies till they squeak, yet we seem to be pinching while our government keeps asking for more!

We still have high hopes for our lives together, but now we realize that we have to invest more than just hope in our future. This year we're investing our votes in the REPUBLICAN Party.

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

America the Beautiful...

From the time that Columbus discovered America men have thought of this country as something special. It was here that Ponce de Leon sought the Fountain of Youth, and men have long admired America's majestic mountains and beautiful valleys. However, the real beauty lies not in the land, but in the people. The people came seeking a land where they could worship God in freedom, and under God developed a kind and loving spirit. This is what makes America beautiful.

Attend church regularly... help keep America beautiful

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny, the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Coleman Adv. Ser.

Clothing giveaway Saturday

As a part of the benevolence program of the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ, a free Clothing Giveaway will take place Saturday at the church's Fellowship Building.

The church is located at the corner of Mary Ellen and Harvester; the Fellowship Building sits in the 1300 block of Mary Ellen.

The giveaway will begin at 10 a.m. and continue until 2 p.m.

There will be infant through adult size clothing. All clothing will be in wearable condition and in good repair. All clothing will be given away free of charge.

Anyone having a need or knowing someone who has a need for clothing may come by and make selections from the clothing.

Approximately 40 teens and a number of sponsors will leave the church building Saturday morning to attend the Liberal Youth Rally in Liberal, Kan.

Theme of the youth rally is "Tune to Christ." Featured speakers will be John Blankenship of Lubbock Christian College and Dr. Steven Sikes of the Cornhusker Christian Home at Culberson, Neb.

Entertainment will be provided by the York Singers of York Christian College in York, Neb.

A hayride has been planned for this evening after the Harvester homecoming football game. Youth are to meet in the church's back parking lot.

The teens will travel to three different homes for a progressive dinner and will have a devotional to end the evening.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: For the Lord is the great God, the great King above all gods. In his hand are the depths of the earth, and the mountain peaks belong to him. The sea is his, for he made it, and his hands formed the dry land. (Psalm 95:3-5 NIV)

My family had the pleasure of living for a short time in Hobbs, N.M. Hobbs sits in quiet isolation in a vast, flat desert. The natural landscape consists of little other than mesquite, yucca and sand.

Intrigued by tourist information, my family went on a sightseeing tour around the southeastern portion of New Mexico.

We left the desert of Hobbs in the morning. Within a couple of hours, we were in the mountains of the Lincoln National Forest. The mountains were dressed in majestic pine trees and richly carpeted with pine needles and cones.

From the mountains, we drove through white, barren, caliche hills searching out the small, hidden Bottomless Lakes. These unique lakes are amazingly round, abysmally deep and as transparent an aquamarine blue as a polished gem.

An hour later, we were exploring The Mystery Spot. The pull of gravity in this area is such that it has twisted the trunks of ancient trees into freaks of nature. Walking across the land is similar to walking through a fun house designed to induce dizziness and staggering.

The next day found us at Carlsbad Caverns. God must have been in a most creative frame of mind when he drafted this underground cathedral.

The complex of enormous caverns is decorated with stalagmites that rise from the floor in an awesome display of natural sculpture. Elegant chandeliers of stalactites descend from the canopy of the caverns.

New Mexico's state motto, "Land of Enchantment," proved quite accurate. The geographic smorgasbord of this small area of our country became a feast of the reality of Psalm 95:3-5.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Christian Voice, a right-wing group seeking election of religiously conservative candidates, has issued its 1986 "Candidates Biblical Scoreboard," rating 3,000 incumbents and challengers on religious-moral-family issues.

Robert G. Grant, founder-president of the organization, said the scoreboard was the most comprehensive yet, with up to 8 million copies to be distributed to Jews and Christians before the November elections.

Candidates rated are in contests for congressional gubernatorial, state legislative and judicial posts.

Country spirit, new minister give rebirth to dying church

By JULIA COPELAND
Denton Record-Chronicle

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Cooper Creek United Methodist Church is making a comeback, again.

Eighteen years ago, the congregation brought the church back to life from a pile of ashes. Today, the church is going through another rebirth, this time with the help of an 80-year-old "retired" Methodist minister who has thrown heart and soul into the revitalization of the modest white church on an oak-shaded hill.

In August, Bishop John W. Russell came from Dallas to bless the church that sits at the corner of Cooper Creek and Mingo roads. The tiny church has tripled its attendance in the past year under the direction of the Rev. Ray McCleskey.

The bishop spoke to 100 people who crowded onto the 15 pews. The sanctuary may be small, but it boasts new colonial white chancel furnishings through a $10,000 gift from a woman whose family has been connected with the church since its beginning.

The church's history begins at the turn of the century, when three families donated a plot of land for the purpose of worship. Dora Lee May Reese of Palestine, whose parents gave part of the five-acre church site, donated the money for the new platform, carpeting, pulpit, choir seats, baptismal font and other chancel furniture, as well as pew cushions.

But the recent history of the church has included few such acts of generosity or incidents of good fortune. In 1968, the church was gutted in a fire ruled arson. A series of vandalism incidents further damaged the hull of the building and what remained of its contents.

The spirit that led the church to rebuild remained in a small congregation that made it through the next few years with a series of circuit preachers. The part-time preachers typically gave an 8:30 a.m. sermon so they could move on to a larger church for the more popular 11 a.m. time slot. By last summer, the regulars had dwindled to about 23 at Sunday morning services. Then, they found out they were going to lose their part-time preacher. Methodist ministers are assigned to churches during an annual conference. Irene Wilson said each year brought the dread of having the church close.

"We were about to give up," said Mrs. Wilson, who has belonged to the church since 1953. "For years, we've been thinking,

'They're going to close us up this time.' But we kept hanging on, hoping for a full-time minister at the 11 a.m. service."

Their prayers were answered when the Rev. William Crouch of First United Methodist Church suggested McCleskey take on the struggling congregation. McCleskey, who lives at Good Samaritan Village and works in the ministry there, had also been helping Crouch with visitation duties. It seemed like a perfect match.

Brother Ray, as McCleskey has asked the congregation to call him, established a children's sermon during each worship service. He appealed to older church members as well as young families who have begun to attend the church in larger and larger numbers. Best of all, he preached an 11 a.m. service that attracted higher attendance than the early bird services of the past.

"Brother Ray's sermons are very inspirational," Mrs. Wilson said. "And he's not long-winded. You don't have to stay well past lunch."

The combination obviously has worked. McCleskey reports attendance up 300 percent, collections up 100 percent and membership up 22 percent since he took over in June 1985.

Pampa hosts annual meeting of United Methodist Women

The United Methodist Women at Pampa's First United Methodist Church are hosting the 13th annual meeting of the Northwest Conference of United Methodist Women here this weekend.

Approximately some 200 delegates are attending from the conference, which stretches from Abilene to Midland and then north, covering the Texas Panhandle and South Plains regions.

The meeting got underway today with registration and an opening session at 1:30 p.m. at the local church.

Theme for the meeting is "Entering the Future by Faith." Keynote speaker is Sara Jackson Clardy of St. Louis, Mo.

Clardy serves as UMW director of the General Board of Global Ministries. She represented the church in Nairobi, Africa, at the World Federation of Methodist Women in July.

Worship leader for the meeting is Rev. Sammie Ellis Rainey, pastor of Lakeview United Methodist Church in Dalhart. Named as one of the Outstanding Young Women in America in 1983, she received the Harry Denman Evangelism Award in 1985.

The opening session today included an address by Bishop Louis Schowengerdt, head of the Northwest United Methodist Conference. Also speaking at the afternoon session was Rev. Jacinto Alderete, who spoke on "Wesley Community Center Enters the Future."

Inelle Bagwell presided and conducted the business session. Rev. Rainey delivered the opening worship, with Peggy Wright calling the roll and Jeanne Gramstorff presenting the annual meeting program.

The meeting continues today with a 6 p.m. dinner in the Fellowship Hall and an evening session in the sanctuary at 7:30 p.m. Hallie Burrell will preside at the dinner, with Barbara Richardson of Perryton providing music on a harp.

Gramstorff will preside at the evening meeting. Pearl Lopez will bring greetings from the Jurisdiction Core Planning Group and Janie Sims from the Women's Division. Special music will be provided by the FUMC's Sunshine Trio.

Clardy will give the address and Rev. Rainey will conduct the memorial service and communion.

The meeting will continue at 9 a.m. Saturday, with Bagwell presiding.

A highlight will be a panel discussion on "Health Care: An Issue of Present and Future." The discussion will concern how health care affects children, families and the elderly today, along with aspects of Medicare and Medicaid. Panel participants will be Mary Dwyer, Kathy Hazelwood and Helen Botsonis, R.N.

Clardy will also address the Saturday session and lead the service of installation and commitment, with Rainey delivering the worship session. Gladys Parish and Willa Mae Price will give the pledge service.

During the meeting, delegates will cast votes for a slate of officers: Bagwell, president; Peggy Wright, secretary; Bonnie Fabian, mission coordinator; Helen Releford, Chrisan social involvement; Mildred Bradford, secretary of financial involvement; Regina Henley, secretary of program resources; and Alta Byars, chairman of the nominations committee.

Delegates also will vote on a recommendation that the UMW conference organization join the Nuclear Waste Task Force.

Coleen Henry is president of the UMW at the Pampa First United Methodist Church.

The Pampa District hosts the conference meeting every seven years, with Pampa alternating with Borger as host cities.

Woman recalls early venture in child care

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Almost 60 years ago, Katharine Whiteside Taylor saw herself as an inexperienced, yet curious and concerned mother. But others viewed her as a radical pioneer when she founded what has become the oldest continuously operating parents' cooperative preschool in the country.

It started simply, with a social club of about 25 wives of professors from the University of California-Berkeley. Most were young mothers who found themselves asking questions about how children grow and learn.

The club began inviting experts to speak about those subjects, and decided to start a preschool that would teach parents along with their kids.

"You have to have some techniques and skill and information," said Ms. Taylor about being a parent. "Here you suddenly had the most important job you have ever had — and you had no training."

That may not sound radical in 1927. But in 1927 it raised more than a few eyebrows, especially for more traditional mothers, said the still spunky Ms. Taylor in an interview at her San Francisco home.

"We were pioneering in that we weren't taking kids seriously. It just wasn't something you studied unless you were going to be a teacher," said Ms. Taylor, who then had a bachelor's degree in English and was married to an economics professor.

"We decided mothers needed to know how to raise children, that it wasn't something you just automatically knew. It was a scientific thing, too," said the 88-year-old mother of three and grandmother of seven.

She and fellow club members scoured Berkeley for a suitable location for their venture. They found an old farmhouse with a barn and property that covered a whole block. They refurbished the place and rented a streetcar, once pulled by horses, for the kids to play on.

Ms. Taylor went ahead with the Children's Community Center, despite the bewildered people who greeted the news by shaking their heads. But she admitted that even her 1-year-old had a difficult time adjusting to suddenly spending his day at school.

"My own little boy just cried the first day, and every time he saw Mama he had to come and have a hug," she said. "But after they (the children) were there a while, I think they felt they had 20 mothers instead of one."

For a fee of $12 a month, parents brought their children ages 2 to 5 to the school from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., five days a week.

"We thought it was awfully good for them to have lunch together, that was part of the socialization," Ms. Taylor said.

"It was a learning experience in cooperation — which is what I think the world needs more than anything else," she said.

Diner has had bellyful of pregnant waitresses

DEAR ABBY: A few weeks ago my wife and I had dinner out to relax and forget about cooking. In the cocktail lounge of this very nice restaurant we were served by a pleasant young lady who was well along in her pregnancy. Then in the dining room, an equally pregnant young lady served us dinner.

I believe that women and children are important — to be loved and cherished — but being served by two pregnant women in one evening was, I thought, a little too much.

My wife had a "so what?" attitude. I was upset. Do you think my reaction was wrong? And if so, why?

STORK-RAVING MAD

DEAR MAD: As a man who claims to "love and cherish women and children," perhaps the sight of two pregnant women working so far along in their pregnancies made you feel guilty. Or were you embarrassed to be reminded of how babies get here?

If you still cling to the notion that pregnant women should not show themselves in public, consider this: Pregnant waitresses would rather be home soaking their swollen feet, but they continue to work because they need the money. Examine your feelings. Then you will know why you were upset.

Dear Abby

mother gave us a brand-new down comforter, not knowing that I had already received one.

Joe and I have been married a year and we're using the comforter we got from my mother. My mother-in-law was at the house yesterday and noticed that we were using the new comforter, so she asked me to give the one she had given us to her daughter who didn't have any.

Abby, the one from my mother-in-law has a lot of sentimental value attached to it, and just because we're not using it doesn't mean we don't want it. I suppose you'd call me selfish if I have two and refuse to give one to my sister-in-law who doesn't have any, but I don't really think I am. What should I do?

ON THE SPOT

DEAR ON: Once a gift is given, it becomes the property of the recipient to use, put away, throw away, sell or whatever.

However, with two comforters, you have more comfort than you can use, so why not give one to your sister-in-law to warm and comfort her? Were you to keep them both, I would not call you "selfish," but there's much to be said for keeping peace in the family.

***

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old guy with an important question. Why are your readers so hung up on sex? I like your column, but it seems that about one-third of your letters are about sex. Personally I think bowling is a lot more fun. Judging from the few times I've had sex, I thought it would get more enjoyable, but it didn't.

Unfortunately, high school peer pressure about this overrated activity is still with us. "Who did you score with?" is still a hot topic at school. I think sex is boring. Besides, with AIDS to worry about, it's not worth the risk. Also, the world already has more people than it can feed.

Give us more letters about people who are too fat, too tall, too short or were born on Christmas. Or hassles with the phone company, the neighbor's dog barking at 3 a.m. — anything besides sex for a change.

OPTING FOR ABSTINENCE
DEAR OPTING: Thanks for the candid input. I appreciate knowing my readers' preferences. Readers?

Genealogical gifts are welcome

October already. Where has the year gone? Are you ready for Christmas? It will slip around the corner and catch us if we are not careful. Time to make the family trees, lineage charts, or name cards and other gifts for the holidays.

Talented crew people might include a symbol to indicate occupation of ancestor by the name and vital statistics. Compile a book with character sketches of the family. Often, the women are overlooked or not included because of lack of information but make an effort to learn something about the wife. Include a sentence or two about her with the information on the husband.

Family trees are usually oak with the children as acorns or apple trees with an apple for each person. Vary this to suit your own family and individual taste. Perhaps you might want to try a rose garden with a rose for each member stitched in their favorite color. Use these as pillows, aprons, on the back of shirts, not just to frame. Make additional items for new family members so that the name can be added later.

Picture frames with collage mats are excellent for genealogy. Make a large one for the entire family with smaller ones that show different stages of growth for each member. Think about what is important to the family. A special friend, a pet, perhaps a picture of the family home. Make it a personal memory.

Several of the needlecraft companies have new kits this year if you need something to get you started.

Another suggestion would be a family tablecloth to use during the holidays or at reunions. Have each member autograph the cloth and then embroider over the signature. Use this each year to add to the festivities.

Inquire Publications, 10166 Clairmont Dr., St. Louis, Mo., 63136, is an excellent source for TEXAS records. Prices range from $5 depending on the material. Write for a catalog or make a specific request by county and type of record. Probate records, marriage and cemetery records are frequently the ones needed and will help complete that lineage.

This company has a variety of records from many states. I have ordered from them before. Prompt response either in shipping the books or a letter that the item is temporarily out of print. This is not a rental company. The books are purchased without an "approval" time. There's no guarantee the information will be in the book, but remember that is not a negative report. It simply means that another search is necessary in another locality.

Where do you order material?

Are you pleased with the service? Would you recommend it to a friend? Send information to me and let's share. Gena Walls, 1525 Palm Valley Blvd., No. 907, Round Rock, 78664.

Not knowing what changes the tax laws are going to make as far as donation deductions, plan to make your contribution to the library this year. Gather up those books and share the information.

I need your help. In order to continue the columns on a weekly bases, new material is necessary. A special "thank you" to those who have sent suggestions and information. I need to hear from more of you on a regular basis. Check your Bible and if it is a second or third generation book, publish the lineage chart.

Are you searching for a missing ancestor? Write a query.

Genealogy columns are mailed to friends in other areas and often become a part of the local family registry. Do not limit your resources. Use the column for your queries.

Send your holiday traditions for a future column. If you do not want your name used, simply ask that the information be omitted. I'm looking forward to hearing from you.

Happy hunting!

Pampan helps

Red Cross aids flood victims

Vickie Moose of Pampa, a Red Cross disaster volunteer, is working in St. Louis, Mo., in the records and reports section for the Missouri fall flood disaster operation. Moose serves as a temporary professional employee for this assignment.

American Red Cross workers have been on the scene during the flooding in Texas and Oklahoma following the recent heavy rains in those areas. Reports indicate more than 15,000 families have been affected in Oklahoma, most of these in Tulsa and the north-eastern part of the state.

Ten feeding stations have been set up in the Tulsa area with 35 mobile feeding vans operating in the field to serve food to disaster victims and workers. All national disaster vans from Territory III, Region 3, based in Amarillo, have been sent to Oklahoma. The Amarillo van went to Chickasha, the Lubbock van to Tulsa and the Children County van to Tulsa.

Lloyd Luck of Childress, a disaster volunteer, drove their van to Tulsa and is staying to help with shelter operation. He is Grady County right now, helping with damage survey which is slow because of inaccessible roads to flooded areas.

Other personnel assigned from Territory III include Jan Bradford, disaster reserve, from Jackson County chapter in Altus, Okla. She will report to Tulsa to assist family service for victims of the northeastern Oklahoma floods.

Eight states have been hit by flood waters, according to Red Cross reports, making it necessary for many families to leave their homes. Estimates indicate 32,785 families have been affected and probably more than 15,000 families will need Red Cross assistance in Oklahoma, Michigan, Illinois, Missouri, Minnesota, Kansas, Wisconsin and Arkansas.

The Red Cross expects to spend between $5- and $6 million to provide shelter and feeding, cleaning kits and other emergency needs to flood victims. Red Cross volunteers will help after the families are able to return to their homes also.

Gray County Red Cross chapters, like all other Red Cross chapters, is accepting contributions specified for use in the flood disasters. Mark contributions for "Flood Relief" and send to Gray County chapter, P.O. Box 1036, to be forwarded to the flood victims' assistance.

For 'em & agin 'em

Warren Hasse

YOU TAKE U.S. 62-82 south out of Lubbock...and don't blink.

For folks who have been asking since the UIL re-alignment was announced last spring "Where's Frenship?", those are the directions to Frenship High School, at Wolforth, Texas, a town (population 1,500) located 10 miles south of the Hub City. It's basically a bedroom community for that South Plains metro and for Reese Air Force Base.

Students and coaches at Frenship must wonder at times where they are, too. Since the decade of the Eighties began the school has been a member of Districts 5-AA, 4-3A, 3-3A, and this year is one of the two members of 1-4A. It began the decade with an enrollment of about 500 students and has risen to approximately 700 today, smallest in the district. And despite the kicking around, the Tigers have represented their school district well in football.

The first trip to the playoffs came in 1969, when new coach John Blocker took a team that had gone 0-10 the year prior, and turned it into a district champion. Bobby Davis became head coach with the 1981 football season, and through 5½ campaigns has turned in an excellent 36-22-2 record. Included are three trips into the state playoffs. In 1982 the Royal Blue and Old Gold beat Slaton in bi-district, but lost to Littlefield in the Area title game. Littlefield advanced to the 3A finals, losing to Refugio, 22-21. In 1983, Post downed the Tigers in bi-district, and then the Antelopes were beaten in the semi-final round by the eventual state champion, Daingerfield. In 1984, Frenship downed Fabens in bi-district, Idalou (winner over Perryton) in Area, and fell to Vernon in Regional play. Vernon lost to state finalist Daingerfield two weeks later in the Semis. So Coach Davis and the Tigers know about winning.

But thus far this season that word hasn't been too prominent. A 49-6 shellacking of Brownfield in the season opener has been followed by four straight defeats. Included were three district losses, 60-3 to Estacado; 35-0 to Hereford, and 31-14 by Borger last outing, a game in which the Tigers were impressive in defeat. Both the Harvesters and Tigers know tonight's game is one of two good chances for victories left on the schedule. Winless Dumas must still play both teams.

The move upward a classification has been difficult for the Cats thus far. Coming off a 4-5-1 season in 3A last year, Davis has 14 let-terms returning, nine of whom were starters one way or another last year. Experienced youth, five started last year as sophomores, have made for a strong positive attitude that promises good things in the future for Frenship HS, possibly before this season is over. As the old saying goes, it's not the size of the Tiger in the fight that counts; it's the fight in the Tiger. Davis and his staff have shown they can get the Big Cats to clawing pretty good.

Chaff: It's Homecoming, and special activities are planned around that happening...It's also the end of the first six weeks, and HB 72 takes effect tomorrow, which could mean either loss or addition of some athletes...Anyone know the origin of the name Frenship, or is it a colloquial spelling of "Friendship"?...The Tiger basketball fortunes are in excellent hands, too; Gary Tipton coaches the boys team, Sam Tipton the girls squad. The Tipton name has been synonymous with basketball success in West Texas for several decades...While the officiating made PHS coaches unhappy last week, the officials didn't create the four fumble losses, each of which resulted in Friona scores, or the other three turnovers (7 total) that hampered PHS scoring efforts...Harvester Park was surrounded by "For Sale" signs Sunday morning. Each came from a different realty firm, meaning it was apparently through the Multiple Listing Service. Police are seeking the culprits...It's been a difficult week in the athletic department.

AD John Kendall working cautiously after being released from the hospital, where he spent the weekend with chest pains; assistant AD Robert Hale has been attending school in Amarillo all week; and then the special Homecoming activities...It's Homecoming at West Texas State tomorrow, too, with a 2 p.m. kickoff against Angelo State (Harris Brinson director of bands), the first-ever Lone Star Conference game for the Buffies...

Things are tough at Odessa HS, too, where first-year Coach Jerry Taylor (moved from Hereford) had seven players quit, including three starters. The players were unhappy with punishment extended for violation of training rules...White Deer Bucks' head football coach Windy Williams and head basketball coach Scott Murray will be installed as deacons of the First Baptist Church of White Deer Sunday, evidencing qualities of great importance in the rise of White Deer athletic fortunes...Other district games tonight have Levelland at Hereford, Dunbar at Borger, and Dumas is at Estacado tomorrow. Volleyball plays at Levelland tomorrow...Senior HS of East St. Louis, Ill. lost last weekend, 17-14, first defeat for the defending national high school champions in 44 games. USA Today ranks Pensacola, Fla. Escambia HS No. 1 in the country, San Antonio Holmes is No. 3, and Beaumont Central No. 10...And the McLean-Motley County game did draw air time on ESPN last weekend. The Tigers losing streak is expected to continue tonight at Wheeler...Concerning the shocking 14-14 tie with Estacado last week, Levelland Coach Gene Mayfield says "we knew we couldn't get into a scoring battle with Estacado and we did a good job of containing them." The Lobos did it without the premier linebacker in District 1-4A, Tim Escue (6-3, 220, 4.7), who was injured in the first quarter...Don't forget the Skellytown Lions trap shoot all day tomorrow...And may all the bands earn Division One Ratings in marching competition at Borger tomorrow. Middle School performs at 8 a.m.; the Pride of Pampa at 5:15 p.m.

Mets derail Ryan express

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The New York Mets could see the power failure in Nolan Ryan's fearsome fastball.

They weathered 3 1-3 hitless innings Thursday night until Wally Backman broke through for the first hit off the Houston flame-thrower, which opened the way for a 5-1 victory over the Astros and a 1-1 deadlock in their National League championship series.

"The first time I came up I just got a brief glance at his fastball," Mets third baseman Ray Knight said. "He threw it right by me — and not many pitchers can get it by me."

"The next time I came up he either had lost a little off his fastball or he didn't get the location he wanted."

After Backman's first hit, the Mets eventually scored their first two runs of the series on a double by Gary Carter and a sacrifice fly by Darryl Strawberry.

The Mets continued to batter Ryan in the fifth inning with three more runs on Backman's RBI single and a two-run triple by Keith Hernandez.

"You've got to get to Ryan early before he gets his rhythm going," Strawberry said. "His fastball was exploding at the start of the game."

But later on, he didn't have quite as much on it."

The best-of-seven series now shifts to New York's Shea Stadium for the next three games, beginning Saturday, and the Mets are happy to be going home with a split.

"We knew we had to come in here and get at least a split," Knight said. "We can go back home now and try to win three or at least two be in good shape."

Ryan has few goals left to achieve in baseball, but one is to pitch for the Astros in a World Series. He was disappointed following Thursday's game.

"I thought that I had pretty good stuff, but I let it get away from me," Ryan said. "After Mike (Scott) won last night, we wanted to go in there winning two in a row."

Scott struck out 14 Mets batters, tying a major league playoff record, and the Astros won the opener 1-0 Wednesday night on Glenn Davis' second inning home run.

But Ryan couldn't keep pace with Scott, and Mets starter Bob Ojeda got the victory with a steady performance, scattering 10 hits.

The Mets' success has been based on getting their first two hitters, Len Dykstra and Backman, on base and having Hernandez, Carter and Strawberry drive them in.

Pampa welcomes Frenship tonight

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

Both Pampa and Frenship will be trying to snap four-game losing streaks in a District 1-4A football clash at 7:30 p.m. tonight in Harvester Stadium. Both would like to see that streak come to an abrupt end and another one started...on the winning side of the ledger.

The Harvesters have an added incentive — Homecoming — while the Tigers are out to prove they can compete against Class 4A competition. Frenship moved up from Class 3A this season and the schedule has been rugged.

"It was a bad time for us to move up," said Frenship head coach Bobby Davis. "We've only got four seniors and it's going to take awhile to get to the point where we have enough experience to compete at the 4A level." Frenship started fast, destroying Brownfield, 49-6, in the season opener. The Tigers then fell to Tulia before beginning district play. Losses to Lubbock Estacado, 60-3; Hereford, 35-0, and Borger, 31-14, have left Frenship struggling to get out of the district cellar.

Davis doesn't look for much relief from Pampa.

"Pampa has a good football team. They've played a tough schedule and they've got good personnel," Davis said. "They're favored to beat us."

Meanwhile, for the Harvesters, this week's practice for the homecoming game has been of the up and down variety.

"The players have been working hard this week, but when you're 0-4, it's hard to get up for homecoming," said Pampa head coach John Kendall.

Kendall said the Harvesters are almost injury-free with the exception of reserve tailback Lonnie Mills, who has been bothered by a sore ankle.

"His ankle is twisted a little bit and I don't know yet if he will be ready for tonight," Kendall added.

Kendall will be ready tonight after spending the weekend hospitalized with chest pains.

"I'm feeling a lot better now," he added.

Kendall sees a lot of Pampa in

Scott Rabel

Frenship.

"Their schedule would be a tough row for anybody, as we've found out. They're a lot like we are. They've had problems getting into the win column. We're basically the same size."

Senior quarterback Tuan Lee is probably Frenship's best athlete, Kendall said.

"He hides the ball well and has a lot of good moves," added Kendall. Lee also starts at strong safety.

Fullback Randy Jackson (185-pound junior) and tailback Roy Wilson (180-pound junior) give the Tigers some bulk in the backfield.

Davis, who has been head coach at Frenship for five years, worries about stopping the speedy Pampa backfield of quarterback James Ellison, tailback Mark Williams and fullback Rodney Kelly. Williams looks awfully quick and Ellison is also quick and can throw the ball. I'm also impressed with Kelly."

Kelly, a 145-pound senior, is the Harvesters' top rusher with 201 yards. He rushed for 70 yards in Pampa's 19-13 loss to Friona. Williams, a 175-pound senior, is right behind with 199 yards and has scored two touchdowns. Ellison, a 140-pound senior, has ran for four touchdowns and passed for two more.

Scott Rabel, a 160-pound junior noseguard, was the leading tackler (11) against Friona last week. He had 10 assists and one solo tackle. Wil Stanley (165-pound senior) and Joel Farina (185-pound senior) were right behind with 10 each.

Texas-OU rivalry a rarity this season

DALLAS (AP) — The 81st meeting of the Texas Longhorns and Oklahoma Sooners on Saturday will be a rarity in that neither team enters the annual Red River rivalry unbeaten.

It's the first time since 1973 that neither team comes in with a perfect record and is the first time since 1968 that both teams have suffered at least one loss going into the Cotton Bowl.

The sixth-ranked Sooners, who are the defending national champions, were defeated 28-16 by Miami two weeks ago while Texas suffered a 31-20 loss to Stanford in the 'Horns season opener.

Coaches Barry Switzer of Oklahoma and Fred Akers of Texas, former teammates at Arkansas, have met in nine of these classics with Akers owning a 5-3-1 record.

However, Akers is under fire from some alumni and the pressure is on for a good season. Akers fired four assistants in the offseason and the offense has a new look under Dwain Painter.

Oklahoma rated a whopping 23-point favorite, the biggest odds-maker edge in recent memory.

Switzer, who is 6-5-2 in games against Texas, said Oklahoma being favored by that many points was ridiculous.

"I'm scared to death of them and I hope our squad is, too," Switzer said. "I don't think there is such a thing as a favorite in this game. It has been and will be a no-holds-barred, physical, gut-check of a game."

Akers said he was surprised the Longhorns were such heavy underdogs but figured the Sooners should be favored.

"I can see that, physically and experience-wise, and everything else but it's been that way before," Akers said. "We're going to have to go out there and really play a heck of a ball game to stay on the field with them."

Wild shootout expected between Bears, Mustangs

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The best football game of the weekend in the Southwest Conference may be in Waco not Dallas.

While the Texas-Oklahoma clash is drawing its usual hoopla, the Baylor-Southern Methodist game shapes up to be a wild one.

"Historically this series has had more close, hard-fought battles than any other in this league," said Baylor Coach Grant Teaff. "I remember in 1978 we jumped to a 21-0 lead and fumbled on the 1 trying to score again. We ended up losing 28-21."

"Again, in 1980 the same thing happened but on an opposite scale. We made the last minute comeback win. You get the idea. This game with SMU will be exciting."

Teaff is 6-8 against SMU and 2-5 in Waco. SMU leads the series 35-26-7.

Baylor rated an eight-point favorite over SMU in the 7 p.m. contest at Baylor Stadium.

In other games this week, Oklahoma was a 23-point favorite over Texas in a 2:30 p.m. game in the Cotton Bowl; Texas Christian was a 16-point favorite over Rice in Fort Worth at 7:30 p.m.; Arkansas was a 22-point nod over Texas Tech at 2 p.m.; and Texas A&M was an 18-point favorite over Houston in the Astrohome in a noon (Raycom TV) kickoff.

Baylor and SMU are 2-0 in SWC play but the Mustangs, who are on NCAA probation, are just playing for the fun of it.

Ten of their last 14 meetings have been decided by a touchdown or less.

Baylor linebacker Ray Berry said, "Baylor-SMU is always a tough football game. I don't see anything changing this year."

Teaff said, "I've been very impressed with SMU. (Quarterback) Bobby Watters is ideal for their attack. He runs and throws well and executes the option. He reminds me a great deal of Lance McIlhenny in the way he leads their squad."

The Aggies have a big challenge. They've never won a game in the Astrohome in four tries.

"A&M has not been very successful playing in the 'Dome,'" said Aggies' Coach Jackie Sherrill. "Houston will play us extremely hard."

Threshers down Canyon in 9th grade game

All the scoring came in the first half, but no more was needed as the Pampa Threshers toppled Canyon 9th graders, 23-12, Thursday night at Harvester Stadium.

Canyon was ahead of Pampa twice in the first half, but an 85-yard kickoff return by Corey Morris put the Threshers on top to stay.

"That was the big play of the game," said Threshers' head coach Steve Porter. "That broke Canyon's back."

Morris fumbled the ball momentarily before taking off down the sideline and finding a clear path to the goal line.

Pampa added one more score when Mike Cagle threw to James Bybee for a 60-yard TD strike.

Borger led 6-0 in the first quarter, but Pampa came back to take the lead 8-6 on a 15-yard run by Antonio Wallace and Cagle's conversion pass to Bybee.

Canyon led again 12-8, then came the kickoff runback by Morris. Cagle and Bybee hooked up again for the conversion.

Tight end Timmy Ray was the unsung hero for the Threshers.

Ray caught four passes, all in clutch situations.

"Timmy did an outstanding job. He kept us going with his catches," Porter added.

Doug Budd, Jerry Whipple, Jason Allen and Heath Parker, were outstanding on defense, Porter said.

"These guys did an outstanding job, especially in the second half. They shut Canyon down good," Porter said.

Pampa has a 4-0-1 won-lost record at the end of the first round of the round-robin district. Their tie game came against Borger, 12-12.

The Threshers' have an open date next week before meeting Dumas Oct. 23 in Harvester Stadium. Gametime is 5 p.m.

The Pampa Patriots won over Canyon, 14-6, in a seventh-grade game played Tuesday at the middle school field.

Pampa broke a 0-0 halftime tie against Canyon when Philip Sexton scored on a 7-yard touchdown run. Ryan Erwin recovered a Canyon fumble in the end zone for the other Pampa score. Joe Yurich scored the 2-point conversion.

Clemens out for revenge

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP)— Boston ace Roger Clemens, still smarting from a shelling in the American League playoff opener, will try to get even with the California Angels in Saturday's Game 4, starting for the first time this season on three days rest.

"I'm a workhorse, it don't matter," the 6-foot-4 right-hander said Thursday after being told by Manager John McNamara of his plan for the best-of-seven series tied at one victory apiece.

"It's just going to be a day earlier," Clemens, 24-4 with a 2.48 earned run average during the regular season, said. "I'd pitch tomorrow if I had to. I can pitch on adrenalin just like anyone else. I'm going out there to do anything I can to win."

Clemens, who allowed 10 hits and eight runs, seven earned, in throwing 143 pitches in Tuesday's 8-1 loss, indicated he was looking for another shot at the AL West champions.

"I have to go out there and be Roger Clemens now, and try not really to redeem myself, but try to pick my teammates back up again," he said. "I feel I let 'em down and I have a bad taste in my mouth because I feel I didn't do everything I should have out there."

Clemens claimed he was not bothered Tuesday by an elbow bruise suffered when he was struck by a line drive in his last regular-season start on Oct. 1. Instead, he said, he may have been too strong from lack of work, having gone 1 2-3 innings and throwing 30 pitches in that game.

Assuring everyone that he is healthy, the hard-throwing strikeout artist said:

"I got an arm and I'm out here throwing. This is the last part of the season and every game is crucial. I'll pitch in long relief, short relief, start, anything.

"I don't feel the other night took a whole lot out of me. I just was frustrated."

"I think you ought to have your best pitcher available to pitch three times in a seven-game series," McNamara said.

After left-hander Bruce Hurst went nine innings in the Boston's 9-2 victory Wednesday, McNamara had right-hander Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 16-11, ready to start in Game 3 tonight. Then the manager elected to go with Clemens rather than Al Nipper, 10-12, but inconsistent as a starter since knee surgery in May.

McNamara said it had been his "intention right along" to start Clemens in the fourth game since veteran Tom Seaver suffered a knee injury on Sept. 19.

Gonzalez tied for Pensacola lead

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP)— As a newlywed last year, Ernie Gonzalez said he had trouble sleeping while on the PGA Tour. He also had trouble making the cut in Professional Golfers' Association tournaments.

But this year the 25-year-old from Chula Vista, Calif., is taking his wife along and his ability to sleep and golf game have both improved greatly.

Gonzalez, with his wife Judy in the gallery, finished in a three-way tie for the lead Thursday with Jeff Sluman and Curt Byrum in the rain-suspended first round of the $300,000 Pensacola Open.

One-half of the 156 golfers had completed the round when driving rain brought play to a halt. Those golfers stranded on the course were scheduled to complete the first round today.

"Last year I had a little insomnia problem," Gonzalez said after carding a 6-under-par 65 on the 7,093-yard Perdido Bay Resort course. "This year I have my wife with me, I'm more relaxed."

Gonzalez, whose best finish this year has been 10th in the Bank of Boston Classic, has earned $33,548 compared to only $12,729 in 1985 when he didn't have a top-10 finish.

"You were out here (on the tour) for eight or 10 weeks in a row, and you go, 'I don't want to be here, I want to be home,'" Gonzalez said. "This year I had the opportunity to bring my wife out and it's been a lot easier on us. Now I have no reason to go home except to relax and rest."

The tournament's second round will be delayed until Saturday. PGA officials said at that point they would decide whether to play 36 holes Sunday or drop the final round, reducing the tournament to 54 holes instead of the usual 72.

Among those stranded on the course was Vantage Cup leader Bob Tway who also is trying to vault ahead of Greg Norman, not entered here, to the top of the money list. Tway, with $647,244, needs only $6,052 to catch Norman. The top prize here is $54,000.

Andy Bean who is trying to catch Tway in the race for the $500,000 Vantage Cup first prize, was at 70.

With only three weeks of competition left, Bean needs a victory and two top-12 finishes while Tway must finish out of the top 25 in the remaining tournaments.

One stroke behind the leaders were Rex Caldwell, Wayne Grady and Bob Murphy.

Air war expected at Michigan

By The Associated Press

The annual intrastate war between Michigan and Michigan State is usually waged with ground troops. Saturday's battle, the 79th meeting between the two schools, promises to be an air show.

Michigan State tailback Lorenzo White, the Big Ten's leading rusher, will watch from the sidelines after suffering a sprained left knee in last week's 24-21 loss to Iowa. And Jamie Morris, the starting tailback for the fourth-ranked Michigan Wolverines, is doubtful because of knee problems. That leaves the offense in the hands of quarterbacks Jim Harbaugh of Michigan and Dave Yarema of Michigan State.

Last week, Harbaugh became the first Michigan quarterback to throw for more than 300 yards in a game, completing 15 of 24 passes for 310 yards and one touchdown in the Wolverines' 34-17 romp over Wisconsin.

"Yarema is just like Harbaugh," Michigan Coach Bob Schembechler said. "The more he plays, the better he's going to get. He's been excellent. He makes things happen. He's been good." Against Iowa, Yarema connected on 23 of 36 passes for 271 yards, including three touchdown tosses to flanker Mark Ingram.

The Michigan-Michigan State rivalry began in 1898. Michigan, 4-0 this season, holds the lead in the series 51-22-5, but Michigan State's last victory came two years ago in Ann Arbor, the site of Saturday's game.

In the only game Saturday pitting two ranked teams against each other, No. 12 Washington visits No. 18 Stanford in Pacific 10 Conference action.

Pro golfers enjoy hunting

BY MARK McDONALD
Dallas Times Herald

BUFFALO GAP, Texas (AP)— It's not often pro golfer Hal Sutton finds himself in such deep rough. Yet there he was, up to his neck in sunflowers and seemingly delighted by his position.

"This looks like a good spot," said Sutton, a two-time winner on the PGA Tour this season. "I'm ready."

So, too, were the likes of Andy Bean, Craig Stadler, former Byron Nelson Golf Classic champ Bob Eastwood and current Colonial National Invitation champ Dan Pohl. Each one searched along the nearest line of mesquite trees, not for golf balls, but for mourning doves.

Officials of the recent $400,000 Southwest Classic have conducted the daily hunts for years, providing shotguns, shells, game bags and transportation to any golfer who wants some relief from the practice tee at Fairway Oaks Golf and Racquet Club.

This year's hunting committee chairman, Jordan Wood, said about four dozen players in the tournament field of 132 hunted some 800 acres of sunflower patches and mesquite pastures donated by local landowners.

"It's a nice break," said Stadler of this year's hunt. He brought his own shotgun, a Smith & Wesson model 1000. "It takes your mind off golf — and I've needed that this year (he has won $146,776, 50th on the money list). Hunting gives you thought time alone."

"You're out there, relaxed, with nothing crossing your mind but birds. It's time well-spent."

Though several tournaments offer fishing to the golfers — Texan Phil Blackmar of Corpus Christi caught a 6½-pound bass this year in the water hazards at the Doral Open — and the Bank of Boston Classic sponsored a European-style shoot on pen-raised pheasant, the dove hunting here is unique. And the shooting is always fast enough to make the Southwest Classic a popular week on the players' calendars.

In fact, golf becomes almost an afterthought.

"Is there a golf tournament here this week?" asked one pro. He was hurrying to change from golf spikes and beltless slacks to jeans and boots. For all his haste, he would not catch up with George Archer.

Boom. A dove that had suddenly darted cross-wind tumbled to the ground.

"Hey, that was no gimme!" the angular Archer said, bending to retrieve the bird. "You see that dove cut to the right on me."

Dean Ridenour, delivering ice and soft drinks from his pickup to the golfers, chuckled.

"Nobody loves it quite like George Archer," said Ridenour. "He's the first one in the field and last one to leave."

Archer's zeal and accuracy were not uncommon among the pros. To play golf at the Tour level requires hand-eye coordination, attention to detail and poise. The best wing-shots are blessed with similar attributes.

"George Archer, Tom Watson and J.C. Snead," said Pat Murphy, who cooked 1,800 doves last year in a massive feed for the players, tournament officials and fans. "That's 1-2-3. And I've hunted with them all."

Many of the golfers are experienced outdoorsmen from hunting backgrounds. Bob Eastwood, for instance, grew up hunting waterfowl in Northern California. His grandfather, the late W.H. Gilbert, claims to have invented the first machine that plucks ducks and geese with rubber "fingers" rotating on a drum. The same basic principles are still in practical use in plucking shacks west of Houston where waterfowl hunting is a cash crop for rice farmers.

Andy Bean jokes that golf interferes with his hunting and fishing. Ed Fiori and Davis Love III are handy with shotguns. And Abilene native John Slaughter, the former University of Houston All-American trying to get established in pro golf, hunts virtually every afternoon he is home.

First-year pro Scott Verplank of Dallas, no rookie with a scattergun, this year taught Jeff Maggard how to handle the slide action of an old Remington model 870 pump, then shot 10 birds while sliding up to his knees in the red mud of a creek to retrieve them.

Sutton, who owns a plane, flew directly to Abilene from an extended hunt for moose, bear and caribou in British Columbia. He arrived at the tournament with more hunting on his mind than golf.

"Haven't picked up a golf club in days," he said. Seconds later, he flied to attention as a dragonfly flew into the corner of his vision Easy, Hal, easy.

As you might imagine, to gather so many sporting chaps in one place at the same time is to leave stretch marks on the truth.

Bean caught a 12½-pound bass one year at the Disney World tournament in Florida. After that, details get sketchy.

"Where'd I catch it?" Bean said with a sly grin. "Over there. Wa-a-a-y over there."

And don't look for Archer to leak much information. He once had photos taken of himself pushing a 6-pound bass at the camera.

"Some guy says, 'Woa! A 14-pounder,'" Archer said. "I said, 'You kidding? That fish weighed all of 20 pounds.'"

Then there is Stadler, one of the most expressive players in the game. He and Tom Watson and several Southwest Classic volunteers were hunting whitewing doves in Mexico one day when a squadron of birds surprised Stadler from the blindside.

Locker room legend has it Stadler suddenly looked over his shoulder, then wheeled awkwardly to his left and shot holes in the sky on his way to an unceremonious collapse on his back. Has he taken the needle since then?

"Nah," Stadler said, with a knowing cut of his eyes. "I out-shot them all."

"I don't feel I need to apologize for anything I've said. The fact is, they didn't keep people off me. I didn't mean it personally."

Falcons miffed at Rams' Bartkowski

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The Atlanta Falcons are sending out a welcome wagon for Steve Bartkowski. If things go right for the host team on Sunday, the wagon will roll right over the Los Angeles Rams quarterback.

Bartkowski was the Falcons' quarterback for 11 years after Atlanta made him the top pick in the 1975 draft. He was released last season and now plays for the Rams, whom he will lead into Atlanta Sunday in an NFC West battle for first place. The Falcons, Rams and San Francisco 49ers all are 4-1.

Several Falcons are bristling over some comments made by Bartkowski during the preseason, particularly in reference to the lack of protection he got from his blockers in Atlanta. Bartkowski said after a no-sack game against Indianapolis that he had seen the game from a new perspective — standing.

"I'd like to show him what it's like again in that other position, on his back," Atlanta tackle Brett Miller, a former defensive end, said. "Hey, but I'm just kidding."

Oh?

"I'm a nice guy, too," Falcons defensive end Mike Gann said. "But people try and kill me when I'm on the football field. We'll try and knock him down."

"It just goes to show you," Bartkowski said. "I've gone out of my way not to say anything this week, then someone digs up an innocent comment from the preseason."

"I don't feel I need to apologize for anything I've said. The fact is, they didn't keep people off me. I didn't mean it personally."

Attorney general, ag commissioner candidates meet in televised debates

DALLAS (AP) — While Jim Mattox was busy buffing his home-spun "people's lawyer" image in a televised debate, Roy Barrera Jr. was working just as hard to tarnish the man he calls "a professional politician."

And in part two of the KERA-TV debates Thursday night, Jim Hightower told challenger Bill Powers to "loosen up a little" as the two agriculture commissioner candidates continued what has become a contest of style.

Mattox, a 43-year-old Democrat, said his aggressive high-profile style has put the attorney general's office in good shape while boosting crime-victim payments by 900 percent and those for child support by 200 percent.

But Barrera, a state district judge in Bexar County since 1980, called Mattox a professional, headlining-grabbing politician who "decides what laws he will defend and what laws he will not defend."

"Since Jim Mattox was elected in 1982, he has brought disgrace and fiscal irresponsibility to his office," the 34-year-old Republican charged.

Mattox said twice he didn't want to respond to Barrera's "mudslinging," but he did tell him "you have never tried a civil case, and that's 95 percent of what my office does. And I've tried more jury trials than you have."

Barrera conceded he is a criminal- and not civil-lawyer, but said he has presided over some 3,800 trials. He added that reform is badly needed in Mattox's office to compensate for a "lack of honesty and integrity."

Law enforcement officials discuss common front on drug trafficking

PUERTO VALLARTA, Mexico (AP) — Law enforcement officials from 13 nations, including many of the world's leading producers of cocaine, marijuana and heroin, exchanged ideas in an unprecedented summit called to create a common front against drug traffickers.

No formal accords or agreements were expected to come from the two-day meeting which closes today and was billed as a chance for a free exchange of ideas.

The participants spent most of Thursday meeting behind closed doors in a session opened by President Miguel de la Madrid, who urged the participants to unite against the drug traffickers.

"Let us avoid the danger of problems dividing us," de la Madrid said. "We must look for a solution that unites us. No country is safe from drug dependence. We must be on the alert."

De la Madrid, who suggested the summit, made no direct reference to recent U.S.-Mexico rifts stemming from the drug problem.

But, he said, "At times, the battle against drug trafficking has given rise to discord. ... It may be that common enemies provoke these conflicts for their advantage."

It was the first such meeting involving the United States and Latin American and Caribbean nations, many of whom are the world's leading producers of cocaine, marijuana and heroin.

Commenting on the lack of an agenda, Bolivian Justice Minister Fernando Barthelemy Martinez told reporters, "It gives true liberty in order that the countries can express themselves with a greater fullness and clarity."

State is doing its part in drug prevention

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The state of Texas, despite its financial crisis, is committed to funding programs to prevent drug abuse, Secretary of State Myra McDaniel told the Texans' War on Drugs conference.

Loss of oil revenue forced legislators last month to cut state spending and impose a temporary sales tax increase. The state is still suffering from a projected $900 million budget deficit.

More than $1 million was cut from the Texas Commission of Alcohol and Drug Abuse, but Ms. McDaniel said those cuts were in administrative areas.

Texans' War on Drugs is funded by grants from the commission and from monies from the office of Gov. Mark White, who is committed to curtailing drug abuse, Ms. McDaniel said.

More than 300 teachers, parents, law enforcement officials and members of civic groups are attending the 6th annual adult leadership conference, the first held outside of Austin.

Speakers at the opening session on Thursday said that drug prevention programs can help, but peers are at the crux of the problem and solution.

Mattox, who said he has upheld his 1982 campaign promise to be the "people's lawyer," called the debate a draw because neither side could delve into issues in depth because of a half-hour time limit.

Barrera, however, said "I'll let the people of Texas decide who won."

He acknowledged that he trails Mattox in political polls and that his campaign — an unusual one with a Hispanic running as a Republican — has had trouble raising money.

But Barrera predicted support would "materialize" for him on Nov. 4.

"It takes more than having a Hispanic name to get Hispanic support," warned Mattox, a former Dallas County prosecutor and member of the Texas and U.S. legislatures during the 1970s. "He can't win this election."

In the debate's second half, Powers again accused Hightower of using the agriculture commissioner's office and its $40 million annual budget to promote himself.

"I may be the first politician in Texas history to be campaigned against because I have a sense of humor," said Hightower, 43. "We can loosen up a little."

"What has he done? Nothing," said Powers, 44, a Republican and executive vice president of the Texas Poultry Federation. "Jim Hightower does not care about farmers. Jim Hightower does not care about consumers. All he cares about is headlines for Hightower."

U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III said in a news conference that "one of the most probable benefits to come from this is the sharing of intelligence and information about specific traffickers."

He said the United States and Mexico will reach an agreement before the end of the year so the two countries will be able to easily exchange information about pending drug cases in their respective countries.

Meese was asked about the possibility of U.S. military troops being used in countries to battle drug traffickers as was done this summer in Bolivia.

"There are countries that have talked to us about different types of programs. I don't know of any that are going to be specifically like Bolivia," Meese said.

Not every Latin American nation is sold on the idea of U.S. military involvement in their drug battles.

Justice Minister Carlos Blancas Bustamante of Peru told reporters, "Peru has a very clear position. We have not solicited, we won't solicit and we won't accept troops in our country. We think drug problems should be fought with our troops."

Meese also said he felt "one of things that is significant at the conference is the recognition that every country has a demand problem."

However, some countries, such as Bolivia, feel their drug problem is due in large measure to the high drug consumption in the United States.

Barthelemy Martinez said, "The origin of the Bolivian problem is in the demand, and this demand appears originally in the United States."

"The most effective prevention strategy today is the use of peer groups to urge friends not to use alcohol or drugs," Ms. McDaniel said.

"Kids do listen to their friends about what's acceptable and what's in," she said. "These new approaches that emphasize friends, honesty and straight facts about alcohol and drug abuse contrasts sharply with the smear campaigns of previous years." John G. McKay Jr., executive director of Texans' War on Drugs.

McKay said the death of collegiate basketball player Len Bias has led to awareness that drugs are dangerous and his group is trying to take advantage of it.

"There is a human experiment on our streets that's going on," McKay said. "I think we'll turn the corner, but don't look for any quick solutions."

"This war is a war of attrition and we're bracing for a long haul," he said.

Most of the delegates attending the three-day conference are from the education area, including administrators, teachers, school board members and representatives from parent-teacher groups.

Mississippi grain

(AP Laserphoto)

Grain is loaded onto a barge on the Mississippi River in East St. Louis, Ill. With the 1986 harvest coming in, many farmers are arranging storage of the 1985 crop in makeshift covered piles and in barges, old sheds and wire corn cribs. The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates farmers will average 138 bushels of corn per acre this fall and 42 bushels of soybeans per acre.

End of Midwest flooding in sight as Mississippi recedes

By The Associated Press

The Mississippi River receded today after inundating towns near St. Louis, and forecasters say the worst of the flooding that has swamped the Midwest for more than two weeks appears to have passed.

"Things are looking up. They really are," said Lou Chiodini, emergency manager for the Army Corps of Engineers at St. Louis.

"But what we have to do now is hope we don't get any more rain," he said late Thursday. "We'll still be watching the river 24 hours a day."

No rain was expected today in the St. Louis area, where the worst of the flooding Thursday in 11 states was reported. The forecast called for a 40 percent chance of isolated thunderstorms on Saturday and a continued chance of rain Sunday.

The flooding has caused hundreds of millions of dollars in damage, the most serious in Michigan, where state officials estimate losses at $323 million, Missouri at $106 million, and Illinois up to $53 million.

The flooding has forced an estimated 55,000 Mid-westerners to flee their homes at some time as rains moved south.

By Thursday night, only about 30 families remained in West Alton, Mo., a city of 450 residents at the confluence of the Missouri and Mississippi rivers north of St. Louis. With water shoulder high, the Coast Guard evacuated 14 people by boat on Thursday, and used a helicopter to airlift three people from Portage des Sioux and Black Walnut. Portage des Sioux remained surrounded by floodwater.

"The Mississippi and the Missouri have joined, and it's almost impossible to distinguish one from the other," said Coast Guard Lt. Christopher Smith. "It's going to take several days for the water to go down."

The Mississippi crested Thursday on a stretch beginning north of St. Louis and extending well south of the city, where it swelled to nine feet above the 30-foot flood stage, said Forrest Varble of the National Weather Service in St. Louis.

"I think the worst is over, but there's still going to be lots of water around for most of a month," he said.

Little pep expected from economy

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — A blue-ribbon panel of business executives forecast today that the U.S. economy will continue to muddle through the next two years without a recession but without much pickup in growth either.

In its semi-annual economic outlook, the Business Council expressed a general uneasiness and said "concerns about the economy abound."

"A disappointing performance in trade and lingering weakness for U.S. industries have prevented the economy from growing up to expectations," the council's report said.

The Business Council, made up of executives from 65 of the country's largest corporations, forecast economic growth, as measured by the gross national product, of 2.6 percent this year, weaker than last year's 2.7 percent performance.

The group predicted GNP growth would climb modestly to 2.9 percent in 1987 and 3.1 percent in 1988.

These forecasts are far below the expectations of the Reagan administration, which is looking for growth to top 4 percent next year.

James D. Robinson III, chairman of the American Express Co., said even the modest upturn predicted by the Business Council will not occur unless the trade deficit improves.

The United States is expected to suffer a record $170 billion trade imbalance this year, which the Business Council said was the prime reason economic growth has been depressed.

"Our technical consultants do see trade picking up at the end of this year because of the lower dollar and faster growth abroad," Robinson said Thursday night at a news briefing on the report.

Immigration legislation lives again in Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Immigration legislation is entering a House-Senate conference, with sponsors confident of success but mindful that they came tantalizingly close to agreement two years ago — and failed.

The stage for another session-ending cliffhanger was set Thursday night, when the House voted 230-166 for a bill designed to slow massive illegal immigration to the United States.

The bill has new wrinkles — a temporary amnesty for refugees from El Salvador and Nicaragua and provisions for foreign farm workers — but its foundation has not changed from past legislation.

The cornerstones remain a program of penalties for employers who hire undocumented workers; and amnesty for illegal immigrants who have held jobs, paid taxes and raised families here for many years.

As the 98th Congress drew to a close two years ago, immigration conferees reached agreement on many important issues that had divided them, but were unable to finish their work before the session ended.

Sponsors from both houses expressed varying degrees of optimism after Thursday's vote.

"I've said all along, get the bill to conference and we will be able to cabbage something together and send it on to the president," said Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., the chief Senate sponsor. "There are some tough issues to be resolved, but they are resolvable."

"It's a better than an even bet," said Rep. Romano L. Mazzoli, D-Ky.

Rep. Dan Lungren, R-Calif., said he expects agreement, "but it's not a slam-dunk."

Despite the wide margin in the House, the bill nearly was sunk when Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., attempted to eliminate the amnesty program for illegal aliens.

McCollum lost 199-192 after Rep. Hamilton Fish, R-N.Y., and others warned him it was a "killer amendment." While McCollum argued amnesty was akin to "slapping in the face" those who wait years to immigrate legally, opponents said the delicately balanced bill would come unglued if the amendment passed.

Also surviving was the provision to suspend deportation of aliens from El Salvador and Nicaragua, who, according to supporters of the language, would face political persecution if they returned home.

The House bill would allow them to remain in this country until nine months after submission of a General Accounting Office report on their status. The report is expected to take two years.

This time, it was Fish fighting to eliminate the language. His amendment lost 199-197, although Lungren and others argued the temporary amnesty program would kill the bill if it remained in the legislation. They were wrong, at least with regard to the House vote.

The main amnesty program would apply to millions of aliens — nobody is sure how many — who came to the country illegally before 1982 but remained here ever since.

To protect them while they waited for legalization, the bill would prohibit employment discrimination based on national origin or legal-alien status. It also would establish a special counsel in the Justice Department to investigate and prosecute illegal employment discrimination. Rep. F. James Sensenbrenner Jr., R-Wis., tried to eliminate the language but his amendment failed, 260-140.

Most forms of federal financial assistance would be withheld for five years from the majority of aliens legalized under the bill. State and local governments would be reimbursed fully by the federal government for expenses involving the newly legalized individuals.

The prohibition against the hiring of illegal aliens would end in 6½ years unless Congress extended it. The purpose is to dry up job opportunities that many experts believe cause illegal immigration.

Civil penalties for repeat violators would range up to $5,000 per illegal alien hired. Those engaging in a "pattern or practice" of violation could face criminal penalties of a maximum six months in prison and a $1,000-per-alien fine.
