Lawmen shocked by Hamilton's ouster

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

Pampa lawmen were generally disillusioned this morning by the sudden dismissal of Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton.

"We'll miss him," said Pampa police officer Danny Lance, summing up the feeling of most officers questioned today. "He was good for law enforcement."

Hamilton was fired Tuesday by District Attorney Guy Hardin, who cited "longstanding philosophical differences." Hardin said Wednesday that he plans to take over Hamilton's caseload in Gray County.

Since being named Hardin's chief assistant in 1984, Hamilton has prosecuted virtually all cases filed in Gray County, while Hardin has worked cases in Wheeler, Roberts, Hemphill and Lipscomb counties, the remaining counties in the 31st District.

The bulk of the district's work is in Gray County.

Many police officers who commented on the firing requested anonymity in the wake of the recent shakeup at the Police Department.

"We'll never replace him," said one officer, who said he considered Hamilton one of the best prosecutors Pampa has ever had. He applauded Hamilton's aggressive prosecution of criminal cases.

Another officer indicated that prosecution might suffer without Hamilton.

"There goes the old ballgame," he said.

Det. Mark King called Hamilton's dismissal "regrettable" and said he could not comment further.

"I'm sorry to see him go," said another officer who said he considered Hamilton a close friend. "He was one of the best things to ever happen to Pampa."

Det. Ken Hall and Lt. Jesse Wallace also said Hamilton will be missed.

"He's been a real good prosecutor," Wallace said.

Judy Warner, director of Pampa's Tralee Crisis Center, said she is concerned about the void Hamilton's departure will leave for crime victims because, she said, Hamilton is a strong advocate for victims' rights. Warner said she hopes Hardin's philophy does not differ from Hamilton's.

Hardin

Warner said she hopes Tralee can continue a good relationship with the district attorney's office.

Speculation about the reasons behind the firing has been fueled by the refusal of both Hamilton and Hardin to reveal the contents of Hardin's letter of dismissal.

Hardin said Wednesday afternoon that the reasons for his decision are "not public information" and are based differences of opinion between him and Hamilton.

Hamilton

He said there were "no hard feelings" as far as he is concerned, and he praised Hamilton for being a "hard worker."

Hardin claimed that Hamilton's issuing a subpoena that ordered Hardin to testify in the 22-year-old murder case of Albert Branscum played no part in the decision.

Asked if he was upset over Hamilton's media attention, Hardin replied: "Let's just say I've never been one much for publicity in the media."

HAMILTON HIGHLIGHTS

In nearly three years as Gray County's felony prosecutor and prior to his immediate dismissal Tuesday, former Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton dispensed with many highly publicized cases. Just some of the more noteworthy cases included the following:

- Antonio Moriel, known as the baby-faced killer, pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter in the stabbing death of Earl Love, 32, 417 Crest; sentenced to 20 years in prison Nov. 8, 1984.
- Linda Armstrong, a 25-year-old mother of five, pleaded guilty to injury of a child in the killing of her 16-month-old daughter; sentenced to 16 years in prison Dec. 5, 1984.
- Gerry Lee Anderson, 24, pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter in the beating death of 24-year-old Robert Wayne Fritz; sentenced to 15 years in prison Sept. 20, 1984.
- Former Pampa police officer Preston Wayne Maynard, 49, was found guilty by jurors in his wife's 1980 murder; shot himself to death immediately after the verdict in the Wheeler County Courthouse.
- Richard Lee Schreckhise, 22, a former oil field worker, was sentenced to life in prison after jurors found him guilty of murder in the death of co-worker Aaron Wade Lewis.
- Donald Aaron Swindle, 23, was ordered to seek psychiatric care and was placed on 10 years probation Sept. 19, 1985, after pleading guilty to burglary in a bungled murder-for-hire scheme. Swindle also was accused of stabbing another woman and setting fire to six Pampa residences.
- Sexual assault charges against former Pampa High School junior varsity girl's basketball coach Allison Ott were dropped.

Bush admits errors

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of President Reagan's Cabinet will be called to testify and fill in gaps left by the failure of two administration officials to tell the Senate Intelligence Committee what they know about the Iran-Contra connection, the panel chairman says.

Vice President George Bush, admitting that "Clearly, mistakes were made" in the deal that sent U.S. arms to Iran and money to Nicaragua's Contra rebels, said the administration was determined to bring the truth of the scandal to light and to "let the chips fall where they may."

Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter, who resigned last week as Reagan's national security adviser after Attorney General Edwin Meese III said

■ Related stories, Pages 5 and 8

Poindexter had some knowledge of the funds diversion, invoked the Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination on Wednesday.

Poindexter, during a closed-door, one-hour appearance on the fourth day of the congressional investigation, declined to answer questions unless granted legal immunity.

Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, Poindexter's fired former aide who according to Meese was the only government official with extensive knowledge of Iran-Contra link, invoked the Fifth Amendment two days earlier. But senators running the investigation said the failure of the two key figures to testify would not slow the probe or limit its findings.

"North didn't do anything by himself," said Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., chairman of the intelligence panel. "Everything he did in this entire caper had to have a response. If we can get everybody at the other end of all those phone calls and plane trips, we can find out what went on."

Asked whether that meant the committee would call Cabinet members, Durenberger said it did. "Somewhere during this we are going to decide when to move it to Cabinet level," he told a reporter.

He said the panel had made no decision on whether to grant immunity to any witness, and other panel members said the idea was not being seriously considered.

One member of the intelligence committee, Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., said the departures of North and Poindexter and Reagan's call for an independent counsel to launch a probe would not end the furor. That can be done, he said, only if Reagan himself "comes clean" and admits he knew about the entire episode.

Area students have no trouble with test

Students were required to muster better scores for this year's Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills test, but area juniors had little trouble aceing the exam.

The test, known as the TEAMS test, is an examination of basic math and language skills that students must pass in order to graduate from high school. The test was administered to all Texas high school juniors in late October. Students have four chances to pass both parts of the test.

Lefors High School Principal Bill Crockett said that while this year's test is not necessarily harder than last year's, students had to correctly answer more questions than they did last year.

He said that last year, students were required to give correct answers on 45 of 72 language arts questions and 39 of 72 math questions.

This year, the standards were raised to require 50 correct answers on 72 language questions and 45 of 72 math questions.

Groom and Kelton high schools reported the greatest successes, as all of those schools' juniors passed the test.

Other area schools hovered between passage rates of 87 percent and 97 percent.

TEAMS TEST

Results for area schools, including the number of juniors taking the test and the number failing each section, are:

- Pampa — Of 238 juniors tested, 20 failed math, and 28 failed language arts.
- Canadian — Of 79 juniors tested, one failed math, and five failed language arts.
- Lefors — Of 17 juniors tested, two failed math and language arts, and one failed language arts.
- McLean — Of 23 juniors tested, two failed math, and three failed language arts.
- Miami — Of 18 juniors tested, one failed math, and none failed language arts.
- Mobeetie — Of three juniors tested, one failed math, and none failed language arts.
- Wheeler — Of 26 juniors tested, two failed math, and one failed language arts.
- White Deer-Skellytown — Results were not available.

Parade opens holiday

Friday evening will launch the official Christmas holiday season for the city with a Santa Day parade, lighting of a Nativity scene and tree and a ballet performance.

Activities will get under way at 6 p.m. with the parade following a new route this year — south on Hobart Street from 25th Avenue to the M.K. Brown Auditorium parking lot.

Parade entrants will meet at 25th and Hobart at 5:30 p.m., with the procession moving out promptly at 6 p.m. Pampa Chamber of Commerce Manager Floyd Sackett said.

All four lanes of traffic on Hobart will be blocked off for the "torchlight parade" route, Sackett said, adding that the chamber has received permission from state highway authorities for the parade.

During the parade, southbound through-traffic on Hobart Street will be diverted at 30th Avenue; northbound at Francis Avenue.

Any traffic needing to go north or south through the city will be routed away from the parade route, Sackett stated.

The parade, featuring various floats and other entries decorated with lights, will proceed south on Hobart to Somerville Street, where it will turn west and disband in the parking lot as in past years.

Following the parade, which should be over by 6:30 p.m., spectators and parade participants are encouraged to gather in Coronado Park south of the auditorium for the annual lighting of the city's Nativity Scene and the lighting of the living community Christmas tree.

After the parade and lighting activities, the Pampa Civic Ballet will present its annual Christmas Spectacular at 7 p.m. in the M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Directed by company artistic director Jeanne Willingham, the program will include scenes from The Toy Shop, Tiffany's Jewel Ballet and Snowbound, featuring

Celanese merger on hold

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

More than nine million of 11 million shares of Celanese Chemical Corp. common stock has been tendered to the West German company seeking to acquire it, a spokesman for the European chemical company confirmed today.

American Hoechst, a subsidiary of the West German Hoechst AG, wants to acquire Celanese Chemical Corp., which employs 400 people at its plant five miles west of Pampa. In late October, Hoechst made a tender offer of $245 a share for Celanese common stock. The agreement was subject to the approval of 51 percent of Celanese shareholders.

The bid was to have expired Wednesday, but the deadline was extended to Dec. 15 because the Federal Trade Commission wants more information on the proposed merger.

Joseph H. Singer, director of corporate public relations for American Hoechst in Somerville, N.J., said today that as of 7 p.m. Wednesday, 9.163 million shares of Celanese common stock, 12,166 shares of 17,631 shares of convertible preference stock and 19,527 shares of 22,560 shares of 7 percent second preference stock had been tendered to American Hoechst.

"That's how many shares we had in the hands of our depository Wednesday," Singer said, adding that one should "use arithmetic" to see whether Celanese stockholders have approved the offer.

"But unofficially, unannounced, you're right," he said.

Singer said the government has delayed completion of the merger.

"They wanted to look at everything, the whole ball of wax, about the merger," Singer explained.

Singer said his company has "no plans yet on what's going to happen after the acquisition."

"This holds great promise for growth in both companies," Singer said.

Emergency committee to discuss derailment

The Community Awareness and Emergency Response Steering Committee on Emergency Management will meet at 7 a.m. Friday at the Coronado Inn to discuss aspects of the recent derailment of Santa Fe Railroad chemical tankers.

The meeting was called by Steve Vaughn, Pampa Environmental and Emergency Management Department director, and Ron Guard, general manager of the Pampa Celanese Chemical Co. plant.

Vaughn said the committee will discuss means of improving communications with Santa Fe Railroad in light of the company's failure to report the pre-Thanksgiving Day night derailment at Hobart Street Park.

The CAER Steering Committee recently was recognized by Pampa and Gray County as the key agent of emergency management within the city and county.

Santa Fe came under criticism from city and Celanese officials following the derailment of three Celanese railroad tanker cars loaded with acid about 11:30 p.m. Nov. 26 in the city park, near the Hobart Street underpass.

Even though three derailed cars contained hazardous materials — acetic anhydride and butyric acid — that could have led to evacuations if the tankers had ruptured, Santa Fe personnel failed to inform the city's fire, police and Celanese emergency crews of the accident.

A fourth railroad tanker that derailed contained carbon black.

Some of rails at the site were snapped in two by the weight of the 21,000-gallon tanker cars, but the tankers remained intact. None of the chemicals were spilled in the accident.

At the accident scene on Thanksgiving morning, Fire Chief J.D. Ray said even though none of the chemicals were spilled and the derailment was handled without incident by Santa Fe crews, the Fire Department should have been called.

"We would have preferred to have been there before something happened than to have acted after something happened," Ray said.

Darrell Nordeen, manager of safety, health and environment at Celanese, said both of the chemicals carried in the derailed tankers are slightly toxic and severe irritants to the eyes, nose, throat and upper respiratory tract. Butyric acid also can cause severe skin injuries.

Nordeen said the accident probably would have required evacuation of nearby areas if the tanker cars had been ruptured.

The Santa Fe crews worked until noon Thanksgiving Day to place the cars back on the track and repair the rails.

Even though the cars had not ruptured, Nordeen said emergency crews should have been contacted to monitor traffic and stand by in case a hazardous situation had developed.

Guard said Santa Fe should have notified Celanese to receive advice on handling the chemicals.

Santa Fe spokesman Bill Slaughter said at the scene that the city and Celanese weren't contacted because no structural damage was done to the tanker cars.

Santa Fe has been invited to participate in the CAER Committee formation and operations but has refused to do so.

CAER is composed of key officials from city, county and state governments and agencies, leaders and personnel from private businesses and industries, and other interested citizens. The committee has a goal of reviewing and enhancing emergency planning and coordination between local government agencies and the private sector.

Highlights

ped Oct. 14, 1985, after 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhenny ruled that Ott's alleged victim, one of her 15-year-old students, was "promiscuous by matter of law."

Hamilton secured more than 30 indictments alleging securities violations against former Bethany Trust leaders Thomas Etheredge and Timothy Borka and Etheredge's wife Debbie. Etheredge, who was arrested in Canada in February, also faces charges in Stinnett and Kansas City, Kan.

Pampa teen-ager Jesus DeLeon, 16, was sentenced to 30 years in prison in July after a jury found him guilty of murder in the Halloween party stabbing death of Pete Ontiveros.

A jury acquitted Pampa car lot owner Jerry Don Mackie in August of misapplication of funds charges because of an incorrect date on an indictment. The case marked Hamilton's only loss before a jury in Gray County.

A murder case against John Weaver, 30, is still pending after being set for trial since June. Weaver is accused of killing JoAnn Williams in her Varon Drive home last December.

In September, Hamilton secured a murder indictment against former Pampan Albert Branscum, of Konawa, Okla., charged with killing his wife in 1964. Authorities previously said a suicide attempt left Branscum a "mental vegetable" and his case was never prosecuted. Hamilton subpoenaed his boss, District Attorney Guy Hardin, earlier this month.

UT officials to suspend four

AUSTIN (AP) — Four members of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity, including the fraternity president, were told they will be suspended as a result of an investigation into the alcohol poisoning death of a pledge, the Austin American-Statesman reported today.

The other students also were reprimanded by

University of Texas officials after the six-week campus investigation into the September death of Mark Seeburger, unidentified sources told the newspaper.

Seeburger, an 18-year-old freshman from Dallas, died in his off-campus dormitory Sept. 18, a few hours after he was brought home from a Sept. 17 event described to police as a fraternity "ride."

PUC lowers interest

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission announced Wednesday that the interest rate on customer deposits held by utility companies will drop to 6 percent next year.

The interest paid on deposits this year is 7.29 percent. The rate is keyed to the average rate on one-year Treasury bills, which this year was below 6 percent, according to the commission.

However, PUC rules set 6 percent as the minimum interest rate on deposits.

Many utility customers, including those who have paid their bills on time, do not have to post deposits.

chance of developing one if we continue on course," Hollings said. "We are coming down into quicksand if Colonel North takes the Fifth and we give him immunity, and before long we catch the president. I prefer that he catch himself."

Asked what he meant by "catch the president," Hollings said: "Catch him at having given the authority generally and having known about it." He said he was "positive" the president knew of the Iran-Contra connection. He said he had reached that conclusion on his own and not as a result of testimony during the committee's secret sessions.

Reagan has said "flat out" he did not know of the arrangement to finance the Contras with the weapons proceeds until told about it by Meese a week ago.

In related developments:

■ An ABC News telephone poll found that nearly half of those surveyed believe Reagan should resign if it is learned he lied about his knowledge of the Iran-Contra program. Of 505 people interviewed Tuesday, 48 percent said he should step down if he lied and 48 percent said he should not. The survey had a margin of error of plus or minus 5 percentage points.

■ The Atlanta Journal-Constitution, in today's editions, reported Reagan last year personally asked Shimon Peres, then prime minister of Israel, to help secure the release of hostage William Buckley, cited in news reports to be the CIA's top anti-terrorism expert in the Middle East. Asked about the report, which cited unidentified Israeli officials, White House spokesman Dan Howard declined to comment. Buckley is reported to be dead, although no body has been located.

■ Documents obtained by The Associated Press show 406 tons of cargo were flown this year to an El Salvador airfield used by an American-manned Contra resupply operation by Southern Air Transport of Miami, which was once owned by the CIA.

■ The same planes and crews that carried non-lethal aid to the Contras also delivered weapons to the rebel fighters on other flights, The New York Times, quoting unidentified sources, said today. The flights occurred early in 1986, during a ban on U.S. military help to the rebels.

■ Nancy Reagan, regarded as a major influence on her husband's staff decisions, said she has made "no recommendations at all" on whether the president should fire any more of his aides.

■ Frank Carlucci, named by Reagan as his new national security adviser, once oversaw an unsuccessful undercover effort to harass Marxist South Yemen, The Washington Post reported today. Carlucci, deputy CIA director at the time, worked with British and Saudi Arabia in setting up the operation in 1979. The operation ended in 1982 when a team of CIA-trained Yemenis was captured trying to blow up a bridge, said the report, which quoted unidentified sources.

■ The CIA denied a report it commingled profits from the Iran sales in the same account with funds for covert support for rebels in Afghanistan. "The only funds related to the Iran program that passed through agency hands were the $12 million owed to the Pentagon for the arms," which was passed on to the Defense Department, CIA spokesman George Lauder said.

But The Washington Post, in today's editions, quoted an unidentified administration official as saying the commingling was a "dumb" decision by an overanxious CIA employee who was not willing to wait the several days required to establish a separate account for the Iranian money.

Farm delegates head home after 53rd annual meeting

MALLEN (AP) — Plainview farmer S.M. True says he's "suffering right along with everybody else" in agriculture.

But the five-term president of the state's largest farm organization also says actions by the Texas Farm Bureau this week leave him optimistic about the future of agriculture.

True, re-elected president of the TFB at the close of its 53rd annual convention Wednesday, called the delegates' decision to establish a political action committee a turning point for the group.

"I feel like we can use a PAC to the benefit of the Farm Bureau and the candidates who will support agriculture," True said.

"People have indicated they want us to move forward," True said.

Delegates affirmed their support for the 1985 farm bill and approved a 10-year plan of goals for the 323,799-member Texas Farm Bureau during their convention in the heart of the Texas citrus industry.

Delegates turned down a resolution calling for the governor to appoint the Texas agriculture commissioner and approved a series of resolutions that they will present to the Texas Legislature and Congress. Both convene in January.

Many of the delegates speaking for a PAC said it would give their resolutions more weight with lawmakers.

One supporter said having a PAC would make the TFB's policy manual "a fountain of legislative reform."

Paul Hopper of Howard County, in arguing for a PAC, said TFB policies would mean little without the power of a political action committee speaking for the depressed farm industry.

"Now we can be dynamic and influential," Hopper said.

Less than two dozen of the 1,150 delegates voted Wednesday against the PAC's formation.

"Let's go out with a unified front," Kay Chandler of Falls County said. "Let's get behind it 100 percent and show the rest of the people we can get together and look after our own interests and not ask someone else to do it for us."

"Why are we going to be on the field if we're not going to play the game," said Dean Schmidt of Lavaca County.

Delegates, considering a host of resolutions, voted in favor of raising the speed limit and making English the official language of Texas.

Farm Bureau members also voted for resolutions to keep Texas sales tax exemptions for farmers and in favor of a national supply management program to control milk production.

Delegates also approved such resolutions as:

- A requirement that all vehicles with Mexico license plates have proof of liability insurance when entering Texas.

- A cap on pain and suffering damages in certain lawsuits.

- Stricter regulations for transporting hazardous wastes in Texas.

- Preventing nuclear and toxic waste sites on agricultural lands or in areas with large underground water reservoirs.

- Higher fees for salt water disposal wells.

- A statewide referendum on a lottery.

- A state law allowing county-option pari-mutuel betting.

- Barring illegal aliens from public assistance and free schooling in Texas.

- State funding of programs mandated by the Legislature.

- Reverting to 1984-85 state spending levels.

- Against interstate banking in Texas.

- Turning as many state services as possible over to private enterprise if cost-effective.

- Cutting state services before raising taxes.

TFB directors re-elected John Baker of Temple as vice president and Neal Burnett of Plainview as secretary-treasurer.

Texas convict executed for 1977 Dallas slaying

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Convicted killer Michael Wayne Evans, asking for forgiveness, was executed early today in the Texas death chamber for killing a Dallas woman nine years ago.

"I want to say I'm sorry for the things I've done and I hope I'm forgiven," Evans said in his final statement as tears welled in his eyes. "I don't hold nothing against no one. Everyone has treated me well and I know it's not easy for them. That's all. I'm sorry."

The lethal dose was administered at 12:11 a.m. Evans cleared his throat a few times, but died peacefully. He was pronounced dead 10 minutes after being injected.

Evans, 30, an auto mechanic from Dallas, was sentenced to die for the June 1977 killing of Elvira Guerrero, a pianist at the Second Mexican Baptist Church in Oak Cliff.

The execution, the ninth in Texas this year and the 19th since the state resumed the death penalty in 1982, came after federal courts and the governor's office refused Wednesday to grant him a stay. Evans had two previous stays and two trials.

He was convicted of killing Ms. Guerrero, 35, who was abducted with her fiancé after leaving the church where she worked. She was robbed of $40 in church offerings, shot twice and then slashed across the eyes and throat with a carpet knife. Her fiancé, Mario Garza, a Mexican national, also was robbed of $12, then shot several times with a .22-caliber pistol Evans said he had stolen earlier.

Their bodies were found in a hayfield four days after they were reported missing.

"He was one of the sorriest human beings ever," said Kevin Byrne, a Dallas attorney who prosecuted Evans.

Evans, in a confession to Dallas police, said Ms. Guerrero asked God to forgive her attacker as she was being killed.

"I cut the lady from the bottom of her chin to her hairline above her forehead," Evans said. "I was trying to get her to quit talking."

Evans had refused repeated requests for interviews.

"He didn't seem like he was too worried," said Calvin Williams, a death row inmate who watched Evans being moved out of his cell Wednesday. "He had kind of a warm smile."

Evans' appeals were rejected Wednesday by a federal district judge in Dallas, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans and then the U.S. Supreme Court.

Lt. Gov. William Hobby, acting governor because Gov. Mark White is out of the state, also rejected a plea for a 30-day reprieve.

Attorneys contended Evans was insane. They also attempted to show Evans, who is black, was unfairly given the death penalty because of his race.

"I think he was sane," Attorney General Jim Mattox, who witnessed the execution, said.

Opponents demand report release

FORT WORTH — Opponents of Comanche Peak power plant are demanding the release of a report they say contains "extremely damaging conclusions" about the office of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission which oversees the plant, the Fort Worth-Star Telegram reported today.

The report by the NRC's Office of Inspector and Auditor is the result of an extensive investigation into the NRC Region IV office in Arlington, the newspaper reported in a copyright story.

The report was delivered last week to commission members and NRC Executive Director Victor Stello, agency officials said Wednesday.

NRC officials would not discuss contents of the report.

Region IV Director Bob Martin has not seen the report and could not comment on its contents Wednesday, said Gary Sanborn, regional-state liaison officer in the Arlington office.

Citizens Association for Sound Energy, a Dallas group that has fought licensing of the plant, sent a letter to the Atomic Safety and Licensing Board asking the board to obtain and release the report Wednesday.

The report "deals with serious deficiencies in the QA-QC (quality assurance-quality control) program at Comanche Peak and with serious problems with oversight of the plant by the Region IV office," the group said in its letter.

Peter Bloch, chairman of the licensing board, said he has asked for the report, but had not received a copy Wednesday.

The board, an NRC agency, will recommend to the five-member commission whether the plant near Glen Rose should be licensed.

Comanche Peak, nine years behind its original schedule of completion, carries a $7.7 billion pricetag, 10 times its original budget.

Mattox: TDC not responsible for baby costs

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Department of Corrections does not have to pay for medical care of a premature baby born to an inmate, according to an opinion issued Wednesday by Attorney General Jim Mattox.

The child was born three months premature and will need up to three months of intensive care hospitalization, TDC officials told Mattox in requesting the opinion.

Prison officials said they pay for routine deliveries of infants born to inmates. But TDC questioned whether it has the authority to pay the extensive medical costs associated with a premature birth.

Mattox said the state's Family Code says parents are responsible for a child's medical care.

Insurance board considers rate increase

AUSTIN (AP) — A 9.8 percent statewide increase in auto insurance rates in 1987 could be justified by decreases given the past two years, says State Board of Insurance Chairman Lyndon Olson.

The three-member board took under consideration late Wednesday a recommendation from its staff for the 9.8 percent increase plus the industry's demand for a 19.7 percent increase.

Attorney General Jim Mattox has contended that no increase is needed.

Olson said the board would study Wednesday's testimony and make a decision later. The effective date of any increase would be April 1, 1987.

Olson, who reacted several times during the daylong hearing to criticism from Mattox, stressed that the board had approved decreases in premiums the past two years — 3.8 percent for 1985 and 5.1 percent for the current year.

"Everybody tries to take the credit, but it was this board that gave those decreases," said Olson. "If we should decide to accept the staff recommendation that would mean people will be roughly paying what they did two years ago."

Mattox told a news conference Tuesday that the board should not grant any increase because companies could still make a profit if premiums were cut 9 percent for next year.

Olson also warned that the auto insurance may be "the next crisis" in the Texas insurance industry.

"Hopefully, the crisis in general liability insurance is beginning to work itself out," Olson said. "I'm concerned that two or three years from now the next crisis will be in auto insurance."

"This board is not going to allow the consumer to be kicked around but at the same time we want to keep the companies solvent," Olson said.

Olson commented after Gaylon Daniel, board actuary, said that about 60 percent of the companies in Texas are selling policies at lower prices than the maximum rates set by the board.

Insurance experts testifying for the industry said Texas insurance firms were not making excess profits and increased discounting of auto insurance policies indicated growing competition.

Mattox said Tuesday that insurance rates should be lowered because most drivers are wearing seatbelts and the drinking age has been raised from 17 to 21, resulting in a decreased traffic toll.

Daniel said the staff recommendation was based on an estimate of 65 percent compliance with the state's mandatory seat belt use law, compared with an estimate of 15 percent use before the law went into effect last year.

He said the staff recommendation allowed a 3 percent reduction because teen-age drivers can no longer legally buy liquor.

He said much of the increased cost of insurance was caused by mounting bodily injury claim awards and also an increase in the number of claims filed.

Olson said the increase in bodily insurance coverage would have been far greater if the staff had not given credit for use of seat belts.

"The stock companies and groups operating in Texas do not appear to be earning excessive profits," said Dr. John Worrall, Rutgers University economist.

"Even if the unrealized capital gains of the Texas writers are included, their after tax return on net worth was only 8.3 percent in 1985 as compared to utilities which earned 11.6 percent on net worth," Worrall said.

Pat Whatley, vice president of a Dallas insurance firm, said Olson was right about 65 percent of Texas insurance firms giving discounts on auto insurance in efforts to gain business.

Whatley said the statewide average deviation on auto insurance had increased from 6.6 percent in 1982 to 9.8 percent in 1985. He said there are some indications that deviations this year may have returned to 6 or 7 percent.

Speaker's advice: Sense of humor is crucial

AUSTIN (AP) — As they wrangle over the state's financial crisis next year, a sense of humor will be most helpful for legislators, House Speaker Gib Lewis said.

"A sense of humor is the best friend you have. Keep your sense of humor," Lewis told a Wednesday orientation session for newly-elected lawmakers.

It also helps to not to take oneself too seriously, Lewis said.

"Don't take yourself too seriously. And don't take anybody else too seriously, I might add," he said.

"Probably you think you're the most important person in the world because you just got elected. Let me assure you, there's 150 prima donnas down here (in the House) and there's 31 supreme prima donnas over in the Senate."

Lewis, who hopes to be elected House leader for a third time when the Legislature convenes next month, noted that Texas still faces a staggering financial crisis despite two special sessions this year which cut spending $750 million and raised taxes $960 million.

Comptroller Bob Bullock has predicted that lawmakers will face a $1 billion deficit for the rest of the current fiscal year and the possibility of a $4 billion shortfall for 1988-89.

"It's going to be a difficult time. We're going to have some shortfalls in our budget that we are not looking forward to. It's going to call for some very hard decisions to be made on your part," Lewis said.

Noting the presence of news reporters covering his speech, Lewis began by calling the Legislature "the world's largest fish-bowl."

He said lawmakers must keep their credibility with one another, the press and the public.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

SEC witch-hunt may hurt small investors

The super-sleuths at the Securities and Exchange Commission have bagged Ivan Boesky, point man of the current insider-trading scandal, but the problem (if it is a problem) isn't going to end here. More likely, the SEC's dramatic action will harm the very people the government is trying to protect.

While there is no doubt that Boesky violated the laws against insider trading as written, there is legitimate doubt about what those laws mean and the vigor with which the SEC prosecutes that vagueness.

Already the witch-hunt has begun, and the stock market initially took a dramatic tumble. Any drop in the market won't hurt the large investors nearly as much as the smaller ones. Yet the small investors are the ones the SEC claims to be hellbent on the protecting.

What's the point? The result, says SEC Chairman John Shad, is the preservation of the market's "integrity." Insider trading is the use of non-public information about a company, such as a pending takeover offer, to make investments on the stock market. If the many small investors believe a few large ones aren't playing fairly, Shad fears they simply won't participate.

Ensuring that integrity, however, is easier said than done. The whole idea of playing the market is to find an edge that allows an investor to foresee the future and make a trade that maximizes profit. Where to draw the line between an edge that is legitimate (based on exhaustive research of obscure, but nonetheless public, information) and one that is not legitimate (based on a tip from a company official) is the problem.

Why involve the SEC at all? According to Henry Manne, dean of the George Mason University School of Law, the market would be better off if the problems of inside information were governed by private contractual relationships rather than formal law. He suggests that publicly traded companies could declare their own policies against leaking or profiting from inside information and bring action against employees who violate them.

One advantage of that system would be that the people actually injured by inside trading would be able to collect some sort of compensation.

The Commission fined Boesky $100 million, half of which goes to the government treasury (the government is an injured party?). The other $50 million is for shareholders who sold their stock to Boesky while he knew something they didn't. But that happens all the time in the stock market. In the Boesky case, the sellers got exactly what they bargained for: a sale at their asking price. Now they're hiding behind the SEC's rules to gain a windfall profit.

The truly injured parties, the takeover firms that had to pay a premium price because of Boesky's illicit trading, can't collect under the current system.

The SEC might best protect the integrity of the stock market by leaving it to its own devices. At the very least it should clarify the rules. Witch-hunts almost always do more harm than good.

Bishops need dose of reality

WASHINGTON — The National Conference of Catholic Bishops recently voted 225 to 9 in favor of a 115-page pastoral letter called "Economic Justice for All." The bishops had worked for five years on the document. It wound up as a gassy combination of piety and politics. Let us hear a round of applause for the nine who voted "nay."

For the most part, the bishops' letter read like a platform of the national Democratic Party. It contained words of praise: "In its short history, the U.S. economy has grown to provide an unprecedented standard of living for most of its people." It contained words of condemnation: "The American experiment in social, political and economic life has involved serious conflict and suffering."

The letter pointed to accomplishments: "Through their government the people of the United States have provided support for education, access to food, unemployment compensation, security in old age and protection of the environment."

The letter deplored the lack of accomplishments: "Approximately 8 million people seeking work in this country are unable to find it. . . . Harsh poverty plagues our country despite its great wealth. . . . That so many people are poor in a nation as rich as ours is a social and moral scandal that we cannot ignore."

The bishops' political platform got down to specifics: "We believe Congress should raise the minimum wage. . . . The tax system should be reformed to reduce the burden on the poor. . . . We urge that the principle of progressivity be a central guiding norm in any reforms of the tax system. . . . National eligibility standards and a national minimum benefit level for public assistance programs should be established."

The letter calls for more economic planning. It calls on Congress to spend less on defense and more on public welfare. It asks for changes in lending policies of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund. It supports affirmative action programs to remedy racial discrimination. True to the rules of platform writing, the letter calls for new benefits for family farms, two-parent families and the unemployed. The general theme is to take from the rich and give to the poor. On such a platform Eugene Debs and Hubert Humphrey could have happily campaigned.

The bishops' letter recalls the long letter that Edmund Burke wrote in 1789 — the letter that turned into his justly famed "Reflections on the Revolution in France." Burke's point of departure was a sermon preached by a Unitarian minister, Dr. Richard Price, who had praised the revolutionaries. The sermon, said Burke, contained "some good moral and religious sentiments, and not ill expressed, mixed up in a sort of porridge of various political opinions and reflections."

Burke warmed to his theme in a passage for bishops to ponder: "Politics and the pulpit are terms that have little agreement. No sound ought to be heard in the church but the healing voice of Christian charity. The cause of civil liberty and civil government gains as little as that of religion by this confusion of duties.

"Those who quit their proper character to assume what does not belong to them are for the greater part ignorant both of the character they leave and the character they assume. Wholly unacquainted with the world in which they are so fond of meddling and inexperienced in all its affairs, on which they pronounce with so much confidence, they have nothing of politics but the passions they excite. Surely the church is a place where one day's truce ought to be allowed to the dissensions and animosities of mankind."

With deference to the Catholic bishops, let me add an amen to all that. Our relatively free economy is based upon a clear-eyed recognition of an eternal truth: Not all men are equal. Some are blessed with more talent, ambition and luck than others. Some poor will be always with us. The successes and failures of capitalism have indeed produced great concentrations of wealth; they also have produced in the United States the highest standards of living in the world. In much of the world, our poor would be rich as Rockefeller.

The bishops know the working of the marketplace by hearsay; they themselves, living well-fed and protected lives, are as innocent as kittens of economic risk and insecurity. When they involve the church in lobbying for changes at the World Bank and the IMF, all in the name of moral instruction, they trespass upon the boundary that wisely separates the pulpit from the political arena.

Looking for a good time?

My friend Rigsby, the lover, has had trouble getting dates lately, so he subscribed to one of those singles magazines you can find in all major cities.

They include a classified section in which both men and women — and whatever else is out there these days — advertise themselves for romantic interludes.

"At first," said Rigsby, "I thought this was the greatest thing since room service. You just thumb through the magazine, pick out what you like, and — voila! — the girl of your dreams."

"You sound as though it didn't work out that way," I said to Rigsby.

"The first ad I answered sounded just like the woman I wanted: 'Blonde bombshell with keen interest in the arts.'"

"And when you met her?"

"She was blonde OK, but she was also 4 feet 11 inches tall, weighed 280 pounds, with a tattoo on her left cheek that said, 'Born to Raise Hell.'"

"By 'cheek,' I asked Rigsby, 'do you mean...?'"

"Let me put it this way," he answered. "The first thing she did when I went to pick her up was moon me."

"What did you do then?"

"I ran."

"No, I mean did you answer any more ads in the magazine?"

"I was determined," said Rigsby. "The next one sounded terrific: 'Tall, sensuous redhead, looking for man who likes to walk on the wild side.'"

"And what happened with her?"

"She was into S&M."

"She beat you with a whip?"

"Worse. She tied me up and made me watch rock music videos. When she went to her bedroom to look for her spurs, I untied myself and got away."

"Surely, you decided not to answer any more ads after that," I said to Rigsby.

"I found one ad that seemed totally harmless," he said.

"What did it say?"

"Sweet, sensitive schoolteacher who wants meaningful, loving relationship with man who will not only love me, but my pets as well."

"And?"

"Ever try to get romantic in the same room with two boa constrictors named Arnold and Hazel?"

"But you kept trying?"

"I did. The next girl I called said she was 'The Girl Next-Door Type.'"

"Was she?"

"That was the problem," said Rigsby. "She turned out to be my neighbor, Hilda Weatherwax, who weighs 300 pounds and has a mustache. Some guy looked at her the wrong way in the laundry room one night and she stuffed him into the Speed Queen. He was in there for four cycles before the fire department came and got him out."

"Surely you stopped answering ads after that," I said.

"I answered one more. It said 'For a good time, call Gladys,' and we hit it off perfectly."

"So singles magazines do work," I said.

"What magazine?" Rigsby said. "I found Gladys' number in the phone booth at the bus station."

Love in the '80s isn't all that different. In a pinch, you still go back to basics.

West German growth reaches Berlin

By Don Graff

BERLIN (NEA) — It took a while longer for it to get started here.

The '50s and '60s were the years of the "Economic Miracle" in West Germany proper. That was when new cities and industries were rising from wartime rubble, when economic growth rates were setting annual records, when there were more jobs than Germans to fill them and "guest workers" were being imported wholesale.

Berlin during most of that period was a Cold War battleground, isolated from the miraculously recovering West, beset by blockades and divided politically — eventually also concretely.

But in more recent years the city has been experiencing something of a miracle of its own. Economic growth and new investment rates have been running ahead of the West German average for most of the '80s (although preliminary figures indicate that 1986 may show a slight slackening). The city has attracted new enterprises which, during the last two years, have created some 35,000 new jobs, a notable plus in an overall German economy in which high unemployment is virtually the sole serious problem.

This particular Berlin story has a heavy American accent. U.S. interests are the most important foreign investors in the city's economy. More than a score of U.S. firms are represented, including such heavyweights as IBM, ITT, Gillette and automakers GM and Ford, in the guise of their long-established German subsidiaries. It is estimated that operations in which the sole or major interest is American account for close to 10 percent of Berlin's industrial employment.

The U.S. government mission here is actively assisting the city's efforts to recruit more American money and activity. It is sponsoring promotional tours to acquaint expansion-inclined corporations with Berlin's considerable investment and tax advantages. The city also has structural advantages. It is a long-established technological research and development center with some 180 institutions, including two universities. It has a large skilled work force and a long industrial tradition.

While Berlin has been heavily industrialized since the middle of the last century, it has never been dependent upon heavy industry — iron and steel, heavy machinery and the others that are in bad shape now in West Germany as in other advanced economies. Berlin's leading activity has always been and still is electrical engineering and related activities.

This is what Berlin has and at the moment it is doing very well indeed.

Iran investigation proceeding, despite witnesses' silence

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are problems ahead when the president says he wants the truth to come out, when the attorney general says only two men know the full truth, and when those two say they're not talking.

President Reagan can say, as he did Wednesday, that "all Americans are entitled to have their questions answered" in the puzzling affair that saw profits from the sale of weapons to Iran flow to Nicaraguan rebels. And he can issue orders to that effect.

But even with a command that "there must be a full and complete airing of the facts," the president of the United States cannot waive another individual's constitutional right against incriminating himself.

Vice Adm. John Poindexter, the president's recently-resigned national security adviser, invoked his Fifth Amendment rights Wednesday in an appearance before the Senate Intelligence Committee just as Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, a principal figure in the diversion of funds to the Contras, had done two days before.

Last week, in disclosing the Iran-Contra linkage, Attorney General Edwin Meese III said North was the only person in the U.S. government who knew exactly what happened and that Poindexter "did know that something of this nature was occurring but he did not look into it further."

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., vice chairman of the committee, said the two men's testimony "could have made our lives easier, but it doesn't make it impossible. I was surprised only because it was said at the White House they would testify, but the White House cannot order anyone to give up their constitutional rights."

Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., the committee's chairman, said the panel would get the facts with or without Poindexter and North's testimony.

"Nobody has the whole story about this subject," he said. "Their refusal to testify will put a hole in the story, but we can work around it and fill it in and find out what happened."

Poindexter's lawyer, Richard Beckler, told reporters his client "serves the president and wishes to cooperate with every committee that wishes to investigate."

But he said in view of the expected appointment of an independent counsel and requests for testimony at other places he didn't specify, "I would be doing a disservice unless I asked my client to invoke his rights."

One way the Reagan White House could demonstrate its cooperation with the investigation is by not attempting to throw a cloak of executive privilege over presidential aides.

When Richard Nixon was confronted in 1973 during the developing Watergate scandal with demands that his closest aides testify before the Senate Watergate Committee, he sought to claim executive privilege.

The White House has not yet said what it will do, but if sources are correct that all requested documents have been supplied to the committee, it would not seem that executive privilege will be invoked.

McFarlane, who preceded Poindexter as national security adviser, testified before the committee Monday.

Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, former National Security Council aide, pauses to talk with reporters early today as he leaves his Great Falls, Va., home.

Blanket of soot warms North Pole

WASHINGTON (AP) — A layer of warm soot in concentrations sometimes heavier than that found near U.S. industrial areas may be raising temperatures around the North Pole, government scientists report.

A multi-national study of the haze which forms over the arctic in winter reported Wednesday that pollution around the North Pole sometimes exceeds that in the air off the heavily industrialized East Coast.

The arctic soot absorbs newly arriving sunlight, as well as light reflected from the icecap below, acting like a blanket that can increase air temperatures, reported Dr. Russell Schnell of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

"One pollution plume we encountered on a flight over the icecap off Barrow, Alaska, last March was the equivalent of five or six large power plants putting all their effluents in a single plume," Schnell said.

He said in a statement that the Alaska pollution "was about 100 miles wide and 1,000 feet deep, and when we first flew into it we thought we had flown into the plume of a volcanic eruption. We didn't believe the instruments on the aircraft."

The layer of arctic haze has been reported as much as 18,000 feet thick, and scientists have expressed concern about its warming the arctic climate, although they remain unsure of the exact effects.

The haze was first noticed in the 1950s, but scientific studies have begun to look at it closely only in recent years following reports of a reduction in the amount of pack ice in the arctic.

Direct evidence has not yet linked the melting ice to the haze, however, although scientists consider such a relationship a possibility.

In recent years the average surface temperature of the Earth has risen slightly, probably a result of the so-called greenhouse effect in which the increasingly polluted atmosphere traps more heat from the sun.

The arctic pollution probably moves north from industrial and chemical complexes in eastern Europe and Asia, said a statement issued by NOAA, the parent agency of the National Weather Service.

Fair Park a landmark

AUSTIN (AP) — Fair Park in Dallas, home of the Texas State Fair, has been designated a national historic landmark, an honor held by only 34 other sites in the state, the Texas Historical Commission announced Wednesday.

The designation by the National Park Service follows the fair's 100th anniversary and the state's Sesquicentennial celebration this year.

The landmark designation includes most of the grounds at Fair Park, officials said. Buildings include the Hall of State, a 1936 structure that was the architectural centerpiece of the Centennial Exposition. Also included are the Museum of Natural History, the aquarium, the Cotton Bowl and the music hall.

Judge approves prison lawsuit settlement

HOUSTON (AP) — An out-of-court settlement involving a discrimination lawsuit against the Texas Department of Corrections will provide women with many more job opportunities in the prison system, an attorney says.

U.S. District Judge Norman Black tentatively approved an agreement reached in a 1977 suit filed by K.K. Coble of Houston and Donna Beneze Riggs of Fort Worth. The judge also ordered the TDC to pay about $88,000 in costs and damages.

The agreement is set to receive final approval at a Feb. 20 court hearing.

"A whole lot of jobs have been opened to women," assistant Attorney General James C. Todd said Wednesday. "I hope the controversy is over."

The agreement expands a 1983 order by Black that forced the prison system to consider hiring women for all non-contact jobs, Todd said.

Fort Worth lawyer Art Brender, who represented both women in the case, said the agreement will open up 2,203 non-contact jobs to women along with many of the 3,147 jobs where contact can be avoided.

It also opens up higher-ranking jobs to women, Brender said.

Bentsen announces report on U.S.-Mexico trade

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal study details the failure of a series of government programs to spur economic trade between the United States and Mexico, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen announced Wednesday.

The study is the result of a year of probing by the U.S. International Trade Commission, carried out at Bentsen's request, which included a series of public hearings on U.S.-Mexican trade along the border.

"I think it is important, when you have some 82 million people there with an economy that's in trouble and you have reduced the standard of living of those people by over 30 percent in the last four years — that we do all we can to try to encourage trade between these two nations," said Bentsen, D-Texas.

In 1985, the United States was Mexico's most important trading partner, with U.S. exports there reaching $13 billion, or 66 percent of Mexico's total imports, and Mexican imports to the U.S. hitting $18.9 billion, or 70 percent of the country's total exports.

The federal study points out various flaws in the current programs, but it fails to recommend how the two countries should change policy to improve trade ties, Bentsen said.

"In coming months, however, I intend to call hearings of the Finance Committee on the ITC study to get recommendations on what legislation would be a workable approach to the problems the study describes," Bentsen said.

According to the study, legislation introduced in the last Congress to create 200-mile-wide revitalization zones on either side of the border may lead to reduced investment outside the 200-mile regions.

The principle feature of the bill is tax incentives for joint venture operations that locate within the 200-mile territory along each border and is the most ambitious of the government actions, the study states.

Included in the program would be non-border cities such as San Antonio, Corpus Christi and Los Angeles.

However, the program could draw business away from other regions in the country and unintentionally promote capital flight out of Mexico into the United States, both of which would cut into the ability of Mexico to repay billions of dollars in loans to U.S. banks, the study states.

The ITC border hearings also produced proposals for an increase in the number of Foreign Trade Zones in twin border towns to stimulate trade, including three Texas cities.

Foreign Trade Zones are not subject to trade or customs laws. Goods may be brought into them, processed, returned to the original country or exported without payment of duties or taxes.

Currently, Foreign Trade Zones are located in six Texas cities — El Paso, McAllen, Brownsville, Laredo, Del Rio and Eagle Pass — and are primarily used for storage and distribution rather than manufacturing.

But the study suggested that the expansion of the trade zones would not stimulate economic growth since any new cities that would be designated trade zones would be located in rural areas with small populations.

Productivity zones, which permit U.S. businesses within 15 miles of the border to hire Mexican workers at lower wages are not the answer because of various restrictions placed on them, the study suggests.

Baytown resident dies in plane crash

BAYTOWN (AP) — A 37-year-old man piloting his single-engine plane was killed when the aircraft hit some power lines, crashed into a ditch and burst into flames, authorities say.

The pilot was identified as James Savell of Baytown, said

J.D. Peyton, an investigator with the Harris County Medical Examiner's office.

Savell was the only person in the plane, which crashed about early Wednesday near Interstate 10, officials said. Some witnesses told authorities the man appeared to be trying to land the plane at about 2:15 a.m. on the interstate near the Baytown airport.

No injuries on the ground were reported, Harris County Sheriff's spokesman Tom Twardowsky said.

Hughes Offshore develops first subsea system in Gulf

HOUSTON (AP)—Keep it simple, make it reliable, build it fast and hold down the cost.

Those were the orders from Placid Oil Co. to the manufacturers of the oil production equipment for Placid's deepwater Gulf of Mexico project, said Bruce Crager, project manager for Hughes Offshore of Houston.

The catch is the nature of the project. It is the first system designed to operate in more than 1,500 feet of water and is the first subsea production system to be installed in the Gulf of Mexico, said Calvin Sholtess, executive vice president of Hughes Tool Co. "When installed, this system also will be the world's deepest system of this type."

Placid and its partners are developing a giant oil field located beneath 1,540 feet of water on Green Canyon Block 29, approximately 100 miles off the Louisiana coast. The field was discovered when oil prices were almost double the present $14-$15 a barrel, but Placid believed the project still was viable if development costs could be held to a minimum.

The Green Canyon production system is designed to handle up to 30,000 barrels of oil and 120 million cubic feet of gas a day.

"Placid didn't want to do any more research and development than necessary or build any prototypes if they could avoid it," Crager said. "They were looking for what works today, not what might work in 6,000 feet of water 10 years from now."

Hughes found the solution to many of Placid's need already on the shelf. Some equipment had to be modified for the specific application or fabricated into another configuration, but very little had to be invented, he said.

"Every effort has been made to simplify the subsea equipment and use standard, proven equipment wherever possible," Crager said.

The time frame on this project is unusually tight. Hughes received its contract barely a year ago and already is delivering the first pieces of equipment. Installation at the Green Canyon site should start in early 1987 so that production can begin later in the year.

Hughes Offshore has the largest chunk of work on the project, but it is not the only vendor. For example, Hughes is providing the template design and is supplying a number of operating systems, including wellheads, wellbay inserts, christmas trees, completion and workover riser and hydraulic control systems.

Saudis reportedly played key financial role

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saudi Arabia, playing a key role in a shadowy arms sales network with Israel, paid for most of the American weapons shipped to Iran, according to congressional and other sources.

"They've got the money and they are very deeply into it," a well-placed congressional aide said Wednesday. The aide, speaking on condition he not be identified, estimated the Saudi financial contribution at "in the hundreds of millions of dollars."

The Saudi connection added a curious twist to a complex affair. For several years, the oil-rich kingdom had been depicted as vulnerable to any spillover from Iran's war with Iraq.

The Saudis had lined up with most of the Arab world in backing Iraq against non-Arab Iran, paying for most of Iraq's weapons.

According to the congressional source, the Saudis also provided aid to anti-communist forces in Afghanistan, Nicaragua and Angola as a way of maintaining "good relations" with the United States.

Another source who also refused to be identified estimated the Saudis contributed a minimum of $60 million to $70 million, or about 70 percent of the cost of the packages of anti-tank and anti-aircraft missiles, and other military supplies. Iran paid $10 million to $12 million.

"We did not know about the whole thing, the negotiation between Washington and Iran concerning the arms deal until it has become public," said Habib Shaheen, spokesman at the Saudi Embassy.

And the State Department said Wednesday, "We have no evidence that would suggest the Saudi government was involved in selling arms to Iran."

But other sources tell a story of strange alliances that first took form with an unpublicized understanding between the United States and Riyadh in 1981 in which the Saudis promised to help anti-communist Moslem forces in Afghanistan.

The agreement was reached while the Reagan administration was pushing a controversial Saudi purchase of modern U.S. AWACS radar planes through a skeptical Congress. It was broadened in 1984 to include Central America, where U.S.-backed Contra rebels were waging a guerrilla war against the leftist Sandinista government.

As a result, when the Reagan administration decided a year later to provide American weapons to Iran through Israel, the U.S.-Saudi connection came into play.

According to the sources, who insisted on anonymity, a Saudi businessman and arms trader, Adnan Khashoggi, lined up Israeli dealers in the fall of 1985 with Manuchur Ghorbanifar, an Iranian weapons merchant with close ties to the Khomeini government.

Acting on a U.S. request for signs of moderation in Tehran, speeches marking the anniversary of the fundamentalist revolution took on a strident anti-Soviet tone but the usual anti-American rhetoric was absent.

The National Security Council accepted this as an indication of good will, then proceeded with the first shipment of American weapons and waited expectantly for the release of Americans held captive by the Islamic Jihad, an Iranian-backed group in Lebanon. One hostage, the Rev. Benjamin Weir, was set free.

While the U.S. arms flowed from the Pentagon to the CIA and then to Israel for shipment to Iran, the Saudis made payments to banks in Switzerland.

The Pentagon was reimbursed, shipping costs were covered, the dealers reaped an undetermined profit and funds estimated by Attorney General Edwin Meese III at $10 million to $30 million were deposited in an account for the Contras. It is not clear whether they ever got the money.

Khashoggi said in a statement issued from New York, "I have no official status with the government of Saudi Arabia nor have I acted in its behalf, directly or indirectly, in any matter relating to the sale or other transfer of arms to Iran, between the governments of Saudi Arabia and Iran, nor between the government of Saudi Arabia and the opposition forces in Nicaragua."

But a congressional source called the veteran dealer the key Saudi link, giving the Saudi government the means to "deny a connection" to the Iranian purchases. He said the Saudis helped the Iranians "out of fear" and that "it was a wise business arrangement" for them.

Another congressional source, also insisting on anonymity, said, "I know for sure the Saudis were financing the Iranians in the hundreds of millions of dollars."

The Saudis are not natural allies of the Khomeini government in Tehran. The royal family is at the conservative end of the Moslem spectrum. The ayatollahs are at the radical end.

Credibility damaged

(AP Laserphoto)

Vice President George Bush, conceding the administration's "credibility has been damaged," said Wednesday he fully supported the secret arms sales to Iran but knew nothing of the diversion of funds to the Contra forces.

GM investors are unhappy with deal

DALLAS (AP) — Some large institutional investors are studying ways to keep General Motors Corp. from spending at least $750 million to buy shares in the automaker held by H. Ross Perot and three long-time managers of Electronic Data Systems Corp.

They are unhappy that GM is paying Perot and his managers $60 per share for their Class E stock, more than double the current market value.

"It's unfair to shareholders," said Jose Arau, principal investment officer for the California Public Employees Retirement System, which holds 902,300 shares of GM worth $63.8 million. "Right now we're looking at writing letters or maybe suing GM. We're looking into all the possibilities."

He said, however, he expects many institutions to resist getting involved in costly complaints.

Arau and several other big investors want to be offered the same price, and want EDS to retain its top leadership, set to step down as part of the deal.

In 1984, GM bought the Dallas firm Perot founded in 1962. Perot became the largest single shareholder in GM in the 1984 transaction.

GM spokesman Bill Winters said this week's buyout is unique, and that the company has no plans for similar agreements with other Class E shareholders.

Perot has put into an escrow account his $700 million portion of the buyout until Dec. 15, in order to give GM a chance to change its mind, saying he does not consider the offer "the highest and best use" of funds for the automaker.

"It's a double loss," said George Reagan, who manages investments for the Texas Teachers Retirement System, which holds nearly 450,000 shares of GM. "We're not only losing $700 million, we're losing Ross Perot, too."

Although GM announced the buyout, it lost ground in the public relations arena by keeping a tighter control over information Monday than Perot, who held a press conference, said Ken Fairchild, a principal in the Dallas-based public relations firm of Fairchild-LeMaster Inc., which specializes in crisis management. GM's difficulties worsened, he said, when it failed to "explain who will benefit from this other than (GM Chairman and Chief Executive Officer) Roger Smith and the GM board."

Stephen McClellan, a Merrill Lynch vice president who has followed EDS for 10 years, said he expects more money to be coming out of GM.

"There's still another 14 million of those E shares and notes out there that didn't get offered the same terms Perot did (Monday), and I think it behooves GM to offer those noteholders the same deal it offered Ross," McClellan said. "I look for that to happen. That's another $800 million or so."

Four officers, 29 civilians charged with seeking coup

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The country's top prosecutor today charged four military officers and 29 other men with forming an extremist Moslem organization in an attempt to overthrow the government.

The indictment issued by Prosecutor-General Mohammed el-Guindi committed the 33 defendants to a state security court for trial. No trial date was set.

The indictment cited penal code articles under which, if convicted, the defendants could be sentenced to hard labor for up to 25 years. The indictment was distributed by the official Middle East News Agency.

A senior official at the Interior Ministry, which oversees public security, said the defendants were arrested about four months ago. He said the officers were members of the reserve, and not on active duty. The official spoke on condition of anonymity.

The indictment brought to more than 100 the number of Moslem extremists awaiting trial on charges of trying to overthrow the government.

However, it was the first time military officers have been charged in anti-government plots based on religion since Moslem extremists led by an army lieutenant assassinated President Anwar Sadat in 1981.

Special people send their season greetings

By PAUL ROWAN
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Holiday cards featuring Jane Layfield watercolors are $5.50 a dozen, but the artist invests far more than that in the work.

Ms. Layfield invests her movement, the product of energy drawn from a dwindling bank.

She has multiple sclerosis, a disease of the central nervous system in which nerve impulses from the affected part of the body to the brain are blocked by scar tissue on nerve fibers.

MS victims tire easily, Ms. Layfield said. They have less energy than most people.

"I know if I get going too hard or don't stop to rest, I'm going to pay for it," she said. "With MS, it takes you longer to get things done."

"It isn't that there aren't enough hours in the day; there isn't enough energy."

The Tarrant County Multiple Sclerosis Association is offering three different holiday greeting cards featuring reproductions of Layfield watercolors, along with one by John Williams, husband of an MS patient.

MS strikes different people in different ways. In Ms. Layfield's case, the disease has a slow progression rather than good times and bad times.

"Normally ... unless I tell them, people don't know I have it," she said.

Ms. Layfield doesn't know exactly how long she's MS.

"I think it was finally diagnosed in the early '70s, but as I look back it was far before that," she said.

MS is difficult to diagnose. Ms. Layfield finally was referred to a neurologist. By then she had started going numb from the waist down.

"The neurologist said it's either MS or a tumor on the spinal cord."

A myelogram (dye in the spinal canal) confirmed MS.

"Years ago ... they just said, OK, go sit down ...," she said, since there was not much medical treatment.

"I'm aware of changes (in abilities)," Ms. Layfield said. "It may be a matter of a year before something (a change) hits me because I work really hard at not thinking about it."

"You just don't dare dwell on it. You just don't."

That's where painting comes in.

"I've always loved it and I'm just thankful to have it. It's the best therapy in the world for me."

"There's no way you can think about anything else while you're painting."

"When I paint, I can't think of anything but the painting — which is wonderful."

Ms. Layfield said she began painting seriously in 1964, first in oils, then in watercolors. She attends workshops to improve her painting; she can't last through all-day events, but can catch up later.

And she is, she said, strictly amateur, though she has occasionally sold her work at "starving artist" shows.

"This is strictly a hobby. If I was trying to do it to make money I'd starve to death."

The scenes (the snow is a remembrance of her years in Ohio, not the past 25 in Texas) are her first in card form.

"I'm delighted that I would be asked and that they will help with the fund-raising," Ms. Layfield said. "But I look at them and say, oh, I wish I could do them over again."

Good will smothers abandoned boys

EDITOR'S NOTE — The flood of aid that poured in to help the seven O'Kelley brothers, left alone when their mother and grandfather died and their father abandoned them, astonished their local benefactors. But the boys are still waiting for the happy ending. Along the way, they've become guarded, even suspicious, having watched good will turn to resentment and misgivings.

By TAMARA JONES
Associated Press Writer

GAINESVILLE, Ga. (AP) — The O'Kelleys were seven abandoned boys trying desperately to scrape by. Their trailer was a firetrap, dinner came from a can and threadbare clothes were handed down from brother to brother. The mailbox overflowed with their runaway father's bills.

The Hodges were a successful young couple living on the other side of town. Active in their church and community, they had plenty of friends, a beautiful home and the best of intentions.

What happened after these two families came together is both heartwarming and heart-breaking.

It is a Thanksgiving story about giving too much. It is a story of generosity gone astray, of hopes gone awry.

"All we wanted was to be together," said Terry O'Kelley, at 19 the eldest brother. But, still, they're not.

Terry was just 15 when his mother died of a brain tumor. The last thing she told her eldest son was to "take care of the boys" and feed her mongrel dog, Bill. "I will," Terry promised.

The brothers ended up living with their grandfather in a ramshackle trailer on his 7½-acre farm, where they helped the old man till his garden and tend his chickens. In September 1985, he died of a heart attack.

The boys' alcoholic father showed up long enough to sell the chicken houses for scrap lumber, clean out the bank accounts, buy and wreck a new Buick and bounce some checks he had stolen from Terry before he disappeared again. He has since been imprisoned for three years on a conviction for child abandonment and theft.

Dunning notices started to mount for unpaid bills — medical care, farm payments, tombstones for his mother and grandfather. The O'Kelleys were $33,000 in debt.

Terry, by then barely 17, and Tommy, a year younger, quit school to work 60-hour weeks in poultry plants to make ends meet, but they never did, and last spring, Terry reluctantly placed his four youngest brothers in a foster home.

A friend of Terry's working at Jack Hodge's poultry distributorship told his boss of the O'Kelleys' plight. Curious, Jack asked to meet Terry. Bit by bit, the shy teen-ager confided in the 30-year-old businessman.

Terry O'Kelley didn't ask for anything.

The Fund for Seven Brothers was launched by the First Presbyterian Church that Jack and Martha Hodge attended. The local paper ran a front-page story, and donations started coming in.

At first, they were modest. One woman brought by some banana pudding. Somebody donated used furniture. A store provided blue jeans, and a barbershop offered free haircuts.

In August, a fire sparked by faulty wiring destroyed the trailer and all the new treasures, and the story attracted reporters from national news organizations.

Terry, Tommy and 16-year-old Charles moved in with the Hodges. On weekends, they saw the "little guys" — David, 15; Jeffrey, 14; Michael, 11, and Jason, 8.

"We all had fun," recalls Martha Hodge, a 27-year-old travel agent.

Suddenly, the O'Kelleys were free to enjoy childhood. There were birthday parties and matinees, cookouts and shopping sprees.

Martha fed them blueberry pancakes. Jack let them take turns piloting his father's pontoon boat on the lake.

Gradually, the rambunctious boys with Huck Finn grins came to trust, perhaps even love, the Hodges.

"Whenever they went somewhere, they'd always bring you back a little something. They brought me a jewelry tree and a little shrimp boat from a garage sale," Mrs. Hodge said.

On the Hodges' fifth wedding anniversary, the boys chipped in to buy them a silver bowl engraved with everyone's name.

Meanwhile, the national publicity brought an avalanche of good will. The Fund has grown to almost $100,000. The North Georgia Homebuilders' Association has built a four-bedroom house, at no cost to the O'Kelleys, on the chicken farm. A philanthropist wants to set the boys up in the poultry business. Debts have been paid off or forgiven.

The gifts keep pouring in — a case of toothbrushes, 13 pairs of sneakers, a trip to Disney World, a car for Terry. New furniture, china, linens, a case of paper towels. About $250,000 worth of help in all, Hodge estimates.

Hollywood types began hounding Terry for the screen rights and a parade of "do-gooders" trekked to northern Georgia, including a flashy, self-described Florida millionaire who took the boys cruising in a limousine and a Wisconsin man who sold his home in the vain hope of moving into the new house as a foster parent.

The crescendo came in October, when the Hodges and seven fidgety O'Kelleys found themselves at an Atlanta political rally where President Reagan himself was hailing Jack and Terry as "authentic American heroes."

To outsiders, it might have seemed the O'Kelley brothers had everything, that their happy ending had arrived.

Instead, the Reagan salute brought the first hints of trouble. Hodge and the O'Kelleys were leaving the rally, still basking in the attention, when one of the boys remarked, "Jack Hodge wouldn't be here if it weren't for the O'Kelleys."

There were other signs, too, as the number of people whom Terry describes as bureaucrats and do-gooders tried to assert control over the lives of seven youngsters who had become overnight celebrities.

The younger boys "started taking things for granted and were getting spoiled," Terry said. At one point, Charles broke out in nervous hives.

Schaffer, Reim bring variety to comedy

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

In Woody Allen's Don't Drink the Water, a New York caterer and his family find themselves in the wrong place at the wrong time doing the wrong thing while touring Russia.

But such is not the case for actors and roommates Nicholas Schaffer and Alyson Reim, who appear in the Country Squire Dinner Theater production of the 20-year-old Woody Allen comedy. The play, which runs through January, opened in Amarillo in November almost 20 years to the day after it opened on Broadway.

Schaffer and Reim, who are sharing an apartment during the play's run, bring a variety of acting experiences to the production. He is a California-based television actor with a recurring role as a delivery boy and comic relief in the soap opera General Hospital and such TV credits as Cagney and Lacey, St. Elsewhere and Hill Street Blues. She's a North Carolina native who has appeared on stages throughout Texas, Tennessee, North Carolina and Florida.

"I'm a late bloomer," Schaffer said. "My acting started when I did productions at Ball State University in Indiana. Then I appeared on The Gong Show (a 1970s game show where celebrity judges rate contestants' talent and "gong" them if the contestants have none) and singer Jaye P. Morgan gonged me."

After that appearance, which netted him $300 despite his apparent failure to impress the judges, Schaffer joined an improvisational comedy group in Los Angeles. Schaffer said his seven-year stint with that group helped him develop a good sense of comic timing.

Meanwhile, on the east coast, Reim was developing her career through regional and dinner theater. She got her acting bug at a much earlier age than Schaffer.

"I started acting in the fifth grade, but I didn't get into it seriously until college," Reim said.

Reim finds regional theater exciting although she admits even the "stars" of regional theater are not as well known as the supporting characters of television.

"We have people in regional theater who are real well-known in the craft," she said. "The exciting work is done at the regional level."

At their temporary home, Schaffer's and Reim's biggest challenge is watching television.

He likes to talk back to the set; she keeps quiet.

But on stage, the duo is faced with keeping their nightly performances fresh for six weeks.

In the Amarillo production, Schaffer plays Axel Magee, the son of the American Ambassador to the Soviet Union. He has to run the place while Pop is away on assignment. Magee is busy making a mess of things when the Hollander family — Walter, Marion and grown daughter Susan — rush into the embassy to seek refuge. It seems Walter was caught shooting tourist pictures of a top secret location and now the KGB is after him. Now Magee must find a way for the Hollanders to escape.

Reim plays mother Marion Hollander, who has to deal with a budding romance between Magee and her daughter.

"Although it's 20 years old, it really is a timely play because of the recent Daniloff thing," Schaffer said, referring to the KGB arrest and release of magazine reporter Nicholas Daniloff.

The actors are challenged not only by the length of the run but also by the length of the rehearsals — one week between first reading and opening night. But Schaffer and Reim say they are used to it.

Experts predict no major changes in men's fashions

NEW YORK (AP) - More men will have cuffs on their trousers this fall and winter, but styles of the past few seasons will still be in vogue, reports the head of a merchandising consulting firm here.

In suits, the traditional "Yuppie-Investment Banker" look, especially in shades of gray and blue, will remain popular, says Marvin A. Blumenfeld, president of April-Marcus Inc., which represents men's stores around the country.

"Non-vent clothing and double-breasted suits are resurfacing on the fashion scene," he says. "Dress shirts will be 70 percent solid, with pink, blue, tan and gray almost as popular as white."

Sportcoats, Blumenfeld predicts, will continue to have the unconstructed look popularized by the "Miami Vice" television show, but they will be more tailored. In addition, the blazer, still an important staple in the male wardrobe, will be seen more frequently in other colors as well as the traditional blue.

Tweed sportcoats will retain their appeal, he says, but they will be lighter. As for slacks, he says that pleated pants are coming on strong and that bottoms are getting slightly narrower.

"In overall sportswear, the easy relaxed look will prevail," Blumenfeld says. "Items like rugby shirts will be prominent in most wardrobes and formality in leisure wear will be all but nonexistent. Important fabrics will be heavy cottons, blends and fleece-like fabrics."

"All in all, during their leisure time most men will have that easy, relaxed Sunday-in-the-park look."

Make sure your shopping list has all the right stuff

DEAR READERS: Well are the Christmases getting closer together or does it just seem that way? It's time to start preparing for the holidays again, so do yourselves a favor and do your Christmas or Hanukkah shopping early.

Here's my annual — slightly revised — column on holiday shopping:

If you're wondering what to give Aunt Olivia or Grandpa, who doesn't go out much, let me tell you what not to give them:

Forget dusting powder, aftershave and cologne. (They probably have several unopened boxes gathering dust on their closet shelves.)

Grandpa doesn't need another necktie, and Aunt Sylvia doesn't really want any more brooches, necklaces, bracelets or earrings.

With the price of groceries so high, older folks who live alone on a fixed income would be delighted to receive a basket of goodies. Include small cans of salmon, chicken, ham, tuna, vegetables, fruit, instant coffee, tea bags, crackers, cookies and instant soup mixes.

Older people who live in confined quarters do not need more "things" that are ornamental but statuettes or other bric-a-brac.

A truly thoughtful gift: postcards and some lined stationery with envelopes and a generous supply of postage stamps. (Enclose some felt-tip pens, too.)

A handy gift: an assortment of greeting cards for all occasions, so that they, too, can send birthday, anniversary, graduation, get-well and condolence

Dear Abby

cards to others. (Be a sport and affix postage to some of the envelopes.)

Don't give a gift of clothing unless you're absolutely sure the size is right. That goes for color and style, too.

If you're tempted to pass along a scarf, purse, wallet or some little doodad you received three Christmases ago, please don't; the recipient will probably find it just as useless as you did. (Besides, you might get it back the year after next.)

If you are aware that someone on your gift list is living on a pension, a check for any amount would be much more appreciated than some useless little trinket. Another thoughtful gift would be a year's subscription to a newspaper or magazine you are sure he or she will enjoy.

If you buy a gift on sale, be sure it's appropriate, since if the recipient tries to exchange it, he will be told, "Sorry, sale merchandise is not returnable."

Never give a pet to anyone unless you're absolutely sure a pet is wanted and will be properly cared for. And if you want to delight someone who considers his pet a "member of the family," include a tin or two of cat or dog food for the pet.

Don't give wine or liquor unless you're sure the recipients imbibe. Candy, nuts and fruitcake make wonderful gifts for those who aren't counting calories, but please have compassion for those who are, and lead them not into temptation. Also remember that many older people have difficulty chewing hard candies and nuts. And nutritionists caution: "Lay off sugar and salt."

Instead of giving someone a gift with permission to "take it back and exchange it if it's not what you want," save yourself (and them) time and effort by giving gift certificates in the first place.

The rising cost of long-distance telephone calls restricts many older people from making them, so a practical and thoughtful gift would be a gift certificate from their telephone company.

For those who maintain their own homes and apartments, consider a gift certificate for other types of service needed — window washing and rug cleaning. And don't forget certificates for the barber shop, beauty parlor, taxi rides or a dinner out to a fine restaurant. And (don't laugh) a trip to the podiatrist!

Holiday time can be depressing for people who are alone, so if you know someone who might be alone and lonely, give him (or her) the best gift of all — an invitation to have a holiday meal with you and your family. Loneliness is the ultimate poverty. Love,

Blass welcomes new femininity

By Mary Martin Niepold

In the 1987 spring collections, strapless tops, backless backs, long sinewy legs, well-nipped waists and flowered, ruffled and gaily colored silk, taffeta and lace told the tale on one runway after another.

For Bill Blass, it was like a homecoming. His runway glistened with body-sculpted sheaths, nostalgic portrait gowns and short cocktail dresses, as well as tailored clothing — worsted wool suits that never looked mannish, thanks to short, straight sexy skirts or full skirts sometimes edged with lace petticoats.

In his Seventh Avenue office Blass talked about the new drop-dead femininity. "Designers have said for years that clothes are more feminine, but never before in recent memory have clothes been quite so young and so pretty and so feminine."

"I think people are rather tired of wardrobes filled with dour, sad clothes that are long, in somber colors. So for spring, you'll see short clothes with bright colors, and even if the suit is gray, it will have a white petticoat or a white blouse which will give women a whole new aspect of what spring clothes should look like."

Legs, said Blass, are a sign of this new femininity. "We have neglected legs with long skirts and pants for several years, and now we're seeing skirts that are just grazing the knee, depending on the woman's age and whether it's appropriate."

Asked how his spring collection differs from previous collections, he replied: "I personally am tired of going to parties and seeing women in such somber, plain dresses. Even the wonderful, heavy crepe dresses we've had for the past few seasons suddenly are going to give way now to the short and even the long taffeta dress. More of the romantic ballroom aspect. As embroidery diminishes, it has to be replaced with something as an embellishment. Now it's fabric."

He cites Christian Lacroix, designer for the House of Patou in Paris, as a major influence.

"He (Lacroix) brought back fantasy at a time when Saint Laurent had ceased to do fantasy clothes and when nobody in this country was doing them, and he brought them back with such a strong appeal." Blass also complimented the "great wit and imagination" of Lacroix's accessories — cone-shaped hats and 12-foot-long scarves, for instance.

Blass's personal favorites in his own collection are his full-skirted gray suits with petticoats and those with above-the-knee straight skirts that "had something going on in the top," such as fly-away jackets with double tiers in the backs. For evenings, he likes his gowns in taffeta and his long pink crepe sheath with a high

ULTRA-FEMININE fuchsia silk taffeta beauty by Bill Blass is wrapped in tiers of pleated ruffles. The waist is sashed in a self bow.

FLY-AWAY jacket in black and white wool check has wide, square shoulders. Bow neck blouse is trimmed in white pique.

ruffled neck in black point d'esprit.

"I think the period of a woman replacing clothes in her wardrobe with the same or similar suit or evening dress is over. I think now what she wants is something that will truly give her a great deal of inspiration and make her feel new," he says.

Who is the Blass customer? "It's a woman that I feel firmly is a leader in her community. Whether she works or not is not necessarily the point, because if she doesn't have an actual job, then she does a great deal of charity work or work that amuses her and interests her. She's not a woman who spends all her time shopping. She's a woman who cares a great deal about her figure and makes sure her skin and hair and body are in good shape. The clothes don't dominate her."

She's also has a checking account to accommodate three- and four-digit Blass price tags.

I like to see a woman put on something of mine, and if it's an evening dress, go out and have a hell of a time.

Wrinkle Cream Great Success

YOUNGER-LOOKING SKIN AT ALL AGES. Pharmacist Robert Heldfond (shown above in a JCPenney cosmetic department) is telling three different decades of women that his wrinkle cream, EB5, will help them.

It's an exciting story of a pharmacist who developed a wrinkle cream for which women all over the country are clamoring for.

Robert Heldfond is making cosmetic history with his EB5 Cream. His dream since Pharmacy School has resulted in a wrinkle cream which is enjoying record sales in department stores and is praised very highly among cosmeticians and customers.

Research lab tests show that by daily use of EB5 Cream, morning and night, facial lines around the eyes, on the forehead, and around the mouth are smoothed. Thousands across the country are so pleased to find that EB5 is 5 creams in one jar... EB5 is a wrinkle cream, a day and night cream, a moisturizer, an eye cream, and a make-up base... all in one.

Pharmacist Heldfond's EB5 Cream is greaseless and leaves the skin soft, velvety and younger looking. It contains Liprogen and other effective ingredients.

If you are concerned about your skin appearing to be aging too quickly, hurry and find some EB5 Cream. One 4 OZ. jar lasts for months and is sold with a money-back guarantee.

Note: EB5 Cream is available in most JCPenney Stores with cosmetic departments.

Preston Smith makes a point during Mustang workouts.

Wheeler's 'Steel Wall' meets Sunray offense

By JOHN GERDEL Jr.
Sports Writer

WHEELER — There's an air of quiet confidence in the Wheeler Mustangs lockerroom this week. Perhaps its because they know their Friday night foes, the Sunray Bobcats.

The Mustangs bring their "Steel Wall Defense" to Pampa's Harvester Stadium at 7:30 p.m. Friday to test the improved offense of Sunray.

The last time the Mustangs and the Bobcats tangled, Wheeler came out on top 28-19, but that was six games, and several eons, ago.

While Wheeler was shutting down Wilson 21-0 last week, the Bobcats ended Wink's season in a decisive fashion 40-7. That 33-point difference may be the reason Sunray is a two-point preference this week, according to the Harris Ratings.

Wheeler head coach Preston Smith watched the Sunray-Wink game in Levelland last Saturday and saw some definite improvements in the Bobcats.

"They're an improved football team," Smith said in an interview Tuesday. "The area they have improved in more is their offense."

"They are doing a lot of things, they've got a lot of confidence, they are on a roll," Smith continued.

But can the "Steel Wall Defense," which has allowed only one touchdown in the past four games, hold an offense that scored 19 points on the Mustangs six weeks ago and 40 points last week?

"We've played four straight good defensive football games," Smith said. "I think that's the key to winning in the playoffs, playing good defense, but our offense has improved, too."

Dickie Salyer, a running back, was supposed to be one of the keys to the Mustang success this year, but an early season injury kept him on the sidelines until last week when he played some defensive downs against Wilson. He may see action this week in a similar capacity, but Smith doesn't expect him to be able to play offensively.

"I don't see how he could do that right now. The knee is better, but it's not good enough to the point that I think we ought let him run on it," Smith said. "It will be a day-to-day thing and hopefully we can get him back."

"I wouldn't think he would be able to run on it this week," Smith added.

Needless to say, some folks had to take up the slack left when Salyer was injured or the Mustangs wouldn't be playing football in December.

"We've got two guys that have been doing a pretty effective job," Smith said. "They are not either one of Dickie's caliber, but they are both adequate running backs and if they'll perform and we'll block for them, we'll be able to be in the football game."

Smith, of course, was talking about Cody Wiggins and Bubba Smith.

"Cody Wiggins has done a good job, and Bubba Smith," Smith said. "They've complimented one another. One's kind of a finesse runner and the other's a little bit of a power runner. They are doing an adequate job there."

While watching the Wilson game film, Smith also spotted another improvement.

"Our offensive line did a better job last week," Smith said. "That's something that happens this time of year. The offense really does come on."

"They know how to pick up situations that occur on the field that you don't anticipate before a ballgame or cover enough," Smith continued.

"They have got enough maturity now to adjust to those situations themselves. That's one of the areas we are better at."

After giving up 48 points in two weeks to Sunray and Booker, the Mustang defense has turned around and delivered three shutouts in the last four games.

"I really don't know how to tell you why they are any better, it's mostly the same guys out there," Smith said. "They're just playing a little harder."

"Sometimes after a loss like we had in the Booker football game ... it'll kind of perk your ears up and make you work a little bit better," Smith said. "That's what our kids have done, and, maybe, they've grown up a little bit since that football game."

"Richard Smith played excellent middle linebacker and he's our leading tackler," Smith said. "Our defense is designed for our middle linebacker to do that, but he really played exceptionally well."

"Our secondary came up with three interceptions and the linebacker had one, so when you get all those things, it's kind of hard to just single out one player as exceptional," he added.

"Our down people defensively, played better and we had a little different philosophy going into the game than we had before," Smith explained. "We played more of an attacking type defense as opposed to what we normally do, ... a reading defense and a containing defense."

"We gave them a chance to be a little bit more aggressive and they responded."

And who's going to win Friday night?

"It will be like any football game where the teams are evenly matched. It will be the team that avoids the costly errors ... the team that can keep the offense going, the team that can make the best adjustments at halftime, the team that doesn't mess up its kicking game. That's basically where high school football games are won," Smith said.

One of Smith's favorite quotes has to do with the difficulty of beating a team for the second time in a season. Are the Mustangs ready for a second round with Sunray?

"I hope we are," Smith replied. "They've got a good football team and they know what we do. We're not going to fool them much."

"I understand they are changing their offense some and putting a lot of new stuff on. We're just going to try to line up and be as sound as we can defensively and play as aggressive as we can," Smith said.

back mostly," Sword said, "because he's the one that hurt us last time on the option keep. He's fast, he's a good quarterback, but I think we can stop him this time."

It was the first game of the season for Pampa Red, who were led in scoring by Sammy Lowry's 16 points. Jeff Young added 8.

Gomez was Borger's high scorer with 15 points.

Pampa Blue upped its record to 2-0. Paul Brown topped Pampa in scoring with 14 points while pulling down 5 rebounds and handing out 5 assists. Randy Nichols chipped in 8 points.

Lee Kistler was top scorer for Borger with 12 points.

In eighth-grade action, Pampa split games with Borger.

Pampa Red, led by Patrick Jackson's 15 points, won over Borger White 38-30.

Pampa Blue lost to Borger Red 46-37. Coby Harris led Pampa with 17 points, followed by Quincy Williams with 10.

Pampa Red has a 1-0 record while Pampa Blue is 1-1.

Wheeler, Mustang coaches to test different philosophies

WHEELER — Friday's game game between Wheeler and Sunray will, among other things, be a test of two different coaching philosophies. The Mustangs depend on sound fundamental football.

Sunray has a different approach, Wheeler head coach Preston Smith indicated.

"They basically run the football," Smith said. But that is where the similarity ends.

"They have multiple formations they run out of. They shift from formation to formation after they come to the line of scrimmage," Smith said. "They've got three good backs that have all gained near a thousand yards."

"They'll lull you to sleep, then they'll throw the pass and hurt you if you don't stay awake back there and play the pass," he warned.

The Bobcat defense takes on a variety of appearances, too.

"They change up a lot defensively, too," Smith said. "They stunt a lot defensively."

"Basically they are a five-man front on defense, but sometimes they will have three linebackers, sometimes they'll have two linebackers," he explained. "They adjust around where they line up and they stunt a lot."

Danny Chisum, head coach of the Sunray Bobcats, is worried about mistakes and turnovers.

"We can't make the same mistakes we made last time," Chisum said in a telephone interview Wednesday night. He added that the Bobcats suffered several costly turnovers.

"We've got to get better field position. We started several drives inside our 20," he added.

One of the keys to better field position will be Stacy Nelson, the Bobcat kicker who missed the previous game with Wheeler. He has a 41-yard field goal to his credit this season, according to Chisum.

"This is going to be an all new ball game," Chisum predicted. "They didn't have Bubba (Smith) and Dickie (Salyer) and we didn't have Nelson."

And Chisum seems to be impressed with the Wheeler fundamental approach.

"They don't do a lot of fancy stuff," Chisum said. "They do what they do real well."

Tech's McWilliams remains secretive about Texas job

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Tech football Coach David McWilliams says there will be no announcement today concerning a possible move to the University of Texas, "because there is nothing to announce."

But when asked if that meant he would not move to Texas, McWilliams answered, "I didn't say that. I just said there's nothing to announce."

Speculation has centered on the longtime UT assistant, who became head coach at Texas Tech a year ago, since Fred Akers was fired Saturday.

McWilliams, in Pasadena to speak at a high school football banquet, confirmed he met for three hours Wednesday with Texas Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds in Dallas.

McWilliams said he would return to Lubbock today to talk with his family, Texas Tech Athletic Director T. Jones and the Red Raider team.

"I'm a loyal person," McWilliams said. "Maybe that's my problem."

"I would be disappointed in myself if I didn't have loyalty to Texas Tech ... and of course, there are all my ties to Texas. I spent 26 years there and it means a lot to me."

McWilliams moved to Texas Tech this season and led the Red Raiders to a 7-4 record and Independence Bowl bid.

"First, I want to go home and see my family — we make all decisions together, and that's the way it's going to be with this one."

"We'll make the decision, then I'll talk to Mr. Jones, and then make an announcement. Probably, it will be no later than Sunday — that's when we (Tech) start practicing for the Independence Bowl."

The Austin American-Statesman reported Wednesday that sources indicated Arizona State Coach John Cooper also was interviewed for the job.

ASU Coach John Cooper was out of town Wednesday and could not be reached for comment by the Associated Press.

But ASU Athletic Director Charles Harris said, "To the best of my knowledge there has been no official contact between John Cooper and the University of Texas."

Harris said no request seeking permission to interview Cooper had come from Texas athletic director DeLoss Dodds or any other Texas representative.

"John (Cooper) understands where Arizona State is and certainly our desire to keep him here, and that's about all I can say," Harris said.

In Austin, Dodds said twice that no deal had been reached for a new head coach.

"I'm still anticipating the end of the week," he said, Wednesday morning. "It would be hard for us to do anything Thursday, and I've said all along it would probably be the end of the week before we are able to announce anything."

At a UT basketball game Wednesday evening, Dodds repeated the message, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported.

Several other names besides McWilliams and Cooper have been mentioned as possibilities for the Longhorn job, including Larry Smith of Arizona, Fisher De Berry of Air Force, Mike Shanahan, an assistant with the Denver Broncos and Allen Lowry, a Dallas Cowboys assistant.

Meanwhile, the American-Statesman also reported Wednesday that Akers and his wife, Diane flew to West Lafayette, Ind.; Wednesday for an interview with the selection committee of Purdue, one of Akers' closest friends said.

The vacancy war created last months when Boilermaker Coach Leon Burnett resigned.

TCU holds off North Texas State

By The Associated Press

What started as a basketball game quickly became a long-range artillery barrage.

And Jim Killingsworth didn't like it a bit because his Texas Christian University Horned Frogs were the targets.

Texas Christian survived a North Texas State three-point bombardment Wednesday night and went on to defeat the Eagles 92-85 in a nonconference basketball game.

The Eagles hit 13 of 23 shots from three-point range. Guard Glenroy Ferguson sank eight of 13 three-pointers for a career-high 35 points.

But Texas Christian dominated the boards and threw up a zone defense in the second half to halt the barrage.

In other games involving Southwest Conference teams, Arkansas beat Mississippi 70-56, Baylor defeated Tarleton State 85-56 and Texas rolled past Central Missouri 88-60.

The Horned Frogs, 2-2, used their muscle under the boards, out-rebounding the Eagles 60-28. North Texas, 1-1, missed six of its first seven three-pointers in the second half.

"We've got the game back to where it started with a peach basket on the wall down at the YMCA," said Texas Christian coach Jim Killingsworth, referring to the three-pointers. "All you need to do is jack it up and click your heels together. It's like a Chinese fire drill. Something has to be done."

Arkansas Coach Nolan Richardson said he knew his Razorbacks were a time bomb ready to explode, and William Mills proved to be the fuse.

Mills came off the bench to score 18 points and grab 12 rebounds to spur Arkansas over Mississippi.

Mills scored 14 of his points in the second half as the Razorbacks improved to 3-0. The Rebels of the Southeastern Conference fell to 1-1.

"We are like a time bomb," said Richardson, who is in his second year at Arkansas. "We can explode and we did it again tonight."

In the last two Arkansas games, the Razorbacks have outscored their opponents 92-56 in the second half to post come-from-behind victories.

Darryl Middleton scored 21 points and Brandon Taylor added 15 to lead Baylor over Tarleton State. The Bears, 2-1, had a balanced scoring effort.

Michael Hobbs scored 12 points and Frank Williams added 11, both coming off the bench.

Middleton scored 14 of his points in the first half as Baylor ran up a 46-28 lead.

Zachary Zastoupil led the Texans with 17 points and eight rebounds. Tarleton's season record is now 4-6.

Patrick Fairs scored 28 points and Raynard Davis scored 21 as Texas handed NCAA Division II Central-Missouri State its first loss of the season.

Texas led from start to finish, opening up a 40-26 halftime lead before outscoring the Mules 7-2 at the beginning of the second half.

Skip Ellison led Central Missouri with 18 points, followed by Glenn Harrison with 10.

Texas improved its record to 2-2. Central Missouri dropped to 4-1.

"It will end up being a good learning game," said Texas coach Bob Weltlich. "We made enough mistakes to last a lifetime. It was beginning to look like Barnum & Bailey out there. I don't like to see us play like that no matter what the score."

Pampa middle schoolers defeat Borger

All four Pampa middle school teams will compete in the Borger Tournament today through Saturday.

Pampa hosts a ninth-grade tournament, starting today at McNeely Fieldhouse. Pampa Blue meets Dumas Orange at 7 p.m. tonight in first-round action while Pampa Red goes against Pampa Team Three at 8:30 p.m.

The tournament begins at 7 p.m. tonight with the final round scheduled to start at 12 noon Saturday.

Cooperation key to Wheeler's defense going into Class A quarterfinal clash

By JOHN GERDEL Jr.
Sports Writer

WHEELER — Bobby Sword, a senior safety, sees cooperation as the reason for the development of the "Steel Wall Defense" Wheeler has shown over the last few games.

"At the beginning of the year we had a bunch of griping at each other on the defensive team," Sword said in an interview Tuesday.

"The last three or four games we have come together as a defense."

"It shows how we are playing, we are playing a lot better as a team," he continued.

Sword also thinks the new team spirit will make a difference Friday night.

"They are a little bit better, but we didn't play as good as we can against Sunray," he said. "We are a lot better on defense now and we've got us an offense back now."

"On defense we've got Dickie (Salyer) back. He's playing one of our two techniques and he is going to give us a lot of extra power on the ball," Sword said.

Looking at the offense, he added, "We've got Bubba (Smith) back for this game. They just can't key on Cody (Wiggins) as our one running back. We've got two of them that can do anything anytime."

Sword and the rest of the Mustang defense will be concentrating on the Bobcats' quarterback Friday night.

"We're looking at the quarterbacking Thursday.

Testaverde heads AP All-America team

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

Quarterback Vinny Testaverde, the nation's most effective passer, and two defensive teammates from No. 1-ranked Miami of Florida — tackle Jerome Brown and free safety Bennie Blades, the nation's leading interceptor — were named today to the Associated Press All-America team for 1986.

Testaverde, who is expected to win the Heisman Trophy on Saturday, led Miami to the head of the college football rankings by completing 175 of 276 passes for 2,557 yards and a nation-leading 26 touchdowns in 10 games before missing the Hurricanes' final regular-season contest with bruises suffered when he fell off his motor scooter. His completion percentage was 63.4 and he led the country in passing efficiency. Blades intercepted 10 passes in 11 games and returned them for 128 yards while the 285-pound Brown was the top lineman on a unit that finished sixth nationally in total defense.

"I had never before coached a game where we had to find out where a defensive lineman was before the snap," Pitt Coach Mike Gottfried said of Brown's dominance. Oklahoma, the team Miami displaced as No. 1 after beating the Sooners 28-16 on Sept. 27, also put three players on the All-America team — inside linebacker Brian Bosworth, tight end Keith Jackson and offensive guard Mark Hutson, all juniors.

Bosworth is one of five repeaters and nine juniors on the first team. The other repeaters are offensive guard Jeff Bregel of Southern California, defensive backs Thomas Everett of Baylor and Mark Moore of Oklahoma State and punter Barry Helton of Colorado.

Besides Blades, Helton and the Oklahoma trio, the other juniors are wide receivers Tim Brown of Notre Dame and Cris Carter of Ohio State, defensive tackle Al

Noga of Hawaii and inside linebacker Chris Spielman of Ohio State.

The rest of the elite squad consists of offensive tackles Harris Barton of North Carolina and Danny Villa of Arizona State, center Ben Tamburello and running back Brent Fullwood of Auburn, running back Paul Palmer of Temple, placekicker Jeff Jaeger of Washington, outside linebackers Cornelius Bennett of Alabama and Shane Conlan of Penn State, nose guard Danny Noonan of Nebraska and defensive back Rod Woodson of Purdue.

The AP All-America team will be featured on Bob Hope's Bagful of Christmas Cheer (Dec. 21, NBC-TV, 9-10 p.m., EST). It will be Hope's 48th annual Christmas special on radio or television.

The All-America team was selected by the AP's regional sports editors, along with the college football editor and the sports editor, from all-conference and all-sectional lists.

Lombardi finalists consider playoffs

By RUTH RENDON
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Playoffs to determine the top collegiate football team would not be economically sound for schools that depend on football programs for revenues, two finalists for the Lombardi Award say.

A playoff program that would result in the Rose Bowl being the Super Bowl of college football isn't a bad idea, according to Lombardi Award finalist Brian Bosworth of Oklahoma.

But finalist Jerome Brown of Miami is against such a playoff. "We have an independent school where the bowl money comes to the school. In conferences, like the Big Eight, they have to split their money up," Brown, a 6-foot-2, 285-pound defensive tackle, said at a news conference Wednesday.

"All the money comes to the University of Miami. It means we get more students, they upgrade the campus and do more things for us," said Brown whose team faces Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl Jan. 2 to determine the No. 1 college team.

Other finalists of the Lombardi Award, recognizing the outstanding college lineman of the year, include Chris Spielman of Ohio State and Cornelius Bennett of Alabama. The winner of the award is to be announced tonight.

A playoff would "take away a lot of money out of the pockets of the schools and conferences," Bosworth, a 6-foot-2, 240-pound linebacker, said.

The outspoken Bosworth says college athletes have been overstituted, adding the football program at Oklahoma last year made over $10 million.

"Of that $10 million not any of it came back to the football program," he said. "It all is sucked into the academics and I don't see $10 million worth of academics at Oklahoma."

Players should be subsidized since they make money for the schools and they are not allowed to work during the school year, said Bosworth, donning his usual diamond stud and a "Boz" earring along with his punk-style haircut — shaved sides, a dark pin stripe circling his head and a tail in the back.

Spielman, a 6-foot-2, 230-pound inside linebacker, said players who accept money from alumni are taking a chance of not only ruining their eligibility but also tarnishing their team and school.

"We have a responsibility as players not to be involved in cheating. If somebody comes up and offers you money, it's hard to resist temptation... I think it's the responsibility of the player to be a mature person about it and deny that money," the 6-foot-2, 230-pound inside linebacker said.

Bennett says he warns recruits about accepting alumni benefits when they first visit the Alabama campus.

"You have to think of the consequences you have to face if you get caught. It could cost you your eligibility and a possible shot of playing professional football," Bennett, a 6-foot-4, 235-pound senior, said.

Bosworth's haircut didn't outshine the other finalists. Brown, the 6-foot-2, 285-pound defensive tackle, wore an array of gold necklaces resembling "Mr. T," including what looked like a nameplate with "Jerome" on it.

Brown and Bennett both said they had "fade" haircuts which also features shaved sides.

When asked what he had, Spielman said, "I have a can of snuff in my back pocket."

Groom girls unbeaten

SILVERTON — The Groom varsity girls boosted their season record to 4-0 with a 47-41 victory over Silverton here Tuesday night. Suni Barnett led Groom with 23 points, including nine field goals.

"She is really playing well," Groom girls coach Frank Belcher said of Barnett. "She's averaging about 21 points per game, all of them from the outside."

Groom trailed by one 12-11 after the first quarter, but was on top 27-19 by half time. Both teams scored 10 points in the third quarter and Groom held on for the victory.

The Groom girls will play in the Miami tournament next. They will meet Darrouzzett at 7 p.m. tonight in the old gym.

Lefors splits games with Higgins cagers

HIGGINS — Kevin Howe pulled down 16 rebounds as the Lefors varsity boys stopped Higgins 47-42 Tuesday night here. Kirk Kerbo led the Pirates with nine points.

Lefors took an early lead and built on it throughout the first three quarters. Higgins outscored Lefors 19-10 in the final quarter, but fell short.

The Pirates are 3-4.

In the girls varsity game, Freshman Shelle Lake scored 10 points for the Lefors cause, but the Lady Pirates fell short, 39-33. Becky Davis led the Lefors rebounding with seven as Lefors rebounded evened at 3-3.

In a girls junior varsity game, Higgins downed Lefors 32-15. Carmen Call scored seven points to lead Lefors.

The Pirates have two varsity games on tap this Friday at Allison.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP)—The Soviet Union's most internationally renowned living poet, Yevgeny Yevtushenko, says there would be no mass exodus if Soviet citizens were allowed to travel freely to the West.

"Most Russians simply want to travel abroad to form an opinion about conditions there and then go back home," Yevtushenko said in an article published here Wednesday.

"The Russian people feel that those who wish to leave the country for good should be allowed to do so," he said. "The ones who realize that they made a mistake should be allowed to return if their conscience is clean."

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—William Timothy Kirk, the convicted killer sprung from prison by his lawyer, has sued author Sandy Johnson and Bantam Books over publication of "Against the Law."

Kirk, now an inmate at the East Tennessee Regional Correctional Facility, asks $350,000, claiming Ms. Johnson broke an agreement not to use interviews with him without his written permission.

Ms. Johnson said Wednesday she had not seen the suit, and declined comment.

DALLAS (AP)—An abandoned cotton gin is being turned into a foundry for sculptors by a Dallas couple who hope to create an artists colony in the heart of East Texas farm country.

Juliana Bernier, a French-Canadian, and her husband, retired Southern Methodist University professor Bob H. Slaughter, purchased a five-acre complex of buildings in Ladonia two years ago and are building a foundry where poor, but talented, craftsmen can cast their artistic visions in bronze and glass.

"We got the idea for the foundry together," said Ms. Bernier. "We heard that the cotton gin was for sale and I told Bob to buy it. Then when we saw the space in its buildings, we thought of all the possibilities."

The art center, appropriately, is being called "Le Cotton Gin." Both Slaughter and Ms. Bernier had worked in metal before and knew that the only metal art foundry in the area was at SMU. And they also knew that artists often need more than just a casting foundry.

"The idea was to have a place where artists could come and make their pours into molds, stay until the castings cooled and then put the finishing touches on them," said Ms. Bernier.

Slaughter said they plan to teach artists how to make molds for their sculpture and then provide them with a refuge while their work is being completed.

"Some artists are poor," he said. "But they could put their works in our foundry and then camp out for a few days on the property."

The foundry is being constructed in an open area between the shop and a building housing the cotton gin machinery. The complex will include a furnace from which molten metal is poured into sand molds and a "burnout oven" which prepares the molds using the lost wax method.

The lost wax method involves dipping wax sculpture in a silica slurry. When the slurry is dried and recoated, it forms a mold around the wax. The burnout oven is then used to melt the wax out of the center. The resulting sand mold then can be used for metal castings.

Included in the Le Cotton Gin will be an air compressor which artists, including Ms. Bernier, can use for sandblasting glass sculptures.

A group of artists scheduled to start work at the new colony will stay for several weeks to help complete the opening.

"They are full-fledged artists. One is a painter, one is a ceramist and one a sculptor who paints as well. They will come to help with the first pours in aluminum and bronze," said Ms. Bernier.

Slaughter, 58, a paleontologist who retired from SMU in 1983, has completed several castings of bones. He also has created a 6-by-4-foot sculpture entitled "Dead Pan", named for the Greek god of woods and pastures.

Mrs. Bernier, 36, came to the United States from Montreal in 1971 and opened a stained glass business in Kansas, where she became interested in glass sculpture and then in metalwork.

"I was commissioned by churches and commercial residential developments and gave classes," she said of her Kansas period. "It developed into three-dimensional work with the glass. I started doing windows that had glass expanding out of them. Eventually, it became 3-D all the way."

She has created a number of metal sculptures, including one called "Holy Cow" that was purchased at auction this year by a Dallas Art Museum official. She also produced a sandblasted sculpture shown at a symposium in Houston in October.

Profit is not the main object of the new art center, said Ms. Bernier.

November alien arrests down

EL PASO (AP)—Fewer illegal aliens were arrested last month in this area of the border because of the high water level in the Rio Grande, the new immigration law and a blockade of an international bridge, border officials say.

Joseph Aubin, a U.S. Border Patrol intelligence agent, said Tuesday 15,553 illegal aliens were arrested last month in the El Paso sector, which stretches from Van Horn to the New Mexico-Arizona state line, compared to 30,786 arrests in October.

The figure also is 22 percent less than the November 1985 figure of 19,806 arrests.

Aubin said arrests traditionally decline in November, but the other factors contributed to last month's drop.
