Military says soldiers fired before thinking

By EILEEN GUERRERO
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines — The military said today troops "overreacted" when they fired on militant farmers marching toward the presidential palace, killing at least 12 and wounding 94. Leftists denounced the shooting and threatened more protests.

The regional military commander for central Luzon, Brig. Gen. Eugenio Ocampo Jr., placed troops in the six provinces north of Manila on full alert against "disgruntled elements of the military and unscrupulous civilians" who may try "to destabilize the present government."

The clash Thursday on Mendiola Bridge about 300 yards from the palace was the bloodiest street battle since President Corazon Aquino took office Feb. 25 following a near bloodless people's revolt that toppled President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

The government said 12 people were killed and 54 others remain hospitalized, most with gunshot wounds. Hospitals had the same death count, but said 94 people were wounded.

Government radio put the death toll at 15, and some newspapers counted 16 dead and 15 others in critical condition with gunshot wounds.

SHAMROCK — A southern Alabama woman who won her choice of a 100-acre ranch near Shamrock or an equivalent cash prize has chosen to take the money and stay in Dixie.

Loretta Lowery, 33, of Jackson, Ala., won a 100-acre parcel of land near the abandoned Pakan community midway between Shamrock and McLean as part of the "MTV Town" contest sponsored by the MTV music video service.

As the MTV contest winner, Lowery was promised her choice of a cash prize or the grassy Wheeler County real estate, a custom built house, a sound system, 1,000 compact discs, $100,000 and a "general store" stocked with candy and gum.

Since the winner was announced on the rock-video channel's "Nero's Eve Rock 'n' Roll Ball" telecast on New Year's Eve, Shamrock residents have waited for Lowery and her family to visit the site and show an interest in their town.

But Lowery's husband, Marshall Lowery, said Thursday that his family will stay put in their home near the Tombigbee River in southern Alabama.

Media attend public suicide

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Pennsylvania's treasurer shot himself to death at a crowded news conference after saying he was wrongly convicted of bribery and that the judge who was to sentence him today imposed "medieval sentences."

R. Budd Dwyer pulled a high-powered revolver from a manila envelope Thursday morning and waved off frantic onlookers in his office, some of them screaming "No! No! Budd, don't do this!"

About two dozen horrified reporters, photographers and aides watched as the 47-year-old Republican put the gun barrel into his mouth and pulled the trigger. Cameras recorded the act.

Dwyer died instantly, said Dauphin County Coroner William Bush.

The state attorney general had ruled Wednesday that Dwyer would lose his job after being sentenced for awarding a state computer contract in return for a promised $300,000 payoff. No money changed hands.

Dwyer, who was to have been sentenced by U.S. District Judge Malcolm Muir, had faced up to 55 years in prison and a $305,000 fine on 11 counts.

"I've repeatedly said that I'm not going to resign as state treasurer," Dwyer said in a suicide note released after his death.

"Please tell my story on every radio and television station and in every newspaper and magazine in the U.S. Please make sure that the sacrifice of my life is not in vain."

Dwyer purchased the .357-caliber Magnum revolver in 1982 and had it properly registered, state police said.

Rob Dwyer, 21, said his father had given no indication of what he intended to do.

"We're pretty broken up," he said, his voice breaking during a telephone interview. He said he heard the news at home with his mother, Joanne, 47, and sister, Dyan, 18.

Mrs. Dwyer, her eyes swollen from crying, talked briefly with reporters at the door of the family's Hershey home. She said only that she was sorry about what had happened.

Before pulling the gun, Dwyer read for more than 20 minutes from a statement proclaiming his innocence and criticizing the news media, the federal attorney who prosecuted him and Muir, who he said had a history of imposing stiff sentences.

When he took the gun out of the envelope, several reporters pleaded with him not to do anything. Dwyer waved off someone who appeared to move toward him.

"No," he said. "This will hurt someone."

Philadelphia Inquirer reporter Fred Cusick, who was sitting on the floor at the front of the room, said: "I should have run and grabbed him when he pulled out the envelope. I knew that was it."

Most reporters and Treasury Department officials thought Dwyer was going to announce his resignation. He indicated during the news conference that the last page of his statement would reveal his decision, but said that page would be distributed later because he didn't have enough copies.

Treasury spokesman Duke Horshock released the page later.

"After many hours of thought and meditation, I've made a decision that should not be an example to anyone else because it is unique to my situation," Dwyer said in the statement.

He said Muir was noted for his "medieval sentences. I face a maximum sentence of 55 years in prison and a $305,000 fine for being innocent. Since I'm a victim of political persecution my prison would simply be an American Gulag."

Shortly before his suicide, Dwyer handed sealed en-

Press argues use of photos

NEW YORK (AP) — The graphic pictures of Pennsylvania's treasurer killing himself at a news conference prompted debate in newsrooms across the nation about whether they were too gruesome to print or broadcast.

Some editors decided the photographs or videotape of R. Budd Dwyer putting a pistol in his mouth and pulling the trigger Thursday morning were too graphic. Others felt readers or viewers should see them.

At The Miami Herald, editors initially put a photo of Dwyer with the gun in his mouth on the front page. Another, showing him moments after he pulled the trigger, went inside. In later editions, the front-page photo was moved inside the paper. It was replaced with a photo of Dwyer waving the revolver.

"The feeling was, this was a major news event and it was at a public press conference," said The Herald's national editor, Bill Rose. "It captures the horror of the story in terms everyone can understand and see. Pictures are part of the story."

Eighteen Pampa High School band members qualified for the Class 4A - 5A All-Region Band at auditions Thursday at West Texas State University in Canyon.

Meanwhile, at Phillips High School, Canadian and Shamrock high schools may need their own band contest next year after dominating tryouts for the Class A - 2A All-Region Band.

The Pride of Pampa Band placed four of its members in the top, or first-chair position. They are Noelle Barbaree, French horn; Byron Black, tuba; Tracy Lebow, timpani; and Michaela Mendoza, bass clarinet.

The 4A All-Region Band will perform at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Amarillo Civic Center. Canadian High School qualified 19 musicians for the honor band, five of those in the top, first-chair positions. Canadian students making first-chair designations were Joni Millsap, French horn; Felecia Dodd, alto saxophone; Terry Case, tenor saxophone; Cory Smith, baritone saxophone; and Amy Hester, clarinet.

Shamrock placed 15 band members on the squad, including Cody Garrett, first-chair, baritone horn.

Dan Fish of McLean made first chair in mallets (xylophone).

Miami, White Deer, McLean and Wheeler high schools also placed student musicians in the A - 2A honor band, which will perform at 6:30 p.m. Saturday at the Amarillo Civic Center.

not show the videotape. "The clip had people in the newsroom literally getting sick to their stomachs," said Randy Covington, the station's news director. "I have two younger children and I would have been outraged to know that they had seen the shooting on television."

At Cable News Network, editors chose film showing Dwyer holding the gun before the shooting, but did not show him putting the gun to his mouth.

"You can tell the story without showing the shooting," said spokeswoman Judi Borza.

NBC News said it would not show the graphic footage. "We feel it is too unsettling for our viewers," said spokesman Andrew Freedman.

Neither ABC nor CBS used film of Dwyer's news conference in their evening news broadcasts. Both networks displayed a still photo of Dwyer in the background as anchors gave brief accounts of the suicide. The picture used by ABC showed Dwyer holding a gun, while CBS' photo did not.

In Philadelphia, WPVI-TV showed footage of Dwyer shooting himself and falling to the floor. The station warned viewers to look away if they didn't want to see it.

WPVI-TV received 200 to 300 telephone calls, mostly negative, said spokesman Art Moore.

Shortly after the morning suicide, WPXI-TV in Pittsburgh showed film of Dwyer shooting himself and falling to the floor.

"It's an historic event," said By Williams, the station's news operations manager. "We've seen JFK shot to death 200 times. We've seen Bobby Kennedy shot to death. So, it's a reflection of a very important man in Pennsylvania society and what he did."

On its 6 p.m. newscast, the station stopped the film with Dwyer holding the gun, but viewers could hear the shot. Williams said the change was made because the event no longer was a breaking story.

"I'm not apologizing for what we did," he said about the earlier footage. Pittsburgh's other stations, KDKA-TV and WTAE-TV, did not show Dwyer pulling the trigger.

"The story had to be reported, and that required showing the news conference," said Jim Esser, acting news director for KDKA. "But we stopped the tape before he made a motion to actually put the gun in his mouth and pull the trigger."

The Associated Press transmitted a series of photographs of the suicide to members of the news cooperative, and sent advisories on its news wires alerting editors to their graphic nature.

The AP photos included pictures of Dwyer with the gun in his mouth, one shortly after he pulled the trigger, and a photo of him lying on the floor. There also were photos of Dwyer holding the gun before he put it in his mouth, and a file photo of him taken in 1984.

velopes to three aides, telling them they contained instructions for "later." Treasury spokesman Greg Penny said his envelope contained an organ donor card. Dwyer's corneas were removed for possible transplant.

The other envelopes included funeral instructions and a letter to Gov. Robert Casey. In the letter, Dwyer asked that his wife be appointed to fill the rest of his term.

Dwyer was convicted last month of five counts of mail fraud, four counts of interstate transportation in aid of racketeering, one count of perjury and one count of conspiracy to commit bribery.

Shamrock

ters) very kindly offered us a cash settlement of $230,000," Lowery, 38, said, adding that the family is still waiting for MTV to send them the check.

"I called them a week ago to see what was going on, and they said it would be two more weeks before we get the check," Lowery said.

The electrical plant worker added that the family had considered visiting Shamrock to look at the property and the community.

"We got a videotape from Channel 10 (KFDA-TV) in Amarillo of a news story they did about the property," he added. "I wasn't impressed at all. It looked pretty barren."

Lowery said his home is in a "heavily wooded area, with a lot of tall pine trees."

Jackson has about 6,000 residents and is located 70 miles north of the Alabama Gulf of Mexico coast city of Mobile.

"Plus I have a regular job, and there would be too many problems moving," he added.

Lowery added that neither he nor his wife and children watch the raucous rock video service.

He said they learned of the contest through a contest newsletter they subscribe to.

"I am the one who sent the entries in, but the entry that won was in Loretta's name," Lowery said.

Still, the quiet couple did experience a brief glimmer of fame in their community.

"One of my daughter's friends asked if he could be her butler in her new home," Lowery remarked.

The promotion caused an even smaller ripple among Shamrock residents, who do not even get MTV on their local cable television service.

"The whole world knew more about it than we did," said Shamrock Chamber of Commerce Manager Nan Rives, adding that she had not heard about the Lowery's decision.

"As far as I know, the MTV people never looked at the property," Rives said Thursday.

"If they don't take the land, I can understand their reason," she added. "But we can always use more business."

The chamber of commerce manager said the promotion gave Shamrock "good national publicity," even though the MTV contest ads were less than complimentary to the eastern Panhandle community. The MTV ads showed actors portraying Shamrock residents as hateful hicks, resentful of their new neighbors.

"I just laughed at it because I knew better," Rives said. "But we had letters from former residents who were up in arms about the ads."

Shamrock Cable TV Manager Keith Cunningham said although his service carried MTV during the New Year's Eve telecast, none of his customers asked the cable company to pick up the rock video service permanently.

"It didn't do anything for us at all," Cunningham said.

Shamrock City Manager Johnny Rhodes said he had "no earthly idea" about Lowery's decision.

He added that he wouldn't blame the couple if they chose the money over the land.

"For someone to take 100 acres out in the country, he'd have to be someone older and ready to retire or someone ready to move and get away from where they're at," Rhodes observed. "It's awfully pretty country down there where they live."

Richard Hefley, the Shamrock real estate agent who found the property for the contest, said Thursday that earlier this week, MTV personnel led him to believe the Lowerys had not made up their minds whether to take the grassland.

Hefley added that if the land offer is rejected in place of the cash, the acreage will go back to its current owner, Kenneth Wischkaemper.

"It will go on like before, like nothing had happened," Hefley said.

Senate finance panel reviews budget requests

AUSTIN (AP) — A member of the Texas State Board of Medical Examiners says the board is training special investigators who would know malpractice when they saw it as part of an effort to police the medical profession.

Dr. James Lively, Corpus Christi, told the Senate Finance Committee on Thursday the agency had completed the initial phase of board recommendations from last August but needed more funds to continue closer monitoring of physicians.

He said the board was training investigators, switching from quarterly to monthly meetings, adding four attorneys who would help with investigations and raising renewal fees.

The board, responding perhaps to legislative pressure for better scrutiny of physicians, asked for 11 more employees in the fiscal year starting Sept. 1. Its two-year budget request is nearly $6.5 million, compared with the 1986-87 budget of $4.9 million.

The physician renewal fee was raised to $84, effective Jan. 1, and would cover the increased budget requests, according to Cynthia Jenkins of Stowell, a public member of the board.

Lively said as of Dec. 1, Texas had 41,809 physicians.

He said the board would maintain "constant oversight" of the discipline of incompetent physicians or those accused of malpractice.

In another budget presentation to the Finance Committee, a member of the Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies said the private security business "is probably the most booming business" in Texas.

Board member Dale Simpson of Dallas said the agency in 1975 regulated 3,000 individuals with a staff of 30. In 1986, he said, the agency regulated 80,000 persons with a staff of 37.

Simpson and Executive Director Clema Sanders presented the agency's budget request of $3.97 million for 1988-89. The 1986-87 budget, which is covered by licensed fees, is almost $2.9 million.

Simpson said the agency has only seven investigators "to cover the state," and in 1986 it handled 6,000 administrative cases. "We have, we think, more than reached the saturation point."

The board, established in 1969, regulates private investigators, alarm systems, armed and unarmed guards, armored car services, couriers, and guard dog companies, according to Ms. Sanders.

Ms. Sanders said of the 80,000 persons regulated by the agency, 25,000 are authorized to carry firearms.

Executive Director Robert Viterna of the Commission on Jail Standards told the committee his agency was created in 1975 "to keep county jails out of the federal courts" and had succeeded.

In 1975, Viterna said, 40 percent of Texas' county jails were under federal court order but now only three county jails "are under federal court jurisdiction."

He said 170 of Texas' 242 jails had met all commission standards for certification, and "successful lawsuits against jails have dropped off dramatically."

Viterna said the total jail population had grown from 12,000 in 1975 to 20,500 last year. He said the single greatest impact on increased jail populations has been the law requiring jail time for certain drunken drivers.

The commission budget request for 1988-89 totals $915,778, compared with $684,573 expended and budgeted for 1986-87.

Committee wants limits on judgments

AUSTIN (AP) — A special legislative study committee wants to put a cap on court judgments and attorneys' fees as a means of easing the liability insurance crisis, which the committee says was caused in part by the Texas Supreme Court.

"We are convinced beyond a shadow of a doubt that the crisis is real," Sen. Grant Jones, D-Temple, and Rep. Mike Toomey, R-Houston, co-chairmen of the Joint Committee on Liability Insurance and Tort Law, said in a joint statement.

"It is causing tremendous harm to business, health care, governmental and charitable activities in Texas," they told a news conference.

The committee made a 245-page report to the Legislature Thursday after a yearlong study. The report was signed by eight of the 10 committee members. Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, said a minority report would be made later.

Jones and Toomey said they found no single cause for the crisis, but problems uncovered in the study must be attacked on three fronts — tort law reform, insurance law reform and stronger medical discipline.

"The study produced conclusive evidence that fundamental changes in tort law over the past several years, largely through decisions by the Texas Supreme Court, have eroded the ability of insurers to accurately predict the frequency and magnitude of their losses," the statement said.

Toomey told reporters he felt the time had come "to find out which body makes law in Texas. People must decide whether it's the Legislature or five men on the Supreme Court who make the laws."

The majority report said damage awards in personal injury suits should be limited to $250,000 for non-economic losses such as pain, suffering and mental anguish.

It recommended no limit on measurable losses in personal injury lawsuits, including medical bills and lost wages.

The report urged that state law be changed to limit punitive damages to $100,000, or three times the actual economic damage, whichever is greater. The person filing the suit would get 25 percent of punitive damages, his attorney 25 percent and the state 50 percent.

A plaintiff's attorney would be able to charge a fee limited to 40 percent of the first $100,000, 33.3 percent of the second $200,000, 25 percent of the next $200,000 and 10 percent of any amount over $500,000.

The majority report made 30 recommendations for changes in state tort laws — laws which govern civil suits brought by an injured person against an alleged wrongdoer.

It also recommended 22 changes in insurance laws and four changes to strengthen authority of the Texas Board of Medical Examiners.

Caperton said earlier a minority report would oppose any tort law changes.

He said the minority report will say the investigation found little support for the argument that liability insurance rates were driven up by increased numbers of lawsuits and an increase in judgments awarded to plaintiffs.

Prison population being closely watched

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Texas prison officials, fearing a large number of incoming inmates would push the system beyond a state-mandated limit, say they may be forced to close the doors for the second time in a week.

Prisoners arrived Thursday from several of the state's most populous counties including Dallas, Tarrant and Bexar.

Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Charles Brown said at least 190 inmates were expected to be admitted Thursday, while only 65 were known to be released.

"We'll probably be OK today," Brown said Thursday. "But tomorrow we'll probably be in the same posture as we were last Friday."

Thursday's official tally would be released midday today, officials said.

The prison system closed the doors to new inmates last Friday after the inmate population exceeded the 95 percent limit set by the Legislature to avoid overcrowding in the nation's second-largest prison system, behind California.

Paroles over the weekend helped reduce the population, allowing officials to reopen Monday. Since then, however, the population has crept back toward the limit.

Monday's count totaled 38,238 inmates, or 94.68 percent of capacity. By midnight Tuesday, there were 38,250 inmates, or 94.72 percent of capacity. That was 114 inmates short of the 95 percent limit of 38,368 prisoners.

Wednesday, the count rose to 94.80 percent, or 38,288 inmates, just 80 short of capacity.

The capacity limit was set by the state Legislature in 1983 after a federal judge ordered officials to take steps to reduce crowding.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice, who ordered sweeping reforms in Texas prisons in 1981, already has issued a contempt order against the corrections department, saying the agency failed to live up to agreements made in 1980 to improve inmates' living conditions and staffing in the prisons.

The judge gave the prison system until March 31 to meet the standards or risk fines of up to $800,500 a day. The prison board said it would appeal the contempt order.

City ordinances may be affected by opinion

ARLINGTON (AP) — A city considering prohibiting drinking behind the wheel probably will drop the idea, now that the Texas attorney general says such ordinances exceed cities' authority, a state representative said.

And cities who already have those ordinances may have to re-examine them, officials say.

State Rep. Al Luna of Houston requested the attorney general's opinion on ordinances in Arlington and Corpus Christi that make it illegal to take a drink while driving, although possession of open containers is legal. State law does not prohibit drinking and driving, unless the driver is legally intoxicated.

Luna said the Houston City Council, which was considering adopting a similar ordinance, probably will not do so now. Houston officials had asked Luna to study the matter.

The attorney general's office says it isn't sure how many cities have similar ordinances, but that those that do are infringing on state authority.

According to an opinion issued Jan. 16, the state's alcoholic beverage code reserves for the state the exclusive right to regulate the manufacture, sale, transport and possession of alcohol in Texas.

Because a police officer must actually see the driver take a drink before issuing a citation, the laws are difficult to enforce, officials in Corpus Christi and Arlington said.

In Arlington, only 135 such citations were issued in 1986, mostly to teen-agers caught drinking along a popular cruising strip, said police spokesman Dee Anderson.

Corpus Christi City Attorney Jimmy Bray said that relatively few tickets for drinking while driving are written there, but that he will wait until he sees the opinion to decide whether the law should remain on the books.

"If it's persuasive, I'll advise the City Council to drop the ordinance," he said.

Grand Prairie authorities said their ordinance has been unchallenged since it went on the books in 1964, said assistant City Attorney Tom Allensworth.

"(The opinion) is supposed to carry great weight, but it's not unheard of for a higher court to reject an attorney general's opinion," Allensworth said.

"A lot of cities do have ordinances like this, and if someone is arrested for violating one of them, the opinion would certainly help them contest it," said assistant attorney general Jennifer Riggs, who drafted the opinion at Luna's request.

"The opinion isn't binding, but it will be persuasive," she added.

Creating more problems with snow

Off Beat By Fred Parker

Several weeks ago I told myself there would be no more mention of actions of city personnel which make my blood pressure soar and otherwise aggravate my ulcers.

But, this week has been too much. I have been chomping at the bit since Monday morning because of the way those guys operating the city's street maintainers — those glorified dirt graders pressed into service as snow plows — piled up the snow in the middle of the streets.

Although many of the streets were nearly impassible Sunday, the city equipment didn't start tackling the more than foot of snow and even deeper drifts until late Sunday.

By Monday morning, when I headed for the paper in the wee, small hours before sunup the snow had been moved from the sides of the streets into large piles in the middle of the street.

In most of the downtown area the city crews removed the piles from the middle of the intersections and even opened up the sections where alleys intersected the streets.

In addition to the main downtown streets, the city even plowed the snow into the middle of the 100 and 200 blocks of West Browning. But, upon leaving for work early Monday from my Russell Street abode, I found they forgot to cut a path through the pile on West Browning blocking the Russell Street intersection.

That wasn't so bad, since I usually turn right and travel west on Browning to Somerville and then south to the paper.

But, when I started home during the middle of the afternoon — traveling east on West Browning — I found I couldn't make a left turn onto Russell because that barricade of snow was still blocking the intersection.

After a quick survey of traffic to make sure there were no police cars anywhere in sight I made a U-turn at the Cuyler Street intersection and heading west on Browning I was then able to turn right onto my street.

Upon reaching home I immediately telephoned City Hall, but was told City Manager Bob Hart was unavailable. So I registered my complaint with one of those administrative types and requested that the city plow a path through the mountain of snow blocking the intersection. I'm still waiting for the city equipment to arrive.

Late Monday afternoon a motorist driving one of those high-off-the-ground four-wheeled vehicles blasted through the pile, knocking the top off the pile and other motorists then proceeded to drive over it and pack it down. But, traveling over this large lump of ice is hazardous and difficult for those of us driving those low-slung passenger cars. As a result I have been using other routes to reach my house.

And, while I'm discussing the snow piled in the middle of the streets, how about those mountains the city crews piled up when they cleared snow from the intersections.

It is a miracle there weren't numerous collisions at the intersections as a result of these tall piles blocking visibility of motorists trying to cross busy downtown streets. These piles of snow were higher than many of the cars, preventing motorists from seeing each other approaching at the intersection until the last second. I barely avoided several collisions.

Next time fellows, knock the tops off of the piles so Pampa motorists can see each other and please open up all of the street intersections.

Employee discharge law unconstitutional

AUSTIN (AP) — A 1929 law that requires corporations to state in writing the reasons for discharging employees is unconstitutional, Attorney General Jim Mattox said Thursday.

The law was enacted in 1907 and was amended two years later. After the Texas Supreme Court ruled it unconstitutional in 1914, the Legislature re-enacted it in 1929 in a different form.

Mattox said Allen Parker Sr., commissioner of the Texas Department of Labor & Standards, had requested his opinion regarding the validity of the statute.

Mattox said in St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co. of Texas vs. Griffin, 1914, the Texas Supreme Court held the law invalid because it violated the state constitution.

The court, Mattox said, held that a corporation had a right of "liberty to speak" or write, and this right carried with it the corresponding right to be silent or not to give a discharged employee a statement of the cause of the discharge.

"This construction... has never been challenged in our court system," Mattox said.

"Therefore, under article I, section 8, of the Texas Constitution, a corporation has the right not to speak or write letters of discharge," he said.

"Even though we may disagree with this interpretation, we are not at liberty to modify or overrule the Texas Supreme Court's holding in Griffin."

Marchers commemorate landmark court decision

DALLAS (AP) — Fourteen years after the Supreme Court legalized abortion, protesters are still taking to the streets demanding that the landmark decision be reversed.

At a rally Thursday commemorating the landmark decision, abortion foe Bill Price told a crowd of about 1,000: "I hope you pray every night that Ronald Reagan will have one more chance to make one more appointment to the Supreme Court."

The chanting protesters, holding black balloons, braved freezing winds in a march from City Hall to the federal courthouse where the case was filed that led to the Supreme Court decision. Many of the marchers clutched Bibles, and others pushed children in baby strollers.

"We feel that in Dallas we have a special responsibility to stop abortion," said Price, president of the Greater Dallas Right to Life Committee. "Rallies like this are important because they show there is broad-based public support for the pro-life movement."

Richard Land, recently named as an administrative aide to Gov. Bill Clements, told the Dallas crowd to "dedicate our memory to the 20 million babies who have been sacrificed."

"Seek God's faith and pray that he might heal this land of this tragic blight on its honor," he said.

In Austin, meanwhile, Pam Fridrich, executive director of the Texas Abortion Rights Action League, said abortion supporters are concerned about Land's appointment.

Clements said he appointed Land, a professor of theology and church history, to advise him on church-state issues and issues concerning "traditional family values."

But "too often, traditional family values is a euphemism for invasion of privacy, second-place status for women, state-imposed restrictions on reproductive choice," Ms. Fridrich said.

In 1970, a suit was filed in Dallas on behalf of Jane Roe, a fictitious name used by Norma McCorvey. The court action sought to strike down Texas' 100-year-old law that banned most abortions.

Ms. McCorvey was a waitress who became pregnant after a gang rape in which she was also severely beaten. She was too poor to leave Texas for an abortion.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Reagan must gain control over policy

A principal lesson of the current White House controversy is that Americans rightly hold a president accountable for the mistakes of his staff, regardless of whether he personally authorized the offending actions. In effect, the White House staff is regarded as an extension of the chief executive himself; the president, like a ship's captain, cannot escape ultimate responsibility for what his aides do during his watch. Attempts to insulate him by the notion of presidential deniability virtually never wash with the American electorate. Consequently, the guiding concept behind the reorganization of the National Security Council staff must be presidential accountability.

The most urgent task of Ronald Reagan's new national security adviser, Frank Carlucci, is to draw in the very long reins under which the NSC staff has been operating. From all appearances, Reagan and White House Chief of Staff Donald Reagan were all too content to remain in the dark while aides such as Lt. Col. Oliver North single-handedly initiated sensitive covert operations. The president's hands-off management style and his eagerness to delegate the day-to-day management of government to others, a style that has served him well in the past, is partly to blame for the fix in which he now finds himself. A lack of accountability at the top encouraged a situation in which relatively junior advisers such as Col. North exceed their authority, engaging in possibly illegal enterprises, including the diversion of profits from Iranian arms sales to the Nicaraguan Contras.

Tighter control of NSC staff activities does not require a raft of new legislation, and lawmakers would be wise not to rush in and tie the hands of this and future presidents because of the excesses now coming to light. As a general rule, however, the NSC staff should not be involved in implementing covert operations. The NSC, unlike the Central Intelligence Agency and other intelligence units of the government, has neither the expertise nor the numbers of personnel necessary to plan, manage, and evaluate clandestine programs. This does not rule out the occasional use of NSC personnel for secret diplomatic missions directed by the president.

Less clear is the value of the requirement that the chairmen and ranking minority members of the Senate and House intelligence committees be informed in a "timely" manner of secret operations. Congressmen argue that they have a legitimate need for congressional oversight of covert programs. They maintain this oversight would be secret and involve a very limited number of congressional leaders. Unfortunately, as the so-called "closed" hearings on the Iran-Contra affair demonstrated, Congress can keep few secrets.

The Founding Fathers, in their manifest wisdom, sought to endow the chief executive with the responsibilities of foreign policy while leaving Congress chiefly in charge on the domestic front.

The president, not Congress and not the NSC, should be in full charge of foreign policy.

Condoms offer protection

People who are scared can change their behavior drastically and rapidly. Since Americans have become aware of the deadly risks of cigarettes, 30 million of them have stopped smoking. But people are also capable of resolutely ignoring risks that can't be avoided except through undesirable precautions. The AIDS epidemic is growing because so many people refuse to admit that it can attack them.

AIDS evokes contradictory reactions among potential victims. One is hysteria. This is what impels parents to pull their kids out of schools that admit AIDS victims, and workers to refuse to work in the same office as people with the disease — even though all experts vow that the virus can't be transmitted through casual contact.

The other reaction is blithe nonchalance. This is what allows homosexuals and heterosexuals alike to indulge in risky types of sex with people, often strangers, who may carry the AIDS virus, and who thus may infect them with a lethal sickness. Some people take precautions against imaginary dangers, while others take none against real ones. Some people do both.

One of the disease's greatest assets is the myth that it is the exclusive property of homosexuals. Heterosexual complacency has helped to spread AIDS from the gay to the straight population.

So far just 1,100 Americans have gotten AIDS from heterosexual contact. But by 1991, the National Academy of Sciences estimates, that number will grow by more than sixfold. Given the disease's incubation period of four years or so, most of those victims have already been infected, whether they know it or not. Gays now joke bitterly that AIDS is God's judgment on heterosexuals.

What's especially maddening is that the tragedy is sure to get worse and that much of it could have been — and still could be — prevented. Unlike past epidemic diseases like the Black Plague, AIDS can be largely foiled by simple, reliable measures. Celibacy is one. Monogamy between uninfected partners, of whatever sexual orientation, is another. Those who are addicted to promiscuity can protect themselves with "safe sex" practices, like using condoms.

But neither gays nor straights have taken well to such suggestions. Journalist Katie Leishman, writing in the current issue of the Atlantic magazine, notes a study of gay men in San Francisco discovered that 80 percent knew that condoms offer protection against AIDS — and only 6 percent used them. The Minnesota Department of Health, which since 1975 has tallied new cases of hepatitis B, a useful proxy for AIDS which has a much shorter incubation period, has seen no decline in the rate of transmission.

The president of a 400-member "swingers" club in Chicago says none of his members has been tested for the AIDS antibody and that no one uses condoms. A brothel outside Las Vegas now requires condoms, but the owner says 15 or 20 customers have to be turned away each week because they balk. Many people willingly expose not only themselves but others to the danger: They avoid getting the AIDS blood test because, if they're infected, they don't want to know.

A study by the Centers for Disease Control, which examined 70 couples that continued unprotected sexual relations after one partner had been found to carry the virus, found that nine additional partners were eventually infected. The study, Leishman points out, didn't answer the troubling question: "Why were any of these people — knowing that one could transmit a lethal virus to the other — willing to have sex without a condom?"

The problem seems to be that a lot of people refuse to admit they are vulnerable, and many others assume that if they get the disease, science will find a way to save them. But there is no cure for AIDS on the horizon. Even a vaccine isn't a sure thing, and in any case it realistically can't be expected before 1992.

Reckless behavior is bound to change, but it will probably change out of sheer terror, not out of intelligent caution. In other words, it won't happen until the epidemic has reached horrible proportions, killing so many people that each of us knows someone who has died of AIDS.

By that time, it will be too late for many people. By then, yet more millions of Americans will have the virus silently infesting their bodies, waiting to do its deadly work. By then, we'll all know that those who would rather die than take precautions against AIDS will probably get their wish.

Communism waits at door

Much of the contra-versy relates to President Reagan's passionate resolve to keep the Soviets out of Latin America.

He is genuinely convinced that if we do not stop them in Nicaragua they will next be in Mexico — at our back door. And that fugitives from communism would then flood our own country.

Since 1981 the Reagan administration has committed more than $4.7 billion in economic and military assistance to Central America.

With trade embargoes and military maneuvers we have further demonstrated the Reagan commitment to "contain" the communists.

Our success in El Salvador and Costa Rica convinced the White House that containment can be accomplished.

Without debating how or how much we should help the freedom fighters in Nicaragua, let's see if we can evaluate our policies and prospects in Central America dispassionately.

Our nation's foreign policy is necessarily fragmented. Gone is the day when a president (Monroe) could draw a line down the middle of the Atlantic and hang up a sign that said "Trespassers Will Be Shot!"

More recent trouble down there starts with restive insiders. The home office of communism is always eager to fan any such flame with subsequent "contributions" of aid and arms — but the outsiders do their dirty work mostly through surrogates.

There is restiveness on so many fronts down there that we Americans could end up as uncomfortable as a barefoot boy stompin' ants.

Most every survey shows that Americans agree with the president that Central America is important to our national interests and that communism poses a threat to the region but — since Vietnam — Americans are very wary of committing themselves to extended involvement.

For most Americans the cure may be worse than the malady.

Even our White House has been divided between hard-liners and negotiators. That's how we end up maintaining diplomatic relations with some of the governments we are seeking to overthrow.

When we try to view history through a wide-angle lens, it becomes obvious that most great nation-states — Rome, Spain, Greece, China, Britain — overextending themselves — grew weaker, not stronger.

History suggests that ultimately Moscow's influence in Latin America will be no greater than ours is on her borders.

Except as we mind our own business so well that we are an example worthy of emulation.

Deep South executes more than its share

By Don Graff

Jan. 17 is a date of national significance that you won't find indicated on your calendar, and it's just as well, because it is not one in which Americans can take pride.

It is the 10th anniversary of the execution by firing squad at the Utah State Penitentiary of Gary Mark Gilmore. His death ended a 10-year moratorium on executions in this country while the constitutionality of state laws on capital punishment was argued out before the Supreme Court.

The arguing goes on, but various versions of the death penalty are back on the books of all but a dozen states. And since Gilmore's death there have been an additional 67 executions through the end of 1986.

There is a pattern to the killings suggesting that justice is neither blind nor uniformly meted out in the various states. Consider:

All but five of the 68 executions during the past 10 years have been in the Deep South or Texas.

Two states are far and away in the lead, sharing more than half the total between them — Texas with 20 (10 in 1986 alone) and Florida with 16 (three in 1986).

The five non-Southern executions include, in addition to Gilmore in Utah, two each in Nevada and Indiana. All were consensual. That is, the condemned individuals themselves expressed a desire that their lives be ended.

The numbers of executions per year since 1977 have not been large. There were 18 during 1986, the same as for the previous year. The record to date was 1984, with 21. In 1983 it was only five, and the previous figures back to Gilmore in 1977 were similarly low.

The actual numbers are insignificant compared to the potential — the population of death row, which, as of Dec. 20, 1986, was 1,838, according to the American Civil Liberties Union. It has been rising at an annual rate of more than 200.

The swelling backlog has fueled predictions of a coming "bloodbath."

Henry Schwarzschild doesn't see it that way. He is director of the Capital Punishment Project of the ACLU, one of several organizations seeking the abolishment of capital punishment in this country, and he sees as more likely the continuation of the gradual but steady year-by-year upward trend. In addition, he believes that there will be more executions in Northern and Western states.

All this could change radically, however, depending on a case now on appeal to the Supreme Court. There may be a decision early in the year. Watch for it. It's a Georgia case called McCleskey and could make headlines. If the court accepts the argument for a reversal, it could invalidate other convictions and pending sentences. If not, there could be a temporary surge in executions.

McCleskey involves a cop killing and a black offender, whose conviction is being challenged on grounds of racial discrimination in violation of the 14th Amendment's guarantee of equal protection.

"If the laws of Georgia provided that somebody who kills a white victim gets sentenced to death, but somebody who kills a non-white victim gets something less than death, like life imprisonment, everybody would realize on the face of it that that's constitutionally intolerable," says Schwarzschild. "And yet, although the statute doesn't say that, that's precisely what's happening in Georgia."

And not only Georgia. McCleskey points up another aspect of the post-Gilmore pattern of executions.

Of the 68 crimes for which the punishment has been death, 60 involved white victims. Of the other eight, both victims and offenders were non-white — black or Hispanic.

In other words, as Schwarzschild puts it, "We have not yet executed a white offender who killed a non-white."

Blizzard paralyzes East, blamed for nine deaths

By The Associated Press

A paralyzing blizzard blamed for at least nine deaths hammered New England early today as plows and road-sanders moved up and down the snowed-in Atlantic Coast to clear blocked roads and open airports.

"It's a classic Nor'easter," said National Weather Service meteorologist Bob Thomas in Albany, N.Y. "On the way it buries everybody."

Wind-whipped snow lashed New York state and New England early today as blizzard warnings issued by the weather service remained in effect over much of Massachusetts and parts of Connecticut. Wind gusts up to 76 mph were clocked late Thursday at Chatham, Mass.

"They still have the brunt of the storm to bear," said Paul Fike, of the weather service's Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo.

The forecast called for up to 2 feet of snow over inland New England. Winter storm warnings also were posted from Pennsylvania and New Jersey into New York state and much of New England.

"We're concerned that the temperature is going to drop and we're going to have the whole metropolitan area turn into an ice-skating rink," said Boston police Lt. Gerald Burke.

The storm, which brewed in the Gulf of Mexico and began blanketing Dixie with snow Wednesday night before developing into a blizzard, pounded states from Mississippi to New Hampshire, dumping at least 20 inches in some areas.

The storm closed airports, schools, businesses and government offices, knocked out power over wide areas, particularly in the South, and stranded thousands of travelers.

Snow and ice made roads treacherous and brought traffic to a virtual halt in the Northeast, hit with its worst winter storm since mid-February 1983. Snow-packed roads were strewn with abandoned cars.

Utility crews labored to restore power to tens of thousands of homes up and down the Atlantic Coast where wind and snow snapped utility lines.

Up to 70,000 Duke Power Co. customers in North and South Carolina were without power Thursday, but that number was down to 36,650 late in the day, said utility spokeswoman Beatrice Thompson.

A Massachusetts man died after he was unable to get a flight to Texas where his family said he was to receive an artificial heart.

John Contonio, 37, of Worcester, died at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center in Worcester after the airports there and in Boston were closed. He was to have flown to Houston for surgery at the Texas Heart Institute.

In Washington, a 24-year-old woman whose car was snowed in gave birth to a 7-pound baby girl on a subway train.

Governors in New Jersey and Maryland declared states of emergency, while the National Guard in Baltimore transported doctors and nurses for emergency services.

As of early today, Dushore, Pa., had 21 inches of snow; Eagles Mere, Pa., 20 inches; Spruce Knob, W.V., 18 inches; 16 inches at Muncy, Pa., Middletown, Vt., and Williamsport, Pa.; 15 inches at LaPorte, Pa.; 13 inches at Albany, N.Y., and Snowshoe, W.Va.; and 12 inches at Cherry Hill, N.J., Pottstown, Pa., Manchester, N.H., and Lewisburg, W.Va.

Williamington, Del., had 12 inches; Washington, D.C., Newark, New York City and Martinsburg, W.Va., 11 inches; and 9 inches was recorded in Philadelphia.

Planned parenthood says parents should teach sex

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the Planned Parenthood Federation, responding to Education Secretary William J. Bennett's proposals for education against pre-marital sex, says parents, not schools, should teach children to abstain from sex.

Faye Wattleton, president of the family planning group, said Thursday that Bennett's speech calling for schools to jettison sex education courses that don't teach abstinence was "politically inspired" and fodder for "the anti-sex-education elements in this country."

But some educators said they welcomed Bennett's emphasis on character-building as a key element in any sex education course.

Bill Honig, California's superintendent of public instruction, said, "The sex ed classes (in the 1970s) that said, 'Here's your body, keep it clean and do what you want with it' were the worst. ... Now there's a huge shift in sex education. They are putting in the values question and the ethical consideration."

Bennett delivered the provocative speech Thursday morning at a National School Boards Association conference on character-building. Bennett's department gave the group an $83,000 grant to hold the meeting and distribute 20,000 copies of a handbook on successful sex education programs.

Nellie C. Weil, president of the National School

Boards Association and vice chairwoman of the school board in Montgomery, Ala., said she welcomed Bennett's emphasis on character, but "he is wrong in assuming that public schools are not teaching the rightness and wrongness of things."

She said schools are stepping up sex education efforts, partly in response to Surgeon General C. Everett Koop's recent call for straight talk to inform children about the dangers of AIDS.

"We desperately need now the public's attitude to reinforce what we're doing, so indeed when a child goes home and says to Momma and Daddy or whatever single parent might be at home, 'I was told in school that I shouldn't do this,' we're going to have their support in saying, 'Right, you shouldn't do that,'" she said.

Laurence J. McQuillen, a spokesman for the American Federation of Teachers, said his union opposes any national policy on sex education.

"It really is properly in the realm of local school districts," he said. "Standards that would be appropriate for New York and San Francisco probably would not sit well for cities in Alabama."

Wattleton, in a telephone interview from Planned Parenthood headquarters in New York, said, "One of the options that should be explored in sex education programs is the option of saying no to sexual activity with another person."

Re-elected as chairman

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., holds a news conference on Capitol Hill Thursday after he was re-elected chairman of the House Armed Services Committee. Aspin beat three other Democrats who sought the powerful position.

Committee to expand Iran-Contra investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A special Senate panel will expand its investigation of the Iran-Contra affair following State Department acknowledgement that the Reagan administration continued secret contacts with Iran as recently as last month.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said the fact that State Department and CIA officials were meeting with Iranian representatives a month after the disclosure that arms sale profits were diverted to Nicaraguan rebels indicates that President Reagan's foreign policy is seriously out of control.

State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said Thursday Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz consider Iran a strategic country and believe the United States has a "legitimate interest" in better relations with Iran.

But the U.S. official indicated the talks were broken off in December. "We will not discuss further arms shipments with Iran," he said. "And we are exerting all our influence to discourage arms sales to Iran by other countries."

Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of a select committee probing the Iran-Contra affair, said he will expand the investigation to include the disclosure. He said he "had no inkling" of the contacts between U.S. and Iranian representatives in December, and added that "nothing surprises me."

On Wednesday, Shultz told the House Foreign Affairs Committee that Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter assured him last May that the United States was not providing weapons to Iran to try to gain the release of American hostages, according to an informed source.

Poindexter, who was then President Reagan's assistant for national security affairs, told Shultz "it wasn't so" and Donald T. Regan, the president's chief of staff, said he was alarmed and concerned about reports of a deal, the source, who requested anonymity, said Thursday.

Actually, the U.S. weapons shipments had begun in February, three months earlier, while Israel had sent arms to Iran in September and November 1985, with the Reagan administration committed to replenishing Israel's armories.

Shultz testified he had been alerted by a cable from Charles H. Price II, the U.S. ambassador to Britain, while attending the economic summit meeting in Tokyo May 3-6. He sought out Poindexter and Regan, who also were in the Japanese capital with President Reagan. According to the source, Shultz also testified that Poindexter had informed him in February that the Americans held hostage in Lebanon would be freed soon.

The presidential assistant made no mention in the Feb. 28 conversation with Shultz of the fact that U.S. weapons were being shipped to Iran, the source said.

Shultz has not commented on the testimony he gave the Committee. But in a session last Friday with reporters at the State Department he indicated his displeasure with Poindexter, who resigned in November when the secret shipments were made public by Atty. Gen. Edwin Meese III.

"I confess, I would have a hard time working with John Poindexter right now," he said.

Intelligence sources, speaking on grounds of anonymity, told The Associated Press that Nicaraguan rebels set up a bank account to handle $10 million in "humanitarian" aid from the sultan of Brunei, but that a senior State Department official instead gave the sultan a Swiss account number controlled by then-White House aide Oliver L. North. U.S. officials have said they do not know what happened to that money.

IRS is ordered to simplify new W-4 forms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service has been told to consider designing a simpler W-4 form for workers to calculate the proper income tax withholdings from paychecks following widespread complaints that the new form is too complicated.

The IRS already has mailed out about 300 million of the four-page documents, which are designed to help taxpayers adjust their 1987 paycheck withholdings to square with the tax law revisions passed by Congress last year.

But Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III said Thursday the current form and the lengthy worksheet that it includes for calculating the scores of changes in deductions and tax rates that Congress made is "entirely too complicated."

"I have asked that there be a review of the W-4 form with a view toward changing it, seeing if we can simplify it," Baker told the House Budget Committee.

"We're going to ... see if we can't come up with a better form," he said.

The Treasury secretary said he did not know how long it would take to develop a new form or when it might be distributed. But he said that taxpayers in the meantime should continue filling out the present version "to avoid a lot of unpleasant surprises down the road."

The W-4 form is the document which tells employers how much to withhold from employees' paychecks — an amount which, in turn, is based on how many dependants or other allowances an individual or couple claims.

Because of the widespread changes made last year in the tax laws, all taxpayers are being required by the government to fill out W-4s this year and submit them to their employers by Oct. 1.

The IRS, which as late as last week had said there were no plans to change the forms, had urged taxpayers to get them back to employers as soon as possible "to avoid incorrect withholding" for the year.

Taxpayers are subject to penalties if too little is withheld from their paychecks and they end up with big tax bills when they fill out their returns.

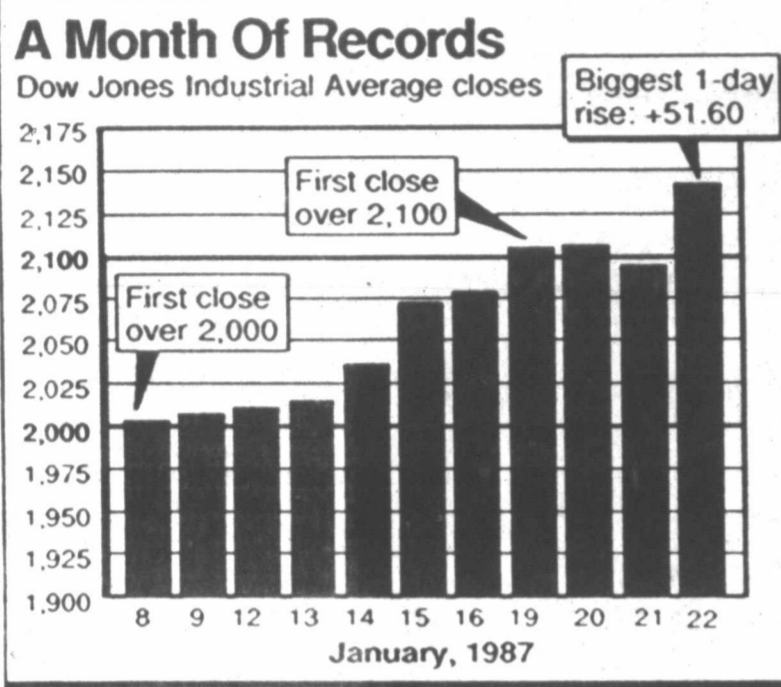

If too much is withheld, it amounts to an interest-free loan to the government, although overwithholding also increases the size of tax refunds.

The number of exemptions claimed on previous W-4s may not necessarily be correct for 1987, as the new tax law reduces or eliminates scores of previous deductions at the same time it reduces overall tax rates.

With instructions, the new form runs four pages, double the size of the old — although the part to be returned to the employer basically is the same seven lines as in the past.

In response to criticism of the new W-4s from Budget Committee members, Baker quipped: "I'm in the fortunate position of being able to say that when the W-4 came through for review, I was on vacation."

Texas Ranger killed during investigation

HORSESHOE BAY (AP) — A Texas Ranger was shot to death and an unidentified man died in a shootout as officers attempted to arrest a man suspected in two separate kidnappings, authorities said today.

During the shootout Thursday night, a 2-year-old kidnapped child was found safe and unharmed, and the body of an abducted maid was later discovered in a boat house nearby in this lakeside resort community, said David Wells, a Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman.

Ranger Stan Guffey, 40, of Brady died in a Burnet hospital late Thursday night, Wells said early this morning. Guffey was the first Ranger to be killed in the line of duty since 1978, Wells said.

He said the kidnapping suspect died at the scene of the shooting on Lake Lyndon B. Johnson west of Marble Falls.

Officers discovered the body of Denise Johnson, 22, a live-in maid at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Whitehead of Horseshoe Bay, identified as parents of the child who had also been abducted. The woman had been missing for about a week, Wells said.

The 2-year-old, Kara Lee Whitehead, had been kidnapped earlier Thursday from a home here, he said. Bill Whitehead of Horseshoe Bay.

There had been telephone calls demanding ransom in kidnapping of the child, Wells said. Further details were not immediately available concerning the ransom demands.

Wells said Guffey and Ranger John Aycock, 39, of Belton, were involved with other officers in a stakeout near a home at the time of the shootout.

Wells said the Rangers were hiding in the back seat of an automobile in which the suspect was about to attempt to use as a getaway car.

The man placed the child in the front seat of the car and then apparently saw the Rangers and fired at Guffey, striking him in the head, Wells said.

The spokesman said Aycock grabbed the child from the front seat and placed her behind him to shield the child from the gunfire.

Aycock then returned the fire, striking the man, Wells said. He said officers were not able to immediately determine how many shots were fired.

Wells said that although there were other officers in the area, they were not involved in the shootout.

Guffey was rushed to Sheppard Hospital at Burnet, where he was pronounced dead, Wells said.

Officers then began searching the area around the shootout. It was then that they located the body of the maid in a boat house at the rear of a home near the shootout scene. They estimated she had been dead for about two days.

Wells said the investigation began about a week ago when the maid was kidnapped.

Other agencies involved in the investigation included the FBI, DPS Criminal Intelligence officers, the Llano County Sheriff's office and the Marble Falls Police Department.

Guffey had been with DPS since October, 1968 and became a Ranger in 1979 after serving with the Texas Highway Patrol.

It was the first time since 1978 that a Texas Ranger had been killed in the line of duty, Wells said. In that case, he said, a Ranger was killed when he was shot during a drug raid.

The last Department of Public Safety employee killed in the line of duty was in April, 1985 when a highway patrol officer was run over by a truck after he had stopped a traffic violator, Wells added.

Stock market roars back

NEW YORK (AP) — After taking a one-day breather, the stock market has come roaring back to its torrid 1987 pace in what analysts say is an apparent signal that investors believe stocks will keep climbing for some time.

Stock prices Thursday shrugged off the broad declines of the day before, moving higher in a rebound that pushed several market indexes to record heights.

One of the most widely followed market barometers, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, soared a record 51.60 points to close at a new high of 2,145.67. That topped the record gain of 44.01 points Jan. 5 and pushed the Dow over the record close of 2,104.47 set Tuesday.

The record close was the 13th this year for the blue-chip market index, which had followed the general decline Wednesday and lost ground for the first time in 1987.

Wednesday's broad-based losses were written off by many analysts as a temporary "correction," in which investors decided to cash in on profits made so far in the 1987 rally.

Shooting gives Aquino's opposition ammunition

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The shooting of militant farmers by troops guarding the presidential palace gives new ammunition to leftists who charge President Corazon Aquino has abandoned the very ideals that propelled her to power.

The shooting took place Thursday as about 10,000 marchers pushed toward Mrs. Aquino's office to demand land reform — one of her government's major promises. Radical farmers and others on the left claim is the promise is unfulfilled.

At least 12 protesters were killed and 94 wounded. Within hours, leftist groups denounced the shootings as evidence that the Aquino government was no different from that of ousted President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

The charge was picked up by other critics, who for months have claimed the Aquino government is amateurish and poorly led.

"The Aquino administration has finally bared its real face," the independent, centrist Philippine Tribune wrote in an editorial.

"It is not, contrary to its well-studied and rehearsed tone of mock sincerity, a benevolent government bent on rehabilitating the Filipino masses. ... It is, instead, just another fascist regime."

"Worse, it is a mere cabal of unsophisticated, amateur power users and abusers," the newspaper wrote.

Conservative columnist Max V. Soliven, who supports firmness in dealing with the militant left, blamed the shooting on past government vacillation.

Abortion opponents rally in blizzard

WASHINGTON (AP) — Abortion opponents protested the Supreme Court's decision legalizing abortion for the 14th year in a row, their ranks thinned by heavy snow but buoyed by President Reagan's commitment to "the most basic civil right, the right to life."

A few thousand marchers bundled in snow gear made the trek Thursday from the White House to the Supreme Court. U.S. Park Police estimated the crowd at 2,000; District of Columbia police said 5,000. Previous years' marches have attracted up to 100,000 participants.

"They kill babies every day of the year, regardless of the weather," said Hal Brown, who traveled from Topeka, Kan., for his third march.

on the minds of abortion supporters and opponents alike. Although the court last June reaffirmed its decision legalizing abortion in a Pennsylvania case, the 5-4 vote was much narrower than the 7-2 majority that legalized abortion in the 1973 Roe vs. Wade case.

"Thanks to you, we're only one vote away from overturning Roe vs. Wade," Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., a staunch abortion foe, told the demonstrators at the outdoor rally.

Reagan, speaking to the demonstrators via telephone hook up to an outdoor speaker, referred to the Supreme Court ruling as "the tragedy of 1973."

"Abortion is not a harmless medical procedure but the taking of the life of a living human being. This tragic and terrible toll continues at a rate of more than 4,000 young lives lost each day," he said.

Campaign aide chosen for GOP position

AUSTIN (AP) — John Weaver, who helped manage winning campaigns for Gov. Bill Clements and U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, has been selected as executive director of the state Republican Party.

Weaver, 27, will replace Jane Matheson, who resigned to return to private law practice in Austin. She had been executive director since April 1985.

State GOP Chairman George Strake selected Weaver for the director's job, saying he has "an outstanding record of achievement."

Weaver most recently was deputy campaign manager for Clements' 1986 general election campaign, and also had the same job in Gramm's 1984 campaign.

Stink over skunk fades

STRATFORD (AP) — The big stink over Hacker's Skunk Trial has faded but is not forgotten.

And chances are, it will be a long time before folks in this normally quiet Panhandle town forget the day their city hall got gassed.

"I'd say on a scale of one to 10, this rates about a nine for unusualness," County Attorney Jack Barton said Wednesday after a judge agreed to dismiss the case against Alvin Hacker.

It all started when Hacker, a 66-year-old retired carpenter, found a baby skunk in his yard last summer and didn't know what to do with it.

He took it in a plastic bucket to the sheriff's department in city hall, where he was told to let the animal controller take care of it, Hacker said.

What happened next fueled one of the hottest debates ever to hit this farm and ranching community of less than 2,000.

One faction claims the skunk shot its spray just as Hacker left the building to wait outside. Hacker insisted the skunk was too young to have such artillery and only carried some of its mother's odor.

But the city charged Hacker with misdemeanor disorderly conduct, specifically by emitting a noxious odor.

At issue was whether the skunk really did shoot its foul weapon in city hall June 17, whether a skunk's spray is considered a "chemical" and whether Hacker brought the furry animal into city hall to intentionally create the odor.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

Destination Unknown

These super highways, these interlocking cloverleaves of shiny concrete that crisscross our land are an amazing marvel of our nation's engineering. And yet for all the time and inconvenience they save unless we know exactly where we are going they can become a confusing maze... a motorist's nightmare.

We can easily compare our lives to the automobiles that travel these highways. A driver without a known destination in mind, a motorist that does not know where he is going, a man without a map or a guiding plan is soon lost amid the complex interchanges. And so it is with life. Each of us has but one true destination and that is toward God and His promise of Eternal Life. The church, your church, is the guidepost that lights the way; it is the sign on the highway that points the route. Give your life a known destination... Go to the church of your choice.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

New pastor takes over at 1st Assembly

Rev. Herbert C. Peak Jr. is the new pastor of First Assembly of God, 500 S. Cuyler. Rev. Peak and his wife, Evelyn, have recently moved to Pampa with their sons, Scott, Todd and Christopher as the pastor assumed his duties at the church. The Peaks reside at 2425 Evergreen.

The Peaks moved here from Sioux City, Iowa, where he was pastor of First Assembly of God there.

The entire Peak family are musically inclined. Mrs. Peak has been involved in music and prayer ministries as well as accepting speaking engagements for various seminars and other events.

Rev. Peak attended East Tennessee State University, Memphis State University, Central Bible College and Drury College. He has pastored churches in South Carolina, Missouri and Iowa.

He also has been associated with the Radio-Television Department of the Assemblies of God as program director for the radio programs, Revivaltime and Every Day With Jesus.

Congregation members invite the public to meet the Peak family and attend services featuring their ministry of preaching and music.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Even a child is known by his actions, by whether his conduct is pure and right. (Proverbs 20:11 NIV)

I used to own a bright, lime-green cap which matched a pantsuit. The cap never failed to elicit good-natured jibes.

Thinking my cap would give my father-in-law a chuckle, I wore it one day when my family went to visit him. After lunch, I said to him, "You surprised me; you didn't say a word about my cap."

My soft-spoken father-in-law grinned slyly and answered, "No, but I noticed!"

Christians' lives are constantly on display. Though we may be oblivious to our audience, we are under observation. Because Christ lives in us, He, too, is under scrutiny by fellow believers and by searching or hostile non-believers.

My husband came home one day disheartened. He had overheard some other men talking disgustedly about a man who is normally an excited, voca Christian.

The young man apparently had cheated while participating in a sporting event. As far as I know, nothing was ever said to the man, but the comment spoken behind his back was, "You have to watch those Bible-thumpers; they'll do you in every time."

Both the cause of Christ and the young man's Christian witness were damaged because of his dishonest approach to recreation.

Only God knows better than we do how imperfect we are. Our heavenly Father forgives us, but we humans tend to record each other's faults and mistakes in our memory banks.

As Christians, we have a responsibility to consistently represent Jesus Christ to the best of our abilities in every area of our lives. Souls are being influenced by us, and though our observers may not say anything, they notice.

Rev. Bruce and Susan Taylor

Ministry is a family pledge

By PAUL MCGINN
Piano Star-Courier

PLANO, Texas (AP) — For Bruce and Susan Taylor, the "Rev." before their names means more than sharing clerical titles.

They share business and home addresses.

With their installation last fall as associate pastors at Grace Presbyterian Church, the Taylors say they bring more than a marriage to the 765-member congregation.

Susan Taylor, whose duties include ministering to youth, and Bruce Taylor, whose duties include adult education, are the first such couple hired at the seven-year-old church.

"Ministry can be so much more inclusive of people, and the Taylors will symbolize that," said the Rev. Cleve Wheelus, pastor at Grace since 1979. "The challenge will be within themselves to be professional toward each other as well as realizing that they share an extra dimension of their lives in their marriage."

This is the first professional ministerial assignment for Bruce Taylor, 36. He said he hoped to use his background as an attorney to help keep church members out of the courtroom by teaching people to seek remedies through such avenues as conciliation and arbitration.

"People can come to respect each other through these alternatives because they see each other as people of value rather than as having their relationship damaged by disagreements," he said.

Susan Taylor, 33, said she brings to her third professional ministerial post a commitment to the family, exemplified by the couple's infant daughter, Christine Louise.

"I've heard a lot of things about Plano, that it's affluent, that it's Yuppiesville, that there are a lot of people here who want to get ahead, sometime at the expense of families," she said. "One of the big things we want to do is be a model of what a family is."

Mrs. Taylor said that one of her goals as a youth minister is to communicate to children and teen-agers that she is available to talk about anything troubling them. She said she takes her cue from the teen suicides in Plano in 1983.

The Taylors are the first associate pastors hired at the same time in the history of the Grace Presbyterian, said Carrie Washington, associate executive presbyter for ministerial relations. The presbytery encompasses 207 churches in 53 counties in Northeast Texas.

Only one other ordained married couple working in the presbytery, at Central Presbyterian Church, was hired eight years apart, Washington said.

Although such arrangements as that made between Grace Presbyterian and the Taylors are new, the concept behind hiring a husband-wife pastoral team is not, Washington said.

"In the past, when a pastor was hired, the wife was literally a member of the staff, taking care of everything from child care to education to baking," Washington said. "The only difference was the wives weren't paid."

Soviets expand religious rights

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The man who keeps watch on religion in the Soviet Union paints an upbeat picture of religious life there, but concedes restrictions on it. He says such laws are being reconsidered, some already modified.

Konstantin Kharchev, the first head of the Soviet Council of Religion Affairs to visit this country, says "the process of democratization now going on in my country" will mean more latitude for believers.

He says religious legislation is being reviewed to make it accord "with the new stage of development in our society."

Changes assure the church of the "right to property," he says, and may permit religious teaching of children in groups and may allow non-Soviet travelers to bring in religious literature, all now prohibited.

Asked why prisoners are denied Bibles and other religious articles, he says such a denial violates present Soviet law and that prison authorities would be held responsible.

He says his department will look into the problem to resolve it, adding that such violations "means that we work not good enough. ... But tell me, in what country will you find a law which will be respected by everyone?"

Of the current rule against Hebrew classes or religious classes for the young, he says, "Changes are possible. We are now reconsidering many provisions of this legislation."

Kharchev, 52, last week ended a 12-day U.S. visit with Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish leaders at invitation of the Appeal of Conscience Foundation, an interfaith organization working for religious freedom worldwide.

Its president, Rabbi Arthur Schneier, told a news conference that 20 years ago, the Soviet deputy chairman for religion told him religion was only for the old and dying and when they're gone, it would disappear in the Soviet Union.

But it's now clear that "religion is very much alive," contradicting the former prediction, Schneier said.

Kharchev agreed. "Of course, it was a mistake. It was wishful thinking."

He said present Soviet policy takes "a realistic approach," accepting religious life into the "far-seeing future" and seeking to make "the believer feel well within the Soviet state."

He said American social scientists put the total of Soviet believers at 115 million, but the Soviet keeps no statistics on it. "We never ask a man whether he believes in God or not," he said.

However, he later put the proportion of believers at 20 percent, much lower than studies there indicate.

Interspersing his comments with quotations from the Old Testament and Jesus, Kharchev said he himself was "not a believer. I am a communist. But I treat believers with respect."

He said he has studied religion history and "I know a little bit of the Bible."

Asked why the religious council should be headed by a communist non-believer lacking religious experience, he said an American-shared principle was that government posts be filled on the basis of competence, not religion.

It "should be headed by a man who is honest, who can respect the rights of others who wants to make the life of the people easier," he said. "Anyone who can be in my position, believer or communist, should be of this moral quality."

Methodist youth mission meet planned

LUBBOCK - United Methodist youth from across the Northwest Texas Conference will attend a Mission Awareness Weekend scheduled Jan. 30-31 at First United Methodist Church in Lubbock.

The session is designed to give the youth a greater insight into the Christian mission locally, nationally and around the world.

Louis Schowengerdt, bishop of the Northwest Texas and New Mexico Area, will be the keynote speaker.

The weekend also will feature worship, workshops and various other presentations. Rev. Gene Wisdom, pastor of Forrest Heights UMC in Lubbock, will lead the closing worship.

The youth Senate will convene with two youth delegates and one adult delegate from each local church to establish 1987 Youth Service Fund (YSF) projects. YSF certificates also will be presented.

Participants will be able to select and attend two of seven workshops.

Titles of the workshops include "Responding to the Rural Crisis," "Mission Opportunities at Home," "Money Makes the World Go Around ...

Or Does It?," "Is There Mission After High School?," "So You Want to Be a Missionary in Muleshoe ...," "Hungry Decisions — Around the World" and "Hungry Decisions — Around the Corner."

Conducting the workshops will be Paula Pitt, extension agent for Swisher County; Randy McCurdy, director of youth ministry at First Methodist in Lubbock; Rev. Dixie Robertson, conference program associate for youth; Rachel Divers, a deaconess from Lubbock; Rev. Connie Nelson-Daniel, pastor of Welch and Wellman UMCs; Carolyn Lanier, director of South Plains Food Bank at Lubbock; and youth in college ministries at Texas Tech University, West Texas State University and McMurry College.

Members of the design team who helped plan the event include Shelley Heck and Cam Givan, Tulia; Corky Kiser, Dumas; Bobby Newton, Abilene; Medina Corwin, Big Spring; Chelle Wisdom, Lubbock, and Eric Clark, Stamford.

Co-chairmen of the design team are Kristina Horn, Abilene, and Rev. Bill Titus, pastor of Wesley United Methodist Church at Amarillo.

For further information, contact the conference office at 1-762-0201 in Lubbock.

Church to sponsor movie here

Cry From the Mountain, a World Wide Pictures production featuring an appearance by evangelist Billy Graham, will be shown Feb. 6-12 at the Cinema IV Theater in Pampa.

Advanced discount adult tickets are available at Central Baptist Church, 513 E. Francis (call 665-1631) for $3. Children's tickets will be available at the door.

Cry From the Mountain is an Alaskan adventure film centering around the Sanders family.

Screenwriter Daniel L. Quick set the story in the majestic scenery of Alaska. The film shows the extensive beauty and wildlife of this "last frontier" state.

Larry Sanders takes his 10-year-old son Cal on a camping trip where he is to break the news that he and his wife Carolyn are to get a divorce. A life-threatening accident and an old hermit living in a deserted mining camp combine to change the course of Larry's direction.

Carolyn, faced with the option of getting an abortion, is bitter and unable to forgive her husband for a temporary affair he carried on with a girl working in his office.

Wes Parker plays Larry, whose marriage is on the brink of disaster because of his unfaithfulness and his wife's unwillingness to forgive.

Rita Walter portrays Carolyn, who is unable to forgive her husband of his unfaithfulness. She contemplates an abortion.

Chris Kidd plays 10-year-old Cal. When his father is seriously injured in a kayaking accident, Cal seeks the help of the old mountaineer, Jonathan.

James Cavan acts the role of Jonathan, an old hermit who lives alone with his dog Jake. Jonathan is the caretaker of the deserted mining camp, Independent Mine. He detests the intrusion of Larry and Cal but is able to share his Christian faith.

Billy Graham appears as himself with a message of hope.

Notable in the supporting cast is Coleen Gray, who plays the mother of Carolyn Sanders.

Religion Roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Roman Catholic bishops have issued guidelines — to be prominently printed in parish worship materials — on rules for receiving Holy Communion.

The guidelines say non-Catholic guests are welcome at the services, but even if Christians, they cannot be offered "a general invitation to receive Communion" because of "sad divisions in Christianity."

"Reception of the Eucharist by Christians not fully united with us would imply a oneness which does not yet exist, and for which we must all pray," the guidelines say.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — The family ministries committee of the Assemblies of God says "the traditional American family is now in the minority." Less than 10 percent of the nation's families include a working father, stay-at-home mother and one or more children, the committee says.

NEW YORK (AP) — By a narrow vote of 94-91, secretaries, clerks and production workers of the United Methodist Church's mission agency have voted to break ties with their labor union.

However, the union, District 65 of United Auto workers, has challenged the results with the National Labor Relations Board, claiming management unlawfully aided workers opposing the union and intimidated those supporting it.

Austin author reveals facts about peppers

By EILEEN McCLELLAND
Odessa American

MIDLAND (AP) — Columbus discovered America, but he also discovered peppers.

In a book titled, "Peppers, the Domesticated Capsicums," published by the University of Texas Press, Austin author Jean Andrews reveals little-known facts about peppers. She dedicated her book to Christopher Columbus.

"Columbus was looking for black pepper," Ms. Andrews said. "That's why they named them peppers. My publisher didn't think a book had ever been dedicated to Columbus before."

While known as the pepper here, it's called the "aji" in South America, the "chile" in India and the scientific term "capsicum" in other exotic climes.

"The pepper is the most used spice and condiment in the world," Ms. Andrews says. "And it originated in this hemisphere. It was a New World plant, and we didn't realize that until this century. Peppers changed food so much that you don't think of food in India ever being without peppers."

While peppers were found here, within 50 years of the discovery they found their way to China.

"They were small and easy to transport, and birds spread them," she said.

Peppers were an immediate hit because diets were so bland at the time, she explained.

The widespread popularity of Mexican food attests to the pepper's importance, Ms. Andrews said. "It's the fastest growing ethnic food in America. The taco is a national dish now."

The pepper adds flavor to the environment as well as to food, she said.

"It adds color at a particular time of the year when there is no color in the yard," she said. "And it's used in the industry as a coloring agent, because it's a natural source of color.

Ms. Andrews urges pepper reform in one aspect, however.

"It would solve the confusion worldwide if we would all call them capsicums," she said.

Here are some of Ms. Andrews' recipes using the world's favorite spice:

AJI DE GALLINA (CHICKEN IN PEPPER SAUCE)

This variation of an unusual Peruvian dish may be prepared ahead of time and frozen. Allow it to return to room temperature before heating. Serves 8 to 10.

- 1 (3½-4 pound) chicken, quartered
- 1 large onion, quartered
- 2 to 3 stalks of celery
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon pepper
- Water to cover

- Sauce:
- 2 cups fresh bread crumbs
 - 2 cups milk
 - 2 medium onions, chopped
 - 2 cloves garlic, minced
 - 5 fresh Puca-uchas or Serranos (peppers)
 - 2 medium tomatoes
 - 1 cup grated Parmesan cheese, divided
 - 6 ounces walnuts, chopped
 - Salt and pepper to taste
 - ½ cup cracker crumbs
 - ½ cup sliced black olives
 - 4 eggs, hardboiled, sliced lengthwise

Cook chicken, onion, celery, and seasonings in a large pot until tender. Allow to cool in the stock. Remove the skin and bones; shred the meat. Strain the stock. Set the chicken and stock aside. To make the sauce, soak the bread crumbs in the milk in a large mixing bowl. Sauté the onion and garlic until golden, then add to the soaked crumbs. Puree the peppers and tomatoes in a processor or blender; add to the crumb mixture. Put the sauce in a large pan; cook until it thickens. Preheat oven to 350 degrees F.

Add chicken, 1 cup chicken stock, ½ cup cheese, walnuts and seasonings to the sauce. Cook over medium heat for about 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Pour into a greased 9x15x2-inch baking dish.

Spread ½ cup cheese and cracker crumbs over the top of the chicken and sauce. Bake until very hot and bubbly, 30 to 40 minutes.

Garnish with black olives and egg slices.

PEBRE (SOUTH AMERICAN HOT SAUCE)

- Yields 1 cup
- 1 medium onion, minced
 - 1 clove garlic, minced
 - 2 tablespoons finely chopped cilantro
 - 1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley
 - 2 or more chincin-uchus, seeded and finely chopped (Serranos may be substituted)
 - 3 tablespoons olive oil
 - 1 tablespoon lemon juice
 - Salt, to taste

The number of chiles used in this sauce is up to personal taste; more or less may be used. Combine all the ingredients in a bowl and let stand for about one hour before serving for the flavor to develop. Serve with any meat.

BANANA PEPPER BOTANAS (In Mexico, appetizers are called botanas). Serves 12 to 24.

- 12 fresh, sweet, yellow Banana peppers
- Roquefort filling:
 - 2 (3-ounce) packages cream cheese, softened
 - 1 clove garlic, crushed
 - 1 tablespoon mayonnaise

discovered Columbus found a large variety of peppers when he arrived in America.

- ¼ cup crumbled Roquefort cheese
- Tabasco sauce, to taste
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- ½ cup chopped pecans (optional)
- Paprika for garnish

Wash and split peppers in half lengthwise. Remove the seeds and veins. Fill with your favorite cheese or meat filling, such as the Roquefort filling given here. To make the filling, place all the ingredients but the pecans in a food processor or blender. Blend until smooth. Stir in the pecans by hand. Fill the banana pepper halves with the cheese mixture and garnish with a dash of paprika. Serve cold. If too large cut as desired.

Tracing Indian ancestors

By GENA WALLS

Are you searching for Indian ancestors? Records are available and should be viewed very carefully for "hidden" information. First try to determine what tribe, then check Tribal Rolls. These rolls include the leasing of mineral rights and persons receiving educational funds. Data varies on each roll. Anything prior to 1880 must come from Tribal Rolls or private sources.

Indian census were taken by the federal government in 1884 and are available on microfilm. Also check probate records for the area. After confirming the area, locate any church records that might have had an active missionary program at that time. Cherokee were the first to keep written records, but be very careful with the "kinship" classification. When a parent died, often another member of the family assumed the role of the deceased. Father could mean uncle, step-father could mean uncle, and sister could be cousin, half-sister or even daughter.

Mary Evelyn Rogers, 3415 S. 26th St., Muskogee, Okla., 74401, has written a book, A Brief History of the Cher- okees, that might be helpful. The book is fully indexed and referenced and includes portions about the Eastern and Western Nations, Texas Cherokees and the Eastern Band. You may order the book from the author for $37.

Remember you did NOT have to be Indian to claim "Indian Lands" in Oklahoma. Many settlers from the Tennessee - North Carolina area were not Indian, simply people wanting a better life who thought this was the way to a better future. Their motto might have been "Pride in the Past with Faith in the Future" as they moved westward with their families and traditions while shaping the "new country." Happy hunting!

Sideline turns into business

LENKERVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Marvin R. Troutman was a bored Millersburg undertaker when he bought the local movie theater 30 years ago after helping to bury the owner.

"I thought it would be a nice sideline," he said.

Troutman's flair for the cinema, his energy and business acumen built the enterprise to a chain of 12 theaters and a business that supplies the popcorn and candy sold in his concessions.

He decided to stock the concessions himself because of unreliable service from suppliers in the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh areas, Troutman said. The theater supply business began taking over his time when theater managers heard about it and wanted to be customers, he said.

Today, Troutman's Cinema Supply Co., based in a former one-room schoolhouse in this Upper Paxton Township community, serves 300 theaters in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, West Virginia and Virginia, as far south as Fredericksburg.

"We didn't plan this," Troutman said. "We'd get calls from other theaters and make our deliveries in a station wagon."

Starting in the basement of his home, Troutman said, "I did everything, even popped the popcorn." Now, he has 12 employees and four vehicles to deliver and pick up warehouse stock.

Troutman measures the success of a motion picture by how much popcorn is sold, instead of how many tickets are bought. He says a theater manager does not rate his concession sales as a percentage of box-office receipts.

"We talk about per-capita consumption," Troutman said, with the norm on the East Coast today averaging $1.38 in concession purchases for each theatergoer.

The "all-time champ popcorn picture was 'E.T.,'" he said. "No. 2 was 'Grease,' and No. 3 was 'Rambo.'" Popcorn sales also reflect the attendance figures, he said.

Troutman rates "Star Trek IV" as the best popcorn picture now showing. "Right away, when a picture like that hits, it empties our warehouse," he said.

Besides the popcorn, Cinema Supply handles butter topping, paper cups and tubs, 20 varieties of candy and concentrated Coke syrup in five-gallon dispensers.

Most of the popcorn Troutman distributes goes out unpopped, since the rent paid by owners of the multiple theaters in shopping malls is so high they cannot afford the storage costs, he said.

German love affair is ill-fated

DEAR ABBY: I am 18 years old and I'm stationed in Germany. Four months ago I fell in love with a German woman. She's 33 years old and married. I met her when I went out with her daughter, who is 16. Our relationship started out just talking about our problems. She has a very unhappy marriage, and this was my first time away from home. I was lonely, and she was very understanding.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

Well, I sure didn't expect it to happen, but we had a love affair the second time we were together. I saw her every chance I could. The problem is that she's in love with me, but I'm not sure I'm in love with her. I care for her and feel sorry for her, but the feelings I had for her in the beginning are just not there anymore.

I can't turn her away because it would cause her so much heartbreak and sadness. She wants me to wait until she can divorce her husband, but I really don't want to go through with anything like that. I hate to hurt her. Please help me. COUNTRY BOY IN GERMANY opportunity. Be honest with this woman, and tell her exactly how you feel.

Don't worry about hurting her. She's 33 and can take care of herself. You're only 18 and have your whole life ahead of you. Don't mess it up by continuing in this dangerous relationship. Talk to your chaplain. He's seen many a young soldier in your position and can help you handle it. I'm glad you wrote. Please write again and let me know how your life is going. Country Boy, I care.

DEAR ABBY: I have had a quote for a very long time, but I have never been able to locate the source. I have been to the public library and looked in every collection of quotations I could find, and I still can't find it. Can you — or one of your readers — help me? This is it: "When, wherever you live in the world, you can have children only when you wish, that will be a revolution with more far-reaching effects on the pattern of human culture than the discovery of atomic energy."

M.J.S. IN ORLANDO

DEAR M.J.S.: That statement was made by Lord Brain, a former president of the International Society of Internal Medicine, Obstetrics and Gynecology in Great Britain. He died in 1966.

Awake and sing

NEW YORK (AP) — Why does it seem so difficult to get started for work on Monday mornings? Scientists think it has to do with sleeping patterns.

According to research, humans have biological inner clocks which try to regulate sleep patterns. When people keep regular sleeping schedules during the week and then stay up late and sleep late on weekends, the inner clock is disoriented. The result is Blue Mondays.

Scientists recommend maintaining a regular schedule of meals, work and exercise. When you stay up later than usual, try to wake within an hour of your regular rising time.

Broncos experienced rocky road to Super Bowl

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—The New York Giants drove down a smoothly paved freeway to the Super Bowl. For the Denver Broncos, it was more like a dirt road with speed bumps, potholes and detours.

When the teams meet for the NFL championship Sunday, will the Giants' life in the fast lane give them an edge? Or will the Broncos be toughened up by their travails along the back roads?

"We've had every scenario you can come up with," Broncos wide receiver Steve Watson said. "We've had blowouts, games where we had to come from behind, good streaks and bad. There isn't anything you can do to us that we haven't experienced."

The Broncos went 11-5 in 1985, but came off that season with an extra bite in their playoff appetite after failing to qualify for the postseason with such a gaudy record. They used that hunger as impetus for a 6-0 start.

"Everything looked great then," Watson said. "But we didn't expect a 16-0 season."

What they got was a 5-5 finish which raised doubts about their ability to win a big game, a playoff game. When they were routed 41-16 by Seattle in the regular season finale, the Broncos realized they were on a ride to nowhere.

"It really woke us up," running back Gerald Willhite said. "It made us think about the type of game we had to play to beat a playoff team. We've got guys who take things very seriously. There were goals to be met. We set them and now we have almost reached them."

But even Coach Dan Reeves wondered where his club was headed after the Seattle blowout.

"That was the most disappointed I've ever been in this football team," he said. "I'm not taking anything away from Seattle, but we were embarrassing. We didn't look like a professional football team heading into the playoffs. It was not the situation that makes you confident."

"It was one of the few times I felt we didn't play hard. It woke us up. We realized we had to get back to where we wanted to be in a hurry, get back to the things we did to win 11 games."

"We don't want to get into a situation where a loss has to help you. You learn more from winning. But when it happens, you have to take something from it, use it and make sure something like that doesn't happen again."

Obviously, the Broncos made all the right moves in the playoffs, turning in the proper direction — west to Pasadena by way of Cleveland and a 23-20 overtime victory that may have said more about this team than anything it did in the previous 17 games.

"That was the most hostile, adverse situation possible," Watson said of the AFC championship game, when the Broncos were backed to their own 2, trailing 20-13 in the fourth quarter. "I'd never seen a situation like that in my life, with the fans screaming and the dog bones flying."

"It was like being inside a cage against a very worthy opponent, with everyone on the outside rooting against you and all you ever worked for depending on that last drive."

The Giants avoided such critical situations in the playoffs, routing San Francisco and Washington by a combined 66-3. New York had several games go down to the wire, but the Giants were in control in most.

They finished the regular season 14-2 with a nine-game winning streak. Rarely did they stall.

"We don't win very pretty, but we win," star running back Joe Morris said, "and nobody cares how you do it. We win and we get more confidence to keep winning. People write about winners, they don't write about losers."

Like Reeves, Giants quarterback Phil Simms sees little use in examining losses. This season, he had little need to do so, anyway.

"You don't learn nothing by losing," he said. "It just makes you self-doubt everything. ... When you lose, the tendency is to be twice as hard on yourself and self-doubt creeps in, and you can only be in trouble."

Linebacker Lawrence Taylor doesn't think his team has been spoiled by success.

"I don't think there is any overconfidence," he said. "If the other team is saying it, we look at each other and say, 'What are they talking about?' We take every game the same way, just doing what we have to do to win and that's all we've been doing all season."

"We are on a stretch right now where we scored over 100 points and only gave up 27 in last three games. I think we started to peak at the right time and this game is going to be when you have to peak."

"We went 16-2 and if we don't win the Super Bowl, we've got to start all over again. And we've come this far and done too much to have to start over again."

Pampa's Nelson enjoying role of team player at Texas Tech

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

Mike Nelson scored 1,995 points in high school. He averaged close to 24 points per game as a Pampa High senior.

However, Nelson's scoring ability has been in somewhat of a holding pattern since the 6-3 senior became a member of the Texas Tech basketball team four years ago. Adjusting to a new position has been the one of the reasons for the lack of scoring punch. Another reason has been the team play Coach Gerald Myers' Red Raiders are noted for. But Nelson isn't complaining. He's just happy being a team player.

"There's no individuals on this team," Nelson said. "We're just trying to play together."

Nelson's scoring average (around 9 points per game) this season is good, but it's a trifling sum compared to the 18.3 ppg career average in high school.

Switching from a forward to a guard spot in college proved to be a major adjustment for Nelson, who played up front for the Harvesters. Learning to handle the ball outside was a new experience.

"There's just no way I can play forward in college because of my height (6-3). The inside guys are just so much taller than I am," added Nelson, who is a member of the starting five.

Nelson is considered the best pure shooter on the team and his scoring is picking up. He hit 13 points in Tech's 62-60 loss to Texas A & M last Saturday. He had a season high of 18 points in a game against Wyoming back on Dec. 11 and is second on the team in three-point goals with 18.

"We have a long way to go before we're going to be as good as last year's team," Nelson said, recalling Tech's march to the Southwest Conference Championship last season. "Hopefully, we can get as far or further than we did last season, but it's going to take a team effort."

The Red Raiders are having their problems this season and will be hard-pressed to catch league-leading TCU, currently 6-0 in SWC play. Tech is 8-9 overall and fourth in conference play with a 4-3 mark.

Nelson has bittersweet memories of his junior year when Tech advanced into the NCAA tournament. He was on the starting five when his dad, Charles, died suddenly early in the season. Mike's biggest booster ever since his Optimist Club basketball days had been his dad. Nelson spent the remainder of the season trying to shake off the aftereffects of that tragedy.

"There was probably a little letdown on my part," Nelson said. "I missed a week of practice and I never did work myself back into the lineup."

This season Nelson — in perhaps his last harrah as a basketball player — has started the majority of the Red Raider games. He started eight games as a junior and saw action in 47 games his sophomore and freshman seasons.

Nelson's high school honors may never be equaled by another Harvester cager. He is the school record holder in scoring, rebounding and assists and was the district's player of the year four times. He led the Harvesters to the state tournament quarterfinals as a junior and was an all-stater as a senior. He was named MVP in the Texas High School Coaches Association all-star game.

After his star-studded prep career, Nelson had dreams about playing in the NBA. Now, he's become more realistic.

"I'm not even thinking about pro ball right now. I'm just trying to get my degree. (Nelson is a secondary education major)," he said. "If I get the opportunity to play later on, I might."

For the present — before Nelson is separated from the Lubbock school for good — he wants to help get the Red Raiders back into the SWC race.

Levelland routs Pampa

LEVELLAND — Levelland jumped out to early leads in both games and Pampa was never able to catch up in District 1-4A action Thursday night.

Guards Scott Moore and Teddy Lantham sparked Levelland to a 64-34 victory in the boys' game. Levelland girls, who have been averaging 68 points per game to their opponent's 23, again had too much firepower for the Lady Harvesters in a 78-30 win.

In the boys' game, Levelland shot away to an 11-2 lead and Pampa never got closer than seven points.

Moore and Lantham were on a shooting roll from the outside for the Lobos, hitting 15 and 14 points respectively.

Michael Shepherd chipped in 14.

Lonnie Mills paced Pampa with 17 points, but the 6-0 senior had little help from his teammates in the scoring column. Chris Evans had 6 points, David Duke 4, Shawn Harris, Derrick Ryan and Jason Farmer 2 each, and Troy Owens 1.

Pampa drops to 3-5 in district play and 7-15 overall. Levelland improves to 7-1 and 18-5.

Fouls and turnovers hurt the Harvesters. Levelland made 26 trips to the foul line, hitting on 20 shots. Pampa hit 6 of 11 tries from the line. Pampa mistakes, especially in the early going, help give the Lobos an insurmountable lead.

Levelland girls, ranked No. 1 in Class 4A, gave the Lady Harvesters a clinic on the fullcourt press.

Levelland, 23-1, built a 42-9 bulge in the first half.

Kim Cavanaugh led the Lady Lobos, 10-0 in district, in scoring with 16 points.

Jackie Reed tossed in 11 points for the Lady Harvesters while Yolanda Brown added 9.

Pampa teams host Lubbock Estacado tonight, beginning at 6 p.m. in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Mark O'Meara takes early lead in Phoenix Open

O'Meara shoots 63 to lead Phoenix Golf Open

Frozen greens delay tourney

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Mark O'Meara has a goal for the 1987 PGA Tour season, and a plan to achieve it.

"I'm going to play more in the United States this year, not so much overseas, work on my game and try to get back on top," O'Meara said.

He took the first step toward that goal with an 8-under-par 63 that provided him with the lead Thursday in the unfinished first round of the $600,000 Phoenix Open golf tournament.

Frost and frozen greens delayed the start of play by 1½ hours, backed up the starting times and left 45 players stranded on the course by darkness.

They marked their positions on the course and were scheduled to return at daylight today to complete their first rounds.

O'Meara won two American tournaments and two foreign events in 1985, was second on the season's money-winning list and appeared poised to take a step toward the top of the game.

"But I didn't play as well as I could last year," he said. "Pro golf is like any other job. You go at it, and go at it, and go at it, and you get tired of it."

"About the middle of the season last year, I got tired of playing golf," he said. And, while he finished second or third in five tournaments, he failed to win in this country.

Now, after a lengthy break from golf, O'Meara said he's excited about the prospect of making an attempt at regaining lost ground.

"I have goals I want to achieve this year, like playing on the Ryder Cup team. So I'm going to play a lot in this country — the first eight tournaments in a row — and try to get back on top," he said.

O'Meara, using a new driver, did not miss a fairway on the new TPC course at Scottsdale, missed only one green, didn't make a bogey and didn't have a 5 on his card.

He capped his effort, "the best score I've had in several years," he said, with a 2-iron shot that set up a 3-foot eagle putt on the 15th.

That gave him a one-shot lead over Brad Faxon, who had four birdies and an eagle in one 5-hole stretch.

Corey Pavin, a winner last week in the Bob Hope Classic, led a group at 65 that included Bobby Clampett, Ed Fiori and Steve Jones. Rocco Mediate was another stroke back at 66.

Defending champion Hal Sutton was in a large group at 67 that also included Fuzzy Zoeller and Andy Bean.

PGA champion Bob Tway matched par 71.

Texas outdoors Bald eagles wintering in Texas

By BOB GWIZDZ
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

They're here. American bald eagles, which symbolize everything from bourbon to national pride, are wintering in Texas. Experts estimate from 500 to 900 bald eagles spend November through March in the Lone Star State. And anyone with the desire to see one and a willingness to expend a little energy can do so. Eagles can be found wintering along major river systems and big reservoirs across the state.

"More of them seem to winter in the Panhandle and along our East Texas lakes than we ever see in South Texas," said Floyd Potter, a wildlife biologist with Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. "But I think that's because there's more water in East Texas and the Panhandle than in South Texas."

"The larger lakes in East Texas are most assuredly the best place to see bald eagles," Potter said. "I flew around the shoreline of Toledo Bend one time and I counted more than 40 of them. They're also fairly common along the major river systems, particularly in East Texas."

The eagles arrive over about a three-week period in November from their distant and not-so-distant summer homes.

"There are two subspecies of bald eagle, the Northern and Southern," Potter said. "They are very difficult to distinguish just by looking at them. The ones that nest in the South, in the wintertime, are the Southern bald eagle. The Northern bald eagle nests in the North. However, they both come south."

"We have more Northern bald eagles wintering in Texas than we do Southern bald eagles."

Potter said nesting activity is the principal means of identifying the subspecies.

The northern subspecies nests and summers well to the north. They are so numerous in some northern states (Michigan and Minnesota, for instance) that they are not listed as endangered species, though they are protected by federal statute. "They're fairly common along the northern tier states," Potter said. "They go all the way to Canada."

The southern strain, which nests along the Gulf Coast—roughly from Rockport to Houston—also migrates northward, though biologists are not exactly sure where. TP&W biologist David Mabie is beginning his third year of a tagging program designed to find out.

The birds are wing-marked and leg-banded when they are about 7 weeks old or older, said Mabie, who has tagged 28 eaglets over the last two winters.

Mabie's eaglets are decked out with a yellow wing marker on the right wing (which indicates the bird is from the Southeast) and light blue on the left wing (which indicates it's from Texas). They are also leg-banded with various colors to determine which year they were tagged.

The markers—four-inch wide, six-inch long nylon strips attached with a pop rivet around the portion of the wing close to the body—are visible only when the bird is in flight. So far, Mabie said, his banded eaglets have a 100 percent survival rate.

Eaglets hatch one to three young. "Three birds is fairly rare," Mabie said. "Two is common." Survivorship is good, he said.

In captivity, bald eagles will live up to 50 years, Mabie said. "It may even be a lot longer than that."

Young bald eagles are brown; they develop their characteristic white head and white tail at sexual maturity, around 4 years of age. When mature, a bald eagle—despite an impressive seven-foot wing-span—weighs only about 8 or 9 pounds, Mabie said.

So far, Mabie has confirmed five sightings of his eagles, in Montana, Nebraska, Arizona, Ontario (Canada) and Texas. So far, the data are insufficient to decipher any migration pattern.

What is known, however, is that the eagles have an extraordinary homing instinct.

"Basically, the bald eagles that nest in Texas come back to the same nest every year," Potter said. "But they have an alternate nest. We check about 30 nests a year. We check every one we can find and the only time they go off our lists is if the nest is destroyed. So we check about 30 nests a year but only half of them active."

Potter said ant infestation, human encroachment and predator problems are reasons that eagles will give up a nest. But part of the reason they use the nests is probably because it takes so much energy for them to build them," Potter said.

"Nests are spectacular. They may weigh up to three quarters of a ton."

Exactly what triggers the migration instinct in bald eagles—or in other creatures for that matter—is a matter of speculation. Biologists theorize that photo-period—the number of daylight hours—is the stimulus.

"They come south before the rivers freeze," Potter said. "They are physiologically tuned in so that they can survive winter, if they've got a food supply."

Their food supply is basically fish, although they will eat carrion, Potter said. "I've seen a bald eagle feeding on a dead rabbit where there would be a ring of vultures around him of, say, 10 to 15 feet away."

That habit of feeding on carcasses—especially duck and goose carcasses—is behind the push to ban lead shot for waterfowling. Some eagle deaths have been traced to lead poisoning, caused by ingesting lead-poisoned waterfowl.

Though most biologists are willing to accept photo-period as the trigger mechanism for migration, the eagle's habit of returning to the same nest is explained less easily.

"We theorize a whole number of things of why animals return to certain areas, but there is some kind of imprinting," Potter said. "Some kind of chemical, magnetic field has been theorized or it could be that they have a photographic memory when they get close to a certain place. A lot of research has been done on trying to find out how an animal finds its way back to the place it was born."

Eagles have some parental guidance in finding their way, too. They migrate with the parents their first year and sometimes their second. As they approach sexual maturity, however, they strike out on their own, pair up and migrate as couples.

The National Wildlife Federation, in conjunction with state game and fish agencies, conducts an annual survey of bald eagle sightings each winter.

Maurie LeFranc, director of the institute for Wildlife Research with the National Wildlife Federation, said there are an estimated 1,400 nesting pairs of bald eagles in the lower 48 states. Ten times that many may live in Alaska.

Eagles are significantly more numerous now than they were 15 years ago, when DDT pollution contributed heavily to poor reproduction. The DDT, which found its way into the waterways and the eagle's food chain, caused the birds to produce weakened eggs.

Baylor forward Frank Williams connects for two while Arkansas' Mario Credit (55) awaits a possible rebound. Williams, who had a career-high 15 points and 11 rebounds, hit two foul shots in the final 21 seconds to give Baylor a 63-62 win in SWC action Thursday night.

What to expect in Super Bowl XXI

By Murray Olderman

PASADENA, Calif. (NEA) — This is how I rate the NFC champion New York Giants and the AFC champion Denver Broncos in the NFL's Super Bowl XXI:

- RUNNING
GIANTS — Joe Morris, coming off his second 1,000-yard season, is the top runner on both teams. He is spelled by Lee Rouson, a good receiver coming out of the backfield. Maurice Carthon, the fullback in the two-man set, is primarily a blocker. Tony Galbreath is used on passing downs. GRADE: B-plus.
- BRONCOS — Sammy Winder, a plunger, is the heavy-duty carrier. No threat to break a big run. He operates mostly out of a single set and is relieved by Gene Lang, a slasher. Gerald Wilhite and Steve Sewell are specialty backs, receiving threats. GRADE: C.
- PASSING
GIANTS — Phil Simms is an overlooked field leader with a knack for the clutch throw, which made him the MVP this season in the NFL. Average mobility, good field presence. GRADE: B-plus.
- BRONCOS — John Elway has more natural ability than any quarterback in game. He has a great throwing arm and quick feet. And he is finally starting to maximize his gifts. GRADE: A-minus.
- WIDE RECEIVERS
GIANTS — Return of swift Lionel Manuel from injury list helps. Bobby Johnson and Stacy Robinson will start. Phil McConkey is valuable in spots. They're not the most sure-handed bunch. GRADE: C-plus.
- BRONCOS — Steve Watson is a sterling possession receiver. Vance Johnson is a speed-burner. When Denver goes to three wide men, rookie Mark Jackson also is a deep threat. GRADE: B.
- TIGHT ENDS
GIANTS — Mark Bavaro, in his second year, gets kudos as the best in the NFL. He's tough to bring down, he has good hands and he is a fine blocker. Zeke Mowatt is only a shade behind. GRADE: A.
- BRONCOS — Return of veteran Clarence Kay from drug rehab provides adequate pair because rookie Orson Mobley is a huge target. They're generally sure-handed. GRADE: B-minus.
- OFFENSIVE LINE
- BRONCOS — They're weakened by loss of right guard Paul Howard, who was replaced by Mark Cooper. Center Billy Bryan anchors the quintet. Keith Bishop, left guard, had big season. Tackles Ken Lanier and Dave Studdard are steady. GRADE: B-minus.

GIANTS — They've had to do some patching, with Herb Welch replacing injured Terry Kinard at free safety. Studious Ken Hill handles strong safety. Rookie Greg Lasker is useful as the nickel back. GRADE: B-minus.

Prediction: Broncos 23, Giants 17

- DEFENSIVE LINE
GIANTS — Three-man front is vet George Martin at left end, Jim Burt on nose and Leonard Marshall at right end. Surprise is pass rusher Martin playing all downs. Top sack threat is Marshall. A couple of strong rookies — Erik Howard in the middle, Eric Dorsey on the left flank — add to pressure. GRADE: B-plus.
- BRONCOS — Rulon Jones, pass-rushing right end, is the standout. But the quality declines abruptly, with Greg Kragen at nose tackle and Andre Townsend on the left side. Tony Colorito can step in for Kragen. (Top linebacker Karl Mecklenburg is often in the down position on passing plays.) GRADE: B-minus.
- LINEBACKING
GIANTS — They're challenged only by Bears as the supreme unit in NFL. Lawrence Taylor, the NFL's defensive player of the year, and improving Carl Banks are terrors from outside. Harry Carson and Gary Reasons hold steady in the middle; rookie Pepper Johnson is already pushing Reasons. Andy Headen provides depth. GRADE: A.
- BRONCOS — They're quick and heady rather than overpowering. Karl Mecklenburg and Ricky Hunley man the middle, getting most of the tackles. Jim Ryan is an underrated big-play man on the left side. Tom Jackson, oldest at 35, starts on the right, but he is being phased out by Ken Woodard. GRADE: B-plus.
- CORNERBACKS
GIANTS — Swift Perry Williams at right corner is their best, though rookie Mark Collins is capable of stepping in. Teams tend to pick on Elvis Patterson on left side. GRADE: C.
- BRONCOS — Louis Wright is the grand old veteran of Denver's secondary, a shade slower but still good at forcing run. Mike Harden, at right corner, is a natural safety; but he had strong season. Steve Wilson can spell them. GRADE: B.
- SAFETIES

Septien indicted

DENTON (AP) — Dallas Cowboys kicker Rafael Septien was freed on $10,000 bond after being indicted on charges of aggravated sexual assault of a 10-year-old girl.

"We are planning on entering a plea of not guilty, because he is not guilty of these charges," said Septien's attorney, Jay Ethington.

The indictment against the veteran placekicker, the Cowboys all-time leading scorer, was returned by a Denton County grand jury on Thursday. It alleged the child was molested Dec. 28, said District Attorney Jerry Cobb.

If convicted, Septien could be sentenced to up to life in prison, Cobb said.

Septien posted the bond at the Denton County Jail about 5 p.m. Thursday, said Capt. Jim Neal, detention director.

A native of Mexico City, the 33-year-old Septien joined the Cowboys in 1978 after attending Southwest Louisiana.

Septien was a 10th-round draft choice of the New Orleans Saints in 1977, but was released in training camp and signed by the Los Angeles Rams. He was released by the Rams after the final pre-season game of 1978 and immediately signed by the Cowboys as a free agent.

Police from The Colony, a suburb in Denton County where Septien lives, brought the case to the district attorney's office last week. Cobb said he declined to issue an arrest warrant until the grand jurors heard the case.

"We now have investigated the case and feel confident about it," he said.

"Obviously this type of charge is offensive to us. But we also believe that every man is entitled to his day in court, so we'll wait," said Cowboys president Tex Schramm.

"It's kind of hard to comment on something the grand jury has said," said Cowboys head coach Tom Landry. "I feel bad for Rafael, but there's really nothing I can comment on."

The grand jury also indicted Forrest Paul Wood, a Colony police officer, on charges of sexual abuse of a child.

Coach's daughter dies of leukemia

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Yvonne Richards, the 15-year-old daughter of University of Arkansas basketball coach Nolan Richardson, has died at a Tulsa hospital.

The girl died at Thursday afternoon at St. Francis Hospital nearly two years after being diagnosed as having leukemia, a hospital spokesman said.

"We in the athletic department are deeply saddened by the death of Yvonne Richardson," said Arkansas Athletic Director Frank Broyles. "Our heartfelt sympathy goes to Rose and Nolan, and to all of their family as we join with their many friends in sharing this sorrow as far as friends may."

"We are keeping the Richardsons in our hearts and remembering them in our prayers," Broyles said.

Richardson, a former University of Tulsa basketball coach, had taken a leave of absence from his coaching duties at Arkansas to be with his daughter.

Richardson, hired by Broyles, is in his second season at Arkansas.

The Richardson family asked that, in lieu of flowers, contributions be made to the Yvonne Richardson Memorial Cancer Fund at McIlroy Bank and Trust Co. in Fayetteville.

Moore's Southlawn Funeral Home in Tulsa was handling arrangements, officials there said.

Golf meeting set

A meeting of the Tri-State Seniors Golf Association will be held at 12 noon Saturday at the Pampa Country Club.

Tentative dates for the 53rd annual tournament are July 20-24, according to Dr. Joe Donaldson of Pampa and an Association member.

"We'll also probably discuss the possibility of having the golfers play every day," Donaldson said. "In the past the losers left a day earlier."

Amy Carter, daughter of former president Jimmy Carter, listens closely during court proceedings Thursday in Northampton District Court in Northampton, Mass., as a trail date was set on her charge of disorderly conduct during a November demonstration.

Governor's state-owned jet is towed into hangar

AUSTIN (AP) — Making good on a campaign promise, the $3.1 million jet purchased for ex-Gov. Mark White has been grounded by Gov. Bill Clements. Clements himself tried to find a buyer for the plane Thursday night, telling a San Antonio man who called in to speak with him on a television show. "It's up for sale right now. You want to buy it?"

The caller did not respond. Clements said the jet is "just much too expensive for us to operate."

The for-sale sign will go up, but a Clements spokesman acknowledged Thursday that it might prove difficult to unload the Mitsubishi Diamond IA purchased by the state in 1984.

"The thing cost $3.1 million and right now, with the market, you couldn't sell it for more than a million or a million and a half. The taxpayers would take it on the chin if we did that," said Reggie Bashur, Clements' press secretary.

Throughout the 1986 campaign, Clements said the jet symbolized White's free-spending ways. Clements frequently said, "When my hand comes off that Bible, it's sell the jet."

When the state bought the jet in 1984, White said it would save money compared to the 20-year-old plane that had served as the governor's plane.

Clements took the oath of office Tuesday. On Thursday, the plane was towed from Austin Aero to the State Aircraft Pooling Board nearby. It is in the hangar that also holds the old Goddess of Liberty statue that was removed from atop the Capitol last year. The statue has been refinished and will be kept in the hangar until it is put on display in the Capitol.

Bob Dulaney, pooling board executive director, said someone in the governor's office called Thursday with the instructions on the jet.

"They told us to go get it, and that's what we did," he said.

Bashur said there are several scenarios for getting rid of the Mitsubishi.

"We're in the process of granting permission to the Aircraft Pooling Board to go out and seek bidders for one of three options. No. 1 would be to sell the thing. No. 2 would be to lease it. Both of those options have dim prospects," Bashur said.

The third and "most promising" option is a trade for two or more planes, according to Bashur.

Clements will travel in a KingAir 200 he owns, Bashur added. Some arrangement, possibly a lease with a token fee, will be worked out, he said.

"I can say this flat out: Gov. Clements is never going to use that jet. That jet's going to sit there until we can unload it. That taxpayers footed $3.1 million, so we want that back. Whether it comes through a sale, or more probably a trade, it's got to be close to that," Bashur said.

Texas briefs

AUSTIN (AP) — The University of Texas at Austin ranks second in the nation, behind only Harvard-Radcliffe colleges, in the number of new National Merit Scholars who enrolled in the 1986 fall semester.

UT-Austin's figure of 270 scholars is surpassed by Harvard's 297 but exceeds Yale's 183, which is in third place.

Rice is fourth with 176, Stanford fifth with 172 and Princeton sixth with 140 scholars.

The only other Texas institution listed among the leading colleges in numbers of new merit scholars is Texas A&M University, with 112 for 10th place.

The figures, according to UT, are provided in the annual report of the National Merit Scholarship Corp.

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Frank Sinatra is in good spirits, recuperating at home after surgery to follow up the earlier removal of a section of his large intestine, a spokesman said.

The 71-year-old singer is doing fine, publicist Lee Solters said Thursday. "The surgery was successful."

A painful bout of diverticulitis on Nov. 9 forced Sinatra to cut short a series of performances in Atlantic City, N.J. Surgeons removed a 12-inch section of inflamed intestine during a two-hour operation.

Sinatra had to wear a colostomy bag until reconstructive surgery Jan. 13.

The singer was released Monday from Eisenhower Medical Center in nearby Rancho Mirage and will appear Feb. 13-15 at the Golden Nugget in Las Vegas, Nev., Solters said.
