Death ultimatum expires today for captives

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A captive American said today that Lebanese Moslem kidnappers would kill him, two other U.S. hostages and an Indian at midnight unless Israel released 400

Arab prisoners. "Our jailers will execute us at midnight," said Boston native Alann Steen, 47, in a handwritten note addressed to the wives of the four hostages and accompanied by a photograph of Steen. The note and photograph were delivered to the Beirut office of a Western news agency.

Midnight Beirut time is 5 p.m. EST. We ask our wives and the American people to put pressure on our government to order the Israeli government to guarantee the liberation of the 400 Palestinian mujahedeen (holy warriors) before midnight," the agency quoted the message as saying.

It was not clear if the kidnappers demanded that the 400 be released today, or if they would be satisfied with an Israeli promise that the prisoners would be freed.

Israel said it would not free the prisoners because of the threat.

Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said today Israel has received no request from the United States to free prisoners. "Nobody has approached Israel on this issue, and Israel won't take any initiative on its own." He said Sunday Israel would not give in to threats, but that his government is willing to discuss trading the 400 prisoners for an Israeli airman downed in

A six-minute videotape of Steen was delivered early Sunday to a Western news agency in the name of Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine. The previously unknown group abducted him and the three other educators Jan. 24 from Beirut University College's campus

Reading in a monotone, the wearylooking Steen said: "If our lives are important to America, it must order Israel to release the 400 Palestinians as soon as possible — that is, Monday as a maximum."

Beirut radio stations said two bulletriddled bodies were found on a street in the capital's Moslem western sector today. Police said later both dead men were Palestinians. Palestinian guerrillas have been fighting Shiite militiamen sporadically since 1985

Vol. 79, No. 264 12 pages

The others abducted with Steen are Robert Polhill, 53, originally of New York City; Jesse Turner, 39, of Boise, Idaho, and Mithileshwar Singh, 60, a native of India and resident alien in the United States

Israel said it was willing to discuss a proposal Saturday by Nabih Berri, head of the main Shiite Amal militia and Lebanon's justice minister, to trade the downed Israeli airman for the Arab prisoners. Under the proposal, all foreign hostages also would be released by extremist groups.

But Peres said that Israel "cannot and will not act according to an ultimatum" and would not bargain through the media

The kidnappers have never specified what prisoners they want released. An Israeli military officer said last week some Arabs were being held in Israel, and others were detained in southern Lebanon by an Israeli-backed militia.

Secretary of State George Shultz, asked how the United States would respond if American hostages were killed, told ABC-TV: "I'm not going to try to forecast it.

On the tape, Steen warned against any U.S. military action in Lebanon.

"We also tell America that if it commits any stupidity, we will be prone to be killed," he said. "Besides, Americans in the whole world will be the victims of our administration's stupidity."

Final action due Tuesday on water, sewer rates hike

sider on second and final reading ordinances establishing higher minimum rates for monthly residential and commercial water and sewer bills during their regular meeting at 6 p.m. Tuesday.

Commissioners have stated the increased rates are necessary to make the utility services pay for their costs of operation and maintenance, to cover debts incurred for improvements to the Wastewater Treatment Plant to meet state and federal guidelines, and to build up reserves to pay for the acquisition of additional water sources for future

If approved as amended at the Jan. 28 commission meeting, the new water rates will establish minimum monthly bills based on water pipeline meter sizes and raise the volume cost by 3 cents per additional 1,000 gallons over the minimum of 3,000 gallons.

The water rates for up to the first 3,000 gallons will increase from the present minimum of $7.65 a month to $8.55 for a \(\frac{4}{8} - \text{inch} \) meter. $11.12 for a 1-inch meter. $15.39 for a 11/2-inch meter and $20.52 for a 2-inch or larger meter. After that minimum . amount, the volume charge will rise from $1.25 per 1,000 gallons to

City commissioners will conness at this time for the water and sewer system is for $775,000 in revenue bonds issued in late 1986 for improvements to the wastewater plant to bring and keep the plant in accord with state and federal standards.

The commission has indicated additional debt is contemplated for water supply projects in ensuing years, including the possible purchase of additional groundwater supplies to increase the available amount of well water in future years.

In other matters Tuesday, commissioners will consider: an agreement with Amarillo Credit Exchange Inc. for collection of delinquent utility accounts and parking tickets; approval of and authorization for the notice of intent to issue revenue bonds for water and sewer system improvements:

a contract with Rural Metro

Corp. (Pampa Medical Services) for lease of city property at the Pump Station No. 1 site; ratification of change orders with Lewis Construction Co. for street paving projects; ■ identification and confirmation of contracts to be paid by certificates of obligation; and approval of warrants of payment for City Hall and street pro-

The commission also will hold an executive session to consider personnel matters and discuss purchase of groundwater rights.

Oil price fall boosted Red River development

Completion of the Red River Navigation Project has become more vital to people in the four states it serves because of the sharp decline in domestic oil prices, the president of the Red River Valley Authority said Sunday

"People were not necessarily interested in this until the economy took a downturn,' said Edgar Harris Jr. "Then they started looking at things this area and state could use to promote the economy....

One thing that came out was a far more serious concern and more emphasis to developing the waterway," he

About 150 delegates from Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas were to be in Bossier City today through Wednesday for the authority's

62nd annual meeting. Harris said that once barge traffic is possible from the Mississippi River to Shreveport, there will be new ports - and more companies will be willing to set up manufacturing plants along the river because of the inexpensive shipping

President Reagan's proposed budget for the coming year includes $87 million to continue work on the locks, dams and channel that will make it possible for barges to move up and down the river,

"We can build a distribution system that competes in national and international markets," he said. "We expect a large number of jobs down the road from that. It's one of the brightest enduring economic development projects the state has.'

Other projects to be discussed will include salt removal, flood control and erosion control he said.

"There's a great deal of interest in eliminating salt and getting clean water in Texas and Oklahoma," he said. The salt comes from prehistoric, subterranean seabeds and is carried up by the springs which form the head the Red River, said Harris.

Bush told of arms deals with radicals

WASHINGTON (AP) - Reagan administration claims that it only sought arms deals with so-called Iranian moderates are being tested by a secret memo showing that an Israeli official told Vice President George Bush the contacts actually were with radicals

The memo, prepared by a Bush aide and first reported in Sunday's editions of The Washington Post, states that Israeli Amiram Nir "reviewed what had been learned, which was essentially that the radical group was the group that could deliver. Nir also spoke of talks with the Iranians that would lead repeatedly to delays. "According to Nir, 'The reason for delay is to squeeze as much as possible as long as they have assets" — apparently a reference to the hostages — the memorandum said. "They don't believe that we want overall strategic cooperation to be better in the fu-

The memo, written by Craig L. Fuller, Bushs chief of staff, acknowledged that Israeli contacts with Iran were aimed in part at freeing Americans held in Lebanon. And it provides a view of a more active Israeli role than Jerusalem has acknowledged in the U.S.-Iran arms dealings.

But most vividly it contradicts repeated assertions by President Reagan that the contacts and weapons sales were exclusively with moderate elements of the Tehran government

We are dealing with the most radical ele-Nir told Bush, according to the memo. "They can deliver ... that's for sure. We've learned they can deliver and the moderates can't. Stephen Hart, a spokesman for Bush, would not comment on the memo beyond ack-

Storm rakes Northeast, lashes Great Lakes

By The Associated Press

A snowstorm blamed for one death raked the Northeast today after battering the Great Lakes with snow and gusts to 86 mph that downed power lines, closed roads and leveled a seawall on Chicago's Lake Michigan water-

Blizzard warnings went up today over southern New England and New York's eastern Long Island, with up to 16 inches of snow and gusts to 50 mph forecast. Snow driven by 40 mph gusts fell from North Carolina to New England. Snow also fell today from the Great kes to the Ohio River Valley. Up to 5 inches of snow was expected over much of the rest of the Northeast

"Right now it's clear, but the roads are terrible. The truck drivers aren't moving,' said Betty Fladd, a cashier at a truck stop along Interstate 90 near Erie, Pa., which had 8 inches of snow and gusts to 35 mph early

"It's going to be pretty bad just about all day," said Jim Gurka, a National Weather Service meteorologist in Boston, where motorists were urged to stay off the road to help snow crews get to work.

Snow, ice and high wind closed schools today in Ohio and in West Virginia, where up to 6 inches of snow was expected overnight. The University of Akron, Kent State University's main campus, and Case Western Reserve University in Ohio also closed.

Flights to the Cleveland area, which received up a foot of snow, were diverted Sunday because of poor visibility at Cleveland Hopkins International Airport, but the situation eased and flights were again arriving early today, said operations manager Al Munnerly.

Howling winds gusting to 50 mph and a freak water surge in Lake Michigan breached seawalls and forced the closing of all 15 miles of Chicago's scenic Lake Shore Drive on Sunday.

Thirty miles of highway along Lake Superior in Michigan were also closed, and flooding along Lake Eric shut a stretch of Cleveland's

Car bomb kills 15 people in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Police said a car bomb killed at least 15 people today and sparked an inferno at a gas station in a Shiite Moslem neighborhood of Beirut

They said the bomb went off at 2:45 p.m. in a white Mercedes-Benz parked near the filling station in the Roweiss district on the southern outskirts of the capital

Dozens of people were wounded by the blast,

Ambulances and fire engines raced to the scene with sirens wailing. Radio reports said Shiite militiamen blocked off the area.

Militiamen fired automatic rifles in the air to clear the way for ambulances and cars evacuating the wounded, witnesses reported. The car bombing was the first in the Moslem sector of Beirut this year. There have been two car bombings in 1987 in east Beirut. A car bomb exploded in Christian east Beirut's Zalka district Jan. 30, killing five people, including two children, and wounding 37. Former President Camille Chamoun was wounded Jan. 7 in a car bombing in east Beirut. Four people were killed, and 35 were wounded.

By police count, at least 113 people died and 658 were wounded in seven car bombings in east Beirut in 1986. Two car bombings in the Moslem western sector of the capital last year killed 36

Powerful quake hits Papua New Guinea

PORT MORESBY, Papua New Guinea (AP) - A powerful earthquake struck this southwest Pacific island nation early today, leveling villages, destroying bridges and leaving at least 1,000 people homeless, officials said.

Searchers flying over the region saw extensive damage but there was no detailed information on

The earthquake, which measured at 7.4 on the Richter scale, shook the northern island of New Guinea, Papua New Guinea's main island, and several smaller islands about 4:30 a.m. today (1:30 p.m. EST Sunday)

The island of Umboi was described as devastated, with most of the buildings in the island's administrative center of Siassi destroyed or badly damaged, according to a provincial government official in Lae. According to the Geophysical Observatory in Port Moresby, the earthquake was centered a few miles off Umboi

The official said reports were still sketchy, but at least 1,000 people had been left homeless. Helicopters flying over the island, midway between West New Britain and the Huon penisula on mainland

Papua New Guinea, reported extensive damage. Villages were flattened, school classrooms ruined, and walls and bridges destroyed. One woman was known to have been injured when a house collapsed around her.

The full extent of the damage would not be known until search parties entered the area Tuesday, the official said. Landslides were hampering access to the interior of the heavily populated island.

Minor damage also was reported along the northern areas of Morobe province, on the mainland, and in West New Britain. The tremor was felt as far away as Port Moresby, 250 miles to the south, where tall buildings shook.

Who really runs city government?

By BOB HART City Manager

From time to time, many citizens must ask themselves several basic questions: Who really runs this community? What does the city commission do? What does the mayor do? What does the city manager do? What's the difference in all of these jobs? How do they relate to each other? And most of all, who is in charge here?

Our city government operates under the council-manager plan, and it can be said with complete honesty and objectivity that it is a good thing that we have this form of government.

The city manager does not run the community, and the city manager is not in charge here.

The council-manager plan is the system of local government which combines the strong political leadership of elected officials, in the form of the mayor and the city commission, and the strong managerial experience of the appointed city manager.

Because the citizens of our community had the wisdom and the foresight to agree in a vote to operate their government under the council-manager plan, we now have the form of local government that puts the power where it belongs - in the hands of the voters. They are in charge

The voters elect our city commission, and the commission hires the city manager. The commission can also fire the city manager.

The city manager does not serve for any specific period of time. In fact, city managers do not have long-term contracts. Therefore, a city manager serves at the pleasure of the city commission, the people who are elected by the voters.

Thus, in a real way, the city manager must be responsive to the wishes of the citizens as defined by the officials elected by the citizens.

Our city commission is our community's legislative body. It accepts policy, it approves the budget, it determines the tax rat e; it also hires the manager and supervises his performance

The manager's job, as it differs from the council, is to prepare a recommended budget for the commission to act on, to serve as the commission's chief advisor. to recruit and hire the best people to work for our government, and to see that the commission's programs are carried out.

This means that commission members are the community's decision makers — the ones with the power entrusted to them by the top of the power structure, the voters.

The manager is hired to serve the commission as its fulltime executive. His job is to bring to the community the benefits of his years of training and experience in administering local government staffs, its projects and its programs on behalf of the commission.

As far as policy matters are concerned, the city manager may make recommendations to the commission, and the commission may or may not adopt them and may change or modify them. In any event, a city manager is bound by whatever action the commission takes.

The arrangement is the same as you may find in many businesses, universities, hospitals and other organizations where a board of directors sets the policies and employs a fulltime executive to run the day-today activities.

Clements budget plan includes $500 million in hidden cuts

HOUSTON (AP) - Gov. Bill Clements' plan to balance the state budget has more than $500 million in hidden cuts, including $3.7 million in scholarships at Texas' colleges and universities, according to a published report. The plan also calls for a halt in state funding for the Thurgood Marshall School of Law at Texas Southern University, the McDonald Observatory and Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas and the Criminal Justice Center at Sam Houston State University, where most Texas corrections officers study, the Houston Chronicle reported Sunday.

The cuts were not obvious in the 53page policy budget Clements gave the Legislature last week, and some were found in general categories that showed spending increases, the newspaper

For instance, Clements proposed $300 million more for public education to cover a growing student population. But that's $164 million less than what the Texas Education Agency says is needed to cover a 120,000-student enrollment growth projected for the next two

In another area of hidden cuts, Clements proposed $36.6 million in increased spending for health and human

But he did not mention that the Legislature last year forced the Department of Human Services, the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation and the Department of Health to pay for state programs with federal funds they had kept as a hedge against possible federal budget cuts.

Clements offered no state money to replace those funds, which will be totally spent this year, meaning those three agencies will be $363.7 million short, the Chronicle said.

The governor also proposed to balance the state's budget by selling state land he valued at $315.5 million to several of the state trust funds.

Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said the properties probably are not worth that much in the state's depressed real estate market and called it poor public policy to sell off state land to pay for the operation of state government Rural Texans face a possible $125 million cut from vocational education, $35 million from funding for tuition shortfalls at colleges and $6.8 million taken from the state meat inspection

A key lawmaker said Clements' bottom-line $36.8 billion budget for 1988-89 is going to be hard to achieve.

'It's kind of hard to draw that line and talk about compromise and flexibility," said Senate Finance Chairman Grant Jones, D-Temple.

The defendants are accused of stealing as much as $40 million in diesel fuel from tugboat cus-

U.S. Attorney Bob Wortham said Saturday he did not know when the case would be retried since details have yet to be worked out with U.S. District Judge Sam Hall, who presided over the trial.

The jury Wednesday found seven employees guilty of obstructing justice by giving false information. Hall has not set a sentencing date for the seven, who are all free on bond. They each face up to five years in prison and $5,000 in fines. The panel found the Fredeman brothers, their companies and employees innocent of two mail fraud charges involving the fueling of customers' boats. But the jury deadlocked 10-2 in favor of convicting the defendants on racketeering charges after deliberating seven days.

A 147-page indictment issued last April named as defendants the Fredeman brothers, their nowdeceased father, William Fredeman Sr., the Port Arthur Towing Co., Channel Fueling Service of Port Arthur, Fredeman Shipyard Inc. of Lake Charles, La., and 17 employees.

The defendants were accused of delivering less fuel than had been contracted for tugboat owners on the Intracoastal and Mississippi waterways.

The government also charged that Port Arthur Towing, while under exclusive contract with the U.S. Department of Defense to deliver jet fuel, used its boats for other purposes but submitted false location reports indicating the boats were on standby awaiting government orders.

Charges against William Fredeman Sr. and some of the employees were later dropped.

If the Fredemans are convicted on racketeering charges they could be forced to forfeit to the government their ownership of the three companies.

Shamrock's board rejects Pickens' latest takeover bid

DALLAS (AP) — Diamond Shamrock's board will forge ahead with its own major restructuring and stock buyout plan today after thwarting oilman T. Boone Pickens' latest takeover attack, company executives say.

The Dallas-based company's directors voted in special session Sunday night to snub a $15-pershare bid from the Pickens-led Mesa Limited Partnership. The offer amounted to $1.67 billion for all common stock and totaled more than $2 billion when preferred shares were included.

They'll instead go ahead today with plans for a $340 million tender offer to buy 20 million shares of company stock at $17 per share, spokeswoman Ginger Shearburn said.

The stock repurchase plan is part of a dramatic restructuring proposal that calls for breaking Diamond Shamrock into two pieces, buying back stock and placing a block of preferred shares in friendly hands

"The board concluded that the restructuring plan is preferable because, among other things, the Mesa proposal does not recognize the values inherent in Diamond Shamrock and would deprive Diamond Shamrock shareholders of the opportunity to benefit from improved market conditions,

She noted that the Diamond Shamrock's program is scheduled to be completed within the same period as Mesa's proposed merger transaction and will create two independent public companies.

One would concentrate on refining and marketing, while the other would deal with oil exploration and production, Ms. Shearburn said.

Because of that plan, the board said Sunday it saw no reason to submit Mesa's bid to its stockhol-

"If Mesa is truly concerned with the interests of the Diamond Shamrock stockholders, it should not obstruct Diamond Shamrock's effort to complete the restructuring as promptly as possible," the company said in a statement.

Pickens was not at his Amarillo, Texas, home when The Associated Press called Sunday night, and a spokesman said later he was unable to reach any other Mesa Limited Partnership officials for comment.

But in a letter to Diamond Shamrock's directors Wednesday, Pickens had urged them to either accept his new offer or let the company's stockholders hold a special meeting to choose betweens his offer or the restructuring plan.

Pickens, who heads the Amarillo-based Mesa Limited Partnership, previously proposed exchanging cash and Mesa securities for Diamond Shamrock's 111.1 million total common shares out-

Emergency prison bill could get House debate this week

AUSTIN (AP) - A bill carrying an "emergency" tag could get a House vote this week as lawmakers seek to relieve overcrowding in a prison population

"Hopefully it will be out on the floor," Speaker Gib Lewis says.

Sen. Bob McFarland's bill, which could make 10,000 low-risk prison inmates eligible for early parole, was approved by the Senate 25-3 on Wednesday. It was referred to the House Corrections Committee Thursday.

The bill, which Gov. Bill Clements labeled 'emergency," was filed in response to a federal contempt-of-court order that could cost Texas $860,000 a day in fines, beginning April 1, if prison conditions aren't improved.

percent cap, the system's doors are closed. Most recently, the Texas Department of Corrections' 26 units were closed Wednesday when the population reached 38,472 — 95.21 percent of capacity and 86 inmates over the limit. McFarland's bill provides that the attorney general would have to certify the TDC was over the legal capacity and the governor would have to declare an emergency before the Board of Pardons and Paroles could order early releases.

The bill would, if feasible, require any inmate getting an early release to make financial restitution for his crime and to do at least 10 hours per week of community service, as directed by local McFarland, R-Arlington, said he hoped to have ready this week a $25 million prison financing bill to make prison changes ordered by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice.

"We're ahead of schedule as a matter of fact," Lewis said.

House members have filed 635 bills and 39 prop osed constitutional amendments, including measures to prohibit state income taxes, establish a lottery and provide for annual legislative sessions.

Senators, already working from a daily calendar, have introduced 319 bills and 15 proposals to amend the Texas Constitution.

MARSHALL (AP) - A rash of cattle thefts in recent weeks across East Texas proves that an old nemesis of the livestock business - rustling - is still around, law officers say. Harrison County Sheriff Bill Oldham said there have been about 15 head of cattle stolen in three incidents over the past two weeks in the northwestern part of the county.

'There was one bunch of mixed breed, but the other two were all registered cattle," Oldham said. Cattle raiser Carolyn Williams found out recently just how easy it is for rustlers to strike. Someone sawed through a lock on a chained gate and stole

Ms. Williams said she was unaware that others in the area had been hit by rustlers.

"If I had known it was going on, I could have hid the cattle," she said, explaining she would have placed them on a tract of land not so easily accessible to thieves.

Ms. Williams said she probably won't be able to recover her cattle since they were not branded.

"Everybody should brand their cattle so they can be identified, because these days you can take and sell cattle and you don't even need a receipt,"

Oldham said he does not know if the recent thefts' have been the work of the same person or a group.

Tax form simplicity snarls in red tape

A couple of years ago, the Internal Revenue Service commissioned a study to find out why Americans seemed to hold the agency in disregard. According to the results, surly field agents and bureaucratic red tape were the problem.

So field agents were told to smile more. And the red

Anyone who has struggled to complete the government's new W-4 forms, wading through a two-page worksheet that resembles a shortened form of the long-form tax return, is likely to resent the IRS no matter how much its agents smile. That's why no less a personage than Treasury Secretary James Baker recommended changing the form.

Son of a gun if the IRS didn't pick up on that almost immediately, indicating that it had a simpler worksheet in the works. When will it arrive? Heck, most folks still don't have the old forms yet. Even so, both Baker and the IRS are recommending that taxpayers continue to struggle through the current W-4s, whenever they arrive.

First problem: Because the current W-4s are so complicated, most taxpayers who can afford it will turn to their accountants for help. But the cost of pre-paring tax returns — and W-4s — was made non-taxdeductible by the very tax reform that brought about the new paperwork.

Second problem: The new forms are supposed to make it easier to estimate withholding payments accurately. That's essential because the IRS has upped the penalty for failure. Back before tax "reform, taxpayers had to make sure they paid no less than 80 percent of their tax bill throughout the year in withholding. This year, the percentage jumps to 90.

It is any wonder the IRS has a less than golden reputation? Not only are the forms difficult to understand, but there's a stiff penalty for failure.

The remedy seems simple enough, even for the IRS. Get the new form out as quickly as possible and drop the penalties — at least for this year — for those who fail to estimate their withholding payments accur-It won't make the tax system any more justifiable, but it would make it easier for those who have no choice but to struggle with whatever dictate is handed down. That's what tax "reform" was supposed to be about in the first place.

Washington sissy about cold

When Samuel Johnson wrote that "human life is everywhere a state in which much is to be endured and little to be enjoyed," he might have been thinking of Chicago's winters. A February here is an education in torment. I know there are people who enjoy bottomless snowdrifts, numbing cold and slashing winds, but they suffer from an easily identified form of mental illness known as masochism. If they enjoy our winters, it is not because anything about our winters is enjoyable.

There is, however, one pleasure in the plight of the Chicagoan. It lies in boasting of our hardihood to those fortunate souls who live in habitable climes. This can be done either by luring some of them up here during the traditional icefishing months, or by visiting them during what passes in their hometown for a chilly snap.

Every resident of that stretch of tundra known as the upper Midwest can then draw on an accumulated stock of derisive comments, such as (1) "Cold? You call this cold?" (2) "This is nothing - why, you should have been around back in 1987," (3) "I don't even put on my long underwear until it gets down to 30 below," and (4) "I could really go for some ice cream right Your thin-blooded acquaintances will promptly wilt in embarrassment at their

It was my good fortune to arive in the nation's capital recently, just as a storm was blanketing the city in snow. Having once lived there, I know that Washingtonians are incapable of coping even with rain, and that they react to the barest trace of snow with apoplectic seizures. This, however, was not the barest trace of snow. It was 20 inches.

When Chicago gets 20 inches of snow, its residents don their scarves and mittens, yawn and go about their business. When Washington gets 20 inches of snow, its residents lock themselves in their homes, refuse to go to work, write their last will and testament, and pray that their food supply will hold out until spring.

The capital and its suburbs functioned about like Chicago would function the day after World War III. Closed were the federal bureaucracy, Congress, the Supreme Court, the local governments, the schools, the airports and most stores. The Red Army, with snow tires, could have taken the whole area without firing a shot. If it had brought a few truckloads of road salt, it might have been greeted with flowers and con-

Washington's city government takes the attitude that when an unprecedented act of God covers the streets with snow, there is nothing to do but submit to the divine will. It came as a surprise to local authorities to learn of the invention of the snowplow, which in other places is used to remove drifts from the streets, therby sparing citiznes from having to spend each winter in hibernation.

Never mind the streets. If you can't drive, you can always take the subway, right? Washington has a glittering, ultra-modern rail system. Actually, last week Washington had a glittering. ultra-modern mass transit museum, consisting of an extensive network of underground tunnels and a large collection of stationary rail cars.

Somewhere along the line, the local transportation wizards decided to trim the expense of this undertaking, which is expected to cost more than $10 billion by the time it's completed, by not spending $5 million for the equipment needed to keep the rails free of ice. This is a saving of about 1-20th of 1 percent of the total cost, which is like saving on a new Mercedes by not buying windshield wiper blades

I don't mean to say that no subway trains were running. The people in charge claimed that the system was running at a third of its usual capacity — this was four days after the last snow fell and promised that with luck things might be back to normal in a mere three weeks.

The mayor excused the city's ineptitude by pointing out that "Washington is not a snow town. We're not Buffalo." Of course not. In fact, Washington is just like Miami, except it doesn't have a beach and it's located 1,057 miles farther north.

The mess created a huge inconvenience to any traveling journalist who genuinely wanted to work, and a blessing to any who preferred to spend the week in the hotel cocktail lounge, researching a major investigative piece on the preparation of margaritas. It was also a matchless opportunity to gloat about the weather, something no Chicagoan who prizes his sanity can afford to pass up.

I won't bother you with the details. Suffice to say that I opened every conversation with despondent Washingtonians by saying, "Well, I'm from Chicago, and ... "That was usually all they wanted to hear.

Nurse shortage now critical

So you won't run out of things to worry about, the profession of nursing is in trouble. There are not enough nurses to go around and too few new ones entering the profession. Connie Curran is an R.N. and vice president of nursing for the American Hospital Association. She blames the media for distorting the public image of what a nurse is and what a nurse does. She says the nurse on television is "usually seen nursing a desk or nursing the doctor." Julia Lane, dean of nursing at Loyola University Medical Center in Chicago, says, "I tell my students that if we spent as much time in the sack as Hot Lips Houlihan, we'd never get any-Sister Jeremy Buckman, chairman of DePaul University's School of Nursing, says, "We're the ones taking care of the patients. Patients see a doctor 5 minutes a day but a nurse 24 hours a

If the public image of nurses has been distorted, it is the disproportionate pay scales which aggrieve many. Keven Morrissey of the National League of Nursing says that after 10 years, a bedside nurse is still working for an annual income of $25,000 to $26,000. With a master's degree she can make $36,000. Her sister - with a master's in business administration - may be driving a Jaguar and earning $100,000 a year! There are six-figure salaries in nursing but they are for top administrators. And there are new opportunities in health maintenance and corporate weilness programs which offer more autonomy and more money. There are lucrative opportunities in home care, research, with pharmaceutical firms.

And these options are contributing to a grim shortage of registered nurses for hospitals. Chicago-area hospitals are understaffed by 20 to 25 percent. In one recent issue of a Chicago newpaper there were seven pages of ads for nurses!

The profession of nursing has expanded since the days of thermometers and bedpans. With advanced physical assessment training, nurses are assuming evermore duties heretofore reserved to doctors. This is especially true for critical-care nurses where the burnout rate is very high.

What it comes down to is that nursing is increasingly demanding and nurses are increasingly in demand and we're mashing the emergency button and - no answer!

Ending column to try new writing format

By Rusty Brown

During six years of writing this column on women in the '80s, I was frequently asked if it was hard to keep coming up with topics. No, I said, not when you are writing about all the ways women see themselves in to-

Chronicling women in a period of enormous social change is like covering fireworks on the Fourth of July: Dazzling bursts of color and sound come from every direction to light up

Like fireworks, the energies of women are being unleashed in a multitude of directions. Yes - our lives are fragmented and pressured and teeming with distractions. But yes we're learning to live with and love the challenges and treasure the opportunities that allow us to realize ourselves. Let us count the ways: We see ourselves, first, in the home as primary caretakers and care givers for our families. We do this while holding jobs and serving or leading in the community.

Second, we see ourselves outside the home - making a difference. Because of us, American business has gone coed. We bring to the work place , a talent for cooperation and consensus and new dimensions in management that are inherent in the female perspective.

Women insert different priorities into the agenda when they become legislators, mayors and judges. Now that one of every three labor union members is a woman, child care, maternity leave, pay equity and flexible work schedules are viable issues at the bargaining table.

Third, we see ourselves insisting on fairness and justice in all aspects of our lives. We object, for example, to subtle put-downs in the college classroom when male professors challenge male students with penetrating questions requiring critical judgments, while asking women questions that take simplistic answers

On the job, we continue to crusade for as much money as men when our work - even if different - is equally valuable to employers. We're willing to go to court if bosses promote lessqualified males, or call us "honey and "sweetie" and pollute our workday with sexual innuendos.

Finally, we see ourselves learning from other women, learning from each other. It was wives, remember, confiding their chilling stories of abuse, that persuaded women to open shelters for the battered. Working women share their experiences and urge us to walk away from stagnating, dead-end jobs, and some, pioneering in new fields, inspire us to follow

I myself learned much from the hundreds of women I interviewed and the hundreds who wrote to respond to columns or to alert me to concerns they had as women.

These exchanges did more than help me understand other women. They defined for this column a sort of mission: to act as a conduit for sharing truths by, between and for women. After all, isn't that the essence of the women's movement - telling our own stories to awaken our commonality'

My mission is not complete by any means, but the time has come for me to try new directions as a writer. So this is my last syndicated column.

I am grateful for all the friends and readers the column has brought in nearly every state. I say farewell knowing that women today can envision widening thresholds and have every reason to proceed with confidence. The best way to celebrate 25 years of the women's movement is to take advantage of it.

Together, we will continue to touch off fireworks and light up the sky.

MIAMI (AP) - Violence and businesslike organization are the hallmarks of the world's largest cocaine ring, and the arrest of a Colombian reputed to be one of its leaders won't seriously damage the operation, authorities say.

"There may be a short-term effect, but until the 5.8 million users of cocaine decide that cocaine is killing them, the cocaine will come from elsewhere,' said John Lawn, administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration.

Carlos Rivas Lehder, 37, who was captured in a shootout in Colombia and brought to the United States last week, was scheduled to appear today at a federal court hearing in Jacksonville on drug smuggling charges.

Violence, organization hallmarks of cocaine

An indictment in Miami alleged Lehder was responsible for on-site supervision of the so-called Medellin Cartel's laboratories and distribution centers in remote sections of Colombia, but at least one investigator said he is dispensable.

"There are others just waiting in the wings to take his place," said Billy Yout, DEA spokesman in Miami.

The indictment alleges the Medellin Cartel, so-named because many traffickers congregate near the northwestern Colombian city of Medellin, has smuggled at least 58 tons of cocaine into the United States and supplies 80 percent of the cocaine powder imported into this country.

The most sought-after alleged member of the cartel is Jorge Ochoa Vasquez, who has slipped through the fingers of U.S. and Colombian authorities more than once, investigators said.

When DEA informant Adler "Barry" Seal infiltrated the cartel and returned to testify against Ochoa, he was machine-gunned in Baton Rouge, La. Three Colombians face trial in his slaying, which federal prosecutors said was ordered by Ochoa's brother and two other cartel members, all still free.

Ochoa once was extradited from Spain to Colombia but allegedly bribed a prison guard and escaped into the jungle, where he has been interviewed by the press.

Law enforcement authorities have attributed a number of violent acts to the cartel. Colombia's justice minister was shot to death in 1984, a score of Colombian judges have been assassinated and a crusading editor of the Bogota daily El Espectador was gunned down as well.

The center of the cartel's operations until a March 1984 army raid was Tranquilandia, a remote guarded jungle camp and laboratory complex. The center has since moved, investigators said.

Careful logs kept at Tranquilandia showed about 26 metric tons of cocaine was processed there in six months, authorities said.

Each lab site at Tranquilandia had an airstrip and housing facilities. Cartel members contracted with the cartel as a whole to use the laboratories and landing strips, the indictment alleges. The drugs were run through Mexico and the Caribbean, flown directly into Florida, Chicago, Los Angeles and other points, or dropped into Atlantic coastal waters to be picked up by fast

One intercepted conversation between cartel heads concerned packing the cocaine in waterproof containers to avoid recurring complaints of water damage during airdrops, according to the indictment.

In Miami, smugglers were provided with a new motor home to transport the cocaine across the country. Safe houses where drugs could be stored until transportation was available were bought for cash in quiet middle-class neighborhoods, authorities said.

Wealthy Contra donor says she met with Oliver North

WASHINGTON (AP) - Lt. Col. Oliver L. North met on different occasions with a wealthy Connecticut woman who was the principal benefactor of a political group involved in a pro-Contra lobbying drive, the woman acknowledges.

The woman, Barbara Newington of Greenwich, Conn., helped bankroll a Virginia-based political action committee headed by her friend, Washington fund raiser Carl "Spitz" Channell, public re-

Her role suggests a close link between North, the fired White House aide, and Channell's efforts to conduct a nationwide media campaign in support of President Reagan's pro-Contra policies.

Public documents list Mrs. Newington as the source of nearly half the $700,000 raised by Channell's Virginia group, which helped pay for that public relations blitz.

Channell used a network of conservative groups he controls to help fund speaking tours by Nicaraguan rebels, and broadcast at least $1 million worth of television ads that targeted congressional opponents of the administration's $100 million aid proposal for the Contras fighting Nicaragua's leftist government.

The source of his funding has come under scrutiny, with congressional and federal investigators looking into a report in the Lowell (Mass.) Sun that North provided money for the campaign from profits diverted from U.S. arms sales to Iran.

Although denying that Iranian money was used in the media effort or that North solicited contributions, Channell acknowledges North spoke to groups of his contributors and provided written material used for the TV commercials.

Besides providing funds for Channell's efforts, Mrs. Newington has given money over the years to many conservative political candidates, including extremist presidential candidate Lyndon LaRouche and the late Rep. Larry McDonald, D-

Mrs. Newington, who is the widowed daughter of a six-term mayor of Hastings, N.Y., refused in an interview to discuss her finances.

Virginia state election records show she gave $324,800 to Channell's American Conservative Trust State Election Fund political action committee. However, Channell collected millions more for his tax-exempt groups whose contributors are not public. Thus, the total amount of Mrs. Newington's assistance in his operations cannot be determined.

Proponents of costly acid rain control legislation are optimistic

WASHINGTON (AP) - They've said it before on Capitol Hill and they're saying it again: this could be the Congress that finally legislates costly controls on the pollutants that cause acid rain.

"I believe we will enact a bill during the 100th Congress," says Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., expressing a sentiment shared by other leaders of the Senate Environment Committee.

Lawmakers are talking more optimistically this year. Acid rain legislation is a top priority in the Senate committee. And last year a control bill hit a high-water mark in the House: approval by key subcommittees.

But lawmakers also agree that getting a bill to President Reagan's desk won't be easy, g. en the deep regional divisions over the issue and the opposition of the administration and the powerful electricity industry lobby.

Competing bills already have been introduced in the Senate, each designed to reduce the sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxide emissions that rise from gasoline engines and coal-fired boilers and are the precursors of acidic precipitation.

All of the bills, however, would leave the cleanup costs to be paid by the polluters, which means the Midwest would face the biggest jumps in electricity rates because its utilities have the dirtiest smokestacks.

This approach should cause no great problems with the Senate Environment Committee because it is dominated by Northeasterners, who say acidic fallout from the Midwest is killing their lakes and trees, and by Westerners, who have large deposits of relatively clean low-sulfur coal for sale to Midwestern power plants.

And it could be accepted by the full Senate, where the polluting states have only two votes each, compared with the House where their large populations give them far more leverage.

But getting a bill to the floor has been complicated by the Democratic takeover of the Senate that elevated Robert Byrd of West Virginia to majority leader and chief custodian of the legislative entry gate.

Byrd's state not only faces big compliance costs but, as a major producer of high-sulfur coal, it could be hurt by any legislation that encourages utilities to switch to cleaner burning fuel.

"He's the leader of the band," says Environment Chairman Quentin Burdick, D-N.D. "His influence is far more than his one vote. He's from a coal

Will Byrd attempt to block floor consideration of a committee-approved bill he doesn't like? "We'll talk about that on another occasion," the majority leader said recently.

The House picture is even muddier, even though last year a bill sponsored by some 170 members won subcommittee approval before dying late in the session in the full Energy and Commerce Com-

Two of the principal sponsors, Henry Waxman, D-Calif., and Gerry Sikorski, D-Minn., say they don't know when they will reintroduce the measure, which called on all U.S. households to pay an average of 25 cents to 50 cents a month on their electricity bills to help subsidize compliance in the Right now, they're trying to count votes on the committee, where Midwestern states, led by Chairman John Dingell, D-Mich., have considerable power. Last year, the committee was fairly evenly divided. Since then, four pro-control votes are gone, replaced by members from Southern and coal-producing states.

In the past, Dingell has killed acid-rain legislation when he could and slowed it down when the votes appeared to be against him.

This year, his strategy appears to be to up-theante. He's talking about a far broader air-quality bill than anyone else. It would include provisions dealing with airborne toxics and smog-producing ozone emissions

The latter subject will attract greater congres sional attention with the approach of next Dec. 31, which is the deadline for states to meet ozone limitation standards or risk losing federal aid, including highway funds.

Fifty-one urban areas, from New York to Los Angeles, from Chicago to Phoenix, are expected to be in violation of the ozone-reduction requirement by year's end.

Another 31 non-urban areas face the same

"More than my wildest dreams were accomplished before today even got here," the Rev. Carl Titchener said Sunday after his sermon at the Unitarian Universalist Church of Amherst.

The minister spoke to an overflow audience of 250 and was greeted four times with applause, including a standing ovation. "We have the two leading health officials in the United States warning us about a plague and we don't know how to react, how to talk, because we are still squeamish," he said.

Outside the church, about 10 people marched in freezing rain to protest the action. One of their placards read, "A Wolf in Sheep's Clothing."

Two-thirds of the way through his talk, Titchener and six ushers dispensed about 125 boxes, each containing three condoms.

YOUR LIFE

He urged television stations to accept advertising for the devices, which U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop has said is the best way to halt the spread of AIDS aside from sexual abstinence. Acquired immune deficiency syndrome can be transmitted by sexual contact.

When you go to bed with another person, you go to bed with that person's sexual history," the 56year-old minister said. "When you go to bed with that partner, you also go to bed with the sexual histories of all of his or her sexual partners.'

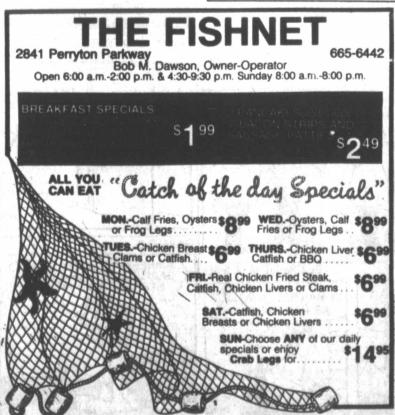

In his talk, he said sex education should be taught more openly and chastised the government for not promoting information about AIDS more

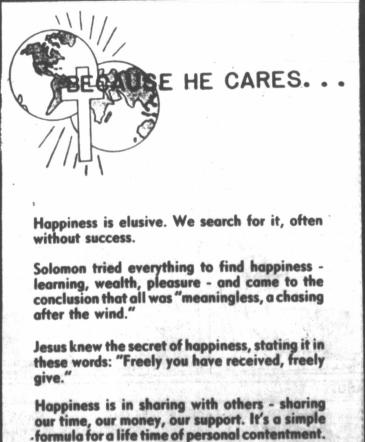

"It should not be necessary for me to do what we are doing this morning," Titchener said. "It is absurd that our school systems do not each our children better about sex.'

Titchener, who is married with four children, said he probably would not have spoken on the subject if a fellow minister had not contracted

Abby, everyone wants to reduce drunk driving, but it shouldn't be at the expense of our hard-won constitutional rights. I'm sure the people who live under a dictatorship would gladly trade our drunk-driving problems for the hardships they have to endure.

CONCERNED BUT SANE

DEAR CONCERNED: Since when is it "harassment" for a police officer to check out a report that there's a drunk driver in the area? If the driver is not drunk, the inconvenience of being stopped is petty compared to the tragedy that could be caused by a person driving while under the influence. You mention constitutional rights: What about the "constitutional rights" of innocent people to be protected against drunk drivers?

In addition to Marion, Va., according to Brad Hartford, the town of Glenvil, Neb., has a program called REDDI (Report Every Drunk Driver Immediately). Hooray for Nebraska!

give it back to her. Well, I accepted Jane's gift and without unwrapping it, I gave it to another employee (Dan) and told him it was from Jane. Of course Dan thanked Jane for the gift, then Jane became angry and told me off. Now Jane refuses to forgive me. Was Jane wrong? Or was I? ALLENTOWN, PA., GUARD

DEAR GUARD: Jane was wrong to have forced a gift on you knowing you were not permitted to accept gifts. You were wrong to accept it, and wrong again for giving it to Dan saying it was a gift from Jane. If you lost Jane's friendship, you haven't lost much. And in the future, stick to the rules or it could cost you your job.

DEAR NO CITY: I don't know how "unusual" it is, but I think it's a good idea. It's sort of an adult version of "I'll show you mine, if you show me yours."

DEAR ABBY: In reference to Clara, the single person who travels with her sister and the sister's husband: You erred in telling Clara that she should pay only one-third of the hotel room cost.

Since she and her two dogs are three-fifths of the total occupants of the room, she should pay threefifths of the room bill!

Besides that, any guy who has to travel with his wife and her sister, plus two dogs, should pay for an additional fifth. And drink it! HOWARD B. ANDREEN CAMARILLO, CALIF. DEAR ABBY: Your nomination of the word "hors d'oeuvre" as the most commonly misspelled word is a good one. However, it is a French word, and not commonly used here.

I've been a proofreader for nearly 40 years, and I've also written a book on proofreading. This may be considered a common error in punctuation, but I think the most common mistake I have run across is the use of the possessive "its" spelled with an apostrophe - "it's." Properly used, "it's" is a contraction for "it is" or "it has."

JACK FRIEDBERG CLEVELAND

DEAR JACK: Thanks for the spelling-punctuation lesson it's both, and its importance is acknowledged by all who want to preserve high standards of written English.

Warm season turf grass areas generally can have two problems of either cool season weeds-junk grass or warm season weedsjunk grass or both warm and cool season unsightly plants.

If you have a warm season turf grass such as bermuda or buffalo and if you find some cool season weeds or grass growing now kill them out by using a herbicide spray containing Roundup. Mix 2.67 to 5.33 tablespoons of Roundup per gallon of water or 1/2 to 1 cup per 3 gallons of water. Wet the green leaves of the plants you want killed, but not to the point of verify that the turf grass on your lawn is still dormant. Dormant grasses will not be affected by Roundup. However, it will kill all green, growing vegetation that you spray such as henbit, winter grass and dandelions. Henbit is the weed found growing now, and it develops purple flowers later this spring. The higher dosage rate may be needed for dandelion control. During this time of the year, it may take two to four weeks for Roundup to show its effect. It is best to select a warm spell when temperatures will be above 60 degrees during the day-

Now then, if you expect to have warm season weeds-junk grass such as crabgrass growing in your lawn, then apply a grandular type pre-emergence herbicide containing either Balan, Dacthal or Detasan. These herbicides applied before warm season weed or grass seed germinate will prevent them from growing next summer. These herbicides last in the soil about 6-8 weeks. A lot of these unwanted seeds do not germinate until soil temperatures warm up in late May. Therefore, I do not recommend applying a pre-emergence herbicide until late April. FRUIT TREE PLANTING

Early spring is generally the best time to plant fruit trees. For Gray County, this includes the months of February and March. When spring begins to break buy are ones that are two years old and 3 to 5 feet tall. Not only do they survive transplanting better, but they become established faster. The largest tree is not necessarily the best. Smaller unbranched trees often are best because they cost less, are inherently more vigorous, start growth sooner, are easier to plant and. most importantly, can be trained properly to look shapely and bear heavy crops. Tiny trees (less than 18 inches tall) were runts in the planting after bying a tree, keep the roots moist by wrapping them in damp packing material or sawdust. The roots must not dry out or the tree will die. Trim off broken or injured roots.

To insure a successful trans-

To prepare to plant, dig the hole a little deeper and wider than necessary to accommodate the roots. Leave some loose soil in the bottom of the hole. Set the tree at the same depth that it grew in the nursery. Never set it so deep that the bud union of the scion and root section is below ground level when the hole is filled.

If a tree cannot be planted immediately, keep it in the original package and refrigerate it for a week or two. Otherwise, heel (temporarily plant) the trees in a well-drained area, making sure the roots never become dry.

Sports Scene West edges East in overtime

By JIM COUR AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE (AP) - Tom Chambers felt like he had something to prove, and the NBA All-Star Game was the perfect forum.

Ignored by the voting fans and Western Conference coaches alike, the Seattle SuperSonics' forward got into the game only when Houston's Ralph Sampson was sidelined by injury

"That was a big motivational factor for me," the 6-foot-10 Chambers said. "I wasn't out for revenge or anything like that but I wanted to show that I belonged in the game."

Chambers scored 34 points to win most valuable player honors as the West beat the East 154-149 in overtime Sunday at Seattle's Kingdome

The West's Rolando Blackman sent the game into overtime with a pair of free throws with no time left in regulation play. In the overtime, Blackman and Chambers each scored four points as the West won for only the second time in eight games.

The game appeared over when the East's Moses Malone rebounded in a missed Kevin McHale baseline shot with three But Isiah Thomas fouled Black- game in history, James Worthy one of those free throws." Chambers said. Blackman finished with 29 points and was second to Chambers in the MVP voting by a national media panel. Chambers received eight votes, Blackman six and Malone one. Blackman claimed he didn't feel any pressure when attempting the game-tying free throws, even after Thomas told the Dallas Mavericks forward that he was going to choke.

"I just tried to remain calm and comfortable," Blackman

"Rolando is a real pro," Thomas added. "I tried to distract him but it didn't work."

"It's a testimony to Tom Chambers," Riley said. "He just didn't score 34 points, either. He went out there and played some pretty good defense. He did a great job. He had a great game and he deserved it.'

Pavin captures Hawaiian Open in sudden death

Sinks birdie for victory

By BOB GREEN AP Golf Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — Corey Pavin knew he needed something special in the final round of the Hawaiian Open Golf Tourna-

Entering Sunday's fourth and final round at the Waialae Country Club, Pavin trailed leader Craig Stadler by six strokes.

'I knew I had to do something great to have a chance," Pavin

Pavin found greatness, shooting an 8-under-par 64 to tie Stadler at 270, 18 under par, and force a sudden death playoff.

Stadler and the other thirdround leaders couldn't crack 70 over the final 18 holes

We left the door open for someone to shoot a good round, and Corey did it," said the disappointed Stadler, whose 21/2year non-winning string remained intact.

The playoff for the $108,000 first prize started on the 14th hole, where both players matched par. On the second extra hole Pavin and Stadler reached the green in two shots, with Pavin's ball landing about 20 feet from the cup and Stadler's about 15 feet.

Pavin, winner of this tournament last year, knocked the ball in for a birdie and it was Stadler's turn. His putt came up short and faded to the right.

Pavin, who won the Bob Hope Classic three weeks ago, became the first two-time winner of the season.

The sixth victory of his fourear PGA tour career pushed Pavin's tour-leading earnings to $307,040 in only five starts this season.

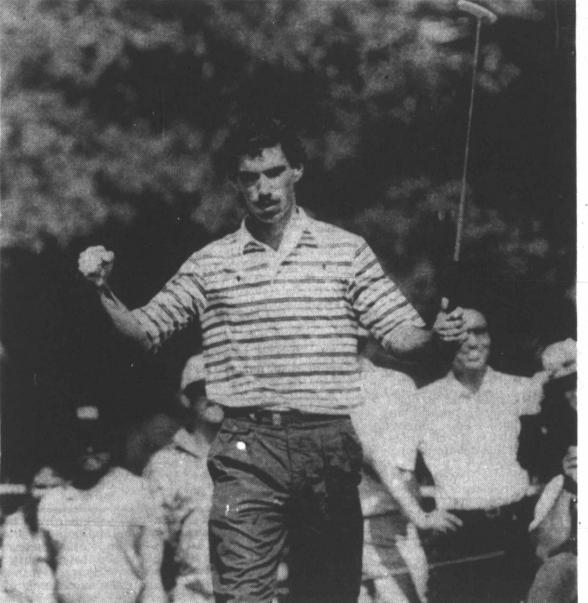

Pavin became only the second man to successfully defend his Hawaiian Open title (Hubert Green in 1978-79 was the other) and was the first player on the tour to successfully defend a title since Jim Thorpe in the Match Play Championship last year. Stadler, who played the last round in 70 in the warm, sunny, weather, collected $64,800.

Paul Azinger, who scored his first tour victory in Phoenix last month, was in the race until the last few holes.

He dropped out of a tie for the lead when he bogeyed the 17th from a bunker, lipping out a three-to-four foot par-saving putt.

Lanny Wadkins and Larry Mize were next at 272. Mize had a closing 67, Wadkins a 68.

Pampa

Both Pampa High basketball teams journey to Dumas for District 1-4A basketball action Tuesday night, starting with the girls game at 6 p.m.

Pampa boys' and girls' posted earlier victories over Dumas with the Harvesters winning 49-39 and the Lady Harvesters taking a 53-47 decision.

Pampa boys have a 5-7 district mark (9-17 overall) and are in fifth place in the standings. Dumas has a 3-9 loop record and fighting to stay out of the cellar. The Demons are ahead of Lubbock Dunbar and Frenship, both 3-10 and in last place. Overall, the Demons are 14-13 and are coming off a 60-58 loss to Clayton, N.M. in a non-district game. In that game, Dumas guard Dallas Smith pumped in 24 points in the losing effort.

Although the Lady Harvesters have no chance to make the playoffs, they can wrap up third place with a victory over Dumas tomorrow night. The Lady Harvesters are 10-4 in district play while the Demonettes are in fourth place at 9-5. Overall, the Lady Harvesters are 17-7.

Persons needing a ride to Dumas may call 669-6722 or 669-3156 for information.

In district play last week, the Borger Bulldogs wrapped up one of the playoff spots with a 97-69 win Friday night over Levelland.

"I was disappointed in losing to Lee (in the 60-

Runnin' Rebels stay atop poll

By JIM O'CONNELL AP Sports Writer

With Nevada-Las Vegas leading the way, the top eight teams in The Associated Press' college basketball poll remained the same today as last week's rankings.

The Runnin' Rebels, 23-1, held the No. 1 ranking for the second consecutive week and the eighth since the season began. The nation's top offensive team, Nevada-Las Vegas received 51 first-place votes and 1,282 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters.

Following the Runnin' Rebels for the second consecutive week were Indiana, North Carolina, Iowa, DePaul, Temple, Purdue and Oklahoma.

Nevada-Las Vegas won both its games last week, beating Utah State 113-78, the fourth straight game and 11th overall the Runnin' Rebels broke the 100-point mark, and defeating San Jose State 83-74 to remain unbeaten in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association after 11 games

Indiana received 10 first-place votes and 1,215 points as the Hoosiers improved their record to 19-2 with Big Ten victories over Michigan State, 84-80, and Michigan, 83-67 on Sunday. The Hoosiers lead the conference, which has four members — Iowa, Purdue and Illinois - in the Top Twenty, with a 10-1 mark.

North Carolina, which received the other four first-place votes and 1,194 points, beat North Carolina State 96-79 and was extended to overtime before beating Virginia 74-73 Sunday to improve its record to 20-2 and remain atop the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Iowa, 21-2, received 1,086 points after victories over Minnesota and Arizona. DePaul, the only ranked independent, improved to 20-1 with victories over North Carolina State and Dayton and received 987 points, 24 more than Temple, 23-2, which remained unbeaten in the Atlantic 10 with victories over Massachusetts, Rhode Island and St. Joseph's last week.

Florida, 18-5, won two games last week, 66-52 over Georgia and 84-56 over Mississippi State. Providence, along with Georgetown and St. John's, the other teams from the Big East, nearly fell from the rankings after joining the Top Twenty last week for the first time since 1978. The Friars, 16-5, lost both games they played last week, a 67-66 defeat at the hands of Boston College, and an 87-81 decision to Pittsburgh.

A lot of corporations turned deaf ears to American yachtracing syndicates who were begging for support from 1983 through the start of the racing last fall. Those same corporations are clamoring to climb aboard the bandwagon now that Dennis Conner, the first American to lose the Cup, became the first to reclaim it.

Companies that boarded ship early realized the greatest gains in publicity, but a few latecomers are also doing well.

'When all the syndicates were still vying for support, we selected Dennis Conner," Jeff Wehling, a spokesman for St. Louis-based Anheuser Busch Co., said. "Dennis and his crew said they drank our product, and any one who dealt with Dennis wasn't left with any doubt about his desire and prepardedness." Budweiser stocked coolers in the Stars & Stripes compound at Fremantle, Australia, with cold beer, and built an advertising campaign around Conner's quest. The company spent $600,000 to run one of its 30-second Cup commercials during the Super Bowl last month

It also contributed $250,000 to Sail America Foundation, the syndicate that managed Conner's challenge for the San Diego Yacht Club

When the 12-meter Stars & Stripes '87 was pulled from the water after completing a fourrace sweep of Australia's Kookaburra III last week, all eyes were on the keel - the design of which had been Conner's big secret.

When the skirts were dropped, the keel was revealed, and so was a Budweiser logo affixed to it.

'We were obviously looking for ways to increase our visibility, Wehling said.

Continental Airlines, which donated the charter jet that brought Conner, his crew and other Sail America supporters back from Australia, got its share of free attention, too.

The pilot, Sam Shirck, helped Conner carry the 81/2-pound Cup off the plane in San Diego on Saturday. And, Shirck appeared with Conner in practically every news photo of the moment.

Conner helped the airline, too, wearing a Continental cap as he emerged from the plane. He christened the DC-10 as "Stars & Stripes", and slipped Continental's slogan into his impromptu remarks during an airport reception prior to a parade in his honor.

A local Pepsi official presented Conner with a special commemorative can congratulating Stars & Stripes. Conner responded by putting on a Pepsi hat over the Continental headgear.

American Express Corp. also has an interest. It tried in vain to support all five U.S. challengers, but inter-syndicate bickering over how the money should be divided prompted the financial services company to withdrew its American Express eventually gave $200,000 to Conner and $200,000 to Tom Blackaller's USA syndicate when those two reached the challenger semifinals. America's other three syndicates received $20,000 each, said George Carmany III, senior executive vice president of American Express Bank and a yach-

Elliott favored to claim pole spot in Daytona 500

AP Motorsports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) - There's a big guessing game going on about how fast the winner of the pole position for Sunday's Daytona 500 will go today in the rain-delayed first round of qual-

But engineers from Goodyear, the exclusive supplier of tires for the NASCAR stock car series. already know what the new Daytona International Speedway qualifying record will be.

The figure they came up with is 209.7 mph. "We plotted the Daytona 500 pole position speeds for the last seven years on a simple, straight-line graph," Tom Brown, one of the Goodyear tire engineers working at the track, said. "The pole speed has gone up steadily every year except last year, when the weather was unseasonably warm and the

"If you completely ignore the fact that NASCAR engine builders have found more horsepower over the winter, that every front-running car has been in the wind tunnel once or twice in the last month, that the cars are 200 pounds lighter this year (5,500 pounds) - if you ignore all that and simply look at our graph — you would predict a pole position speed for the 1987 Daytona 500 several miles per hour faster than the 1986 speed."

They came up with the figure just under 210, which goes along with predictions by such insiders as three-time Winston Cup champions Darrell Waltrip and Cale Yarborough.

Bill Elliott, the favorite to win the pole for the third straight year in his sleek Ford Thunderbird, set the track record of 205.114 mph in 1985 and had the fast lap of 205.039 last February.

The opening qualifying session was postponed from Saturday until today because of intermittent rain which also shortened practice sessions on both Friday and Saturday.

"Still and all, we should be ready (on Monday)," said Elliott, who showed his expected power by winning the Busch Clash on Sunday. "The pole speed probably won't be as fast as some people expect, but it's definitely going to be fast.'

The surprise of the testing sessions on Daytona International Speedway's 2.5-mile tri-oval last month and heading into the time trials has been Davey Allison, 25-year-old son of longtime NAS-CAR star Bobby Allison.

"I was really looking forward to qualifying on Saturday," said Allison, who has practiced at over 208 mph in another of the strong Thunderbirds. "It (the rain delay) has given me two more days to get pumped up and nervous.

Lopez wins Sarasota Classic

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) - Nancy Lopez says she never fully appreciated what it takes to make the LPGA Hall of Fame until a couple of years ago when she attended a ceremony honoring members in Sugar Land, Texas.

"You think about this day and strive to get to it, but you wonder if it'll ever come," said Lopez, 30 years old. "This is special. To get into the Hall of Fame where there are so many great players is an honor.

The triumph was the 35th in 11 She will be the 11th player to professional seasons for Lopez, who will become eligible for entry into the Hall in July. The triumph was gratifying, too, because it came on the same Bent Tree Country Club golf course where she earned her first pro victory in 1978.

Lopez, winning for the first time since returning to the tour late last year after having a baby, finished the tournament with a four-round score of 7-under-par 281. She won $30,000 to boost her lifetime earnings to $1,743,244.

The 2-over-par 74 on the final day was uncharacteristic for Lopez, who shot 68 Saturday. She started with a five-stroke lead over Baker and Cathy Morse and nearly lost it with a two-bogey, no-birdie round.

Baker, who shot 72 and finished in a tie for second place with Anne Marie Palli, pulled to within one stroke with five holes left. A bogey on the par 4 14th hole broke her momentum, however, and Lopez matched par the last four holes to complete the victory.

Baker and Palli, who shot a 69 in windy conditions, finished with 72-hole scores of 4-under-par 284.

EL PASO (AP) - Several weeks ago, Don Haskins and his Texas-El Paso Miners were being an but counted out Western Athletic Conference basketball race.

Even though he had won four consecutive WAC titles, some thought "The Bear" had finally been trapped by too many injuries and too many close losses.

But UTEP's 93-91 overtime victory Saturday night over Brigham Young at Provo, Utah, put the Miners, 18-5 overall and 8-3 in the conference, only onehalf game behind BYU, 17-8 and

"It's been the darndest year I've ever seen," Haskins said. 'We've only got one guy on the team who hasn't missed a game. We're not a bad team when we're healthy. In fact, we're better than we were a year ago.'

Haskins, coaching in his 26th year at UTEP, felt then, and feels now, that his team deserves a Top Twenty rating.

'We've lost five games and could have won four of them,' Haskins said. "I think the Top Twenty is so close this year we could stay with most of them on a given night. We don't get a lot of UTEP has a good chance to BALLINGER (AP) -The water snake that was putting the bite on a multimillion-dollar reservoir project will not be harmed if construction proceeds along federal guidelines, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has determined.

In its final environmental impact statement, the Corps says the Fish and Wildlife Seryice has come up with 'reasonable and prudent" measures to protect the snake that has created lengthy delays for the Stacy Dam pro-

The Colorado River Municipal Water District, which plans to build the dam, has agreed to the conditions. including the bulldozing of 30 miles of Colorado River shoreline to create more habitat for the snake.

The reservoir would flood about half of the snake's primary habitat along the Colorado River in Runnels, Coleman and Concho counties.

The project is designed to provide a water supply for Odessa, Big Spring, Snyder, Midland, San Angelo and Abilene.

"Of course we're not pleased with all the conditions, but it boils down to either doing what the Fish and Wildlife recommended or not building the reservoir," said Owen Ivie, the water district's director.

The Corps can't issue a permit for any project that would jeopardize a species on the nation's threatened or endangered species list.

The only major issue that remains unresolved is how much land the water district will have to buy suitable for common wildlife such as deer, officials said.

Soviet vessels

Admiral James Lyons, U.S. Commander-in-Chief for the Pacific Fleet, points out aerial photographs of Soviet naval vessels docked in Cam Ranh Bay, Vietnam. The photos, taken in December, 1986, were released in Sidney, Australia, Monday to show Soviet expansion of the base since U.S. forces vacated the area in 1975.

Ramos says troops ready for orders to attack rebels

MANILA, Philippines (AP) - Military chief Gen. Fidel V. Ramos said today his forces were ready for action if ordered by President Corazon Aquino following the refusal of Communist rebels to extend a 60-day cease-fire.

'They (the rebels) have bared their fangs, so to speak, to a peace-loving people," Ramos told reporters after inspecting a training camp in Rizal province, east of Manila, a day after the cease-fire

He said the military was gathering intelligence on rebel forces for possible new action, but would 'follow the decisions of the civilian leadership."

The cease-fire, the first nationwide truce in the 18-year insurgency by the New People's Army, expired at noon Sunday. The Communistdominated National Democratic Front, which represented the rebels in peace talks, called for "militant and unremitting struggles" to achieve its Military headquarters said there were no reports of clashes today but that troops were on alert. As the peace initiative with the Communists collapsed, the government opened new talks today with the largest Moslem rebel group, the Moro National Liberation Front, in hopes of ending a long-running Islamic insurgency in Mindanao and other southern islands. National Affairs Minister Aquilino Pimentel said the government was "sincerely prepared to listen to the grievances of our Moslem bretheren' but would not sacrifice the interests of non-Moslems, who make up 60 percent of Mindanao's

The Moslem group agreed to submit a formal proposal for Mindanao autonomy Feb. 19.

Pimentel said the government wanted to include all Moslem factions in the talks, but MNLF delegate Habid Hashim said any other Moslem groups that joined would have to be under the direction of his group.

The rival Moro Islamic Liberation Front refused to attend. Last month, the smaller group launched attacks in Mindanao that killed at least 46 people to protest government overtures to the MNLF.

Chief government negotiator Teofisto Guingona on Sunday blamed Communist hardliners for the collapse of the cease-fire but said the administration would continue peace talks with regional rebel

Maj. Gen. Eduardo Ermita, deputy chief of staff, told reporters today "we're still open" to a negotiated peace, adding, "If they don't give us their signal, we'll just keep on with our peace-keeping operations.

Ramos, however, said the rebels had launched attacks in three areas in the final days of the ceasefire and that the military was in "hot pursuit."

Some Mexicans jittery about opening nuclear power plant

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Mexico is on the verge of entering the age of nuclear power with the opening of its Laguna Verde power plant, but concern is growing among ecological groups about its safety and the environment on the southern coast.

The influencial Roman Catholic Church also has voiced misgivings and thousands of people have demonstrated at the plant site, chanting "We don't want another Chernobyl," a reference to the Soviet nuclear accident last spring.

Construction of Mexico's first nuclear plant started in 1973 at Laguna Verde, on the Gulf of Mexico shore 45 miles north of Veracruz and about 200 miles east-southeast of Mexico City.

It has been hampered by delays, changing presidential administrations, and most of all by Mexico's economic troubles the past five years.

One result of the delays is that costs have risen from $1.5 billion in 1980 to $2.2 billion to complete the plant, according to the plant's project director, Rafael Fernandez de la Garza. Other estimates put the price tag at $3.5 billion.

Nevertheless, President Miguel de la Madrid said in September he wants Laguna Verde, which is operated by the Federal Electricity Commission, to become operational this year.

De la Garza says fueling of the first of two General Electric BWR-5 reactors with 20 tons of enriched uranium will begin in about four months and after a series of start-up tests, Unit 1 should be in full commercial operation by the end of the year.

He said the second unit is about 50 percent com-Each reactor, he said, is capable of producing 657 megawatts, enough to light a city of 500,000 people. Opponents claim the government does not have the resources or the technical expertise to handle a nuclear emergency.

But de la Garza said there is an acceptable emergency plan under government review that among other things calls for the immediate evacuation of people 10 miles around the plant.

Ring of women drug, then rob men

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Detectives investigating a ring of fashionable young women who rob wealthy men with fast-acting knockout drugs say it's only a matter of time before the sedatives kill someone.

At least 20 men in South Florida have lost $10,000 to $20,000 apiece in the past six months to women who stalked them, went home with them and then slipped knockout drugs in their drinks, police said. One woman has been arrested in the case.

"It's the use of these drugs that makes it unique and dangerous,' said Metro-Dade police Detective Mike Crowley. "Right now, there are prominent, wealthy people being robbed. Just as easily, tomorrow there will be prominent, wealthy people who are homicides."

Deaths caused by strong sedatives and hypnotics have occurred after similar robberies in New York, Los Angeles and Chicago, detectives said.

Police said they have documented 20 cases in three counties, but suspect many more cases have not been reported because the victims are from out of town or are married and want to avoid embarrassment

The robbers are attractive and fashionably dressed women in their mid-20s to mid-30s who look for "dates" in high-class nightclubs and hotels. In almost every case, the victims were wearing expensive Rolex watches.

"A couple of these guys have been out for 12 to 17 hours and don't remember a thing," said

Dr. William Hearn, chief toxicologist at the Dade County medical examiner's office

Fort Lauderdale Detective Jim Ives said the women do not offer sex for money, and "come off as schoolteachers on vacation or airline stewardesses in between flights."

"She was a very articulate, attractive woman. Far from anyone you would presume to be setting you up," said one victim, a Fort Lauderdale businessman who asked not to be identified.

Houston sweetens convention bid

HOUSTON (AP) - In a last-ditch effort to woo the 1988 Democratic National Convention to Houston, city officials amended a $5 million insurance policy to guarantee that the unfinished convention center will be ready by January.

Joe Russo, Houston's host committee chairman. said he hopes the Lloyd's of London policy will overcome Democratic National Committee Chairman Paul G. Kirk's objections about the George R. Brown Convention Center.

A letter from Russo to be delivered today explains the policy to Kirk and members of the site selection committee. The party is expected to announce its host city choice Tuesday, Houston and Atlanta are the apparent front-runners.

"We're trying to plug any remaining hole," Russo said. "We're trying to add more belt suspenders to our proposal." Under the new plan, if the center is not completed or if any system in the center is not working by Jan. 1, 1988 — seven months before the scheduled convention — the Democrats will be $5 mil-

Kirk has said in recent weeks that his one remaining concern with Houston as host city is that the selection committee can't know by Tuesday whether the convention center's systems will be working properly by July 18, 1988.

Russo made the original $5 million insurance policy offer to the committee when it visited Houston last November, but that one guaranteed only that the center would be completed by the time of the convention.
