Snow slows area travel; more coming

From Staff and Wire Reports

While cold weather systems plagued large portions of the nation, with 38 people dying from weather-related incidents, the Pampa area reported only relatively minor problems from the cold and snow of the past few days.

With 10 inches of snow still on the ground this morning, including an additional half-inch falling Monday night, the only major problem reported in Pampa was the collapse of a roof at the Clyde Carruth Pavilion east of the city in the Recreation Park area.

A worker at the Precinct County 2 Barn said the weight of the snow apparently caused the roof in the conference wing section to cave in and take a wall with it.

No reports of damage estimates were available at mid morning as workers and county officials were busy checking out the structure.

Though city, county and state road crews have been busy clearing the icy roads of the up to 13 inches of snow that have fallen since Thursday, travelers advisories are still in effect through Wednesday.

Despite the slick roads, only a few minor accidents have been reported in the area. Emergency room personnel at HCA Coronado Hospital reported only minor incidents from the weather, with two persons being treated for minor injuries sustained in falls on slick surfaces.

Wallace named interim police chief

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

Pampa Police Lt. Jess Wallace was named interim police chief Monday afternoon, replacing Chief J. J. Ryzman, who announced his resignation earlier Monday.

City Manager Bob Hart said Monday that the decision to name Wallace was made after he and Ryzman met with several of the department's senior officers.

And in yet another personnel change at the Police Department, Lt. Roy Denman, head of the department's service division, and Lt. James D. Laramore, head of criminal investigation, were ordered by Ryzman to switch jobs this morning.

Ryzman, 45, announced Monday morning that he will be leaving Pampa on Feb. 13 to become chief of police in Corsicana, a town about the size of Pampa 50 miles south of Dallas. He has been Pampa's chief since 1979. He will earn $41,000 per year in Corsicana, $5,000 more than his $36,000 base salary in Pampa, Ryzman said.

Ryzman cited the challenge of "professionalizing" the Corsicana department, the chance to pursue a master's degree in public administration at one of the community's nearby colleges and "cultural advantages" for his children as reasons for the move.

Wallace was hired from Rupert, Idaho, in August 1979 as a patrolman. He was named lieutenant in November 1984 after earning promotions to corporal and sergeant.

He said this morning he plans to "just try to keep things going."

Wallace said he hasn't had time to set any immediate goals for the department and has made no decision about whether he plans to seek the chief's position permanently.

Wallace also said he hasn't decided yet whether to name an interim lieutenant to head the patrol division.

"I don't know if I'm going to have a temporary lieutenant or not," he said. "I don't think I'll be able to handle both positions."

Hart said he wants Wallace to begin working with Ryzman immediately to aid in the transition.

"He'll move over to the day shift so J.J. can start going over everything with him, and we can keep it going," Hart said. "We want a smooth transition."

Hart also said he does "not want to be rushed" in his search for a permanent replacement for Ryzman.

The city manager said he told officers in a meeting Monday to let him know if they are interested or know anyone interested in the chief's position. He said he has not yet decided whether to hire from within the department or out of town.

"I told them I want their input in terms of defining the type of individual we want," Hart said.

Reaction among Gray County law enforcement to Ryzman's departure was generally one of surprise, but several of Ryzman's officers said this morning that the chief's decision didn't surprise them.

Texas Department of Public Safety Sgt. Jim Powell of Pampa said he was surprised by Ryzman's decision and hates to see him leave, adding that he's glad Ryzman found a better job.

"You always have that unknown factor (when someone leaves)," Powell said.

He described Ryzman as always cooperative. He said Pampa police would often handle dispatch calls for DPS troopers and would always assist when needed.

"As far as I'm concerned, J.J.'s always been a great help to us," Powell said.

Powell said he is pleased with the choice of Wallace as interim chief.

Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan said he is sure that Ryzman "knows what he is doing" by leaving. He said the police chief has expressed an interest in furthering his education and the Corsicana job will afford him that opportunity.

"I think he's done exceptionally well here," Jordan said.

Pampa Police Sgt. R. J. Howell said he was not surprised by Ryzman's decision because he had heard rumors that the chief was leaving. He said that, although he and Ryzman have had occasional differences of opinion, the chief's departure will be a loss to the department.

"Anytime you lose qualified people, it's a loss," Howell said. "Everybody makes mistakes. See CHIEF, Page 2

Clements returns

AUSTIN (AP) — William P. Clements, the only Republican governor of Texas this century, returned to that office today after a four-year absence.

Clements, who gained revenge for his 1982 election loss by defeating Democratic Gov. Mark White in November, was scheduled to be sworn into office by Supreme Court Chief Justice John Hill shortly after noon.

Lt. Gov. William P. Hobby, a Democrat beginning his fifth term, also was to be sworn in at that time.

Both Clements and Hobby were declared the official general election winners Monday after the Legislature completed a canvass of the returns. That canvass showed Clements with 1,813,779 votes to 1,584,515 for White.

Clements arrived in Austin in midafternoon Monday for a lengthy series of inaugural events.

The governor-elect attended a reception for Hobby in the Great Hall of the Senate and an evening "Salute to the Texas Arts" performance on the University of Texas campus.

In addition, Clements delivered a brief speech to several hundred supporters who attended a reception hosted by the Clements Hispanic Executive Committee.

Today's schedule called for Clements and his wife, Rita, to attend a special 10 a.m. service at Austin's First United Methodist Church before the noon swearing-in ceremony.

Clements

A 12:45 p.m. barbeque luncheon and a 2:30 p.m. parade also were scheduled for today, along with four inaugural balls beginning at 8 p.m. The new governor and first lady planned to make an appearance at all four, said Reggie Bashur, Clements' press secretary.

A 15-member GOP Pampa delegation, led by John and Susan Triplehorn, was scheduled to attend the inauguration ceremonies.

On his last full day in office Monday, White issued a proclamation calling on the Legislature to quickly consider spending additional money "to expand prison capacity."

Celanese breaks production marks

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

By concentrating on efficiency and quality control, employees of the Pampa Celanese Chemical Co. plant set production and product shipment records in 1986, company spokesmen said.

The plant produced a record number of pounds of products last year, broke previous production records in eight of 13 product lines and shipped a record number of pounds of products to customers.

"The bottom line is, we had a very good year," said Brent Stephens, operations manager. Stephens said the successes were the result of a number of factors, adding that the management is "very proud" of the employees and their work.

He added that one of the significant aspects of the record-setting year is that it "wasn't in just one area... but across the board."

Howell said Ryzman's biggest asset to the department is his "initiative to make the department more progressive" through education for officers and hiring qualified people. The sergeant said there have been plenty of changes for the better during Ryzman's tenure.

"When I first came here from Daytona Beach (Fla.), I couldn't believe that this Panhandle area, this county, this city, was about 20 years behind the times."

Testimony: Conrail engineers ignored signal to slow down

WASHINGTON (AP)—The operators of the Conrail locomotive that collided with an Amtrak passenger train violated at least a half-dozen operating rules and actually were increasing speed when a signal told them to slow down, a congressional hearing was told today.

John Riley, head of the Federal Railroad Administration, testified that if the Conrail crew had "observed and responded in a timely manner to any of six warning signals," the locomotive would have stopped short of the track intersection where the collision took place.

Riley was the leadoff witness in the first of a series of congressional hearings planned in the aftermath of the Jan. 4 rail accident near Baltimore in which 16 people were killed and 175 were injured. It was the worst accident in Amtrak's history.

In opening remarks, Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., said the accident makes clear that train engineers should be licensed and that the railroad industry should be required to comply with a broader drug- and alcohol-testing program.

million pounds of chemical products, exceeding the previous record set in 1978 by more than 15 million pounds.

In addition, eight of 13 product lines broke production records during 1986, reflecting the strong effort put forth throughout the plant, Stephens said.

Also, a record number of pounds were shipped to customers throughout the world in drums, tank trucks and railroad tank cars. The new shipment record broke the previous record set in 1974 by 9 million pounds.

"These shipments were made with no additional people and with excellent shipment safety," Stephens said.

Stephens said the Pampa plant had an "excellent record" in transportation and shipments, adding that the record high level of production benefitted from the plant also being able to ship the product to its customers.

The product shipped from the plant would fill 5,000-gallon tank trucks stretching end-to-end for 220 miles, or 20,000-gallon railroad tank cars stretching 46 miles, or drums stacked 1,310 miles high, a distance from Pampa to Houston and back, Stephens explained.

Stephens said the records resulted from efforts in "trying to stress quality work in everything we do, adding that the plant has been concentrating on efficiency and quality procedures over the past several years.

The Pampa plant produces some 25 different industrial chemical products that end up in a myriad of consumer products such as synthetic fibers, paints, adhesives, ink, aspirin, food additives, pharmaceuticals, printed circuit boards, plastics, agricultural products, building products and ultra violet light cured coatings.

"One of the things we're trying to emphasize in the plant is that it's not just one department" that accomplishes the plant's goals, Stephens said. He said the production success also takes in maintenance, transportation, security, quality production and "all areas working together."

Production and shipping records are not achieved without special effort by employees in all departments of the plant, he noted.

"It takes good operations, excellent maintenance and top-notch support from engineering, laboratory, shipping, technicians, accounting and resource administration groups," Stephens said.

The Pampa plant has earned a good reputation within the corporation. "We get a lot of recognition in our own company" for work attitudes, ethics and achievements, Stephens said.

"The Pampa plant has been known within the Celanese Corporation as the 'Can Do' plant because of the attitudes and abilities of our employees," he said. "This year has been proof of that reputation."

Stephens said the plant's reputation also has helped it to maintain a good set of customers.

"Obviously, to sell this much material you have got to have customers, and Celanese's reputation as a 'quality supplier' has allowed us to maintain a strong customer base when others have not," he said.

As well as the record production, the plant also has had record efficiency, Stephens claimed. This has been so despite the use of what is seen in some quarters as outdated technology by today's standards in other companies, Stephens stated.

Improvements in the use of energy and in raw material efficiency "keeps us competitive," he said. Helping to achieve this is the stress on quality.

"Quality emphasis has become a way of life throughout the Celanese Corporation, and this emphasis is the key in Pampa Celanese employee achievements," he added.

"Our people strive for quality not only in our final products but in every job function we do," Stephens explained. "This attitude of 'doing it right,' identifying and solving problems, and continuing to improve are the backbone of the growth and records we are seeing."

In addition to the record quantities produced and shipped, productivity was at all-time highs in several major portions of the plant, he said.

"This means we make more pounds of product out of less raw material and with less energy."

Progress in this area allows us to keep a competitive position with our worldwide competition," Stephens said.

"Since much of our plant has 35-year-old technology and equipment, the fact we have been able to stay competitive where other companies have shut down similar technology is a real tribute to the long-term efforts of our total Pampa team," he said.

To top it all off, the plant set these records while setting safety records also. "Last year was probably the best year safety-wise we've had in several years," he noted.

The employees have worked more than 1,197,000 manhours without a lost-time injury and are candidates for several corporation, industry and national safety awards.

The Celanese plant employs more than 400 permanent employees and utilizes more than 150 full-time contract employees.

Stephens noted the plant plans to recognize its employees for their achievements last year. Celanese has presented more than $10,250 worth of gift certificates to be used at any Pampa Chamber of Commerce member business.

The gift certificates provide more flexibility for employees and also get money flowing into the community, Stephens said.

The plant also has other economic impacts on the Pampa area. It consumes more than 100 million gallons of butane and $2.2-million worth of natural gas annually, aiding the local oil and gas economy.

Celanese is the largest single taxpayer in Gray County, accounting for more than 20 percent of the total property tax base. Employee and contract payrolls amount to more than $24 million annually. In addition, an estimated $75 million was spent on materials and services in the area, Stephens noted.

"Plant and corporation efforts to further enhance the quality of all aspects of employee job satisfaction and continually improve cause company officials and employees to be optimistic about the future and look forward to further record achievements," Stephens claimed.

Coronado Hospital passes

HCA Coronado Hospital has been awarded a certificate of accreditation by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals (JCAH).

Hospital administrator Norman Knox said JCAH accreditation is evidence of HCA Coronado Hospital's efforts to provide quality health care.

Coronado and its predecessor, Highland General Hospital, have continuously maintained accreditation since the early 1960s.

"Submitting to an accreditation check from JCAH is strictly voluntary," Knox explained. "But we feel that it helps us maintain an excellent level of care at our facility."

"The rigorous standards of JCAH encourage our staff to strive to provide the best health care possible," he added.

To become accredited, the local hospital voluntarily requested an on-site evaluation by JCAH surveyors, who applied standards designed to further the objectives of quality patient care and the safety of the environment in which that care is provided.

These national standards represent a consensus among health care professionals and are periodically updated to reflect changes in health care delivery, Knox said.

The JCAH survey team consists of health care professionals trained to evaluate the hospital's efforts to provide quality care. The surveyors also consult with the professional and administrative staffs to help them in their efforts to continually improve patient care.

JCAH is a private, not-for-profit organization created by and composed of health care professionals.

It is governed by a board of commissioners whose members are appointed by the American College of Surgeons, American College of Physicians, American Dental Association, American Hospital Association and the American Medical Association. A public member is appointed by the board to represent consumer concerns.

Texas prison population drops, doors open

HUNTSVILLE (AP)— Texas prisons will continue accepting inmates as long as they remain under a 95 percent capacity mark imposed by the state to avoid overcrowding, a prison spokesman said.

"I feel that we're still under (95 percent). We'll probably go on with business as usual," Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Charles Brown said Monday.

The Texas law setting the 95 percent capacity limit was passed in 1983 after a federal judge ordered officials to take steps to reduce overcrowding in Texas' penitentiaries.

But inmate population in the 26-unit system, the nation's second largest behind California, exceeded that limit

Friday forcing officials to close its doors to new inmates.

Weekend paroles pushed the inmate population below the limit, allowing prison officials to reopen Monday.

Inmate population Sunday totaled 38,207, or 168 prisoners short of the ceiling of 38,375, Brown said.

An estimated 21 more inmates were released Monday and about 60 new prisoners were accepted, but Brown said he would not have an official count until later today.

Monday traditionally is a slow day for admissions, officials said.

Some sheriffs around Texas, faced with their own limits on county jail population, accelerated prison transfers last week once they discovered the state prison system was about to close its doors, Brown said.

Prison administrators were trying to devise a more organized system for transfer from about 20 of the state's most populous counties.

Tuesday is the day the prison systems gets its regular delivery of prisoners from Harris County, the state's most populous county. The county that includes Houston averages about 150 inmates a week.

A transfer system involving fewer counties was put into place during 1982 when the prisons faced a crowding crisis and were forced to close for a week, Brown said.

To get below the ceiling this past weekend, 80 prisoners were released on parole Saturday and another 135 on Sunday.

"Normally we don't release prisoners on weekends but it has been done in the past," Brown said.

The system stopped accepting new inmates Friday when it registered 38,414 prisoners, or 95.09 percent, as of midnight Thursday, 38 over the limit.

As part of a prison reform order, U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice ordered the prison system to reduce crowding. The Legislature passed a law setting the 95 percent capacity limit in 1983.

No immediate end to the daily population crunch was in sight, Brown said. "This probably will be ongoing until we open up some trusty camps," he said. The first of 10 such camps, being constructed adjacent to existing prison units, could open some time in March, with the rest operating by June or July, Brown said.

A new maximum security prison, under construction near Palestine, is expected to begin taking inmates in August, and together with the camps will add 4,250 beds to the system, according to Brown.

Justice already has issued a contempt order against the corrections department, saying the agency failed to live up to agreements made in 1980 to improve inmates' living conditions and staffing in the prisons.

King remembered by crowd

SAN ANTONIO (AP)— Rosa Parks was tired and cold on that winter day 31 years ago when she refused to give up her seat on a segregated bus in Montgomery, Ala.

Her refusal led to her arrest, which led to a boycott of the bus system and the civil rights movement.

On Monday, Mrs. Parks rode in a bus similar to the one in which she made history as she joined 10,000 others honoring the memory of Martin Luther King Jr.

The crowd, joining thousands across the country honoring King, marched about three miles from a junior high school to a plaza, both named for the Black leader.

At the plaza, Mrs. Parks spoke as people laid wreaths at the foot of a statue of King.

"We hope and pray that his memory will not be just a few days in January, but throughout the whole year," Mrs. Parks, 73, told the crowd after the march.

Mrs. Parks, now living in Detroit, helped spark the civil rights movement when she declined to give up her bus seat to a white man on Dec. 1, 1955. She was arrested and fined.

King took up her fight and encouraged other blacks to boycott the bus system, which was dependent on blacks.

Mayor Henry Cisneros, who had asked Mrs. Parks to join the city in the celebration, praised Mrs. Parks for her refusal to leave her seat.

"From there came the boycotts, from there came the marches, from there came the peaceful revolution that we have witnessed in America and it started with one brave, cold, tired lady who said, 'No more. I'm not going to take it. I'm not going to give up this seat,'" Cisneros said.

King, a 1964 Nobel Peace Prize recipient, was assassinated in Memphis in 1968.

"It's good for the young people in the schools to be taught the meaning of his philosophy and as we develop our commitment and dedication and determination to be free we will not have to fear whatever obstacles come our way," Mrs. Parks said.

"We will, with the help of God and the unification and love of our fellow man, continue to move forward to realize his dream of a beloved community," she said.

Cisneros and Olympic gold medalist Carl Lewis led the march most of the way as the bus carrying Mrs. Parks traveled behind them.

Group fights tort reform

AUSTIN (AP)— Texas needs insurance reform, not tort reform, to solve the liability coverage crisis, according to the director of a group that says insurance companies are responsible for their own problems.

"What the insurance companies have gone out and done in Texas is they went out and bought buildings all over our urban landscape," said Billy Rogers, director of the Texans for Civil Justice.

He said at a Monday news conference that those investments have gone sour in many cases.

"They've been taking your premium dollars and investing them in empty buildings all across Texas," Rogers said.

Insurance industry officials say the liability coverage crisis is the result of too many lawsuits and excessive awards to people who file the suits.

The industry is seeking an overhaul of the state's tort system.

A tort is a civil wrong for which the wronged party can sue for damages, such as medical malpractice.

The Texans for Civil Justice (not to be confused with the rival Texans Civil Justice League) says it favors "insurance reform," not a change in state laws concerning tort trials. The Texas Trial Lawyers Association is a member of the Texans for Civil Justice.

The Texas Civil Justice League, which represents insurance customers such as banks and doctors, refers to the situation as a "lawsuit crisis." The league is pushing several reforms, including a limit on damage awards.

At a Capitol news conference, Rogers blasted a report recently issued by the staff of a House-Senate joint committee that reviewed the problem in recent months.

"In this 245-page, 50,000-word report... there's not one sentence devoted to the key question in this whole tort reform controversy. Will any one of the 30 recommendations in this report lower your insurance rates. The clear answer to that question is no," Rogers said.

He said tort reform is "a plan by the insurance companies to take away your right to a fair jury trial (in civil cases), and it will raise your rates at the same time."

Clements, Hobby declared winners

AUSTIN (AP)— State lawmakers have made official what Texans have thought since Nov. 4: Republican Bill Clements beat Democrat Mark White in the gubernatorial election.

The state Constitution gives the Legislature the exclusive power to decide who is governor and who is lieutenant governor. The official canvass took place Monday during a joint House-Senate session.

It ended at 3:36 p.m. with Speaker Gib Lewis proclaiming Clements the governor and Bill Hobby the lieutenant governor. The Legislature's action cleared the way for today's inauguration ceremonies for Clements and Hobby.

"I don't think there's any suspense," Karl Johnson of the state auditor's office said as he helped a committee of lawmakers check the official returns from the Nov. 4 election.

Operating under provisions of the Texas Constitution, Lewis began the process by passing the sealed, official county-by-county returns to the nine-member special committee of House members and senators.

The committee compared the totals with the unofficial results compiled by Secretary of State I. McDaniel after Election Day. Those results were checked against official results mailed to Ms. McDaniel by the clerks of the 254 counties.

Although some minor discrepancies were discovered, the legislators seemed underwhelmed by the mundane, but important, number checking. "I'm having a good time," Sen. Don Henderson, R-Houston, dead-panned.

Director says Brownsville port did it wrong

BROWNSVILLE (AP)— After four years when everything that could go wrong went wrong, the Port of Brownsville is gearing up for a resurgence of trade, says the port's director.

Before the Mexican peso began its steady devaluation in 1982, before the decline in oil prices and the depression in agriculture, the 120 industries around the port employed between 5,000 and 6,000 people. Today the workforce is down to 2,000, although the number of companies is about the same, says director of the port, Cisneros.

"There's a lot of inactivity," Cisneros said. "We're just waiting for the turnaround."

Although the state's other ports have been hurt either by slumps in oil, agriculture or manufacturing, Brownsville's port also has been hit hard by Mexico's devastated economy, Cisneros said.

"Mexico's economy affects our port more than the others," he said.

Between 55 percent and 60 percent of the port's business involved Mexican imports or exports, he said.

Before the peso devaluation, more than 4 million tons of cargo cleared the port in 1981. In 1982 the port's tonnage fell to 3.5 million, and then plummeted to 1.8 million tons the following year. Tonnage was up to 2.1 million in 1984 and 2.4 million in 1985, Cisneros said. He said 1986 figures would reflect a small decline from the previous year.

But Cisneros says there's been a "silver lining in the dark cloud of devaluation," in Mexico.

"Labor costs are lower than in any other country in the world... now it's a land of opportunity," he said.

The latest in a string of dire events at the Brownsville Port came New Year's Eve when Marathon LeTourneau Co. announced it was laying off 300 employees at its manufacturing operation for off-shore oil rigs.

The port also suffered when a freeze in 1983 destroyed much of the Rio Grande Valley's citrus industry.

"Everything that could go wrong did go wrong in the last four years," Cisneros said.

But Cisneros believes 1987 will be the year the port breaks that losing streak.

"Things are turning around. Business is beginning to reassert itself. We're just in the process of planning new programs, new developments that will help," he said.

Part of his optimism comes from the Mexican government "making the right kind of decisions" to divest itself of private businesses that had been nationalized and some trade and tariff agreements reached recently.

"I'm optimistic we've seen the worst," he said.

Jim Pugh, executive director of the Port of Houston Authority, says he is cautiously optimistic about the outlook for the Houston port next year.

Republicans offer to pay training expenses

After declaring that her party is "not here to use tax dollars for political purposes," Gray County Republican Chairwoman Susan Triplehorn offered to pay for training expenses incurred by County Treasurer Scott Hahn and District Clerk Vickie Walls.

Triplehorn announced her offer last week as Gray County Commissioners were discussing expenses the two county officials incurred for training before they took office Jan. 1.

Walls and Hahn requested travel allowances last month for a GOP-sponsored training session in Austin and for travel to Canyon where they trained with Randall County officials, but were told to resubmit their requests after they took office Jan. 1.

Triplehorn said, "There's no question the expenses are justified."

"But as the conservative party, we are not here to use tax dollars for political purposes," she added.

She told commissioners that the Gray County GOP will pay for the $456 training expenses Hahn incurred and $429 incurred by Walls. She said the party would rather not pay $245 for a State Department-sponsored passport seminar Walls attended in San Antonio.

But Precinct 1 Commissioner O.L. Presley and Precinct 2 Commissioner Jim Greene declared the county should not have to pay training expenses before an official is sworn into office.

Triplehorn said the GOP is still paying its campaign debts, but agreed to pay for the passport seminar.

Commissioners on Thursday also refused to pay attorney's fees for John Weaver's court-appointed attorney Mark Buzzard and attorney's fees for Tom Etheredge's court-appointed lawyer John Mann.

Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy said

Mann's claim totaled $8,880 to represent Etheredge, who recently had 25 charges of securities violations dismissed in Gray County and is currently awaiting trial on similar charges in Kansas City.

"Eight-thousand dollars, and he's still not here," Presley remarked.

Buzzard's claim was for $3,500 to represent John Weaver, who was sentenced to 15 years for the shooting death of a Pampa woman. Kennedy said Buzzard charged $500 for expert witness fees but said he was told the expert witness was not able to quote his exact figures.

"I called the doctor (the expert witness), and he said his fee was $60," Kennedy said.

In other action, commissioners:

- selected First National Bank as the county depository.
- rejected bids for $1 million in catastrophe liability insurance.

Trial begins on school money distribution

AUSTIN (AP)— The trial of a lawsuit filed by property poor school districts who claim state school money is not distributed fairly is expected to last for several weeks.

Opposing the challengers in the 2-year-old lawsuit are the state and wealthy school districts who do not want their balanced budgets disturbed.

The non-jury trial before Judge Harley Clark was to begin today.

Texas Civil Liberties Union legal director Jim Harrington said Monday that TCLU would join the suit on the side of poor districts.

Preliminary hearings were held Dec. 17.

In a court petition, 67 school districts claim that under the 1984 school reform legislation state funds for schools are not being distributed equitably under school reform legislation passed in 1984.

Eight districts in South Texas originally sued the state in March 1984.

The state, backed by 48 other school districts, claims state money is being spread evenly over the state, but districts are not collecting as much local school taxes as they could.

With such friends, who needs enemies

Whenever two governments announce that they have finally reached an agreement over a sticky dispute involving trade, you can be reasonably sure they have decided on a mutually agreeable (to the governments) method of sticking it to consumers.

If some government official mentions the buzzword "fair trade," you can bet the house on it. Just such an agreement has been reached by the U.S. and Canadian governments.

Last October, you may recall, the U.S. government decided that the Canadian government was undercharging Canadian companies for lumber cut on public land, and that this subsidy was unfair to U.S. lumber producers. The U.S. government has similar practices (which may amount to subsidizing environmental abuse), so it was a case of the pot calling the kettle black. But what's a little hypocrisy when you're starting a trade war?

Anyway, the U.S. threatened to slap a 15 percent tariff on Canadian softwood and used that threat as a starting point for negotiations with the Canadian government. Canada threatened a retaliatory tariff on corn, and agreed to sit down and talk.

The negotiations have been concluded. Canada, in the spirit of cooperation and beneficence, has graciously agreed to slap a 15 percent tax on softwood exports to the U.S. The U.S. government, apparently reassured that U.S. consumers will get clobbered by a two-by-four one way or another, has graciously permitted the Canadian government to be the direct looter this time, and dropped plans for the tariff.

So everybody's happy? Two governments have reached an amicable agreement? That's fine unless you happen to be interested in a new house, remodeling, or buying any house whose cost will be affected by escalating prices for new houses. U.S. homebuilders estimate that the new tax will add about $1,000 to the cost of an average new house in the U.S. (though there will be regional variation).

Aren't you grateful that we have governments to protect our interests?

"What's on the agenda today, 'business bashing' or 'Reagan bashing'?"

James J. Kilpatrick

Budget calls for sound cuts

WASHINGTON — There is something tedious, tiresome and irritating in the knee-jerk response in the press and on Capitol Hill to President Reagan's proposed federal budget for 1988. Can't the carping critics think of anything more original than "dead on arrival?" This budget is very much alive.

To be sure, the president's recommendations will not survive unaltered. Between now and next November, many of the proposed cuts will be restored; many of the proposed outlays, especially in defense, will be reduced. This happens every year, in every administration. But the essential elements — the bones of this budget — are likely to survive.

What essential elements? There won't be any broad, general increase in taxation. The notes aren't in sight to force such an increase over the president's certain veto. Outlays for national defense will wind up in the neighborhood of $292 billion, not drastically below the $297.6 billion that Reagan has asked. Not all of the proposed "user fees" will be approved, but some of them will be imposed. A start will be made, as Reagan urges, on stanching the hemorrhage of farm subsidies.

These things will happen because a consensus is building in the land. The people generally, and the business community especially, are in no mood to see last year's tax reform wrecked before it gets started. Families and industries must be assured some period of stability. Speaker Jim Wright's tentative proposal to soak the rich with a "temporary" surcharge has de-magogic appeal, but it would produce relatively little revenue and it would mark a retreat from the desirable purpose of capital formation.

The president's defense budget, as always, provides a fat target, and fat targets are tempting. But Congress fortunately benefits from the wisdom of some old hands. Sam Nunn of Georgia, John Stennis of Mississippi, Les Aspin of Wisconsin (whether or not he holds his chairmanship of House Armed Services) will wield their considerable influence to see that military needs are met.

The facts of defense spending have been obscured by rhetorical smoke. It is not widely recognized that funds for defense in 1987 are not higher in real terms; the appropriation for 1987 is 6 percent below that for 1985. Congress has cut back sharply on requests for tactical missiles, fighter aircraft, spare parts and personnel. Procurement of tanks and helicopters has been slowed. The budget proposes to fund only 16 ships instead of the 24 ships that were sought in last year's budget. The president's requests will be cut, but they can't prudently be cut by much.

What of "user fees"? The automatic response is that Congress has refused these proposals in the past; therefore Congress will refuse them forever. Maybe not. It makes sense for those individuals or corporations that receive particularized services to pay for them directly. For one example: The meat and poultry industry reasonably may be asked to pay for the inspection services that now are provided free. College students who obtain guaranteed loans reasonably may be required to pay a fee for insurance. Nothing is wrong with hiking the fee for tourists at national parks.

What of agricultural subsidies? The present program is financially intolerable, socially ineffective and politically unsustainable. Spending on price supports has ballooned from $4 billion in 1981 to nearly $26 billion in 1986. The irony is that these awesome outlays have done little for the family farm that is the object of congressional concern. The great bulk of deficiency payments and other supports has gone to the great agricultural corporations. Last year 50 rice producers received government checks for more than $1 million each. Seven percent of the farmers took 70 percent of the payments. This nonsense has to be curbed.

The president again asks for termination or phasing-out of a number of programs. Again the defeatist cry is heard that such requests regularly are denied. But government has no business in the oil business. Granted, the sale of oil reserves and a part of Amtrak would amount to one-time revenues; the sale of federal loans would put an end to revenues from interest in the future, but the principle is sound.

Meanwhile, listen for the ritual cries that Reagan seeks to balance the budget on the backs of — fill in the blank: the poor, the old, the young, the sick, the veterans, the college students. Don't believe everything you hear. To move toward a balanced budget, the president asks a little austerity all around. I say high time.

Losing a piece of my heart

Harrison's, the bar on Peachtree Street, has closed. The end came New Year's Eve. A few of my friends and I, all former Harrison's regulars, stopped by and had one last toast. OK, three or four last toasts.

"If these walls could talk," somebody said.

"I'd be divorced," said another.

Harrison's was in business more than a decade, which is a long time for a bar in a trendy city like Atlanta.

Call it what you will. A meat market? Sure. There is no accounting for the number of one night stands, three week flings, and even marriages — and for certain, divorces — that were started in Harrison's.

When it opened in the early '70s, there was no such thing as Yuppies. The clientele was young, and upwardly mobile to be certain — lots of Xerox salesmen in three piece suits — but there was no name for us at the time.

We simply needed a meeting place, and Harrison's was it. On Friday nights, they were stacked 10 deep at the bar and the young things in sundresses who had migrated to the city could take a young man's breath away.

The Harrison's legends are many. There was the guy who fell asleep in the men's room. He awakened at five in the morning and in his attempt to leave, he set off the burglar alarm.

"Hi guys," he said to the SWAT team that soon followed.

A man brought a lion into the joint one night and it sat down on a barstool next to him. What does a lion drink in a singles' bar? Anything he wants to.

Celebrities and would-be celebrities who were in the city always stopped by Harrison's. I spotted Forrest Tucker one night.

"Look," I said to a companion, much younger than me, "there's Forrest Tucker."

"Who's Forrest Tucker?" she asked.

My favorite Harrison's story concerned a married man who was in most every night. He ran the ladies hard, but he had few successes.

One night, he did manage to make initial contact and as he sat at a darkened table with his prey, the door to Harrison's opened and in ran three children in their pajamas.

They found their daddy and said to him, "Mommy's outside. She wants you to kiss us goodnight because you're never home to do it." The hole he dug for himself, somebody said on closing night, is still over by that table.

When I moved to Chicago for three years, I missed Harrison's terribly. I would call on lonely Friday nights. The crowd noise in the background was soothing.

I don't know exactly what made Harrison's go under. Yeah, I do.

Atlanta has exploded in population over the past several years, and as the Harrison's regulars got older, the incoming nightlife crowd got younger and had no loyalty to any one spot with all the new bars with their Margarita nights and laser shows.

So, the end has come for Harrison's, where I admittedly missed a large portion of my youth. A lady I once knew might say of the closing, "Ten years too late."

Parties threatening integrity of debates

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — With another presidential campaign getting underway, it's time to rescue a valuable but endangered institution — the non-partisan candidate debates sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

In 1976, the league revived the debates, which had not been held since 1960, then sustained them in 1980 and 1984. As a result of these nationally televised face-to-face confrontations, millions of voters could assess presidential and vice presidential candidates.

Now, however, the two major political parties want to assume sponsorship of the debates, an audacious move certain to endanger the institution's integrity and independence while posing the threat that it may be abandoned.

Although the organizers of previous league-sponsored presidential debates have occasionally been supercilious and self-important, they have generally done a first-rate job of performing a complex, politically delicate task.

Scores of items must be negotiated prior to each debate. Among them:

How many television cameras will be used and where will they be located? How will the lighting be arranged? What format will be used to question the candidates? If there is to be an audience, how will it be selected?

Will the candidates stand or sit? How far apart will they be? If there is a podium, how high will it be? If there are tables and chairs, how will they be arranged?

Even if the political parties took over the debates, they would need a trustworthy neutral intermediary — like the league — to negotiate those details. In addition, Nancy M. Neuman, league president, notes that party sponsorship poses even more serious, substantive questions: "Would they put the interests of the public ahead of their own? Can we expect them to pressure candidates (to accept) lively formats? Would they be likely to put the heat on one of their own nominees who did not want to debate? Would they even consider including a third-party or independent candidate if one posed a viable challenge?"

The story of how the Republicans and Democrats decided to fix something that wasn't broken dates back to February 1985, when a Commission on National Elections was assembled by the Center for Strategic and International Studies.

CSIS, a publicity-hungry Washington organization that usually confines its work to foreign policy and national security matters, selected as co-chairmen two veteran political operatives not known as reformers — Democrat Robert Strauss and Republican Melvin Laird.

In November 1985, the commission — composed of elected officials, political consultants, business executives, lawyers and others — recommended that the two political parties assume responsibility for future candidate debates.

That suggestion was immediately embraced in an agreement signed by Republican National Committee Chairman Frank J. Farenkopf Jr. and Democratic National Committee Chairman Paul G. Kirk Jr., both of whom were members of the commission.

They insisted that the joint action would signal a joint commitment to candidate debates as "a permanent and integral part of the presidential nominating process."

But the proposed new arrangement is likely to have precisely the opposite effect. If the representatives of one or both parties walk away from pre-debate negotiations and threaten to terminate the process because of a disagreement, there will be no honest broker available to mediate the differences.

Congress eyes transportation outlays bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, back in town and ready to consider a list of issues, is poised to tackle a problem that produced legislative gridlock last year: billions of dollars in outlays for transportation projects nationwide.

Lawmakers returning after the federal holiday marking the late Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday are finding their schedules crisscrossed with matters including the $20 billion dollar clean water bill, the investigation of the Iran-Contra affair, a probe of the Jan. 4 Amtrak crash near Baltimore and efforts to end leadership squabbles on two congressional committees.

Today the Senate's 45 Republicans were scheduled to decide whether to allow Sen. Richard Lugar to remain the leading GOP member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The moderate Indiana lawmaker, the panel's chairman until Democrats took control of the Senate this year, wants to be designated his party's ranking member, or leader, on the committee.

He has been challenged by Sen. Jesse Helms, the North Carolinian who has said he would like American foreign policy more reflective of his conservative views. The committee's GOP members voted 7-0 Jan. 6 to make Lugar ranking Republican, but Helms' appeal brought the matter before the entire Senate minority.

The Senate Transportation appropriations subcommittee begins hearings today on the Amtrak accident that killed 16 people and injured 176 others. The committee is to examine the federal commitment to rail safety.

The House government activities and transportation subcommittee is to hold a session Thursday on the adequacy of drug testing for rail workers and the lack of automatic safety devices on the Conrail locomotives that slid into the path of the Amtrak train.

Officials said traces of marijuana were found in the surviving engineer and brakeman of the Conrail lead engine, although it has not been determined whether it was enough to impair their performance.

The House plans to vote Wednesday or Thursday on a five-year, $91 billion measure that would pay for work on highways, bridges and mass transit systems. Those same days, the Senate

Environment and Public Works Committee is scheduled to take up its version of a $54 billion bill that would provide road building money to the states for the next four years.

Last year, both chambers approved similar measures, but the two houses could not get together on a single version of the legislation.

The $20 billion water quality bill is set for final Senate consideration Wednesday. The measure is identical to one that was approved overwhelmingly by Congress last year but vetoed in November by President Reagan after the legislators had adjourned.

The House passed the clean water measure Jan. 8 in a near-unanimous vote.

Lawmakers also plan to continue their investigation into diversion to Nicaraguan Contra rebels of profits from the secret sale of arms to Iran.

The new special Iran-Contra panels will continue hiring staff and making arrangements for public hearings, which are expected to begin next month.

Another dispute over committee leadership will be addressed Friday, when the 258 House Democrats will try to select a chairman of the Armed Services Committee by secret ballot.

Two weeks ago, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., lost an initial attempt to remain as chairman of the panel. His main challenger in Friday's vote is Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Texas, although Reps. Nicholas Mavroules, D-Mass., and Charles Bennett, D-Fla., also are vying.

Kennedy wants minimum wage increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, relishing his new committee chairmanship after six years in the minority, wants to raise the federal minimum wage by at least $1.25 an hour, to $4.60, and extend catastrophic health insurance to Medicare recipients.

Kennedy, D-Mass., also said he will use his chairmanship of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee to fight President Reagan's proposed cuts in education programs, to raise funding for AIDS research and to enhance job-training programs.

"We have a better opportunity than at any time in the last eight years to make progress on some of these issues," Kennedy said Monday in an interview in his Senate office. He also said the members of the new Democratic

Senate majority have "more of a sense of working together" than when they last had control in the 1970s.

Kennedy, perhaps the nation's best-known liberal politician, said his proposals would be offered in the context of public concern over huge federal deficits. He said his proposed minimum wage increase would not have a direct impact on the budget.

And he added that while he still favors comprehensive health insurance for all Americans, there is not enough public support and he will not propose it.

The federal minimum wage has not been raised since Jan. 1, 1981, when it was set at $3.35 an hour, and Kennedy said he was not prepared to say precisely how large a hike he would recommend.

But he noted that "if you look at the cost of living from where it was in the '81 period, you're talking about at least $1.25."

Kennedy said coverage against catastrophic illness "should have been part of Medicare long ago, but I think we can get that through this Congress."

Health and Human Services Secretary Otis Bowen also has called for enactment of such a program.

Kennedy, perennially mentioned as a contender for the White House, has taken himself out of the 1988 race, and said he would support Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis if he decides to seek the Democratic nomination.

Otherwise, Kennedy brushed aside questions about presidential politics.

Congress can't wait to begin tinkering with nation's brand new tax reform act

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you really believed the 879-page "Tax Reform Act of 1986" was the tax bill to end all tax bills and that Congress was going to enact the landmark measure and leave the tax code alone for awhile, well, you'd better think again.

The Congressional Record for the first few days of the 1987 session shows that more than 100 tax bills have been introduced, many of them proposing to undo provisions that were approved barely three months ago.

Some of the bills seek to plow new ground. Some are introduced routinely, year after year. Most reflect concern about safety, education, home ownership, the economy — and, of course, the folks back home.

Following is a sampling of the proposals and their sponsors. They would:

- Grant a tax credit for the cost of buying child-restraint systems used in cars. Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii.
- Repeal the income tax on Social Security pensions. Rep. Stephen Neal, D-N.C.

- Allow homeowners who refinance their mortgages a full deduction for "points" in the year they are paid. Rep. Sherwood Boehlert, R-N.Y.
- Restore the deduction for state and local sales taxes. Rep. Stewart McKinney, R-Conn.
- Allow all homeowners a once-a-lifetime tax exemption for up to $125,000 in profits from the sale of their principal home; present law limits the benefit to those 55 or older. Rep. Benjamin Gilman, R-N.Y.

Anonymity protects new Air Force One now being built on Boeing assembly line

WASHINGTON (AP) — Somewhere on the production line of the Boeing Co.'s manufacturing plant in Everett, Wash., a collection of 747 aircraft parts is moving toward the "body joint" area, waiting to be assembled into the next Air Force One.

By May, the parts will have been fashioned into what Boeing calls a "green" plane: flyable, but without any interior. It will then be flown to the Boeing Military Airplane Co. in Wichita, Kan., for outfitting, where it will begin its life as one of the most closely guarded airplanes in the world.

Until May, though, there is no overt security to mark the new presidential plane; no guards standing by, no security clearances for workers, no special inspectors constantly standing watch.

Rather, Boeing and the Air Force are relying on anonymity.

"The airframes are going down the production line in an unidentified manner," explains Boeing spokesman Pete Dakan, noting a second, backup Air Force One will emerge as a green plane in March 1988.

"The first Air Force One replacement is now mixed in among other unidentified planes moving down the line. That airplane is on the line and probably next month will go into body join (for the attachment of the wings to the fuselage) and then into final assembly."

There are normally 12 fledgling 747s on the line at any one time, and Boeing has limited the number of employees who actually know which plane will be turned into Air Force One, Dakan says.

But in Wichita, says Dakan, things will be different.

"Everyone will be required to have a security clearance and everything will be in a guarded area."

The Boeing facility in Wichita, because it already works on military planes, has long been physically secured by a guard force.

To outfit the new plane with office and sleeping spaces, communications gear and all the trappings of the presidency, Boeing will use only employees with military clearances and pay special attention to their work.

Boeing has experience in the process — but it's dated experience. The primary and backup planes now used by the president are Boeing 707s, manufactured 14 and 24 years ago, respectively.

Boeing won a $249.8 million contract to build the two planes last summer, beating out the McDonnell Douglas Corp. and its DC-10.

Boeing is expected to begin flight testing the first replacement in summer 1988 and deliver it to the Air Force by November 1988.

It should be available to ferry President Reagan home to California and retirement two months later.

The term Air Force One actually is a radio call sign applied to any airplane that is carrying a president. But the term has become synonymous with the two Boeing 707s now maintained by the 89th Military Airlift Wing at Andrews.

The new 747s are being constructed in such a way as to carry about 70 passengers and 23 crew members, compared with the 400 passengers that can be carried by the commercial version of the four-engine jet.

The Air Force has said the new planes will have state-of-the-art communications equipment, an emergency medical facility and special work and rest areas for the president, his staff, the Secret Service and the news media.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a man who has two children by a previous marriage. The children are 13 and 16 years old, and live with their mother in another state. Here's the problem: My husband is quite remiss about sending gifts to his children on their birthdays and holidays, so I have always done the shopping. I try to select tasteful, appropriate gifts for each child. I even buy lovely cards that my husband signs: "With love from Dad."

I find myself feeling very resentful when the children write and express thanks to him, seldom thanking me unless instructed to do so — which is even worse. Should I quit spending my time selecting gifts for them? Or do you think I am being selfish and expecting too much? I should add that my relationship with his children is an amiable one.

RESENTFUL IN TEXAS

DEAR RESENTFUL: His children have no way of knowing their gifts were selected by you when the cards are signed, "With love from Dad" — unless, that is, "Dad" tells them. You say the children seldom thank you unless instructed to do so. Who instructs them? If the "instructor" is Dad, then it would be much more generous and straightforward if the cards read: "With love from Dad and ()" (whatever they call you). Settle this now to ensure that the relationship with your husband is also an amiable one.

Giants heavily favored

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—The oddsmakers aren't sure the Denver Broncos belong on the same field as the New York Giants for the Super Bowl. Both teams claim otherwise.

The point spread for Sunday's game at the Rose Bowl has gone from 8 immediately following the conference championship games to 9½ and even 10. Considering the number of New York fans with added interest in the game this year, the spread could go higher.

"It's ludicrous," Giants Coach Bill Parcells said Monday as the teams began final preparations for the National Football League championship game. "We only beat them by three points in New York. It's ridiculous. The teams are more even than that."

The Giants edged the Broncos

19-16 on a last-minute, 34-yard field goal by Raul Allegre on Nov. 23. The Broncos outgained the was routed 41-16 in its season finale by Seattle.

The Giants continued their overwhelming play in the playoffs, routing San Francisco 49-3 and Washington 17-0. The Broncos had close victories of 22-17 against New England and 23-20 in overtime at Cleveland.

Said Broncos linebacker Tom Jackson: "How we got here shouldn't matter as much as our being here."

Denver Coach Dan Reeves says both teams are better now than in November.

Giants quarterback Phil Simms doesn't have fond memories of the previous game with Denver. And he expressed "shock" that the Giants are so heavily favored.

"I know a little about betting and it means the New York bettors are betting the Giants and there are more New York bettors than Denver bettors," he said.

Giants 405 yards to 262, rallied to tie the score 16-16, then fell victim to an eight-play, 55-yard drive that led to the winning kick.

The Broncos struggled to an 11-5 finish after starting 6-0, while the Giants won their final nine regular-season games. Denver

Ditka apparently not ready to quit

CHICAGO (AP)—Mike Ditka says his statement that he would quit as head coach of the Chicago Bears after the 1987 season was made only to his assistants in a fit of anger.

"I did mention that to them, but of course I mention a lot of things in the heat of anger. I'm not sure everything I say would stay that way," Ditka said Monday in an interview with WBBM-TV in Chicago.

"I said nothing to the management of this organization, or to any reporter," Ditka added.

The Boston Globe reported Sunday that Ditka, upset over the firing of his friend Jerry Vainisi as Bears general manager, had told his bosses he would leave after the remaining year on his contract is over.

Vainisi, who remains a team consultant, was dismissed because of "philosophical differences," according to Bears President Michael McCaskey. The Globe reported that Ditka was "fuming" over the dismissal of Vainisi, a friend and ally.

Ditka, who also has been rumored to be among several coaches being considered by the Atlanta Falcons, told WBBM Monday that leaving the Bears would not be easy.

"If I did leave, a very big part of my life would leave also," he said. "You kind of get to love it. You don't just want to walk away from it."

"But I've learned to walk away from other things in life, and if it came down to that, I probably could do it."

For now, Ditka says, his only sure job commitment is the job of giving Bears fans something to be proud of in 1987.

"I don't know what I'm going to do," he told WBBM. "But I know one thing we are going to do: we're going to play great football in 1987 ... and try to keep all the other stuff out of the newspapers."

McWilliams says winning is major goal at Texas

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP)—Head football coach David McWilliams of the Texas Longhorns says winning—not just being competitive—is his major goal for his first season at Texas in 1987.

"That's not quite strong enough for me just to say I want to be competitive. ... I want to win, win as much as I can, or all of it, right now," McWilliams said.

"And I understand saying it doesn't get it done, but that's exactly what I'm going in with. I just never felt very good about not going for the top," he said.

McWilliams, 44, called a news conference Monday after spending all but five days on the road recruiting since taking the Texas job Dec. 6. He said his next day off would be Feb. 16.

A former player and assistant coach at Texas, McWilliams returned as head coach for the 1987 season after one year at Texas Tech, where he was selected as Southwest Conference coach of the year.

"I had 26 years invested at the University of Texas, and that was just a strong pull I couldn't overlook," he said of his job change.

McWilliams replaced Fred Akers, who was fired after 10 years. Akers later became coach at Purdue.

McWilliams' first test at Texas comes Feb. 11, national signing day, and he said despite getting a late start because of the coaching change, "We're getting a very good response."

"We're back in on a lot of the real top players that are in the state, that are going to visit us ... I'm very enthusiastic about our recruiting right now."

TCU wins without Lott

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP)—Texas Christian's basketball team was able to overcome an obstacle by winning a Southwest Conference basketball game without Carl Lott, one of their leading scorers.

Lott, who had averaged 16.8 points per game for the 19th-ranked Horned Frogs and shared the team's leading scorer spot with Carven Holcombe, missed his first SWC Monday night since he broke his hand in practice. But TCU

Doctors say he will likely miss 6 to 8 weeks of play.

TCU coach Jim Killingsworth acknowledged after his team's victory Monday that without Lott the Horned Frogs are not quite the same threat.

"With Carl we have a chance to beat anybody," he said. "Without him we've got to get help from other places."

Jamie Dixon, who scored 13 Monday after moving into the lineup for Lott, said the win took on added significance in rolled to a 53-27 victory over Texas.

In addition, he lead the league in free throw shooting percentage, hitting 84 percent from the line.

He injured the hand in practice Saturday when he went up for a rebound. Doctors at first thought the hand was only bruised but X-rays revealed a broken bone in his shooting hand.

the face of Lott's injury.

"This was definitely a big win for us," he said. "We know we are going to have to play without Carl for a stretch and it was important for us to start that stretch with a win."

Lott could only lament the timing of the accident. The Horned Frogs are 5-0 in the conference and fighting off second place Texas A&M at 4-1.

Harvesters host Borger tonight

Pampa hosts Borger in a District 1-4A basketball doubleheader tonight in McNeely Fieldhouse. The girls' game tips off at 6 p.m., followed by the boys' contest at 7:30 p.m.

Borger boys lead the district with a perfect 6-0 record and are 17-4 overall. Pampa boys are tied with Hereford for fourth place at 3-3.

"Borger is pretty quick and they've got a very aggressive team. They like to get up and down the floor fast and take quick shots," said Pampa Coach Robert Hale.

Hale said practice sessions have been hampered some by the snow and ice, but the Harvesters should be ready to go tonight.

"We haven't had much heat in the gym and that has thrown us off a little bit, but it's a perfect atmosphere for basketball. There's snow on the ground and we're expecting a good crowd," added Hale.

Pampa hopes to slow up Borger's fast-breaking style of basketball.

"We're going to try and continue to do the things we've been doing. We'll work for a good shot and try and play good, fundamental basketball," said Hale.

Hale said the Harvesters should have a fairly healthy roster despite all the illness going around.

"Some of the boys are coughing quite a bit, but I think they're all in school today," Hale added.

Pampa girls are going for their sixth district victory in a row. The Lady Harvesters scored an earlier 65-50 win over the Borger girls. Pampa is 5-2 in district play and in third place while Borger is 4-4 and in fifth place.

Thursday night, the Pampa cagers will try and keep a late date with Levelland. The district games, which will be played at Levelland, have been postponed twice.

Levelland girls are ranked as the No. 1 Class 4A team in the state with a 21-1 record. The Lady Lobos are 8-0 in district play.

Levelland boys are second behind Borger in the district race with a 5-1 record. Levelland is 16-5 overall and this will be the first meeting between the two teams.

Several middle school games will be played in Pampa Thursday night.

Pampa Red and Pampa Blue meet in a seventh-grade boys' game at 7 p.m. while the seventh-grade girls play at 6 p.m. Both the Pampa eighth-grade boys and girls are involved in district action, starting at 5 p.m. Pampa Blue and Pampa Red teams play each other in a ninth-grade game, starting at 7 p.m. in McNeely Fieldhouse.

Spearman sweeps White Deer

WHITE DEER—White Deer teams fell to Spearman in a makeup basketball twinbill Monday night.

Spearman had few problems disposing of White Deer in the girls' game, romping to a 63-29 win. Spearman outlasted White Deer 55-49 in the boys' game.

In the girls' game, Jill McLain paced Spearman to victory with 19 points. Monica Vigil and Shawna Ford led the Lady Bucks with 7 points each.

Halftime score was 32-19. Spearman girls, who also got 14 points from Shannon Jenkins, are now 4-2 on the season.

Spearman was led by Brett Davis with 15 points and Kevin Nelson with 14 in the boys' game. White Deer got 14 points from Mike Bradley and 10 from Todd Haynes.

Spearman led by only two, 16-14, at the end of the first quarter, but jumped to a 34-26 lead at halftime.

Spearman boys have a 3-2 record in district action.

White Deer girls fell to 0-5 in district play while the Bucks dropped to 1-4. White Deer hosts Highland Park tonight, starting at 5 p.m. with the junior varsity games.

Mills Lane isn't only a fight referee

By Murray Olderman

RENO, Nev. (NEA)—Mills Lane sat on a stool in the corner of the ring. The whiff of ammonia jerked him back to sensibility. It was his first professional fight as a boxer more than 25 years ago. He recalls that it was the first round.

"What happened?" Lane asked. "It's all over," answered his manager, Bill Dickson. "You mean I knocked him out that quick?"

The truth was Lane got knocked down three times before the referee counted him out at 38 seconds of the opening round. It was the only bout Lane ever lost—he won his next 14 fights as a junior welterweight. He was just about to achieve world ranking when he quit the ring abruptly.

Today Lane, approaching 50, is perhaps the most prominent referee in boxing.

Why did he decide back in the early days to end his career as a boxer? "I just wasn't good enough to be a world champion," Lane says. "My style was to get in great shape and jump all over the other guy. Take the starch out of him. You win the battle but lose the war doing that."

In those days, Lane was attending the University of Nevada. When he received his degree, he told his fight manager, "It's time to pack it in." Originally from Savannah, Ga., Lane went into the Marine Corps out of high school. He read a Sports Illustrated article about the University of Nevada hosting the intercollegiate boxing tournament in 1959. So, he wrote to the university's coach and got a boxing scholarship after his release from the service.

In 1960, Lane won the national intercollegiate welterweight title. Most of the big universities dropped boxing after a Wisconsin fighter was killed in the ring. Those that Nevada could still schedule wouldn't fight in his weight division. So, he lost his eligibility and turned pro.

His first professional opponent was just out of prison—"a real dog, but he could punch." Lane learned firsthand the feeling of being knocked senseless. He decided to turn that experience into being third man in the ring.

But refereeing is not a full-time profession. Lane went to work in a bank, then on to law school at the University of Utah. He returned to Reno to work in the district attorney's office.

In 1982, Lane was elected district attorney of Washoe County, Nev.; he was re-elected this past November. He is a pillar of the community.

But outside the environs of Reno, Lane is far better known as a referee for important fights. He has worked 24 world championship contests, such as the Larry Holmes-Gerry Cooney extravaganza and, most recently, the Mike Tyson-Trevor Berbick WBA heavyweight title match.

In 1986, Lane made an all-time personal high of $9,200 as a referee. He received just $2,600 for watching Tyson destroy Berbick. "And had the best seat in the house," he points out. "It's a hobby." One he loves.

Boxing is part of his being. There is no cartilage left in his nose. He flattens it out with one finger and pushes it to one side and another.

"I'm not what you'd call a beautiful guy," Lane says wryly. He is bald and bantam. He still maintains his fighting weight of 145. He runs three days a week and hits the heavy bag at home four days a week.

The fight game, to Lane, is analogous to practicing law.

"If I was fighting," he explains, "I'd say, 'You jump on that SOB and kick his...' The same when I'm a lawyer: 'That's the guy, I want him.'"

Being a referee doesn't interfere with his duties as district attorney.

"When I got elected," Lane says, "I told the fight people I wouldn't accept any assignments out of the country, where you'd have to leave for six days. They wanted me to go to Italy, to Japan, and I told them, 'Don't name me as long as I'm the D.A.'" to 38 degrees Monday melted some of the snow and ice from the roads, but temperatures quickly dropped below freezing again after sunset, creating slick and icy spots on the roads as the overnight low dipped to 20. Forecasts called for up to 80 percent chance of additional snow today and tonight with accumulations from 1 to 2 inches. But the high Wednesday is expected to reach into the mid 40s as the cold weather moves out of the area. The Texas Department of Public Safety reported no roads closed but cautioned motorists to be careful of the slick surfaces. Southwestern Public Service and Energas Co. officials indicated they have had no major problems with electrical or gas service because of the weather. Pampa schools resumed classes today after students had the day off Monday. The Pampa Center of Clarendon College began registration for morning classes today, with a decision expected later in the day on whether to have night class registration today. While shelters for the homeless in Amarillo reported increased use because of the weather, the local Salvation Army said they had had only one request for assistance, adding that "everybody seems to be taken care of here." Area sports activities have had hectic times over the past several days, with events being cancelled and then rescheduled because of the weather. Roads in most area towns and countryside are icy, but passable. And area city officials report no adverse effects on city water, gas or sewer systems. Only hilly Miami had problems with roads, which City Secretary Betty Anderson said were "icy and terrible" this morning. She reported that roads in the country are passable. McLean roads are passable "but still pretty dangerous," observed City Secretary Stella Lee. White Deer City Secretary Paulette Paul said roads there are clear, although the intersections are "pretty rough." "So far, we're doing great," said Lefors City Secretary Yvonne Pittman. A dispatcher for the Wheeler County Sheriff's office reported clear highways, but icy secondary roads. Roads in Wheeler remained icy but passable. A dispatcher for the Hemphill County Sheriff's office reported roads are icy in spots. Elsewhere in the nation, a new winter storm moved across New Mexico today as a dogged storm, blamed for 38 deaths in 14 states, unleashed more snow on the Northeast after closing roads and schools, stranding travelers and forcing hundreds to flee flooding. The center of the 5-day-old storm moved early today off the New Jersey coast as snow fell from New England across much of New York, western Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Up to 8 inches fell in eastern New York. Travelers advisories were issued throughout the region. In Indiana, which got up to 10 inches, roads in six counties were closed early today to all but emergency vehicles.

Anglican Church negotiator Terry Waite, wearing a raincoat in sunny Beirut, heads with Druse bodyguards to a secret destination Tuesday where he reportedly held two

Waite reportedly meets with captors, extends Beirut stay

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Hostage negotiator Terry Waite met with Shiite Moslem terrorists holding American hostages and then decided today to extend his stay in Moslem west Beirut, sources close to him said.

"It looked like he has had a breakthrough," said one source, speaking on condition of anonymity. "He will have further meetings with the captors."

Waite, an Anglican Church envoy, had planned to take a midmorning flight to London. The sources said he cancelled his plans after returning to his hotel from a late-night meeting with the Islamic Jihad, which says it holds two Americans.

Waite arrived at the lobby of his seaside hotel in west Beirut's Druse-controlled Ein Breiseh district at 9:20 a.m. in a jeep with three bodyguards from Druse warlord Walid Jumblatt's Progressive Socialist Party.

He refused to answer questions, and they drove off to an unknown location.

Waite said Monday he had established contact with Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, and had received assurances that kidnapped Americans Terry Anderson and Thomas Sutherland were "well looked after."

"Their condition is generally good," he said.

In an interview Monday with The Associated Press, Waite also said he feared he might be kidnapped himself. Attempts were made to kidnap him during four previous negotiating trips to Beirut, he said.

He said the danger that a terrorist group would abduct him during a negotiating session was made "increasingly dangerous" by the recent arrests in Europe of two Lebanese suspected of terrorism.

hours of secret talks with kidnappers holding American and foreign hostages in Lebanon.

One of those arrested, Mohammed Ali Hamadi, is accused of participating in the 1985 TWA hijacking in which a U.S. Navy diver was killed.

"Some people here in Beirut are going to say, 'Well, the only way to get these two people back, or one of these people back, is to have some bargaining counter,' and I would be a pretty good bargaining counter," Waite told the AP.

If kidnapped, Waite said, "I would do my best to survive and maintain myself. I would not expect anyone to come out for me."

Anderson, 39, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press and a native of Lorain, Ohio, was kidnapped March 16, 1985. Sutherland, 55, of Fort Collins, Colo., was acting dean of agriculture for the American University of Beirut when he was kidnapped June 9, 1985.

Islamic Jihad claims to have killed U.S. diplomat William Buckley in October 1985. No body has been found, but Lebanese and Western intelligence sources say he probably died earlier, possibly after being tortured.

Waite said he had no idea how to trace American Frank Herbert Reed, 53, who was kidnapped in west Beirut in September. He said he was "more hopeful" about American hostages Joseph James Cicippio, 56, and Edward Austin Tracy because "there are a bit more information here."

The Revolutionary Justice Organization, a group believed made up of pro-Iranian Shiite fanatics, claimed both abductions.

Also missing in Lebanon are six Frenchmen, two Britons, an Italian, an Irishman, a South Korean, a Saudi Arabian and a West German.

Dow passes 2,100 mark

By The Associated Press

The Dow Jones industrial average has soared above 2,100 for the first time ever, and analysts said one reason could be the dollar's plunge.

The Dow rose 25.87 Monday to close at 2,102.50. On the New York Stock Exchange, advances were ahead of declines by about 2-to-1, with 1,045 issues gaining, 568 falling and 370 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 162.83 million shares, compared with 218.39 million Friday.

But while the stock market was reaching new heights, the dollar was at new lows. It dipped below 150 yen in Tokyo briefly because of unconfirmed reports that the Reagan administration wants to see an exchange rate of 140 yen to the dollar. Later it closed at 150.45 yen, down from 153.10 late Friday.

It was the lowest point for the dollar against the yen since Japan set an official exchange rate of 360 yen to the dollar in April 1949.

The dollar also declined Monday against other major currencies. It was traded lightly in the United States because of the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday.

Traders linked the dollar's latest decline to the deteriorating financial position of the United States, the reticence of Japan and West Germany to lower their interest rates and reports that the Reagan administration wants the dollar's value to continue to drop to help ease the U.S. trade deficit.

Analysts saw a connection between the dollar and the stock market.

"The more the dollar declines, the more it'll encourage stocks," said Raymond Dalio, president of Bridgewater Associates, a consulting firm in Wilton, Conn.

A lower dollar makes U.S. exports more attractive and foreign imports more expensive. That helps U.S. companies meet foreign competition, and higher expected profits for U.S. companies translates into higher stock prices.

Rules would require U.S. citizens to prove residency

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is proposing tentative immigration rules requiring every citizen or alien hired for a new job to prove residency and eligibility to work in the United States, an administration source says.

It would be the first time the rules, which are aimed at slowing down illegal immigration, are applied to all U.S. citizens.

The rules, which were being released today by the Immigration and Naturalization Service, provide the first glimpse into administration plans for enforcement of the landmark immigration law passed by Congress in 1986 after years of unsuccessful efforts.

Under the proposed rules, evidence of eligibility for work could be shown with a passport or a naturalization certificate or a combination of documents such as a Social Security card and a driver's license with a photo.

These would have to be shown to an employer within 24 hours of employment, said the source, who spoke Monday only on condition of anonymity. Forms showing the employer has verified eligibility must be available in the workplace in case of an inspection by immigration agents.

The INS followed an unusual procedure making the tentative rules public before they normally would be released. Formal release usually comes when rules are printed in the Federal Register — a procedure which is scheduled for Feb. 25. A 30-day period for public comment begins on that day.

The immigration service decided to circulate in advance what amounts to a draft copy to Congress, other government agencies and interest groups that have been following the immigration law.

"This is a unique opportunity to solicit a broad range of public comment by allowing working drafts" to be distributed, said Mark W. Everson, executive associate INS commissioner.

Under the proposed rules, aliens may show any of a number of different types of work authorization documents issued by the INS.

The legalization program takes effect May 5. The employers' sanctions begin June 1. For a one-year period, only warnings will be issued to employers for their first offense.

Names in the News

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Tammy Wynette is being treated for an undisclosed ailment, and reportedly is keeping up with her music practice in the hospital.

The Rochester Post-Bulletin on Monday quoted friends as saying Ms. Wynette leased a $1,000 electric piano keyboard from a music company Saturday to use while at St. Marys Hospital.

A Mayo Clinic spokesman confirmed the 44-year-old country-western singer was a patient at the clinic-affiliated hospital.

She was hospitalized for X-rays and tests at St. Marys in 1977 after complaining of abdominal pains while on a concert tour.

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer-composer Steve Winwood will divide his time between England and Tennessee now that he's married to a Nashville native, Warner Bros. Records says.

Winwood, from Birmingham, England, married Eugenia Crafton on Saturday at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church during a private ceremony, the record company said in a statement.

Winwood was recently nominated for five Grammys, including best pop vocalist and producer of the year, for his album "Back in the High Life."

His wife is a recent graduate of Nashville's Belmont College.

The couple will live in Nashville and England, the company said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Grand Ole Opry comedian Minnie Pearl says she's taken to watching cable television and isn't always thrilled by what she sees, especially when she's watching herself.

"It has what you might call, extended my TV world," said the 74-year-old star, whose real name is Sarah Cannon and is known for her flowered hat with its dangling price tag.

"I doubt we would have made the move had I not started working on Nashville Now, which is on The Nashville Network," she wrote in her regular Monday column in the Nashville Banner.

Iranian missile hits Baghdad buildings

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran fired a missile today at Iraq's capital, Baghdad, and claimed it rocketed a petrochemical complex in the southern Iraqi city of Basra, setting it ablaze and sending toxic gases into the air. Iraq's official Baghdad Radio said the missile "hit a residential area of Baghdad, claiming several martyrs and wounding others." It said several buildings and shops were damaged. But Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, said the missile was directed at the headquarters of Iraq's ruling Baath Party in Baghdad. Baghdad residents reported hearing a loud bang before daybreak. But they could not determine where the missile had struck. It was the fifth missile to hit Baghdad since since Iran launched a major offensive against Iraq along their southern border Jan. 9. The Baath Party headquarters are adjacent to the presidential palace, where President Saddam Hussein of Iraq spends most of his time. An IRNA dispatch said Iranian forces, pushing toward Basra behind a heavy barrage of artillery fire, hit the city's petrochemical complex and set its gas storage tanks on fire. Toxic gases spread into the air for several miles, it said. Iraq did not respond to this Iranian claim. However, Iraq's official Baghdad Radio has denied Iran's report Monday of advances toward Basra, Iraq's second largest city. The radio said Iraqi troops had the Iranians bottled up in marshland east of Basra. In Washington, a Reagan administration official also disputed Iran's claim to have smashed through Iraqi defenses near Basra. "Maybe there is something big in the works," said the official, speaking on condition of anonymity. "But we don't have any indication that there's been a military breakthrough."

Iraqis take reporters to central war front

NAFT KHANEH, Iraq (AP) — An Iraqi general on the central warfront with Iran claimed his soldiers repulsed Iranian attackers and killed thousands of enemy troops in the past week. Reporters who have been pleading to visit another battlefield — the area east of Basra, on Iraq's southern tip — instead were escorted Monday to Naft Khaneh, 75 miles northeast of Baghdad. "The no-man's land and hillocks are filled with bodies and equipment," Brig. Gen. Abded al-Mutlak al-Jabouri told the reporters as artillery fire shook his headquarters. But the journalists saw no dead Iraqis nor any Iranian prisoners.

Both Iraq and Iran generally bar foreign reporters from going to the war front, and the action around Basra, 275 miles south of Baghdad, remained off limits. Iranian invaders have established a beachhead on Iraqi territory east of the city, Iraq's second largest, and are hammering it with artillery and rocket fire.

Three arrested in Palme slaying

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Police arrested three suspects in last February's assassination of Prime Minister Olof Palme, and suggested today that the killing was linked to a government crackdown on a leftist Kurdish group.

The three were "informed of suspicion of complicity in the murder of Olof Palme," said the statement from Stockholm Police Chief Hans Holmer and Chief Prosecutor Claes Zeime, who have led the investigation.

Palme, 59, a four-term Socialist prime minister, was shot in the back last Feb. 28 while walking with his wife down a busy Stockholm thoroughfare.

The statement did not say when the three were arrested, give their identities or say where they were being held. Police spokeswoman Carin Brange said a news conference would be held this afternoon on the arrests, but refused to give further details.

Security was increased around police headquarters and the building was surrounded by armed police.

The police statement also said three people were arrested on suspicion of taking part in the November 1985 slaying of a Kurdish immigrant in Stockholm, but did not make clear whether they were the same three suspected in the Palme slaying.

The national news agency Tidningarnas Telegrambyrå said 20 people, including the three Palme suspects, were picked up early today.

The police statement said "several of the persons affected" by the police measures were Kurds with ties to the Kurdish Workers Party, a Marxist organization that seeks to set up a separate Kurdish state in Turkey. Palme's government declared the party a terrorist organization in 1984.

The Kurdish immigrant shot in November 1985, Cetin Gungor, was a defector from the Kurdish Workers Party.

Palme, a champion of disarmament and Third World causes, was shot at point-blank range with a .357-caliber Magnum. He and his wife, Lisbet, had just left a movie theater and were walking down a main street in central Stockholm.

Several west European countries have sizeable communities of Kurds, most of them refugees from war or repression in their home region, which includes parts of Iraq, Iran and eastern Turkey.
