American hostages grabbed in Lebanon

By RODEINA KENAAN
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Four kidnapers disguised as riot police and carrying assault rifles seized three American teachers and an Indian professor at a west Beirut college Saturday night and then fled in a jeep, police reported.

The kidnapers duped the foreign teachers into assembling in a Beirut University College office by claiming to have been assigned to protect them, police and school sources said.

The abductions came as Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite was reported to have concluded five days of secret negotiations with Shiite Moslem captors of two Americans held captive since 1985.

Twenty-five foreigners are reported missing and believed kidnapped in Beirut, including 10 seized since Waite arrived in Beirut on Jan. 12.

Police and the university officials, all speaking on condition of anonymity, identified the Americans abducted Saturday as Alann Steen, 48, a journalism professor; Jesse Turner, assistant instructor of mathematics and computer sciences, and Robert Polhill, assistant professor of business studies.

The Indian was identified as Mithileshwar Singh, chairman of the business studies division. The college said he had an American Green card, which makes him a legal U.S. resident alien.

Four men wearing olive-green police uniforms entered the campus at 7 p.m. in a police patrol jeep and said they were assigned to provide protection for all foreign teachers, police said.

They asked that all foreign staff members assemble at the office of the campus services supervisor, Raja Nahhas, saying "We need to meet with them."

A student who was at the office said the assailants "acting perfectly as Squad 16 policemen, were armed with M-16 and AK-47 assault rifles."

"The foreign professors along with their wives came to Nahhas' office. It was then that one gunman pointed an AK-47 to Nahhas' head and shouted, 'Don't move.'"

"Another aimed his M-16 at the foreigners and said, 'All men, come with us.' The four walked out without resistance," the student said. He spoke on condition of anonymity for security reasons.

"As Professor Steen walked away, he looked back and told his wife, Virginia Rose, 'Don't worry darling, it's only a demonstration,'" the student said.

They walked about 50 yards to the jeep, "where the kidnapers bundled them in and sped off," according to the student.

A Lebanese guard at a school gate said he thought the gunmen were regular police when they entered the school. "I was astonished to see them about 10 minutes later racing out in the jeep with the professors. They were pointing guns to the professors' heads. One of them yelled at me, 'If you talk we shall finish you!'"

There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

School officials said the four teachers lived with their wives on campus and had not been going out because of the recent kidnappings.

In Washington, White House spokesman Roman Popadiuk said U.S. Ambassador Thomas Kelly confirmed the kidnappings and that President Reagan was notified at Camp David.

"The president is concerned. The president has requested he be notified of all information as it comes in. We hold those individuals who took the hostages responsible for the safety of the hostages and call for their immediate release," Popadiuk said.

Police, meanwhile, tried to establish the identity and whereabouts of two foreigners abducted Friday from west Beirut's main commercial thoroughfare.

Before Friday, 19 foreigners

Postal Service: historic building needs new face

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

An official with the U.S. Postal Service says it may be three or four years before any work will be done on the Pampa post office.

But whatever happens, the historic post office building is likely to stay put at the corner of Ballard and Foster streets, according to Howell Dunlap, manager of support services for the U.S. Postal Service in Oklahoma City.

Last April, the regional section chief of the U.S. Postal Service led Pampa city officials to believe that the post office could be abandoned in favor of a newer facility. At the time, Postal Service plans called for construction of a new facility to begin by January 1988.

Three possible sites for a shiny new post office included land north of the 7-Eleven convenience store at the corner of Ballard and Sunset, land at Duncan and Perryton Parkway, and land west of the First National Bank drive-up facilities at Frost and Francis.

The Postal Service agreed then to study the feasibility of continuing operations in the downtown building.

Dunlap confirmed earlier this month that the study has been completed, but it has not yet been released to Pampa city officials.

"We're in the process of studying the feasibility study," Dunlap said, adding that he and the manager of the Postal Service sectional center in Lubbock will visit the Pampa facility Feb. 17 - 18.

"We found that the space (at the current facility) is sufficient to meet our needs now," Dunlap said, adding that remodeling the current facility is the most preferable route. "But unless something drastic happens, we won't be doing anything for several years."

Pampa City Manager Bob Hart said he was not aware that the preliminary feasibility study has been completed.

Similarly, Pampa Postmaster Richard Wilson said he had heard no reports of progress on the project.

Dunlap indicated that while the current post office is sufficient, the study is also concerned "with what we're going to need in 10, 15, 20 years."

"But at the moment no decision

Panhandle natives remember Ranger slain by kidnapper

From Staff and Wire Reports

Texas Ranger Stan Guffey's last message to his colleagues was prophetic.

"Be in Marble Falls area from 22nd until 2?" read the note on the law enforcement center's bulletin board.

That night, the father of four and 1965 Canadian High School graduate was slain in a gunbattle while rescuing a 2-year-old girl kidnapped earlier Thursday.

Ranger Guffey's mother and a sister live in Canadian, and his father and a sister live in Wheeler.

A kidnapping suspect who was slain after killing Ranger Guffey had lived for several weeks in the attic of a vacant vacation home, authorities said.

Brent Albert Beeler, 23, of Houston, apparently had been hiding in a home in the neighborhood where he earlier had abducted and killed Denise Johnson, a maid and nanny for the Bill Whitehead family, authorities said.

Beeler was on parole and wanted on forgery charges, investigators said.

After killing Johnson sometime in midweek, Beeler broke into the Whitehead home early Thursday and kidnapped the family's 2-year-old daughter, Kara Leigh, as the family slept, authorities said Friday.

He telephoned a couple of hours later and demanded $30,000 in $20

City goes year without a killing; assaults rise

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

Pampa residents stood a better chance of getting raped, robbed or beaten up in 1986 but absolutely no chance of dying a violent death, the Pampa Police Department's annual report indicates.

Although the number of most types of crimes increased substantially in 1986, the Police Department reported no homicides for only the second time in five years.

Also down was the number of reported arsons, from 12 in 1985 to seven in 1986.

All other major crimes listed in the report — rape, robbery, assault, burglary, larceny and motor vehicle theft — were more numerous than in 1985, according to the report, released last week by Pampa Police Chief J.J. Ryzman.

The report also contains traffic statistics. The number of accidents declined by 12.8 percent, from 766 in 1985 to 668 in 1986.

Just one traffic fatality was recorded in the city in 1986, matching the one death in 1985.

Ryzman said he could not explain the absence of any homicides in 1986, particularly with the 8.5 percent increase in assaults, from 271 to 294. Normally, Ryzman said, the two go hand-in-hand.

Pampa recorded three murders in 1985.

"I can't explain it," Ryzman said. "Fortunately for everybody concerned, all the assaults didn't result in murder."

The last year Pampa recorded no homicides was in 1981. That year also saw a jump in the number of assaults from the previous year.

Ryzman did offer an explanation for the decrease in the number of arsons, down 41.7 percent from the number in 1985.

"I attribute that to the excellent cooperation between the Fire Department and the Police Department as to investigations," he said. He called the reduction a "notable decrease."

Ryzman said he is concerned about other crime increases — particularly rapes, which more than doubled from 1985 — but added that because of the ailing economy, crime could have been much worse in Pampa.

"I think if we didn't have such an aggressive crime prevention program, our statistics would have been just staggering," he said.

Ryzman is also encouraged by the lower number of traffic accidents in 1986.

In addition to the one traffic fatality, officers reported three pedestrian-automobile collisions, one bicycle-automobile collision and one pedestrian-train collision.

The year's lone traffic fatality in the city occurred the morning of March 5 at Alcock and Christy. Motorcyclist Wayne Huff, 25, was killed in a two-vehicle collision.

All of the pedestrian-automobile collisions involved children and three occurred within one week in late October and early November.

"In all of the pedestrian-auto accidents, the children were at fault, and no citations were issued to the drivers of the vehicles," Ryzman said.

Similarly, all five bicycle-auto accidents involved juveniles, and Ryzman said all could have been avoided had the riders followed

Arrest-County Jail
Lloyd D. Gordon, 822 N. Frost, was arrested by the Texas Department of Public Safety on a charge of driving while intoxicated; Gordon was released on his own recognizance.

Minor accidents

The Pampa Police Department reported the following traffic accidents for the 32-hour period ending at 3 p.m. Saturday.

FRIDAY, Jan. 23

A 1975 Chevrolet, driven by Barney Rogers, 2239 Russell, and a 1978 Chevrolet, driven by Michael Ray Hartzell, 1100 Kingsmill, collided at Hobart and Decatur. No injuries were reported. Rogers was cited for failure to maintain control.

A 1985 Chevrolet, driven by Welsey Allen Drake, 712 N. Wells, collided with a tree in the 700 block of North Wells. No injuries or citations were reported.

An unknown vehicle collided with a parked 1984 Chevrolet, driven by Cheryl Elms Sullens, 411 Hill, in the 2200 block of Perryton Parkway. No injuries or citations were reported.

SATURDAY, Jan. 24

A 1983 Chevrolet, driven by Russell Eugene Franklin, 625 N. Zimmers, and a 1977 Lincoln, driven by Carl Edward Summers, Lefors, collided in the 1000 block of North Hobart. No injuries were reported. Franklin was cited for failure to yield the right of way.

A 1985 Isuzu, driven by Joe Don Willis, 1112 Cinderella, and a 1981 Oldsmobile, driven by Susan Lockhart, 2133 N. Wells, collided in the 1200 block of West 22nd. No injuries were reported. Willis was cited for violating driver's license restriction A (corrective lenses) and failure to yield half of the roadway.

A 1972 Ford, driven by Bobby G. Rodgers, Lovington, N.M., and a 1982 Buick, driven by Bobby Clint Price, 500 N. Somerville, collided in the 500 block of Frost. No injuries were reported. Rodgers was cited for unsafe backing and no proof of financial responsibility.

A 1979 Plymouth, driven by Bobby Allen Roberts, 1116 Seneca, and a 1970 Chevrolet, driven by Edward Lee Echols, 1100 Seneca, collided in the 1100 block of Seneca. No injuries were reported. Roberts was cited for failure to maintain control.

A 1982 Subaru, driven by Lazaro Rosalez, 216 E. Tuke, and a 1975 Buick, driven by Archie Gene Hardin, 1125 E. Francis, collided in the 400 block of East Craven. No injuries were reported. Rosalez was cited for driving while intoxicated, no Texas liability insurance, no Texas driver's license and failure to yield the right of way.

Fire report

The Pampa Fire Department reported the following fire runs for the 32-hour period ending at 3 p.m. Saturday.

SATURDAY, Jan. 24
11:50 a.m. — Electrical short caused a fire at Skeeter's Lounge, 1503 Ripley. No injuries reported. Light damage to the ceiling and roof and light smoke damage throughout the building. Seven men and two trucks responded.

City

safe riding rules.

The pedestrian-train collision occurred Oct. 18 when Joel Johnston, 11, 324 Anne, was chasing a lizard across railroad tracks on East Tyng and got his hand caught beneath the wheels of a train. No serious injuries resulted.

The Police Department arrested 991 people in 1986, down 19.3 percent from the 1,228 arrests made in 1985. Public drunkenness (218 arrests) and driving while intoxicated (132 arrests) headed the list of reasons for arrests.

Incidents of both public drunkenness and drunken driving increased over 1985. But the number of narcotic drug violations in 1986 declined.

Public intoxication reports jumped from 148 in 1985 to 239 in 1986, an increase of 61.5 percent.

Driving while intoxicated reports rose 24.2 percent, from 124 in 1985 to 154 last year.

But valid drug complaints decreased 41.6 percent from 125 two years ago to 73 in 1986.

During the year, the Police Department received 20,144 calls for service — a slight increase over 1985 — but officers cut back the number of miles patrolled from almost 260,000 to about 222,000.

Pampa motorists had 679 traffic accidents in 1986, with 138 leading to injuries. October was the most accident-prone month, when 73 wrecks were recorded.

Almost half the total of accidents, 325, involved drivers between the ages of 20 and 34.

More accidents occurred on Friday, and the hour between 11 a.m. and noon recorded the greatest number, the report shows.

Patrolmen handed out almost 5,200 tickets in 1986, about the same as in 1985, with no liability vehicle insurance being the citation in 529 cases, more than 10 percent of the time. Other frequent violations included inspection sticker violations (338), running a stop sign (297), registration violations (238) and no driver's license (220).

The report also includes information on Police Department programs, from Neighborhood Watch to McGruff the Crime Dog.

Ryzman said he finds the report valuable in building future departmental goals and added that another goal of the report is to let the public and city leaders know what the department has been doing.

Building

has been made," Dunlap stressed.

One obstacle Dunlap noted was "expanding and remodeling the current facility with damaging the historic value of the building."

"We will more than likely go in and spruce up the building," he said.

The results of the study show an apparent about-face for the Postal Service, which had claimed that the current structure, built in the early 1930s, is out of date for present needs, requires extensive repairs and lacks adequate parking facilities.

Insufficient parking has posed a problem for post office employees and customers as well as drivers on Foster Street. With the First National Bank across the street, traffic is particularly heavy during the lunch hour and at the close of business on work-days.

"Parking is one of our problems we're looking at," Dunlap said. "There's little or no handicapped access parking and practically zero employee parking. If we can find more parking space, we're going to look at that, too."

City Manager Hart agreed that there is some congestion in front of the post office, but "I've never seen a post office that doesn't have traffic congestion."

Hart said there would be "a number of avenues available" for the Postal Service to acquire property for additional parking or additional facilities.

"The Postal Service has the power of eminent domain and can negotiate for property," Hart said.

Hart expressed a preference for keeping the post office where it is.

"It seems to me the location ought to be in an area compatible with the community and the general population," he said.

Hostages

were missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon — five Americans, six Frenchmen, two West Germans, two Britons, an Italian, an Irishman, a South Korean and a Saudi Arabian.

Waite, personal emissary of Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, was last seen Tuesday evening as he left his seaside hotel for talks with the hostage-takers.

The Christian Voice of Lebanon radio station reported Waite was heading back to his seaside hotel Saturday evening after negotiations in Baalbek, an ancient city in east Lebanon's Syrian-controlled Bekaa valley.

The Voice of Lebanon has been known to be inaccurate in the past on Moslem-related affairs.

Waite's Druse militia escorts have said he has been negotiating with Islamic Jihad. The organization, reputedly composed of pro-Iranian Shiite extremists, kidnapped Americans Terry A. Anderson, 39, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, and Thomas Sutherland, acting dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut.

In London, the Church of England said in a brief statement Saturday, "Both our contact and Terry Waite's host tell us that Terry Waite is continuing his conversations and is safe and well."

Church spokeswoman Eve Keatley said in the statement,

"We hope that he will complete his mission very soon."

The Voice of Lebanon radio station earlier reported an anonymous caller claiming to speak for the Organization of the Oppressed on Earth said both victims abducted Friday were West German and one would be executed by 6 p.m. Saturday unless West Germany released Mohammed Ali Hamadi.

The deadline passed with no further word.

Hamadi, a Shiite Lebanese, was arrested in Frankfurt on Jan. 13. The United States is seeking his extradition to face charges of air piracy and murder in connection with the June 1985 hijack of a TWA jetliner to Beirut.

Off Beat

By Paul Pinkham

A glass of water and cold lunchmeat

How quickly and easily I've grown accustomed to a new lifestyle.

A little over six months ago, I was standing at the altar, wondering how I'd ever get used to living with a wife and three instant kids after 26 years of bachelorhood.

And when Linda announced that she and the two girls were leaving on a trip to Kansas City to visit family and friends 10 days ago, I'll have to admit that part of me was looking forward to a week or so of peace and quiet, even though 12-year-old Jack, the second noisiest kiddo of the three, was staying behind.

Incidentally, Jack was looking forward to having the run of the house, too, without his 11-year-old sister to bother him.

But now that they've been gone, I'm having a hard time figuring out how I ever survived a month of bachelorhood, let alone 26 years!

I used to consider myself a pretty fair cook, especially back in my strict vegetarian days when it was a challenge to come up with something other than vegetable soup or a lettuce and tomato salad every night.

I even won a cooking contest once in graduate school for my famous Swiss Broccoli Soup.

This time will be easy, I thought, what with a microwave oven and all.

But two days of bachelorhood this time around, and I was fresh out of ideas for what Jack and I were going to eat.

Unfortunately, that was the same day the big snowstorm began. Thank God for delivery orders!

Some of the problem, of course, was my wife's fault. She has her own little place for everything in the kitchen, and I almost had to call in the Police Department's detective squad just to find a potholder. I've yet to find the skillet.

But I think Jack summed up the frustration best when, after two days of my cooking, he had two simple questions.

"When's Mom gonna be home?" and "Can't we go out and buy something simple to cook—like hot dogs?"

"Hot dogs, my son, are not nutritious," I replied, as I opened up another bag of potato chips.

Funny, I thought he would like peanut butter soup and turnip pudding. Kids are supposed to like peanut butter and pudding, aren't they?

One night, I had to work late and Jack said he'd fix supper and surprise me when I got home. I pulled in, expecting to find the house ablaze or something, but, waiting for me on the counter was a glass of water and two pieces of lunchmeat.

"Well, at least he now appreciates what I'm going through," I thought.

Easily the best meal we ate all week—Jack might argue for the phrasing—"the only meal we ate all week"—was the day friend and colleague Larry Hollis brought over some of his specially barbecued brisket.

But even that was not without serious logistical problems.

Unfortunately, that was the day the big snowstorm ended.

It took four guys and a pickup truck to move my old bomb out to the street and then I had to drive around and around the block while Jack shoveled the driveway because I knew if I stopped, I'd never get it going again.

Those guys probably saved us from starving to death, because, after a giant cow rendered Larry car-less east of Skellytown a few weeks ago, we had no way to get the brisket from his abode to mine.

The laundry provided another interesting scenario.

I used to do my laundry faithfully every weekend when I was a bachelor, but I've kinda gotten out of the habit.

At any rate, one day late last week, I gathered up two rooms full of dirty clothes and marched into the laundry room.

One look at Linda's washing machine waiting there, and I marched right back out again. I've never seen such a complicated piece of machinery!

"The laundry can wait," I muttered.

I could tell you about my fight with the vacuum cleaner, or my feeble attempts at washing dishes, but I'll save them for a later date.

For now, I'll just say: "HONEY, COME HOME QUICK! WE NEED YOU!"

bills as ransom for the child, and a getaway car.

Family members and investigators said they did not know Beeler and that he apparently picked them at random.

Authorities said Johnson, 22, apparently was kidnapped in the mistaken notion that she was a member of the wealthy Whitehead family, which has ranching and banking interests in Dallas and Central Texas.

Ranger Guffey, 40, was killed during the rescue of the kidnapped girl late Thursday. Beeler also died in the late-night gun battle that erupted inside the car he was about to use for his getaway. Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells said.

Wells said Beeler put the child into the car and shot Guffey in the head upon seeing two law officers in the rear of the vehicle. Ranger Johnnie Aycock grabbed the child, shielded her with his body and shot Beeler four times, Wells said.

"They had removed the rear seat of this vehicle so the Rangers could crouch in there," Wells said. "They were trying to take custody of the subject with as little risk as possible to the kidnap victim."

The child was not injured. Guffey's friends and acquaintances in Canadian remembered him Saturday as a hard-working student and employee whose life-time aspiration was to become a Texas Ranger.

"He was just a fine young man—full of life. I thought a lot of the boy, and he did a good job for me," said Hemphill County rancher Allen Webb, for whom Guffey, a Perryton native, worked in the late '60s. "His ambition was always to be a Texas Ranger."

He attained that goal in 1979, after 11 years as a Texas Department of Public Safety trooper.

Webb said he last saw Guffey during a reunion last summer. He said Guffey looked the part of a Ranger.

"You imagine a Texas Ranger—that was Stan," Webb recalled. Webb said he kept in contact with Guffey over the years. He said Guffey had expressed an interest in some day returning to the Panhandle.

Had he made it, he might be alive today.

But Webb said Guffey apparently never shied away from danger in the line of duty. He said he met the Ranger once in McAllen and "you could tell that he was involved in some pretty touchy deals."

Other Canadian residents also reacted to Guffey's violent death. State Rep. Dick Waterfield said from Austin Saturday that, although he didn't know Guffey well, he still remembers him from school more than 20 years ago. Waterfield said Guffey was about five years behind him in school.

"You always heard about Stan because he was active (in extracurricular activities) and he was a real nice fellow," Waterfield said.

Waterfield said he read about Guffey's death in the Austin paper and wondered then if it was the same man he knew from Canadian.

Canadian Record co-publisher Nan Ezzell also remembered Guffey as "an awfully nice young man" who dreamed about a career in law enforcement.

"His ambition had always been to be a Texas Ranger, and he worked up to it," Ezzell said.

Longtime Canadian resident Don Schaeff, a distant relative of Guffey, said he, too, remembered Guffey joining the highway patrol in 1968.

"He was real proud of that," Schaeff said.

The news of Guffey's death also hit hard in Brady, a central Texas community of 6,500, about 130 miles west of Austin, where Guffey and his family lived and worked.

"In a small country town, we all get entwined in each other's lives," said Robert Barnhill, president of Commercial Bank in Brady.

"People came into the bank this morning (Friday) with tears in their eyes," he said.

Commercial Bank is also the place where Guffey's wife, Josie, works.

The visitors to her house came in steady streams. Among them was Col. Jim Adams, director of the Department of Public Safety.

Adams presented the DPS Memorial Cross, the highest honor given to a DPS officer, to Josie Guffey. The cross is reserved for those, like Guffey, who died in the line of duty.

A wake for Guffey is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. tonight at Colonial Funeral Home in Brady. The DPS honor funeral will begin at 2 p.m. Monday at Sunset Ridge Church of Christ in Brady. Burial will be at Resthaven Cemetery in Brady.

Guffey is survived by his wife Josie; four sons, Mike of Lubbock, Stacy of the U.S. Navy, and Christopher and Travis, both of Brady; his father, M.F. Guffey of Wheeler; his mother, Willora of Canadian; his stepmother, Laverta of Wheeler; two sisters, Linda Ivy of Wheeler and Brenda Perrin of Canadian; and two step-sisters, Donna Curtis and Denise Carroll, both of Hereford.

Board OKs batting cage in Hobart park

The Parks and Recreation Advisory Board recommended approval of an automatic batting facility in Hobart Street Park during its regular meeting Thursday evening.

Developer Phillip Mangham of Pampa has proposed to construct the batting facility under the same specifications as one previously approved by the board in August 1985 but that was never built.

The facility, featuring seven batting cages, would be built on the site of the deteriorating tennis courts at the park. Cost of the facility would be approximately $68,000, with the developer assuming solely the costs of construction and leasing the land from the city.

Only five softball cages would be built initially, with the other two outside cages remaining empty to be used later for softball or hardball machines.

Under the lease agreement, the city would receive 10 percent of all gross receipts from the operation of the coin-operated batting facility. Mangham estimates the city's revenue would be between $8,000 and $15,000 per year.

In his proposals, Mangham states the concrete foundation for the facility will lay over the existing tennis courts foundation. The only cuts in the courts will be to install a drain in the center for water run-off, electrical service to each of the new lights and the center pole that supports the net.

Kirkpatrick said the lease, based on the one drawn up with the previous developer, meets the suggestions made by the city attorney and city commission in regard to the same facility considered in 1985.

The recommendation for the batting facility's approval will go to the city commission for its action.

In other matters, Parks and Recreation Department Director Reed Kirkpatrick reported he and Parks Supervisor Bill Hildebrandt had attended a recent Panhandle Regional Planning Commission meeting to discuss the grant application for the proposed Old Schneider Hotel park project at Russell and Atchison.

Kirkpatrick said the PRPC board had voted to recommend approval of the funding grant from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

He said that "cleared a hurdle" for the city's receiving the grant. "Chances would have been slim" for TPWD approval of the grant without the PRPC's O.K., he said.

In a discussion item, board members reviewed development plans for the No. 1 Pump Station park site between Ward and Hobart west of Carmichael-Whalley Funeral Directors.

Chairman Duane Harp said the board needs to be thinking of a name for the site. He said proposals for naming the site can be considered at the Feb. 12 workshop session, with a decision to be considered at the next regular meeting in February.

Board member Randy Stewart said he feels the development plans should include installation of a sidewalk on the east side of the site for the convenience of people parking there for visits to the funeral home and getting out on the passenger side of vehicles.

Kirkpatrick said the sidewalk would require additional expenses that have not been included in the proposed development plans. He said the park is being developed as a passive recreation site, mainly with landscaping to create a beauty spot without expecting much traffic from people using the park.

Other board members agreed the sidewalk should at least be considered and discussed possibilities of obtaining funding to pay for the sidewalk's installation.

Kirkpatrick said parks crews have started preventative maintenance projects for the winter months, including parks signs, painting playgrounds and repairs.

He reported the roof has been removed from the old jailhouse structure in Marcus Sanders Park. The Streets Department will be helping with the demolition of the structure, which has been deemed a hazard for youths in the park.

Kirkpatrick said the city also will be demolishing the old well-water shed at the No. 1 Pump Station site as part of the park development.

Recreation Supervisor Jackie Harper said she has been working on pool and parks baseball fields purchase orders for the upcoming recreation seasons.

She also noted the city soon will be taking bids for the concession facility at Hobart Street Park. She said she has already had requests concerning the concession, offered on a 1-year contract.

In other matters, the board discussed North Crest Park developments, Chautauqua plans, Summer Recreation program plans and other parks and recreation items.

The board also approved a set of by-laws for board policies and procedures to submit to the city commission for its approval.

Hightower says farmers can help state's economy

AUSTIN (AP)—Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said Saturday that agriculture, "the state's old and trusted friend," can be one of the solutions to Texas' economic woes.

In a speech before about 600 Jaycees, Hightower detailed programs his office has put into operation to help Texas farmers avoid sending money out of state.

"We've got a depression in rural Texas," Hightower said. "When the farmer's economy is down it's pulling us down and that's what's happening in Texas."

The Jaycees meet here annually to hold a mock legislature as a method of learning the process of state government.

Hightower said he wanted the Jaycees to realize "the potential of an old and trusted friend—agriculture—to be a major source of the solution that we need to create hundreds and thousands of jobs and generate billions of dollars in new economic activity."

Hightower told the group his agency has helped farmers sell directly to buyers through better marketing and has established about 58 farmers' markets in the state, increasing farmers' annual income by an average $3,000.

The agriculture department's programs have caused supermarkets to buy produce locally, according to Hightower. In turn, farmers are diversifying their crops in order to grow what consumers eat, he said.

"These little projects are the way, to me, for a state economic program to really work," Hightower said.

Hightower called the agricultural programs a vital part of the solution to the state's economic crisis.

"Our economy is not generating enough wealth to allow people to pay taxes at a level to finance this government properly," he said.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Employee handbook invalidated by court

Most of the commentary following the U.S. Supreme Court's upholding of California's protections of workers on maternity leave has focused on the feminism of the decision. But a new ideological component on the court — reflected perhaps in Associate Justice Antonin Scalia's joining the "liberal" majority — may have been as important a factor as the predictable yelping for "women's rights." That factor reflects a trend at the margins of social and political debate: natalism.

Childbirth is trendy. After a decade and a half of bewailing the "population explosion," of the legal positivists' creating the "right" to terminate "unwanted pregnancies," some of the madonnas of contemporary feminism, such as Betty Friedan, have given their blessings to motherhood. In her news conference, Lillian Garland, who took her case against California Federal Savings & Loan Association to the high court, emphasized her natalist enthusiasm as much as her feminism. "I wanted to be the last woman to have to suffer for deciding to have a baby," she said as she clasped a prominent crucifix hanging around her neck.

All this is welcome enough, particularly as western societies emerge from their cruel fashion of rejecting children, even though they continue to countenance what the foes of abortion call feticide. It is moreover hard not to catch some of Lillian Garland's infectious jubilation — who wants to deny her claim that the court's decision was an answer to prayer?

Still, the natalists ought to hear a few caveats, not least among them that a government that claims to protect the rights of childbirth can also take them away. It was the selfsame court, after all, that handed down Roe vs. Wade, which antiabortionists regard as the blackest day in recent history. Solomon as a case in point, it is not especially scriptural to call on government whenever men's hearts need to be changed.

Nor is it a salutary development that, thanks to this ruling, government can now thrust even more of its nose into setting private employment policies. Thus will countless new employee handbooks need to be reprinted; thus will wages have to be readjusted, at sometimes prohibitive costs to small businesses, in order to rehire women whose pregnancies led to their termination. In the wake of this decision, legislators everywhere are scheming to create new and equal "rights" for fathers. And does the court have an answer for what to do with those hired as replacements who must now go so that the new mother can be rehired?

A judicial system concerned about liberalizing the workplace ought actually to restrain government in its lust to complicate employment policies and render inflexible the regulations pertaining to personnel. And people who want to change the hearts of men ought to trouble themselves to learn how the marketplace adapts to human values, never resorting to government as the first resort.

No state cures for families

While he didn't intend it that way, one of the best descriptions of the failure of the liberals' War on Poverty is found in Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan's book, Family and Nation.

In the book, the New York democrat sounds like a battlefield general reciting the casualties of this war.

He begins: "In 1984 the proportion of poor black children under 6 rose to 51.1 percent. . . The number of female-headed families had increased by 28 million (97 percent) since 1970. . . The poverty rate in 1983, 15.2 percent, was at its highest level since 1965."

Moreover, he notes: "In 1984 half the poor in America (47.8 percent) lived in female-headed families. . . Only 2 percent of two-parent children were low achievers (compared to) . . . fully 40 percent of one-parent children."

A reasonable interpretation of his lament is that the family unit is declining and government, especially under Ronald Reagan, is doing little to stop it. Moynihan proposes "formulation of a national policy concerning the quality and stability of life" — a policy that could stand as "the cornerstone for a new era of U.S. social legislation."

There's only one problem: he once again wants to recruit government to do something that is inherently impossible. Man's ignorance and arrogance make him think that because he managed to split the atom and travel to the moon, he can easily accomplish "trivial" tasks like managing the family and the economy.

The evidence suggests, however, that all government intervention can do for the family unit is weaken it. For example, such intervention has brought the "adultification" of children through court decrees that notifying parents when children seek birth control pills or abortions violates minors' rights.

While it may be difficult underscore the specific relationship between government intervention and the decline of the family unit, economic theory does give broad outlines.

In his path-breaking book, Losing Ground, Charles Murray argues that '60's welfare programs hurt the needy. Moynihan nixes the idea; but Moynihan is wrong.

Among the statistics he ignores are the findings of Lowell Gallaway and Richard Veder of the University of Ohio, for example, who found that 50 percent of the increased divorce rate between 1964 and '70 can be traced to welfare growth. He also ignored the fact that from 1969 to 1979 poverty among children in West Virginia dropped 24 percent while New York's jumped 50 percent despite New York's 90 percent higher welfare benefits.

Moynihan doesn't say much about the causes of poverty, he just drags out more War on Poverty casualty statistics: "For children under six, the poverty rate is nearly seven times that of the elderly: 17.5 percent compared with 2.6 percent."

In 1984 approximately 33.7 million persons were poor. Children, who represented less than 27 percent of the overall population, comprised 40 percent of the poor. Children were the only age group overrepresented in the poverty population."

According to Moynihan, the overrepresentation of children in poverty relative to the elderly is because Social Security payments in constant dollars have risen 54 percent since 1970, while aid to families with dependent children (AFDC) payments per recipient have fallen 34 percent (the decline is overstated; it does not include in-kind payments — food stamps, school lunches, housing subsidies, Medicaid and the like).

In one sense Moynihan is right. Children have less political power than older people. After all, what lawmaker owes his seat to the children's vote? But many do owe their seats to the senior citizen vote. In political hardball, those with clout are favored; those without are dumped on.

In reading Family and Nation it's difficult to find sensible analysis of the problem of family breakdown; instead we get whimpering over casualties. The only policy recommendation is a plea to give the poor more of the poison that got them where they are: dependence on the welfare state.

The book's most useful feature is its demonstration that politicians don't understand the effects of their policies. Moynihan and his liberal fellows are surely well-intentioned, but the road to perdition is lined with good intentions.

The senator must understand that while Americans are the world's most generous people (about 80 percent of all world giving is by Americans), before giving one must ask: What will be the effect of our help on the recipient's incentive? By not asking this question, we've created a group of people who are immune to the standard cure for poverty — economic growth.

Family and Nation might easily be filed under the heading "Priceless economics" — that category reserved for works whose authors see an increased presence of a certain behavior but who ignore the role that prices (the costs associated with that behavior) may have played. Moynihan instead blames everything else.

Special mission from God

The latest antics of Oral Roberts, television preacher and faith healer and conversant with God, intrigued me greatly.

I've poked a little fun at OR through the years, but when he recently told his television audience if he couldn't raise $4.5 million by March for his World Outreach Program, God was going to kill him, or let him die, whichever it is that God does, I had to know more about this character.

You don't go around saying God is going to kill you if you don't come up with four-and-a-half big ones if you're not (1) totally crazy, (2) an incredible put-on, or (3) somebody who will say absolutely anything to make a sale.

Cathy Milam turned out to be the resident expert on Oral Roberts University.

She is the medical writer for the Tulsa World, and, believe it or not, she also has the Oral Roberts beat, what with the medical center Roberts has built in the city.

She explained that Roberts' current money drive is to be able to finance scholarships for each of the students currently enrolled in his medical school.

"Last year, he began by saying if the money didn't come in, God was going to 'call him home,'" said Cathy Milam.

"But as each week passed, he became more and more explicit with his audiences. He is now begging for the money, saying, 'I don't want to die.'"

Cathy Milam has been covering Roberts since 1980. I asked her bluntly, "Do you think this guy really believes all this stuff, or does he simply know what will get his audiences to fork over the cash?"

"I had the chance to interview his mother once," Cathy Milam answered. "She told me that when her son was born, she dedicated him to God."

"She said she told her son from the day he was able to understand her that he belonged to God and had been chosen by God."

"As I listened to her, I realized she had so instilled this in her son, that he really does believe he is on a special mission from God. I think her son is a charlatan and just realized a good thing when he saw it, however."

I asked how the Tulsa community looked at citizen Roberts. Was he an embarrassment?

"In some ways, sure," said the reporter. "But you've got to realize the economic impact he has had on this city. He has brought a part of the city back from some very hard times. There is no way you can argue he hasn't been good for Tulsa."

Good for Tulsa or not, I know what Cathy Milam must go through to cover the Oral Roberts beat. His followers — and I speak from personal experience — do not appreciate any negative remarks concerning the Chosen One.

I'm "Satan's Tool." That's the nicest thing they've said about me.

"My prized possession," said Cathy Milam, "is a death threat written in crayon."

Israel has earlier connection

It may be only a footnote to the expanding — apparently indefinitely — story of the Iran arms scam, but it's still worth noting.

Israel's role in the skimming of some of the proceeds from the weapons sales to Iran to fund the Nicaraguan contras — whether peripheral and unwitting, as the Israelis claim, or central, as some other accounts have it — is not the first Israeli connection with arms for Nicaragua.

For the full story, we have to go back a number of years, to before the revolution that brought the Sandinistas, against whom this operation was directed, to power.

Israel, as it happens, had long been a staunch friend of the Somoza dictatorship that the revolution overthrew. It continued supplying arms to Somoza brutal forces right up to the end.

That came in July 1979. The revolutionary junta (initially a coalition, but soon a purely Sandinista show) that took over Nicaragua also inherited a $1.6 billion foreign debt run up by Somoza. Some half billion dollars of that, provided by American and European banks during the last two years of Somoza's clearly crumbling reign, never reached Nicaragua. It went directly into Somoza bank accounts abroad.

Nevertheless, the new government assumed the entire debt with the exception of the portions owed two of the creditors. That is one page of the Nicaraguan story which you'll never find in the version distributed by the U.S. Department of State.

An initial renegotiation calling for a 12-year repayment has since been renegotiated several times. The Sandinistas have not been able to meet the repayment schedule. But the full debt has not been repudiated, although with accumulated unpaid interest it has now grown to more than $4 billion, one of the largest per capita in the world.

Publicly, the Sandinistas remain committed to repayment — except, again, for those two exceptions. They are Israel and Argentina, whose defunct military government had likewise provided weapons until Somoza's bitter end.

Israeli support for Somoza has been justified as the returning of a favor. And there is substance to that. Somoza's Nicaragua was among the first governments to recognize the new state of Israel and consistently provided a supporting vote in Israel's endless battles in the United Nations with the Arab nations.

In the case of Sandinista Nicaragua, it has been recognition of and support for the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Change liability law

To the editor:
We need to get our state lawmakers to change the auto liability insurance law.

First, the law should pertain to a personal driver's liability, not an auto liability. There are families of only two drivers who have two cars, maybe an old pickup or an antique fun car. In my case, the second vehicle is a small truck that I use to make a living.

I can't drive but one vehicle at a time, and I need to be covered only when I am driving. It is unfair to have to insure four vehicles, when I need but only one at a time.

Take for instance, a trucking company that has two winch trucks, seven tank trucks, two service units, and three flat beds. They have to insure fourteen rigs to serve their customers, but they only have six men to drive them. They are required to have a $2 million coverage before the customer lets them work anyway.

Different jobs require different trucks so some are sitting in the yard. If the driver had his own driver's liability, the trucking company would get a break, and the customer would be satisfied.

Another thing that needs to be changed is the outrageous cost limit. There are families that can't even feed their children right now, and they have to be running scared all the time because they have to feed an insurance company or get fined if they don't.

If we are going to be forced to buy, then the insurance company should be forced to accept every applicant at the same price, with no additional skim for bad driving records.

You see, the insurance companies made this bed, but they don't want to sleep in it. If they had a little competition, they would come down on their rates.

This brings up another thing that a lot of people don't know about. The insurance companies pay our lawmakers for making the law for their benefit. This is called PAC money, and the lawmaker that votes for and helps pass the law gets to help divide the money.

In my book this is bribery. This in itself should be forbidden.

This is probably one of the reasons Clements needed to get back in. He couldn't live within his means; he was running out of PAC money. I would like to see him live within my means for a month or two.

We need everyone to write to the House of Representatives in Austin and demand that legislators change the liability law from coverage of vehicles to coverage of individual drivers.

It wouldn't hurt me if they forgot the seat belt law too, because most of the time I forget to buckle up.

They don't need to take a break until it is all straightened out. They also need to decide whose paycheck they want, the state of Texas or the special interest groups.

Foul mouths recall days of Gomorrah

Sodom and Gomorrah? Try Pampa, Texas.

Last Tuesday night I took my family to see a high school ball game and was totally disgusted. While trying to watch an athletic event my family was subjected to some of the foulest, most vulgar language coming from the Pampa High student section. While parents sat by, and school officials looked on, vulgarities were shouted at the Borger fans.

In a day when we don't seem to care what kind of future we will have, no one seems to have the guts to put a stop to anything!

Parents wake up! If your kids will act like that in public, what will they do at school or in private? Do you care? We allow everything to get worse and worse. If we don't stand up, no one will.

I have lived in three different cities in the past eight years and have never seen this type of action in such an open way. It doesn't have to be this way! Let's clean Pampa and restore a sense of pride about who we are.

Faulty indictments were no fairy tale

To the editor:

I would like to respond to the fable written by John Triplehorn, which appeared in your paper on Jan. 18.

As with most fables and fairy tales, this one is devoid of any connection with truth or fact.

In truth and in fact the recent dismissal of several pending indictments was proper and entirely justified.

Some of the dismissals resulted from plea bargains to which the state was committed by the former assistant district attorney. Others were the result of indictments that shouldn't have been returned to begin with. I am referring to the indictments that the assistant district attorney sought and got after he lost a case because of a mistake he made. He then wanted to take another shot at the defendant.

Those indictments that were dismissed "in the interest of justice" included cases in which the state lacked sufficient legal and competent evidence to prove the guilt of the defendant beyond a reasonable doubt. It is not proper to subject a person to a trial on a felony charge unless the state has sufficient evidence to establish guilt, and cases in that category should not have been presented to the grand jury in the first place.

Finally, Mr. Triplehorn suggests that Gray County will be overrun with crime and criminals. I doubt that will happen. Mr. Triplehorn's letter is the result of a lack of information on his part and the general policy of disinformation of this newspaper relative to the former assistant district attorney.

Additionally, Mr. Triplehorn, one of the self-appointed king makers of the local Republican Party, is no doubt looking to the next election, when his political cohorts will offer their candidate without regard to qualifications.

Police state born of fear of crime

To the editor:

A plan has been thoughtfully designed, by our enemy within, to bring a terrible dilemma upon U.S. citizens. The enemy directs our people to fear war, so that they won't know of the internal mechanism for police control. This is the reason our court judges and law enforcement act so freakishly.

Here is a composite of how several patriots have outlined our internal conquest:

Government agencies, government schools, movies, TV, and tax exempt foundations finance and promise the escalation of discontent and crime.

These same groups advocate and work for a nationally controlled police network (LEAA, U.S. Marshal, FBI, national-identity computers etc.) in order to "offer collective solutions to increasing violence."

As domestic crime and violence increases, duped American middle-class citizens will be led by the media to demand that the established police network "stop violence" and protect the citizens.

More powers will be placed in the hands of government agencies and police forces.

With more violence, the people demand and approve police actions without constitutional safeguards. Federal and state agencies will be given authority (or simply allowed) to conduct surveillance of any citizen, stop and hold citizens "on suspicion", search without warrants, arrest "associates" of "criminals," detain without bond or trial, seize and hold property, and on and on.

New "police powers," given supposedly to "reduce crime," will be used to railroad Christian patriots into prison along with the alcohol and drug addicts, thieves, rapists and murderers. During this time, friends of those in power will be skipped in arrests and prosecution.

Violence and resistance grows until most citizens, ignorant of the real goal, approves the government arrest of "gun owners" and the confiscation of all guns in the hands of private citizens "to prevent further violence."

When the people are disarmed and incapable of any physical resistance to tyrannical government, then Christian patriots still at large will be rounded up. The people will not miss the real defenders of liberty until it is too late.

Appreciate carrier

To the editor:

I commend Pampa News carrier Marcus Shephard for his service "over and above the call of duty" to his subscribers on Garland Street, where I live.

On Sunday, Jan. 18, he walked his route with a snow shovel and uncovered the newspapers from the 18 inches of snow and delivered them to the doors.

I have never known of a more dedicated carrier, and we certainly do appreciate him.

Long appetite of the law reaches rural cafe

Texas guest columnist

By JOE MURRAY
Lufkin Daily News

RIVERSIDE, Texas (AP) — Homer and Jake aren't in the same league as Bonnie and Clyde. But in and around this tiny Pineywoods community, they're high on law enforcement's most wanted list.

That is, where they most want to eat.

Not that you have to be a detective to find Homer and Jake's Cafe. But it helps.

Heading south on Highway 19 between Trinity and Huntsville, turn left at Riverside's blinking yellow light, go a little less than a quarter of a mile and it's on the corner on your left, just before you get to the railroad tracks.

If the building looks more like a hardware store or even a pool hall, there's a good reason. In its time, it has been both.

But nowadays this nowhere place is about the best place anywhere for eating catfish.

That's not just one man's opinion. It seems to be shared by law enforcement officers of that area. They've been bragging about it among themselves on their police radios, so much so that the long appetite of the law has reached a far distance to say the least.

Sure enough, Homer was much surprised recently when one of the customers introduced herself as a DPS dispatcher from Corpus Christi. She had driven all the way just to find out if the food was as good as she had heard on the air.

By the way, let's take this opportunity to better introduce you to Homer and Jake. They're most likely not what you'd think, just judging from their names. Fact is, they're a married couple, Mr. and Mrs. McMillian.

Miz Homer is a nice country lady named for her daddy, who died before she was born. Together she and Jake have been running Jake McMillian's

General Store just about forever. When the little building next to them went up for sale about a year ago, they saw it as a good opportunity to expand into the cafe business.

"Besides," said Miz Homer. "Jake loves to fish and it's a good excuse to get him out of the store."

Jake being a good fisherman is part of the reason for the extra good-tasting catfish. He catches most all of what they serve, and the rest they buy from other anglers there on Lake Livingston.

The fish couldn't come any fresher, seeing as how it's still alive and flipping when it arrives in Homer's kitchen.

"Everything we bring in, whether it's caught or bought, has to be live," said Homer. "We pride ourselves on all our food being fresh and made right here on the premises."

Everything includes a lot. In addition to catfish, the menu features chicken-fried steak, cheeseburgers, hamburgers, shrimp plates, a salad bar that takes the proportion of dinner on the ground, homemade potato soup and her extra-special speciality, Cajun fish stew.

Suffice it to say, the stew is a tad spicy. Ingredients include every pepper known to man, plus some known only to Cajuns.

But mainly customers are partial to Miz Homer's catfish, all you can eat for $6.95 and served up hot enough to scorch a fork.

"What makes it so good?"

"I use a little bit of vinegar, salt and pepper and roll it in yellow corn meal," she said. "But most important, I fry it in peanut oil, which costs twice as much as other cooking oil but makes it about twice as tasty."

Homer and Jake's is open 5 p.m.-10 p.m., Thursday through Saturday, and 10 a.m.-10 p.m. Sundays. It's the kind of place the whole family will feel at home.

One word of caution, however. Don't be in such a hurry to get there that you exceed the speed limit. There are cops all over the place.

Oklahoma facing major tax increase

By RON JENKINS
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY — Republican Gov. Henry Bellmon, embarrassed by what he calls a "budget fiasco," goes before the Democrat-controlled Oklahoma Legislature this week to begin a selling job for a $2.1 billion budget that is balanced by a major tax increase package.

Bellmon refused to discuss his budget ahead of Monday's address to a joint House and Senate session, despite the fact that details of his tax increase and funding proposals have been extensively reported in news accounts.

The governor apologized late last week to legislators that details of his budget had been disclosed prematurely.

Bellmon plans to explain his budget at a briefing with key legislators Monday morning. His budget address to the full session is scheduled for 2 p.m.

Sources have confirmed that Bellmon will propose eliminating various sales tax exemptions to raise the bulk of the money that will be needed to wipe out a $363 million projected budget shortfall.

That proposal is expected to net about $200 million. Additional millions will be raised through increasing a myriad of fees for state services.

At the same time, the governor is proposing to eliminate the quarter-cent sales tax increase enacted in 1985, along with reducing the corporate income tax from 5 percent to 4 percent.

In addition, Bellmon disclosed he is asking the Legislature to enact a 6-cent gasoline tax increase which will raise an estimated $120 million each year.

That tax is designed to help solve a short-fall problem developing for the current fiscal year, which ends June 30, plus provide $64 million in general fund relief for the 1988 fiscal year.

The sales tax exemption plan has been advanced at various times in recent years, but has been scuttled early because of strong opposition from organized groups, including medical organizations, publishers and various professional associations.

Eliminating the sales tax exemption for services provided by hospitals, doctors, dentists, lawyers and other professionals would account for most of the $200 million revenue increase.

Under the Bellmon plan, the major areas that would continue to be exempted from the sales tax would be purchases by manufacturing plants, plus agriculture products.

House Speaker Jim Barker, D-Muskogee, says removing the exemption on newspaper ad sales will be "pretty tough."

Senate President Pro Tempore Rodger Randle, D-Tulsa, says the chances for Bellmon getting the plan through the Legislature hinge on getting Republican support and making sure it is fair.

"If the Bellmon plan is perceived to be roundly fair to everyone, and that everyone shares equally in the pain, then it will have a shot at passage," Randle said.

"If any groups are perceived to be treated differently or have special protection, then the fairness issue which binds all of it together will unravel and the plan will go down to defeat," he said.

Randle rejected the idea that including advertising sales in the plan harmed its chances.

"If advertising sales were not included in the Bellmon plan, then it would look like he was carving out special exceptions for special interests and the plan would be irreparably harmed," he said.

Passengers won't leave

HOUSTON (AP) — Passengers aboard an Aeromexico flight from Mexico City to New York balked at returning home Friday after John F. Kennedy Airport was shut down due to bad weather, authorities said.

The crew aboard Flight 404, a DC-10 traveling from Mexico City to New York, decided to return to Mexico City when informed that bad weather had shut down the New York airport.

The plane landed at Houston Intercontinental Airport for refueling about 2 a.m. with 278 passengers aboard, airport manager Bill Ainsworth said.

But the passengers insisted that they be left off the plane.

"All of them," Ainsworth said. "They didn't want to go back."

After JFK began accepting flights Friday afternoon, the passengers completed the last leg of their trip on an Aeromexico plane, according to the official.

The Point Is Pets

by Ron Hendrick, D.V.M.

Q. My dog scoots on it's rear a lot. Does he have worms?

A. Your dog may, in fact, have worms, but "scooting" is usually a sign of full anal glands, not of worms. Virtually every pup and kitten acquire intestinal worms while being carried "in utero". In other words, they're born with them.

While nursing, they acquire more through the mother's milk, and may also pick up worm eggs while walking on contaminated ground. Most animals can harbor a large number of parasites without showing obvious signs of being "wormy". The sad part is that they are never quite up to par and the owners don't realize this until after the animal has been treated for parasites. Then they realize their pet must have felt poorly and just didn't show it. Sometimes owners see worms in the bowel movements (called stools). These are usually tapeworms or roundworms. There are other, less obvious, but much more serious kinds of worms which most pets have. The best way to check to see if your pet has worms is to have your veterinarian check a stool sample. He can provide you with a container, and will do a microscopic exam. Treatment is usually easy and inexpensive. Then ask him about preventive pills, called Filaribits. You and your pet will be glad you did.

CONFIRM THE WORD

"And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned. And these signs shall accompany them that believe: in my name shall they cast out demons; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall in no wise hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover. So then the Lord Jesus, after he had spoken unto them, was received up into heaven, and sat down at the right hand of God. And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word by the signs that followed. Amen." (Mark 16:15-20) Along with this great commission the Lord gave the apostles the power to perform miracles in order to confirm that which they were speaking. Not only does Mark record the giving of the commission, he also records the fulfilling of it. The first record of the signs and wonders being performed under this commission is in Acts 2 where the apostles began to "speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance" (Acts 2:4). On down through the book of Acts we read of Spirit-filled men performing miracles and signs in order to confirm the word. The Hebrew writer tells us that the Word concerning the great salvation was in order, mainly, to confirm the spoken word and to convince people that Jesus is the Son of God (John 20:30-31). The power of God to save the soul is the gospel of Christ (Romans 1:16). We have the completed, confirmed and recorded gospel today which is everything needed to make us complete in God's sight (2 Timothy 3:16-17). Therefore, the signs, miracles and wonders have ceased (1 Corinthians 13:8-10).

Dapper bandit hits bank

DALLAS (AP)—The man who ran into a Dallas bank, disarmed a security guard and drove off in a stolen car with an estimated $40,000 in cash is believed to be the so-called "Dapper Bandit," police say.

If the Friday bank robbery was the work of the "Dapper Bandit," it would be his 20th bank robbery in Texas, most of them in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, since 1978, police reported. "He did it again," Dallas police robbery analyst Bill Hamby said. "There's no doubt in our minds."

The man has been tabbed the "Dapper Bandit" because of the attire he wears in the bank robberies. Police said the man in Friday's holdup at the Pavillion National Bank was dressed in a tidy gray suit, blue shirt and burgundy tie and carried a brief case.

Officials thought Ranger killer had died

HORSESHOE BAY (AP)—A Houston man shot to death after killing a Texas Ranger had been a "model parolee" until he disappeared in Houston in December. "We were under the impression that he was dead," said Walter Rowe of Houston, who was Brent Beeler's parole officer.

Rowe said he lost track of Beeler on Dec. 12 when the parolee failed to show up in court for a hearing to set a trial date on a check forgery charge. Beeler's truck was found several blocks from the Harris County Courthouse. It had been broken into, and a bloody cloth was found inside.

Beeler was listed as missing. Roger Chism, his attorney, also believed he was the victim of foul play because "there was no reason for him to take off."

The missing man was found late Thursday night after he killed Ranger Stan Guffey of Brady. Beeler, who authorities said had kidnapped a Horseshoe Bay family's 2-year-old girl and killed Denise Johnson, the girl's nanny, was then shot to death by Ranger Johnnie Aycock in a gunfight in a car.

The young girl was uninjured. Department of Public Safety Director Jim Adams, who visited the scene Friday, called the two Rangers "unselfish and heroic."

"Given all the unknowns, the operation was carried out as well as could have been expected," Adams said. "There is no doubt in my mind that this was a justified killing, totally justified," he said of the death of Beeler. "The subject fired first and the (two Rangers) returned fire. It was a clean shoot."

Adams said kidnap victim Kara Leigh Whitehead, who was being held in the car by Beeler, also would have died if the Rangers had not acted. "Beeler had nothing to lose. He had already murdered Johnson and he would have had to do away with the last remaining witness," Adams said, referring to the little girl.

In Houston, George Lindsey, Beeler's grandfather, said Beeler "wound up doped."

Beeler had lived with Lindsey after being paroled from prison in November 1985. He had served six months of a two-year sentence for credit card abuse. Beeler was facing return to prison because of the forgery charge.

Rowe said, "If I had to pull a guy and label him a model parolee, I would have picked Brent — up until the forgery charge. Everything to me appeared normal, above normal."

The kidnap-slaying incident that left three people dead also left many people puzzled. "It was just like a nightmare," said Leigh Whitehead, mother of Kara.

Clements refuses to reveal plan to erase state's red ink

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP)—Tough choices. It's this year's most-used phrase in the halls of the Texas Capitol.

Legislators say it. The former governor said it. The new governor said it. The speaker of the House said it.

The reason everyone seems to be talking about tough choices is simple: No money.

In what seems like 5.8 billion headlines, Texans have been told their state government faces a debt of $5.8 billion over the next 2½ years.

Grasping the problem is easy. Eliminating the problem isn't.

"We will be required to ask fundamental questions about the very purpose of state government... about how we pay for that government. We may find that fundamental changes are required, changes that will break with traditions whose roots lie deep in the Republic," said House Speaker Gib Lewis.

"In Texas today we are going through a transition period that is, for many of our state's people, the worst of times. The fundamental building blocks of our Texas economy are in trouble," is how Gov. Bill Clements sees it.

Comptroller Bob Bullock made the official deficit estimate. He said that unless something — spending or taxes — changes, the state will be short $1 billion on Aug. 31 and another $4.8 billion deficit over the following two years.

In compiling that estimate for the Legislature, Bullock tried to put it in perspective. He said $5.8 billion is:

■ More than the total amount Texas will take in from the sales tax next year.

■ More than Texas will take in from the oil and gas taxes, plus the franchise tax paid by businesses, for the next two years.

■ More than the total state government budget equaled just 12 years ago.

Several possible solutions have been offered.

Bullock suggested broadening the state sales tax to include services — the economy's fastest growing area — that currently escape taxation. A Texan pays 5½ percent sales tax on the hardware for his house, but not on the services of the architect who designed it, for example.

Clements, who has been in office less than a week, campaigned on a no-new-taxes promise that would "scrub the budget" and set priorities.

His so-called "secret plan" to balance the budget was the subject of scorn from his defeated opponent. But in his inaugural address, Clements still didn't divulge details.

"Today is not the time to unveil their detailed programs and recommendations. These will be discussed in my state of the state address in a few weeks and at other appropriate times in the future," he said.

Since the Nov. 4 election, Rep. Mike Toomey, R-Houston, has been looking for places to cut spending. Toomey headed a blue-ribbon task force that this past week recommended between $3 billion and $4 billion in optional cuts to Clements.

"There's not an element of the budget that can't stand to have their house cleaned," Toomey said in an interview. "Higher education, prisons, human services, all areas can stand to have a good look-at for the first time in 30 years."

But not everyone agrees with that assessment.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and former Gov. Mark White say the state's colleges and universities suffered in recent budget-cutting. Higher education means a better future economy, they argue.

Senator calls Clements 'irresponsible'

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements is starting the legislative session on the wrong foot by coupling a call for spending cuts with a threat to keep lawmakers in Austin all year, a state senator told teachers Saturday.

"I don't give a damn what Clements said. I think it's irresponsible in 1987, with a $5.8 billion deficit, to say right now, 'We are going to cut $2 billion or I am going to keep the Legislature in town until this time next year,'" Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, told a Texas Federation of Teachers seminar.

Clements, a Republican who took office last Tuesday, said during the week that he would not be hesitant to call special sessions of the Legislature if lawmakers do not approve cuts he will support. The regular session is scheduled to end June 1, but the governor has the authority to call special sessions.

Barrientos, echoing the sentiments of many lawmakers, told the teacher group that an overhaul of the state tax system is inevitable. Clements, however, has indicated he would oppose any tax plan that is not "revenue neutral."

The senator said the fundamental question is, "Where is the best place to find funds that hurts the least?"

"That's what we ought to be saying. Apparently the governor doesn't want to start that way. Same ol' Bill," Barrientos said of Clements.

He said more money is needed to fully fund the career ladder, a system in which teachers are evaluated and selected for merit raises. The system was set up in the 1984 education reform act, but was not fully funded.

Nancy Fisher, a Clements' representative, was invited to the TFF session, but did not attend. June Karp, assistant to the TFF president, said Fisher had asked her to relay some of Clements' thoughts on education, including his call for the abolition of the career ladder.

Fisher's comments, as relayed by Karp, were not well-received by the TFF members.

The teachers also heard from Will Davis of Austin, a former State Board of Education member who now heads the School Finance Symposium, a coalition of 37 education groups.

"We're in for a long, long year," Davis warned. "Public schools are a big ticket item in the state budget."

Parents told boy not at hospital

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—While doctors at Brooke Army Medical Center worked to save the life of 17-year-old Will Greer, hospital officials twice told people looking for him that the traffic accident victim was not a patient at the facility.

Army officials are investigating why the teenager's parents and police searched for the boy almost 24 hours before he was found by a San Antonio Light reporter.

Greer, a student at the Texas Military Institute, was in critical condition Friday after being struck by a pickup while riding a bicycle.

The boy was last seen about 3:30 p.m. Thursday riding his bicycle in suburban Alamo Heights.

The boy's father, Don Greer, said he filed a missing person's report Friday morning with the Alamo Heights Police Department.

Authorities said the accident occurred about 4:30 p.m. Thursday. The boy was taken to Brooke and identified as John Doe because he was unconscious and carrying no identification.

Don Greer said he was told that officials at his son's school had called Brooke about midnight Thursday and were told no unidentified patients were being treated at the hospital.

"What irks me is that my secretary called this hospital this morning at about eight o'clock and was also told they had no unidentified patients," Greer said Friday.

Dallas blacks win suit

DALLAS (AP)—A federal judge has awarded $170,000 in damages to two black men who claimed their civil rights were violated when they were physically attacked by nightclub employees after a dispute over a $16.75 tab.

U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer Thursday approved a judgment in principle that will award $90,000 to Stanton Lawrence and $80,000 to James Clark.

Lawrence, a high school teacher, and Clark, an engineering technologist, claimed in the suit that nightclub employees refused their offer to settle a disputed tab, prevented them from leaving the club and attacked them when they tried to leave.

Buchmeyer ruled that the men were entitled to collect the damages for assault and battery and false imprisonment, but ruled they were not entitled to additional damages for discrimination, according to a court official.

Clark said he was pleased with the judgment.

"I don't think it (the judgment) is as severe as the punishment could have been, but I think it's severe enough to have some lasting effects," he said.

Ugandan victims

A boy who said his parents were killed by Ugandan soldiers in 1983 takes a macabre stand beside a pile of skulls of victims of similar atrocities in the African nation. One year after President Yoweri Museveni took power, such sights are kept as a reminder of the cruelty of former regimes.

World briefs

War claims more civilians

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A chanting crowd of 80,000 Islamic worshipers called for revenge when President Ali Khamenei told them Iraqi air raids had killed 1,786 Iranian civilians in the two weeks since Iran launched a major ground offensive on the southern war front.

Khamenei, who addressed the huge crowd Friday, rejected Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's call for a negotiated peace and called him a "dirty vulture" who had to be overthrown before the 6-year-old Gulf war could end.

He told the prayer meeting, whose size was estimated by Western journalists allowed into Tehran this week, that Hussein could not be trusted because Iraq's air raids continued unabated, despite the call for peace Wednesday.

Iran, meanwhile, said its forces broke through defenses east of Iraq's southern provincial capital of Basra, killing or wounding 2,000 Iraqis. Iran opened a major ground offensive toward the port city of 1 million people on Jan. 9.

Scores of civilians were killed or wounded in raids Friday on Isfahan, Tabriz and the holy city of Qom, said Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency.

IRNA said worshipers attending prayer meetings in those cities poured into the streets chanting, "War, war until victory!"

Khamenei said Iraqi warplanes have raided 29 Iranian cities in two weeks, and that more than 6,000 people were wounded in addition to the 1,786 civilians killed.

Missiles fired at British ship

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — An Iranian gunboat fired five missiles at a British tanker but missed, and the vessel continued its voyage through the Strait of Hormuz unharmed, marine salvage executives said today.

The 47,989-ton Isomeria was attacked overnight shortly after it lost its escort, a British warship that had encountered technical problems and could not proceed further, said the executives, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Isomeria, owned by Shell Tankers Ltd. of the United Kingdom, was en route to Kuwait to pick up a shipment of liquefied gas when it was attacked.

"As soon as the Isomeria lost its escort, the gunboat emerged and fired the five surface-to-surface missiles in its direction," said one of the executives.

The executives said the missiles missed their target and the vessel continued its voyage without any casualties or damages.

About 200 commercial vessels have been crippled since Iraq in 1984 clamped an air and sea blockade around Iran's vital Kharg Island oil terminal.

Soviet released to join wife

PARIS (AP) — A Soviet computer expert, Vladimir Pavlenko, was reunited with his French wife Saturday after an 18-month effort to get an exit visa.

Pavlenko, 34, was greeted at the airport by his wife, Annie, a former language student at the Pushkin Institute who had a child a month ago.

Aquino appoints committee to probe protesters' deaths

By EILEEN GUERRERO
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines — President Corazon Aquino pledged justice Saturday for 12 protesters killed by marines at a march near her office, and a major leftist group planned a repeat march as a test of whether she can control the military.

She addressed a crowd of about 150,000 people in Dumaguete, in the central island of Negros.

"First of all, I would like to assure families of the victims and the entire Philippine nation that justice will be given to them," the president declared. "We will not forsake them."

A highly placed source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Saturday that former Sen. Jose Diokno resigned as chairman of the Presidential Commission on Human Rights to protest the shootings.

Mrs. Aquino said that a presidential commission set up to investigate the killings will release its findings in two weeks.

She visited Dumaguete on a one-day, four-city tour of central islands to campaign for her proposed constitution, which goes to the voters in a Feb. 2 plebiscite.

She was trying to repair the damage done by the shootings Thursday at Mendiola bridge near her Manila office, which has drawn fire on her government from both left and right.

Twelve people were killed and dozens were wounded when marines fired on about 10,000 demonstrators who tried to break through police cordons at the bridge leading to Malacanang presidential palace.

Bayan, a leftist organization which claims 2 million members, announced it would hold "an indignation march" to Malacanang Palace on Monday to "be a test of whether the government of President Corazon Aquino has control over her military."

Marcos talks about return

By The Associated Press

Ferdinand E. Marcos, acknowledging some control over his followers in the Philippines, says he is considering the option of returning to regain the Philippine presidency from Corazon Aquino but doesn't say how he would do it.

Some of Marcos' Filipino supporters in the United States, including people formerly on his staff, have said recently that they expect the 69-year-old former president to return to the Philippines before a Feb. 2 plebiscite on a new Philippine constitution.

From his exile in Honolulu, Marcos has had two recent half-hour interviews broadcast on American television. On the latest Friday night, he said returning to reclaim the presidency was "one option" he is considering.

He said on Cable News Network's "Crossfire" that because of turmoil in the Philippines, including Thursday's killing of 12 demonstrators by Philippine soldiers in a clash near the presidential palace, there may not be a plebiscite.

Black marchers face Klan

By JOHN A. BOLT
Associated Press Writer

CUMMING, Ga. — An estimated 10,000 civil rights demonstrators, led by veterans of 1960s-era protests and protected by at least 2,300 National Guardsmen and police, marched Saturday in an all-white county to protest racial intolerance.

The civil rights activists, black and white and many with children, were met by about 1,000 counterdemonstrators, some waving Confederate flags and many jeering at the marchers.

At least 14 people, four of them Klan members with weapons, were arrested before the march began, authorities in Forsyth County said.

The demonstrators began their 1 1/4-mile walk from a shopping center to the Forsyth County Courthouse at 2:06 p.m. EST behind a phalanx of sheriff's deputies and Georgia State Patrol troopers.

When they reached the courthouse at 2:40 p.m., they were greeted with chants of "Niggers go home." One white man in the crowd was seen tossing a bottle at the marchers; another person threw a stick.

The 1 1/4-mile march, originally scheduled to begin at 11 a.m., was delayed for more than three hours by the huge turnout, one of the largest civil rights demonstrations in the United States since the 1960s.

"We're not going to stop marching until there are no more Forsyths anywhere," Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said Friday.

Three thousand demonstrators who arrived early by car sang "America the Beautiful" and chanted in the 50-degree, sunny weather while they waited. About 6,500 other activists boarded 160 buses in downtown Atlanta for the 40-mile trip.

Most businesses in the county seat of about 2,800 people shut down for the day. Two helicopters from the Georgia State Highway Patrol circled above, as did two helicopters with television crews aboard. In Cumming, some Forsyth County residents tried to dissociate themselves from the violence that halted last weekend's march. Above the starting point for the march they hung a yellow banner saying, "Welcome to Forsyth County."

"I hate it," said Luther Samples, who stood in his yard along the parade route from a shopping center to the county courthouse. "I'm sorry it happened."

Onlookers shouted "Go back home" to the first marchers to arrive Saturday morning in this county which has had almost no black residents for decades. Several marchers started to respond, but were quieted by experienced demonstrators, who led classes the night before on non-violence.

Ex-Klansman David Duke, who heads the National Association for the Advancement of White People, told a crowd of several hundred counterdemonstrators that the march was the "beginning of the white civil rights movement."

He urged his followers to set an example and obey the law. About an hour later, Duke, one of his lieutenants and a third man were arrested for reckless conduct and blocking a highway. Later, a fourth man who protested the arrests was arrested himself.

Gov. Joe Frank Harris and local law enforcement officials were determined to avoid a replay of last weekend's confrontation. "This is the greatest show of force on the part of the state of Georgia in history," said Barbara Morgan, spokeswoman for Harris.

The governor sent 1,700 National Guardsmen in camouflage uniforms to surround the marchers as they moved along the route. The Guardsmen wore helmets with visors and carried 3-foot riot batons.

William Bradford Reynolds, head of the U.S. Justice Department's civil rights division, arrived to "make sure we cooperate with law enforcement and allow the march that started last weekend to finish...to not have a repeat performance."

The march came one week after a similar march by 75 blacks and whites was disrupted by about 400 Ku Klux Klan members and supporters who pelted them with rocks, bottles and mud.

Dixie folks get colder than numb well diggers

By ROGER PETERSON
Associated Press Writer

Temperatures crashed to a numbing 45 degrees below zero Saturday in northern Minnesota, freezing temperatures were reported in Florida and homeless people jammed shelters on what was the coldest day of the season for much of the eastern United States.

Winter storm watches were posted for parts of Georgia and the Carolinas as a new snow storm was expected, following the path taken last week by the big storm blamed for 37 deaths from Alabama to New England.

One homeless woman was found dead Saturday in a parking lot in downtown Baltimore, where the National Weather Service thermometer broke but the low was reported at 10 to 12 degrees.

The weather service reported the coldest official reading Saturday in the 48 contiguous states was 45 degrees below zero at Warroad, Minn., on Lake of the Woods near the Canadian border.

Embarrass, Minn., a town of 1,148 people about 60 miles north of Duluth, had a low of 42 below zero, but lifelong resident Adolph Johnson called that normal. "We just take everything in stride. We're nice, hardy people here," said Johnson, 56.

Elsewhere, lows included 16 below at Marquette, Mich.; 4 below at Chicago; 10 below at Decatur and Springfield, Ill.; 6 below at Toledo, Ohio; 13 below at Lafayette, Ind.; zero at Pittsburgh and Covington, Ky.; 27 at Jacksonville, Fla., and 24 at Tallahassee; and 25 at Huntsville, Ala. Asheville, N.C., had a record low of 7 and Beckley, W. Va., had a record at 5.

Gusty wind made it feel like 30 to 50 below zero from the Great Lakes to the central Appalachians, and wind chills between zero and 20 below were common across the Northeast.

Philadelphia International Airport continued reporting long delays for flights Saturday with only one of three runways cleared of Thursday's 10 to 15 inches of snow.

A snow emergency remained in effect in Philadelphia, allowing people to receive emergency fuel assistance. Some 900 families had called for help, the mayor's office said.

"We'll accept as many people as will come in this weekend. We're turning no one away," said Picolla Moore, a volunteer at a Salvation Army shelter in Baltimore. Extra cots were set up in the dining room and lounge areas.

No figures were available yet for New York City shelters, but 10,213 homeless people were housed Thursday night after the storm. The city agency that takes insufficient heat complaints from apartment dwellers got about 1,300 calls in 11 hours.

Reagan address tackles Iran scandal

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, battered by the Iranian arms sale scandal, will try to reassert his leadership and repair his reputation with a State of the Union address proclaiming his desire for all the facts to come out and sketching a broad agenda for his last two years in office.

However, one of Reagan's key allies, House GOP leader Bob Michel, said that "it ain't going to be that great a speech" in terms of rallying Republicans and will not answer critical questions about the secret sale of arms to Iran and the diversion of profits to Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

And Reagan's pollster, Richard Wirthlin, said, "I don't think the way he will address it (Iran) will get any headlines."

Following the tradition set in 1790 by George Washington, Reagan will report to the nation at 9 p.m. EST Tuesday in his sixth annual State of the Union Address before a joint session of Congress.

It is a nationally broadcast extravaganza featuring the president and the Congress in the cavernous chamber of the House of Representatives, with a supporting cast made up of Cabinet members, Supreme Court justices, ambassadors and other dignitaries.

It will be Reagan's first major address of the year, calculated to show him in command after surgery Jan. 5 and revelations about the Iran-Contra scheme.

"It can act as a bridge for us, to move from being so much entangled with Iran to establishing our own agenda and establishing the pace we want to carry," said a Reagan adviser, speaking privately.

For the first time in his presidency, Reagan will be facing Democratic majorities in both the Senate and House. White House aides say he will talk of cooperation rather than confrontation.

Reagan's remarks about the Iran-Contra deal will be a minor portion of the speech and offer no new information, according to aides.

Michel said: "The most pressing problem, from the standpoint of the American people, as far as the president is concerned, is 'What is it with this Iranian thing?'"

"And they're not going get (that) from him, I don't think, well I just know," said the Illinois Republican, who has been briefed on the speech. "The only thing, frankly, that's going to satisfy the American people is (to) lay out everything cold turkey for them and then let's get on with it."

He said the administration needs to clear the air on the Iran-Contra affair before it can get on with its agenda. Even so, Michel added, "it's just unrealistic to think...the president's going to say, 'We blew it and let's go on from here.'"

Wirthlin said that Reagan will "restate in a little more clear terms that, one, he takes responsibility for it (the arms sales), two, that it was a great disappointment, three, that he confirms the major goal — in his mind — opening better relations with Iran, and lastly, mistakes were made."

He said Reagan would promise to "press to find out all the facts and make what corrections are deemed necessary."

Anticipation about what Reagan will say on the subject already has stolen thunder from other likely elements of the speech, such as a new strategy for the nation's welfare system and topics such as trade problems, budget reform, opposition to new taxes and a commitment to the Gramm-Rudman budget deficit targets.

Reagan himself said in his radio speech Saturday that he will reassert his longstanding commitment to provide "steady and substantial aid" to Contra rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government.

The U.S. "national experiment" with liberty is an abiding success, the president said, adding, "Now we must extend liberty to others, providing in particular steady and substantial aid to freedom fighters in Nicaragua and elsewhere around the globe."

Reagan also said he will speak about the need to go ahead with the controversial Strategic Defense Initiative, popularly known as "Star Wars," and will announce initiatives on jobs, education and economic growth.

Aides view the speech as crucial in beginning to get Reagan's presidency back on track.

Yet, Michel said: "A month or six weeks ago I was saying, 'Well it's got to be the most important State of the Union message of his presidency,' and I hate to be saying that today because it tends to build people's expectations too high... Somehow I have a visceral feeling it ain't going to be that great a speech. I don't know what tells me that."

Jan. 28, 1986: 'The day NASA has been postponing for 25 years'

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

Christa McAuliffe came to Cape Canaveral full of excitement for the adventure she called "the ultimate field trip." No teacher, she said, had ever been more prepared for just two lessons. "I just hope everyone tunes in on Day 4 to watch the teacher teaching from space," she said.

On Day 4, with the nation in mourning, Navy men were skimming the remains of space shuttle Challenger from the Atlantic Ocean and came across a few pages of the lessons the teacher never got to teach.

And, a second grade pupil in Chevy Chase, Md., brought to school an explanation of the accident, that said: "The space shuttle exploded in the sky because there was a leak and all the space people exploded."

And, on that day, when millions of children in classrooms all over the world had planned to tune in on the flight of Challenger, they watched instead a eulogy being delivered in Houston by President Reagan, which also was a lesson.

"The future is not free," he said. "The story of all human progress is one of struggle against all odds. We learned again that this America, which Abraham Lincoln called the last, best hope of man on Earth, was built on heroism and noble sacrifice."

It was built, he said, by the likes of Dick Scobee, Mike Smith, Ellison Onizuka, Judy Resnik, Ron McNair, Greg Jarvis and Christa McAuliffe — men and women "who answered a call beyond duty, who gave more than was expected or required and who gave it little thought of worldly reward."

When the Challenger exploded after 73 seconds of flight on the morning of Jan. 28, 1986, only a few thousand people were on hand at Cape Canaveral. But around the country, schoolchildren, gathering around TV, cheered when the shuttle lifted off and did its majestic roll, then cried out in horror when it was engulfed in a fearsome white and orange fireball. Before the day was out hundreds of millions of people had seen replays of the scene.

The shock that followed the explosion was not hard to explain. To Americans, space flight was a matter-of-fact. It had been going on, after all, for a quarter century.

On the day of the accident, pioneering astronaut John Glenn himself commented: "This is the day that NASA has been postponing for 25 years."

But was it an accident? Or was it the tragic culmination of a can-do agency gone sloppy and making compromises to meet an increasingly ambitious schedule with its four-orbiter shuttle fleet?

The Rogers Commission, investigating the tragedy for President Reagan, found troubling lapses in judgment, expertise, communications and management. It called the Challenger explosion "an accident rooted in history" and said the agency had accepted growing risks "because they got away with it the last time."

The direct cause of the explosion was a leak at a joint between segments of one of two booster rockets that provide 80 percent of the power to push the orbiter into space. Superheated gases shot through that leak toward the adjacent fuel tank and triggered the conflagration.

Some NASA managers had feared for years that trouble lurked in the huge rockets. As early as 1977, an engineer at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Alabama warned superiors that the rocket designed by Morton Thiokol, Inc., was unacceptable, that two quarter-inch diameter O-rings intended to seal in the searing gases could leak under pressure.

The worst case had been on a mission almost exactly a year before Challenger's when O-ring damage occurred in both rocket boosters. A backup O-ring, the last-ditch defense against burnthrough, showed the effect of heat. That Jan. 24, 1985, liftoff had taken place when the temperature was 53 degrees at the launch site, the coldest to date.

The Challenger launch was to take place after a night when temperatures were forecast to be in the low 20s, and Thiokol engineers argued that it be postponed. One Marshall official, told about the concerns, responded "my God, Thiokol, when do you want me to launch — in April?" In the end, Thiokol bosses overruled their engineers and gave NASA the go-ahead. The Rogers Commission said Thiokol acted under pressure from NASA.

The men who made the final decision to launch say they knew none of this; not about the suspect O-rings, not about the history of leaks and not about the launch-eve argument.

But the Rogers Commission disputed that. The O-ring history, presented to the top level at NASA headquarters in August 1985, "was sufficiently detailed to require corrective action prior to the next flight," the commission said. It concluded that:

"The space shuttle's solid rocket booster problem began with the faulty design of its joint and increased as both NASA and contractor management first failed to recognize it as a problem, then failed to fix it and finally treated it as an acceptable flight risk."

The commission also determined that NASA was under too great pressure to launch and was stretching its capabilities to the limit in scheduling 15 flights for 1986.

While the space agency scrambled to satisfy nine major recommendations made by the commission, shuttle operations were stopped. The first post-Challenger flight is scheduled for Feb. 18, 1988.

The agency was shaken up. A new administrator took over to replace an acting chief who had the misfortune of being at the helm at the wrong time. A new shuttle program director — an experienced astronaut — came aboard. There were wholesale resignations and shifting of duties in the top ranks at the Marshall Space Flight Center, which deals with propulsion systems, and at Morton Thiokol, Inc., which built the boosters. The directors of the Kennedy and Marshall centers retired, and the head of the Johnson Space Center — who had approved the Challenger launch — took a leave of absence.

The spouses and children of astronauts Scobee, Onizuka, Jarvis and McAuliffe made financial settlements with the government and Morton Thiokol that are reported to be at least $1 million each. The family of Smith, having been rejected in a $15.1 million claim against the government, is free to sue if current negotiations break down. The Smith and Resnik families are still talking with the Justice Department. McNair's family is suing Morton Thiokol.

After mulling it over for six months, President Reagan agreed to a $2.8 billion replacement for Challenger. At the same time, he ordered the space agency out of the business of launching commercial satellites and said private industry should be encouraged to do so.

Two billion dollars worth of scientific programs were put on hold, including the $1 billion Hubble Space Telescope, the most ambitious scientific space project to date, and the space probes that were to have been sent in 1986 toward Jupiter and the sun.

Ten astronauts, unwilling to wait for a renewal of fewer flights, resigned from the corps or were reassigned to other duties. NASA and its contractors laid off thousands of workers.

Pete Conrad, who commanded the second mission on the moon, says NASA will learn from the accident and will be better than ever when flights resume.

"I used to tell my crewmates that I don't worry about what has gone wrong," said Conrad. "People are focusing on that and fixing it. What I worry about is what hasn't gone wrong and what hasn't been thought of."

Family separated by divorce and adoption planning reunion

BEAUMONT (AP) — Some years back, a wealthy couple adopted 8-year-old Travis Persall Jr., and folks at the orphanage near Corpus Christi where his three older brothers remained told them he'd never want for anything.

Travis Persall Jr., became James Franklin Sanders when the adoption went through 36 years ago, and he remembers having plenty of food, clothes and toys when he was growing up in his adopted home in Aransas Pass.

But the folks at the orphanage were wrong. What Sanders wanted most were the three brothers he'd left behind at Boys City, the brothers who'd been his companions until the time of his adoption.

"I guess I've lived like a ghost all these years, wondering if I had a family anymore," says the 48-year-old Sanders of Mauriceville. "I just wanted to be with my brothers, to know who I really was or that they even cared if I was alive."

He didn't know they'd been looking for him, too.

Thinking his brothers might be somewhere in Texas, Sanders contacted the Beaumont Enterprise.

Ron Seabridge, a martial arts instructor in Lumberton whose wife's family he located several years ago, read the Dec. 24 article and called Sanders.

Sanders is flying to California on Feb. 2 for his mother's 74th birthday.

"Sometimes I'd think I could remember what my mother looked like, but then I'd tell myself it was just my imagination," Sanders says. "When I called her, she called me by my nickname, 'Dumplin.' No one has called me that for years."

Sanders talked with his mother on the telephone for the first time earlier this month after Seabridge found her in a small town south of San Bernardino, Calif.

Armed with a pen, paper, road atlas and telephone, he tracked Sanders' family from Corpus Christi to Cullman, Ala., to Redlands, Calif., in five hours' time.

All he asked Sanders was the price of the 30 or so phone calls. "Putting something like this together is like putting together a jigsaw puzzle," Seabridge says. "There's that one critical piece, and when it fits, the puzzle all comes together."

The critical piece in Sanders' case was one Penny Wise in Commerce, Calif. He got her name from a woman in Cullman, Ala., whose memory had faded with the years but who believed she was Sanders' aunt.

Penny Wise, who is married to Sanders' cousin Rayburn Wise, remembered her husband telling about the days when the Persall boys stayed with him while their father, now dead, was in the army.

She remembered that Sanders' older brother had hurt his hand in an accident, she remembered the nicknames, she remembered the stories of standing in line for the boys' meat during World War II rationing days.

"I asked her, 'Is there any other thing you can tell me about the family?'" Seabridge says, smiling. "She said, 'Yeah, his mother's still alive.'"

"She told me she'd been looking for me for so long she'd given up hope of ever finding me," Sanders says of his mother, his voice cracking slightly. "I had no idea she was still alive."

"It's a good thing this happened when it did, because she has leukemia and may not be around much longer."

Two of Sanders' three brothers are dead, and family members are trying to contact the other one where he lives in Washington.

They want him to be there, too, along with the half-brothers, nieces, nephews, sisters and mother when Sanders steps from the plane Feb. 2.

Wall Street gets slippery as investors grab profits

By BILL MENEZES
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — The stock market proved itself ready, willing and more than able to revive its new year's rally, but by week's end found itself thrashing about in a volatile decline that had some analysts pointing to a long-awaited correction.

The same torrid advance that had been drawing investors off the sidelines in increasing numbers was bludgeoned at the end of the week by wide-spread profit-taking.

"This was not unexpected," said Bill Rafferty at Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. "We've had such a tremendous run it was just a matter of time before a profit-taking phase."

Indeed, through the end of trading Thursday the market as measured by the Dow Jones industrial average was up by about 13 percent since the end of 1986.

In light of the rapid rise, many Wall Streeters had expected the market to undergo a period of consolidation before making much more of an advance. A broad downturn Wednesday — in which the Dow industrials declined for the first time in 1987 — added credence to the notion the market was ripe for investors to cash in the gains made so far in 1987.

Government reports have continued showing a lethargic economy, which many analysts believe will keep money flowing into the stock market instead of alternative investments with lesser returns or other areas such as capital goods.

A weak dollar, partly a product of the weak economy, has increased the buying power of foreign investors, drawing large numbers into the stock market.

Spurring the market to new heights — and later kicking it off its pedestal — was computerized program trading, which accentuated increases in stock prices and later helped widen declines.

After posting sharp early gains on Friday, especially in the blue chips, the market was whipsawed by profit-taking that at one point plunged the Dow industrials by more than 110 points before it recovered a bit, partly on the strength of program buying.

On the week, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 24.88 points to 2,101.52, including a record 51.60-point jump on Thursday and a plunge of 44.15 points on Friday, the fourth-biggest daily drop ever.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 1.81 to 154.02. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 4.69 to 295.45.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange averaged 212.57 million shares, boosted by a record 302.39 million-share session on Friday.

Wild market goes 'insane'

NEW YORK (AP) — After roaring along in an unprecedented year-opening rally, Wall Street tripped over an awesome selloff that saw stock prices take some king-size swings before plunging on the busiest day in market history.

In a wild session Friday, stocks generally moved lower and a record 302.39 million shares changed hands on the New York Stock Exchange, shattering the 253.12 million-share volume mark set just eight days earlier. Stocks lost $30.2 billion in market value.

Analysts disagreed on whether the plunge signaled the end of the young year's torrid rally, but there was little doubt the market had sailed into a historic maelstrom.

"I've never seen a day like this in my life. It's just insane," said Robert O'Toole, manager of over-the-counter trading at Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. in New York.

"It was convulsive, to say the least," said Hildegarde Zagorski of Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

While the overall market moved lower, the blue chips gave the most spectacular show.

After jumping a record 51.60 points Thursday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials plunged 44.15 points to 2,101.52, the fourth biggest daily loss ever. But a simple recitation of the Dow's close overlooked some incredible action.

Knowledge is money

The Tax reform Act of 1986 affects us all, both personally and professionally. While the new law eliminates some tax breaks, it also provides planning opportunities.

In one of the most sweeping tax reform efforts ever, one of Congress' primary goals in passing the TRA '86 was to make the tax system simpler, fairer and more efficient. To accomplish this, the new law involves many factors for consideration. Please don't act in haste on any provisions of the TRA '86. Take time to consider alternatives with an eye to long range objectives as well as current tax savings. Review your options carefully before acting.

Lewis Meers, C.P.A.'s, can help you in your planning. We will work diligently and professionally for you in applying TRA '86 to your own particular situation with your best interest in mind. Please feel free to call us at any time for additional information on our services.

Industry + Knowledge

= Desk and Derrick

The Association of Desk and Derrick Clubs began 36 years ago as one woman's quest for knowledge about the petroleum industry. Today, the more than 7000 members in 124 Desk and Derrick Clubs throughout the United States and Canada represent a unique cross-section of the industry's finest. Fifty-eight percent of our members are in administrative roles, 17 percent are accountants and data processors, eight percent are technical/professionals, seven percent are in management positions and 10 percent are retired industry professionals. The figures support our continuing dedication and commitment to our motto: Greater Knowledge... Greater Service.

From monthly meetings with industry speakers, to field trips, to industry related functions, to our own association convention, we bring together representatives from all facets of the industry for a single purpose... education. Working with the Petroleum Extension Service at the University of Texas at Austin we have assisted in the publication of three energy-related text books and actively promote study courses of each. Through our Educational Trust Fund we continue our commitment to the industry with university scholarships provided to women majoring in a petroleum-related field.

Based on 35 years of dedication to Greater Knowledge... Greater Service... our commitment is to meet the challenge of an ever-changing industry.

'Super' week ends with yawn

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Super Hype week ended today the same way it started — with a big yawn. Nobody said or did anything controversial or outlandish. None of the players or coaches predicted scores. No feuds were started.

No accupuncture needles in quarterbacks. No QBs mooned a helicopter. No linebackers claimed an impending shutout.

Snowstorms may have hindered New York Giants fans from getting to the Super Bowl, but the team weathered the bizzard of media activity with no casualties. Even tight end Mark Bavaro reluctantly broke his silence to tell the world he didn't like being called "Rambo" any more than he enjoyed reading about himself in newspapers.

The Denver Broncos also showed up, although the oddsmakers seemed to question why. They made the AFC champions 9½-point underdogs, and in an informal survey reporters here picked the Giants by a 2½-to-1 margin.

Players on both sides ridiculed the point spread.

"I don't understand why we are such a big favorite," Giants quarterback Phil Simms said. "These guys played us very tough the last time."

"They're very confident, they've out-scored teams 66-3 in the playoffs," Broncos linebacker Tom Jackson said. "But I don't believe any team is 10 points better than us. We didn't give up a touchdown offensively to them last time. I think it will be a close game."

So does NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, who said in his report to the media on Friday that "I believe Denver has a much better chance to win than the spread indicates."

Rozelle was served with a subpoena to testify in the punitive damage phase of the case in which former San Diego Chargers owner Gene Klein sued Al Davis, owner of the Los Angeles Raiders. Klein charged that Davis caused him to suffer a heart attack and won a $5 million judgment in the suit.

The punitive phase begins Monday in San Diego.

Rozelle also said the NFL was hoping to expand, perhaps as soon as 1989.

"We would expand to two cities and go to 30 teams," he said.

As always, Rozelle handled the media with ease. So did the Giants and Broncos, although there were moments of protestation from some New York players.

Giants linebacker Lawrence Taylor originally said he would be available to the media only once, but appeared at all three press sessions. Taylor said he did so under protest after the NFL ordered him to be at the news conferences.

But Taylor was open about everything except his off-field activities.

"I have no reason to talk about my personal life," he said.

Running back Joe Morris refused to talk about football one day, then was more cooperative the rest of the week.

Bavaro, who rarely gave interviews during the season — and when he did, he stuck to one-word answers — ran away from reporters on Tuesday, which also was photo day, explaining that he just attended to have his picture taken.

He was mobbed by reporters the next two days and, for him, was effusive. He even found time to crack a joke, saying if he had known he would have to speak two straight days, he would not have used up all of his best lines on Wednesday.

His best lines turned out to be one-word answers, too.

The Broncos seemed a bit more relaxed. "Most people don't think we can win," quarterback John Elway said. "But we know what we can do as a team. We have a quiet confidence and it doesn't really matter what others say."

"We're enjoying all of this, as long as it doesn't interfere with our work."

That work, basically, has been to find the ingredients missing in the teams' earlier meeting, a 19-16 home victory for the Giants. Both clubs have used that game as an educational tool for the Super Bowl.

"It's a help because you can learn firsthand how some of their guys block and what they like to do in certain situations," Broncos All-Pro defensive end Rulon Jones said. "We also know we can play with them."

Giants' Bavaro doesn't like "Rambo" tag.

Harvesters lose an OT thriller

Sports Editor

The Pampa boys were hot on the scent of victory with a determined effort, but Lubbock Estacado used the foul line to stop the Harvesters' hunt for an 87-85 victory in an overtime thriller Friday night in McNeely Fieldhouse.

In the girls' game, Pampa's Lady Harvesters pulled away from the visiting Lady Matadors in the second half for an 81-62 win.

For the Pampa boys, it was one comeback after another against a quicker, more experienced Estacado squad. No one in the crowded gym would have ever dreamed the Harvesters would fight back and knot the score at the end of regulation time after trailing by 13 points at halftime and by a 17-point deficit after three quarters. And to top it off, the Harvesters lost top scorer and rebounder Lonnie Mills to fouls midway in the fourth quarter. Mills left with 26 points and 7 rebounds, but Dustin Miller and Derrick Ryan, who came off the bench to score 13 points, combined to take up the slack. And Estacado helped the cause when their top scorer, Ryan Davis, fouled out with 2:32 to go and the Harvesters trailing by 78-72. Davis tossed in a game-high 31 points.

Trailing 67-50 after three quarters, the Harvesters were having problems all night coping with Estacado's tenacious fullcourt press. Then, bingo! Estacado started tossing the ball away and the Harvesters scored three quick baskets — all by Miller — off three Matador miscues.

Miller, a 6-3 sophomore, whipped in an amazing 19 points in Pampa's fourth-quarter surge, giving him 23 for the game. It was Miller's nine-point spree late in the fourth quarter that pulled the Harvesters within two points, 79-77, the closest they'd been since the first quarter. Estacado's Don Walker was fouled after hitting a driving layup, but the Harvesters got a big break when he failed to convert the foul shot. Miller then cut the gap to two again (81-79) on an outside jumper with 0:47 to go.

The Harvesters got another gift when the Matadors threw the ball out of bounds on a long downcourt pass. What followed with 26 seconds to go was some wild shots and a mad scramble underneath Pampa's basket. Miller and Ryan couldn't draw iron on a pair of shots as the ball was batted around beneath the goal. The rebound landed in the hands of Miller, who put up a shot from eight feet away. The ball fell off the rim, but this time, Ryan rebounded and went up strong with the tying basket (81-all) as the buzzer sounded.

In the three-minute overtime period, Estacado drew first blood when Don Steward followed a teammate's missed shot. The Harvesters, anxious to tie the score, misfired on their three field goal attempts and started sending the Matadors to the foul line in an attempt to get the ball back. Walker hit three of four charity tosses to give the Matadors an 86-81 lead with 58 seconds left. Ryan tallied off a steal to cut the gap to 86-83 with just 11 ticks remaining, but the Harvesters were forced to foul and Ed Powell connected on one of two tries with 5 seconds to go. The Matadors gave the Harvesters a free path to the basket to keep from fouling and David Duke scored on an uncontested layup as time ran out.

Pampa drops to 3-6 in district play and 7-16 overall. Estacado is now 7-2 and 13-10. Estacado had won an earlier 69-59 decision over Pampa.

Almost overshadowed by the Pampa boys' near-upset was the strong performance of the Lady Harvesters.

"I'm glad we could bounce back like we did (after losing to Levelland 78-30 Thursday night)," said Pampa Coach Albert Nichols. "Lande Cummings was hitting the foul shots (17 of 19) tonight. That was a big difference in the game."

Cummings finished with 28 points while Yolanda Brown followed with 20. Jackie Reed also came in with double figures with 17 points.

Dustin Miller fires in two points for Pampa.

Czech wins Aussie Open

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Czechoslovakia's Hana Mandlikova used an excellent return of service and sparkling passing shots to stun defending champion Martina Navratilova 7-5, 7-6 (7-1) today and win the women final at the $1.65 million Australian Open Tennis Championships at Kooyong.

Mandlikova, who recently applied for Australian citizenship, took full advantage of Navratilova's uncharacteristically inconsistent service in snapping her 58-match winning streak and winning a second Australian Open crown. Mandlikova won for the first time in 1980.

It was a Mandlikova's first win over Navratilova in their last 10 meetings, dating back to Mandlikova's win in the 1985 U.S. Open final, and only her seventh in 30 career matches.

"Beating Martina is like beating a legend," said Mandlikova. Sweden's Stefan Edberg, the defending men's champion, tries for his second straight title Sunday when he meets Australian Pat Cash, who ousted the world's top-ranked player, Ivan Lendl, in the semifinals.

Edberg warmed up for that match by teaming with fellow Swede Anders Jarryd to win the men's doubles title today, beating Australians Peter Doohan and Laurie Warder 6-4, 6-4, 7-6 (7-3).

Navratilova, who was seeking her fourth Australian Open title, having won in 1981, 1983 and 1985, the last time the tournament was held, had problems finding any consistency with her shots.

Mandlikova exerted such pressure with an array of fine passing shots that many of Navratilova's volleys were off target.

Navratilova made 24 unforced errors to Mandlikova's nine.

"I never got my rhythm on the serve-and-volley," Navratilova said. "The whole match I was struggling."

"I could never really get my confidence going," she added. Navratilova had not dropped a set in the tournament going into the final.

Mandlikova, rated fourth in the world and the second seed in the tournament, collected $115,000 for the win.

Party over for Super Bowl visitors

Some even dislike football

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—For hundreds of Super Bowl visitors, it's time to go home. Never mind Sunday's football game. The party is over.

"Hey, this is why I drove up all the way from San Diego," said Thelma Golding, plastic saucer heaped with sushi in one hand, plastic cup with something including a lime wedge in the other.

"No," she said. "I'm not going to the game."

Her eyes, outlined in purple, darted left and right, up and down, taking in the scene. A button with a blinking red light decorated the strap of her skin-tight white dress.

"I suppose I could get a ticket and go," she said. "But I don't really like football. I'm not even going to watch it on TV. I'm going to the beach."

"How did I get a ticket to the party? None of your business."

The party, or rather The Party, was the National Football League's annual pre-game bash. For sheer excess, nothing during the Super Bowl buildup could match it, and neither could anything out of Arabian Nights.

Envision 3,500 people — probably more because "by invitation only" meant nothing — dressed to the nines, milling about beneath three connecting tents, each big enough to put Barnum and Bailey to shame, all of them wearing lapel pins blinking like bloodshot fireflies, grazing from eight block-long buffet tables and who could count how many bars, watching jugglers, dancers, makeup artists, you name it, and never out of earshot of a dozen or so bands and singers competing for the decibel record.

The theme Friday night was "Hooray for Hollywood." And man, I mean, oh, wow.

"I was born and raised in Southern California," said Jim Barnett, pouring drinks at a bar done up as a replica of the African Queen. "So I'm an avid fan of lunacy. But I've never seen anything like this."

"May I have 10 of those plastic cups?" asked a customer. "No, the white ones." She put the cups, imprinted with Super Bowl XXI, in a large sequined purse and moved on.

"I bartended at the opening of the South Coast Plaza Mall," Barnett continued. "So I've seen some big parties. But this is the ultimate.

"And," he said, motioning with his head toward a nearby stage where a belly dancer gyrated to music led by a fat mandolin player in a purple robe. "I have the best seat in the house."

No, he didn't. There were two levels of guests at this party, upper and lower crust.

The uppers wore blinking red lights on red lapel buttons rather than blue. These got them access to a special area somewhat smaller than the Rose Bowl inside a picket fence where they drank from glass, not plastic, and had a private orchestra.

The fence was patrolled by the Scarecrow, the Tin Man and the Cowardly Lion along with tuxedoed men wearing badges that said Event Staff.

Let the game begin, sports fans. And hooray for Hollywood.

Mavs wipe out Lakers 132-117

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers may be the NBA's winningest team, but five consecutive road games and the Dallas Mavericks playing at their peak proved too much to overcome Saturday.

"We caught a team that's tired and we played the best we could play," Dallas Coach Dick Motta said after his Mavericks defeated Los Angeles 132-117. "This game was good for the NBA. It didn't hurt it a bit. We probably could have beaten anyone the way we played."

Mark Aguirre scored 35 points and Brad Davis came off the bench for a season-high 21 points as the Lakers yielded a season-high point total and broke a six-game winning streak.

"Aguirre really came to play. He played really well. Davis was unbelievable. He gave us the needed lift we had to have coming off the bench," Motta said.

"Our intensity from the first to last second was the same. It's the first time I've ever seen that with a Mavericks' team," said Aguirre, who now only needs two points to join the 10,000-point club.

"I didn't know he needed two more or I would have put him back in there," Motta said.

Lakers Coach Pat Riley refused to make excuses for his team.

"We just got our tails ripped royally," Riley said. "They just blew us away. It was embarrassing. I could think of a myriad of excuses, but they just did a job on us. We just have to lick our wounds and come back on Tuesday night."

He added that "Davis gave them a big lift. He's a veteran with a lot of savvy. If you don't respect him, he will kill you."

Davis explained his performance by saying he "just got into the flow of the offense and the shots began to fall."

Aguirre scored his points in three periods and watched from the bench for all but two minutes of the fourth period as the Mavericks ran away from the Lakers.

Dallas led 102-89 at the end of the third quarter, and the Mavs built the lead to 22 points over the tiring Lakers midway of the fourth quarter.

Davis scored 11 of his points in the period in the rout, which delighted a sellout crowd of 17,007 fans.

The Lakers, now 32-9 and leaders of the Pacific Division, were led by Magic Johnson, who scored 25 points, and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who had 24.

Shockers defeated

Pampa's junior varsity cagers fell to Lubbock Estacado 79-68 Friday night.

Mark Wood and Greg Ferguson each had 16 points to lead the Shockers.

In a Saturday game, the Pampa sophomore boys lost to Canyon 58-52. Jason Garren was top scorer for Pampa with 17 points, followed by Robert Perez with 12 and Mark Aderholt with 10.

Lady Mustangs continue stampeding past opponents

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

LEFORS — Pirates coach Brent Fountain called Friday's match with McLean "The Battle For the Cellar," and his boys got out of it: 66-35.

Lefors girls' coach jokingly called his Friday game "The Highway 273 Championship" but McLean's Tigerettes pulled it off, 69-52.

Both McLean and Lefors entered Friday's game winless in boys' district play, and Fountain said he decided to put that reputation away.

Said Fountain: "I told the kids it was time to start playing ball."

And play ball they did, pounding at the bucket for offense and, for the last three quarters, preventing the Tigers from scoring in double digits. Fountain attributed the latter to a new defensive strategy.

"The kids are taking to it real well," he said.

Early action was tight for both teams as McLean's Mark McCarty pumped in eight points and Lefors' Kerbo brothers and Jami Wariner six each to end the first quarter 18-14, Lefors' lead.

Once the Pirates got that lead, they tugged at it until they led 31-21 at the half and 47-26 at third quarter.

Lefors' main tigger was Kirk Kerbo who pumped in 21 points, 18 of them from the field. Jamie Wariner posted 14 for the Pirates and Kirk's twin, Kent, added 12.

McLean's field goals brought McLean 18 points. No other Tiger was allowed to break into the double digit column, although Sid Brass came close with nine points.

Now that the Pirates are climbing out of the cellar, Fountain said they're ready to face Miami Saturday (see related story) and, with a bit more determination, Claude.

"We'll be ready if we play like we did tonight."

The McLean Tigerettes held back the Lady Pirates by pelting them with Rice — Shandee and Jem Ann Rice.

The sisters dominated McLean scoring through all four quarters, finishing with 15 for Shandee and 12 for Jem.

With that duo at the helm, McLean had little trouble gliding to a 15-9 first quarter lead. Second quarter was a scoring explosion for McLean, who machine-gunned 18 points and kept the Lady Pirates to seven. By third quarter, the lead grew to 44-26.

Then came the fourth quarter when Lefors freshman Carrie Watson decided enough was enough and slammed in 10 points.

"Lefors got hot in the fourth quarter," McLean coach Bill Wilson said. "After a while we just quit playing defense."

Watson's revival did not surprise Lefors' coach Mike Kumor.

"She's very capable of doing that," Kumor said. "In the future she can turn into a good ball player, once she realizes she can do it."

Becky Davis pulled through foul problems to contribute nine for the Lady Pirates.

CANADIAN — Wellington outdid Canadian's Wildcats, but somehow, it just didn't work.

"They out-rebounded us and out-shot us from the field," reported Canadian coach Greg Nichols.

Luckily for the Wildcats, they also out-fouled Canadian allowing them enough trips to the free-throw line to edge over Wellington, 51-50.

Canadian kept it close throughout the game.

Wildcat boys garnered higher individual scores than Wellington, thanks to Robert Cervante's 24 points and Ross Poyner's 21. The Rockets, however, had a good booster system, led by James McIntosh and Arthur Pennon with 16 each.

After what Canadian girls' coach called a "physical game," the Lady Wildcats had yet another comfortable win, 49-38.

Burns praised the aggression of Canadian's top scorer Lucinda Dunham, who pumped in 15 points.

But Burns was especially pleased with newcomer Denise Cleveland, a sophomore who hit the floor in the middle of the third quarter, scored nine points and grabbed four rebounds.

Ginger Daniels led the Rockettes with 17, followed by Margie Duncan with 10.

WHEELER — Wheeler routed Mobeetie in a pair of district games Friday night.

The Lady Mustangs, led by Marlo Hartman's 25 points, breezed to an 88-16 win over Mobeetie girls. Wheeler rolled to a 78-50 victory in the boys' game.

In the girls' game, Dawn Boedeker added 17 points to Wheeler's balanced attack, while Marcy Smith chipped in 15.

Korina Rowley led Mobeetie with 6 points.

Wheeler has a perfect 5-0 record in district play and are 18-2 overall.

Bubba Smith tossed in 22 points to lead Wheeler's scoring attack in the boys' game. Teammate Drew Thomas added 14.

Top scorer for Mobeetie was Trent Copeland with 15 while Kent McLaglin chipped in 12.

Wheeler boys are now 4-1 in the district standings and 7-4 overall.

MIAMI — The Warriors waged a three pronged afternoon assault on Lefors Saturday in a game that originally had been set for Jan. 16.

Miami upset Lefors 46-37, despite Miami coach Currie McWilliams' observation "we didn't shoot very well."

Miami led all the way, holding the Pirates 22-11 at the half.

"We tried to slow it down and be deliberate with them," McWilliams said. "But it all came out in the wash."

Head Miami washer was John Locke, who pumped in 16 points and Brett Byrum with 10.

'Mean Joe' Greene heads list of seven pro football hall candidates

By RUSTY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Defensive tackle Joe Greene, a cornerstone of the Pittsburgh Steelers' championship teams of the 1970s, heads a list of seven former NFL players selected Saturday as finalists for induction into the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Greene, who played in four Super Bowls with the Steelers, was joined by running backs John Henry Johnson and Larry Csonka, quarterback Len Dawson, center Jim Langer, wide receiver Don Maynard and guard Gene Upshaw. The inductees will be announced Tuesday.

Greene, known as "Mean Joe," spent 13 seasons with the Steelers after being selected in the first round of the 1969 NFL draft. The 6-foot-4, 260-pound lineman played in 10 Pro Bowls. He was NFL Defensive Player of the Year in both 1972 and 1974.

Johnson played 13 seasons, gaining 6,803 yards and scoring 48 touchdowns, with the San Francisco 49ers, Detroit Lions, Steelers and Houston Oilers. He ranks 15th among all-time rushing leaders.

Csonka, a 6-3, 235-pound fullback, played 11 seasons, including two stints with the Miami Dolphins and also with the New York Giants and in the World Football League. He topped the 1,000-yard mark three consecutive seasons, 1971 through 1973. Csonka was named the most valuable player in Super Bowl VIII.

Dawson quarterbacked the Kansas City Chiefs to a victory in Super Bowl IV, completing 12 of 17 passes for 142 yards and a touchdown in an upset of the Minnesota Vikings. He spent 19 seasons in pro football with the Steelers, Cleveland Browns, Chiefs and the Dallas Texans of the American Football League. Langer spent all 10 seasons of his pro career with the Miami Dolphins. He played in 141 consecutive games including 12 postseason games before a knee injury ended his career in 1979. He was named to the Pro Bowl six years in a row.

Maynard caught 663 passes for 11,834 yards and 88 touchdowns — mostly from Joe Namath — during a 15-year career with the New York Giants, New York Titans, New York Jets and St. Louis Cardinals.

Upshaw, currently the executive director of the NFL Players Association, spent 15 seasons in the pros, all with the Oakland Raiders. He started 307 consecutive preseason, regular season and postseason games, including Super Bowls II, XI and IV.

The seven were named by the Hall of Fame's Selection Committee from a list of 16 candidates chosen by the 30-member Board of Selectors.

Enshrinement of the 1987 class will take place at the Pro Football Hall of Fame here on Saturday, Aug. 8.

Foreman coming out of retirement after 10 years

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Boxing Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—George Foreman's 14-year-old daughter countered with a verbal 1-2 when the former heavyweight champion told her he was going to fight again, after being retired for 10 years.

"Daddy, are you crazy?" Michi Foreman said. "They're going to kill you."

Joan Foreman's reaction to her 38-year-old husband's plan was less severe:

"OK, but I don't want a celebrity around here." "She doesn't know, but I don't want that either," Foreman said in a telephone interview from his home at Humble, Texas.

"Fame and fortune, I've already had it," added the man who won the title from Joe Frazier in 1973 and lost it to Muhammad Ali in 1974.

Foreman laughed.

But he is dead serious about resuming a boxing career that appeared to end on March 17, 1977 when he was knocked down in the last round and lost a 12-round unanimous decision to Jim Young in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

"The first thing I decided was I was going to respect the sport, work hard and start on the bottom," Foreman said.

"It's going to take four fights to get back into the swing of things. The first time out there I'm not going to look good, but I'm going to do good. ... I'm going to win."

Bill Caplan and Don Chargin will promote Foreman — there will be no manager of record — and plan to bring him back in a scheduled 10-round bout against Bob Hitzelburger of Chicago, 10-1 with eight knockouts, Feb. 6 at Cannes, France. That fight will be followed by others in France in late February and in London on March 24; opponents have not been named.

After the loss to Young, Foreman became an evangelist, a role he doesn't intend to give up.

"I'm still at the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ (in Houston) three days a week and I still travel as an evangelist," he said.

It was a failure as a minister that, Foreman said, pointed him back toward the ring.

"I was in a gym in Houston a couple of years ago to visit my brother Roy, who trains amateurs and pros," Foreman recalled. "A woman brought a 14-year-old kid up to me and asked me to help him in boxing."

"I turned my back on him by saying if he wants to see George Foreman, he will have to come to church. I forgot that boxing was the little bridge that brought me to the doorstep of God."

About three months later, Foreman said, "the boy and a friend robbed a store. The storekeep shot the friend and the boy shot the storekeep."

Shaken, Foreman established the George Foreman Youth and Community Center in Houston and furnished it with boxing and other athletic equipment.

Foreman said he still lives on the money he made from boxing, but he has been accepting speaking engagements to raise money for the center and for a scholarship fund he established with longtime friend Barney Oldfield at the University of Nebraska.

Once, when a man passed a plate, pleading to the audience to help Foreman and the kids, the former champion said he suddenly felt like a beggar.

"So, I made a commitment never to beg again for money when I can work for it."

The job he turned to was one he once did better than anyone else in the world — professional fighting.

"It's not begging and it's not passing the hat," he said.

Last August, Foreman began training. "I did chopping and running at the ranch (in Marshall, Texas) and sparring and other things at the youth center," he said.

When he began training, Foreman weighed 325 pounds.

"I've been down to about 240 pounds, but I didn't like the way I felt," he said. "I'm going to start fighting at 250 and let it come off by itself."

The 6-foot-3 Foreman weighed 217½ pounds when he won the title from Frazier; he weighed 229 when he lost to Young.

Foreman was a fearsome sight in the ring, a malevolent glare on his face, awesome power in his fists.

After winning the gold medal at the 1968 Olympics at Mexico City, Foreman scored 34 knockouts in winning his first 37 pro fights. He then knocked down the favored Frazier six times Jan. 22, 1973 at Kingston, Jamaica, and won the undisputed heavyweight championship. Michi, the eldest of Foreman's seven children, was born 16 days before that fight.

Foreman defended the title with a first-round knockout of Joe "King" Roman on Sept. 1, 1973 in Tokyo, and with a second-round knockout over Ken Norton on March 26, 1974, in Caracas, Venezuela. His record was 40-0, with 37 knockouts. He appeared invincible.

Then, in the early morning hours of Oct. 30 at Kinshasa, Zaire, Ali knocked out Foreman in the eighth round.

Foreman fought only exhibitions in 1975, then scored four knockouts in 1976 and another in early in 1977 before losing to Young and joining the ministry.

"I never want to hit a man anymore," Foreman said in a 1981 interview.

Now he feels he has reason to hit a man again, if not in anger, at least in the often heated spirit of competition. And since he has reconciled being a minister with being a boxer, he wants to be as good a boxer as possible.

"It's going to be the hard work that's going to pay off," Foreman said. "I intend to put 110 percent into this. I've always read that you realize the fruits of your labor if you work hard."

Even daughter Michi has become a believer.

"After she saw me train," Foreman said, "she said, 'Daddy, you can win the heavyweight championship.'"

Top jockey retires at age 30 to become agent

By HARRY KING
AP Sports Writer

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — Dave Borden isn't about to be one of those jockeys who hangs on, past his prime. He's retiring at 30, healthy and coming off a good year.

He'll be hustling horses instead of riding them — a jockey turned jockey's agent — at the Oaklawn Park meeting that begins Feb. 6. His employer is his friend of the past few years, Don Howard.

Last year, they dressed next to each year at Louisiana Downs. One day Howard won four races and Borden told him, "If your agent ever retires, I want to take your book," Borden said. "I was joking, but it was kinda serious."

The opportunity came in September. Howard was on his way home from Maryland when he called Borden after midnight and offered him a job. Howard's agent, Art Smith, had decided to spend more time with his grandchildren.

"It kind of caught me by surprise," Borden said. He was recuperating from an injury and was about two weeks away from returning to the races.

"I hadn't been paying attention to what was going on," he said. "At the time, I didn't think it would be fair to myself or Donnie. I still wanted to ride. I didn't want anybody to say I had lost my heart. I wanted to win some more races before I retired."

In fact, Borden won a race in New Orleans less than two weeks ago.

Howard said Borden would encourage him in the jocks' room. "I would have a horse and he would say, 'You can win this race if you beat this one.' He had a different way of reading the (Daily Racing) Form. I always thought he would make a good agent. He knows how to talk to people, how to keep people happy."

No need to sit down and thrash out the details of the relationship, Howard said, because they believe in the same things.

"Our main deal was our honesty," he said of his partnership with Smith. "If we gave somebody a call, we honored that call no matter who came in after that and said, 'Hey, we want you to ride our horse.'"

"We've had lots of people get upset with us and say, 'We really wanted you to ride this horse,' but they respected us for that, honoring our call. Now, we have lots of people who say, 'Hey, if you can get a better horse or something better in the race, you're free to take off of this horse.'"

"I've been honest with everybody," Borden said. He told his agent: "If you give them the call, that's who we're going to ride. I don't want people getting mad or something be said."

"Sometimes it doesn't pay off right today, but it will pay off in the long run ... treating people right," Howard said. "Whether they've got one or 30 horses, we try to accommodate everybody."

"I really don't think we have to sit down and go through everything step by step. Dave's got a job to do and I've got a job to do and I'm not the type person who tells an agent what to do."

"I'm the one out on the racetrack that has to make the decisions during the race and if I'm making the decisions before the race, then I don't see the purpose of having an agent," Howard said.

Howard's ethics carry over to the track — he does his damndest to follow the trainer's instructions. "If I can follow their instructions to the best of my ability and the horse gets beat, they can't say anything," he said. "They are paying for what they anticipate to be right."

"If the horse is supposed to be on the lead and he doesn't get out of the gate good, then I feel I have to take it upon myself to salvage the race. You can become a hero but if you rush the blasted horse and use everything to get him on the lead, he's spent everything he has ..."

Howard, 26, was the fourth-leading rider at Oaklawn last year with 32 wins, 37 seconds and 41 thirds in 370 mounts.

Borden, who has ridden more than 700 winners during his career, was in the top 10 at Louisiana Downs when he was hurt last summer.

"When I started riding, I always said I would never be an old rider," Borden said. "I always said, 40 was the oldest I would ride if I got that far. I'm not obsessed with it like a lot of guys are."

"I had a good career and I was good at what I did, and I want to be remembered that way. I didn't want to go out because I was hurt, because I was overweight or because I lost my heart or anything, like that. I wanted to go out with a little class."

"If I wanted to come back next year or any other year, if something happens, I could come back," he said. "A lot of guys don't quit when they should. They'll keep riding for no reason ..."

"And damage their career more than they help it," Howard said.

Borden said he didn't miss riding when he was hurt last year in Louisiana. The same was true when he would take off for three or four months, "especially when it's raining and muddy and nasty."

On the other hand, he said, "the feeling of winning a race is like no feeling you can describe, a high you can't get from anything else. I'm sure winning a race for him will replace some of that feeling."

Middle school cagers in action

Pampa Blue outlasted Pampa Red 38-28 Thursday in an eighth-grade boys' game at the middle school gym.

The victory lifted the Blue team to a 9-3 record in all games and 4-1 in district. Pampa Red is 3-2 in district.

Pampa Blue was led in scoring by Coby Harris with 12 points, followed by Logan Hudson with 8, Quincey Williams and Steve Hawkins 4 each, Rafael Dixon, Aaron Lopez, Will Hacker, Tyson Beck and Russ Stephens 2 each.

Scoring for the Red team were Patrick Jackson 8, Justin Cross 6, Terrence Tillman 4, Steve Sanders, Wayne Cavanaugh, Clay Lyle, Guy Savage and Larry Reed 2 points each.

"There's been a lot of improvement from both teams," said Pampa Red Coach Darrell Adkins. "We played good defense. Our press forced them into several turnovers. That was the difference in the game."

Pampa Red won the eighth-grade girls' game, defeating Pampa Blue 33-26.

Pampa Red's Shelia Reed and Pampa Blue's Crystal Cook each had 10 points to lead their respective teams in scoring.

Also scoring for Pampa Red were Stephanie Moore 8, Melissa Brookshire 4, April Epperson 4, Tasha Johnson 3, Crysta West 2, and Cassie Crockett 2.

Others scoring for Pampa Blue were Tammy Childers 4, Jennifer Bailey 4, Kelly Winborne, Gia Nix, Delissa McGill, and Christy Harz 2 points each.

In seventh-grade action, Pampa Blue won over Pampa Red 39-12 in the boys' game.

Craig Kirchhoff came off the bench to score 11 points and lead

Pampa Blue in scoring. Kirchhoff also had 4 rebounds and 2 steals. Cedrick Wilbon contributed 8 points while Randy Nichols and Paul Brown added 7 points each. Brown also had 4 assists, 4 rebounds and 3 steals while Wilbon had 2 assists and 2 steals. Joe Yurich added 4 points and Donnie Medley had 2.

Chad Augustine led Pampa Red with 6 points while Jeff Young had 4 and Ryan Erwin 2.

Pampa Blue has a perfect 12-0 record while Pampa Red is 7-4.

Nekesha Ryan poured in 20 points to lead Pampa Red past

Pampa Blue 40-36 in the girls' game.

Top scorer for Pampa Blue was Shelly Vinson with 10 points.

Others scoring for the Red team were Tabitha King 8, Bridgett Mathis and Laura Williams 6 each.

Other Blue team scorers were Latonya Jeffrey with 10 points, Keri Barr 6, Jennifer Topper 6, and Lisa Jeffery 1.

In an earlier seventh-grade game, Pampa Red lost to Borger Red 39-34.

Something for Everyone

The Center's indoor racquetball court has become a popular place for Pampans to work out their frustrations.

Pampa Youth & Community Center began more than 25 years ago with a modest building housing a basketball gym, swimming pool and men and women's dressing rooms. Today the complex fitness and recreation center sprawls across an area the length of a city block and boasts a membership of approximately 1,750.

Center records belie the myth that people become more sedentary during the cold winter months. Director Lee Garcia says use of the center increases as the weather grows colder. "The colder months are some of the better months here," he explains. "People come over here for indoor recreation.

"We've got something for everyone," Garcia adds. Runners, joggers and walkers go round and round on the indoor running track built in 1979. Many others make use of the three tennis courts and new basketball gym, also built that year.

Racquetball and weight-lifting enthusiasts also have facilities at the center. Twice a year the center hosts racquetball tournaments, with one already being planned for March 15 to benefit the American Cancer Society.

The thrumming beat of music heralds aerobic classes underway throughout much of the day at the center. Classes are geared to a person's level of fitness and many of the classes are co-ed, Garcia says, so that exercising can be a family affair. And the swimming pool and swimming classes have always proved to be popular.

Perhaps the busiest time for the center is from 4 p.m. to 6 or 7 p.m. when people come to the center before going home for the day, Garcia says. But another busy time is mornings, when people use the facilities before going to work. Either way, the center is ready for them. It opens at a dawn-breaking 5:30 a.m. and closes at 10 p.m. on weekdays. Pampans often spend their lunch hours at the center, too, he adds.

Although about 1,750 people are listed on the center's membership rolls, Garcia explains that 250 of those are senior citizens who are allowed privileges at the center at no charge. About 500 memberships to the swimming pool and recreation area were given away last year to needy families, also, he says.

In addition, the center offers its facilities at no charge to the handicapped and mentally retarded of Pampa through various organizations such as the Pampa Sheltered Workshop, the director says.

MR. & MRS. M.L. MORROW
Laurie Beth Hampton

Hampton-Morrow

Laurie Beth Hampton and Marvin LeeRoy Morrow were united in marriage Dec. 27 in the Clear Lake Presbyterian Church of Houston with the Rev. Dr. Bryan J. Cannon officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W.W. Hampton of Seabrook. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Price Morrow of Bay City.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was attended by Karen Hunter of Pampa as matron of honor. Maid of honor was Julie Hampton of Galveston. Julie Estlinbaum of San Antonio was bridesmaid and Jennifer Quillin of Austin served as flower girl.

Best man was Jeff Zbranek of Bay City. Groomsmen were Brian Kinsey and Jim Morrow, both of Bay City, and Wayne Avery of Palestine.

Guests were seated by Derek Bohne of Hewitt, Dalvin Hampton of Abilene and Charlie Eidlebach of Bay City. Ringbearers were David Hunter and Matt Hunter, both of Pampa.

Special wedding music was provided by Becky Baxter who played the harp and organ. The couple were honored at a reception in Clear Lake Park following the wedding.

Members of the houseparty included Nancy Matula of San Antonio, Nancy Stewart of Lake Jackson, Glenda McDougal of Arlington, Karla Hampton and Angela Hampton, both of Abilene, Sandra Stone of San Antonio and Phyllis Morrow of Bay City.

After a wedding trip to Lake Louise, Alberta, Canada, the couple made their home in League City.

The bride is a graduate of Clear Lake High School and holds a bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering from Texas A&M University. She is employed by MATSCO-General Electric in Houston.

Morrow was graduated from Bay City High School and received a bachelor of science degree in civil engineering from Texas A&M University.

MR. & MRS. BRIAN KEITH GORDZELIK

Ashford-Gordzelik

DeLynn Ashford became the bride of Brian Keith Gordzelik in an evening wedding ceremony performed at the Lamar Full Gospel Assembly, Jan. 13, by the Rev. Gene Allen, pastor.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Ashford of Pampa. Gordzelik is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Eccles of rural Pampa.

Attending the bride as maid of honor was Julie Hamilton of Pampa. Best man was John Orr, also of Pampa.

David Harris provided special wedding music for the ceremony.

After the wedding the couple were honored with a reception in the church's fellowship hall. Following a honeymoon trip to Amarillo, the couple plan to live in College Station.

A 1986 graduate of Pampa High School, the bride is a freshman chemistry major at Texas A&M University, College Station.

Gordzelik was graduated from Pampa High School in 1986. He is a freshman pre-veterinary major at Texas A&M University and is employed by Royce Veterinary Hospital.

JACK DUPY JR. & JEANNENE FRANKS

Franks-Dupy

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Franks announce the engagement of their daughter Jeannene to Jack L. Dupy Jr.

The couple plan to exchange wedding vows on Feb. 20.

Miss Franks is a 1985 graduate of White Deer High School. She is employed by JR's in White Deer.

The prospective groom is a 1982 graduate of White Deer High School and a 1986 graduate of Panhandle Regional Law Enforcement Academy in Amarillo. He is employed by R.S.P. Investigations.

Haddox-Snow

Mrs. Joyce Haddox of Lubbock announces the engagement of her daughter Brenda to Roby Snow, son of Mr. and Mrs. H.T. Scott of Pampa.

A wedding date has been set for May 15 at St. Luke's Methodist Church in Lubbock.

Miss Haddox is employed at the Texas Tech University School of Law in Lubbock. Snow is a senior at Texas Tech University.

News Policy

1. THE PAMPA NEWS will not be responsible for photographs used in announcing weddings, engagements or anniversaries.

2. ENGAGEMENTS & WEDDINGS — Engagements will be published if the announcement is on the Lifestyles Desk at least one month before and no earlier than three months before the wedding. To have engagement or wedding news published Sunday, the information must be submitted by noon the previous Wednesday. Bridal photos and stories cannot be accepted more than a month after the wedding.

3. ANNIVERSARY ANNOUNCEMENTS — Anniversary announcements will be accepted only with celebrations of 25 years or more. Anniversary news to be published Sunday must be submitted by noon the previous Wednesday.

4. WE RESERVE the right to refuse publication of poor quality photographs. Information which appears on engagement, wedding and anniversary forms will be used at the discretion of the editor.

4-H COUNCIL MEETING

The next meeting of the Gray County 4-H Council will be at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Courthouse Annex. All council delegates and club presidents need to attend.

MARTHA COUCH IS COMING TO TOWN

On Thursday, Jan. 29, Martha Couch, area 4-H specialist, will be in Gray County to conduct training for 4-H'ers and parents.

At 7 p.m., she will present a program at the Courthouse Annex to any interested 4-H'ers and family members on Method Demonstrations.

Also, from 4 to 6 p.m. Thursday she will be available for 15 minute personal conferences with 4-H'ers on their recordbooks and how to improve them.

Our 4-H specialist doesn't get up this way very often, so I would like to encourage everyone interested in Method Demonstrations and recordbooks to take advantage of this opportunity.

BEGINNING CERAMICS PROJECT

Barbara and Gloria Holt will be starting the beginning ceramics project on Saturday, Feb. 7, at 10 a.m. at the Courthouse Annex. All interested 4-H'ers should plan to attend. All project plans, cost and supplies will be explained then.

MR. & MRS. HAROLD A. (BUCK) MUNS

Muns to celebrate 50th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. (Buck) Muns of Pampa are to be honored Saturday with a reception celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. in the First Baptist Church parlor here.

Hosts of the event are the couple's children, Mr. and Mrs. W.E. Goodwin of Silver Spring, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. Bob Muns of Pampa; Mr. and Mrs. R.S. Maynard of Clovis, N.M.; and Mr. and Mrs. R.B. Nichols of Albuquerque, N.M.

Mr. and Mrs. Muns were married on Jan. 30, 1937, at Pawhuska, Okla. They have been residents of Pampa for 25 years. Mr. Muns is retired from Getty Oil Co. Mrs. Muns is a homemaker.

The hosts invite family and friends to join in the celebration of their parents' anniversary.

Recommendations for change

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Many car makers recommend an oil change every 7,500 miles. But according to Phillips 66, mileage limits are only one factor in oil change recommendations or in selecting the right oil to meet an engine's requirements. An engine takes in 9,000 gallons of air for every gallon of gasoline used. This air is never free from abrasive dust despite air filtering. So some abrasives and dust reach cylinder walls and eventually the crankcase oil. Such contaminants are trapped and removed from a car's engine with regular oil changes.

jects were approved at the Jan. 20 meeting of the Junior Service League of Pampa. Members agreed to participate in the formation of a hospice for the Pampa area and also in an elementary school drug awareness program which uses puppets to explain the effects of drugs on the body.

Plans for the Charity Ball set for Jan. 31 were also discussed. Hostesses were Brenda Wilkerson and Margaret Haynes. A general meeting is set for 7:30 p.m., Feb. 17, in the Pampa Community Building.

Alpha Upsilon Mu

Brenda Thrasher, assisted by Diane Strickland, hosted the Jan. 12 meeting of Alpha Upsilon Mu chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority.

Members planned a couple's bowling party and decided to contribute to the Beta Sigma Phi Endowment Fund as their January service project. Members were reminded to make plans for delivering flowers in February as a Ways and Means project.

Next meeting is to be Monday in the home of Melody Baker.

Xi Beta Chi
Xi Beta Chi held their first meeting of the new year in the home of Debbie Hogan. President Debbie Middleton suggested a rush party in order to replace members the club is losing later this year. A Crazy Bridge party was planned and all possible new members were to be invited along with their husbands.

Debbie Hogan reminded members to bring used toys to the next meeting to be donated as a service project this month.

A craft idea was suggested for a ways and means project and all samples of crafts are to be brought to the next meeting. Organizations in this area that offer educational programs were discussed and will be invited to speak in the future.

Next meeting is to be at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the home of Jana Hahn.

Opti-Mrs. Club
Opti-Mrs. Club met for their January meeting at Alicia Snelgroves' home with Jan Lyle presenting a program on Scherenschnitte, or scissor cutting. Each member did a cutting to take home with them.

Next meeting is to be Feb. 3 at the Southwestern Public Service Company's Reddy Room with a food demonstration by Becky Houghton.

Pampa Art Club
Pampa Art Club met in the home of Mrs. Tommie Grant Jan. 20 for a luncheon. Next meeting is to be a demonstration of calligraphy followed by a workshop at 10:30 a.m., Feb. 3, in the Energas Flame Room. Hostesses will be Mrs. C.B. Reece and Mrs. George Newberry.

Book makes science fun

BALTIMORE (AP) — For everyone who's ever bought a child a microscope that didn't work or been stumped by a youngster's simple yet tough scientific question, help is here from two Baltimore-area authors.

Wendy Saul, an educator and her scientist husband, Alan R. Newman, have written a book offering practical advice for nurturing a child's natural interest in science and help in finding activities, toys and books to fuel that interest.

"Our first child inspired the book," Ms. Saul says. "I found that what I said to him was just as important as what I bought. My husband could talk about science but most of us don't know what to say. So, I thought a book could be helpful."

"Science Fare" is a resource book as well as an illustrated catalog that helps parents avoid costly and dangerous mistakes in their efforts to get their children interested in science.

"I want people to feel that science is something that they could become familiar with," says Ms. Saul, a teacher at the University of Maryland at Baltimore County.

Ms. Saul and Newman, a Johns Hopkins School of Public Health environmental chemist, say their two children, 8-year-old Matthew and 6-year-old Eliza, also had a hand in the book by testing the toys and projects.

The 296-page book encourages parents to work with rather than against the child's interests and provides a hands-on approach.

"If Jeremy likes to eat, experiment with baking chemistry," the book says. "If Dora is able to concentrate on two things at a time, take out a building set as she watches her regular television program."

Many parents want to introduce their children to science but are confused as to where to start or intimidated by their lack of specific knowledge, the authors say.

"I'm a Ph.D. chemist," Newman says. "I remember when my son asked about plants and rocks. I'm not knowledgeable about botany or geology. We tried to streamline the process (of getting information) and provide resources for parents."

A common mistake that parents make is to spend a lot of money on something called a "science toy" only to find out that the expensive telescope is blurry or that the child learns more from a magnifying glass than a high-power microscope, Newman says.

"Look at babies, they are natural scientists," says Newman. "They want to find out how things work and try to understand the properties of things around them."

The authors stress that parents don't have to spend a lot of money and give plenty of examples of inexpensive approaches and projects in biology, earth science, chemistry, physics, astronomy, electronics and computers.

KENNETH E. MOSS

Desk & Derrick to meet

Kenneth E. Moss of Amarillo is to speak about solutions to contract production operations at the Jan. 27 meeting of the Desk & Derrick Club, 7 p.m. in the Pampa Country Club.

Guests are welcome. Reservations may be made by calling Carla Schiffman at 665-0092 or 665-7751 after 5 p.m.

Moss is owner-manager of Moss Operating Company of Amarillo. Before forming his own company, Moss was employed as production superintendent of Pioneer Production Corporation for 13 years.

He holds a bachelor of arts degree in geology from Oklahoma City University and a masters of business administration degree from West Texas State University. He is a member of the Society of Petroleum Engineers, American Association of Petroleum Geologists, Panhandle Geological Society and the American Petroleum Institute.

Living with workaholic plays havoc with woman's social life

DEAR ABBY: I am living with a very well-to-do businessman in this rather small town. We fell in love three years ago when I lived in another area. "Cliff" finally told his wife about us and asked for a divorce because I told him I would not continue seeing him unless he promised marriage.

I'm in my mid-30s and have been divorced twice (no children). Cliff's wife moved to another town with their three teen-aged children.

To make a long story short, I have made his home into a charming, welcoming residence, but I am bored to death. Hardly anyone visits us. Cliff is not very sociable, is a workaholic and doesn't seek friends. I like people and want some kind of social life.

I suppose the local people are unfriendly to me because of the circumstances. Please don't lecture me. I need to know how to get people to accept me as a person and "us" as a couple.

I do not see marriage for us in the near future because Cliff's wife's lawyer is a shark, and a settlement may take forever. Bless you if you can help me.

BIG PROBLEM, SMALL TOWN

DEAR BIG PROBLEM: The circumstances may not be entirely responsible for your unhappy plight. An unsociable workaholic who doesn't seek friends is not apt to be sought out socially unless he's a generous giver in the community. (Is he?) There are still some big people in small towns who do not judge others, so get out and make a few friends by volunteering your services. You won't have to look far to find organizations who will welcome your help. If you and Cliff contribute enough, you will make yourselves sufficiently attractive to be accepted. Good luck.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: Can you find that letter from a person who did not like to be touched? I read it several years ago, but never saved it. Now I wish I had because it described my feelings to a "T."

I need it to show a friend of mine who thinks there must be something wrong with a person who does not like to be touched.

ONE OF THEM
DEAR ONE: Found it:

DEAR ABBY: I do not like to be touched — meaning grabbed or clutched or jabbed — even in a playful or non-threatening manner. My reaction (I naturally draw away) is taken as a rejection by some people, but I can't help it — that's just the way I am.

Am I alone or not? I am a male, age 37, if that makes a difference.

TOUCH-ME-NOT

DEAR TOUCH: You are not alone. Many people dislike being touched. They feel a certain violation of their space — and they react negatively.

DEAR ABBY: My wife has a degree in the medical field from a large, respected university, yet she thinks it's perfectly all right to allow our dog to drink out of the toilet bowl! The dog is even allowed to drink out of our swimming pool. She says it won't hurt him. This makes no sense at all to me. The pool man puts chemicals into the pool to kill the algae, so wouldn't that be harmful to our dog?

Please hurry your answer. We are having words about this. This is a second marriage for both of us, and I can't afford another divorce.

DOG TIRED

DEAR TIRED: Some dogs view toilets as humans view watering holes, and as long as the toilets are not contaminated with excessive amounts of strong disinfectants, detergents or bleaches, it won't hurt the dog. However, unless you know for certain that the water in your toilets is dog drinkable, you'd be wise to keep the lid down.

The swimming pool is another story. If the pool has been treated with a heavy dose of chemicals, your dog could get sicker than a dog.

(To get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Phoenix 'mecca' of market research

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — People who move to the greater Phoenix area from other parts of the country are boosting the area's attractiveness as a mecca for opinion research and market testing.

The area's healthy and rapidly growing opinion research and data collection industry thrives on the fact that people moving here from all over the country make it a convenient microcosm of national opinion.

What's more, such researchers say, Phoenix area people generally don't mind being interviewed, like to give an honest opinion and aren't afraid to try new things.

That helps research firms get meaningful data and more projects to do. And increasingly, manufacturing firms, service firms and non-profit organizations want such research.

Depending on what the client wants, market researchers use a variety of methods to gather information: focus groups, mall intercepts, executive surveys, site analyses, real estate feasibility studies, telephone calls, mail and door-to-door interviews, television commercial tests, demonstrations, samplings, couponing and taste tests.

Money management topic of series

Need to get on the right track financially? Then brush up on your money management skills by signing up to receive the Mastering Money Management letter series to begin Feb. 2.

Mastering Money Management letter series contains basic information about family communication about money and goal-setting, net worth statements, recordkeeping at home, the budgeting process, credit, starting and staying with a savings plan, and family spending habits.

Mastering Money Management will be mailed one letter per week for 10 weeks. You may receive the letter series for only the postage cost of $2.20. To receive the letter series, send your name, address, and postage money to the Gray County Extension Office in the Gray County Courthouse Annex before Jan. 30.

This letter series was developed by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

HOW SWEET IT IS

Q: What is the difference between fructose and sucrose? Isn't sugar still sugar in any form?

A: Both of these sugars are simple carbohydrates, sweet to the taste, and provide the same number of calories. The real difference is in the way the body utilizes them. Sucrose, or table sugar, has a much greater effect on the body's insulin level. When eaten alone, it is absorbed quickly into the system, causing a rapid elevation of the blood sugar level. Then, it is removed quickly, and the blood sugar level can drop drastically, oftentimes to a point lower than before the sugar was eaten.

Fructose, on the other hand, has a less direct effect on insulin and results in a more stable blood sugar level. One reason for this is that fructose is typically found in fruit, which takes longer to be digested and absorbed into the bloodstream than the table sugar. For some people, this means less feelings of hunger, irritability and weakness associated with a low blood sugar level. So next time you reach for a snack, choose fresh fruit instead of a candy bar.

Snow slows activities

Mother Nature shared white beauty with us and at the same time curtailed local activities in the process.

Kathryn and Dudley Steele, avid cruisers, recently returned from a Caribbean cruise. A group of more than 25 went island hopping in Hawaii and escaped the white beauty.

Faye and Claudie Gallman have been married a long time, 56 years to be exact, rather than the typo error of 65 reported last week.

Recovery wishes to Leo Braswell as he recovers at home from recent surgery and to Jerry Whitten after a bout in the hospital.

Did you know that several Pampa doctors are also musicians? Dr. Renee Grabato plays the piano and maybe the violin, Dr. Vijay Mohan the piano, organ, harmonica and guitar, and Dr. Joe Donaldson the piano?

A new, bright and smiling face at Coronado Community Hospital belongs to Cathy Bailey, an R.N. on medical floor.

Jane and John Gattis are all thrills over the recent birth of their eighth granddaughter, Teylen Jane. Proud parents are Jana and Tommy Gregory, big sisters are Miranda, Kelley and Andrea. Congratulations to all!

Be prepared to welcome Dr. Robert and Mrs. Graham around Feb. 1. They will be living in Pampa while Dr. Graham, retired, will serve as interim pastor of First Presbyterian Church. A avid cyclist, Dr. Graham will have at least one cohort in his parish in Kirk Duncan, also a dedicated cyclist. Mrs. Graham is a retired school librarian.

Congratulations to Amanda and Ricky Smith on the birth of little Jordan Thomas and to his big little sister Lindsay. Paternal grandparents are Jerry and Merly Smith; maternal grandparents, Sandra and John Stauff of Miami.

Belated birthday congratulations to Abraham Lewis, who celebrated his seven-0 birthday last week. The family celebration included house decorations, gifts, a family dinner, special birthday cake. Participants were his wife Leslie, his daughter Grazia Moser of Dallas, his son Danny and family, Jeffie, Kasia and Grayson.

Last week, Mike Ruff attended a National Tax Conference of CPAs and attorneys in Phoenix. What a busy week he had. First day home, Nancy had surgery and is recovering nicely. Recovery wishes, Nancy!

Majunta and Forrest Hills spent several days in Douglas, Ariz., visiting their daughter and family, Shannon and Jack King.

A warm Pampa "Welcome!" to Pam and J.V. Shiflett, recently of Houston. Pampa is personnel representative for Celanese, the same position she held in Houston. Pam has lived in Pennsylvania; New York state; Washington, D.C.; Memphis, Tenn.; and Houston. Her outside interests include golf, tennis, needlepoint and reading. J.V. is a courier for Federal Express. Oh, yes! They have a cocker spaniel in the family group. They became instant, enthusiastic Pampans.

Was it Ray Duncan, who was seen methodically and thoroughly cleaning snow off the canopies of a downtown store right in the middle of Saturday's snow? Not far away a young smiling lad was seen leaving the warm comfort of the family car and adding a little personal shove power to help a lady driver through a pile of snow. Some mid-snow shoppers were Margaret and Roy Sparkman, Rachel and Parks Brunley.

Do let me tell you about a newly formed group, Top O' Texas Dirt Riders Association, Inc. Membership will be limited to 50 families — no other guests — with 25 families already involved. Officers are Clint Deeds, president, Dwight Chase, vice-president, and directors Danny Strawn, Lynn Bezner, Keith Stowers. The organizational meeting was held last week. Members, composed of motorcyclists and hunters, have leased a 6,000 acre tract a few miles out of Turkey. If interested, call any of the board members. See you next week! KATIE

Remodeling woe

WASHINGTON (AP) - The path to successful home remodeling isn't always a smooth one. Now, however, if problems do arise between homeowners and contractors, they may be settled by a disinterested third party under a program called Remodelcare.

The National Council of Better Business Bureaus and the National Association of the Remodeling Industry put the pro-consumer program together.

The service is being implemented through 172 Better Business Bureaus and 55 national chapters of NARI, a trade association of more than 3,500 home improvement and remodeling contractors.

Do you manage your money so that you get your important needs and wants from it? A spending plan, sometimes called a budget, can help you save, spend, or invest money to meet your family's or your personal goals. It can help you reduce unnecessary spending. A budget, like any other plan, must be followed and periodically re-evaluated to be effective.

Because financial planning requires that time be available for money to grow, a budgeting process adopted early can mean thousands of dollars allocated toward family priorities and goals. Since family difficulties are often related to money, it can also contribute toward more satisfying and peaceful family relationships.

Clarification of values and setting of goals is the basis for directing how your money will be allocated. Have a non-critical family discussion about money. What are family members' feelings, problems, needs, and wants? Think about what you want to achieve (your goals) and in what order you wish for your goals to be achieved.

A family budget can be drawn up for any convenient time period. Generally, budgets are prepared for twelve months, by tax year, or by calendar year. If you have never budgeted before, try it out for a few months. It will get easier as you become more experienced with the process.

Next is calculating your income. Fixed regular income includes wages, salaries, social security benefits, pensions, and other benefits. Variable income may include interest, dividends, and gifts. If your income is irregular, you may need to work out the largest and smallest figures you expect to receive. These estimates can be based on previous income and realistic future prospects. For the budgeting process, you will be using net income, the amount of money available after taxes, social security, and other items have been deducted.

If you have undertaken a system for recording expenditures, take the past months and mark all the purchases which you now feel were unnecessary. If you have not been keeping records, you will need to begin to keep track of where your money goes. Be critical and check your spending closely. Until you study your actual spending habits, you may be unaware of where you tend to overspend or how you buy.

Fixed expenses include mortgage or rent payments, insurance payments, installment payments, emergency funds, and should include an amount for savings. These expenses can be calculated per paycheck period or on a monthly basis.

Flexible expenses include food, household supplies, maintenance, repair, clothing, personal, medical, and dental, recreation, transportation, utility charges and charge accounts.

If you are able to make savings a "fixed" expense, you are more likely to be able to save. If you only save what is "leftover" you may not save anything. The first agenda in savings is establishing an "emergency fund". This is a sum of money set aside and available in liquid form for those unexpected expenses that could not be planned for. Financial advisors generally recommend that the "emergency fund" be at least three times your monthly take-home pay.

GIVING THANKS
Some people like writing letters; others freeze whenever they have to pick up a pen. And just about everyone is intimidated by the prospect of writing tens, even hundreds, of wedding-gift thank you's. Here are some tips to smooth the way.

Try to write thank you's as soon as you get early gifts; it's that many less you'll have to write after the wedding. Try to do one or two notes every day—at your lunch break, after dinner. And there's no law that says that your fiancé can't write them too.

If thinking of what to say is slowing you down, follow these guidelines: First, say thank you and identify the gift. Next, say you like it, what you hope to do with it. Finally, make some reference to the wedding and the giver (i.e., glad you were there, sorry you weren't), and say thanks again.

Etiquette says that one hand holds the pen so one signature goes at the bottom. In other words, it's better to refer to your spouse and sign your own name than to say "we" and sign both names.

Actress returns with movie and book

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Until June 2, 1984, Jill Ireland was leading a comfortable, well-ordered life as the wife, frequent co-star and sometimes producer for action star Charles Bronson.

"Then I had cancer," she said. "I had a mastectomy, and I had six months of chemotherapy."

This month the London-born actress marks two important events: her return to acting after four years in The Assassination with her husband; and publication of her book for Little, Brown Co., Life Wish — a play of words on Bronson's most famous Death Wish movies.

"The book covers from my life from June 2, 1984, until the end of the year," said the 46-year-old actress. "It tells everything I did, everything I thought. It's a very frank, and — I've just been told by a young man who read it — very graphic. There's a lot of humor in it, because I can't handle anything too heavy without laughing some times. I have to laugh."

"There are a lot of stories about Charlie in the book. But basically when you're fighting cancer or you receive the news that you are suffering from a catastrophic disease, I think it's a mistake to assume that you're going to lean on your husband or wife."

"So I didn't lean on Charlie. He carried on living with me as he always has. Living with someone who loves you is always a great support. But basically, I had to go into myself for my own strength. . . . It's unfair to expect them to go through that. They're going through something themselves. . . . They need some help themselves."

After regaining her health, Ireland thought that her acting days were over. She had been approached to co-produce a new film for Bronson, My Affair With the President's Wife, and she started thinking about actresses who could play the title role. Then at a birthday party last April, Yoram Globus and Menahem Golan, who head Cannon Films, suggested that she co-star with Bronson.

In The Assassination, Ireland softened her British accent to play a U.S. president's wife who is the target for a killing. The Service agent assigned to protect her, of course, is Charles Bronson.

This marks their ninth film together. The others are: Someone Behind the Door, Hard Times, Breakout, Love and Bullets, Breakheart Pass, From Noon Till Three, Death Wish II and The Valachi Papers.

Jill Ireland started in films at the age of 12 and was dancing with the Monte Carlo Ballet at 15. She danced in her first film, Rosalinda, in 1955, then was placed under an acting contract by the Rank Company. In 1957 she married David McCallum and came to Hollywood when he starred in the television series, The Man from U.N.C.L.E.

She divorced McCallum and married Bronson in 1968, when he had climbed to starring ranks with The Magnificent Seven, The Great Escape and The Dirty Dozen. In 1983, Ireland formed her own Luleika Farm Productions and was associate producer on Murphy's Law and The Evil That Men Do.

At the Movies

Critical Condition

Today's comedy actors — somehow they elude the category of comics — present movie personas that are both engaging and self-limiting.

Chevy Chase is the self-confident klutz. Eddie Murphy is the swaggering know-it-all. Steve Martin is the maladroit hero. John Candy is the over-anxious bumbler. Rick Moranis is the classic nerd.

Richard Pryor, who preceded them all, carved out his own territory as the slightly shady but well-meaning man against a hostile world.

Successful comedy depends on surprise, and when an actor's shtick becomes overly familiar, laughter comes hard.

That may help explain why Pryor's new film, Critical Condition, is not as funny as it could be.

Pryor should not be faulted. Although considerably leaner, he performs with his customary verve, responding profanely to the indignities he encounters. It's a high-energy performance that might have succeeded in better circumstances.

He plays a hapless promoter with schemes such as an off-shore shopping mall. Seeking credit from a mobster, Pryor unwittingly sets up a police raid.

The mobster swears vengeance. To avoid going to prison, Pryor feigns insanity, and he lands in the loony bin of a decrepit city hospital in New York harbor. The place is chaotic already — then the lights go out.

The hospital administrator (Joe Mantegna) is captured by mental patients, and Pryor is released. The assistant administrator, Rachel Ticotin, mistakes him for a doctor, and Pryor assumes the role, helping her to restore a semblance of order during the blackout.

Pryor responds to each new crisis with the ingenuity of a street hustler, even saving Miss Ticotin from a psychopathic killer (Joe Dallesandro). But the action is so frenetic and predictable that his superior comedic skills are thwarted. This kind of farce requires a sure touch, and the direction of Michael Apted (The Coal Miner's Daughter) doesn't provide it.

The script by brothers Denis and John Hamill offers the intriguing situation of a faker who somehow manages to conquer great adversity.

Rachel Ticotin emerges with the best marks among the supporting cast.

The Paramount release is rated R because of the over-supply of obscene language. Running time: 99½ minutes.

Soviet conductor revives U.S. orchestra

By MARGARET HABERMAN
Associated Press Writer

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Three years after he eluded a KGB guard and slipped across the Finnish border to freedom, Soviet conductor Vahktang Jordania is thriving on the artistic independence he was denied in his homeland.

In his second season as head of the Chattanooga Symphony and Opera, Jordania no longer has to scramble for black market scores of Western composers and has been able to travel extensively as a guest conductor in Europe, Australia, Japan, Venezuela, New Zealand and South Korea.

"I had everything in my country — apartment, car, position. But I didn't have most important thing — freedom," the 44-year-old conductor said in an interview at his symphony office. "The decision (to leave) was very hard, especially for me with two kids."

Jordania has been married twice and has a 22-year-old son and a 12-year-old daughter.

The 53-year-old symphony has blossomed under the charismatic Jordania's tutelage. The budget has increased to $1.2 million from last year's $850,000, and the symphony has 14 new full-time musicians and the first sold-out season in its history.

Jordania also has made an effort to bring musicians to Chattanooga to make their American debuts, including two Bulgarian performers who sang in November in a presentation of Verdi's Requiem, the last work he conducted before he fled the Soviet Union.

He wants to mold the 72-member symphony into a regional force and eventually hopes the group will rival the nation's major orchestras. "I think this is realistic thing," he said. "But it takes time and money."

When he became a winner in

the Herbert von Karajan competition in Berlin in 1971, Jordania said he had expected to tour throughout the world. He received countless invitations to guest conduct, but was refused permission to travel to the West for the next 10 years.

His chance to leave came in 1983 when he convinced the Soviet hierarchy to let him accompany his protege, violinist Viktoria Mullova, on a concert tour of Finland. He went as her pianist even though he had not played publicly in more than 18 years.

Finland doesn't grant political asylum to Soviets, so Jordania and Mullova cajoled their KGB chaperone into going on a sight-seeing trip without them, then grabbed a few belongings, took a taxi to the nearby Swedish border and crossed through a remote, unmanned checkpoint.

Jordania abandoned a distinguished career in the Soviet Union, where he had been a guest conductor at every major orchestra and was music director of the Leningrad Radio Orchestra, the Saratov Philharmonic and the Kharkov Philharmonic. He also had been an assistant to the conductor of the Leningrad Philharmonic.

When he arrived in the United States, he spoke only a few words of English.

Congress can't resist tinkering with farm bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—As the head of the American Farm Bureau Federation sees it, the half-century track record of Congress shows lawmakers are certain to make changes soon in the Food Security Act, the 1985 farm bill that President Reagan signed into law 13 months ago.

Federation President Dean Kleckner said Wednesday that while Congress is sure to do some tinkering with the law, it will stop short of mandatory crop controls and higher supports advocated by some.

On the average, he said, Congress has changed farm law every nine months over the past 50 years.

"Congress is to farm bills what little boys are to mud puddles—they just got to wallow through," Kleckner said.

Asked about the slow recovery in U.S. farm exports after such high hopes when the 1985 law was being developed on Capitol Hill, Kleckner said the legislation, which Reagan signed in December 1985, has not had time to work.

The law included sharp reductions in federal crop supports in hopes of making U.S. commodities more competitive on the world market.

Kleckner said that perhaps many people "expected too much, too soon" from the new law. In any case, he said, the United States cannot expect to raise crop supports without foreign competitors boosting output and undercutting U.S. prices.

Another major issue for farmers is the long-standing trade dispute between the European Community and the United States over lost grain sales to Spain. Kleckner said a bitter trade war may be likely.

Kleckner said he thinks American farmers generally support Reagan's decision to impose stiff duties on imported wine, cheese and other European products if a settlement isn't reached by Jan. 30.

Kleckner told a new conference he thinks chances are "somewhat better than 50 percent" that the United States will impose the added duties and that the EC will retaliate.

"If we counter-retaliate, then we're down the road to a trade war," he said.

The Jan. 30 deadline was announced by Reagan on Dec. 30, culminating months of threats and negotiations between the two giant trading partners.

The United States wanted the EC to pay compensation for American farmers losing markets when Spain and Portugal joined the trading bloc.

Although the issue involving Portugal was settled last summer, the loss of the $400 million Spanish market for American corn and sorghum has remained a sticking point.

A meeting scheduled here Friday will include U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter and Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng meeting Willy De Clercq, the EC's external trade commissioner, and Frans Andriessen, the EC's agriculture commissioner.

Kleckner said there is still hope of settling the dispute, but he urged U.S. negotiators not to back down.

There may be room for compromise, "but I don't think it can be very much or farmers will perceive that we lost again," he said.

Kleckner disagreed with the term "retaliate" to describe the U.S. threat of higher duties if the Jan. 30 deadline is not met. The right to compensation is allowed under GATT, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, he said, and if the EC then follows with offsetting increases in its import duties, that would be retaliation.

"If they retaliate ... it will have an effect" on American farmers, Kleckner said, but could not predict how much that might be. Also, he said, there are "no winners in a trade war" and it could hurt European farmers as well as American producers.

Oregon farmer turns old buggy wheels into sculpture

By MARTI GERDES
Associated Press Writer

REDMOND, Ore. (AP)—Rodney Rosebrook's buggy wheels hang in the lobbies of the Chase Manhattan Bank, the Rockefeller Museum and the Northwest Pipeline Co. Two spent a year at the Smithsonian Institution.

The Redmond farmer, who recently turned 86, even has a New York City art agent. The New Yorker, driven to Rosebrook's property by a friend, decided the farmer's fence belonged in a midtown Manhattan gallery instead of along an Oregon highway.

The fence was a series of buggy-wheel rims welded on the inside with a jumble of antique hardware. He used coffee grinder parts, rusty flywheels, hay fork tines, branding irons, blacksmith tools and more — what Rosebrook himself terms "junk."

The art agent bought the fence and sold it back East for a tidy sum. He then signed up Rosebrook to produce individual buggy-wheel sculptures.

Rosebrook gets most of his material from auctions and estate sales east of the Cascade Range.

"Whenever anyone would sell out on the desert, why, I bought whatever was left," he explains.

He and his wife, Mabel, still go on expeditions to various ranch auctions. His purchases, however, aren't always just for his art.

"Just a little bit ago we bought quite a lot of stuff, some real good stuff," he says. "I got a well drill that's run with a horse — the horse just goes around and around. And I got a thing you hook five or six teams onto it and you run a thresh machine."

That was intended to be part of his museum. The "Old Time Museum" is exactly what its name implies: a gathering of paraphernalia primarily from the days of the early West.

Some of it is very personal to Rosebrook. He has the porcelain doll that belonged to his mother when she was a child. He displays the wooden blocks he played with as a toddler, and a pair of spurs given to his parents for him before he was born.

But most of it is just "stuff," as Rosebrook puts it: the elaborately bound cash journal that a Shinko wool shipper kept from 1904 to 1906, horse bits from all over the West and a collection of barbed wire. There are hubcaps, wrenches, sleigh bells, cobblers' tools, carpenters' tools, dance floor wax and typewriters.

Rosebrook delights in giving guided tours of the museum. He demonstrates a tobacco cutter and a manual vacuum cleaner, chopping the swept-dirt barn floor and then suctioning it back up. He points to the ceramic hot water bottle, blue-tinged canning jars from the early 1900s, a gasoline-powered clothes iron and a carnival glass insulator the size and appearance of a lamp shade.

HOW TO AVOID "GOING BROKE"

To avoid "going broke," farmers should pay particular attention to areas of financial management that frequently pose pitfalls to expanding businesses or those having cash flow problems, suggests Dr. Wayne Hayenga, economist-management with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Here are some "do's" and "don'ts" provided by the Continental Bank of Chicago, which formerly was a major agricultural lender in the Midwest, Hayenga adds. Some of the points are well worth consideration, he says.

■ Don't expand beyond your cash flow, don't incur more debt or other financial obligations than your income will handle.

■ Be certain to maintain adequate working capital, which by definition, is the difference between your current assets and current liabilities.

■ Don't invest too much capital in fixed and intermediate-term assets at the expense of current assets. Capital invested in current assets generally is more profitable than money invested in fixed assets. In addition, debts and other current obligations of the business have to be paid out of current assets, not fixed assets.

■ Give high priority to converting your sales into cash and maintaining close control of inventories. Both are current assets but you can't pay bills with either receivables or inventories. To provide current, accurate financial information, all receivables should be aged on a monthly basis. Avoid tying up too much capital in inventory in relation to inventory turnover.

■ Don't live on depreciation. A common mistake is the failure to maintain and replace assets — especially intermediate-term assets such as machinery and trucks — that are essential for business operation. Living on depreciation paints an unrealistic picture of your current asset situation and serious trouble can result when the assets have to be replaced and you find yourself short on capital.

■ Keep your lenders informed of developments that affect your growth projections. Early detection of problems can help to avert them or minimize their impact.

■ Don't liquidate current assets to finance fixed assets. While there are exceptions to this rule, they need to be tempered by circumstances.

■ Review your expansion program frequently and be willing to make changes if the situation warrants changes. You may discover that you are attempting to expand too rapidly or not be expanding rapidly enough. Your lender usually can be helpful in this situation.

GETTING YOUR NEXT PRODUCTION LOAN

More nonperforming loans, loans classified as high risk by external examiners, and increases in loan losses have changed the leading practices and policies significantly of many agricultural lenders, according to Dr. Danny A. Klinefelter, economist-management with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Most of the changes he says, relate to the following areas:

1. Need for more and better information for loan decision-making.

2. More analysis and verification of information obtained from the borrower.

3. Great emphasis on projected cash flow and demonstrated repayment ability.

4. Increased monitoring of the business performance after the loan is made.

5. Stricter adherence to loan policy guidelines.

"This means that to be successful in the loan application process, farmers and ranchers will be required to do more preparation and better planning. While many farms and ranchers may view the additional documentation as more red tape, the information needed by a lender concerning financial, marketing, and production information is even more important for the borrower to have if he is going to survive and manage his business successfully in today's economic environment," Klinefelter says.

Before visiting a lender, borrowers should learn how the lender decides whether the loan will be made and for what amount. Generally, borrowers should be prepared to answer these questions:

1. How much will you need to borrow during the year?

2. When will the money be needed?

3. What is it going to be used for?

4. How will the loan affect your financial position?

5. How will the loan be secured?

6. When will the loan be repaid?

7. How will it be repaid?

8. How will alternative possible outcomes affect repayment ability?

9. And, how will the loan be repaid if the first repayment plan fails?

Farmers have opportunity to get cropland bonuses

WASHINGTON (AP)—Farmers will have a fourth — and sweeter — opportunity to deposit highly erodible cropland in the Conservation Reserve Program during a Feb. 9-27 sign-up period, Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng says.

The sweetener is a one-time, one-year bonus that will be available to get vulnerable cropland out of production, he said. The bonuses will be paid in the form of generic certificates redeemable in surplus government-owned commodities at the rate of $2 for each bushel of normal yield on land put into the program, referred to as the CRP.

"Since a paid land diversion is in effect under the 1987 feed grain program to restrain further buildup of corn stocks, this rental payment is being offered to encourage highly erodible, excess corn acreage into long-term conservation use," Lyng said.

The bonus offer is limited to new CRP contracts beginning with the 1987 crop year, he said. It is not retroactive for corn base acreage under CRP contracts already signed. The payments will be made at the time new 1987 contracts are signed.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol
Jan. 26, 1987

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be prudent regarding the management of your resources today. Don't purchase something now that you may be able to buy a lot cheaper later. Major changes are ahead for Aquarius in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101. Be sure to include your zodiac sign.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Unless you're self-motivated today, you're not likely to express your productive potential. Use exertion instead of excuses.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Guard against doing things in a hasty manner today, especially if you're working with facts and figures. A major oversight is possible.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may have a tendency to look at life through rose-colored glasses today. This is well and good, provided you can separate reality from wishful thinking.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If an arrangement that you've worked out with an associate isn't everything you were told it would be, try to renegotiate today. The situation won't improve with time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In order to perform effectively today, it's imperative that you don't take on more than you can comfortably manage. Be aware of your limitations.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Guard against an inclination today to leave an important matter to chance. If you want it to come off properly, you'll have to monitor every step.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A decision you make today might not be based upon wisdom, but upon a desire to appease a person you like. This may not serve a useful purpose.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Treat your work seriously today, especially if your boss has given you a specific assignment. He or she will be miffed if it isn't done correctly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Self-discipline will be required today in order to live within your budget. Don't let extravagant urges gain control of your credit cards.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) What's good for you might not be equally advantageous for people with whom you'll be involved today. Consider their requirements as well.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be sure you have the facts before passing on gossip today. Someone with ulterior motives might try to use you as part of his or her broadcast network.

SIGNS & SYMBOLS

Picture signs are often used to tell you something without spelling it out in letters. In the frames provided below, draw pictures that can be used as signs or symbols for the word written beneath each frame.

happy	children	fast

COLOR CODES

Morse code is a system of dots, dashes and spaces that telegraphers once used to send messages by wire. To discover the colors to use to color this picture, use the Morse code shown.

NINE NUMBERS

The numbers in a magic square are arranged so that the sums of each row are equal. The sign language hand positions in the square indicate numbers which added together horizontally, diagonally and vertically will equal 15. Fill in the empty frames with number series that add up to 15. The second row has been done for you.

COMMUNICATION BOOKS

- The Wonderful World of Communication by Lancelot Hogben. Grs. 4-6. An illustrated history of communication from Hieroglyphics to satellites, including an excellent glossary.
- Future Communication by Harriette Abels. Grs. 3-5. Innovations in communications which may alter life in the future.
- The Code & Cipher Book by Jane Sarnoff. Grs. 3-5. Secret codes and ciphers, their history, as well as recipes for invisible ink.

A smile is a good way to communicate with others. Wearing a smile will make you and people you meet feel happier. So remember, keep smiling!

Fun Facts

1. In fingerspelling, each letter of the alphabet is represented by a different position of the fingers. Hearing impaired people use fingerspelling to spell out words. Many deaf people use both fingerspelling and another form of manual communication called sign language.
2. Every country has its own holiday symbols. In the U.S. we have a Liberty Bell for July 4, a turkey for Thanksgiving Day, a cherry branch and hatchet for George Washington's Birthday and a log cabin for Abraham Lincoln's Birthday.

3. Long ago most store owners had picture signs outside their stores. Usually the signs had words painted on them too, but even if people couldn't read the words they could tell just what was sold in each store.

4. American Indians used smoke signals to send messages. The number of puffs and spacing between them gave the message its meaning.

A Little Bit Of HUMOR

- Mary: Joe, did you hear about the man who ran over himself?
Joe: No, what happened?
Mary: No one would run to the store for him, so he ran over himself!
- Frank: What did the wall say to the other wall?
Lil: Meet you at the corner.
- Sue: What has the most letters in it?
Tom: The Post Office.
- Barber: What kind of a haircut would you like little boy?
Johnny: One like my father's with a hole in the middle.

Oil industry hopeful despite 1986 setbacks

By PHIL SHOOK
Dallas Times Herald

DALLAS (AP) — The collapse of oil prices in 1986 dealt the petroleum industry the worst blow it has suffered in at least a half century, according to the American Petroleum Institute, a trade association of major oil companies.

"No commodity in modern market history has experienced a deterioration so swiftly and of such magnitude," said William Fisher, director of Bureau of Economic Geology at the University of Texas at Austin.

Despite the dreary reviews for 1986, a year-end agreement by OPEC members to cut crude production and hike prices to $18 a barrel offers some hope for improvement in the coming year. The move, combined with heating oil demand from a severe cold wave in Europe, pushed prices Monday above $19 a barrel, the highest level in nearly a year. Prices pulled back to the $18 range in Tuesday's trading.

There also were signs major non-OPEC producers might be enlisted in the move to support oil prices.

Norway announced Tuesday that it will cut an average 80,000 barrels a day during the first half of 1987 from its production level of around 1 million barrels a day.

Norwegian Oil Minister Arne Oeien said his country intends to contribute to a stabilization of oil prices at a "reasonable" level on condition that OPEC, of which Norway is not a member, also takes effective steps in that direction.

Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Hisham Nazer also announced Tuesday that he will visit Moscow as part of a three-nation tour of oil-producing countries outside OPEC to discuss means of supporting oil prices. Nazer told the official Saudi Press Agency he would visit Egypt, the Soviet Union and Norway. He said the mandate for his trip came from Rilwanu Lukman, the president of OPEC who is also Nigeria's oil minister.

But in 1986, the damage from the 50 percent decline in oil prices was easy to track:

- Major oil companies and large independents slashed capital and exploration budgets, laid off workers and cut back all but the most cost effective drilling programs.

- Drilling activity in the United States declined to the lowest level since record keeping began.

- Offshore lease sales waned and bonuses paid to federal government decreased dramatically.

- Revenues to federal and state governments from lease rental and royalty payments and severance taxes decreased dramatically and offshore lease sales waned.

In Texas, more than 20,000 producing wells were lost since Jan. 1, 1986.

Railroad Commission Chairman Jim Nugent calls the loss "a hemorrhage that is bleeding reserves and revenues not only from industry but from the state as well."

The drop of more than 17,000 oil wells marks the first year in a decade that the number of producing oil wells has fallen. The decline of 3,000 gas wells is the second annual drop in gas wells after 13 years of increases.

The independent oil producers, those credited with finding most of the new fields and drilling 85 percent of the wells in the United States each year, are in desperate need of help on the pricing front in 1987.

The plight of the independent in 1986 was reflected in the decline in new oil and gas field exploration. Only 2,558 new field wildcats were completed during the first nine months of 1986, according to Petroleum Information, a Denver research group.

A study of 1986 third quarter results for the nation's largest oil companies shows that petroleum revenues and earnings continued the precipitous decline that began in the first quarter of the year, but the decline from the second to the third quarter was less pronounced.

According to Energy Performance Review, a Washington D.C. consulting firm, revenues of the top integrated petroleum companies were $66 billion, down 31 percent from the third quarter of 1985.

The third quarter revenues were down 7 percent from the second quarter, compared with an 18 percent drop from the first to the second quarter, indicating some positive effects from belt-tightening and budget cutting moves earlier in the year.

Earnings from continuing operations, excluding special items, were $2.34 billion, down 47 percent from the third quarter of 1985. The income of the group was down 24 percent from the second quarter, compared to a 37 percent drop from the first quarter to the second.

While the severity of the 1985-86 income decline is partly masked by the relatively strong performance of Exxon and Mobil, the two largest companies, all 13 companies reported lower year-to-year revenues for the first nine months of 1986, ranging from a 14 percent decline for Shell Oil to a 37 percent drop for Chevron.

Energy Performance reported that the sharp decline in upstream earnings was partially offset by a strong increase in downstream results.

In the third quarter, earnings from refining and marketing operations for the 13 companies were up 74 percent to 2.11 billion, and in the nine-month period they were more than doubled, to $7 billion.

Oil service companies, hurt by the reduced drilling activity and spending by producers, suffered the brunt of the 1986 oil depression.

Dresser Industries and Halliburton Co., two international oil service companies, continued belt-tightening efforts in 1986 in an effort to position themselves for better times.

The two Dallas-based companies, which compete against each other in a number of worldwide markets, combined their drilling fluids units, a combining of resources that has become prevalent in the industry as companies address the problem of overcapacity in world markets.

Sandi Haber Sweeney, industry analyst with Sanford C. Bernstein & Co. in New York, predicts a better earnings picture in 1987 for restructured companies like Dresser and Halliburton.

The outlook is based on the expectation of a 20 percent increase in worldwide drilling activity. The investment research company also predicts some help for the domestic industry spurred by an increase in the U.S. rig count to as high as 1,300 from present levels around 950.

The forecast also is based on: A rise in oil prices to $20 a barrel from current levels around $16 "as current low oil prices combined with strong U.S. economic growth raise free world oil demand growth to the 1.5 to 2 percent range."

- An incentive for major oil companies to return to projects that were previously shelved to take advantage of a one-third drop in drilling costs.

- An expectation that a $20 oil price "would double the net income of many major oil companies and allow substantial spending for drilling projects, as well as a strengthening of their balance sheets."

Hand-drawn ferry bridges the past

By GLORIA BLISS-MOORE
For The McAllen Monitor

LOS EBANOS, Texas (AP) — Still operating daily across the Rio Grande, the hand-drawn Los Ebanos ferry connects the United States and Mexico, but it also links this border area with its past.

The ferry crossing about 15 miles from Mission near the settlement of Los Ebanos, named for the nearby ebony trees. It can be reached by traveling west from Mission on U.S. 83, turning at Los Ebanos and heading south on Farm Road 886 for about three miles.

Through the years the crossing has been known by many names, including Cuevitas Crossing, Rustlers' Crossing, Smugglers' Crossing and since 1950, Los Ebanos Ferry Crossing. A hair-pin turn on the Rio Grande marks the crossing point.

According to legend, the crossing was first used during the early days of Spanish exploration; however, no documents verify this claim.

At the time of Jose Escandon's famed exploration and colonization, which took place on both sides of the Rio Grande, exploring parties charted the shallow places in the river.

A well-known "Salt Trail" extending approximately 40 to 50 miles leads from this crossing to El Sal Del Rey and was first used by Indians prior to the arrival of Spanish explorers.

Later documents record the importance of the crossing: In 1845 the U.S. Army came to Los Ebanos when Zachary Taylor's forces crossed the river during the war with Mexico; in 1874 from 40 to 50 men arrived to support Texas Rangers in pursuit of rustlers who had stolen about 500 head of cattle from the King Ranch. The expedition crossed the river and recovered the cattle, despite a battle with Mexican forces.

During prohibition days, the crossing was a convenient means to transport illegal liquor.

The ferry is propelled by the hands of two or more ferrymen on duty seven days a week during crossing hours.
