Reagan to 'clear' doubts

By W. DALE NELSON Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - President Reagan, facing public questioning for the first time on the Iran-Contra affair, says he hopes "to be able to clear all that up" when he meets reporters

The president, posing for pictures with a group of senators Wednesday, declined to answer most questions from reporters, saying with a grin, "Then I won't have anything to surprise you with tomorrow night.

A reporter got a response from him, however, by asking about a story in The New York Times quoting U.S. and other sources as saying several million dollars in profits from Iran arms sales were paid to an Iranian group that financed the kidnappers of Americans in Lebanon.

"I'm not supposed to answer any questions here, but I will answer that one," Reagan said. "As I've been saying for a considerable period of time, I am waiting for all the investigations to bring out the truth of what did happen there because I don't know any more than I've already told you.

"Tomorrow night, I'm hoping to be able to clear all that up," he said.

The news conference is scheduled for 7 p.m. in the White House East Room and will be broadcast live by ABC, CBS, NBC and the Cable News Network.

Reagan's last news conference was Nov. 19, after he had acknowledged secret arms sales to Iran, but before reports surfaced that some of the money had been diverted to assist rebels fighting the leftist government of Nicaragua

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, asked Wednesday if he thought this would be Reagan's toughest news conference, said,

"No. I don't think so. . . There were lots of other ones that were tougher.'

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas, on the other hand, said, "It's very important to him. I think he needs to demonstrate that he's the dominant political force in the nation's capital, as he is. I think he needs to respond to the questions, as he will.

The assistant Republican leader of the Senate, Alan Simpson of Wyoming, said following the White House meeting Wednesday that the president was "ready to be absolutely forthcoming with everything he knows.

Simpson also told reporters, however, the president had indicated "there is no real honest way for him to respond at this time to any questions about Iran-Contra, no matter how much you would like to set that agenda.'

Fitzwater has predicted 95 percent of the questions will be on the Iran-Contra affair.

Reagan shares a laugh at the White House Wednesday with Sen. Bob Dole, left and Sen. Alan Simpson.

Higher speed limit proposal slams into wall of first turn

By ALAN FRAM

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 65 mph speed limit for many rural highways and an $88.6 billion highway bill, both approved by the House, face a minor hurdle in the Senate but a possible brick wall at the

The House approved a measure Wednesday that would allow states to increase speed limits to 65 mph on interstate highways outside urban areas with populations of at least 50,000.

The 217-206 vote was seen as the final meaningful congressional test of the speed limit proposal because the Senate has gone on record repeatedly as overwhelmingly favoring it

That tally came shortly after the lawmakers passed, 407-17, the highway measure, which will distribute assistance to states and communities for road and bridge projects and for mass transit

"I think people realized the troops out in the rural areas of our country weren't abiding by the law," Rep. Kenneth Gray, D-Ill., an active supporter of the 65 mph proposal, said after the vote. "The American people have spoken.

The measures were expected to be passed and combined into one package by the Senate as early

But a note of warning was coming from the Reagan administration, which for months has said the spending levels of the highway bill would invite a veto.

'A veto will be recommended by the Department of Transportation," said H. Joseph Rhodes, See SPEED, Page 2

Texas delegation says let 'er rip, put the pedal to the metal

WASHINGTON (AP) - All but three of the 27member Texas congressional delegation voted to give states the right to raise the speed limit on rural stretches of interstate highways from 55 mph

Rep. Beau Boulter of Amarillo said that driving along rural highways in Texas is a lot different from driving in other parts of the country, and states should be allowed to make speed limits to

'Let me remind some of my colleagues from urban and city areas, rural Texas bears few similarities to downtown Manhattan," said the Panhandle Republican. "More vehicles cross the 14th Street bridge here in Washington in an hour than make the drive between Amarillo and Wichita Falls in my district in a month.

Boulter was among several Texas lawmakers who spoke in support of a provision tied to an $88.6 billion highway bill to raise the speed limit on rural interstates from 55 mph to 65 mph.

Tom Delay, R-Sugar Land, questioned the importance of the 55 mph law in saving lives.

"I don't know of too many people that drive 55," said Delay. "Most people drive at a speed they're comfortable at and that's 65 mph. You're making criminals out of our people.'

Martin Frost, D-Dallas, was one of those who voted for the 55 mph law "because I think it has saved lives and brought about energy conserva-

The other Texas congressmen who opposed the change were Mickey Leland and Mike Andrews, both Houston Democrats.

Deaver indicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House aide Michael K. Deaver says he is innocent of perjury charges contained in an indictment that gives new details on his use of government connections to lobby for corporate and foreign clients.

The former deputy chief of staff faces up to 25 years in prison if convicted of five counts of lying about his lobbying activities to Congress and to the federal grand jury that indicted him Wednesday.

A longtime friend of President Reagan and wife Nancy, Deaver professed his innocence to reporters as the president issued a public statement wishing him well.

The indictment alleged, among other things, that Deaver lied to a federal grand jury when he denied contacting anyone in the got after leaving the White House in May 1985

According to the indictment, Deaver contacted "Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Dole in tion with TWA's efforts to block or delay a bid by Carl Icahn to gain control of TWA."

The charges said Deaver also contacted Dole's deputy and a White House official on the same matter.

The indictment said Deaver made the contacts "in an attempt to involve the Cabinet Council on Economic Policy in blocking or delaying the Icahn takeover Deaver had testified to the grand jury that "I don't recall any government contact I made on behalf of TWA.

Balloting begins on golf course referendum

Although no polling places have been found yet, absentee voters have already begun to tee off in an election called to determine whether Gray County taxpayers want to help build a public golf

Gray County Clerk Wanda Carter said Wednesday that she received ballots for the April 4 referendum late Monday and began accepting absentee votes Tuesday.

Carter said absentee voting will continue through March 31 in her office at the courthouse. The clerk's office is open from 8:30 a.m. until noon and from 1 to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Twenty-two absentee votes had been cast by late Wednesday afternoon, Carter said.

The non-binding referendum will determine whether county taxpayers want to spend $300,000 and use county equipment and labor to contract with the city of Pampa for a public golf course.

IRS clerk charged with theft

AUSTIN (AP) — A mail clerk at the Internal Revenue Service's regional processing center allegedly took 166 completed income tax returns in hopes of stealing checks from the envelopes, police

Mark Anthony Hancock, 20, of San Marcos was charged Wednesday with theft of public property. He was held in lieu of $20,000 bond at the Federal Correctional Institution in Bastrop.

Police arrested Hancock Tuesday while searching for a man who, minutes before, had robbed a Pizza Hut. Although he fit the general description of the suspect, police later determined Hancock was not involved in the robbery.

Hancock was carrying a gym bag that contained 32 individual tax returns in opened envelopes addressed to the IRS Service Center. The tax returns, with W-2 forms attached, were mailed by individuals in Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas.

IRS investigators later searched Hancock's residence and found 134 tax returns, according to federal court documents. Hancock admitted to taking the tax returns from the Austin IRS Service Center with the intent to steal checks, court documents said.

Company submits AIDS vaccine

NEW YORK (AP) — Bristol-Myers Co. plans to seek government approval this month for human tests of an AIDS vaccine that appeared to be partially effective on chimpanzees, a spokesman said

Bristol-Myers stock climbed 4% to 107 on Wednesday after the plan was disclosed.

Jerry Parrott, a spokesman for the nation's third-largest pharmaceutical company, said its Oncogen subsidiary, based in Seattle, would ask the Food and Drug Administration to allow it to test the vaccine on humans.

This is a normal part of the process, and there's a lot of work ahead before we decide if we want to make a new drug application," he said.

Scientists at Oncogen have used genetic engineering to manipulate vaccinia virus so that it manufactures two surface proteins from the AIDS virus — GP-110 and GP-41. In humans, according to theory, the proteins would stimulate the body to produce antibodies

Dr. George J. Todaro, Oncogen's scientific director, said the chimpanzee experiments had been encouraging. According to the Chicago Tribune, some chimps became infected even after receiving the vaccine, but the infections were fewer than those in a control group.

A number of other companies around the world are testing potential AIDS vaccines.

special assistant to the chief of the Federal Highway Administration.

The main problem, he said, was a provision that would provide $890 million in federal assistance in addition to the money distributed to states under aid formulas — to help pay for about 120 so-called demonstration projects. These road and bridge projects were sought by representatives and senators for their home districts and states.

Administration officials also have said the measure would spend too much money for mass

Most lawmakers were cautious in evaluating their chances of mustering a two-thirds vote in each chamber to override a veto.

"I'm as big a Ronald Reagan supporter as there is," said Rep. James Hansen, R-Utah, a prime supporter of the faster speed. "But if he vetoes it, I'm overriding it."

Added Sen. Steven Symms, R-Idaho, author of the higher speed limit provision, "I see that as a problem, and I hope when we get this finalized, they'll take a careful analysis of it before they decide to veto it."

Rep. James Howard, D-N.J., the leading opponent of the 65 mph measure but a top advocate of the highway bill, was more optimistic.

"I've been here 23 years," he said. "Every highway bill has been threatened by a veto, and none to my knowledge has ever been vetoed.

ouse committee looks for state budget cuts

AUSTIN (AP) — The House Appropriations Committee is working on a mission that Speaker Gib Lewis says borders on the impossible: whittling down the budget without hurting too much or too

The prospect had Lewis speculating Wednesday about a broader sales tax base, a state lottery and a state income tax. He said the sales tax expansion would help, but probably has little chance of winning approval this year. The lottery would help, he said, but not enough.

And, although he remains opposed to an income tax, Lewis conceded he is feeling the pressure of the state budget crunch.

About $2.9 billion of that difference could be covered by a tax bill that has been approved in the House and is awaiting Senate action.

"I think everything gets nailed," he said when asked where the cuts would be felt. "I don't think anyone escapes the ax, to tell you the truth.

Appropriations Chairman Jim Rudd, asked the same question, said, "Ask me in about two weeks and I'll give you the impact."

Rudd, D-Brownfield, said it would take 7 percent spending cuts in all state agencies to meet the revenue projection and give the criminal justice system and Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation the money needed to meet court-

Lewis predicted the appropriations committee, which is working with recommendations forwarded by other House committees, will be able to cut the shortfall between $1 billion and $1.5 billion.

At that point, attention would turn to Gov. Bill Clements, who has vowed to veto any tax bill other. than the $2.9 billion extension of the temporary sales and motor fuels tax rates now in effect.

"I think we can sit down and identify those areas; with him and let him consider their importance,' Lewis said of the spending above projected revenue. "Possibly he'll be willing to say, 'Yes, we' are going to have to have it.""

But, so far, Clements is still very firm in his veto threat, according to Lewis.

Death row inmate gets

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A Texas death row inmate says court officials will have to gag him to keep him from testifying in the new trial he was granted after spending 101/2 years awaiting execu-

Billy Hughes, among the longest-serving convicts awaiting death in Texas, won a new trial Wednesday when the state Court of Criminal Appeals threw out his conviction for killing a state trooper in 1976.

"There is no way I could have done what they say I did," said Hughes, who did not testify at his trial but insisted he would take the stand this time.

"They'll have to gag me, chain me, cut my throat to keep me quiet," he said. "They're not going to gag me again. I was not given the opportunity to defend myself. A lot of things are going to be different.

The appeals court ordered a new trial because a potential juror in the case was dismissed after expressing concerns about how the death penalty might influence his judgment in the case.

"If there weren't so many people here, I'd be doing cart-wheels," Hughes, said as he learned of the reversal during interviews with reporters outside death row. "I am so happy for my people - my mom and dad. It's been eating at the family for so many years.

Hughes, a native of Montgomery, Ala., ranks 14th in seniority among the 250 people on Texas' death row. He is the second longcondemned man to be granted a new trial within a week

Excell White, whose 121/2 years awaiting execution makes him the dean of death row, won a new trial last week.

Pampa High School teachers were treated to a breakfast Wednesday by the local National Guard unit in appreciation for their efforts to keep students in school until graduation.

'You're the ones who trained our students, educated them," said Sgt. Richard Weir, National Guard recruiter, at the breakfast held in the Starlight Room at Coronado Inn.

Sgt. Weir said the guard insists its members must be educated to handle the technological skills involved in the unit's operations. He said the guard is also trying to keep students in class, especially those who enroll in the guard before graduation.

Thanking the teachers for their efforts in educating students, Weir noted the guard wants students to stay in school and achieve their civilian goals. The guard sponsors three free workshops to help students: Career planning, a funding workshop for financial aid exploration and a leadership workshop to help students fulfill their current and future Principal Oran Chappell said that when he first

He said working with students takes discipline, authority, trust and love. He said authority must be both gentle and firm and demands respect while giving respect. He praised local teachers for working with students needing encouragement and understanding to remain in school.

Newly hired Supt. Harry Griffith spoke briefly, telling the teachers that "everything we do is going to be to support you.'

Griffith said he believes "caring and dignity with students is really important" in helping them remain in school. "The success of every child in your classrooms is what it's all about — not just a few, but everyone."

PHS vocational teacher Larry Kilbreth, who was a dropout at age 13 but who has since earned his master's degree, said, "We need to respect students where they are now, not where we expect them to be." He added that students should each be treated "how we would like to be treated," adding that each student is an unique individual Another vocational teacher, Debra Rothenberger, noted that "we work with a very special group of people" who require attention to help them reach their potential.

nents of a shelter for Central American refugees have renewed their battle to keep Casa Oscar Romero out of Cameron County

A petition filed in state district court alleges the Roman Catholic Diocese of Brownsville is violating federal immigration law by harboring illegal aliens.

The petition, filed Tuesday, amends an earlier lawsuit. "We're asking the state district

Casa Romero is under orders to move from its home in San Benito and is paying a $100-a-daypenalty for missing a deadline last year to leave.

The four businessmen who filed Tuesday's lawsuit won a temporary injunction in January from state District Judge Darrell Hester prohibiting Casa Romero from locating at a site east of Brownsville without a mobile home park permit.

The diocese had planned to house the aliens in mobile homes on the six-acre tract

Rather than appeal Hester's ruling, the diocese in February obtained county building permits to construct a dormitory and kitchen at the same location.

Nothing like respect for the law

Off Beat

It was a warm day, harbinger of warmer days yet to come - and about time! So when a friend asked me to go riding with him in his new pickup, I accepted the offer. He jumped in the cab and started the motor as I buckled up. He left his seatbelt untouched.

As we headed out into the countryside, the radio newscast was carrying an account of some college students breaking a window in a science building in some kind of protest.

"Damn college kids," my friend muttered. "They just don't have the proper respect for law and order anymore."

Finding today's protests rather mute compared to the tumult of the '60s, I tried to tell him that one window wasn't much compared to the burning and bombing of buildings I remembered watching on TV two decades ago.

"Doesn't matter," he said as he neared a stop sign, threw the shift into second and coasted around the corner without putting on his turnsignal light and without his truck wheels ceasing any revolutions. "Disrespect for law is still disrespect, whether it's one window or a whole building.

As we drove out on the loop, he continued his complaints about young people, munching on a Snickers and sipping from his large cup with a cherry lime drink in it.

"It comes from watching too much TV and seeing too many Rambo movies," he began. "And that Eddie Murphy! Everyone taking the law into their own hands, laughing at authority, blowing people and things up just to entertain the cheering kids. And those Police Academy films making fun of cops! John Wayne wouldn't have made one of those dumb shows.

He finished his candy bar and drink, tossing the wrapper and cup out the window to blow over into some farmer's field. He continued talking, getting worked up. His foot pressed harder on the pedal and the speedometer passed 55, nearing 70.

"And the younger kids are just as bad. Look at them speeding away from high school during the lunch hour. And lining the drag as they sit on their cars and drink their beer and stuff. At least in my days, we kept the bottles inside the car.

We hit the intersection with Hwy. 70. He was starting to coast through but then slammed on the brakes and actually stopped — there was a car passing by on the highway

"I need to stop off at the mall before we do some more driving," he said. And then resumed his tirade against disobedient youth as we turned

"Somebody needs to give these kids a good talking to," he declared. "My mom and pop didn't put up with any lip from me. If I had had a cop call them and tell them I had been picked up for something, my bottom would have been stinging for

He turned into the mall parking lot, again without signaling, and barreled down the center lane, parking against the curb as he ignored the "No Parking" sign.

We went in and he picked up some cash from one of the store managers. As we headed back to the pickup, he said, "I did some repair work for one of the guys. Picked up some good cash that Uncle Sam won't hear about," he said as he placed the money in his wallet.

As we headed north again out into the country, the speedometer again creeping upwards beyond the red line at 55, he said, "I just don't see how our kids get such ideas about not obeying the laws. Especially those living in this area. Most of us here in the Panhandle have nothing but respect for law and order."

He tossed his still-lit cigarette butt out the

Perhaps advocates could shelter bums

Actor Martin Sheen, a handful of other actors, and a half-dozen congressmen, including the young Joe Kennedy, bundled up in sweaters and sleeping bags recently and spent the night on two steam grates outside the Library of Congress. It was all to dramatize the plight of the homeless and stir up support for a new handout: Another $500 million for the federal government to fritter away in yet another symbolic display of phony compassion.

Even advocates of this legislation admit it will do little to alleviate homelessness. It will allocate $100 million for emergency shelter programs, $100 million to house homeless families through rent subsidies, $100 million to rehabilitate surplus government property into shelters and $70 million for emergency food

If the Salvation Army and various skid-row ministries were coming into a $500 million windfall, help would get to homelss people quickly. But we're talking about the federal government, which has spent billions over the years only to make poverty more hopeless. Rent subsidies are expected to help only 1,300 people nationwide. Surplus government properties are mostly military installations in the boonies, far from where most homeless people are. The vast bulk of this money will go to upper-middle class bureaucrats to administer programs to badger the poor.

We've never thought of Martin Sheen as a rigorous philosophical thinker, but those who makes assertions about rights should think first. Sheen, speaking on behalf of the homeless (by whose authority is unclear) claimed: "They demand that here and now. . .that basic shelter be recognized as an absolute and basic Never mind that "basic shelter" is not definded, making the statement incoherent. Presuming it could be defined, is it a human right?

Shelter does not fit into this category. Except in a few tropical climates, shelter requires conscious effort and manipulation of the environment. It is not free. It is coherent to say one has the right to work and strive for shelter and other necessities. But one doesn't have the right to have them without working or

Sheen and many others seem to have confused "right" with "privilege bestowed by government." But government is not some magical institution that can conjure benefits and privileges out of the air. It is a human institution that has nothing except what it takes by force or the threat of force from others who have worked for what they have — that is, by violation of their real rights.

We'll credit the compassion of self-styled advocates for the homeless when they concentrate more on setting an example (opening their own homes to poor people?) and inspiring individual effort than using the issue to expand the power and scope of government. If they really want to help further, they would seek to dismantle government programs and policies that drive up the cost and reduce the variety of housing.

Permit states' experiments

WASHINGTON - The nation will be hearing a great deal about the theory of federalism in this bicentennial year of the Constitution. For a specific example of the theory in action, consider Michigan's trailbreaking program called MET. It merits a round of applause.

MET stands for Michigan Education Trust. It is exactly the kind of experimental program the founding fathers had in mind when they wrote the 10th Amendment into the Bill of Rights in 1791. Because of this program, conceived by Gov. James J. Blanchard, thousands of Michigan children eventually will be assured of a

The principle of federalism is one of the two great rocks upon which the Constitution was founded. (The other is the principle of separation of powers, but that doesn't apply in this instance.) Under the Constitution, certain powers were to be delegated to the national government, but all other powers not prohibited to the states by the Constitution were to be reserved "to the states respectively, or to the people."

In this as in other provisions, the framers of the Constitution sought to limit the possibilities for abuse of power. If Delaware wanted to try some experimental program, and the program didn't work, neighboring Pennsylvania would not be affected. If the program did work, maybe Pennsylvania would want to emulate Delaware's example. The states would function as independent laboratories, fashioning public policies according to the needs of their citizens.

All of which brings us back to the Michigan separate pension fund. Over the past five years Education Trust, signed into law last December. Under this plan, the state guarantees a child's tuition for four years of future education at any state-owned institution of higher learning. Parents of a newborn child could obtain this guarantee with a deposit to the trust fund of as little as $3,000. Parents of teen-agers would have to make larger deposits because their children would be going to college much sooner.

The program covers the University of Michigan and 14 other four-year colleges. Children also would have the option of choosing one of the state's 29 two-year schools. If a participating high school graduate chose instead to attend a private college or university or an out-of-state institution, the fund would pay for four years of tuition based upon a weighted average of instate tuition fees.

Because the MET is waiting upon a critical ruling from the Internal Revenue Service, no contracts yet have been signed. If the IRS rules that interest on the deposits will be tax exempt at pay-out time, the program will plunge ahead this summer. If a ruling goes the other way, some amendments may be necessary. Meanwhile, the state treasurer's office reports that an estimated 10,000 inquiries have been recieved from parents or grandparents of prospective students. More than 40 states have asked for copies of the MET act

The state is taking some calculated risks with its novel plan for the higher education trust fund. The state has done well with its wholly it has averaged a rate of return of nearly 19 percent. Even so, money managers have no precise way of predicting future rates of return.

Neither can the tuition fees be forecast. During prolonged debate on Blanchard's bill, warnings were heard that by 2000, if inflation gets out of hand, tuition at Michigan State might reach $20,000 a year. It is conceivable that a couple of decades down the road, the state's general fund would have to be tapped in order to supplement the MET. In any event, once a child is signed up, the state is committed to provide the future ser-

The idea of tuition guarantees was originated at Duquesne University in Pittsburgh two years ago. Since then more than 500 families have made deposits to the university's trust fund. Other private institutions have instituted different versions of the Duquesne idea.

Among the state governments, Michigan is the pioneer - and to return to the theory of federalism, this is how the theory is supposed to work. If MET succeeds, as state officials are confident it will succeed, other states may profit from Michigan's happy experience. If MET flops, and turns out to be a heavy burden on the state treasury in future years, no other state will suffer from the disappointment.

Such powers of public experiment are reserved to the states "respectively." That's what the founding fathers provided. It was a good idea in 1791, and remains a good idea today.

Reagan's new work habits

WASHINGTON — Aides to President Reagan wasted little time in making certain changes in the president's schedule and work habits in order to make him a "hands-on" president.

Reagan promised the nation he would get more involved in his job during his television address last week in order to avoid another embarrassing mess like the Iran arms sale

"The first thing we're going to do," a White House source told me, "is change the president's sleeping habits.

I asked for specifics. 'Previously,' the source explained, "the president has arisen at 11 a.m. in time to watch The Price Is Right,' his favorite game show, as he drinks his coffee and eats his daily ration of

'So," I asked, "the president has been going to work when 'The Price Is Right' is over?' 'Not the very moment the show is over," explained my source."He has to give the prunes a fair amount of time to do their job.' So what time has the president previously begun his work day?

"Around 1:30 p.m.," I was told. "That's when he reviews the daily press.

That obviously takes him a lot of time," I said. "He's got to read the Times, the Washington Post, and The Wall Street Journal.'

'Not exactly," said my source. "Usually he takes about 15 minutes to glance through USA Today. The articles are short enough he can read them and not doze off.'

What, then, I wanted to know, will be the president's new schedule?

'We're planning to have him dress by 10 a.m., get the prune business out of the way as soon as possible, and have him actually functioning by

'He can watch 'The Price Is Right' in the Oval Office while he returns phone calls from people who want to know if he will introduce them to Fawn Hall. But when will the president actually get involved in taking care of the nation's business?"

'Not until around 2:30 p.m.," my source said.

"That's when he will be getting up from his afternoon nap now. Before we didn't dare rouse him until 4 p.m., in time to watch 'The Dating

"There's a reason," said my White House insider. "The president doesn't stay up late enough to watch 'The Wheel of Fortune,' and he likes to look at the bachelorettes to make up for not getting to see Vanna White. "You mentioned something about changing the president's work habits," I went on.

"Lots of changes," the source answered. "We are going to insist the president keep notes and not doodle on his pad during Cabinet meetings. We are also going to ask that he no longer allow his wife to make tough decisions for him.'

"The first lady has been making the president's tough decisions?"

"Six years of it," said my source. "The president gets in a tight spot and you can hear him screaming from the Oval Office all over the White House.

"Screaming what?"

Nuclear evacuation plan shows ignorance

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) - Consider the unique problems involved in conducting an emergency evacuation of the people living around New York's Shoreham nuclear power plant in the event of an accident that produces radioactive releases:

Shoreham is located on Long Island, which is surrounded by water on the north, south and east. Only the west remains as an emergency evacuation option, but panicked people fleeing in that direction would be heading directly for densely populated New York City.

State and local government officials in New York logically claim that there is no realistic means of dispersing the populace to minimize adverse health effects in the event of a serious accident at Shoreham.

But that logic doesn't satisfy officials at the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, the federal agency that is supposed to protect the public against the potential dangers posed by nuclear technology.

Following the 1979 accident at the Three Mile Island generating station in Pennsylvania, the NRC adopted a regulation requiring all nuclear power plants to develop a plan that could, in the event of an emergency, evacuate everybody living within a 10-mile radius. Now the NRC is, in effect, about to abandon that rule

The NRC rule specifically requires that the evacuation plan be implemented by the utility operating the power plant in conjunction with state and local police, fire and civil defense

Because the rule presumes that there always will be some form of workable plan, the NRC insists that state and local public officials participate in evacuation exercises, regardless of their practicality.

The Long Island Lighting Co., which owns Shoreham, has a plan that relies exclusively upon meter readers, linemen and other utility employees to conduct evacuations - but that approach certainly isn't realistic.

A similar situation has developed in New England, involving the Seabrook generating station in southeastern New Hampshire, two miles north of the Massachusetts border.

As at Shoreham, construction at Seabrook has been completed but operation cannot legally begin until the emergency evacuation plan has been formulated, tested and approved.

As in New York, public officials in Massachusetts insist that their participation in the development and implementation of such a plan would be meaningless because effective evacuation is impossible

The consortium of utility companies that owns Seabrook has audaciously argued that because the probability of a serious accident occurring is so low, evacuation there need be planned only within a one-mile radius

But there is evidence that the NRC's 10-mile radius may not be adequate. Following the severe nuclear accident at Chernobyl in the Soviet Union, everyone living within 18.6 miles had to be evacuated.

The researchers said their study appeared to be the first to find a health hazard related to quitting smoking. Cigarette smoking is believed to cause a variety of major illnesses, including cancer and heart disease.

The doctors found that smokers had a 40 percent lower chance than those who never smoked of getting ulcerative colitis. But reformed smokers had double the non-smokers' risk.

"The adverse health effects from smoking far outnumber any potential benefits to be gained from decreasing one's risk of ulcerative colitis," said Dr. Edward J. Boyko, who directed the "Ulcerative colitis is rare, but cancer and heart disease are not rare," he added in an interview. "The argument simply can't be made that one should continue smoking to improve one's health, because that would not be happening."

Boyko, a researcher at the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center in Denver, outlined his findings in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine

The study seems to suggest that something in cigarette smoke protects against ulcerative colitis, Boyko said. Just why giving up the habit might increase the risk also is a mystery.

The researchers theorized that it might have something to do with weight gain, which is common after kicking the habit, or increased physical activity, but they cautioned these ideas were highly speculative.

Boyko said he and his co-authors "put their heads together and tried to think of (another) illness associated with quitting smoking, and we couldn't come up with anything."

About one in 1,000 Americans has ulcerative colitis, a chronic inflammation of the lining of the large intestine.

No one knows what causes the disease, which usually strikes between ages 20 and 40, causing diarrhea, cramps and bloody stools.

Sometimes the illness goes away by itself. But if it lingers for years, the only effective treatment is removal of the diseased part of the large intestine.

"The main value of this study is that it opens up new areas for research into a disease that is a complete enigma in medicine," Boyko said.

He and colleagues identified 212 people with ulcerative colitis and compared their habits with those of 212 healthy people of the same age and sex. Those studied were enrolled in a Seattle health maintenance organization with 304,000 members.

The researchers looked for other explanations for the apparent connection between smoking and the disease but found none. For instance, smokers drink more coffee than do non-smokers, but coffee did not account for the link.

There are other rare instances in which smoking seems to protect against disease.

For instance, researchers have found that women who smoke heavily might have a lower risk of cancer of the uterus, possibly because cigarettes reduce their estrogen secretions. However, there has been no suggestion that exsmokers run a higher risk of this disease than do those who never smoked.

House panel moves to cap credit card interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House subcommittee, proclaiming a first-round victory for consumers, launched an attempt to impose a federal ceiling on credit card interest rates.

The ceiling would be set at eight percentage points above the yield on one-year Treasury securities, to be adjusted quarterly. If it were in effect today, top credit card rates would be 13.8 percent—nearly 5 percentage points below prevailing rates

Proponents hailed Wednesday's subcommittee vote, 5-3 along party lines, as good news for millions of credit card holders.

"With the prime rate at 7.5 percent and the Federal Reserve discount rate at 5.5 percent, there is no economic justification for credit card rates of 18, 19 and even 22 percent," said Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., chairman of the House Consumer Affairs and Coinage Subcommittee.

"Something had to be done, and the subcommittee has got the process off to a roaring start. The first battle for lower rates has been won by consumers," he said.

"There can be no question now that credit card issuers have been gouging American consumers," Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said. "Clearly it is time for Congress to help bring fairness to the credit card market."

Opponents, however, warned the cap would simply shrink credit.

"Caps do not work," said Rep. Chalmers Wylie, R-Ohio. "Federally mandated caps could lead to severe restrictions in credit."

A spokesman for industry giant Visa said the ceiling would hurt those who most need credit.

"The only known result of (caps) is that the availability of credit becomes reduced," Visa Senior Vice President John Bennett said. "When the operation becomes less profitble, credit becomes harder to get."

Visa came under fire at the hearing for its attempt last week to mobilize industry opposition to a new American Express "Optima" credit card offered at 13.5 percent.

A March 11 telegram from Visa President Charles Russell urged banks to "rethink your position in offering American Express products" and call the company to voice their opposition.

call the company to voice their opposition.

Annunzio said the Visa move "comes dangerously close to embracing a conspiracy approach that smacks of antitrust violations."

"That sure sounds to me like a boycott threat, an action in restraint of trade that may very well be a violation of antitrust law," Schumer said.

The two congressmen joined House Judiciary Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., and Senate Judiciary Chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., in calling on Attorney General Edwin Meese III to look into possible antitrust violations by Visa.

Bennett said Visa welcomed the investigation.

"We think our position is absolutely right in suggesting that banks reexamine their business relationship with American Express now that American Express has identified itself as a banking competitor," he said.

The full House Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs will now consider the credit card cap. A similar ceiling proposed last year never made it out of subcommittee.

Walsh awaiting key information from Switzerland and Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh is lacking key information from Switzerland and Israel as he tries to piece together the remainder of the Iran-Contra puzzle.

Walsh told The Associated Press on Wednesday.

together the remainder of the Iran-Contra puzzle.
Walsh told The Associated Press on Wednesday that his request for Swiss bank records may be tied up in that country's courts for an indefinite time.

The Swiss government has approved the request, but eight people with control over the accounts have filed objections and their hearings in Swiss courts could lead to long delays, Walsh said.

In addition, a source close to Walsh's investigation, speaking only on condition he not be named, said the Israelis have not yet submitted written information promised to Congress on their role in secret arms sales to Iran.

Spokesmen for the House and Senate committees investigating the sale and the diversion of profits to Nicaragua's Contra rebels confirmed that lawmakers have not yet received the Israeli information. A Senate source said the material is still expected, and added he would not characterize Israel as uncooperative.

While Walsh faced delays from abroad, developments moved forward briskly in this country: Walsh announced he planned to ask a court Monday, for the first time in his investigation, to delay a congressional grant of immunity to businessman Albert Hakim for the legal limit of 20 days. Congressional sources have suggested that their motive in granting immunity to Hakim, 50, was the expectation that he will provide some of the needed

Walsh said he would use the 20-day period, if granted, "to try to bring together whatever material we had" involving Hakim.

Swiss bank account records.

Congressional immunity would force a witness to testify or face prison. That testimony could not be used against the witness in a criminal case, but Walsh could build a case independently.

In Congress, the House and Senate investigating committees Wednesday approved a timetable for taking the testimony of Adm. John Poindexter, should the panels decide to compel him to talk under an immunity grant. A separate timetable was set for Lt. Col. Oliver North.

Poindexter ran the National Security Council during much of the period when the U.S. was selling arms to Iran and a private network was supplying the Nicaraguan Contras during a congressional ban on military aid to the rebels. Poindexter resigned and North, his aide, was fired for their roles in those operations.

In other developments Wednesday:

The Senate voted 52-48 against cutting off $40 million in aid to the Contras. Aid opponents see the narrow defeat as "an alarm bell" signaling an eventual end to military aid. Aid backers say they gained a new chance to win public support for Reagan's Central America policy.

■ The CIA is giving the Contras detailed information on potential targets to attack during a spring offensive, including dams, electrical facilities and bridges, according to unidentified government officials cited in today's New York Times. The CIA is providing maps, blueprints and locations of the facilities, some of which were built by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers before the leftist Sandinistas took power in Nicaragua, the newspaper said.

Former National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane told investigators that Bandar bin Sultan, Saudi Arabia's ambassador to the United States, offered $1 million to the Contras in May or June 1984, The Washington Post reported today. Contra official Bosco Matamoros supplied bank records to The Associated Press showing anonymous deposits of $1 million monthly to a Contra account in the Cayman Islands. The Saudis have denied any involvement with the Contras.

The Senate select committee voted unanimously to begin civil contempt proceedings against retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord, linked to both the Iran and Contra operations. Secord has refused to allow the committee access to information about Swiss bank accounts he is said to control. The full Senate could vote on the contempt citation as early as next week.

AIDS test is significant but proof of effectiveness lacking

NEW YORK (AP) — Test results reported today by a French researcher who gave himself an experimental AIDS vaccine are significant but do not prove the vaccine works, scientists said of first such trial reported in humans.

Daniel Zagury and 11 other scientists report in a letter to the British journal Nature that the vaccine was given to Zagury and a group of volunteers from Zaire.

The letter says Zagury's immune system created defenses against two varieties of the AIDS virus. But it does not mention whether he was later exposed to the AIDS virus to see if the vaccine prevented infection.

Zagury, of the Pierre and Marie Curie University in Paris, declined Wednesday to elaborate on the report. Initial human tests of vaccines and medicines generally focus on side effects rather than effectiveness.

"It's of considerable interest to the scientific community and I think it's very noble that he did it on himself first," Dr. Robert Gallo, an AIDS researcher at the National Cancer Institute, said Wednesday. "It's an important first step."
In the Nature letter, the researchers wrote

In the Nature letter, the researchers wrote that the experiment was prompted by concern that a vaccine that spurs the body only to produce antibodies, which are proteins in blood that recognize foreign invaders, may not be able to fight off more than one variety of the virus.

The experimental vaccine was designed to stimulate a second kind of immune system defense, called cell-mediated response, in which special blood cells also fight invading microorganisms.

The hope is that this defense would protect against more than one strain of the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome and kill cells already infected by the virus, researchers wrote.

The new results are "preliminary work, but it's interesting," said Bernard Moss, chief of the laboratory of viral diseases at the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

The experiment used a genetically altered virus called vaccinia. Unaltered vaccinia is used as a smallpox vaccine.

speaking on condition of anonymity. Under the new measures, the government would not sign any new military contracts but apparently would not nullify existing con-

Israel has a billion-dollar-a-year arms export business, but details of it are closely guarded secrets. Sources have said most of its sales to South Africa are light arms.

Foreign newspapers also have reported cooperation between the two countries on nuclear tests, but Israeli officials deny it.

The television report also said the Cabinet decided to curb economic ties with Pretoria, including trade and cultural exchanges, and to set up a panel to formulate within two months a new policy towards Pretoria.

It said Ariel Sharon, the industry and trade minister, argued against the measures during the Cabinet's two stormy sessions Wednesday, but that the decision was backed by Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin

Mexico marks nationalization anniversary

TULA, Mexico (AP) - Mexico marked on Wednesday the expropriation of the oil industry almost half a century ago, an event still considered a benchmark in the development of the modern nation and economy.

The 49th anniversary of the nationalization by then-President Lazaro Cardenas focused, however, on the drastic impact falling international prices for petroleum have had on Mexico.

Francisco Rojas, who took over as director general of the giant oil monopoly Pemex last month, noted revenue dropped in 1986 by $8.5 billion from the year before as prices fell from more than $25 a barrel to lower than $12 a

"Facing this phenomenon, the federal government was forced to adjust its economic strategies," Rojas said at a ceremony in the huge Miguel Hidalgo refinery complex in Tula, about 45 miles northwest of Mexico

"Petroleos Mexicanos, like the rest of the country, had to make sacrifices, taking care not to place at risk the supply of hydrocarbons nor cancel its role as a fundamental piece in combating the country's economic crisis,' he said.

President Miguel de la Madrid, whose administration has been plagued by economic troubles tied to falling international oil prices since 1982, attended the ceremony.

Rojas said total reserves remained stable, ending 1986 at 70 billion barrels. He said extraction during the year totaled 1.283 billion barrels while 383 million barrels were added to the reserves. A barrel is the equivalent of 42 gallons.

Averge daily production in 1986 was 2.428 million barrels, down by 202,000 barrels from the previous year, he said.

Of that, Mexico exported a daily average of 1.29 million barrels to 52 clients in 23 countries, earning a total $5.572 billion from exports

In discussing money-saving measures, Rojas said cutbacks in the drilling program had been among the most important ways Pemex had counteracted the revenue fall.

During the year, he said, 58 drilling rigs were taken out of operation for exploration and development. He said 119 field groups continued exploring in 10 currently productive zones and in 30 areas with petroleum psosibilities on land and offshore.

Appeals court says religious magazine tax exemption constitutional

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas Monthly magazine's publisher says he will appeal a court ruling that a law exempting religious publications from sales tax is

The 3rd Court of Appeals in Austin ruled Wednesday that Texas Monthly could not recover the $149,107.14 in taxes that the publication paid under protest, reversing a Travis County court ruling.
"We think we have a strong case for an appeal," said publisher Mike Levy. "The fact that it was not remanded to the district court, there was some very strong dissent and the majority was very unclear. We have a strong case not only in the Texas Supreme Court, but beyond."

The magazine sued several state officials for reimbursement, arguing that exemption of religious magazines was discriminatory and unconstitutional. The magazine said the law violates the constitutional separation of church and state. The sales tax went into effect Oct. 2, 1984, and taxed the sale of Texas Monthly magazines published between Jan. 21, 1985, and Dec. 18, 1985. In a majority opinion, Chief Justice Bob Shannon discriminatory if there is a rational reason for them, Shannon said.

Committee approves land access bill

AUSTIN (AP) - A Senate committee has approved a bill that would let the state go to court to get access to state-owned hardrock minerals on land that is surrounded by private property.

The Senate Natural Resources Committee's 6-1 vote to put the measure to a full Senate vote came Wednesday after two meetings. Efforts by Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, to send it to subcommittee for revision were tabled 5-2.

Land Commissioner Garry Mauro told the group that the state loses up to $21 million annually because state-owned mineral interests can't be developed.

"Without access, the adjoining landowners can either use our land without paying for it or lease it from us at an unreasonably low cost because the lack of access makes our tract unmarketable to anyone else," Mauro said.

The measure by Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, would allow the state to start eminent domain proceedings only if access agreements could not be negotiated with the surrounding private landowners.

Lyon said private owners already have the right to sue for access if their land is surrounded by property that allows them no way in or out.

Mauro said his office currently has no legal means of gaining access to approximately 500,000 acres, or 58 percent, of the state's surface acreage. Another 6.6 million acres are affected where the state owns mineral rights but the surface is privately owned.

He said the state land became surrounded by private land in the 1900s when land grants to railroads and land sales of state land were "checkerboarded" for much of West Texas

Mauro said the state's inability to develop deposits of beryllium, a high-tech mineral needed by aerospace and electronic manufacturers, was an example of need for the bill.

Midland attorney Gary Wisener, who said he represented ranchers owning 700,000 acres of surface rights in Pecos, Brewster, Presidio and Jeff Davis counties, opposed the bill, saying ranchers should get a better deal.

"Hard-rock mining destroys the surface of the land for any other purpose," he said. "There is nothing left for a rancher to use. This is not just a hobby to these people. They are making a living off their land.

Wisener suggested hard-rock mineral rights should be handled in a way similar to a 1919 law that allows owners to act as the state's agent in leasing land for oil and gas development and for soft minerals, such as coal and sulphur. In return, the owners get up to 50 percent of all bonuses, rentals and royalties.

"You want to give these people a percentage of what is rightfully the property of the people of Texas," said Lyon. "We should not have given up our rights in 1919 and ought not to give them up now.

Wisener said the West Texas ranchers were not asking 50 percent of proceeds from hard-rock minerals, "just a percentage."

Eyeglasses provide fashion, sun protection

Lifestyles Editor

Eyeglass frames have come a long way in the last decade, available now in a wide variety of shapes and colors once un-

Bright, bold colors are very popular with women and children. Hottest colors on the market include rose, burgundy, navy blue, tortoise and red, both for vision correction and sun protec-

Other colors available include pastel pink and blue, electric blue, green, white and mauve.

A mix of colors is also present. Some new combinations are black and white, red with black and white accents, black and pink, white and blue, and red, black and gold.

Plastic frames dominate the selections, but metals and even a combination of metal and plastic is available. All-metal frames are used more for ophthalmic glasses than for sunglasses. Today's wire frames are more durable than ever before. Gold wire frames may be accented with red, blue or green.

For the ultimate in style, eyeglass wearers can choose a 14K gold filigree frame with amethyst, diamond, sapphire or topaz stones at the top outer corners of the lenses

Men are tending more toward black, bronze and topaz frames instead of gold and silver. Black frames with gold or silver trim are popular.

Ultra light frames are available in stainless steel. Another frame style that cuts down on weight is the rimless frame. Nylon cord holds the lenses across areas where there is no frame, either on bottom or top. Some lenses are suspended by nylon cord inside the frame, with only the inner edges held by the frame. These styles not only make the glasses lighter, but they also eliminate some frame shadows from the wearer's field of Lens shapes include a smaller lens area with big flared temples for comfort. The familiar cat'seye shape from years past is making a comeback. Today's cat's-eye shapes are toned down and more rounded.

A lot of new European styles are invading the market. For grade schoolers to college students, the preppie style is hot. This style features a flat line across the top of the lenses with rounded bottoms and large lens popular aviator style, with variations to give it a new look. Spring hinges, which allow more flexibility at the temples, are a popular feature that add more durability to men's frames. Men's frames in general are lighter and thinner, not as bulky as in previous years.

Men's shapes include the ever-

Aviator and square styles with spring hinges are also popular for

Lenses are available in glass and plastic. Many wearers still prefer glass lenses. For those who are seeking lighter-weight glasses, however, plastic is the choice. Plastic lenses are also more impact-resistant than glass, and are available in regular or scratch-resistant types. The scratch-resistant feature is made into the lens, rather than coated on. This reduces the chance of scratching the lenses, but caution is still needed when cleaning them

Polycarbonate lenses are the most impact-resistant of all materials available. These are a type of plastic lens that are recommended for safety glasses and sports enthusiasts.

Bifocal wearers may choose the new no-line bifocals, which provide a range of corrected vision with no lines between the different areas.

Color is popular not only in frames but also the lenses themselves. Tinting is in demand both for cosmetic reasons and for glare protection.

Perhaps the most important feature of any glasses is their ultraviolet protection. Good-quality sunglasses have no distortion and provide 90 percent ultraviolet Vision-correcting lenses are available in photogray and photobrown. These lenses are clear indoors, but change to a gray or brown tint in bright outdoor light. The photogray option is more popular than the photobrown, which is not as easily available

Ultraviolet protection is available as a clear coating for lenses. This coating provides 98 to 100 percent protection from the sun's rays, which can damage the eyes.

Whatever combination of color, shape, material and protection the customer desires, he can probably get it these days.

'People are more fashionconscious and are beginning to want more than one pair to have different looks. Wearers should see what color looks good, what highlights their face and what doesn't make their face look frowny. Light complexions need contrast, and frame shapes should contrast with face shapes. Round faces don't need round frames. Square faces need wide frames," said Brenda Wilkerson, fashion frame consultant for Simmons & Simmons optometrists of Pampa.

"Rose adds a lot of color to the face and blends with a lot of colors. Don't buy frames to match your hair or to go with everything in your wardrobe.

'If we're going to have to wear glasses, we might as well get something we like and have fun with them," she said.

Soft contact lenses

By MARILYN POWERS Lifestyles Editor

Soft contact lenses are the preferred form of vision correction for those who don't want to wear eyeglasses, according to Dr. Fred Simmons, Pampa optometrist

Comfort is the main reason cited for choosing soft lenses. Eighty percent of new contact lens wearers choose soft lenses, although there are some limitations on who can wear them.

Astigmatism has been a stumbling block for potential soft lens wearers, but new astigmatismcorrecting soft lenses are becoming more widely available. Large amounts of astigmatism are still difficult to correct with contact lenses, Simmons said.

Astigmatism is a condition in which the front surface of the eye is warped. Corrective lenses must match this shape, and most contact lenses ride in a circular motion on the eye, rotating when the wearer blinks. New contact lenses are designed to rotate to their correct position on the eye's surface and stay there.

Bifocal soft lenses are available, but are difficult to use now, Simmons said. For those who need both long- and short-range vision correction, the monovision technique is available. One lens corrects distance vision, while the other corrects near vision. enabling the patient to wear contact lenses. This type of vision correction requires an adjustment period by the wearer to get used to it, but it is gaining in popularity. Ronald Reagan and Johnny Carson both use this type of vision correction, Simmons said.

Another option for bifocal wearers is to wear the contact lenses for distance vision and switch to reading glasses for close-up work.

Other types of contact lenses for those who can't wear or don't want soft lenses are the rigid. gas-permeable lenses and the standard hard lenses.

Tinted soft lenses are translucent. They can enhance the eye's natural color or even change the color. These lenses have a clear center, where the pupil is located, surrounded by a colored area the size of the iris. The lens is larger than the iris, so the rim of the lens is also clear.

'These have been widely used in Canada and Europe for years, and were only recently approved by the FDA for use in the United States," Simmons said.

The translucent lenses can transform irises into a variety of colors, including brown, green and several shades of blue.

Some people want the contact lenses only to change their eye color, and don't even need vision correction, Simmons said.

The color-changing lenses are available only in soft form. Hard lenses can't be used for color

An adviser on how women can flatter their figures suggests cream — the color, not the kind associated with cows.

Marie Dawson, fashion editor of Weight Watchers magazine, says there are many color options that are flattering and popular for spring for the woman who is slimming down for the warmer months ahead.

'Cream is a good neutral color that works well with khaki tones and pastels as well as with contrasts such as navy and black,' Ms. Dawson says. "Of course, a one-tone look is always pretty,

'Select lightweight fabrics that do not cling to the body to minimize figure flaws," says Ms.

Specifically, she suggests that a silk-blend dolman sleeved jacket in spring's hot fashion colors such as a gray, pink and cream check, can be teamed with either a pink polyester-linen skirt or gray silk-blend slacks for a pair of slimming looks.

The fourth-ranked Hoyas and 20th-rated Jayhawks meet in the nightcap of the regional doubleheader. The other game has No. 9 Alabama against Providence.

Two other pretty good players, both first-team All-America selections, will be involved in regional play - guards Kenny Smith of North Carolina and Steve Alford of Indiana

At tonight's East Regional in East Rutherford, N.J., it's No. 2 North Carolina facing 18th-rated Notre Dame, and Florida against No. 10 Syracuse

In Friday night regional play, top-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas takes on Wyoming and sixthranked Iowa plays Oklahoma at Seattle. The Midwest action is in Cincinnati, with No. 3 Indiana opposing No. 17 Duke and No. 5 DePaul playing Louisiana State.

The smooth Williams, who has averaged 23.2 points a game, assumed the leadership role on the young Hoyas this season. He is the only senior of consequence for John Thompson's Big East champions, who have won 12 straight games and are 28-4. Williams scored 24 points and kept the Hoyas under control last weekend as they chipped away at a 15-point Ohio State lead and won

"He's a leader, and he's a bread-and-butter player," Manning said of the 6-foot-7 Williams. 'If he can't score, he's going to get the ball to someone who can score or get in position to draw the foul

Kansas Coach Larry Brown is concerned that his players can't match up with Williams.

"Manning's a great player, and

"It's not by design that he's be come a scorer," Brown said. "It's out of necessity. He's smart enough to know we need him to score in order to win. I just think we're lucky to have him and that kind of ability.'

The other Southeast contest figures to be a battle between Providence's home-run hitters and Alabama's construction workers. The Friars, 23-8, are led by long-range bombers Billy Donovan and Ernie "Pop" Lewis, and have hit 256 3-point shots, most in the nation.

But the Tide, 28-4, has made a better percentage of 3-pointers than Providence, 45.2 percent to

"We're not the type of team that lives and dies by the 3-point shot," said Alabama forward Jim Farmer, a 40.5 percent 3-point shooter. "We try to get the ball inside to Derrick McKey and Mike (Ansley) as much as possible. If the guys collapse on them, then we'll shoot the 3-point shot. We really don't have any set

Finals set for Sunday

DALLAS (AP) — Pam Shriver wanted a tough match in the second round of the Virginia Slims of Dallas. For a few minutes, she got it.

With several of the world's top players skipping the event, second-eeded Shriver is expected to charge into Sunday's finals against top-seed Chris Evert

In the second set of Wednesday's match, unseeded Lisa Bonder of Saline, Mich., gave Shriver cause for concern. But Shriver quickly restored order for a 6-3. 6-3 victory

Shriver used her serve-andvolley power game to good advantage against baseliner Bonder. But Shriver's concentration wandered in the second set when she wasted a chance to break Bonder's serve in the fifth game after building a 5-0 lead, then lost her serve in the seventh

But Shriver cranked up her serve in the ninth game to close out the match

"It was nice to get in a little trouble and then close it out,' said Shriver. "I felt better tonight than I have in a while. I moved well and served well.

With top-ranked Martina Navratilova and second-ranked Steffi Graf skipping the tournament, Shriver finds herself in the rare position of being among the two favorites to win the $50,000 first

'My next match will probably be (Wendy) Turnbull," said Shriver. "We've had some wild matches over the years.'

With some of the top names missing, Shriver admits she feels some pressure.

"I'm trying to remain as focused as possible," said Shriver. "But for some reason I don't seem to have a great reserve of

Two seeded players from Houston, third-seeded Zina Garrison and sixth-eeded Lori McNeil, both advanced during Wednesday afternoon's session. Garrison defeated Tina Mochizuki of South Pasadena, Calif. 6-1, 6-2 and McNeil won over Barbara Potter of Woodbury, Ct., 6-4, 6-4.

Other unseeded players advancing Wednesday were Dianna Balestrat of Sydney, Australia, a 2-6, 6-0, 6-4 winner over Rafaella Reggi, Faenza, Italy; and Kate Gompert of Rancho Mirage, Calif., a 6-1, 7-6 (7-3) victor over Catherine Tanvier, Nice, Pampa has a .251 team batting average with three players hitting exactly .333 — Bret Mitchell, Jon Roe and Kenny Steward. Grant Gamblin is hitting .313 and leads the team in runs scored with 11. Roe, Troy Owens (.235) and Shawn Frye (.250) lead the team in the RBI department with five each.

Mitchell (2-2) will start on the mound against Levelland, Butler said. The senior righthander has struck out 28 and walked 23 in 21 and one-third innings pitched. His earned run average is 2.95.

Mitchell, along with outfielder Mark Williams, are among nine returning lettermen who were second-team, all-district picks for the Harvesters last season. ### Three-point shot made noisy debut

AP Basketball Writer

A point or three about the rule being used for the first time in the NCAA basketball tournament. The 3-point field goal, a subject of lengthy discussion throughout the season, has made its debut amid yells of "Three.

Television announcers and arena crowds scream the number of points the shot is worth when it's taken; some get to yell it much more than others.

The 3-point shot was introduced throughout college basketball at a uniform distance of 21 feet from the backboard - some conferences had been experimenting with it for years - to alleviate congestion in the lane and end rough post play.

This year, there haven't been many post players who have drawn attention and thus the 3point shots seem to stand out more in the minds of those who didn't follow the game throughout the season.

Of the teams in the round of 16 of the tournament, Nevada-Las Vegas has made the most 3-point field goals, 281, while Notre Dame is at the other extreme. having attempted less than half the number that the Runnin' Rebels have made. The Fighting Irish have made 41 of 113 3-point field goal attempts.

Teams haven't changed their styles just because it's tournament time. The ones who were quick to heave the long shot all season have kept it up and the ones who disdained it continued to opt for the more traditional two-point field goals.

Nevada-Las Vegas, the topranked team and No. 1 seed in the West Regional, has made 281 of 693 3-point attempts, or 41 percent. That's not near the best percentage of the remaining teams.

Indiana has made 51 percent of its 3-pointers and All-American Steve Alford has taken 78 percent of the Hoosiers' long jumpers. Alford is 95 of 181, for 53 percent, from 3-point range, while the rest of the team has made 23 of 51. Some of the teams that exited the NCAA tournament early had trouble with the 3-pointer.

Navy made just three of 14 in its first-round loss to Michigan, which made 12 of 20, including a 9-for-12 performance by Garde Thompson, whose 33-point performance was overshadowed by Midshipman David Robinson's 50, all of the conventional oneand two-point variety.

committee asking for testimony dent athletes.

DALLAS (AP) — A committee appointed by United Methodist bishops to investigate the Southern Methodist University football scandal is asking that people with first hand knowledge to come forward and testify, the committee's chief counsel says. J. Chrys Dougherty, the committee's chief counsel, said that although the committee cannot force people to provide information, it is anxious to talk to anyone who knew about illegal payments given to several SMU student athletes. 'We have no subpoena power,'' Dougherty told the Dallas Times Herald Wednesday "Only the full pressure of the Methodist church is behind us. People don't have to talk with us, but we are hoping they will."

Committee officials also have asked acting SMU President William Stallcup to send letters to past and current university employees, asking them to volunteer what they know, Dougherty said.

The appeals are part of Dougherty's first attempts to determine who was responsible for authorizing the illegal payments to stu-

Bishop John Russell, president of the United Methodist College of Bishops, last week appointed a committee to investigate the scandal and make a report to the SMU Board of Trustees. The committee plans to interview members of the Board of Governors and review the resignation agreements of former Athletic Director Robert Hitch, former head football coach Bobby Collins and Henry Lee Parker, who was Hitch's assistant, Dougherty Hitch, Collins and Parker resigned in December at the height of the investgigation that led to action by the National Collegiate Athletic Association against SMU.

The investigation was launched following reports that SMU boosters had continued to pay student athletes even after the school was placed on three years probation in 1985 for similar recruiting violations.

In the harshest punishment ever handed down, the NCAA suspended the SMU football program for the 1987 season and placed other sanctions against SMU that will severely limit the Southwest Conference school's program for years to come.

The committee counsel said he cannot protect the identities of people who testify before the committee but hopes they will be compelled to appear to "help clear the air"

"We want to talk to them and gather objective evidence to get at the source of the problems," he said. "We want to find out what has happened, clean up the problem and put all this trouble behind us once and for all."

University officials were asked to contact former and current employees who might have dealt with the athletic department since 1981 to ask about their possible involvement, Dougherty said.

He said the unversity has been asked to draft the letter to make clear there is a guarantee that employees will not lose their jobs if they testify.

"We wanted the university to put itself on the line too," Dougherty said.

A pair of track meets are on tap for area schools this weekend.

The Shamrock Invitational will bring to a close St. Patrick's Week festivities. Among the schools involved are McLean, Miami, White Deer and Wheeler.

Sunray will also hold their annual relays, with Canadian and Groom the area schools participating.

A slight correction needs to be made. Last week, the coach of the Miami girls' track team was misidentified. Jerry Boyd, thè school's principal, is the coach. Brad Coffey is Boyd's assistant.

☐ While on the subject of Miami girls' track, it appears their squad will be shorthanded this weekend in Shamrock. Shelly Hale and Stephanie Byrum will both be sidelined due to illness.

Looking back at last weekend's Groom Tiger Relays, there were a couple of events that ended up neck-and- neck.

In the girls' 400-meter relay, the Booker team won the event with a time of 52.68 seconds. The Groom girls clocked in at 52.69 for a second place finish by a whisker. One one-hundredths of a second to be exact.

In the girls' 200-meter dash, Groom's Erin Eschle came out as the runner-up with a time of 27.84 seconds. Deborah Stubbs was 1.01 seconds behind with a third place finish of 28.85

☐ From a reference book found in The Pampa News editorial department there's this quote concerning the recruiting of college football players, "... the piratical hunt for good players, sometimes resulting in open purchase, worries a great many people. . The book, entitled News Gathering and News Reporting, was

☐ The NCAA Tournament is now down to 16 teams, with play continuing tonight.

Like probably every other sports writer in America, I feel compelled to give my predictions, however wrong they may prove to be.

In the Final Four, I'll have to go with Kansas, Notre Dame (the cinderella team of the tourney), UNLV and Indiana.

In what a lot of fans would call an upset, I think Indiana has what it takes, namely Bobby Knight and Steve Alford, to upend UNLV in the quarterfinals, and eventually win the tournament, defeating Kansas.

Morris has temper in midseason form

Jack Morris is in midseason form Detroit's ace pitcher, who won 21 games last year despite being tagged for 40 home runs, yielded three long balls — all in a four-run fourth inning — in a 5-3 loss to the Chicago White Sox on Wednesday and has given up six homers in four exhibition outings Morris, who once destroyed a batrack in Tiger Stadium, also has a notable temper. That, too, is in midseason form. Russ Morman hit a solo homer in the White Sox fourth. With two out, Morris and plate umpire John Shulock got into an animated shouting match when the call on a 1-2 pitch to Jerry Hairston was a ball. Morris came several feet off the mound and Shulock walked several feet in front of the plate. Both men waved their arms and shouted for about a minute. Morris then walked Hairston before giving up successive home runs to Tim Hulett and Ken Williams. Eric Davis hit a three-run homer to highlight a nine-run sixth inning that carried the Cincinnati Reds over the Houston Astros 11-

3. Davis also had an RBI single. But the best news for the Reds came when veteran right-hander Mario Soto, who had shoulder surgery last August, threw about60 pitches over three innings of a simulated game. "He threw good. Every time out he is getting better," Manager Pete Rose said. Free Agency

No broads allowed in long jump event

By JIMMY PATTERSON Sports Writer

Track meets are divided into two segments, the running events, which were explained Wednesday, and the field events.

Field competition consists of six events: pole vault, high jump, shot put, discus, triple jump and long jump. The long jump was once called the broad jump. You may be wondering why it is no longer referred to as the broad jump. University Interscholastic League Director Dr. Bailey Marshall explains: "When we added the broad-jump competition to the women's event, we didn't feel it would sound too well. But, the name had already been changed on the national level anyway.

Miami Track Coach Jerry Boyd was more to the point. "Because of the sexual connotations," he offered.

Hence the name change. The long jump is selfexplanatory. An athlete runs

Track primer II

down a "runway" and when he or she gets to the end of it, they jump with all their might. The triple jump is a bit more complicated. According to "The International Dictionary of Sports and Games," the triple jump is defined as "a jumper has a run-in and then jumps to land on the take-off foot; in the next move he lands on the alternate foot; and in the third movement springs from that movement for his final jump.

Easier to remember would be that the event used to be known as the hop, skip and jump. But you have to see it in order to fully comprehend what goes on.

The high jump is another easily understood event. The athlete runs toward a horizontally placed bar at the end of the runway and leaps over it.

Naturally, whoever clears the highest mark successfully wins the event.

The pole vault is another jump ing event where the athlete tries to clear a higher mark with the aid of a long, flexible stick.

At the end of the runway, the jumper plants the pole into the ground and thrusts himself over the horizontal bar.

The pole is custom made for each athlete, conforming to his or her weight and height. One side of the pole is softer which allows for it to flex, or bend, so the athlete can hoist himself over the bar (not to be confused with "hoisting another one while sitting at a bar'').

The final two events in the field competition are the shot put and the discus. In both events, whoever throws the object the farthest while not stepping out of the ring wins. The shot put ring, where the player stands while competing in the event measures seven feet in diameter. The discus ring is eight feet, 2.5 inches in diameter.

The shot put for boys weighs 12 lbs. For the girls, the weight is 8 lbs., 13 ozs.

The discus is different in shape. Just think of a very heavy, oval Frisbee

For the boys, it's 3 lbs., 9 ozs. The diameter is 8.5 inches.

For girls, the discus weighs in at 2 lbs., 3.274 ozs. The diameter varies, but is just over 7 inches. Winning distances in the events vary also, but a good heave for the shot put would be 491/2 feet. That mark won the event for Wheeler's Bubba Smith in last weekend's Groom Tiger Relays.

For the discus, a good throw would be one of 152-feet, fiveinches. Richard Smith, also of Wheeler, chalked up that mark in winning the event at Groom.

Finally, who wins a track meet is determined by total team points, just as in any other sport.

For instance, a first-place finish in the shot would garner a team 10 points, second place would earn eight points, third place would get a team six points,

In relays, point totals are dou-

At this point, you should know all there is to know about a track meet. While track and field will likely never qualify as America's most popular sport, it is still a fun sport to watch.

If you plan on attending a track meet, though, the most handy thing to have with you is a metric conversion table.

AUSTIN (AP) — Senators have approved bills to erack down on "designer drugs," as well as illegal drug laboratories, and to require parents of an unmarried minor to provide food, clothing and shelter for the minor's child.

The Senate also voted Wednesday to create a committee to review state and local taxes and tentatively decided that local tax appraisal boards should be made up of elected officials.

The Senate on a 28-0 vote sent to the House a bill aimed at manufacturers of illegal drugs

Sen. Ray Farabee said his bill is designed to correct a situation where people escape prosecution by altering the chemical structure of a drug so that it no longer fits the definition in the law, even though the drug would have the same "braindamaging" effect. These are so-called designer drugs

Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said his solution is to incorporate into Texas law a federal definition that includes drugs "substantially similar" to certain illegal substances.

He said requiring the registration of larger amounts of certain basic chemicals used in "speed labs" would "hopefully, and most importantly, deter the illegal manufacture of certain drugs

The mailings, to neighbors, landlords and employers, included photocopies of the responses along with letters warning recipients to "avoid this homosexual at all costs," according to the Chicago Tribune.

Former mining town struggling #### to recover

REAL DE CATORCE, Mexico (AP) — Residents of this former mountain boom town are shaken by a rumor that the district mayor may soon move his head-quarters to another village.

Losing the municipal seat, and the public funds and attention that go with it, would be a hard blow for the 1,000 people here who are just starting to see their town awaken from a 77-year hibernation.

"Right now the city is improving, but it's going slowly," said 84-year-old Jose Blanco, who has lived through the town's best and worst of times.

Real de Catorce, lodged on steep slopes 9,000 feet high in the silver-rich mountains of San Luis Potosi state in north central Mexico, was a thriving economic center when Americans were fighting for independence.

From 1773, the time of the first silver discovery, through the early 1900s, Spanish aristocrats and adventurers flocked to these mountains, opening 117 mines and turning Catorce into one of Mexico's major silver-producing regions.

"There was money for everything," recalls Blanco.

The Spanish founders built lavish theaters, ornate homes, a bull ring, a Roman-style cockfighting arena, a mint and a Roman Catholic church as large and impressive as any found in Mexico's major cities today.

They commissioned a sewer system and hand-laid cobblestone streets. In 1901 they finished construction on a 1½-mile-long tunnel that connects Catorce with the outside world.

Marauders after the Mexican Revolution started in 1910 interrupted the vast mining operations here and flooding saw to it that they stayed closed, most of them permanently.

Most of the 48,000 people who once lived here fled and by the 1930s Catorce had just 200 permanent residents.

"There wasn't much reason to look for anything else," said Blanco.

Broke and nearly abandoned, Catorce suffered the ravages of time.

The theater that once hosted

The theater that once hosted troupes from Mexico City 480 miles south fell into ruin. Many of the stone and wrought-iron balconies and carved granite columns of the Spanish-style homes decayed and tumbled.

The three-story "Money House," that minted silver and copper coins until it was closed in 1869, began to crumble.

Tree-size cacti and fallen stone filled the bedrooms and kitchens of scores of abandoned, roofless homes

"Time forgot us, but God didn't" said Socorro Ibarra, caretaker of the church's 12year-old museum.

A devotion to St. Francis of Assisi, Catorce's patron saint, brings pilgrims from all over Mexico. In the fall thousands of worshippers come for the monthlong celebration surrounding the saint's Oct. 4 feast day.

Lack of hotel accommodations
— there are a few rustic bungalows and three tourist-quality hotels offering a total of 20 rooms — force most of the pilgrims to sleep in the streets.

sleep in the streets.

Huichol Indians also come to Catorce from distant Nayarit state on the Pacific coast looking for the sacred peyote plant, a hallucenogen used in their ceremonies.

The lure of peyote and marijuana also attract American and Mexican "hippies," the locals Still, the 20th Century hasn't passed by Catorce.

Electricity arrived a couple of decades ago. Now junior high students can attend classes via television at their school. The town's one rural telephone was installed in the 1970s. Road improvments make travel here by automobile possible now.

Dump trucks loaded with ore lumber from a mine to the recently expanded processing plant in nearby La Luz.

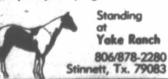

But tourism, not mining, is bringing better days, residents say.

Retired Americans come in buses on their way south. Archeologists, history buffs, rock hounds, photographers, coin collectors all find something in Catorce.

"People come here looking for something a little different and there's nothing like it in Mexico," said Christina Adenfors.
