Carter seeks hostages' release

By MONA ZIADE
Associated Press Writer

DAMASCUS, Syria — Former President Jimmy Carter said Saturday he expects the Syrian government to share information with the United States on the fate of American hostages in Lebanon and to exert influence to free them.

Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, are on a private five-nation tour of the Middle East and North Africa. The Carters, who will spend three days in Syria, were greeted at the airport by Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa.

Carter said he was pleased to be accorded such a warm welcome, but added that he was "not a representative of the United States government."

He said he expected to discuss "every conceivable subject" when he meets Sunday with President Hafez Assad. It was Carter's second visit to Damascus since he handed over the presidency to Ronald Reagan in 1981.

"We do not have an agenda," Carter said of his talks with Assad. "I've always had in past meetings a very frank and thorough analysis of issues. We've discussed worldwide problems, bilateral relations and issues of that kind."

Asked if he would officially request Syrian intervention on behalf of the eight Americans held in Lebanon, Carter said:

"No, I have no official role to play at all."

However, turning to al-Sharaa, seated next to him in the airport's VIP lounge, Carter added: "When and if there's information or influence that can be exerted, please do so, and I expect this to be the case."

"Of course my prayer is that all the American hostages will be safe and will soon be released. These are innocent people of any crime against anyone... and I know in the past when information has been available, it's been shared with our country," he said.

Before leaving Cairo, Egypt, for Syria on Saturday, Carter told reporters that he would seek Assad's help in freeing the hostages.

"I am not here carrying any message from my government... but I'll certainly urge President Assad, if and when he has any information about the hostages, to add his influence to seek their release," Carter said.

Twenty-four foreigners, including the eight Americans, are missing in Lebanon and are believed held by various underground groups. Also missing is Anglican Church hostage negotiator Terry Waites.

During Carter's presidency, 52 Americans were held hostage by the fundamentalist revolutionary government of Iran for 444 days. The issue plagued his failed candidacy for re-election.

New name on Pampa ambulances

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

The colors have changed slightly, and the name also is new, but the service remains the same, perhaps even slightly improved.

Pampa Medical Services has officially changed its name to Rural-Metro Paramedic Ambulance Service, an action arising out of a merger of the Pampa and Borger area service with Rural-Metro Corp. in Scottsdale, Ariz.

Pampa Area Supervisor Jim Howard said another result of the merger is the changing of a color stripe on the ambulances. He said the stripe has been changed from the previous orange to "national safety yellow" (or "Rural-Metro green, we call it," he said). The color is a yellow-green blend.

The stripe change was instituted following research by the corporation to determine what colors are most visible, especially at night. The basic white color of the ambulances remains the same, Howard said.

Howard said no new ambulances were purchased. He said he has been questioned about how many new vehicles the emergency medical service company has bought.

"They're the same ones," he said. "The only difference is that they've been repainted."

The name change to Rural-Metro Paramedic Ambulance Service became effective Jan. 1, he said, but only now is the company making efforts to inform the public of the change.

Howard said there has been no change of personnel. "We just changed name, basically," he explained.

The local ambulance service is going into its fifth year in Pampa. But the merger with Rural-Metro actually occurred in September 1985, he noted.

Spring blizzard leaves northern plains in misery

By The Associated Press

A storm system centered over South Dakota produced up to 18 inches of snow on Saturday, the first full day of spring.

Spring roared into Pampa like a lion. Winds today were expected to blow from 15 to 25 mph with higher gusts. Temperatures should reach the mild upper 60s, the National Weather Service predicted.

Meanwhile, a blizzard warning was posted for southeastern Montana, and a winter storm warning covered northeastern sections of the state, with up to 8 inches of snow expected.

Another storm was moving in from the Pacific Ocean, and a cold front that pushed through California in the morning began to produce rain and snow over much of the state. Up to 7 inches of snow had fallen around Paradise.

A winter storm warning was posted for the mountains of southern California, where 6 to 10 inches of snow was expected.

Elsewhere, Maine had rain and snow, with a quarter of an inch of rain at Bangor and Houlton, and 3 inches of snow at Eastport, all in the 6 hours up to noon Saturday.

Temperatures around the nation at 1 p.m. Saturday ranged from 24 degrees at Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming to 85 at Homestead, Fla. The low for the day was 2 degrees below zero at Gunnison, Colo.

Dropouts decline in school summary

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

The annual report card on Pampa schools, now available for public inspection, shows a declining dropout rate and a potential shortage of classrooms.

Pampa school trustees approved the district's 1985-86 performance report last week, and copies are available at district campuses, the Carver Educational Center and Lovett Memorial Library.

A copy has also been mailed to the Texas Education Agency in Austin, as required by state law.

The inch-thick report covers virtually every aspect of the school system, from building conditions to student test scores to data about the district's employees.

The one item not covered is the district's budget, which Assistant Superintendent Jane Steele noted is a matter of public record anyway. She said the performance report goes a step beyond the budget and is designed so the public knows what it's getting for its money.

"This gives them an opportunity to see how this money's being spent," Steele explained.

Steele said the various sections of the report are based on a letter received by Texas school districts from the TEA in September, defining what should be in the report.

Among those requirements is the district dropout rate, which the report shows has declined by four students since last year, from 95 to 91. The 91 dropouts represents 4.4 percent of the total

Falwell holds PTL reins

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

FORT MILL, S.C. — The Rev. Jerry Falwell says television evangelist Jim Bakker was "wrong, wrong, wrong" for the sexual encounter that led to his resignation as head of the PTL ministry, but he's paying a terrible price.

Falwell, who took over as chairman of PTL when Bakker admitted surrendering to sexual advances and blackmail, spoke during one of several interviews he granted Friday on the future of religious broadcasting and of PTL and its vast property holdings, which include the 2,300-acre, $160 million Heritage USA complex here.

Among questions Falwell faces are whether the "prayer partners" who helped give PTL $129 million in reported revenue last year will continue to support the ministry without the televised pleas of the charismatic Bakker and his wife, Tammy Faye.

Bakker resigned from PTL Thursday, admitting he had been blackmailed after a sexual encounter seven years ago. The Charlotte (N.C.) Observer reported that the blackmail payments totaled $115,000 and that the encounter was with a church secretary.

Bakker resigned from his denomination, the Springfield, Mo.-based Assemblies of God. But church officials said Friday that they could not accept a

Area ministers: God forgives Bakker

By CATHY SPAULDING

That's what area religious leaders are saying about television evangelist Jim Bakker, who resigned from his PTL ministry Thursday after admitting he had been blackmailed after a sexual encounter seven years ago. The leader of the $129 million ministry based in South Carolina, also resigned as a minister with the Assembly of God Church.

An official with the International Assemblies of God, which ordained Bakker, said the scandal has hurt the church and cast doubt on the integrity of ministers who raise funds through televised appeals.

And the Rev. Herb Peak, pastor of the First Assembly of God Church of Pampa, said there's "no denying" the sex scandal has hurt the ministry's reputation.

"No church or organization is perfect," Peak said Friday. "Although some would take the opportunity to cast a bad light on it."

"Each of us has to look to our own selves, make sure we're doing our best to be right before God," Peak added.

The minister said he contributes to the ministry of PTL, which stands for "People that Love" or "Praise the Lord." And he plans to continue his support now that the ministry has been turned over to the Rev. Jerry Falwell.

"I still have a strong belief in the PTL ministry," Peak said. "And I believe it will still be strong even though he is gone."

"He has made mistakes, but that does not negate the positive things he has done," Peak said, adding that the ministry has helped his congregation.

"It has had a positive influence here, people have been drawn to my church through the PTL," he observed.

Ministers

Peak said he has visited the PTL facilities and Heritage USA, a 2,300-acre retreat in South Carolina that includes an amusement park, hotels and homes for single mothers and homeless people.

"We camped out there once," Peak said. "It's a wholesome-type place. It has a water park, you can play miniature golf. It's the kind of place you can send your junior high school-age children."

Still, Peak said, the news of Bakker's reported dallies has "disappointed me greatly."

"But that doesn't change things," he added. "I don't think I ever saw him as anything more than a man."

"Sure he fell, and you have to feel for him and you have to pray for him," he said, adding that he'll also pray for Bakker's wife and co-host of his PTL Club TV show, Tammy Fay Bakker. Mrs. Bakker recently told viewers she was being treated for drug addiction.

Observed Peak: "Jim and Tammy were small-town kids, but they were pushed in the limelight and that was more than they both could bear. They were in the arena of entertainment, and they just couldn't handle it."

"But Jesus said let him who is without sin cast the first stone."

The Rev. Wilmer Manning, pastor of Shamrock First Assembly of God, said he "briefly heard about (Bakker's resignation) on the radio" and added he was shocked at the news.

Manning added that the reports expose such ministries to criticism from "a lot of skeptical people looking for something."

"It is sad that men fail at times," the Shamrock minister added.

The Rev. Rickey Pfiel, pastor of Wheeler Christian Center, said that no matter what happened, "God's reputation is not stained."

"Whatever we do or don't do does not tarnish God's reputation," Pfiel said.

"I believe strongly in what Bakker has done,"

Pfiel added. "He has affected a lot of people in a positive way."

"I'm sure he asked God to forgive him," Pfiel said. "It's a matter of people not forgiving. It casts a shadow on the church only if people want it to."

The Rev. Douglas Dawson, pastor of Pampa's First Foursquare Gospel Assembly, said he doesn't think Bakker's actions hurt similar ministries.

"Bakker just has to do what the Lord wants him to do. We always have to have a spirit of forgiveness and reconciliation for him and everyone else."

Pastors of more mainstream area churches agreed that professing men of God are only human.

Said the Rev. Charles Paulson, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church: "The Lutherans have long been involved in television ministry."

"But I feel suspicious of such ministries as Oral Roberts and Jim Bakker, because there is too much money in their control," Paulson said, adding that he was very disappointed in the news.

"Too often, the TV ministries make stars out of their leaders," he added. "The gospel is forgotten, and a personality cult forms."

"And that's a shame because it hurts the local church," Paulson added.

But Dr. Bill Boswell, pastor of First Christian Church, said he has "no less respect for the movement, the Assembly of God denomination or the man."

"It is extremely erroneous to judge the movement by this scandal," Boswell said. "This does not mean the PTL ministry or the Assemblies of God are ineffective or sinful."

Stressing that he is speaking as an individual, not on behalf of his church, Boswell said he does not believe the blackmail money should have been paid.

"I do not know whether he was guilty or not," Boswell said, adding that he knows of few professions "more subject to rumor than a minister, especially one in the limelight."

minister's resignation while allegations of misconduct are pending and that they would continue to investigate.

Bakker told the Observer that he was going into full-time therapy with his wife at a treatment center in Palm Springs, Calif. Mrs. Bakker had said March 6 that she was being treated in California for a long-term dependency on prescription drugs.

Don Hardister, who described himself as Bakker's security guard, was quoted today by the Los Angeles Times as saying that Mrs. Bakker was receiving treatment at the Betty Ford Center. The Bakkers are secluded in a Spanish-style home near downtown Palm Springs that is protected by closed-circuit television and numerous guards, the Times said.

Falwell said he visited Bakker at the hospital, and that Bakker had acknowledged to him that he had sinned.

"It doesn't really matter whether someone seduced you or you raped someone," Falwell said. "If you're a man of God, a leader of the flock, (and) you yield, as far as I'm concerned, you're out of the ministry."

Falwell, in an interview Friday on Cable News Network, said Bakker's actions were "wrong, wrong, wrong."

But the Lynchburg, Va., minister preached forgiveness for Bakker.

"Yes, what Jim Bakker did is wrong. Yes, he is paying a terrible price," Falwell said. "But no, I'm no more willing to consign him to the scrap heap of human flesh than I would be willing to consign Richard Nixon to that."

Falwell said he realized the fundamentalist views he preaches at his Baptist church and on his "Old-Time Gospel Hour" television program may not appeal to some supporters of PTL.

Many viewers of "The Jim and Tammy Show" come from Pentecostal faiths and some embrace practices such as speaking in tongues and faith healing.

number of students in the district.

Steele and Interim Superintendent Tommy Cathey said that while the dropout rate is down slightly — and is lower than state and national averages — the district is still striving to bring it down further.

"Naturally, we're pleased," Steele said. "But we're striving to pick up the 4.4 percent that we've lost."

Cathey compared the dropout rate to test scores. He said even when the number of failing students declines, educators are concerned about those who have failed.

"It's something we're working on," Pampa High School Principal Oran Chappell said. "I'm still not satisfied."

Steele said the district is attacking the dropout problem with long- and short-term solutions.

The long-term answer, she said, is the district's developmental kindergarten program, which, she said, is designed to give students a better self-image in their early school years. She noted that students who drop out of school normally become disillusioned long before high school.

"It was just that they were old enough to leave us physically at that time," Steele explained. "We'd lost them long before."

On the short term, Steele said, the district is providing remedial classes and counseling in an effort to keep high school students from becoming discouraged. Vocational programs also help keep some students interested in school, she said.

Another potential problem addressed by the report is classroom size. State law currently requires first- and second-grade classrooms to be limited to 22 pupils, with the same limitation scheduled to be imposed on third- and fourth-grade classes in September 1988.

Cathey and Jane Steele look over performance report.

Although the report shows 132 elementary and middle school classrooms exceeding 22 students, Cathey said all are above second grade. He noted that a first-grade class was added at Lamar Elementary last winter, bringing the district into full compliance with the current law.

But, he warned, the district faces a space shortage in the future if the Legislature maintains the proposed 22-pupil limit in third and fourth grades. He said several solutions are currently being considered by the administration, ranging from portable classrooms to new construction.

Cathey said any solution will take into account financial considerations as well as the students' welfare.

Other major points addressed in the report include:

■ Condition of buildings. Roof repairs were completed at several schools last year and, although the report cites some structural problems at most schools, no drastic changes are planned, other than a re-roofing project at the vocational building, Cathey said.

■ Test scores. Steele said that that review the report should note that test score information listed in the report was compiled by the TEA and represents only a "guesstimate" at how each campus would perform on a standardized national test. She said actual test results in the district show that Pampa schools had little trouble meeting the TEA's expected levels.

■ Faculty. The report provides a breakdown of educational and ethnic backgrounds and years of experience of Pampa teachers. Roughly 33 percent of Pampa teachers have a master's degree and have been with the district an average of eight years.

Iran denounces 'Great Satan'

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini on Saturday appealed for Iranian unity, "particularly among those in charge," in an address broadcast live over television and radio to mark the Persian New Year.

The spiritual and revolutionary leader of Iran said the nation is at "a big and sensitive juncture." "Those living in this country, from whatever stratum and tribe they may be, particularly those in charge, should safeguard their fraternity and remain brothers," he stressed.

"Should we maintain our fraternity and should the armed forces, the (Revolutionary) Guards Corps, the volunteers, other forces and tribes, safeguard their fraternity, then we shall reach prosperity."

"God forbid that they...confront each other," said the white-bearded, 86-year-old patriarch of the Islamic Revolution.

Khomeini did not mention any specific discord among authorities or institutions of the Islamic Republic. But foreign observers noted indications in recent months of a power struggle between a faction aligned with the speaker of Iran's Parliament and one backing the cleric designated as Khomeini's successor.

Tehran Radio's broadcast of the speech, delivered in Farsi, was monitored and translated by the British Broadcasting Corp.

Khomeini has been reported in poor health recently. In the telecast, monitored in Nicosia, he appeared frail but otherwise in good health. He spoke slowly in a soft voice as he sat on a platform in the Jamaran mosque beside his north Tehran residence.

He raised his hands to acknowledge the cheers of the crowd. Many were in military uniform. The crowd chanted "long live Khomeini!" and jabbed clenched fists above their heads.

President Ali Khamenei, in a speech carried by the state-run radio right after Khomeini's, hailed what he called Iran's victory in a "propaganda and political war waged by the Great Satan" — Iran's name for the United States.

"Alert officials were able to neutralize the plots and make the enemy retreat," Khamenei said.

He did not elaborate, but clearly referred to the controversy surrounding secret U.S. arms sales to Iran and the problems that disclosure of the sales caused the Reagan administration.

Off Beat

By Paul
Pinkham

'Dawg' bite nips at reporter's patience

This "Off Beat" is really going to be an "On Beat."

And one of the "beats" I'm "on" regularly is the police "beat."

Every morning, I take my daily walk to City Hall to collect information on what the police have done in the preceding 24 hours.

There, waiting on a table, is a listing of whose car collided with whose, which convenience store had a six-pack of Lone Star stolen the night before and who's in the slammer for public drunkenness.

Generally, I have found Pampa police to be polite and cooperative whenever I have a question. But there is one thing they can't do. Write.

I don't mean write as in composing a beautiful piece of prose such as this.

I mean write as in communicating with pen or pencil so that somebody can read what the heck they're talking about.

I've been told doctors have bad writing, and judging from the scribble I've seen on some of my daughter's prescription tablets, that's probably true.

Lawyers are pretty bad, too, but they type everything on that elongated legal paper, so it doesn't become a problem. (The problem there is trying to stuff that oversized paper into a file cabinet when you're through with it, but that's another "On Beat" altogether.)

For gosh sakes, my own handwriting is nothing to brag about, let alone that of some of my colleagues. God forbid some attorney ever tries to subpoena my notes. He'd need a hieroglyphics expert to figure them out.

But we reporters type everything into one of these daddarned computers, where it is typeset so that you readers don't have to strain to read it. So, poor handwriting doesn't really become a problem for us, either, unless the power goes out (or we get subpoenaed).

But policemen (and -women) are an entirely different matter.

Actually, the women in Pampa's department aren't too bad. It's usually one of them I find to try to help figure out what one of the male officers has written.

"Does this say 'Coronado' or 'Colorado'?"
"Is this 'Mr. Jones from Hazel Street' or 'Mrs. Jenkins from Holly Lane'?"
"Is that a '4' or a '9'?"

Minor details, really, unless you happen to be either Mr. Jones or Mrs. Jenkins, living either at 944 Hazel or 449 Holly and one or the other of you has just gotten busted for marijuana possession, while the other is a well-respected member of First Baptist Church!

Or trying to figure out whether North Crest actually means Crest Avenue or Northcrest Drive.

One day, I came upon a report of a "dawg bite" that occurred in the 5500 block of Williamson Street.

Not having been in Pampa long at the time, I dutifully wrote down the information I needed, corrected the misspelled "dawg," walked back to the office and proceeded to type it up.

It was then that Fred Parker, our staff address specialist, informed me that Pampa has no Williamson Street, and even if it did, no street in Pampa has a 5500 block.

Come to find out, the "dog" bite actually occurred in the 2200 block of Williston.

Close, but no cigar.

Come to think of it, maybe our police have a second problem: Spelling. Especially the tough names like Atchison, Frederic or Montagu.

But, hey, if that's the only complaint we can pin on these guys, we're lucky!

DALLAS (AP) — For most of its 75 years, Southern Methodist University has been run by the big guns in Dallas' business and social circles.

But after an explosive backfire sparked by a pay-for-players scandal in the school's football program, the way things are run there are undergoing a profound change that is dismantling the old network of power.

The school's Board of Trustees voted Friday to scrap the Board of Governors, saying that smaller, more elite group suffered from a crisis in credibility that would only continue to hurt the Southwest Conference school.

The trustees said they had no choice after Gov. Bill Clements startled the state by claiming that at least half of the 21 Board of Governors knew about improper payments to SMU football players and decided to phase them out gradually instead of stopping them cold.

The 71-member Board of Trustees decided to replace the governors board with an interim executive committee whose roster doesn't include most of the high-power names caught up in the messy melee.

Absent from the list are some of the university's most prominent backers whose financial contributions are symbolized in buildings at the university that bear their names — Edwin L. Cox, Robert Dedman, Ruth Collins Sharp, George M. Underwood Jr.

"A few months ago I was really skeptical about the leadership," student body president Trevor Pearlman said Friday. But "the good ol' boy network I think that has existed in the past has been dealt with."

The recommendations represent a shift of power to the trustees who in the past have virtually abdicated their power to the smaller board, said the Rev. Leighton Farrell, chairman of SMU's Committee on Governance and a United Methodist pastor.

"We wanted to send a clear signal that the board of trustees is the group charged with the responsibility," Farrell said. "It will be a more powerful group. The executive committee simply acts at the direction of the board of trustees."

Dennis E. Murphree of Houston, a trustee who was named to the interim committee, called the new group "younger and more diverse."

"This executive committee is a completely different animal from what it was," he said. "I'm real bullish on the future of the school."

The old Board of Governors had served as an executive committee of the Board of Trustees, which runs the university. SMU is owned by the United Methodist Church.

The replacement interim committee will serve until the trustees meet May 8 to consider a permanent restructuring plan, which is expected to include a permanent executive committee of 12 voting members, with the presidents of the student body and alumni association serving as non-voting members.

On Feb. 25, the NCAA abolished football at SMU in 1987 because of a booster slush fund that paid $61,000 to 13 players after the school was placed on its sixth probation in August 1985.

Clements, who resigned as chairman of the Board of Governors before taking office in January, revealed March 3 that he and several other board members knew of the payments.

The ensuing controversy led to the plan adopted Friday that Farrell said would also reduce the number of trustees to 41 — 36 elected members, SMU's provost and the presidents of the university, faculty senate, student body and alumni association.

The trustees would meet every other month, leaving day-to-day administrative duties to the university president.

Big Brothers program detailed

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

Spending a couple of hours a week with a youngster seems like such a minor endeavor.

But, says Rebecca Fain, national field representative with Big Brothers-Big Sisters of America, those few hours may make a valuable difference to children of single parents.

Fain addressed the merits and the need for a Pampa Big Brothers Club at Friday's Downtown Kiwanis luncheon meeting. She was to have led at a public forum Friday night at the Pampa Community Building, but only Fain and four others showed up.

Fain, who spent six years with a Big Brothers program in Anchorage, Alaska before moving to Santa Cruz, Calif., two years ago, told the club about the risks involved with growing up in a single-parent home.

Fain said children from single-parent homes are four times more likely than other kids to have problems at school or with the law and 10 times more likely to have failed marriages.

"The potential can be a drain on the community," Fain said.

But it doesn't have to be that way, she added, sharing what she called a Big Brothers success story.

Fain recalled: "In Alaska, a new bank vice president moved to town and said he was once a Little Brother. He said he grew up in the slums of Providence, R.I., and he came to a Big Brothers organization to find adult companionship."

Fain said that when the man grew up, he learned that half of the kids he had grown up with were dead.

A group of Pampa residents is trying to set up a Big Brothers-Big Sisters organization in Pampa. Supporters note that a feasibility study revealed that 1,200 Pampa children live in single-parent homes.

And, Fain said, it's not just low-income children.

"It's basically the kid next door," she said, noting that the target group is children between the ages of 6 to 16.

Fain said that in order to maintain a Big Brothers organization, the local group needs money.

"You have to hire an interviewer to screen your children and your volunteers," she said, adding that the average cost to match a child with an adult volunteer is $400 per year.

"And we screen the parents, the children and the volunteers carefully," she said. "And we have a training program for our volunteers. That's real important."

"Next you need individuals to be on the board of directors," Fain added.

Finally, Fain said, the organizations need adult volunteers, which could be any age, social class or marital status.

"We have one woman who is 84 years old," Fain said. "And 60 percent of our volunteers are singles themselves. We have a new kind of matching for young couples."

Fain

Fain said the Big Brothers program is not intended to be a baby-sitting service or a surrogate parent service.

"Fun and entertainment should not be a major function of the program," Fain said, adding that volunteers are encouraged to have their Little Brothers or Sisters to help out with such chores as gardening or washing the car.

She added that the organization tries to avoid situations in which the volunteer comes between the child and the parent.

"In situations like that, we refer the parent and the child to a counselor," she said.

Ambulances

Skeen, Pampa Medical Services and Borger Paramedical Services were sold to the Arizona-based corporation, with Skeen later promoted to vice president of health services for Rural-Metro in its corporate structure.

Rural-Metro, an employee-owned corporation, also provides security services, life safety systems and wheelchair vans and buses for the medically vulnerable. The corporation also provides fire protection services, home health care, an urgent care clinic, 24-hour respiratory services, pharmaceuticals and a line of hospital products for use in the home in various areas of the nation.

But in Pampa, the only corporate division is the ambulance service, Howard said, though there's a possibility some of the other services may be added in future years.

Skeen said in a prepared statement: "As our growth continues into the next decade, it becomes increasingly important for our customers, both the citizens and the government entities we contract with, as well as potential customers, to know that as a national corporation, we not only offer responsive quality care but considerable cost-savings in the process from economics of scale."

Rural-Metro began pioneering private fire protection services in 1948, becoming the nation's largest provider in the process. Over the past several years the company has been undergoing rapid expansion in offering a range of emergency services.

Five subsidiaries operating in Texas and New Mexico underwent the name change in January "to place them more visibly under the corporate umbrellas" of the parent corporation, noted Chris Black, operations manager of the Medical Services Systems Inc. division of Rural-Metro, with his office located in Borger.

The local ambulance service is part of the MSS Division.

Other ambulance companies in the division subsidiaries in New Mexico are Three Crosses Ambulance Co. of Las Cruces and A-1 Ambulance of Roswell, Tucumcari and Torrence County.

All these subsidiaries operate under Regional Manager Bob Phillips. Black provides local management for Pampa and Borger. Beginning this year, the subsidiaries' operations are operating collectively under the banner of Rural-Metro Corp. of New Mexico-Texas, with regional and local management remaining the same.

Howard said the merger has "been a very positive move for Pampa Medical Services," both for the employees and for the community.

"It's been very beneficial to all concerned," he stated, adding that the merger "certainly wasn't hostile."

The company has more assets and greater access to medical equipment, he noted. Also, the local employees can obtain more training tapes and films and information from personnel experts.

Employees also have a more stable employment opportunity, Howard said. In addition, the company has a stronger financial base, with corporation assets at more than $200 million.

The ambulance service is the fastest growing aspect of Rural-Metro, Howard said.

The merger also benefits its customers, he said. Employees have to be state-certified before being hired. Those coming in from out-of-state will have to meet Texas certification requirements before employment, he noted.

Currently, Rural-Metro Paramedic has four full-time employees, all paramedics. In addition, there are eight part-time employees in the community, including one paramedic and seven emergency management technicians (EMT's).

"Really, that's the strength of the company, the part-timers," Howard said, since they provide more backup personnel strength for the company operations.

There is always at least one paramedic on duty, with one on call for each shift.

Howard said the merger was achieved without any adverse effects on services offered to its customers. The merger was approved by the city and county, with the current contract terms kept intact.

Contract renewal "will be coming up soon," he noted, with Rural-Metro negotiating with the governing bodies as Pampa Medical Services had done in past years.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Bureaucrats abuse child abuse funds

It didn't make a big splash, but the recent release of a report on child abuse by the House Select Committee on Children, Families, and Youth already is making an impact on congressional budget discussions. That was the intent, of course, behind a report more notable for its inflammatory figures and conclusions than its facts.

The figures are indeed startling: Reports of child abuse and neglect increased 55 percent between 1981 and 1985. The report's conclusion is predictable: Cuts in federal programs mean that states do not have the resources to combat the problem.

The 18 committee Democrats must have had a gleam in their eyes when they signed off on this one. The only trouble is, the figures are less than factual and the conclusion has little to do with solving a real problem.

The survey, which started with questionnaires to the nation's governors and ended with follow-up interviews, made no attempt to compensate for increases in child-abuse reports owing to better reporting methods. For example, Arizona instituted a new computerized system during the period.

A computer switch-over had caused a similar problem for the Chicago-based National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse. It released a report in January that showed a 133 percent increase in abuse-related deaths in Kansas, from nine in 1984 to 21 in 1985. But the 1985 figure had to be revised to 12 after it was discovered that officials failed to delete from the computer those cases where investigations subsequently ruled out child abuse as a factor.

The House committee staff failed to detail how many, if any, of the reported incidents subsequently proved groundless. In California, police, medical, and school personnel who suspect child abuse are required by law to file reports with their county Child Abuse Registry based on evidence no more substantial than the fact that a child is quiet in class or seems afraid of adults. Many reports subsequently prove groundless.

The purpose here is not to belittle the problem of child abuse, which is indeed a horrible crime, but to suggest that in the national rush to treat a disease, too many are crying "epidemic!"

Then there is the report's conclusion, which swallows whole the governors' complaints that they don't have enough resources to combat child abuse and blames federal budget cuts.

In most states, child abuse falls under the social welfare bureaucracy. At present, 22 cents out of every dollar allocated to welfare goes to a needy recipient; the rest goes to support the bureaucrats. For this the committee would give the governors even more money?

In instances where children are being abused by their families there is a real need for some agency — even the state — to step in to protect the children.

But the fact that the number of child abuse reports has increased so dramatically during the past five years is more a cause to wonder about the methods of reporting than a cause to worry about dramatic increases in actual abuse. It certainly isn't a reason to throw even more tax money to the bureaucrats.

Berry's World

"HOW IS ORAL DOING WITH THE FUND-RAISER?"

Walter Williams

Can't engineer social justice

Have you ever wondered why honest, intelligent people line up on different sides of an issue like minimum wages as a means to help poor workers?

While we may be tempted to label one group stupid or uncaring, depending on our view on the subject, the real answer might lie elsewhere — such as their vision of the world. If you believe an employer needs a certain number of workers to do a particular job, you might support the increased minimum wage law — earning $5 is better than $3. However, if you believe employers might automate or go out of business in the face of higher labor costs, you'd probably be against minimum wages; instead of losing their jobs workers are better off with the $3 an hour.

Dr. Thomas Sowell, a brilliant scholar of the Hoover Institution, in Stanford, Calif., has developed this line of thought in a Conflict of Visions (William Morrow & Company, 1987, $15.95). Sowell begins by observing how the same people often line up on opposite sides of various political issues. I've observed the same thing. A bumper sticker calling for "Save the Whales" is quite often accompanied by something like "Stamp Out Apartheid." Another bumper duet urges you to "Support Your Local Police" and "Build More Nuclear Plants." But it's rare to see "Support Your Local Police" and "Stamp Out Apartheid" on the same car.

Sowell says there are two visions of the world — the constrained and the unconstrained. The constrained sees trade-offs; the unconstrained sees solutions. The constrained vision sees incentives as the driving force of human behavior; the unconstrained vision sees intentions. Therefore, the constrained vision sees good as a result of incentives like higher wages, profits, and rent. New Yorkers get beef and potatoes not because Texas ranchers and Idaho farmers are well-intentioned, but because the ranchers and farmers want more profits. For people with the unconstrained vision, unintentional social benefits are scarcely worthy of notice and sometimes to be held beneath contempt.

The unconstrained vision looks at results instead of process to determine justice. Sowell says, "Central to the concept of social justice is the notion that individuals are entitled to some share of the national wealth produced by society, simply by virtue of being members of that society, and irrespective of any individual contribution made or not made to the production of that wealth." Their share is seen not as a matter of charity but justice.

This results-oriented approach to justice is meaningless. Can anyone tell whether a poker game is just simply by knowing that one person wins more than another? I say no. One person may win more because he's an astute player — or because he cheats. The only way to tell whether the game is just is to examine its process — did everyone play according to the agreed-upon rules? Sowell says this is the question we must ask about social results, such as income distribution — was the process just? Were there restrictions on individual initiative and voluntary exchange?

Hitler's Germany is an example of the unconstrained vision. Sowell says Nazism was the culmination of socialist thought which prompted disrespect for the rule of law in favor of fashioning specific social results. The tyrant's Trojan Horse is government machinery to achieve the social results of the unconstrained vision.

Sowell's excellent work deserves our praise for his path-breaking efforts to get us to examine our visions.

Could replace Ann Landers

Ann Landers, adviser to the lovelorn, is leaving the Chicago Sun-Times, where I used to work, and moving across Michigan Avenue to the rival Chicago Tribune.

It was bound to happen. Columnists Bob Greene and Mike Royko, two of the best, jumped ship and moved to the Tribune.

I was at the Sun-Times nearly 30 years myself. Actually I was there nearly three years, but it seemed more like 30.

Chicago wasn't my kind of town, as I have noted before. The weather didn't suit my clothes, and this woman left me there one cold night, and that's all I want to say about that.

Still, I'm loyal to an old employer and now that the Sun-Times has launched a nationwide search for someone to take Miss Landers' place, I would like to come to the rescue.

I wouldn't move back to Chicago for all the gold on Division Street, but I could do an advice column to the lovelorn from my desk in Atlanta and send it to Chicago by Greyhound.

Don't laugh. You're dealing with a man of great experience when it comes to love.

Currently, auditioning is under way for the part of the fourth Mrs. Grizzard (Dial 1-800-555-LUST if you are interested), so I feel completely qualified to answer letters from those who have a need to know in the area of romance.

"Grizzard is my name, romance is my game," is how I introduce myself to the various lovelies who cross my path despite the fact they usually react either by calling the police or kneeling me in the groin.

I'm not all brag here. I can even give examples of things I know about love, marriage and that other stuff. Remember these points:

1. Never marry a man whose mother still refers to him as "Sonny Boy."
2. Never marry a woman whose mother has a tattoo and has voting privileges in a bike gang.

3. Never marry anybody who has more troubles than you do.

4. Remember that bad breath doesn't make him or her a bad person.

5. Love conquers all. Wear a gas mask if you have to.

6. Never get involved with anybody who says he is a "prince under the sheets." He may mean he's a member of the Klan.

7. Beware of any man whose friends call him "Snake," and any woman whose friends refer to her in any way that begins with the term "Big," as in "Big Mama" or "Big Hazel," or "Big Noise from Winnetka."

9. Never get married early in the morning and spoil the rest of the day.

10. Beware there is no such thing as free sex anymore. The least it will cost you is the price of a condom.

I anxiously await the Sun-Times call.

Uncle Sam defiles parks

When private corporations destroy land or pollute water, the outcry deafens the ears.

Yet no matter how the federal government mistreats the environment, its bureaucrats always get another chance.

Let's hope there are limits to this indulgence. If not, the glories of the greater Yellowstone region — including the park, seven national forests and a few private parcels — could be at risk.

A recent report by the Wilderness Society documents the danger. This group may not seem like the most evenhanded source, but many of its conclusions are backed by independent observers, by fiscal conservatives tired of supporting wasteful public policies and even by the research arm of the Library of Congress.

Logging is perhaps the greatest threat to the national forests surrounding Yellowstone. It is also the least defensible activity. The timber harvest not only degrades the environment, it actually loses money — an average of 55 cents for each dollar spent on production. Taxpayers, naturally, make up the difference.

Logging doesn't make sense at higher elevations, where yields are low and building roads is expensive. But the Forest Service retreats behind its "multiple-use" mandate for public lands, or solemnly suggests that the way to save a forest is to raze it.

At stake is a habitat that shields the grizzly bear, elk, wolverine, bighorn sheep and other magnificent animals. Fortunately, according to a recent study in Nature magazine, only 4 percent of Yellowstone Park's original mammalian species are extinct. But that record could quickly erode. More than one-fourth of all species in Yosemite, Rocky Mountain, Mount Rainier and Bryce Canyon parks are gone, and most can never be reintroduced.

The Forest Service isn't solely to blame. It controls the area around Yellowstone, but not the park itself. That privilege goes to the Park Service, an agency whose white-knight image also needs a second look.

The first steps toward such a reappraisal were taken by Alston Chase in his stinging 1986 book, "Playing God in Yellowstone." A rancher and writer from Livingston, Mont., Chase spent years bird-dogging Park Service policies.

There is no doubt, for example, that the Park Service accidentally hastened the decline of the grizzly — and then attempted to disguise the tragedy.

"When I began research in Yellowstone in 1981," Chase recalled in a speech last fall in Big Sky, Mont., "the Park Service, in its published literature, was claiming a grizzly population of 350 and a black bear population of 650. The actual number of grizzlies estimated by its own biologists, however, was at that time under 200, and the number of black bears ... was closer to 50."

Little has changed. Observes Chase: "The July/August 1986 issue of National Parks, an organ of the National Parks Conservation Association, reported that Yellowstone supports 2,000 mule deer and hundreds of moose (and) bighorn sheep, yet these claims, too, rest on complete fabrications. Rather than 2,000 mule deer, researchers ... found 76; rather than hundreds of bighorns, the recent census found 132."

Americans enjoy an understandable love affair with their natural heritage. When searching for its enemies, the average citizen habitually turns his gaze toward private enterprise. It's time people considered the possibility that they've let a fox loose in the henhouse, that the official protector of these public lands — the federal government — has become perhaps the greatest threat

City workers fight to make ends meet

To the editor:

I would like to comment on the letter from Walter Shed on March 15 concerning being overtaxed. We are overtaxed, but let's not blame our city employees for the high taxes.

Mr. Shed commented that city of Pampa firemen make $86.92 a day. That only comes to $1,658 a month, and that is before taxes. Our city employees pay city taxes just like everyone else in this city. After federal taxes and Social Security are taken out, that only leaves $1,379 a month.

Now out of that comes your retirement—before you get your check. Then you have to pay a house payment, car payment, house and car insurance, utilities, clothes and food for your kids, and health insurance. If you just break even, you are lucky.

You live from payday to payday. I don't know of any city employee who could take a pay cut and work for minimum wage, but Mr. Shed seems to want this to happen. If it did, the people of Pampa would be fighting their own fires, arresting their own burglars, taking their own trash to the dump, sweeping and repairing their own streets, and all of the other things the city employees do for us.

The city of Borger's employees make more money than our city employees, and Borger is smaller than Pampa.

I would like to see Mr. Shed live on $1,300 a month.

I don't like some of the things that are happening with the city, but let's not put the blame on our city employees for wanting a decent wage.

Rule of the few

To the editor:

At the commission meeting on Feb. 24 was a group of people who would be the saviors of our city.

Influenced by the petition of a few, they would make the policies for all, if they were elected.

While I agree with the decision to elect I. Ward 2, I could never support an elected commission that would be so weak that it would be intimidated by every petition drawn up.

Let's keep a good thing going. Don't replace what we have with people who cannot think for themselves.

City workers have respectable training

To the editor:

The voters in our city should look at what the average wages are. I believe they would find they are very close or under other cities of the same size as Pampa.

I for one cannot understand why anyone could believe that our professional people are overpaid.

We are just trying to do the best job for the people in this community.

Just a reminder for the taxpayer: These city employees are highly trained, and it costs money to train and to educate these people.

I would hate to try to live without the protection they provide.

Not very many people put as much work out as these people. Some of us work at part-time jobs just to make ends meet. Maybe some people think we do this for fun. I work 96 hours a week.

Some people believe that we do not need fire or police protection, or they think they can get it for nothing.

Just a little advice: You get what you pay for. Take a look at your fire insurance rates and compare that for an average or the Pampa Fire Department's key rate, with the state.

Adequate protection is what keeps your insurance rates low. That's why the people get the fire protection they need.

Pay us to save your property, or pay high insurance rates.

I think the people and taxpayers would rather have the protection here.

I would, even if I did not work for the city.

I remember all the servicemen killed to protect my right to vote, not just the ones from Gray County, but the USA.

Just think how many people would die without our protection. One life saved is worth it all. After all, anyone can become a victim of a fire or a crime.

Animals that place should have buyers

To the editor:

Once again, we have the stock show and sale over with. And once again, it didn't make much difference where the animal placed in the show, it depended on who you were.

There were many instances when an animal that didn't place at all, or very low, or even last, brought more money than an animal that placed very high.

And you could sure tell when someone from outside of Gray County was selling an animal. If they didn't bring their own buyer, they were just about out of luck.

This is not what our children should learn from being in the stock show.

There are many businesses that didn't contribute to the sale this year because of the economy, but also because of the way the sale is run. We need to sell the animals that place in the show and not try to sell all of them.

There is no way to please everybody, but I believe things can be run a little more fairly.

Thanks for caring

To the editor:

Again I am writing to say thank you to the many caring citizens of Pampa.

Last Sunday, the Pampa Noon Lions Club sponsored the donkey basketball game to raise funds for our daughter, Jessica.

What a wonderful feeling it was when I attended the game and saw how hard these club members worked on Jessica's behalf. A special thanks goes also to all those who participated in the game itself.

And we truly appreciate all the businesses involved and each person who came to Sunday's game.

I must add another big thank you to the man who got the whole thing started. Tommy Richardson, a very kind and giving man, approached the Lions Club about Jessica. He explained to them about our daughter's illness and the awesome amount of money that her treatment has required—and still requires.

It has been a heavy burden to us, which Tommy wanted to alleviate. He is indeed a wonderful man to whom we owe much gratitude.

To each of these people, we are truly grateful. The Lions Club has shown us that it is a hard-working and caring group. I only wish that I could fully express our deep gratitude to each of these people.

From the Montgomery family, we ask that a shower of God's blessings be poured out on those who cared about our Jessica.

Nothing to indicate banker did anything

To the editor:

In Tuesday's newspaper there was an article titled "Banker resigns." I think it is a shame when our paper cannot find enough news to fill its pages that it resorts to publishing articles that are filled with half-truths that mislead the readers.

The article implied that Mr. Chuck Quarles was under investigation from two sources but presented zero facts to substantiate the accusation.

I do not have any idea whether Mr. Chuck Quarles has done anything wrong, but I thought that our Constitution guaranteed that everyone was presumed to be innocent until proven guilty.

For all any of us know, Mr. Chuck Quarles might have gotten a better job offer that required a quick move.

I think that almost everyone puts a lot of trust in what we read in the newspaper. Most of the time we are not disappointed. All newspapers share a huge responsibility to be accurate and fair in their reporting of the facts. I hope our newspaper has not forgotten about this responsibility.

It is easy to tear down someone's reputation in the paper or by word-of-mouth but almost impossible to rebuild that reputation, even when the person is entirely innocent.

I sincerely hope that our newspaper will take a long, hard look at the way it reports the news.

We're coming home

To the editor:

In the past 20 years, your paper has carried a few news items that involved my brother and me.

The articles were all about bad news.

We are well into our 11th year of continuous confinement now and approaching the 20th anniversary of our criminal careers on April 17.

We have a difficult story we'd like to tell you and the community. It's not for sale.

We are expecting to be released in the next 90 days, and it is important to us to say what has to be said now.

Please don't expect two "gunslingers" or a bunch of self-exalting lies. We are two West Texas boys gone bad, Mr. Editor, and now we want to come home.

Please come.

Convoy of protest against parking ban

To the editor:

Points to consider against the proposed truck parking ordinance:

(1) Living next to an independent trucker might be annoying at times. But the annoyances would be minor grievances when considering that the trucks create livelihoods. Why make it harder for truckers to make a living here?

If this ordinance passes, it would increase their costs (in hard times). Our economy is hurting. Pampa needs to encourage business, not discourage it.

(2) Most merchandise in Pampa is trucked in. Where do these trucks park to unload and load? Some park on city streets and alleys. For smaller businesses and some of the downtown areas this is a necessity. This ordinance would make lawbreakers out of the truckers servicing these businesses.

(3) For those who say the trucks are tearing up the streets, let them enforce the laws already on the books for overweight trucks.

(4) What about truckers, who stop and visit with family while passing through? With this ordinance, if a trucker parks in front of "Aunt Sally's" house, he will be a lawbreaker.

Pampa doesn't need any truck-parking ordinance. This ordinance would only make problems. In my opinion, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

Clear our reputation

To the editor:

Very rarely do so many emotions come from one person about one publication. A month ago, Larry Hollis wrote an article in the "Off Beat" column entitled, "Something to say."

Considering that I was the local high school columnist to whom he referred, I should have been outraged. But instead, I was sympathetic towards the people who attended the Romeo and Juliet performance. I was a little miffed because it did make me look like the ringleader of a bunch of prepubescent kids.

Last Sunday, I was thoroughly angry at the "Letters to the Editor" section because of the letter about said performance. Four straight weeks of letters from angry play attendants are entirely too much to get the point effectively across. The first two weeks were enough to state the fact well, and the readers get tired of hearing the whining.

Most recently, Mr. Hollis wrote another column entitled, "Nothing like respect for the law." In this, he stated that adults are as ignorant of the law, if not more, than the youth. Thank you, Mr. Hollis, for helping us try to clear our bad reputation.

Oil market turns tables on Texans

Texas guest columnist

By KEN BRODNAX
The Odessa American

ODESSA (AP)—Amazing how much difference a few years can make.

When oil prices were soaring, West Texas was fat, dumb and happy. The unofficial motto was something like: "We're doin' great, just leave us alone."

There was a certain unspoken arrogance in the air. Bumper stickers that read, "Let the bastards freeze in the dark" epitomized the Permian Basin attitude toward other parts of the country.

The biggest aggravation in those days was an influx of "furriners" who had come to the sunny Southwest in hopes of getting a piece of the hot action.

But as we have learned, those who gloat most certainly will grovel.

The golden rule, in this case, should be, "Don't thumb your noses at the less fortunate because there will come a time when they're looking down their noses at you."

Hard times in the oil patch have taken their toll.

And, sure enough, more than a few people in other sections of the nation are silently snickering.

Others are more direct—they're laughing in our faces.

Texans who travel frequently are learning not to volunteer their home state. Plenty of folks, especially the ones who forked over much dinero to heat their homes and drive their cars during the energy crunches, don't mind dealing some verbal revenge to those who might have been vaguely responsible.

Meanwhile, we continue to choke down regular portions of humble pie.

While keeping a constant eye on the price of a barrel of crude, we pin future hopes on pies in the sky—things like superconducting supercolliders and maybe even prisons.

Everyone keeps throwing around terms like diversification. This time, they say, we'll learn our lesson. During future booms, if there are to be any, we won't count on petroleum to be our sole salvation.

Fiercely independent West Texans who have complained about federal spending practices for years are learning how to bid on government projects.

West Texans are learning how to get by longer on less. The once high and mighty are learning how to keep a low profile after their long tumble from the pinnacle to the pits.

All those economic luxuries that we took for granted are but memories. The best thing that can be said about current times is that Permian Basin residents have come to appreciate the little things.

A drop in the unemployment rate, however slight, is a reason for cheering. Any new business venture deserves a standing ovation. Things that weren't even worth discussing during the boom have become precious gems.

Meanwhile, we've found other happenings that make us yawn.

Another business goes under. Ho hum, that's nothing new. Another banker is indicted. So what. Another bank fails. Big deal.

Actually, most West Texans are not that cold-hearted. Continuing bad news hurts. But they prefer to maintain the stoic demeanor that has become their trademark.

Just as they were nonchalant, but maybe a bit boastful, about heady success, West Texans accept cruel twists of fate.

But they certainly would echo the plaintive cry from followers of dismal sports teams—"just wait 'til next year."

Reagan to veto road bill

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, complaining of budget-busting pork barrel spending, promises to veto a politically popular, $88 billion highway construction bill that allows states to raise the speed limit to 65 mph on rural interstate highways.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., says a veto would provide an important test of Reagan's strength in Congress as he seeks to rebound from the political damage of the Iran-Contra affair.

Reagan supports the speed limit change, but opposes the "favorite pork barrel projects" of individual legislators.

But Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, an ardent Reagan supporter, thinks the president would be making a big mistake.

Symms said that's what he told White House Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker Jr. in a telephone call Friday, shortly after the Senate gave final congressional approval to the 65 mph speed limit on a 60-21 roll call vote.

The Senate then tacked the speed limit provision onto the previously approved highway bill and sent it to the president. The bill provides $70 billion for highway construction and $18 billion for mass transit over the next five years.

"I think it's a mistake for the president to veto this bill, and he is very likely to be overridden by Congress... because highways are so important to this country," Symms said in an interview.

"On the whole, I don't think a program that's as non-partisan and important to the country as the highway program is a place for the president to exert his clout," he added. "I think he's getting some bad advice on this one."

Dole told reporters in Salem, N.H., Thursday night that "the veto will be a key test of the president's strength, or the president will be back in the soup."

The Republican leader said he wasn't sure whether Reagan had enough support in Congress to sustain his veto. It requires two-thirds majorities of both the House and Senate to override a veto, meaning that anything less in either chamber would be enough to sustain the president's action.

Dole acknowledged that the vote would be close, and Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., seemed to agree. Asked if he had the votes to override a highway bill veto, Byrd replied: "I don't know."

Reagan himself left no doubt where he stands. "Congress can't have it both ways," he said in a statement issued Friday before the Senate vote. "They can't talk about cutting unnecessary deficit spending and then vote in favor of bills that bust the budget."

Negotiator suffers heart attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — Max M. Kampelman, the chief U.S. negotiator in U.S.-Soviet arms control talks, was hospitalized Friday with what an assistant described as "a minor heart attack."

Kampelman, 66, was sent to George Washington University Hospital by his physician earlier in the day, the assistant said. "The prognosis is good and he should be out in about a week," she said.

He was scheduled to testify next Tuesday to the Senate Appropriations Defense Subcommittee on President Reagan's program to develop a space-based defense against missiles.

The negotiations in Geneva recently took on new steam. Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev proposed reaching an agreement "without delay" to eliminate medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe.

The U.S. delegation headed by Kampelman responded with the proposed text of a treaty, and the talks were extended through next week.

But an American official, who demanded anonymity, said the pace had slackened again and that the Soviets were expected to propose a text of their own, which would contribute to delay.

The official said he did not expect an agreement to be concluded in the current round of talks. The next one is scheduled to begin on April 23 with Kampelman back at the bargaining table.

"We'll have to see," Terry Shroeder, a spokesman, said on whether Kampelman will be well enough to be there. "He's been working very hard, and been working long hours," Shroeder said.

List of FBI candidates cut to five

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The list of candidates for FBI director has narrowed to five men, including three judges, a prominent private lawyer and a federal administrator, knowledgeable sources report.

The sources, both inside and outside the executive branch, said the FBI has been asked by Attorney General Edwin Meese III, head of the search effort, to do background checks on the men on this short list.

The sources, who declined to be identified, said late last week that the list includes U.S. District Judge D. Lowell Jensen of San Francisco and four other white men.

The sources said none of the other four has been named as yet in any published or broadcast speculation about whom President Reagan will nominate to succeed William H. Webster, who has been nominated to take over the CIA.

The other two judges on the list also work outside Washington as does the private attorney. The federal administrator works in Washington but not in an investigative, law enforcement agency and not in a job appointed by the president.

Meese is holding the names under tight security, the sources said, because he is under pressure from various people who have suggested candidates.

One source said that the secrecy allows administration officials to avoid telling these outsiders that their candidates did not make the final list. At the same time, this source said, the names of several men who are out of the running were leaked to mollify some of the outsiders.

The sources said six men prominently mentioned in published speculation about candidates either never have been or no longer are under consideration.

These six were identified as: Supreme Court Justice Byron R. "Whizzer" White; Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.; former top-level FBI official Lee Colwell; U.S. Circuit Court Judge William W. Wilkins Jr.; unsuccessful Michigan gubernatorial candidate William Lucas; and Detroit Police Chief William L. Hart.

The sources said Jensen — for decades a close friend and associate of Meese — has expressed reluctance to take the post.

But the sources said that the FBI background check on Jensen has continued because Meese plans to make another appeal to him to take the job.

The sources said Jensen's wife has objected to returning to Washington, where Jensen served as deputy attorney general before Reagan named him to the federal bench in San Francisco.

Jensen, for many years the elected Democratic county prosecutor in Oakland, Calif., where he once worked with Meese, has declined to say flatly he would not accept the FBI post when asked about it by reporters.

The sources said Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., ranking Republican on the Judiciary Committee, has been trying to promote Wilkins, a judge on the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

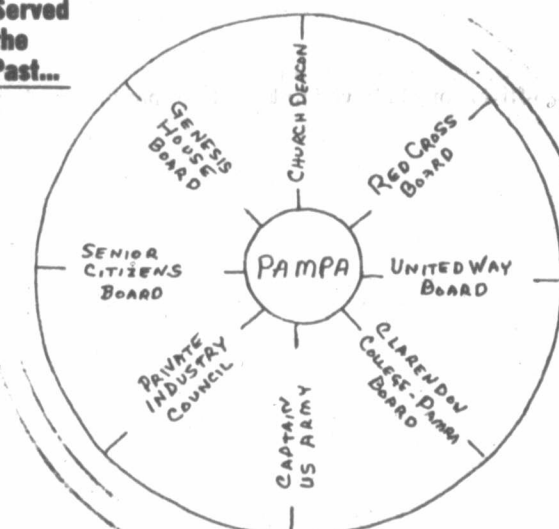

But one source said Wilkins has been ruled out at least since he voted last week, as head of the U.S. Sentencing Commission, against restoring the federal death penalty. The panel is revamping the system for sentencing federal prisoners.

AIDS drug isn't a cure

NEW YORK (AP) — The government's approval of the first anti-AIDS drug is being greeted with cautious optimism from doctors and patient groups. But they say that while the drug will help some patients, it's far from a cure.

The drug — called azidothymidine, or AZT — can prolong the lives of some patients with acquired immune deficiency syndrome, but it's highly toxic to the blood-producing bone marrow cells. As a consequence, some patients taking the drug develop anemia and require blood transfusions.

Sale of AZT won approval Friday from the federal Food and Drug Administration.

To be marketed under the trade name Retrovir by Burroughs Wellcome Co. of Research Triangle Park, N.C., the drug — taken in capsule form every four hours — could cost a typical patient $10,000 or more for a year's supply.

Contracts announced for Panhandle paving

AMARILLO — The apparent low bidders to seal coat 251 miles of Panhandle highways and to rehabilitate 49 miles of U.S. Highway 60 in Gray, Carson and Potter counties have been announced by the state highway department.

Meanwhile, a Pampa man has been selected to oversee the work on Highway 60.

Department of Highways and Public Transportation District Engineer A.L. McKee said Missouri Petroleum Products Inc. of St. Louis is the apparent low bidder on two projects to seal coat the 251 miles of area roadways.

Missouri Petroleum's bid of $932,887 was the lowest of nine submitted to the highway and public transportation commission to seal coat 136 miles of highways in the western Panhandle. The same firm's $856,959 bid was the lowest of nine to seal coat 115 miles of eastern Panhandle highways.

J.H. Strain and Sons Inc. of Tye submitted the apparent low bid of $1.7 million to rehabilitate 18 miles of Highway 60 from 5.9 miles east of Pampa to just west of Pampa.

L.A. Fuller and Sons of Amarillo is the apparent low bidder at $1.1 million to rehabilitate 21 miles of the highway from northeast of Amarillo to a spot east of Pampa.

The seal coat work, which includes stretches of road in Gray and Hemphill counties, is expected to be started and completed this summer, while the work on Highway 60 will begin this spring and take about seven months to complete.

Jerry L. Raines of Pampa will direct the work on Highway 60, where some of the existing surface will be heated and then planed off.

A new course of asphaltic concrete pavement will then be applied to the riding surface. Culverts will receive safety end treatments, delineators will be replaced, pavement edges will be backfilled.

In Gray County, seal-coating work will take place on Farm to Market Road 750, from Highway 60 east 2.1 miles to Texas Highway 273.

The Hemphill County work will take place on four stretches of roadway: U.S. Highway 83 from Highway 60 north 12.2 miles to the Lipscomb County line; Farm to Market Road 1453 from the Lipscomb County line south 5.8 miles; Farm to Market Road 3044, from Highway 83 east 3.2 miles; and Ranch to Market Road 2758 from Highway 60 at Glazier east five miles.

Mobeetie grabs top spot in play contest

FOLLETT — Tales about a selfish sea captain and a happy scarecrow grabbed top spots at District 1A one-act play competition Friday in Follett.

Mobeetie High School's Mr. Flannery's Ocean and Booker's The Happy Scarecrow topped an eight-school program and will advance to area one-act competition April 4 at Amarillo College.

There they will compete against whoever wins the March 30 district competition among Miami's Up the Down Staircase, Vega's Little Women, Channing's Don Quixote and Phillips' Once Upon a Playground.

Mobeetie students also grabbed best actor and actress honors in the competition. Greg Langley won his award for his portrayal of Mr. Flannery, a selfish, old Irish sea captain who believes he owns an ocean. Diane Moffett was honored for playing Miss Pringle, an aging American woman who wins her way into his heart.

Claude Laverty of Mobeetie was honorably mentioned. Other schools were represented in the all-star cast and the honorable mention honors.

Billy Harden received honorable mention for his role in the Briscoe production of The Summons of Everyman. Kelton's Julie Moore was named to the all-star cast and Leslie Johnson received honorable mention, both for their roles in Our Hearts Were Young and Gay.

Wheeler's Tina Alvey was named to the all-star cast and Stephen Meadows got honorable mention for their roles in the children's classic, Innocchio.

Other plays competing were Darrouzett's Quiet Please and Higgins' The Patchwork Quilt.

Pampa sends its one-act production of Oscar Wilde's The Importance of Being Earnest to District 4A competition Monday at Amarillo College.

White Deer will enter its two-person cast of Eugene Ionesco's Chairs to District 2A competition at Panhandle Tuesday. Canadian's What I Did Last Summer will compete in District 2A competition Friday at Clarendon.

Rapstine is suffering from leukemia. His medical costs include a recent emergency trip to M.D. Anderson Hospital of Houston, plus other treatments and fees.

He was admitted to the Houston hospital recently and will continue to stay in Houston on an outpatient basis after his release. Future expenses include his stay in Houston plus medical treatments, such as a possible bone marrow transplant.

Rapstine is in his early 20s.

Donations may be sent to the Andrew Rapstine Fund, First Bank & Trust Co. of White Deer, Box 67, White Deer, 79097.

Psychologist indicted for sexual misconduct

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin psychologist, previously sued on allegations of sexual misconduct, has been indicted on charges of sexually assaulting a teen-ager he was counseling for marriage problems, officials said.

John M. "Jack" Abell faces up to 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine if convicted of the second-degree felony. He was indicted Thursday by a Travis County grand jury on a charge of assaulting a 17-year-old on Feb. 19, police said.

Abell operates the Abell Marriage Clinic, police said.

The indictment charges Abell with using physical force to compel the teen-ager to submit to his sexual advances. It also charges that he knew her mental problems would make her incapable of resisting.

Abell's bond was set for $20,000 but police said Saturday he had not been arrested.

The psychologist has paid out-of-court settlements to four female patients who alleged that he engaged in sexual intercourse with him during therapy sessions.

Syracuse upends North Carolina

By DICK JOYCE
AP Basketball Writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Syracuse, led by Rony Seikaly's 26 points, gained the NCAA Final Four for the first time since 1975 by holding off No. 2 North Carolina 79-75 Saturday for the East Regional title.

The 10th-ranked Orangemen, 30-6 and the No. 2 seed in the East, will play another Big East team, Providence, an 88-73 upset winner over Georgetown Saturday in the Southeast Regional.

Syracuse, which had a reputation of blowing big games in recent years, had to withstand a Tar Heels comeback, led by Kenny Smith.

The Orangemen never trailed and extended a 40-31 halftime margin to 53-38 with 15:41 to go. But the Tar Heels put on a 16-4 run, including 11 straight points, cutting the deficit to 57-54.

Again, Syracuse took charge, with Seikaly, a 6-foot-10 junior who was named the regional's most outstanding player, working inside. A field goal by Seikaly gave the Orangemen a 70-61 lead with 6:02 remaining.

Smith, a senior All-America guard, hit a three-point play and then a 3-point goal with 2:01 remaining, reducing Syracuse's lead to 76-73.

After Syracuse's Sherman Douglas and Derrick Coleman each missed free throws on one-and-one situations, Greg Monroe made two free throws for a 78-73 lead. Smith scored unmolested with 13 seconds left, making it 78-75.

After Douglas hit one free throw, Smith missed a 3-pointer with four seconds left.

Smith finished with 25 points, 20 in the second half.

North Carolina freshman J.R. Reid, who scored 31 points in Thursday night's victory over Notre Dame, had 15 points against Syracuse.

The Tar Heels, seeded first in the East and the Atlantic Coast Conference regular-season champion, finished with a 32-4 record.

Smith scored four times from 3-point range as North Carolina made 8-of-20 long distance shots.

UNLV meets Iowa

SEATTLE (AP) — Top-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas and No. 6 Iowa, two teams that mirror each other with pressure defense and up tempo running games, play Sunday, with the winner advancing to the NCAA Final Four.

UNLV, which has won its last 20 games by 10 points or more, will throw its stifling pressure defense at a team that plays much the same style. The game at the Kingdome is scheduled to start at 1:03 PST as UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian tries to get his 36-1 Runnin' Rebels to the Final Four for the first time in 10 years.

"I don't think anyone in the country can put the kind of pressure on that UNLV can," Iowa forward Al Lorenzen said. "But we face that kind of pressure every day in practice. They play the same aggressive game we do."

Iowa, 30-4 in Coach Tom Davis' first year at the school, has utilized a zone press and nine-player depth to wear down most opponents.

Promising hurlers suffering burnout

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

At age 19 and a year out of high school, Sid Fernandez had it all, an overpowering fastball and a career on the rise. In 1982, the Los Angeles Dodgers promoted him from Class A to AAA.

Then, just as quickly, he fell apart. His earned run average tripled, his strikeouts were down, his walks went up.

"Physically, I could handle Triple-A," Fernandez said. "Mentally, I couldn't."

What happened to Fernandez is becoming more frequent, with varying results. Promising pitchers, especially hard throwers, are spending less time in the minors and being rushed toward the major leagues.

The Mets and Kansas City Royals built World Series-winning staffs that way, and the Texas Rangers are trying to do the same.

Roger Clemens was pitching well for the Boston Red Sox in his second pro season, while last year Cleveland's Greg Swindell and Texas' Mike Loynd both went from the college campus to the big leagues in a matter of months.

Fernandez wound up OK. The Dodgers, believing he had — as scouts say — "flattened out," traded him after the 1983 season to the New York Mets for two fading veterans. The Mets coddled him in their minor-league system and now he is, at 24, one of the best young pitchers in baseball.

Admitting he was troubled by his quick climb, Fernandez said slower might have been better.

What to do with young pitchers, particularly when the major-league team is desperate, remains one of the finest lines in judging talent and temperament in baseball.

Last season, Texas' staff included Bobby Witt, Jose Guzman, Edwin Correa, Matt Williams and Loynd, all 22 or under.

The Rangers pitchers led the majors in walks and wild pitches — signs of inexperience — and ranked eighth in the American League with a 4.11 ERA. But it was better than a 4.56 team ERA the previous season. And it helped Texas win 25 more games and move from seventh place to second in the AL West.

"What you deal with is the risk-reward ratio," Texas Manager Bobby Valentine said. "You have to make an educated guess of whether the risk of retarding their growth is worth the reward you might get."

"Last year, we knew we would be better off in the short-term with the young pitchers, rather than bringing in someone older who might give us one year. We think they will also be successful in the long run."

The Rangers have done exactly what the Mets and Royals did.

The Mets, with Dwight Gooden, Ron Darling, Bobby Ojeda, Roger McDowell, Jesse Orosco and Fernandez, led the majors in ERA. All but Ojeda spent time in the minors with New York and were brought up quickly, replacing washed-up vets and journeymen. Ojeda was traded from Boston.

Harvesters win district opener

By L.D. STRATE

Bret Mitchell and Troy Owens combined to hurl a four-hitter as Pampa held off Levelland in the seventh inning for a 13-8 win in a District 1-4A baseball opener Saturday at the PHS field.

Pampa is now 5-3 overall while Levelland dropped to 2-7.

Owens, a junior righthander, picked up the win in relief and also swung a big bat in Pampa's 12-hit attack.

"Owens did a good job on the mound and also had an excellent day at the plate," said Pampa Coach Bill Butler.

Pampa jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the first inning with two runs coming in on a Owens homer over the right field fence. Shawn Frye's double drove in the other run.

Mitchell, who struggled with his control in the three innings he pitched, was still effective enough to strike out seven batters and surrender only three hits. Mitchell walked in three runs in the second inning as Levelland went on top 5-3.

Pampa went ahead to stay 6-5 in the third inning when three runs scored on two Levelland miscues. Pampa added two more runs in the fourth on a two-run single by Jon Roe.

The Harvesters' big inning came in the fifth when five runs crossed the plate. Grant Gamblin knocked in two runs with a single while Clint Allen and Chris Martinez delivered run-scoring base raps. Pinch hitter Mark Williams, who had just returned from competing in a track meet, was inserted into the game long enough to deliver an RBI single up the middle.

Owens shut down Levelland in the fourth and fifth frames, but the Lobos rallied with two outs in the seventh to score three runs on a two-run triple by David Ocea and an infield error. Owens then struck out Jay Fortney to end the game.

"I was beginning to wonder if we were going to get them out in the seventh," Butler said.

Kenny Steward, Owens, Martinez and Gamblin had two hits each for Pampa.

Pampa's timely hitting overcame some fielding problems. The Harvesters were charged with four errors, two more than the Lobos.

Pampa hosts Canyon in more district action Tuesday night with the game starting at 4 p.m.

Canyon is expected to battle Lubbock Estacado and Hereford for the district crown. Dumas is the defending champion.

Rockets demolish Clippers 126-98

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets, on the eve of an important division game against the Utah Jazz, were happy that several key players got to sit out much of Friday night's NBA game with the Los Angeles Clippers.

Center Akeem Olajuwon scored 29 points and grabbed eight rebounds in less than three quarters of play as the Rockets disposed of the Clippers, 126-98.

The victory moved Houston within one-half game of Utah for second place in the Midwest Division.

"It's good to get a little rest," Olajuwon said. "I've been playing very well lately. Tonight will raise our confidence for tomorrow. We have our eye on Utah."

The Rockets are in the midst of a schedule stretch which called for them to play four games in five nights in three cities. Houston was scheduled to play Saturday night in Salt Lake City, return home to face Detroit Monday and then travel to San Antonio Tuesday.

Forward Rodney McCray followed with 17 points, also in only three periods, as five Rockets scored in double figures for Houston, which won its third straight game.

The Clippers, who have lost five straight and 10 of their last 11 games to fall to 11-54, received 19 points from Mike Woodson and 17 from Michael Cage.

The Rockets, 36-31, built a 13-point lead, 31-18, in the opening period, as Olajuwon and McCray each popped in 11 points, and were untested the rest of the way.

The Clippers came within nine points late in the half, but Buck Johnson's two free throws and Dirk Minniefield's three-point play pushed the Rockets back up 64-50 at the intermission.

McCray, Minniefield and Allen Leavell hit all 12 of their first-half shot attempts.

Olajuwon provided the acrobatic shot of the half with a scoop from his shootops midway through the second quarter. Olajuwon finished the first half with 17 points. Reserve guard Quintin Dailey had 10 points for the Clippers.

Olajuwon and Robert Reid combined for an 8-0 Rockets stretch that resulted in a 78-57 lead with eight minutes left in the third quarter. A 9-2 spurt made it 101-74 going into the final period.

Surprise! Surprise! Texas not top football state

FROM THE NOTEPAD: Going through the season undefeated (40-0) and winning the Texas 5A state championship earned LaPorte a 10th place national ranking by USA Today. San Antonio Holmes, who LaPorte defeated for the title, goes unranked, but Fort Worth Dunbar rates the 18th spot. So much for head-to-head matchups and rankings. "It was the most exciting tournament," said PHS Coach Robert Hale, taking advantage of spring break to attend. "I guess it was the atmosphere created by the tremendous crowds (16,000 sold-out capacity for the first time)," he adds.

Is it true that hiring a new head football coach for the Pampa school system was so critical that a special meeting was called to handle the matter, but it wasn't important enough to the system to have the three key figures — selection team athletic director and interim superintendent or the selected coach — present? And then when and whom got around to finally embarrassing notifying the new coach of his selection? Obviously football is not a high priority program.

"Everyone talks about Texas being such a rabid football place. The number one team in terms of attendance is Michigan. Number two is Tennessee. South Carolina's attendance averages more than any school in the state of Texas" — H.R. "Bum" Bright, strong Texas A&M booster and principal owner of the Dallas Cowboys.

Amarillo voters go to the polls Tuesday to determine the fate of a $57 million school bond issue which will include major new athletic facilities and renovations. The Lubbock Independent School District has completed research of that system's athletic program and the report is being studied for implementable suggestions to improve that city's programs. A similar study was done in the Pampa system several years ago. Was it useful? How much has been implemented?

basketball team, holds the Ohio state schoolboy scoring record with 2,961 points in his career. By comparison, PHS alltime scoring leader Mike Nelson tallied 1,990 points in four varsity seasons.

District 1-4A was honored again when Canyon HS senior Amy Claborn was awarded the second annual Gatorade Circle of Champions HS Girls Basketball Player of the Year honor for Texas. Only one is given per state, automatically entering that recipient in the national competition for Player of the Year. Claborn will continue her talented career at UT-Austin.

TRIVIA: What Panhandle area basketball player holds the record for the most points scored in a single game in high school?

"Always remember that referees don't have to be good. But they must be consistent so the players and coaches can adjust. Even if they are consistently incompetent, they're good. If you're consistent, you're a Michelangelo in black and white." — Al McGuire, former coach and TV analyst.... And officiating the NCAA playoffs again this year is former Amarillo Sandie Bobby Dibler, who has made El Paso his home for many years.

ALSO NOTED: Is the real estate broker's sign in the front yard of WTSU basketball coach Gary Moss's home indicating anything?..Even Japan doesn't want drug-ridden athletes, barring former Los Angeles Dodger pitcher Steve Howe from playing there. The former Rookie of the Year has had continuing problems since the 1983 season.

It may be legal, but there seems to be something unethical about Arkansas AD Frank Broyles accepting a side job as managerial consultant for the University of Akron. The overall Arkansas athletic program doesn't appear to be all that strong and Razorback fans might suggest it needs a little attention.

As a result of the interest generated by the fantastic ESPN coverage of the America's Cup last month, bidding is hot and heavy for the 1990 races among American cities. Hawaii is offering to spend as much as $30 million to build docks and construct a seaside home for the defending San Diego team. A San Francisco official says the City by the Bay would "rather have those races than the Olympics."

Recognizing the leadership motivational, public relations and discipline talents successful coaches learn while playing their trade the Canyon ISD has named former baseball-swim coach Bob Sloan principal of new Valley View JH.

Even major league managers like to teach. Milwaukee Brewer manager Tom Trebelhorn did some substitute classroom work in Portland during the off-season and also taught an algebra class in a Milwaukee middle school, appropriately named Jackie Robinson MS.

ANSWER: IN the 1972 season, Diane Campbell scored 100 points in a girls game for the Claude Mustangettes.

"How do you 'phase out' illegal activity? That's like 'phasing out' the robbing of 7-Elevens," said former Texas Governor Mark White in reference to Gov. Bill Clements admission that he participated in the decision to continue payments on a phase-out basis to football players at SMU while he was chairman of that school's board of managers.

White Deer girls win Shamrock track invitational

By JIMMY PATTERSON

SHAMROCK — The Irish were green with envy Saturday as the White Deer Does and the boys from Elk City, Okla. cleaned the respective clocks of all teams in this year's Shamrock Invitational.

A meet record was set early in the day in the pole vault by Elk City's Jeff Bray. He cleared the pole at an impressive mark of 14 feet, 6 inches, outdistancing the second place finisher by 18 inches.

The big team finishers of the day were the White Deer girls. The Does finished with 149 total team points, 61 points better than second place finisher Wellington.

The Does had eight first place finishes, which accounted for 100 of their points. Forty of those points came thanks to winning times in the 400- and 1600-meter relays.

The White Deer Bucks, meanwhile, could have finished higher than fifth had they had a bit more luck in the 400-meter relay. Disqualified from the event because of a dropped baton and a subsequent interference call, Coach Gary Richardson noted the team was pacing itself with what might have turned out to be a winning mark before the miscue.

It was a disappointing afternoon for Wheeler Mustangette freshman Kelli Sutton. She collapsed in the second turn of the first lap of the 1600-meter run, complaining of dizziness and a severe headache, and failed to finish the race.

The following is a list of finishers in the girls and boys varsity divisions:

In My Corner

By Jimmy Patterson

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

The 1987 baseball season will bring with it the end of a legend's playing career. Reggie Jackson has decided this will be his last year, and he will, no doubt, do it in admirable fashion.

Reggie will end his career where he began—in Oakland, as a member of the A's. Technically, Reggie began with the A's when they were more commonly known as the Athletics and still played in Kansas City.

In these days of high player salaries, "Mr. October" has accepted a one-year contract with Oakland for $500,000, which represents a 50-percent pay cut from his salary last year. It is not often you see a player take that kind of a cut, but Reggie thought it appropriate to end it all where he began it all, even if it meant taking the cut.

Baseball fans either loved or hated Reggie. There was not often an in-between. Despite his overzealous attitude of his own success, I always liked him and what he represented.

He had his bouts with enough baseball men. George Steinbrenner, Billy Martin and Sparky Lyle, all Yankees in the 70's, felt the wrath of Reggie's verbal style.

But if anyone had a right to criticize and to brag about his own success, Reggie did.

He may have talked big, but he always backed it up.

Success followed him and the teams he played on wherever he went. In Oakland, as a member of their World Series teams in the early 70's; in New York, where the Yankees won the series in '77 and '78; in California, where Gene Mauch's teams never quite made it to the series, but always finished high in the standings, including last year when they lost to Boston in the American League Championship Series.

Statistically, what Reggie will always be remembered for is the homer, or as he called it, "the dinger."

Going into the 1987 season, Reggie has racked up 548 dingers. While not tops in the history books, Reggie stands amongst an illustrious crowd with his home run total.

Only twelve other ballplayers have slammed over 500 out of the park in their careers, and those twelve are all in the hall of fame.

Reggie recently told Steve Bisheff, sports columnist with The Orange County Register, what his goals for his final season are.

"All I want to do is see if I can help this ball club win," he said. "How I do statistically is not as important. It's how the team does. If we win, the definition of Reggie will be explained."

In order to contribute to the A's success, though, Reggie will have to improve upon his 1986 stats with the Angels.

Last year, he finished with a .241 batting average, knocked in only 58 runs and had 18 homers. Not bad for a 41-year old man in the twilight of his career, but not all that good if one's goal is to make a contribution to a team's success.

If Reggie carries out his goal of making an impact with the team and improves upon his stats of last year, it would be a fitting way to end his illustrious career by voting him the Comeback Player of the Year.

And, if Reggie does hold true to his statement to retire after the season, look for him to be nominated for membership in the hall of fame on the first ballot in 1992, when he will first be eligible.

Reggie has been a decorated career, one that baseball fans won't soon forget.

For fans in my generation, he will be remembered as fondly as Babe Ruth and Stan Musial were thought of in generations past.

Tigers topple Rangers

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Dwight Lowry drove in three runs and Walt Terrell became the first Detroit pitcher to go six innings this spring as the Tigers beat the Texas Rangers 7-2 in a split-squad exhibition game Saturday.

Another Tiger squad lost 5-1 to the Philadelphia Phillies in Clearwater.

Terrell, 15-12 last year, scattered six hits, giving up his first two earned runs of the spring as the Tigers won for only the fifth time in 17 Grapefruit League games.

Willie Hernandez and Mike Henneman finished for the Tigers.

Texas starter Bobby Witt, 11-9 last season, lasted only 2 2-3 innings, giving up seven runs on seven hits.

The Tigers batted around in the second inning, scoring five runs on four hits.

Darrell Evans walked and scored on a double by Darnell Coles. Larry Herndon singled Coles across, Chet Lemon walked and Lowry doubled to drive in Herndon and Lemon. Nonroster rookie Ron Marigny singled, moving up Lowry, who scored on a grounder by Pat Sheridan.

The Rangers, who evened their record at 8-8, answered with one in the third when Bob Brower walked and scored on Scott Fletcher's double into the right field corner.

Lady Longhorns advance to final four

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Andrea Lloyd sparked a second-half rally that propelled top-ranked and defending champion Texas into the NCAA women's Final Four Saturday with an 85-77 victory over Rutgers in the East Regional basketball championship.

Texas, 31-1, returns to Austin to defend its title, and will meet the Midwest Regional winner on March 27.

Rutgers ends the season at 30-3.

The Longhorns had trailed from early in the first half and fell behind by as much as 55-46 with 12:37 left after a basket by Rutgers' Telicher Austin. Texas cut the lead to 55-51 after a three-point play by Lloyd with 11:07 left and trailed 63-60 with 7:55 to play after another three-point play by Lloyd, who finished with 20 points and was named most valuable player of the tournament.

After a Kristen Foley jumper for Rutgers, Texas came to life and outscored Rutgers 13-2 to take a 73-67 edge with 4:10 remaining. Beverly Williams scored seven of the points and Lyssa McBride had four in the spurt.

The Lady Knights got within 75-72 with 2:26 left on Regina Howard's basket, but Lloyd scored six straight points to give Texas an 81-72 edge with 50 seconds left to play.

Clarissa Davis and C.J. Jones hit two free throws apiece to preserve the Texas victory.

SEATTLE (AP) — Kevin Gamble sank a 22-foot 3-pointer with three seconds left in overtime Friday night to give sixth-ranked Iowa a 93-91 victory over Oklahoma in the West Regional semifinals of the NCAA basketball tournament.

Gamble, a 6-foot-6 senior, led the Hawkeyes with 26 points and blocked a late Oklahoma shot to force the overtime.

The Hawkeyes, 30-4, play the winner of Friday night's contest between No. 1 ranked Nevada-Las Vegas and Wyoming in Sunday's regional finals.

Oklahoma, 24-10, led by as many as 16 points in the first half but led only by one at intermission.

The game was close throughout the rest of the way. Iowa's biggest lead was six points at 78-72 with 6:54 to play in regulation.

Artist of the Year, Viola Coffee of White Deer, prepares her work for showing at Lovett Memorial Library April 11-13.

Tools of the trade — paintbrushes and oil colors.

Viola Coffee is Artist of the Year

By MARILYN POWERS
Lifestyles Editor

Viola Coffee of White Deer has been named 1987 Artist of the Year by the Pampa Fine Arts Association.

Her work will be displayed April 11-13 at Lovett Memorial Library. A champagne reception and preview will be 6 to 8 p.m. April 11 for Fine Arts Association members, and the exhibition will be open to the public April 12-13. Many of the artworks will be for sale.

Viewing hours will be 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday, April 12, and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday, April 13. Over 100 examples of Mrs. Coffee's work, including oils, china painting and pencil sketches, will be on display.

Mrs. Coffee has been interested in artwork for 30 years, beginning with china painting in 1956. She also experimented with pencil sketches, watercolors and tile painting, and attended a watercolor class in Amarillo. Then, around 1970, she hosted an oil painting workshop in her basement, and oils have been the majority of her work ever since.

"I stopped china painting when I really lost myself in oils. Since then, I have done oils almost to the exclusion of other things," Mrs. Coffee said.

The White Deer native gets her ideas both from nature and things around her, and from her own mind. She is a versatile artist, not limiting herself to one or a few subjects. Her works include flowers, landscapes, street scenes and Western themes, such as Indian portraits, windmills, barns and horses.

"I'm not limited in my subjects. And I'm a prolific painter. I paint fast," she said.

She uses her home's utility room as her work area, and two years ago she had one side of her double garage converted to a gallery to display her work. She has dubbed her White Deer home "The Coffee House."

Mrs. Coffee was born Viola Dauer. She was raised southeast of White Deer and is a graduate of White Deer High School and West Texas State University. She married George Coffee and lived with him on the Tom Coffee homestead northwest of White Deer for 34 years. The couple had three sons, Doug of Pampa, Don Rockwell of Dallas and Ronald of Atlanta. Don and Ronald are twins.

The Coffees built a new home in town in 1962. Mr. Coffee died four years later.

"That's when I really started concentrating on painting. I try to paint every day. Sometimes I can't because of other obligations. I need to paint often in order to keep the feel of the brush. It's good therapy for me, and I need this every day."

"I'm enthusiastic about it. I'm elated when I get one finished and get it in a frame and it looks good," Mrs. Coffee said.

Her paintings hang in every state of the Union and in many foreign countries. Locally, her work adorns the White Deer library, elementary school and Methodist church. She also has works on display at the Square House Museum in Panhandle.

She also provided pencil sketches for the Square House Museum cookbook, and once painted 250 miniatures for the Southwest Cattleman's Association. The order, her biggest, called for bluebonnets and windmills painted on 2x2-inch canvases.

One of her biggest successes was at a local arts and crafts show, where she sold over 80 paintings.

Her paintings range in size from 48x56-inches down to the 2x2-inch miniatures.

"It was never within my thoughts that I would become Artist of the Year. I was never so surprised in my life," she said.

Mrs. Coffee, who has eight grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, finds time to serve on the board of directors of Square House Museum and United Methodist Church of White Deer. She also plays bridge now and then. But her first love is painting.

"I love to paint," she said. "My goal is to do better tomorrow than I've done today."

Mrs. Coffee works on her latest project.

Elderly manage to deal with pain, disabilities

FOREST GROVE, Ore. (AP)—Physical disability, pain and old age may make independent living difficult, but elderly people do manage to deal with all three problems. This is a major finding from a study done by Dr. Ann Williams of the Pacific University physical therapy department.

Williams' research and interest in gerontology is incorporated into many of her classes, so that physical therapists graduating from Pacific have developed an understanding of the unique problems of their future older patients.

One key to independence among the elderly is being mentally competent, she points out.

"If they have their cognitive abilities, many can manage the problems they face," Williams said. "The mentally sharp elderly usually can network more readily with family, friends and community services so that often they can continue living in their homes, relatively independently."

Williams' study was funded by the American Association of Retired Persons and was conducted with Dr. Richard Schulz at the Institute on Aging at Portland State University.

The study took place over a period of 10 months in the greater Portland, Ore., metropolitan area. Williams and her assistants interviewed 114 people, ranging in age from 50 to 82. A few were still working, despite their handicaps, and she went to their places of employment.

"If the spouse is still living and is relatively well, he or she is frequently the key person in providing for the less able partner," says Williams. "This includes personal care, dressing, bathing and managing the home."

Other key providers are children, and sometimes grandchildren will assist in the care. Williams found grandchildren more involved with their elderly grandparents than she had expected. The grandchildren were often 20-30 years old and provided transportation and shopping for their grandparents.

Often, too, an elderly person will have one or two friends who assist them. Others will receive a conglomeration of assistance from family, friends and public services such as meals on wheels, home care services and volunteers from churches and other organizations.

According to the Williams study, the elderly in their own homes as a whole are not discouraged or depressed. Unmodifiable pain does bring discouragement and depressed mood, however, she said. Those in pain, whatever their age, had the hardest time adjusting to their conditions and changes in lifestyle.

Many of the people interviewed suffered from cancer, arthritis, lung disease, heart disease, diabetes or fractured bones.

Wheelchair-bound man designs special clothing

By LOIS TAYLOR
Star-Bulletin

HONOLULU (AP)—Four and a half years ago a car went over an Oregon cliff and changed a life forever. Paul Sheriff had been a college wrestler, a sky diver, a mountain climber, the head deckhand on a fish-processing boat in Alaska, and was working toward a degree in marine engineering at the University of Oregon.

From the moment of the crash when he experienced a complete fracture dislocation of his spinal cord, he has been a paraplegic, the lower half of his body paralyzed.

"What can I tell you?" he asked. "It was a mind-blower. But I decided that it's not over, that there's something I need to do yet."

And Sheriff is exploring. He has recently established Rolling Thunder, a line of clothes designed for people confined to wheelchairs.

He talks to school groups about understanding the disabled. He counsels suicidally inclined wheelchair patients. He has been working with TEACH (Teaching Each Other About Conquering Handicaps) on a Stevie Wonder concert to benefit the organization here.

"It's a question of awareness, of making you A.B.s (his designation for able-bodied) aware that we aren't different just because we have some kind of a disability. Hey, everybody is disabled one way or another. I just don't happen to be able to walk."

While Sheriff will never wrestle again, he continues to swim—a difficult process since the instant he ceases to move his arms the weight of his legs causes him to sink.

Sheriff drives, in a modified car, "and I love driving, even after the accident," he said.

He talks easily about his disability, and regrets that parents seeing their children staring at him tend to pull them away.

"I think kids should be aware that disabled people are like everybody else, even if they can't walk," he said. "Some of the great times I've had are in the grocery store. Kids will come over and talk to me and ask me how come I'm in a wheelchair and what it's like. I'm at their eye level and it changes their perspective toward an adult."

Rolling Thunder, a name that suggests power and authority as well as the motion of a wheelchair, is a vision of the handicapped that Sheriff is selling as hard as he's selling his line of clothes, which is designed for the special needs of wheelchair-bound men and women.

"When I was in rehab, I wore the kind of clothes I had worn before the accident—jeans, a jacket and boots," Sheriff said. "Pretty soon I realized those days were over. I was sitting on the pockets and I'd get pressure marks I couldn't feel but would develop into sores. I had no place to put my wallet."

"So I started designing my own clothes and had them made. When I wore them to the rehab center, guys there said, 'Hey, make me some.'"

What Sheriff had designed were slacks with a high elastic waist, extra fabric in the crotch and extra length in the legs. "Your legs atrophy and you want your ankles covered."

Survey shows children see better future ahead

NEW YORK (AP)—The majority of youngsters responding to a poll conducted by a magazine for 8- to 12-year-olds look forward to a promising future that includes peace and a cure for cancer.

The editors of 3-2-1 CONTACT, a magazine about science and technology published by the Children's Television Workshop, printed a questionnaire that more than 10,000 children completed.

"Responses show that, overall, children share an optimistic view of the future, including some good news for women's rights advocates," said the publication's editor, Jonathan Rosenbloom.

Of those polled, 75 percent think that men and women will share equally the job of raising children and that men and women will earn the same salary for the same jobs. Some 83 percent expect a woman will be president within 20 years.

While 44 percent said they feared nuclear war, 78 percent do not think it will occur between now and 2006, a year in which 73 percent say that the United States and the U.S.S.R. will be better friends than they are today.

Three-fourths of all respondents expect that a cure will be found for cancer in the next 20 years. Some two-thirds are sure the environment will be safer and cleaner by the end of that same period and, subsequently, expect people to live longer — between 100 and 110 years.

More than half of those who answered the survey think that people from Earth will live on other planets by 2006.

Salvation Army honors volunteers, board

Jimmy Schuneman of Pampa was honored with a lifetime membership by the Salvation Army during its annual meeting and appreciation dinner at noon Thursday, March 19 at Salvation Army Community Center, 701 S. Cuyler.

Schuneman is a second-generation advisory board member. His father, Al Schuneman, was also on the board, and the present Salvation Army building was dedicated to the elder Schuneman.

Schuneman does property upkeep for the organization and is in charge of the disaster unit. He has donated an organ to the Pampa group, and did special work in offices and gave the building a complete facelift last year.

He is also responsible for the area Scouting program, helped found the Boys' Optimist Club, and is on the advisory board of Good Samaritan Christian Services, Inc. He was one of the first ham radio operators in the area, and uses his hobby to aid the Salvation Army when needed. He is an elder of First Presbyterian Church.

"Every advisory board should have a Jimmy Schuneman," said Salvation Army Lt. Carl Hughes.

Also honored during the appreciation dinner were bellringers, doll dressers, angel tree sponsors, canned food drive volunteers and Golden Agers luncheon workers.

Organizations honored for providing bellringers during the 1986 Christmas fund drive were Re-Act Club, Top of Texas Kiwanis, Downtown Kiwanis, Noon Lions Club and Evening Lions Club. Individuals who served as bellringers were also honored. They are Jiggs and Cookie Cook, Cathy Spaulding, Ruby Callis and Leroy Rossiter.

Several groups and individuals were honored for doll dressing. Each year the Salvation Army purchases dolls for part of their Christmas program. The dolls come without clothing, and volunteers make costumes for the dolls. Those honored included Rho Eta sorority, Epsilon Sigma Alpha sorority, St. Paul's United Methodist Church women's organization, St. Matthew's Episcopal Church women's organization, Florence Kimberly, Annie Auful, Mary Allee, Charlie Neal Gee, Juanita Parker, Donna Reynolds, Polly Sutton, Bonnie Hogan, Glenda Edwards, Betty Dills, Nema Wall, Willie West and Linda Mobbs.

Several Pampa merchants were honored for participating in the Angel Tree program, in which Christmas trees are displayed with paper angels listing needy children. Shoppers pick a child to help and buy Christmas gifts based on the information listed on the angel. These children are those who would not have Christmas gifts without help.

Those honored for the Angel Tree program were Wal-Mart, Alco's, McDonald's, T-Shirts Plus and Pampa Mall.

The annual canned food drive involves schoolchildren bringing canned food for use by the Salvation Army. Baker Elementary School participated in the most recent drive. Those honored for their work included Dan Johnson, Lamar Elementary; Tommy Lindsey, Horace Mann Elementary; John Welborn, Baker Elementary; Bill Jones, Austin Elementary; and Ray Thornton, Wilson Elementary.

Golden Agers luncheon workers were also recognized. Salvation Army provides a noon meal monthly to senior citizens. Those serving in the program included Cassie Richter, Cookie Cook, Lois Adams, Marie Tension, Polly Sutton, Ethel Stillwell, Mattie Norton, Mary Auful, Ruby Callis, Maggie Ivey and Louise Fletcher. Local banks, individuals and businesses who sponsored the Golden Agers program were also honored.

Darrell Nordeen of Celanese Chemical Co. accepted a token of appreciation from the Salvation Army for fresh meat donated by the company from animals purchased at the livestock show. Blake Laramore was also honored for providing free processing of the meat.

Mare Holland and Jeannette Gikas, public health nurses, were recognized for their work in the camp program.

Lois Smith Adams was recognized for her 28 years of service in the League of Mercy, a volunteer group that visits hospitals, nursing homes and shut-ins.

In 1986, 95 workers spent 695 hours visiting 1,639 sick, elderly and shut-ins.

Golden Agers luncheons were attended by 1,248, and 67 meals were delivered.

Transportation for the needy to doctor's offices, hospitals and other facilities was given to 1,441.

Lt. Hughes reported that Salvation Army income for 1986 was down $20,000 from 1985, but more people were helped in 1986 than in previous years due to volunteer assistance. There were 150 more children aided at Christmas 1986 than previous holidays.

Advisory board members for 1986-87 are Louise Fletcher, chairman; Bill Kindle, vice-chairman; Louise Bailey, treasurer; Leona Willis, secretary. Other members are Bob Conway, Ed Barker, Rick Harris, Ruby Morgan, Pat Mitchell, Jimmy Schuneman, Jerry Foote, Richard Stowers, Charles Buzzard, Eddie Burton, Mike Lopez, Richard Ladd, Jane Gattis and Curt Beck. Georgia Mack was made a lifetime member in 1986.

New members are Darville Orr, Lewis Supply; Michael Schale, Tri City Office Supply; Ted Lowrie, Celanese Chemical; Morris Enloe, Gas Consultants Inc.

Jimmy Schuneman, right, receives his lifetime membership award from Lt. Carl Hughes of the Salvation Army.

Teens give views on love, romance

NEW YORK (AP) — Today's young people hold some traditional views on marriage, with 85 percent saying they planned to tie the knot, according to a survey appearing in Seventeen magazine.

But the 900 respondents, ages 13 to 19, were less traditional when it comes to dating. Males are no longer expected to do all the courting, with 55 percent of the boys and 46 percent of the girls believing that either sex should be able to ask for a date.

Boys and girls expressed a difference of opinion on reasons they choose to go out with somebody, with girls placing personality at the top of their list and boys giving looks and personality almost equal billing.

4-H encourages creativity, cooperation among youth

DATES

March 22 — 2-5 p.m., Lefors 4-H Shotgun Project meeting, Lefors Senior Citizens Center.

March 25 — 4-5 p.m., 4-H Bedroom Improvement Project meeting, Courthouse Annex.

March 26 — 4:15-5:30 p.m., 4-H Consumer Decision Making practice, Courthouse Annex.

EVERYBODY WINS WITH 4-H

4-H'ers are involved in a lot of competitive events this time of the year — fashion shows, stock shows, roundups and the like. And these types of events are directed toward making youth better individuals, not just winning.

Everybody "wins" with 4-H. People are the only creatures on earth who survive by serving each other. It is in serving each other that people can find the satisfaction and reward they require for successful living. This fact is one of the basic principles upon which the 4-H club program is built.

Another way to say it is that "people get what they want in life by helping others get what they want." Individuals cannot succeed or even survive for long without the resources they receive from other people, and vice versa. Today's 4-H program fosters a spirit of cooperation and creativity; a feeling that it is important to help other people develop their potential as human beings.

4-H Corner

Opportunities for youth and adults to fulfill this basic need in life are almost without limit in 4-H. It's called leadership development, citizenship and community service. Everybody helps everybody else in 4-H, and therefore everybody comes out a winner.

In 4-H, 50 percent of the value of a youth's 4-H work is devoted to leadership of others and in citizenship and community service projects. The other 50 percent is devoted to his or her own projects.

Not only do people who are 4-H members, parents and volunteer leaders benefit from 4-H, but so does the community in which they live. 4-H families are devoting more and more of their time and energy to citizenship and community service projects. They want to literally "Make the Best Better" in their own communities.

To find out how to become a part of the 4-H team, contact the county Extension office. Young people enrolled in the third grade through 19 years of age can join as members. Adults of any age can be a part of 4-H as project leaders, activity leaders, club leaders or help in many other ways.

If you see a need for help in your community, tell someone in 4-H about it; 4-H can also be of service to you.

March is local Red Cross Month

March has been designated as Red Cross Month by the City of Pampa in a resolution signed by Pampa Mayor Sherman Combs.

"There was a time when Red Cross flags were flown in downtown Pampa for these special times. Thanks to some of the merchants of Pampa, these flags are being displayed at present," said

Joyce Roberts of Gray County Chapter of the American Red Cross.

The older Red Cross flags were used during World War II.

Pampans busy despite unpredictable weather

Winter seems to find excuses for taking a back seat to the approaching season. Why should we care, though, when we have last week's discoveries to review?

Nina Spoonmore thought and thought before arriving at a beautiful plan to decorate a corner of a special room. She placed pot plants of bougainvillea in deep pink, geraniums and maybe more in front of a three-way mirror to create through reflections the illusion of a fairyland flower garden. Members of the Varietas Study Club uh'd and ah'd at the profusion of blooms.

Irene Harrah looked ever so pretty in navy blue, complementing her beautiful white hair. Wanda Goff, elegant in blue, recounted her recent trip to Richmond, Va., to visit her son Jimmy and his wife, and to Plano to visit her daughter Jenny and family.

Wanda Watson, secretary at Coronado Nursing Center, thought the snowstorm was bad enough to cancel reservations to attend a seminar in Lubbock. A few hours later, she decided driving was to be preferred over thinking, caught a plane and took in the seminar after all.

Robbie Hill, Ryan and Jenny Lynn came from Ft. Worth to visit Robbie's parents, Belva and Wayne Harris. There was an early first birthday celebration for Jenny Lynn.

Mab Calloway, Dell Turk and Phil Conner took State Board exams for certification in respiratory therapy in Lubbock last week. Joy and Lynn Bivins, children Teresa and Doug Davis, Shanda and Ronnie Hill and son Rudan, and friends Corlene and Neal Bundrick of Canton gave in to the irresistible lure of four days skiing at Red River. The report is: most snow ever, 50-degree weather, perfect skiing.

Dot and Dick Stowers had all of their family with them last week. Frank and his wife came from Midland, Carol and Bruce Jasurda and baby from Libertyville, Ill., plus Richard Stowers and family of Pampa.

If possible, Joyce Roberts' smile was brighter than ever last week and with good reason. Her son, Rob Roberts, and his wife Elaine came from Indiana for a short visit. Recovery wishes to Margaret Nichols, Joyce's mother, as she recovers at home from recent surgery.

Emma Lee and Ladon Bradford returned from a month-long trip west in their motor home. A family get-together in Arizona was a trip highlight.

Veda Mae and Royce Jones spent a week of golfing in Phoenix with a family visit as an added treat.

Pampans do enjoy the Pampa Youth Center facilities. Malcolm Hinkle, a fast jogger, rests by stretching out on the carpet on the track entranceway.

Petite Vanessa Buzzard does aerobic workouts faithfully twice a week at the Center. Odessa East and Dorothy Buzzard discovered after a strenuous session or two that they preferred jogging and the opportunity to visit over the strenuous aerobic sessions.

Members of the Priscilla Group of the Christian Women's Fellowship bade Sandie Melton "Goodbye!" last week. Sandie joined her husband Dick, who was recently named manager of the Beall's Store at Lake Jackson.

Danny Turner, son of Minelle and Paul Turner and minister of music at First Baptist Church, Dumas, led the music for special services at First Baptist Church. Danny's family came, too.

Edith McGinnis, Dumas, was a Pampa visitor.

Barbara Davis of Plainview visited her mother, Ann Pirkle.

Kip Hutto and his fiancée, Glenda Bohannon of San Angelo, visited Kip's parents, Janet and David Hutto.

Sandy and Rick Crosswhite, Amber and Erich spent the weekend visiting Sandy's parents in Bella Vista, Ark., after a stopover in Bartlesville to wish her grandmother a happy 86th birthday.

Layne Greer of Plainview visited his aunt, Virginia Greer. Laven spent a few days visiting their son in south Texas.

Betty Marak visited her college children last week in Dallas while Clarence and Kevin enjoyed a father-son ski trip in New Mexico.

Priscilla and Jack Alexander flew to California to visit their son Chris and on their way home stopped in Dallas to visit Mark.

Four Myatt sisters, Norma Jean Healy, Mary Myatt, Betty Bohlander and June Kelp, spent a four-day holiday in Las Vegas.

Peeking at Pampa

By Katie

Judy and Eldon Reed and a cousin, Georgia White of Stinnett, spent last week at Reed Springs near Branson, Mo., for two reasons: to visit Judy's parents and to work on their vacation and future retirement home. Aileen and Austin Ruddick worked on their retirement home last week in another section of Missouri.

Bobbie Sue Stephens, who has always been among the first to show concern for others, broke her ankle in a recent fall. Bobbie Sue, office manager for M.L. Hall for 30 years, is probably back on a full-time work schedule by now. Speedy recovery wishes!

How good it was to see Norma Autry, smiling warmly, out and about after a stay in the intensive care unit of St. Anthony's Hospital.

IT TAKES THE CAKE

Not very often in our lifetimes do most of us have to order a cake to feed, say, a hundred people. That's probably why it's a little hard to choose what you want. And, considering the fact that most wedding cakes cost between $2 and $8 per serving, it's no small decision.

Many bakers will have photographs of successful cakes they've made in the past. You can get party/entertaining cookbooks that will have more pictures. If your heart is set on a certain style, the baker can let you know what flavors are appropriate.

If a wedding cake is part of your reception package, you may want to ask to see it. Some brides prefer to special-order their own cakes, while others find that the traditional reception cake is just what they had in mind.

A nice tradition is to take home and freeze the small top layer to enjoy on your first anniversary. Let your baker know if you plan to do this, so that he can compute servings accurately.

College offers new course on how to become a nanny

By MAUD S. BEEL MAN
Associated Press Writer
STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP)—Move over, Mary Poppins, with your spoonful of sugar.

Researchers and professors of Pennsylvania State University would like to explain how to become a valuable and marketable "family child care specialist." Translated, that's a nanny.

In an experimental 11-week program this summer, faculty in the university's College of Human Development will pool their research, teaching expertise and field laboratories in hopes of building the perfect American nanny.

They also hope to create for nannies the venerable stature afforded their English counterparts.

"There is a slight element here of a social mission," admitted Louise Guernsey, associate professor of human development and co-creator with her husband, Bernard, of Penn State's nanny training program. "Those of us who are teaching about family and child care really are distressed there is so little respect in this country for people who provide that service."

Where respect may be lacking, demand for nannies is booming. Joy Shelton, chairperson of the Michigan-based American Council of Nanny Schools, estimates that for every trained nanny there are 100 families eager to hire. Most of the interest and placements for the approximately 675 trained nannies in the country today, she says, have come from two-career families.

"It's a unique situation in America that there are huge amounts of jobs available and nobody wants to do it," said Ms. Shelton. She is also director of home and family living at Delta College in University Center, Mich., a two-year community college that has had a nanny training program since 1983.

Bernard Guernsey, a human development professor, proposed the idea of using existing Penn State programs as a base for the 18-credit nanny curriculum after reading about the demand for in-home child care and the lack of qualified help.

The Guerneys said Penn State's curriculum — which ranges from traditional child development and family relations courses to first aid, music and art education and contract negotiation — was unusual because it was one of a few, if not the only, college-credit programs for nannies at a major university.

Most of the council-certified nanny training programs in the 13 states where they are offered are run either privately or by community colleges, many of which include the option of college credit, Ms. Shelton said.

The Penn State program plans to move apprentice nannies from the classroom to day-care and then to a home the last three weeks.

Store medicines outside bathroom

NEW YORK (AP) — If, like most people, you store medicines and prescription drugs in the bathroom, you could be ruining their shelf life and rendering them ineffective.

"The bathroom is probably the worst storage site," said Gary

Include refrigerator, pantry in spring cleaning

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent
SPRING-CLEANING THE KITCHEN

Sorting through the refrigerator and pantry is probably low on your list of things to do. But it is important for safety, taste and nutrition. Most food shouldn't be kept over a year. Just follow this easy procedure for your own kitchen clean-up.

Start with the refrigerator. Check the frozen food. If the freezer is jam-packed and frosted over, it can't work well. Also, ice crystals can invade food, causing quality loss. Discard old, frozen-over foods. Keep other packages if they're not past the use-by date. Defrost the freezer if necessary. Date the packages you save and place them up front for early use. Is "forgotten" meat or poultry still usable? Thaw it in the refrigerator. If it smells and looks okay, cook it right away.

Check your refrigerated food. This part should be easier since refrigerated items usually announce their need to be discarded. Remember, though, that fresh meat or poultry only keeps one to three days. Canned hams needing refrigeration last about nine months. Vacuum-packed meats last two weeks unopened; five to seven days opened. Discard mayonnaise or salad dressing if the oil has separated, or if it looks or smells odd.

See some mold? You can cut a small spot from hard cheese. Keep your knife out of the mold and cut out an inch-wide square around and below it. You can scoop a small mold growth from jelly, too. Then take a second clean spoon, and scoop out a safety margin. Discard moldy bread, pastry, soft foods or liquids.

Remember that the refrigerator section temperature should not be over 40 degrees F. and the freezer temperature should be 0 degrees F. Clean out the refrigerator and freezer before you put food back. Baking soda in water will cut mold inside the box. Bleach in water will take mold off rubber casings. Follow directions on the bottle.

Next look at your countertops and cabinets. Check flour, sugar, tea and spices on your countertops. Clean under and around canisters and bowls. Now look inside your canisters. In a tight-lidded metal canister, sugar will last six to eight months. Discard flour if you see weevils which are small brownish-black bugs that attach in warm weather.

In an air-tight tin, teabags maintain good quality for about 18 months. Unopened ground coffee in a can lasts two years. Opened ground or freeze-dried coffee crystals lasts about two months — after that refrigerate it. Don't store spices over the range! Put them in a cabinet away from heat. Whole spices last about a year; ground spices, six months.

Homemakers' News

Donna Brauchi

Check your canned goods, bottles, pastas, macaroni, and mixes for "eating fitness." Boxed spaghetti or pasta should last a year or more; dry cake or similar mixes about a year. Check packages for use-by dates. Low-acid commercially canned goods such as meat, poultry, and most vegetables except tomatoes, last 2-5 years in a "healthy" can. A "healthy" can is one with no dents, holes, rusting, or bulging. High-acid canned goods such as tomato products and most fruits and fruit juices, last 18 months in sound containers.

Check glass jars, especially home-canned goods, for cracks, bulging lids, or cloudy liquid around the produce. Never taste suspicious-looking or smelling canned goods or anything that spurts liquid when opened. Wrap such things in heavy plastic and discard them in a secure trash can. They could contain deadly botulism food poisoning. Home-canned goods should be used within one year.

Check under your sink. A number of hazards can hide there. Leaky pipes can drip on food, causing mold and spoilage. Household chemicals or poisons stored there could spill. Plus, pipes are a typical entrance to homes for mice and roaches. Your best solution to all these problems is to never store food under the sink.

"WHATSOEVER HE SAITH UNTO YOU"

The first miracle which Jesus performed was the turning of the water into the wine (John 2:1-11.) The occasion was a marriage in Cana of Galilee. Although it seems that Jesus was reluctant to perform a miracle at this time, nevertheless He did it at His mother's request (John 2:3-5.) John also records: "Many other signs therefore did Jesus in the presence of the disciples, which are not written in this book: but these are written, that ye may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye may have life in his name." (John 20:30-31.) Therefore we understand that the signs and wonders were in order to convince people that He is the Son of God. We, today, are not able to actually see Him perform such miracles, nevertheless, we believe because of the recorded testimony of those who did see the miracles.

The statement made by the mother of Jesus in regard to His power is most impressive. "Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it," indicates that she had no doubt as to the power He had. Neither did she evidently know just what He would do. Yet, she knew that whatever He did, or required the servants to do, it would be thing needed. We learn a valuable lesson from her confidence and faith. It should not matter what it is that Jesus tells us to do, we should be ever willing to do it, realizing that it is the thing needed to do.

It seems there are those today who are unwilling to do what Jesus says just because they do not feel it is needful. Jesus told His disciples, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that disbelieveth shall be condemned." (Mark 16:15-16.) Yet there are many today who are unwilling to do what the Lord here commanded. It is required that we believe the gospel and be baptized in order to be saved. It is required because Jesus commanded it and we should always be willing to do whatsoever He says to us. Baptism saves because Jesus says believers are to do it in order to be saved.

Snake is in her attic, terror is in her heart

DEAR ABBY: Help, please. I have a snake in my attic. I found its skin in front of my door three years ago. I measured it, and it was six feet long then. I took it to the vet to have it identified, and he confirmed that it was a black snake and said, "You're lucky it wasn't in your bed." He had no idea how to exterminate it. I know it's still there because I keep finding the waste droppings, which I had identified at the local pet shop. I have contacted the local exterminator, but to no avail. I have always been extremely terrified of snakes.

It will soon be spring again, and I can't go through another summer under such stress. I don't need to hear how "harmless" this slithering black creature is since I have been to the emergency room of our hospital several times with a rapid heartbeat and chest pains brought on by stress.

If any of your readers can offer any suggestions, I would appreciate it.

SNAKE-A-PHOBIC

DEAR SNAKE-A-PHOBIC: You speak of consulting an exterminator. Why kill it? According to Dr. Mary Isaacs of Encino, Calif., who is a reptile expert, it is probably a king or gopher snake and is not poisonous. Better to be instructed on how to remove it from your home and let it live somewhere where you will not feel threatened. Call your local Humane Society or Animal Protective League. Either will be able to locate the snake, contain it, and remove it to a place that will be better for you as well as the snake — who is probably as terrified of you as you are of it.

holidays. (We live in different states.) Our daughter is divorced, and we now have absolutely no communication with her. Our gifts have been returned, and our letters go unanswered. We miss our grandchildren very much. Do we, as grandparents, have any rights to see them? We want to put our family back in order.

Although we are disappointed that our daughter has stopped her loan payments, we would be willing to forgive the loan if we could see our grandchildren. Please help us.

HEARTBROKEN GRANDPARENTS

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: Something is drastically wrong here. Consult your lawyer. Perhaps you can get to your daughter through her attorney or your clergyman. Don't give up. You don't say where you or your daughter live, but in some states grandparents have a legal right to see their grandchildren.

DEAR ABBY: We, the residents of Rock Table Health Care Center, have a "Dear Abby Conversation Hour," when we discuss the various letters in your column.

Recently, the subject of gratuities came up, and we want to know how you feel about tipping for a buffet-style meal where the diners help themselves cafeteria-style and are served only the beverages.

WAITING TO HEAR

DEAR WAITING: The usual 15 percent tip left for the waiter or waitress would not be expected in this case. But do leave some kind of gratuity for the person serving you. And if you receive more than just routine service, be generous.

Give lawns a head start for spring

VEGETABLE PRODUCTION MEETING

A meeting to discuss cultural practices for vegetables that would be grown for the local Farmers Market will be held Wednesday, March 25 at 7 p.m. in the Courthouse Annex meeting room, Pampa. Dr. Roland Roberts, Extension Vegetable Specialist, Lubbock, will be on hand to lead the discussion.

Dr. Roberts is very knowledgeable about production practices for vegetables. He will outline recommended varieties as well as cultural practices that are needed to raise quality vegetables.

His discussion will be aimed for a little larger scale operation than a back yard home garden, but home gardeners can learn all they need to know about raising vegetables for their own consumption. Everyone interested in raising vegetables is invited to attend.

FARMERS MARKET

As far as the formal organization of the Farmers Market, an organizational meeting date of April 2 at 7 p.m. in the Courthouse Annex meeting room, Pampa, has been set. At this time, the by-laws of the organization will be adopted and permanent directors will be elected.

GREEN UP YOUR LAWN

About this time of the year, home lawns need a boost to get them in shape for the spring season just around the corner.

I suggest three operations that can get a lawn off to a good start — scalping, fertilizing and applying a weed killer.

Scalping a lawn in early spring serves to revitalize it and promote early spring green-up.

Begin the operation by lowering the blade of your lawnmower one-half to one inch below the normal setting. Then mow the lawn in two directions that are at right angles to each other. Remove the clippings after each mowing.

It is also recommended to keep the lawnmower blade lowered until mid-summer.

After scalping the lawn, apply a nitrogen fertilizer to promote leaf and root growth. Use one pound of nitrogen per 1,000 square feet of lawn area. This is equal to three pounds of a 34-0-0 fertilizer or five pounds of a 21-0-0 fertilizer.

For a dark green lawn throughout the summer, apply nitrogen ever 50 days or when growth slows, at the rate of one pound to 1,000 square feet.

To keep crabgrass or other unsightly weeds from becoming a problem, apply a preemergence herbicide (weed killer) containing benefin, dacthal or bensulfide in the early spring, after the grass has recovered from winter. Applying a preemergence herbicide too early can further weaken turfgrasses injured by winter conditions. Combinations of herbicides with fertilizers are available and convenient to use but, as with all herbicides, should only be used according to instructions on the label.

Most home lawns that have been soil tested show very high levels of phosphorus. That is the reason for a general recommendation of fertilizers containing only nitrogen. If straight nitrogen fertilizers are unavailable, then purchase complete fertilizers that contain a lot more nitrogen than phosphorus. I do not recommend 16-20-0 except on new landscape sites.

Proper maintenance is essential for a healthy lawn, and these practices will give new life to a dormant, weedy lawn.

Exotic pets are popular

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Exotic animals, particularly reptiles and tropical birds, are gaining in popularity as pets, notes Colorado State University veterinarian Howard Martin.

He attributes this to the fact that such animals "require less contact time and personal interaction than dogs and cats do and they are often better suited to apartment living and the hurried lifestyles that people have now."

Martin, the university's exotic animals and raptor specialist, frequently treats such exotic animals as boa constrictors, guinea pigs, rodents and tropical birds.

Krakt

Amarillo band Krakt to give benefit concert dance here

Four young men calling themselves Krakt will bring their own Texas style of live music to Pampa on Saturday for a concert dance with concession proceeds benefiting drug rehabilitation programs in Pampa.

Krakt will play from 8 to 12 p.m. in the Heritage Room at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

"We just wanta rock," smirks drummer Scott Nall, "and it's not too often that people in the high plains, outside of Amarillo, get a chance to see and hear good, live rock and roll."

"We're calling it our Panhandle Premiere Tour," adds Chuck Alexander, the group's bassist and vocalist.

Co-sponsored by FM Radio Station Z-93 of Amarillo and Tumbleweed Talent, Krakt will be playing in Dumas, Tulia, Canyon, Pampa and Hereford in an attempt to broaden their popularity among the young people of the area.

Carrying a full arena concert sound system and light show, each date of the tour should prove to be something special for those who attend.

Concessions will be provided by Pepsi Cola and Der Wienerschnitzel. Proceeds from the concession sales will be donated to local drug rehabilitation programs.

"We want the big time! MTV, being the headline act... everything! But the only way to get there is to go for it!" Alexander explains.

Driven by their unique formula for success, db + ae = RnR (decibels plus artistic energy equals rock and roll), the Amarillo-based band has racked up quite a list of credits since its formation in 1982.

Their local popularity touched a national chord on Nov. 1 of last year. The band — Alexander, Nall, Bob Hopkins and Ronnie Rogers — won the song-writing competition on the topic of missing children at the sixth annual Service Merchandise Battle of the Bands.

They traveled to Nashville, Tenn., and performed the song on a nationally televised special hosted by Sammy Davis Jr. and Louise Mandrell. Krakt's song, "Remember the Children," with lyrics and melody by Bob Hopkins, the group's keyboard player, was selected from 1,100 entries in the contest.

But the Nashville award has not been the only honor to come Krakt's way. The band competed in September in the Denver (Colo.) Rock War and came in fifth out of 60 bands.

The group's staying power is shown by its work schedule.

"We worked about 46 weeks last year," said Alexander, who along with the other three looks to music as his livelihood. "We play through West Texas, we've been asked back to Denver and we've played Wyoming and Oklahoma."

All the band members contribute to Krakt's repertoire of music, chalking up some 15 original songs.

Many of the songs are on the group's first album, Girls on Fire, produced by Bill Ockander and Cactus Juice Records of Amarillo. Two videos — "War" and "Girls on Fire" — have come from the recording.

"Both the videos were shot here," Nall said. "Some parts were filmed by the Canadian River, the Paramount Club in Amarillo and an underground parking lot. The 'Girls on Fire' video is now getting airplay on the Canadian equivalent to MTV," Nall added proudly.

Nall, a native of Amarillo, and Alexander, originally from Guymon, Okla., are the two original members of Krakt, having met in the music department at West Texas State University. While Nall's interest was big band and jazz, and Alexander learned to rock, being in rock bands since high school, the two forged Krakt.

They were soon joined by Hopkins and later by Rogers. Hopkins, originally from Jacksonville, Fla., studied music at Jacksonville University and was touring with a show group when he decided to stay in Amarillo. A native of Kansas City, Rogers is the last member to team up with Krakt and brings a heavy metal-punk rock background to the group.

The Krakt members staunchly state their music is "mainstream rock" from sizzling guitar riffs to piano ballads.

"Our music is a contribution of a lot of different sounds," Hopkins explained. "We do rock like ZZ Top, some reggae and a slight touch of heavy metal."

The group members said they felt some slight concern at their name because of its resemblance to "crack." But they explained they had already adopted their name and had begun to be known well by the name before "crack" became associated with recent drug problems.

They stressed that they don't do drugs and are not into that scene at all, adding they feel they can be hip without doing drugs. But they will not lecture or give speeches during their concert dance, saying "we're just there to have a good time."

Tickets will be on sale at the door on the evening of the dance. Prices are $5 for a single and $9 for a couple.

Los Lobos fights 'wetback' image in Spain

By FRANCISCO CONDE
Associated Press Writer

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The press billed the rock band from East Los Angeles as "wetbacks" who must constantly look over their shoulders for the U.S. immigration agent.

The raucous show Los Lobos gave here to kick off their European tour left no doubts about the quintet's status as one of the most exciting bands currently on the rock scene.

However, the members of the group — all of whom are in their mid-30's — hardly rate the outlaw status the Spanish press gave them.

"None of us are wetbacks," said bassist Conrad Lorenz. "We are second-generation Americans. Only (guitarist and frontman) Cesar Rosas was born in Mexico and immigrated, but he arrived legally in Los Angeles with his parents at age six."

Despite the confusion, the 1,200 fans on hand at Madrid's Astoria Club revelled in Los Lobos' stunning mastery of American pop styles: rock, blues, country and western, soul, rhythm and blues, ballads, rockabilly and Tex-Mex waltzes.

"It's the combination of all these things that makes what we do interesting," drummer Luis Perez said.

Though Los Lobos — which means the wolves — started out as a copy band of Top 40 hits in 1974, it slowly began to define itself through American and Mexican folk music. Its greatest influence has been country and western.

The group's European tour comes as it's second LP, By the Light of the Moon, has begun to shoot up the U.S. music charts. It is a record that combines personal vignettes of American life with a country-rock sound.

The tour will take Los Lobos to France, Denmark, Sweden, Norway and England.

Los Lobos first attracted national attention in 1983 when their accordion-laced Mexican love ballad, "Anselma," won a Grammy award. Their 1984 LP, How Will the Wolf Survive?, brought them critical acclaim and a national following.

They also won respect for their insightful lyrics on the trials and tribulations of working-class Mexican-Americans in their hometown of East Los Angeles struggling to maintain a foothold in the land of the American dream.

A recent Rolling Stone music critics poll named them band of the year along with Bruce Springsteen and the E Street Band.

Chief songwriter David Hidalgo, the group's lead guitarist, said the band "loves all the music — border music — played from southern California to south Texas. We mainly play rock-'n'-roll, but we'll never stop playing the Mexican folk music that is a part of our roots."

Shock-rock king brings back ghoulish makeup, gory props

By WALTER BERRY
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Singer Alice Cooper, who built his reputation in the 1970s on ghoulish makeup, gory stage props and high-volume sound, is making a comeback at 39 to prove that shock-rock isn't dead.

"I kind of semi-retired at 35 and I got bored. I really missed the road," Cooper said in an interview before a recent concert at the Arizona Veterans Memorial Coliseum.

"I'd watch MTV and I'd see all these heavy-metal bands and I'd say, 'I can do better than that.' But people in the music business told me, 'You can't shock an audience anymore. It's all been done.' To me, that was a direct slap in the face. I said, 'Oh, we can't?' They said, 'We've already had the Sex Pistols and we have Ozzy Osbourne now.' I said, 'Ozzy Osbourne scares me as much as a paper bag. I'll give them something to be scared about.' I took it as a challenge."

Cooper and his new five-member band currently are on a seven-month American tour dubbed The Nightmare Returns. It began last October with the release of his Constrictor LP, and the stage show is more graphic than ever.

Alice Cooper

"It's high-tech, state of the art gore. We use the guillotine again. But this time when the head comes off, it's anatomically correct and there's still life in it," Cooper said with a sinister laugh. "I went out and employed some people who worked on The Fly and Aliens. I wanted to put together a show that would really shock people. We had these ideas back in 1975, but we just couldn't do it on stage. Now, the technology has caught up with the imagination."

On stage, the tall, lean Cooper twists heads off Barbie Dolls, spears other toy dolls with swords and performs with 19-foot pet boa constrictors draped around his neck.

The persona of Alice evolved from the alter-ego of Cooper, who speaks of his image in the third person. "He's a literary character to me. I can talk about him like Dr. Frankenstein talking about the monster. Alice is my creation. He's an absurd character that can't possibly be true and I'm not him. He's Bela Lugosi on-stage and I'm Fred MacMurray off-stage."

Cooper was born Vincent Damon Furnier, the son of a minister. He grew up in Phoenix and listed "a million-record seller" as his life's ambition in the 1966 Cortez High School senior yearbook. He legally changed his name to Alice Cooper "because it sounded so sweet and was the direct opposite of what we wanted to portray on stage."

He got back into music after his retirement when MCA Records called Cooper to see if he would be interested in writing the title track for Friday the 13th, Part VI: Jason Lives — the 1986 installment of the blood-splattering series.

Cooper, who watches three horror films per night, jumped at the chance and wrote "He's Back (The Man Behind the Mask)." And so he returned.

At the Movies

Angel Heart

Harry Angel is a sleazy private detective who specializes in cheap divorce cases. He's hired one day by a well-heeled lawyer to find a missing man for his mysterious client, Louis Cyphre. There's a fat fee involved and seemingly not much work.

Harry (Mickey Rourke) meets Cyphre (Robert De Niro), a smirking, arrogant fellow with hair as slick as goose grease and mandarin fingernails, sitting on a throne-like platform in a grim Harlem building that also houses some holy rollers. He's to find Johnny Favorite, a musician who disappeared after World War II before paying off a debt to Cyphre.

Angel's quest takes him to the suburbs, Coney Island and finally New Orleans. Along the way, he leaves a trail of bloodied corpses: Everyone Harry Angel asks about the case dies violently.

He finally meets Favorite's daughter, the young and sensual Epiphany Proudfoot (Lisa Bonet), and has sex with her in the infamous scene that at first drew an X rating. Director Alan Parker edited the movie, removing footage showing Rourke's naked, flabby buttocks so the film could have an R.

Following that intense interlude, Angel's quest comes to a somewhat predictable and bloody end.

Angel Heart is set in 1955 but you'd never know it from looking at Rourke, who has that stubbly Miami Vice look that looks like an unwashed face. Even the language is often a little too '80s.

For a film that seeks to combine gumshoe gambling, the occult and the special effects of a horror movie, not much happens. Sure, a woman's heart is torn from her chest and another poor slob gets cooked in a vat of seafood gumbo. Sure, the sex scene has enough writhing to satisfy the most avid porn fan.

But the pacing is slow, the direction is flat and the constant dream sequences are not exciting or symbolically interesting.

De Niro is a charm as the evil Cyphre, but there's not enough of him. Bonet, who is seen only in the final moments of the movie, is deliciously sensual, especially in her hair-washing scene. Charlotte Rampling also makes a brief appearance as Favorite's ex-lover.

Unfortunately, the movie is monopolized by Rourke, who lacks the depth and intensity to control 113 minutes of celluloid.

Produced by Alan Marshall and Elliott Kastner for Tri-Star Pictures, Angel Heart is rated R for violence and sexual content.

Senate delays voting on regent appointees

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas regent appointee Louis Beecherl will be asked to testify again before a Senate committee about a possible political power struggle for the chairmanship of the UT board.

The chairman of the Senate committee that considers gubernatorial appointments said senators want to question Beecherl about his comment that he made a commitment to Gov. Bill Clements to vote against Jess Hay of Dallas, the current chairman.

"Once we reviewed that (committee) transcript, there were a number of us that did feel there were real questions raised whether or not he (Beecherl) made a proper or improper commitment to Gov. Clements," said Chairman Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville.

The Senate last week adopted Edwards' motion to recall before the Nominations Committee six college regent appointees, five of whom apparently got caught in a net intended for Beecherl, a Dallas lawyer.

Hay, a Democratic fundraiser, said earlier that the Republican Clements told him in an angry telephone conversation he would do "everything in his power" to have him removed as chairman.

Edwards first suggested leaving as pending Clements' appointments of San Antonio businessman Sam Barshop and Fort Worth oil and gas operator W.A. "Tex" Moncrief as UT regents, but said he did not plan to ask them to testify unless something developed from Beecherl's testimony.

That proposal touched off heated debate, particularly over whether Barshop was being treated fairly.

"I think your action in delaying his confirmation is not being fair to Mr. Barshop," said Sen. Cyndi Krier, R-San Antonio.

After a series of confusing motions, a 10-minute recess was called, and the motions were withdrawn.

Senators then voted to recommit the names of the three UT regent appointees, as well as Texas A&M regent appointees William McKenzie of Dallas, Douglas DeCluitt of Waco and Wayne Showers of McAllen, to Edwards' committee.

Edwards was asked if all six regents would appear before his committee Tuesday, and he said, "I would like to poll the Senate to see if they want to personally question the A&M regents, and also see if they want to personally question Mr. Barshop."

"I have no reason to believe that there is a problem with any of the A&M regents. The only thing I can say for certain is we will ask Mr. Beecherl back," Edwards said.

Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, said since the UT Board of Regents has nine members, "it is past ludicrous to suggest" that Clements would talk to one person — meaning Beecherl — and not others.

"What would possibly be gained by speaking to one particular person without speaking to others?" Washington said.

Asked if the motion to bring all the appointees back to committee was a compromise, Edwards smiled and told reporters, "Any time senators raise questions about appointees, we ought to err on the side of being cautious and careful."

But why the A&M regents?

"Just simply because there were members who raised the question if Gov. Clements had asked the UT regents to oppose a chairman, perhaps did he ask the A&M regents to do the same?" Edwards said.

Committee studying seat belts for buses

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas school boards and administrators are opposing seat belts on school buses because they say the belts could cause even more injuries to students in bus accidents.

"Some studies indicate that seat belts on large buses are not only unnecessary but may be dangerous," Johnny Veselka, executive director of the Texas Association of School Administrators, told the Senate Education Committee last week.

The measure to require seat belts and 28-inch padded seat backs on new school buses, by Sen. Gene Green, D-Houston, was left pending until the committee's meeting this week.

A similar bill is pending in a House subcommittee.

Rozanne Rubin, Houston, speaking for the Coalition for Seat Belts, said school districts pay as much $100 each for helmets to protect their football players, but balk at $16 per student for seat belts.

"It seems to me it would be worth $16 a year to protect students," said Rozanne Rubin of Houston, speaking for the Coalition for Seat Belts.

"Seat belts and high seat backs would prevent the types of injuries that are occurring" said Dr. Sandra Thomas, Belton, representing the Texas Medical Association.

Thomas said about one million students are transported by school buses each day and about 600 of them are injured each year.

"This bill would reduce standees in buses. It will improve discipline by keeping students in their seats, and it keeps them from being little missiles in a collision," she said.

Veselka said Texas Department of Public Safety statistics show there have been no students killed in school bus accidents in Texas since 1983.

Janis Petronis of Copperas Cove, president-elect of the Texas Association of School Boards, urged the committee to wait for additional research data before requiring school boards to mandate seat belts.

"Pilot studies currently being conducted in Austin and Houston should provide needed data," she said. "What if seat belts cause more injuries?"

In other action Thursday the committee approved 6-0 a bill by Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, that would give scholarships in any state university to children of teachers with at least eight years classroom experience.

Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, said teachers' children should have to show economic need for the scholarships. "Many teachers are the spouses of lawyers and doctors and others who are in no financial need," said Truan.

Agriculture Scene

March rains, snows delay planting operations in Texas

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — With spring approaching, snow again blanketed the Panhandle in a storm system that also boosted moisture to the adequate-to-surplus level in many areas of the state, says Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The new moisture again delayed planting operations in southern areas and halted field operations across other sections of the state, Carpenter said in his weekly report on the state's agriculture. Harvests as well as planting also were slowed by the weather in the Rio Grande Valley, where the cabbage harvest has been active along with harvests of greens and carrots.

Corn is 60 percent planted in extreme South Texas, and about half of the sorghum acreage has been planted, along with some 40 percent of the cotton, Carpenter noted. To the north in the Coastal Bend, corn is 18 percent planted but sorghum only 8 percent planted due to many delays caused by rains. Cotton planting is just beginning there, and the area generally is from two to three weeks behind its normal planting schedule.

In Southwest Texas, turbulent weather also delayed planting operations and the corn crop there is running about three weeks behind schedule, Carpenter said. Producers are checking their fields closely as weather improves in an attempt to finish their corn planting, along with that of cantaloupes, watermelons and onion transplants. Growers hope to resume harvests of carrots, spinach, greens and broccoli as quickly as weather permits, he added. Corn and sorghum planting also is under way as conditions improve in parts of south central and upper coastal areas.

Carpenter advised farmers to check on soil temperatures prior to planting, since minimum weekly average soil temperatures at the 4-inch level recommended for good seed germination are 50 degrees Fahrenheit for corn, 55 for sorghum and 65 for cotton.

Average temperature readings by the Southwest Agricultural Weather Service Center at Texas A&M University for the week just ending include: Austin, 50 degrees; Beaumont, 59; Beeville, 61; Big Spring, 59; Bushland, 48; Dilley, 61; College Station, 61; Lavon Dam, 56; Lufkin, 53; Fort Stockton, 54; Pecos, 52; San Angelo, 56; Stephenville, 59; Uvalde, 60; Longview, 63; Victoria, 62; and Waco, 56.

Flurries of activity for spring gardens continue as weather conditions permit across the state, and some fruit trees have completed their bloom cycles. South Texas landscapes are taking on more vivid hues as wildflowers begin to bloom profusely.

The wheat crop is making progress, and stocker cattle are being moved from fields to be harvested in many Panhandle and Rolling Plains counties, Carpenter said. Heavy yearling death losses have resulted from bloat as stockers graze on lush small grain pastures in Baylor and other counties, Carpenter said.

The calving and lambing seasons continue active across the state. Some cattle are continuing to receive supplemental feeds but considerable improvement is reported in native pasture and range grasses.

District Extension Directors reported these mid-week conditions:

PANHANDLE: Snow and colder temperatures again halted field operations. Wheat continues to make good progress and stocker cattle are being moved from fields to be harvested. Bloat has caused some death losses on small grain pastures.

SOUTH PLAINS: Land preparation has resumed as conditions allowed. Wheat growth has been boosted by warmer temperatures and pasture conditions are improving. Onions are being transplanted.

ROLLING PLAINS: Harvesting of last season's cotton crop continues between rains. Weeds are a problem in some wheat fields. Heavy yearling death losses reported from bloat of animals on lush small grain pastures in a number of counties. Many ranchers are completing working of fall calves.

NORTH CENTRAL: Land preparation for cotton and sorghum continues when weather is favorable. Corn is 95 percent planted in some areas and sorghum planting is progressing. Wheat is in fair to excellent condition.

NORTHEAST: Wheat and other small grains are making good growth. Auction markets continue active in the area. The calf crop now arriving is above average and cattle generally continue in good condition. Gardens are being prepared for warm season vegetables.

FAR WEST: Livestock feeding continues with lambing and calving seasons very active. Some fruit trees are blooming and a few gardens have been started. Rain, some hail and snow again boosted moisture levels.

WEST CENTRAL: Field operations this week were halted by severe thunderstorms and strong winds. Wheat is making excellent growth and many cattle have been moved off fields that are to be harvested. Farmers are eager to begin spring planting.

CENTRAL: Grains that have been top-dressed show good yield potential. Greenbug infestation being reported in some oat fields. Cattle are being treated for lice and ear ticks.

Stampede toward Reagan's farm payment cap fails to materialize

By DON KENDALL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's plan to place an absolute ceiling on farm payments of $50,000 per farmer has thus far failed to generate much support among farm lawmakers.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said last week in a statement that the panel would "of course study the administration's latest proposal."

"But my own reaction is that adopting that suggestion could lead to two negative developments," de la Garza said. "First, it could cut the incomes of some legitimate family farmers; and second it could endanger participation by some farmers in surplus reduction programs. Those developments would not be in the long run interest of either farmers or taxpayers."

The administration proposal, unveiled in January and contained in a legislative package sent to Capitol Hill last week, follows disclosure last year of huge payments to a small number of producers.

The payments arose out of the 1985 farm law, which was designed to lower the cost of U.S. agriculture exports and thus restore American competitiveness. This was done by lowering price support loan rates, which benefit farmers, and new forms of payments were established to compensate.

"Those extra payments are, in effect, part of the process of making America competitive without bankrupting farmers," de la Garza said.

Rep. Edward R. Madigan, R-Ill., the ranking Republican on the Agriculture Committee, is waiting for estimates of its effects before jumping in on either side.

"I think we're going to do something, but I'm not sure yet what we're going to do," Madigan said in an interview.

Like some other lawmakers, he underscored the distinction between the two parts of the administration's proposal. One would simply install the $50,000 overall ceiling.

The other would seek to weed out of the farm program individuals who may have entered it merely to circumvent existing ceilings.

A $50,000 cap per person for most types of payments has been on the books for years. After payments to individual producers soaring into the millions under the 1985 farm law's export provisions were discovered last year, Congress enacted an overall $250,000 ceiling.

The government is investigating a rash of farm restructurings to bring in more "persons" as operators and thus make them eligible for federal payments. The administration plan would redefine the word person to eliminate from the program certain absentee farmers as well as minor children who have suddenly become partners with their parents.

Lawmakers say too many questions about the proposed payment ceiling remain unanswered. For example, they say such a cap would prompt some farmers to leave the program and increase their production, which in turn would expand the supply of agricultural goods and thus further lower prices.

"If you do something that really limits it to $50,000 for every farming operation, the question is: How many farming operations move out of the program and what is the budget exposure that results as a consequence of that?" Madigan says.

Just how much of the $26 billion farm program would be saved as the result of the administration's proposal remains unclear.

First results from a long-awaited report on the subject from the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, are expected this week.

But many committee members say the enormous payments that have attracted most of the attention are few in number.

AG MARKETING OUTLOOK

Tuesday, March 24 from 9 a.m. to noon, Dr. Ed. Smith and Dr. Ernest David, Extension economists, will present 1987 outlook information for beef cattle and grains.

The topics to be discussed are: 1987 Grain Situation and Market Information and Factors Affecting Cattle Prices and the Structure of the Beef Industry.

This discussion will be in Pampa at the Courthouse Annex meeting room.

In addition to the above subjects, both speakers will also address pending farm programs and legislation and how these will impact High Plains Agriculture. VEGETABLE PRODUCTION MEETING

A meeting to discuss cultural practices for vegetables that would be grown for the local Farmers Market will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Courthouse Annex meeting room. Dr. Roland Roberts, Extension vegetable specialist, Lubbock, will be on hand to lead the discussion.

Dr. Roberts is very knowledgeable about production practices for vegetables. He will outline recommended varieties as well as cultural practices that are needed to raise quality vegetables.

His discussion will be aimed for a little larger scale operation than a back yard home garden, but home gardeners can learn all they need to know about raising vegetables for their own consumption. Everyone interested in raising vegetables is invited to attend.

FARMERS MARKET

As far as the formal organization of the Farmers Market, an organizational meeting date of April 2 at 7 p.m. in the Courthouse Annex meeting room has been set. At this time, the by-laws of the organization will be adopted and permanent directors will be elected.

RUSSIANS RETURN: INSECTS THAT IS

The following information was reported by Dr. Carl Patrick, Extension entomologist, Amarillo, last Monday.

"In recent surveys, I found Russian wheat aphid in Armstrong, Dallam, Deaf Smith, Hartley, Oldham, and Randall counties. I am sure they can be found in other counties, I have just not looked there yet. Dr. Pat Morrison reports them in many areas on the South Plains. Some of the infestations in Randall County are being treated because of economic damage. Dryland wheat seems to have the heaviest infestations at this time. Much to my surprise, grazing of wheat seems to have made little difference in whether you have a Russian wheat aphid infestation or not.

Greenbug infestations seem to be relatively light at this time.

Jim Allison does report fairly heavy greenbug infestations in Sherman County. A report from Hansford County would indicate that heavy infestations exist in some areas of that county.

Over 150 degree days have accumulated since January 1 in all areas of the Texas Panhandle. This means that overwintered alfalfa weevil eggs are hatching. These early weevils may be numerous enough to cause damage to alfalfa that is beginning to grow. Overwintered adult alfalfa weevils are laying eggs which will hatch and add to the alfalfa weevil."

Producers with suspected infestations are invited to let us know in the county Extension office. If you have questions or need assistance, give us a call at 669-7429.

Employment prospects promising

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' employment situation may be improving but it is too soon to say definitely, the Texas Employment Commission said last week in releasing regional unemployment rates for February.

The statewide unemployment rate was 9.2 percent for February compared with 9.8 percent for January.

"In most cases unemployment rates are down but some of that may be seasonal since February was a mild winter month," said Terence Travland, TEC labor market analyst.

"Primarily it reflects a leveling out in the Texas economy. We may have reached a bottoming-out period and maybe have made some movement toward improvement. 'We are encouraged but it is too soon to draw any firm conclusions,'" Travland said.

Rates of unemployment in the urban areas of Texas as announced Friday the TEC for February compared with revised January figures (in parenthesis) included:

Abilene 9.4 (10.1)
Amarillo 7.0 (7.1)
Austin 6.5 (6.8)
Beaumont-Port Arthur 13.6 (14.5)
Brazoria 10.7 (11.6)
Brownsville-Harlingen 15.6 (16.6)
Bryan-College Station 6.0 (6.9)
Corpus Christi 12.9 (13.4)
Dallas 6.3 (6.7)

Q. What is "Corona"? Is it serious?

A: "Corona" is the common name for "Coronavirus" and the disease it causes. This virus is very common and the second-leading cause of viral diarrhea in dogs (Parvovirus being no. 1). It is highly contagious and more prevalent in warm and hot weather. The disease is virtually identical to Parvo, except for the time of year. Parvo is usually a cool or cold weather disease. In the spring and fall, it is possible to have both diseases at the same time. The symptoms include serious diarrhea, vomiting, weight loss, dehydration and in young pups and older dogs, death in 24-36 hours after exposure. In the past the vaccine was unreliable as to availability, but now there seems to be ample supply. It is given in a series like the Parvo series, followed by annual boosters. By the way, Parvo vaccine does not protect against Corona—your dog needs both! See your Veterinarian for protection from the disease as well as Rabies, Distemper and Parvo.

Researchers overcome obstacles to widen use of superconductors

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — Research has developed a new class of superconductors that work at record high temperatures and has overcome practical obstacles to their use, opening doors to transformation of the electric power and computer industries, physicists say.

Preliminary evidence suggests that superconductivity can occur at a temperature of 234 degrees below zero Fahrenheit, about 50 degrees above the previous record temperature, researchers said last week at a press conference during a meeting of the American Physical Society.

The work was done by Constantin Politis and colleagues in Karlsruhe, West Germany.

Researchers also announced that the new materials, despite their brittleness, have been fabricated into wires and into thin films suitable for use in the construction of computer chips.

Paul C.W. Chu of the University of Houston said he has hints that superconductivity can occur at temperatures as high as 27 degrees below zero Fahrenheit, which raises the prospect that room-temperature superconductors might soon be found.

Further research is needed to know whether superconductivity is occurring at that temperature, Chu said.

Last month, Chu and M.K. Wu, of the University of Alabama, reported achieving superconductivity at 283 degrees below zero Fahrenheit, the first demonstration of superconductivity above the temperature of liquid nitrogen. Many other research groups have since matched that feat.

The higher operating temperatures of the new superconductors make them widely useful in industrial applications.

Until now, superconductivity was found to occur at temperatures so close to absolute zero — minus 459 degrees Fahrenheit — that the superconductors had to be cooled with liquid helium, an expensive and cumbersome process.

The new superconductors can be cooled with liquid nitrogen, which is not as cold and thus is cheaper to produce, easier to handle and requires less expensive insulation, researchers said.

The new materials should also be ideal for the production of more powerful magnets than any yet made. Such magnets could be crucial to the development of new methods of generating electricity from nuclear fusion, researchers said.

James Smith of the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico said thin films of the new materials would be useful in the development of so-called neutral beam weapons, a part of President Reagan's "Star Wars" missile defense system.

Physicists have been racing frantically to produce new high-temperature superconductors since early November, when word circulated of a breakthrough at an IBM research laboratory in Zurich.

K. Alex Muller and J. Georg Bednorz at IBM had identified a new class of compounds that allowed superconductivity to occur higher temperatures than ever before, and physicists everywhere dropped their research projects and raced to exploit the new materials.

More than 50 scientists presented new research on the compounds Wednesday night.

Officials' patience wears thin with U.S. revelers in Mexico

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Mayor Fernando Montemayor says police will no longer tolerate rowdy U.S. students who treat city streets like cantinas and bathrooms.

He says "scandalous" behavior by students who visit this border city while spring-breakers from South Texas schools will lead to more arrests and jailings.

"We oppose this spectacle," City Manager Roberto Solis said late last week. "We want tourists to come and have a good time. But we want them to behave according to the laws here, as city residents do."

At least eight students on spring break were arrested last week for smoking marijuana, drinking in the streets and destroying property.

Local newspapers have editorialized against the students' "licentious" behavior and said police seemed to be more tolerant of the students than of local residents.

"They were taking advantage of our welcoming of them," said Solis. "Residents are not happy because they were not obeying the local ordinances. They were asking 'How come spring breakers can go loose in the streets and we can't?' Besides, they were getting kind of rowdy."

"If we don't allow it locally, we're not going to allow it for foreigners," Montemayor said.

Matamoros is a popular spot for the students, as beer is often one-fourth the cost as in Texas and the drinking age is 18.

Police jailed at least three students overnight, and at least five others were arrested and released. The city on Wednesday doubled or quadrupled fines for smoking marijuana in public and drunk and disorderly conduct.

"When visitors become too obnoxious and property is destroyed and disrespect for the law is openly flaunted, you have to expect civic leaders to react," U.S. Consul Danny Root said.

Root helped secure the release of several of the students arrested and jailed last week, the peak for spring break in South Texas.

"Our job is to protect Americans overseas, but these kids need protection from themselves. But they're hard to protect when so many feel hell-bent on provocation," Root said.

Among the eight arrests Monday, three were students caught smoking marijuana in the streets and others had broken property or urinated in public, Root said. They were the first such arrests in recent memory, he said.

So far, Mexican prosecutors have opted to fine the students rather than subject them to possible stiff sentences in a criminal drug proceeding, Root said. And he said he had little use for the students' complaints about being arrested.

BUICK PRESENTS A BETTER TIME TO BUY.

The amount you save is optional, the new 6/60 warranty is standard.

Right now, you can save up to $1,200 on optional equipment, on 18 new Buick models. Save even more on Buicks equipped with Value Option Packages.

Buick is making it very easy for you to improve your options. For a limited time, Buick is offering substantial discounts on optional equipment.

So this is a rare opportunity to drive a fully equipped automobile, and save money at the same time.

Buicks come with a long list of standard features to begin with, but this is your chance to have a few of those convenient, luxurious extras you've always wanted. Like a cassette deck as well as a radio. Or an automatic Climate Control, instead of a regular air conditioner. Or a 6-way power driver's seat. Or Cruise Control. Or whatever. The more available equipment you buy, the more you save.

And you can use your savings however you wish. You can get a cash rebate, apply your discount toward the down payment or even toward your lease payments.

This very special offer is available on a wide variety of new Buicks. LeSabre, Century, Regal, Skylark and Somerset — plus the Electra and LeSabre Estate Wagons.

How much can you save on a new Buick? It's your option.

For details, come in and see us now.

Optional Equipment	Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Prices	You Save
$ 500 — $ 999		$ 200
$ 1,000 — $ 1,499		$ 400
$ 1,500 — $ 1,999		$ 600
$ 2,000 — $ 2,999		$ 800
$ 3,000 +		$ 1,200

6/60 Warranty.

Better really does matter at Buick. To offer tangible evidence, all new 1987 Buicks now come with a 6-year/60,000-mile warranty on the powertrain and a 6-year/100,000-mile warranty on outer body rust-through. See your dealer for the terms and conditions of this new limited warranty.

*You must take actual retail delivery by April 30, 1987. Dealer financial participation of up to 35% may affect consumer cost. See your participating dealer for details. Value Option Package savings based on Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price of Option Package vs. options purchased separately.

Shown are just some of the options available on Century and many other Buick models.
