Reagan slips past Iran deal's critics

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, at a news conference judged by Democrats and Republicans alike as a deft performance, ignored criticism from the Tower commission and defended anew his arms-to-Iran policy as being "right in the beginning."

Reagan left the impression Thursday night that he and Vice President George Bush disagree over whether Bush had opposed the covert sale of arms to Iran.

■ See related story, Page 5

Bush has said key officials knew he harbored "certain reservations" about the deal, but Reagan used a single word — No — when asked if Bush had ever voiced an objection.

Reagan's news conference, his first in four months, was considered crucial in his campaign to regain his footing after the Iran-Contra uproar shook his administration and caused his popularity to plummet.

"He was his old self," enthused Sen. Alan K.

Simpson, R-Wyo., who a day earlier had berated the news media for questioning Reagan and trying "to stick it in his gazoo."

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., said Reagan was "calm, cool and collected," and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said the president "was much better prepared than he was at his last news conference. I think that helps him a great deal." Heflin and Nunn are on the Senate committee investigating the secret sale of arms to Iran and possible diversion of payments to the Nicaraguan Contras.

Reagan appeared at ease and in control throughout 30 minutes of questioning.

While not offering any revelations about the Iran-Contra affair, Reagan acknowledged his policy amounted to an arms-for-hostages swap.

"I would not go down that same road again," he pledged.

However, he said it was not until he read the Tower report — released Feb. 26 — that he realized his strategy for the Iranian initiative "had disappeared completely, and led by the Iranians, the conversation was totally arms-for-hostages."

Reagan insisted his policy was intended to open a channel for better relations between the United States and Iran. The Tower commission had re-

Energy chief details breaks for oil

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Energy Secretary John Herrington says he wants to renew sizable depletion allowances only on new oil and gas production and not on all production as proposed in a letter he sent to President Reagan.

One official says the letter was "badly edited."

The mistake is causing confusion as Herrington begins a campaign inside the administration to win support for the allowance, which it opposed in last year's tax debate.

Herrington has said he sees it as the best way to help domestic well owners battered by the oil price collapse of 1986.

Trying to clear up that confusion without releasing his letter to the president, Herrington told reporters Thursday: "A reasonable depletion proposal should be on new oil and gas discoveries and the enhanced recovery projects. . . I don't know that depletion allowances on all oil and gas would be something we should do, that letter notwithstanding."

After the meeting, an official who spoke on condition his name not be used said the still-unreleased letter to the president had been "badly edited."

The secretary today briefs the Cabinet's Domestic Policy and Economic Councils on a huge study of energy industries directed by Deputy Secretary William Martin and released Tuesday.

The study concludes that a protective tariff, eagerly sought by domestic producers, would cause more economic damage than it would be worth.

Herrington said he does not expect to seek decisions today. He has avoided an outright statement of what he will recommend, except for the maximum 100,000 barrels-a-day stockpiling of the Strategic Petroleum Reserve instead of the 35,000 barrels proposed for next year.

President Reagan must send his comments on the report to Congress in 45 days.

Evangelist quits over sexual blackmail

Bakker and wife Tammy speak to PTL television audience last summer.

PTL head Bakker gets Falwell's help

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

FORT MILL, S.C. — Television evangelist Jim Bakker, saying he had been blackmailed about an alleged sexual encounter, turned over control of his "Praise the Lord" (PTL) ministry to the Rev. Jerry Falwell.

Bakker, 47, said in a statement to The Charlotte Observer Thursday that he was "wickedly manipulated by treacherous former friends" who "conspired to betray me into a sexual encounter" seven years ago.

Then, Bakker said, he "succumbed to blackmail. . . to protect and spare the ministry and my family" and "appease these persons who were determined to destroy this ministry."

Neither Bakker nor PTL would identify the former friends or say who paid or received the blackmail money, or what sum was involved.

"I now, in hindsight, realize payment should have been resisted and we ought to have exposed the blackmailers to the penalties of the law," Bakker said.

Mattox views state's red ink

By SUZANNE GAMBOA
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Attorney General Jim Mattox says he believes Texas' founding fathers didn't intend for lawmakers to end a biennium in the red, but he doesn't know yet if that means it's illegal.

Mattox said Thursday he has dedicated about half of his opinion-writing staff to the task of determining if lawmakers are constitutionally bound to pay off the $1 billion budget deficit.

Last week, state Comptroller Bob Bullock said the deficit must be paid off and asked Mattox for his legal opinion. He also asked if he can legally certify the 1988-89 budget if a deficit exists.

The state will finish the fiscal year, which ends Aug. 31, with a $1 billion deficit because of a shortage of revenue caused by the decline in oil prices.

The Texas Legislative Council, a legislative research agency, said Thursday the Texas Constitution does not bind lawmakers to balance the books at the end of the fiscal year. It also said Bullock could certify the 1988-89 budget.

But the final decision rests with Mattox.

"(Bullock's) correct on asking the question and he's even more correct in indicating that he has a heavy responsibility in directing the Legislature in bringing our budget into balance," Mattox said.

Mattox called Bullock the "conscience of state government."

"Our founding fathers did not intend for us to finish a biennium with the budgets in an imbalanced position. Mr. Bullock is very clear as to what he believes the founding fathers thought, and I believe that, too."

But Mattox said the question he is trying to answer is whether Bullock can certify the budgets for 1988-89.

"I'm going to carry out my responsibility to give a ruling on the matter, but it also is just as clear that the Legislature has a responsibility to balance that budget through this biennium. And it looks very clear that's not going to be the case," Mattox said.

While Mattox debated the red ink, one of the state's bigger budget drains — Texas prisons — remained closed to new inmates today.

The prisons were shut down again after the number of prisoners in the 26-unit system topped a state-mandated 95 percent capacity.

Mattox

The Texas Department of Corrections is not expected to open its doors until next Tuesday, repeating an open-and-shut cycle that leaves the system open only two days a week, prison spokesman David Nunnelee said.

White Deer child drinks mild poison

WHITE DEER — Two-year-old Tyler Terry of White Deer gave his parents a scare Thursday afternoon when he got into a cabinet at his grandmother's house and drank some all-purpose cleaner.

But, after being examined and released from Coronado Hospital, the toddler is home safely.

According to the boy's mother, Sheila Terry, Tyler drank some organic biodegradable all-purpose household cleaner that he got from a cabinet Thursday afternoon.

"He came in and told me, and he got sick," Terry said, adding that her husband, White Deer City Marshal Tam Terry, dispatched the city's first responder emergency medical unit.

"We didn't know what was in it," Mrs. Terry said. "There was no list of ingredients, and the bottle was old."

However, a notice on the bottle said that if the cleaner were ingested, the victim should drink milk or water.

Still unsure about the contents of the cleaner, the Terrys rushed their son to Pampa on the first responder unit. The White Deer unit transferred the boy to a Pampa Rural Metro ambulance at Kingsmill, Terry said.

The mother added that when they arrived at the hospital, Licensed Vocational Nurse Elaine Townshend called the Galveston Poison Control Center to ask about the substance and to check on a remedy.

"We found out it wasn't very lethal," Terry said, adding that the cleaner turned out to be 73 percent water.

The tot was then taken to Pampa physician Dr. Alberto Sy for further examination Thursday and was returned home.

Correction

The Pampa News incorrectly reported in Sunday's edition that Pampa "sent no representatives" to a meeting of area and Texas Department of Corrections officials last Friday in Borger. The meeting, pushed by state Rep. Dick Waterfield, R-Canadian, was called to discuss bringing a state prison to the Panhandle. In fact, the city of Pampa sent two representatives to the meeting, Nathan Hopson, director of community services, and John Horst, assistant finance director. City Manager Bob Hart said today that Hopson and Horst prepared a report on the Borger meeting. Hart also said Pampa community leaders are diligently continuing their study of whether to appeal for a state prison in Pampa. He said a file of information on Pampa for the TDC should be prepared by early next week.

AIDS drug approved

By JERRY ESTILL
 Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The first drug shown to prolong the lives of AIDS sufferers won federal approval today for prescription use in the United States.

Azidothymidine, better known as AZT, is not represented as a cure for the deadly disease but clinical trials last fall convinced officials it does prolong life and reduce symptoms among some AIDS patients.

Noting that it is the only treatment proven to offer even that relief, a Food and Drug Administration advisory panel concluded in January that AZT should be approved despite some serious side effects.

Today's final FDA approval, announced by Robert E. Windom, assistant secretary of health at the Department of Health and Human Services, had been widely expected for several weeks.

"Today's approval marks an important step, but by no means a final victory, in our ongoing war against AIDS," said Windom.

The drug, made by Burroughs Wellcome Co. of Research Triangle Park, N.C., is already being given to about 4,500 patients under a special treatment plan approved by the FDA after the clinical trials were so promising.

Those trials were stopped earlier than scheduled when the FDA agreed that AZT had demonstrated enough beneficial effect to make it immoral to continue denying the drug to those patients in the study who were getting a placebo.

Burroughs Wellcome Co. officials told a House subcommittee earlier this month they expect the annual cost of AZT — to be sold under the trade name Retrovir — for a typical patient to range between $7,000 and $10,000.

"Retrovir is not a cure for AIDS, but it has a demonstrated ability to improve the short-term survival of AIDS patients with recently diagnosed PCP and certain patients with advanced ARC."

PCP is pneumocystis carinii pneumonia, a rare form of pneumonia found mostly in people with AIDS.

Because of a short supply of the drug, Windom said distribution of Retrovir will be limited initially by the company to patients for whom it is indicated under the approved labeling, including AIDS patients and ARC patients with specific laboratory evidence of severely depressed immunity or a history of PCP.

ARC is short for advanced AIDS-related complex, a diagnosis just short of full-fledged AIDS.

At the FDA hearing in January, Burroughs Wellcome outlined a plan under which AZT will be distributed under controls designed to ensure that the limited supplies now available go first to the most seriously ill patients and those suffering the same symptoms as the people who participated in the trials.

After a doctor certifies to Burroughs Wellcome that his or her patient meets the guidelines, the patient is to be assigned a confidential number. An adequate supply of AZT to treat that patient is shipped, using the numbered code, to a pharmacy designated by the patient.

The FDA approval includes a notation to doctors that AZT has been demonstrated safe and effective so far only on AIDS patients and ARC patients with specific symptoms.

However, once any drug is approved for sale, physicians can prescribe it any way they see fit. Given the absence of any other AIDS treatment, it is widely assumed that almost all AIDS patients will insist that their doctors prescribe it for them — and that most doctors will do so for lack of any alternative treatment.

A major side effect is that AZT suppresses bone marrow, thus reducing the body's production of red and white blood cells. This can be serious for an AIDS sufferer, whose infection-fighting cell count is already depressed. Some patients on AZT have to receive blood transfusions to compensate for the drug's side-effect.

Despite an initial shortage, Burroughs Wellcome has said it expects to be able to make enough AZT by the end of the year for all AIDS sufferers in the United States, about 32,000. AZT is derived from herring sperm in a complex, multi-step chemical process.

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, is a contagious disease that attacks the body's immune system, rendering it incapable of resisting other diseases and infections.

The chief victims of AIDS have been homosexual men and intravenous drug users. Health officials estimate that heterosexual contact is responsible for 4 percent of cases and that 1 million to 1.5 million Americans have been exposed to the virus.

As of March 10, AIDS had been diagnosed in 31,982 Americans, of whom more than half, or 18,462, have died since 1979, according to the Centers for Disease Control. No one is known to have recovered from AIDS.

Blackmail

The Observer said it had been investigating allegations that a New York woman and her representatives received $115,000 in 1985 after she said she had sexual relations with Bakker in Florida.

Walwell, at a news conference Thursday in Lynchburg, Va., called Bakker "a personal friend and brother in Christ. He put his arm around me and asked me personally to help him in his time of crisis."

Falwell said Bakker had personal problems that "are in no way as serious as many of the rumors would have it." Falwell declined to comment on Bakker's statement about blackmail.

Officials of Bakker's denomination, the Assemblies of God, said a formal investigation into the allegations will continue, although Bakker said he was also resigning from the church.

Bakker and his wife, Tammy Faye, had been co-hosts of the ministry's daily talk show until taking leave recently so Mrs. Bakker could be treated in California for drug dependency.

PTL, which reported $129 million in revenues in 1986 and employs about 2,000 people, said in a news release that a new board of directors had been named, with Falwell as chairman. Falwell aide Mark DeMoss said the board would meet Thursday to reorganize the ministry.

The new board members include former U.S. Interior Secretary James Watt.

Falwell said he had no intention of moving any of his operations from Lynchburg but said he would have an office in Charlotte, the major city near PTL's 2,300-acre Heritage USA retreat at Fort Mill.

"I am not naive enough to think that a ministry of the magnitude of PTL and Heritage USA could go through a dilemma such as this without creating a backwash that would hurt every gospel ministry in America, if not the world," Falwell said in a statement explaining his involvement.

Richard Dortch, who has been executive director of PTL, was named president and host of the PTL show.

jected that rationale, saying, "Whatever the intent, almost from the beginning the initiative became in fact a series of arms-for-hostages deals."

The president said there was no mention of the hostages originally and that they entered into the picture only when the Iranians requested arms from the United States.

Reagan added, "We weren't going to overlook an opportunity if we could get those hostages back. And we're not going to overlook an opportunity in the future."

He said he was not aware until last November that payments from the arms sales may have been diverted to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua. "And I still do not have the answer to (what happened) to that money," Reagan said.

He said he had been aware that private groups were providing assistance to the rebels but said his meetings with Contra supporters were with people who merely were raising money to buy television advertisements on behalf of the rebels.

Under questioning, Reagan acknowledged that at his last news conference he made "a misstatement" when he denied — several times — that Israel had shipped U.S. arms to Iran. He said he did not realize he had said it, and had directed that a correction be put out when told of his mistake.

"I'm not going to tell falsehoods to the American people," Reagan pledged. "I'll leave that to others."

Breaks

duction from gross income before income taxes are computed. They were abolished for major producers in 1975 after decades of controversy and accusations that the oil industry was getting an unjustifiable tax break. Independent producers of fewer than 1,000 barrels a day get a limited allowance at a 15 percent rate.

Herrington told reporters Thursday he wants his proposals to wind up "revenue neutral," though he has no ideas ready to make up the $200 million a year he estimates as the annual average cost of extending depletion allowances to new production at the 27.5 percent rate that once was traditional in the industry.

The Martin report said a depletion allowance for that production, including output from old wells through "enhanced recovery" projects like steam injection, would initially bring forth an additional 370,000 barrels a day of new oil production, or the equivalent in natural gas, at an average annual gross cost to the Treasury of $460 million for the first five years. That cost would reach $2 billion in 1995, the report said.

Herrington's $200 million was an estimated net cost, after income tax collections from the increased production and associated economic activity.

The secretary said $200 million is "not a lot of money," and, "The return in production, increased production, is enormous" per dollar spent.

Teachers object to drug testing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The presidents of two teachers' unions strongly oppose Attorney General Edwin Meese's endorsement of drug-testing for some teachers.

Meese said Thursday in a speech at the University of Mississippi that the Justice Department views freedom from drugs as a condition of employment for teachers seeking tenure, adding that "schools must furnish students with multiple examples of individuals leading drug-free lives and who are glad to be doing so."

Albert Shanker, president of the 635,000-member American Federation of Teachers, said his group does not object to drug testing for teachers when there is a reasonable suspicion of drug use.

But he said drug testing technology is too unreliable and inaccurate to be used on a widespread, mandatory basis.

Shanker suggested that Meese's remarks were inflammatory, saying that the attorney general has "basically destroyed a couple of years' worth of efforts on drug education and prevention efforts between teachers and schools by this kind of a stance."

Mary Futrell, president of the 1.8-million-member National Education Association, said the group is "alarmed" by efforts to increase the use of blood and urine tests for alcohol and drug use.

She said Meese had provided no evidence that there is widespread drug abuse among teachers and that without such a showing "I would have to have a real difference with him."

"Drug testing has been upheld when applied to transportation workers and others whose jobs have a direct effect on public safety," Meese said. "And it seems to me almost an insult to teachers to maintain that their jobs are any less important."

His comments came in connection with a court brief the Justice Department filed two weeks ago supporting a proposed teacher drug-testing program on Long Island.

There, the Patchogue-Medford School District notified all probationary teachers who were eligible for tenure that they would be required to submit urine samples to their school nurses for drug testing.

The teachers' union, an AFT affiliate, won an injunction against the program, and the appellate division of the state Supreme Court in Brooklyn ruled last August that to undergo the tests without reasonable suspicion of drug use was an unconstitutional invasion of privacy.

At a news conference before the speech in Oxford, Miss., Meese said the Justice Department's position was not an endorsement of widespread drug testing.

Off Beat

By Jimmy Patterson

Don't move so soon

It was in this space a couple of weeks ago that area news writer Cathy Spaulding not so subtly gave away her age by mentioning that her 10-year high school reunion is just around the corner. July to be exact.

It is with great regret that I must mention that the two of us are in the same age group. A 1977 graduate, I remember my senior year like it was yesterday.

Well, maybe not yesterday. But it does seem more like seven or eight years ago, rather than 10, when I stumbled across that stage, shook someone's hand, grabbed my diploma and ran like there would be no tomorrow.

Most anyone who has experienced it can tell you there's nothing like a senior year in high school.

The catch phrase that spread throughout the senior class was, "I can't wait 'til graduation so I can move away from home."

It was common to hear someone patiently waiting until they could be out from underneath the wings of their parents.

And I suppose it is still heard often. "I can't wait to move out," they'll say.

Ten years older, and maybe five years wiser, I wonder to myself why I was in such a hurry to move out for good.

If you're reading this and you are approaching graduation, let me tell you — don't be in such a hurry.

I know what a lot of you are thinking. You're thinking how you've had enough of your parents, how you're in bad need of a sabbatical from them, how you're tired of them ordering you around.

In 1977, I was a withdrawn teenager, I'd come home from school, force myself to spend the dinner hour in the family room, and then retire to my bedroom.

I would turn up the music as loud as possible, and if my parents were lucky, I'd put on my headphones and not sing along.

My poor parents! What I put them through. I wonder now why I wanted to move out so badly.

It may not seem like it to you now, but five or six years down the road, you too will wonder the same thing. Your parents may not seem like the brightest people in the world now, but five or six years down the road...

It's tough being a teenager. All day you have to deal with rejection from the opposite sex, the fear of not being accepted by your peers. You worry about grades, not to mention the fear of acne.

And then, you come home at night and have to relive the whole rotten day because your folks want to know every single thing that happened every period all day.

They are not asking because they are nosey. They are asking because they care. And, believe it or not, they really do have a genuine interest in what goes on in your life.

Don't dread these last few months at home. Enjoy them. You will never again get to live with your parents in the same capacity you are living with them now. But, I guarantee, there will be times you wish you could.

I don't mean to sound preachy. Clip this article and save it. Read it five or six years from now and you'll know what I'm talking about.

Day care teacher found guilty of child abuse

LUBBOCK (AP) — An El Paso day care center teacher committed the weirdest things imaginable, including a variety of sex acts, on young children in her care because no one would believe they happened, a prosecutor told the jury.

The jury deliberated three hours and 45 minutes before returning Thursday night with a guilty verdict in 72nd District Court against Gayle Dove, 43, who was charged with sexually assaulting a 3-year-old boy in 1985 by inserting a pencil into his anus.

State District Judge Sam Callan of El Paso directed the jury to return at 9 a.m. today to begin the trial's punishment phase. Mrs. Dove, who was booked into Lubbock County Jail, faced a possible sentence of five to 99 years in prison, or a life sentence.

The 3-year-old child was one of several boys the jury heard about as parents and investigators told graphic stories of how their children described deviate sex acts they said they were forced to perform.

"She took some pretty All-American families, which we don't see that much anymore, and made sure they weren't All-American anymore," prosecutor Debra Kanof remarked.

Co-prosecutor Steve Jurecky recited a litany of sex acts and subsequent behavioral problems listed by several victims, including fondling, anal penetration, urination and defecation.

This is Dove's second trial. Six months ago she was convicted in Amarillo of six charges of sexual molestation.

At that time, she was found guilty of all six counts and was sentenced to three life sentences plus 60 years.

Callan overturned those convictions and ordered a new trial after he ruled that jurors received information not admitted into evidence.

For the Lubbock trial, prosecutors tried Dove only on one count. She still is charged with five other counts and could be tried on them later.

The first trial had been moved to Amarillo because of publicity in El Paso, and Callan ordered the second trial moved to Lubbock because of publicity in Amarillo.

Much of the testimony reflected the involvement of another former East Valley YMCA teacher, Michelle "Mickey" Noble. An El Paso jury convicted Noble on several charges last year and sentenced her to life plus more than 300 years in prison.

Kanof said that Dove did "whatever she damn well pleased with these kids," pointing to her taking an out-of-the-way route past Noble's home when returning from a field trip.

Prosecutors contended that the field trips and hikes to a park were ruses to get the children to the women's homes where they were abused.

Defense attorneys John Langford and Dick Shinnault urged jurors not to send their client to prison on "flimsy evidence" and "a typographical error." The references were to the lack of eyewitness testimony and to the omission of the pencil allegation in police Det. Sergio Cox's report.

Langford mentioned the lack of reporting of any abuse by any victims, including some incidents that allegedly occurred at the center where one of the children had an aunt on the staff. He also criticized the lack of physical evidence, such as hair and carpet samples.

Texas officials trying to gain supercollider

HOUSTON (AP) — Scientists, engineers and local leaders are working feverishly to prove that a site east of the city would be the best spot to build a superconducting supercollider — a project that would create thousands of jobs and pump vital cash into the depressed area.

"Jobs is the name of the game and that's the reason we're so vitally interested," Jefferson County Judge Richard LeBlanc said Thursday at a press conference held to discuss the proposed site between Houston and Beaumont.

Dozens of other states also are vying for the proposed supercollider project besides Texas, which has identified several potential locations across the state.

Texas has established a committee to study the possible sites and choose one to present to the Department of Energy.

If the project is authorized by 1988, the multibillion-dollar facility could be completed in 1996 and would be used to research high energy physics, the field that studies the fundamental nature of matter and energy.

Although there are a few colliders in other countries and one in Illinois, the proposed supercollider would be the world's largest, officials have said.

A task force formed to prepare the area's presentation has selected a site about 35 miles north-east of Houston's Intercontinental Airport that straddles parts of Liberty, Hardin and Jefferson counties, said Bill Black, project manager.

"All you'll see are rice paddies," Black said of the proposed site about five miles east of Liberty.

The supercollider would be some 20 feet underground, with the heart being two rings of superconducting magnets located in a 52-mile circumference, race-track shaped tunnel that would be 10 feet in cross-section diameter.

A 500-acre campus facility would be built on top at the west end of the site, Black said. Estimated total cost of the project is $4.4 billion, he said.

"That represents what might be spent in Texas," Black said.

The onsite work force during construction will peak at about 4,500. Once the facility is operating the supercollider staff would be about 2,500, and about 500 visiting scientists are expected to be on-site at any given time, according to DOE estimates.

Advantages to the Houston-Beaumont site include the flat area, close proximity to airports and several universities, clay formations instead of rock and a lack of major streams, Black said.

But officials Thursday said they are still trying to determine all the possible advantages or disadvantages to the proposed site, including what extent the environment might be affected.

Texas geologist acknowledges giving money to help Contras

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — A Wichita Falls geologist acknowledged he gave more than $100,000 to help Nicaraguan Contras and says he was briefed at the White House on how the money was being spent.

But the geologist, John W. Ramsey Jr., said he disagreed with attempts to sell weapons to Iran to secure release of American hostages, calling the plan "silly."

Ramsey is one of many wealthy conservatives who have donated funds to support the Contras. Thursday night, he told the Wichita Falls Record News he contributed more than $100,000 to organizations headed by conservative fund-raiser Carl R. "Spitz" Channell.

Ramsey said the money he donated was funneled to the Contras through Swiss bank accounts.

Documents obtained by The Washington Post indicate that tax-deductible contributions were systematically transferred to such an account under Lt. Col. Oliver North's direct control.

The latest edition of The Washington Post National Weekly magazine says those documents portray North as directing that money raised by Channell be sent to the Swiss account, which was in the name of Lake Resources Inc.

North was fired Nov. 25 while serving as an aide on President Reagan's National Security Council.

"I don't think there's any connection between Iran and Spitz," Ramsey said. "I'm sure the money went to a Swiss bank account, but it is a matter of where it went from there."

"If he really was dealing with the Iranians to get the hostages out, that was silly. In the scheme of things, hostages are unimportant," said Ramsey, president of Strategic Resources, an oil exploration company.

Ramsey said he went to two briefings at the White House, where he was told how the

Bus fares cover 18 percent of costs

By JAVIER PICHARDINI Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Public transit fares in Mexico City remain the world's lowest but are covering only 18.3 percent of the system's operating costs, a study by a private enterprise group says.

The report, by the Private Sector Center for Economic Studies, noted that a ride on a subway, bus or trolley in Mexico City costs just 20 pesos — about 1.8 cents at latest exchange rates — compared to an average 76 pesos or 7 cents in the 15 next largest Mexican cities.

Government subsidies have made traditionally made up the difference between income and costs, the study that was released this week noted.

But double- and triple-digit inflation and other effects of the country's economic crisis bloated those subsidies drastically from 1970 through 1986 while the government held the fare to just 1 peso.

If raised according to inflation in that same period, the fare last year would have been 119 pesos, the report said.

Texas has 17th bank failure as two close

DALLAS (AP) — Texas, which had a record 26 bank failures last year amid faltering agriculture and oil industries, has racked up 17 bank closings so far this year.

The Red River National Bank in the Northeast Texas town of Clarksville was closed Thursday and its deposits and liabilities assumed by the State Bank of DeKalb, said a spokesman for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

The Sweeny Bank in Brazoria County, south of Houston, was also declared insolvent. The FDIC approved assumption of that bank's deposits by The First State Bank of Louise.

The decline of oil and agriculture, coupled with a soft real estate market, has again put Texas in the lead in the nation's bank failures, said FDIC spokesman Alan Whitney.

The FDIC reported Thursday that nearly one in five U.S. banks lost money last year. The figure was one in 12 banks in the East, but one in four west of the Mississippi River. Western banks are more closely tied to the resource industries now in a slump.

There have been 46 bank failures nationwide and two assisted transactions, said FDIC spokesman Bill Olcheski.

Red River's two offices were to reopen today as branches of the State Bank of DeKalb. The failed bank had assets of $22.6 million, according to the FDIC, which was named receiver after Robert J. Herrmann, senior deputy comptroller of the currency, closed the bank at 3 p.m.

The FDIC said the State Bank of DeKalb will assume about $22.5 million in 4,700 accounts and has agreed to pay the FDIC $251,000 for the bank. The DeKalb bank also will buy certain loans and other assets worth $1.42 million.

The Sweeny Bank's only office was to today as a branch of First State Bank of Louise. Its depositors will automatically become customers of the assuming bank, subject to court approval, he said. Sweeny Bank had total assets of $17.7 million, he said.

The First State Bank of Louise will assume about $17.6 million in 4,800 deposit accounts and has agreed to pay the FDIC a purchase premium of $101,010, Olcheski said.

It also will purchase certain of the failed bank's loans and other assets for $10.9 million. To aid the transaction, the FDIC will advance $6.6 million to the assuming bank and will retain assets of the failed bank with a book value of about $6.7 million, Olcheski said.

Government drags feet on AIDS Drug

Even though the U.S. Food and Drug Administration is moving with unprecedented speed to test and perhaps approve the drug AZT for the treatment of AIDS, it isn't moving as fast as other governments, yet again raising questions about the purpose — and even the need — for the FDA's methods.

AZT, which will be marketed in Britain by the Wellcome Foundation drug company under the name Retrovir, appears to prevent the AIDS virus from reproducing. It is at best a palliative for those suffering from acquired immune deficiency syndrome since it does not cure the disease, but merely prolongs the lives of AIDS victims.

AZT has been tested on 3,000 AIDS patients in the United States and about 300 in Europe. AIDS has been diagnosed in 31,000 people in the U.S. and has killed more than 17,000, according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control.

The drug does carry with it potentially damaging side effects. Researchers say the drug is highly toxic and can cause severe bone-marrow damage and anemia in some patients. Nevertheless, for most AIDS patients, well aware that their disease is terminal, any hope is better than none.

That's the reasoning of Britain's bureaucrats. But on this side of the Atlantic, the federal bureaucrats and their procedures grind slow. In January an advisory panel to the FDA voted 10-1 to approve the drug for general distribution. Their recommendation is still pending. It shouldn't be.

AIDS patients who want the drug should not be kept from it by a government that wants to run tests until eternity. Told of the risks, AIDS patients should be allowed to make their own choices about whether to take the drug.

This sort of foot-dragging occurs entirely too often with a federal bureaucracy bent more on serving the testers than serving the public. The FDA's methods and purpose deserve questioning — all the more so because of the AIDS crisis.

Scandal bolsters Democrats

Good luck beats early rising, says the Irish proverb, in which case the Democratic Party may be tempted to sleep late in its quest to regain the White House. The White House arms scandal is the best luck the Democrats have had since Watergate, and they hope it will have the same result. But good luck can change in a hurry. Iranomok gives the Democrats a real chance to win in 1988, but not without some early rising.

All the scandal did was take a highly popular two-term Republican president and, in one month, knock 21 points off his presidential polls. In a recent Gallup poll, only 40 percent of Americans give him a positive rating. Although Ronald Reagan may recover, the affair is bound to hurt his party next year. Becoming known as the party of presidential scandals is not a formula for success.

The discovery that Reagan sold weapons to Iran also tends to neutralize a chronic Democratic liability — its image as weak and appeasing toward adversaries abroad. David Keene, an adviser to Sen. Bob Dole's campaign, suggests a slogan for the opposition party: "We're no worse than anyone else."

The benefit goes beyond foreign policy issues. One recent poll found that 41 percent of Americans say they would vote for a Democrat for president next year, up from 32 percent in October. Just 26 percent said they'd vote Republican, compared with 33 percent last fall.

Democrats had already made considerable progress in voter perceptions of their ability to deal with unemployment and trade. On other matters, attitudes are shifting their way. In 1985, 60 percent of Americans said the government was trying to do too much, and 40 percent said it was doing too little. Now just 51 percent say it does too much, and 49 percent say it should do more.

A growing number says the government doesn't spend enough money on education and environmental protection. Worries about inflation, which tend to help Republicans, have given way to worries about unemployment and other economic problems, which tend to help Democrats.

Still, converting these developments into victory won't be easy. If Reagan signs an arms treaty and the economy stays healthy, the Republicans can run on the formidable themes of peace and prosperity. And historical tides aren't running in the Democrats' favor. They have won only one of the last five presidential elections, getting a humble 21 percent of the electoral vote.

In some areas, the party is barely competitive. The last Democrat to win one of the seven western mountain states was Lyndon Johnson. The fast-growing South, once an invulnerable Democratic stronghold, is now solidly Republican in national contests. The nomination of a Southerner in 1976, who swept Dixie, only obscured the trend. In 1972 and 1984, the GOP carried all 11 states of the old Confederacy; in 1980, it lost only Georgia, Jimmy Carter's home state.

Gary Hart would presumably perform the unusual feat of carrying Colorado, and a running mate like Sam Nunn or Chuck Robb would help in the South. But the heart of any Democratic strategy has to lie elsewhere. To win, a Democrat needs to carry the handful of loyal states and sweep almost the entire industrial Northeast, from New Jersey to Illinois.

That's easier said than done. Some of these states — New Jersey, Illinois and Indiana — haven't voted for a Democrat since 1964. Unfortunately, among the likely Democratic contenders, the region has just one representative, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis. No one but Mario Cuomo could have been confident of executing the strategy.

Given the importance of the Northeast to the Democrats, I herewith make my first prediction for 1988: Their vice-presidential nominee will be Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey — unless Dukakis is at the top of the ticket, in which case it will be Nunn or Robb. The Republicans, however, can do much to frustrate this strategy by locking up the biggest state. My second prediction: The No. 2 spot on the GOP ticket, whoever the presidential nominee, will be filled by California Gov. George Deukmejian.

The GOP would like to reinforce a habit that Californians, like other Americans, have acquired: Voting Republican every leap year. The arms scandal will dull that reflex. But the Democrats shouldn't let it make them cocky. Iranomok gives them only an opportunity, and opportunities have to be seized.

Equal time for Nebraska

The recent strike by "network news writers" exposed a significant difference between the news you hear and the news you read.

American televisioners sometimes let themselves get upset with Tom Brokaw or Dan Rather or Peter Jennings without realizing that those fellows have 60 other people writing what they read.

The news you get on TV originates with a host of nameless, faceless people who are called "editor" or "rewriters" or whatever.

Blow-dried anchor-men are paid the megabucks — but it's the boys and girls in the back room who shape the news by that which they use, that which they toss in the wastebasket, and by whatever bias and/or emphasis is included in their rewrite.

As with the Washington, D.C., Civil Service establishment, most "policy" is determined by unknowns in the bowels of the bureaucracy issuing mandates that the Cabinet-level department head may never even see.

So it is with the TV networks. The face in front of the camera is of minimal influence in the selection, preparation and presentation of the news.

So if TV news is, as accused, preponderantly "liberal" in its philosophical bias, that may be traceable to doctrinaire journalism school graduates on the newsroom "staff."

There are professional newsmen yet unaware of this delegation of editorial prerogative by the TV newsrooms.

John Corry, a media critic for The New York Times, recently wrote, "Television journalists, even the best of them, are not as bright or well-informed as they think they are. They should stop acting as though they were, and stop presenting television news as though they were entitled to comment on it."

In his book TV News and the Dominant Culture, Corry says that TV journalists have come to imagine themselves sort of a "secular priesthood" who look for events that confirm their own prejudices.

This is not to say that the network culling that is now going on is for the purpose of removing philosophical partisans in the back rooms.

The pruning appears to have been dictated by economic necessity. The networks must trim fat if they are to remain competitive with the proliferation of cable and satellite technology.

Network newscasts' share of audience has been diminished since 1980 from 76 percent to 63 percent, while at the same time the budgets for network news were rising from $100 million to $300 million.

Correcting that imbalance is unlikely to correct philosophical imbalance until some one network decides, purposely and overtly, that it's time to give equal time to Nebraska.

Baker can't spare president from blame

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — When former Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., was named the new White House chief of staff, politicians in the capital effusively praised President Reagan's selection.

"A fantastic appointment," gushed Vice President Bush. "The right man in the right job at the right time," added Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan. "You can hear a sigh of relief throughout Washington," announced Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan.

Even the Democrats were extravagant. "A stroke of genius," proclaimed Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn. "An inspired choice," added Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

Baker almost certainly will serve the president better than his autocratic predecessor, Donald Regan. But the lavish acclaim for the switch masks the fundamental problems both Regan and Baker must overcome if they are to succeed in their joint endeavor during the next 22 months.

First, the reaction following the Regan-for-Baker exchange perpetuates the unfortunate practice of ascribing virtually all of the president's faults and errors to his staff.

Thus, much of the ecstasy over Baker's appointment was, in fact, thinly disguised joy over Regan's departure at a time when the conventional wisdom here held that Regan had been ill-served by his chief of staff.

Regan was a convenient scapegoat at a time when Reagan was searching for someone to fault for his unprecedented troubles, but most of the blame for the Iran-contra scandal belongs with the man in charge — the president.

Throughout his tenure in the White House, Regan has sought to exempt himself from one of the cardinal and immutable rules of management: Authority can be delegated but responsibility cannot.

The events of recent months have produced a belated public discussion of Regan's "management style" — a polite way of describing an approach to governance that ranges from disengagement to obliviousness.

The addition of Baker to the White House staff cannot compensate for the president's lack of interest or involvement in the job to which he was elected. Only Regan can change what one analyst aptly characterizes as "ineptitude bordering on incompetence."

Second, there is the matter of the particular talents Baker brings to his new job in dealing with congressional investigations of White House wrongdoing.

He is perhaps best known in that regard as the serious, impartial senior Republican on the Senate select committee that probed the Watergate scandal and President Nixon's transgressions in 1973. Indeed, it was Baker who coined the quintessential question during that investigation: "What did the president know and when did he know it?"

Behind the scenes, however, Baker worked to truncate the hearings, to insulate Nixon from the scandal and to plan strategy with members of the White House staff. Moreover, he lied to reporters when asked if he had met secretly with the president's aides.

Immunity from prosecution for potential witnesses was as crucial then as it is now. White House Counsel John Dean and others were willing to provide incriminating testimony against Nixon at the committee's hearings — but only if they were assured that they would not be prosecuted for disclosing their own complicity in criminal activities.

In the committee's executive sessions, Baker argued and voted against granting immunity, thus discouraging Dean and others from offering material that would damage Nixon.

President Reagan accepts questions from reporters at news conference.

President says Bush raised no objections to Iran plans

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says George Bush raised no objection to the Iran initiative, posing a possible conflict with his vice president, who says he voiced reservations about certain aspects of the matter.

The issue is politically troublesome for Bush, who two weeks ago went to lengths during a tour of Iowa to say he regrets the initiative in hindsight, while never blaming it on Reagan.

At the conclusion of his nationally broadcast news conference Thursday night, Reagan was approached by reporters trying to get in a last question or two.

"Did the vice president object to the plan in Iran?" Reagan was asked.

"No," he replied. Donald P. Gregg, Bush's national security affairs adviser, said he watched the exchange on television and Reagan's answer came to a "very imprecise" question.

Bush has said frequently he is willing to share responsibility for the ill-fated arms-to-Iran initiative. But he told a Lansing, Mich., audience on Feb. 12 that he had privately "expressed certain reservations on certain aspects" of Reagan's decision to sell weapons. The "key players" in the administration knew about his doubts, Bush said, without elaborating.

In a telephone interview following Reagan's news conference, Gregg said he could not recall that Bush ever elaborated on those doubts in conversations the two had about the initiative.

Gregg said that while "there was a great hullabaloo there (at the end of the news conference) . . . the vice president has said he felt that a case was to be made" for seeking contacts with potentially friendly political elements in Iran.

After the Reagan news conference, CBS ran a videotape of remarks Bush made during a 60 Minutes interview last Sunday but which were not shown on the air. When asked if he, as president, would approve arms sales to Iran to buy influence there, he said:

"I wouldn't mind reaching out. But it would be one shot and I'd want to know what the result is that followed on. I'd want to know that there would be a chance that to have a more moderate regime compared to the one that held our country hostage, spit on our flag, captured our embassy and villified the president of the United States as a 'Great Satan,'" he said.

There were many elements to the Iranian initiative, Gregg said, arguing that the question to Reagan was phrased in vague terms.

"I don't think it's a big deal," he said.

Gregg said he thought Bush had been "quite candid" about his role in the development and execution of the arms sale plan. Bush is an undeclared candidate for the Republican Party's 1988 presidential nomination.

During the Iowa tour he said he would make a final decision later this year on running but left little doubt of his desire to seek the nomination.

Jefferies to help in stock probe

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After admitting that he violated securities laws, one of the nation's most prominent stock traders says he's ready to help investigators extend their massive probe into wrongdoing on Wall Street.

Besides agreeing to cooperate with the government, Boyd L. Jefferies announced Thursday that he will plead guilty to two criminal charges of securities fraud, with each count carrying a maximum penalty of five years in prison.

He also resigned as chairman of Los Angeles-based Jefferies & Co. and its parent Jefferies Group Inc., the securities company he founded 25 years ago and built into the leading trader of stocks in the "third market," away from organized exchanges.

Jefferies' firm is known for amassing huge blocks of stock that were then sold to "corporate raiders" attempting to use the stock as part of a takeover bid. Though the charges against Jefferies were not for insider trading, one did stem from dealings Jefferies had with Ivan F. Boesky, the former takeover speculator at the center of the insider trading scandal.

Boesky agreed in November to settle a civil complaint alleging insider trading by paying $100 million in penalties and also agreed to plead guilty to an unspecified criminal charge.

"Mr. Boesky was very helpful in developing evidence against Mr. Jefferies," said U.S. Attorney Rudolph W. Giuliani in New York.

Jefferies, who was in New York on Thursday, personally broke the news of his decision to his employees in Los Angeles in an emotional telephone call piped over the office intercom.

"It is with deep personal sorrow and regret that I leave the company that has been my life for the past 25 years," Jefferies said.

"Let me add my voice to the growing number of people who are urging that the increasingly tragic results of trading irregularities, which are being uncovered on a daily basis, be used in a positive way to help improve and enhance our capital markets," Jefferies said.

Peter H. Morrison, an attorney for Jefferies, said the government's action represented an expanded scope of prosecution against people involved in stock market activity.

(AP Laserphoto)

Jefferies poses in his Los Angeles office.

No date was set for Jefferies to enter his guilty plea.

Since last year, the government's investigation has implicated more than a dozen major Wall Street figures, most of them in connection with insider trading.

The fact that neither of the felony counts against Jefferies involved insider trading confirmed to Wall Street that the probe extended to other areas of corruption in the financial markets.

Jefferies said he also would plead guilty to breaking federal rules on margin.

Senate considering 65 mph speed limit during bill battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — A showdown over $890 million in road projects is disrupting Senate plans to quickly pass a bill allowing states to raise the speed limit to 65 mph on rural interstate highways.

The Senate planned a long-awaited vote today on a bill that would let states permit faster driving on about three-fourths of the nation's 43,000-mile interstate system. That vote was to follow what was expected to be quick consideration of the matter by the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee.

Looming over the debate is a threat by President Reagan to veto an $88 billion highway bill — to which the speed limit provision was to be joined — because of objections over excessive spending.

That highway bill was passed by the Senate on Thursday by a 79-17 vote. It contains $70 billion in highway aid and $18 billion for mass transit, money the states have complained they should have received months ago.

Sen. Steven Symms, R-

Idaho, the most vocal Senate champion of the 65 mph speed limit, said the new money and the faster maximum speed have the support of most Americans.

"The truck driver in Pocatello wants two things: smooth roads and to be able to drive 65," he said.

Reagan's veto threat complicated what had been expected to be certain, quick Senate approval of the speed limit measure.

The president's major objection to the highway bill is about 150 so-called demonstration projects. These road and bridge programs, sought by lawmakers for their home districts, would cost $890 million over five years in federal aid above the money states normally receive under distribution formulas.

"I strongly object to the unprecedented provisions in the bill that would provide extra federal funds for 152 so-called highway demonstration projects," Reagan wrote in a letter Thursday to Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va.

Court asked to get Secord's bank records

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, exerting pressure on a major figure in the Iran-Contra affair, is asking a court to compel retired Maj. Gen. Richard Secord to produce records of secret Swiss bank accounts he is said to control.

The Senate began the process Thursday evening, voting without debate to cite the former Air Force general for contempt and to ask the U.S. District Court to jail him if he refuses to cooperate.

Secord refused a Feb. 23 order by the Senate select committee investigating the sale of arms to Iran and possible diversion of payments to Nicaraguan rebels that he waive his rights under Switzerland's bank privacy laws and turn over records of accounts suspected of serving as channels for the arms proceeds.

The investigators said in a report that Secord's refusal to cooperate has "frustrated the committee in its efforts to answer critical questions relating to the flow of funds from the sales of arms to Iran to the Nicaraguan resistance forces."

The report noted that some $20 million from the transactions remains unaccounted for.

It said there was little prospect that formal negotiations with the Swiss government would produce the records soon.

In other developments: Senior CIA officials told The New York Times they gave the White House intelligence reports in 1985 that indicated little prospect for improving U.S. relations with Iran, even as the Reagan Administration began its covert Iran initiative. The officials said they also repeatedly advised the White House then that there was no imminent threat that the Soviet Union would gain significant influence in Iran, the newspaper reported.

The Washington Post reported today that retired Army Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub, involved in the Contra fund-raising effort, solicited donations from Taiwan and South Korea, suggesting he could help them conceal their contributions. The scheme involved overcharging them on an arms deal and diverting the profits to the Contras, much as the purported scheme that eventually was said to have taken place with Iran. Singlaub's plan, however, was rejected by both countries, the Post said.

A spokesman for Vice President

George Bush denied a published report that Adnan Khashoggi, a Saudi Arabian financier who served as a middleman in the Iranian arms sales, sent Vice President George Bush a check for $1,000 for the Contras in 1985.

"The vice president has never solicited funds for any Nicaraguan resistance effort" and "doesn't even know" Khashoggi, press secretary Larry Thomas said.

A congressional source, speaking on condition he not be identified, confirmed reports that before former National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane attempted suicide last month, he wrote letters to congressional investigators saying he had failed to disclose earlier that Saudi Arabian Ambassador Bandar bin Sultan had volunteered to secretly provide money for the Contras.

Sources told The Associated Press two previously unidentified witnesses granted limited immunity by the House and Senate committees were Tomas Castillo, the alias of a CIA station chief in Costa Rica; and Cynthia Dondlinger, an accountant for Richard Gadd, a retired lieutenant colonel who is president of a firm linked to the Contra resupply effort. Castillo has been disciplined by the CIA for his role in aiding the Contras during the congressional ban on such aid.

The House and Senate panels earlier this week, according to congressional sources, granted limited immunity to Gadd, along with Robert Owen and John Cupp, who investigators believe could help trace weapons funneled to the Contras during the aid ban.

Texas to get job re-training relief

WASHINGTON (AP)— Relief is in sight for several hundred unemployed Texas oil, gas and steel workers, thanks to a $650,000 Labor Department grant for job re-training programs.

Labor Secretary William E. Brock announced Thursday that discretionary funds would be made available to the Houston-Galveston and the Permian Basin regions of Texas.

Rep. Jack Fields, R-Houston, said the $350,000 in Job Partnership Training Act funds designated for the Houston-Galveston area would go to the North San Jacinto Junior College to bolster its re-training and job placement program.

An additional $300,000 was designated for a program operated by the Permian Basin Regional Area Council in Midland.

"Every little bit helps," said Willie Taylor, who directs the worker re-training program Permian Basin council. "We were anticipating it was going to be $750,000. We were a little bit shocked that those were the figures."

Layoffs have hit at refineries, drilling rigs and industries that provide services and products to the oil industry as well as at steel mills, such as the U.S. Steel mill in Bay Town and the Armco Steel operation near Houston.

"We're going to try to zero in on the unemployed oil workers," said Ed Lehr, president of North San Jacinto Junior College. "This thing has been going on so long that we've got some people who are hard core. We're going to have to do some remedial work."

Lehr said the program will consist of three parts: identifying the unemployed and whatever skills they possess, classroom and on-the-job training of up to 18 months and a placement service that will span the country.

"We're going to try to stretch it to include as many people as we can, but with the limited amount of money we got I expect we'll only be able to re-train somewhere around 200 people."

Another 8,000 or 9,000 people are in the 16-county area served by the regional council that could use the help, most of whom are from oil-related industries or the steel industry, he said.

Lehr said the program would also be able to provide quick help to about 800 unemployed who might only need to be pointed in the direction where skills they possess are marketable.

Displaced workers will be trained in a variety of occupations, including medical technicians, truck drivers, computer programmers and court reporters.

Although the Permian Basin and Houston-Galveston areas are hurting from the economic downturn in Texas, the Rio Grande Valley posted the highest unemployment for January, the most recent figures available from the Texas Employment Commission.

Starr County recorded an unemployment rate of 46.4 percent for its 18,302 work force, or 8,486 people. Next was Loving County in the Permian Basin which recorded a 38 percent unemployment rate.

Texas, Mexico discuss agriculture plans

SAN ANTONIO (AP)— A bilateral agricultural agreement between Texas and Mexico will help that country penetrate U.S. markets, Mexico's secretary of agriculture says.

Eduardo Pesqueira said Thursday that Texas agriculture officials can help his country's depressed economy by sharing technology and lobbying for Mexican products.

Pesqueira was among the speakers at the Mexico-Texas Exchange Commission, formed in 1985 to help farmers and ranchers move their products across the Rio Grande by knocking down trade restrictions.

"Mexican producers have a need to maintain an agricultural trade balance that would be favorable in order to induce the agricultural activity in Mexico," Pesqueira said. "We know we produce good agricultural products."

Since the group's meeting last year, Texas has been able to export $20 million worth of products into Mexico, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said.

"There is a flat-out depression in our agriculture sector. As a result of deteriorating prices, we're trying to reach out to a friend," Hightower said.

Hightower said Mexican officials agreed to work with Texas officials because they were not getting a response from U.S. officials.

"This is a unique arrangement. It's an attempt to work together on genuine economic trade arrangements to try to solve the bureaucratic red tape," Hightower said.

U.S. Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, praised the efforts of farmers in both countries.

"The Rio Grande divides two nations, but it doesn't divide the people. It doesn't divide our commitment, our common interest," said de la Garza, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee.

Among the topics of discussion were fruit and vegetable exports, livestock exports, trade relations, import duties and exchange of technology.

Within the past year, Texas has exported beef and dairy cattle, sheep and goats, sorghum and other grain and has helped establish an embryo transfer facility in Mexico, Hightower said.

"The idea is if we work with the same goals we are ready to be successful. If we work one against the other it would be damaging for both sides," Pesqueira said.

He said more needs to be done to help farmers in impoverished Mexico.

Battle looms over spinach capital claims

ALMA, Ark. (AP)— Popeye's statue may be in Crystal City, Texas, but cans of spinach bearing his name are filled at Alma, Ark.

Crystal City has called itself the spinach capital of the world since the 1930s and celebrates its main crop with an annual festival.

But Alma, where 56 percent of the country's canned spinach is produced, has claimed the title for itself and is planning both its own spinach festival and an 8-foot statue of Popeye.

The Spinach War is on. The Alma-Crystal City dispute arose after a Texas newspaper publisher saw a story about Alma in the Southwest Times Record at Fort Smith, Ark. Zavala County Sentinel publisher Dale Barker then sent a letter to the newspaper, along with an information packet about the town in the Rio Grande valley.

According to that information, Crystal City, population 8,334, built its statue of Popeye in 1937 and had a cartoon by Popeye creator E.C. Segar created especially for its annual spinach festival. But merchants of Alma, in the Arkansas River valley in western Arkansas, say they're tired of Crystal City claiming spinach superiority. About 60 million pounds of prime, curly leaf spinach is grown each year in Alma, population 2,755, and they've proclaimed the Arkansas town spinach capital of the world.

In jest, Barker invited the Alma Area Chamber of Commerce to challenge Crystal City for the title.

So far, the Alma Area Chamber hasn't responded formally to the challenge, but downtown merchants have taken the cause to heart.

George Bowles of Alma, owner of Kustom Kaps, has sent Crystal City a message. Bowles packed some Arkansas River bottom soil, a can of Popeye brand spinach and curly leaf spinach seed — Crystal City grows the slick-leaf variety — and sent the box to Cryst-tal City. Meanwhile, other downtown merchants are completing plans for Alma's first spinach festival and Rev. Henry Williamson of the local Presbyterian church has given his "spinach blessing" to all the proceedings.

On Thursday, a sign was posted at the end of Main Street on the site of the planned statue of Popeye. Those plans call for the statue to be unveiled and dedicated in time for the city's May 16-18 Spinach Festival.

The festival will feature a Popeye lookalike contest, a Popeye Classic 10K run and 5K walk, a spinach-cooking contest and other activities.

But Barker is conceding nothing. He says Crystal City's Popeye has been written up in National Geographic magazine, and the Del Monte USA plant in Crystal City employs 700. That compares with about 400 workers during peak production at Alma's Allen Canning Co., which markets Popeye brand spinach.

U.S. sending more troops to Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Honduras has agreed to buy advanced U.S. jet fighters and American troop strength here will reach a record level this spring, sources said, as Washington moves to strengthen a key regional ally.

U.S. and Honduran sources told The Associated Press on Thursday more than 7,000 regular and reserve Air Force, Army and Navy personnel will be in Honduras in April and May to take part in overlapping air, ground and amphibious exercises with Honduran troops.

The largest U.S.-Honduran joint exercise to date was the 1983 Big Pine II, with about 5,000 troops.

Sources in Tegucigalpa and Washington also said Honduras agreed to buy 12 F-5-E fighter planes from the United States. The jets first were offered last year in what was seen as a major reversal of U.S. policy and an escalation of the arms race in the volatile region.

At that time, U.S. officials privately said the move was aimed at maintaining air superiority in the face of a steady military buildup by neighboring Nicaragua. U.S.-supported Nicaraguan rebels called Contras are fighting to overthrow that country's leftist government.

The United States had followed a policy of not being the first to introduce advanced jet fighters into Central America, but made the offer after Israel offered to sell Honduras its Kfir combat jets.

One of the three spring maneuvers, an Air Force exercise called Pegasus 87, was announced simultaneously Thursday by the Defense Department in Washington and the Honduran high command in Tegucigalpa.

Sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said plans also call for a large-scale amphibious landing on the northern Caribbean coast and an Army test of command and control procedures if Honduras is invaded.

Operation Pegasus will bring about 870 Army, Air Force, Air National Guard and Air Force reserve personnel to Honduras between April 1 and May 10.

It will be the first time A-10 Thunderbolt and A-7 Corsair jet fighters and EC-130 Airborne Warning and Control Systems aircraft (AWACs) have been deployed in joint exercises in Honduras.

The permanent U.S. strength in Honduras is about 1,200, most of whom serve six-month tours. The force is based at Palmerola air base, a Honduran facility about 30 miles north of Tegucigalpa.

Negotiations for the new aircraft have been under way since November, but one U.S. source said the United States and Honduras had a "done deal" for the F-5-E fighters, manufactured by the Northrop Corp. of Los Angeles.

Sources said the F-5Es would cost Honduras $75 million to $100 million, to be paid out of U.S. military credits to the country. Those credits totaled $85 million last year.

One source said delivery of the first of the 12 new jets would take place late this year, with the last to be delivered in early 1989.

Syrian forces free another Saudi hostage from captivity

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian forces today freed a Saudi held captive for 54 days in Lebanon, the head of Syria's military observer team said.

The Saudi, Khaled Deeb, was the second foreign hostage and second Saudi to be freed in Lebanon this week.

"Hostage Khaled Deeb is with us here," Col. Abdul-Salam Daghistani told The Associated Press by telephone. He was reached at the headquarters of the Syrian forces in west Beirut's seaside Ramlet Al-Baida district.

Bakr Damanhour, an employee of the Saudi Embassy cultural section, was freed Wednesday after 66 days in captivity.

Abdallah Al-Amin, spokesman for Syria's military intelligence chief in Lebanon, Brig. Gen. Ghazi Kanaan, told the AP "Deeb is in good health. He will be sent to Damascus soon and from there he will fly to Saudi Arabia."

Deeb was kidnapped Jan. 26, 1987 on the road to the Beirut airport. Moslem-controlled Channel 7 television in west Beirut said an anonymous caller told the station the Organization of Partisans of Islamic Jihad abducted Deeb, who it said was the son of Ali Deeb, chief of security in the Saudi Arabian capital of Riyadh.

His release leaves 24 foreigners, including eight Americans, missing and presumed held captive in Lebanon. Also missing is Terry Waite, the Anglican Church envoy who disappeared Jan. 20 on a mission to try to negotiate the hostages.

Hometown honors West Texas singer-songwriter

By GAIL REDDEN
Sweetwater Reporter

SWEETWATER (AP)—When Royce Porter heard the first girl scream as he sang "Good Rockin' Tonight" on the stage at Sweetwater's Newman High School, he decided music would be his career.

Today, the singer and gold-record songwriter will be honored by his hometown.

In a courthouse ceremony, local officials will present Porter with a copy of George Strait's MCA Records' gold record album carrying one of his biggest hits: "It Ain't Cool To Be Crazy About You," which Porter wrote in collaboration with Dean Dillon. Porter and Dillon also wrote another Strait hit now on the charts, "Ocean Front Property." Participants in the "Royce Porter Day" festivities include Sweetwater Mayor Rick Rhodes, Nolan County Judge Terry Julian and former State Rep. R. Temple Dickson, now a Sweetwater attorney and a longtime friend of Porter's.

As president of Porter-Jones Music Inc. in Nashville, Porter has written more than 150 songs recorded by Reba McEntire, George Jones, Merle Haggard, Ray Charles, Razy Bailey, Tammy Wynette and Strait.

He traveled with Bailey for two years as road manager, back-up vocals and rhythm guitar. "This gave me time needed to turn out hits like 'After the Great Depression' and more."

He has also appeared on television shows such as "Hee-Haw," "Solid Gold," and "Dance Fever." He recently was featured on "Nashville Now," singing the two latest Strait hits he wrote with Dillon.

Porter first performed professionally in 1950 at the age of 10 along with his friend, the late Glenn Reed, on the stage of the Sweetwater Municipal Auditorium. The song, "Chatanooga Shoe Shine Boy," was performed as a duet with the Jess Womack Band.

Porter says his next few years of growing up were like the nostalgic television show "Happy Days."

In the mid-50s, Porter said, his music was influenced by another Reed boy, older brother Bobby, an accomplished steel guitarist who taught him rhythm guitar with the hope Porter could accompany him and the two could do a show together.

"We sat many days and many hours practicing every song we could think of and enjoying every minute," Porter said.

Their first opportunity to perform came during Porter's sophomore year in high school. Hoyt Byrd, instructor of diversified education, needed entertainment for an upcoming school assembly. Bobby Reed and Porter did three Elvis Presley songs and "16 Tons."

"I was singing 'Good Rockin' Tonight' Elvis style when the girls started screaming," Porter said.

It was then he decided to make music his career.

Porter says his next step was a recording contract, and his first record release was due solely to the efforts of a lifelong friend, Ray Doggett of Sweetwater. "Through his songwriting talents and hard work, my music career began to take a professional shape," Porter says.

Porter graduated from Newman in 1957 and moved to Houston. He had four records released, two of which reached the charts. His big move came in 1970, when he settled in Nashville.

"This was the big-time and I had a lot to learn," Porter said. He entertained in clubs at night, and spent his days writing songs and walking "Music Row" in search of someone to hear his music.

With the help of Red Lane, one of Nashville's top writers, he had his first break. In 1973, Tommy Cash, brother of Johnny, recorded Porter's "Working on a Feeling," which earned him his first ASCAP songwriting award.

He has since received 22 such awards, for which he credits co-writers such as Lane and Dillon, with whom he also wrote "Miami," "My Amy," and "Homecoming '63."

Energy appreciation week planned

MIDLAND (AP)—Many of the continuing economic woes of the oilpatch are the result of a negative attitude problem, says Charles Perry, president Permian Basin Petroleum Association, and his organization is planning a celebration he hopes will turn that attitude around.

The Odessa oilman, who heads the 1,400-member petroleum association representing independent oilmen in the Permian Basin of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico, said statistical analysis of rig counts and oil prices show that the rig count should be much higher than it is.

"With oil prices averaging around $15, the nationwide rig count should be around 1,400 instead of 800 where it now stands. This indicates to me that we have had a negative over-reaction to the situation, and it is time we started looking up, and let the rest of the country know that this is one oil-producing area that ain't gonna take it lying down no more."

To get the Permian Basin oil industry looking up again, the oil association has planned a full week of oil appreciation activities to be capped by a "Blow Out" on Saturday, March 28. The mayors of Midland and Odessa have signed a proclamation saluting the oil and gas industry and recognizing March 22-28 as Energy Appreciation Week. Mayors from 29 other cities in the Permian Basin are expected to sign the proclamation to make the occasion a regional event the organization hopes will be an annual one.

"Not since Santa Rita No.1 blew in March 28, 1923 to firmly establish petroleum as the number one industry in the Permian Basin, has there been a regional event to show our appreciation for King Crude," said Perry. "This event will correct that oversight, and our own negative outlook."

While Perry acknowledges that a positive attitude can do little to change the price of oil, he is convinced that many oil prospects are not being drilled simply because of an overly negative attitude brought about by the crash of oil prices in 1986.

"There are still wells that can be profitably drilled, even at $15 a barrel," he said, "and safe investments that will return 20 percent, but nobody is looking at them because of all the pessimism."

Perry, the founder of Perry Gas Companies, said the industry and the Permian Basin in particular need a new shot of optimism and confidence to restore drilling activity.

El Paso's anti-pollution controls defeated by Juarez's problems

EL PASO (AP)—There's a popular saying here that old cars never die, they just become taxicabs in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, a short wade across the Rio Grande.

Taxicabs and other older vehicles without emission control devices spew clouds of carbon monoxide into the desert air and, since air doesn't recognize territorial boundaries, El Paso's efforts to clean up its atmosphere often are to no avail.

El Paso itself has some of the dirtiest air in the state, and there's even a fireplace hotline to let residents know when it's safe to light up their hearths.

"We're the only city in Texas that exceeds the national ambient air quality standards set by the EPA," said Archie Clouse, an environmental quality specialist at the Texas Air Control Board, which administers Environmental Protection Agency standards and programs.

Clouse said El Paso has exceeded the EPA-set maximum levels for carbon monoxide every year: 22 times in 1984, 16 times in 1985 and seven in the first quarter of 1986, for which total figures are not yet available.

So far this year, the maximum level has been exceeded two or three times, he said.

Automobile exhaust contributes up to 90 percent of the carbon monoxide pollution. Juarez accounted for slightly less than half, even though El Paso has roughly twice as many cars as its Mexican counterpart, Clouse said.

"We have no control over any of the activities of Ciudad Juarez," said Raul Munoz, head of the city-county environmental program. "We have no control over their unpaved streets, their auto emissions, open fires or industry."

Mexican officials are more concerned about the pollution in Mexico City, he said.

A recent study by the Mexican Department of Urban Development and Ecology, or SEDUE as it's known by its Spanish initials, listed Juarez as the most polluted city in northern Mexico.

And El Paso has several other obstacles in its fight against air pollution.

The city is spread along the north banks of the Rio Grande, mirroring Juarez, and is nearly bisected by the tail end of the Franklin Mountains. Its location in a valley in the high desert, surrounded by mountains and with Juarez to the south, hinder attempts to clean up its air, Munoz said.

More mountains form a backdrop to Juarez, turning the area into a natural bowl where pollution often settles.

The downtown areas of the cities are connected by two bridges over the Rio Grande, and it's there the highest concentration of pollutants have been measured.

"It's really one downtown area divided by a river," Munoz said.

Every winter, the problem is exacerbated by inversion, which happens when a layer of warm air traps pollutants closer to the ground, preventing their dissipation into the atmosphere.

Last fall, the city set up a 24-hour hotline for residents to call to learn whether it is safe to light their fireplaces, attracting 500 to 1,000 callers every week, Munoz said.

Grand jury returns sealed indictment

BROWNSVILLE (AP)—A special grand jury's sealed indictment will be opened Monday as a five-month investigation into purchasing practices by city officials continues.

The grand jury began meeting in October, and the Texas Rangers were called in the next month. The 12-member panel returned indictments in January and February against seven present or former officials, in addition to the sealed indictment handed up Wednesday.

Among those indicted are Mayor Emilio Hernandez, Commissioner Tony Zavaleta and Municipal Judge Kip Van Johnson Hodge, who was a city attorney at the time of the alleged offense.

Also indicted were former City Manager Kenneth Lieck; Ricardo Jesus Gonzalez, city superintendent of streets; and Cayetano Ovalle and Rodolfo Garza, employees of the Brownsville Urban System.

Gonzalez, Garza and Hodge have been suspended with pay, while Ovalle has not been working because of a knee injury suffered before the indictments. He is receiving worker's compensation.

Texas Ranger Rudy Rodriguez said Wednesday's indictment would remain sealed until Monday.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

WHEN SOMEONE HAS HAD A CLOSE CALL WITH DEATH THE EXPRESSION "HIS LIFE HUNG BY A THREAD" IS QUITE OFTEN USED NOW MOST HOUSEWIVES CAN TELL YOU THAT THREADS COME IN DIFFERENT SIZES AND STRENGTHS AND WHEN DOUBLED IT IS EVEN MORE DURABLE BUT EVEN AT ITS BEST, THREADS DO BREAK AND BUTTONS HAVE TO BE REPLACED HOW WONDERFUL THAT OUR LIVES ARE NOT HELD TO GOD BY A THREAD, BUT BY HIS WORD A WORD THAT HAS NEVER BEEN BROKEN ATTEND CHURCH SUNDAY. STRENGTHEN YOUR TIES WITH GOD

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Church of Christ making its plans for 'Friend Day'

Plans are presently under way for "Friend Day" at the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ.

Sunday, March 29, has been designated for the special occasion, which will feature regular Bible classes and morning worship with messages being brought by Gene Glaeser, minister.

A special noon meal will be provided in the Fellowship Hall.

All members of the congregation are encouraged to bring a friend. Glaeser extended an invitation to the community to "be a friend" of the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ on this occasion.

Also, a film series — "Making Things Go Wrong" — is being planned to begin April 1 and run through April 29.

Dr. Paul Faulkner is featured in the series that deals with why things seem to work well for some people while others fail at nearly everything they try. The series also concerns the struggles with problems related to friendships, marriage relationships, vocational crises, child rearing, personal ministry decisions and personal spiritual growth.

The film series won the Best Film Series Award from the Christian Film Distributors Association.

Glaeser invited the public to view this film series in April.

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: To the angel of the church in Sardis write: These are the words of him who holds the seven spirits of God and the seven stars. I know your deeds; you have a reputation of being alive, but you are dead. (Revelations 3:1 NIV)

In a town where I used to live, an opulent house stood alongside a main thoroughfare. The enormous two-story house was carefully cared for and the lawn was professionally landscaped and maintained.

But one thing about the house was a mystery to me.

On the east end of the front of the house was a small, three-step concrete porch which led to a door. The west end of the front of the house had an identical porch which also led to a door. Exactly in the middle of the front of the house was another identical porch which led to nothing!

"She" spent years playing church. She served on church committees, taught Sunday school and Bible school, sang in the choir and organized a women's prayer chain. Her face was readily recognizable to fellow church members, and she had a reputation for leading an extraordinarily committed Christian lifestyle.

Only she and Jesus Christ knew her secret; she was not a Christian!

Though she expounded salvation through Christ, she let pride in her reputation and shame in her secret prevent her from meeting Him in a one-on-one encounter and embracing His free gift of redemption.

Tragically, she was like the middle porch of the elegant house; she was functional, but pointless.

Religion Roundup

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Lutheran Indians say proposed California legislation to curtail health programs and the drive to make English the "official" U.S. language are both masked attempts "to promote racism and cultural genocide."

In a resolution, the National Indian Lutheran Board said the "U.S. English movement" is pushing for legislation in Arizona and several Midwestern states, with eight states already passing such measures.

If a constitutional amendment in achieved on the matter, board officials said it could foster cutbacks in state and federal-funded programs for the Indian language and culture.

HAMMOND, Ind. (AP) — The United Methodist Judicial Council has canceled a scheduled meeting in Arizona to protest Arizona Gov. Evan Meacham's cancellation of state observance of Martin Luther King Day. "We do not believe that the decision of the governor is a moral one or that it can be defended," said Tom Matheny, a Hammond attorney and president of the council. It shifted its April 22-23 meeting from Scottsdale, Ariz., to Nashville, Tenn.

Marchman

Vaughn

Highland Baptist Church to have revival services

Highland Baptist Church at the corner of Banks and Kentucky will be in revival beginning Sunday and continuing through Saturday.

Services will be at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. each day except Saturday, March 28, when there will be no morning service.

Fines Marchman of Perryton will be the preacher for the revival services. Charles Vaughn of Booker will lead the music and bring special music.

Others also will be featured in special music selections, and there will be special testimonies during the services.

Marchman was born in Hamlin. He grew up in Pampa and graduated from Pampa High School in 1956. He attended Central Baptist Church. He married the former Pat West in 1963; they are the parents of two children, Dale of Wildorado and Dana, who is a senior at Perryton High School.

Marchman has served as pastor of several Baptist churches in the Texas and Oklahoma Panhandles. Presently he is working in the oil field at Perryton and is serving as interim pastor of the First Baptist Church at Booker.

Vaughn is the owner of Vaughn Mud Service in Booker, where he is a member of the First Baptist Church. He became a Christian on Feb. 27, 1985 and surrendered to the ministry on Sept. 20, 1986.

He and his wife Evelyn are the parents of two children, Rhoda, who is a senior at Booker High School, and Jason, who attends school in Booker. Vaughn has ministered with his music to churches in Texas, Wyoming and South Dakota.

Brother Joe Wortham, pastor, invited the public to attend the special revival services, adding "you will be more welcome and blessed than you can imagine."

Rev. and Mrs. T.L. Henderson

Church of God to have Pastor Recognition Day

The congregation of the Pampa Church of God, 1123 Gwendolen, has designated Sunday as Pastor Appreciation Sunday to honor its pastor, Rev. T.L. Henderson.

Congregation members will recognize Rev. Henderson and his wife Catherine for their contributions to the community as a pastor and leader during the 10:45 a.m. worship service.

The Hendersons came to Pampa in 1984. Since that time, they have earned the respect of the community as a result of their involvement in the affairs of the community.

The Sunday morning service will include speakers and special music provided by members of the church.

The congregation has invited the Hendersons' friends to attend the special observance.

The Royalheirs

Briarwood Full Gospel to dedicate new church

Pastor Gene Allen and the congregation at Briarwood Full Gospel Church in Pampa invites the community to the church for a week of celebration and dedication of the newly constructed church facilities located at 1800 W. Harvester.

This Sunday, in both the morning and evening services, the Royalheirs of Tulsa, Okla., will be ministering in song. Audiences across the nation, both young and old, express a feeling of spiritual renewal through the ministry of the Royalheirs, Rev. Allen said.

Although having mastered a professional sound and receiving favorable recognition from highly regarded music critics, the depth of sound is not totally musical, Allen said.

"One experiences a feeling of warmth, love, vitality and spiritual impact," he said. "Theirs is a smooth blend of favorite hymns as well as the contemporary gospel songs of our day."

Allen invited the public to "come hear the outstanding singing with an inspirational sound, uniquely submitted to the Lordship of Jesus Christ, and then join us for the rest of the week as we welcome guest ministers John McDuff and Morris Sheats."

The morning service begins at 10:45 a.m., with the evening service beginning at 7 p.m.

Former Pampa resident helps in prison ministry

By CARLEE EVERETT
Big Spring Herald

BIG SPRING (AP)—When Virginia Whitten isn't traveling with her husband's ministry group, she's spending hours corresponding with prison inmates.

The letters she receives often bring tears to her eyes, she said. She receives approximately 400 cards and letters annually.

"We answer every letter. There are some that take much more in-depth correspondence," Mrs. Whitten said.

She travels with her husband's group, Joe Whitten and His Children, which tours seven-and-a-half months of the year. Those travels last year took them to 52 prisons, 40 churches and five civic organizations.

Whitten is a former minister of music of the First Baptist Church of Pampa, where he served for 10 years.

"Joe and I want to help the inmates make a decision to change their lives," she said, adding that she has an additional goal of her personal ministry: "I want to give them hope."

Mrs. Whitten said she believes inmates identify with a story she likes to share with them — her own confinement in a psychiatric hospital. She talks about being flawed and how she has been judged by society — a reality for people who live behind prison walls.

"The inmates quickly realize that I am 'for real'... they can spot a phony immediately and would laugh me off the stage," she said.

One inmate from an Army prison at Fort Riley, Kan., wrote her: "All my life I hid my emotions, I did not want to let people know how I felt... For the first time in my life, I cried and was not ashamed of it. I didn't care who saw me, or what they thought... The combination of His Children and Virginia's love and caring (through her story), now enabled me to walk with my head held high because I know that there is someone who does care and loves me, a person who doesn't care what I've done."

Mrs. Whitten says she feels a special mission to mentally ill and mentally retarded inmates. "TDC (Texas Department of Corrections) is in a state of emergency and is really doing all it can right now to help alleviate its problems — no psychiatrists, no psychologists and overcrowding."

Her formula for helping such inmates includes understanding and God, as well as good psychiatric care and when needed, medication. "The mentally ill should be in a special prison where they can get help. And some of these mentally ill inmates should never be released — but some, with help and understanding, could later function well in society," she said.

Her husband said he has become more attuned to the inmates' individual personalities in the course of his ministry. He said their ministry also extends to families of inmates. "As we travel from church to church, we minister to sons, daughters, fathers, mothers, sisters and brothers of those incarcerated."

Religion Roundup

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — On the 14th anniversary Thursday of the U.S. Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion, the Roman Catholic Diocese of St. Augustine launched a program of reconciliation with Catholics who have had abortions. Many have left the church because of its condemnation of abortion or "their overwhelming feelings of guilt," says the Rev. Edward Booth in announcing the new program, Project Rachel.

Fabric Easter basket serves as child's gift or table centerpiece.

Fabric Easter basket makes unique child's gift, centerpiece

By BETH COTTEN

What do you call the plastic grass that goes into Easter baskets? How about Eastro-Turf?

This year, put the Eastro-Turf into a unique fabric basket. It makes a terrific child's gift or table centerpiece.

The basket is easy to make in just one or two afternoons. I used aida cloth and a pastel plaid fabric, and cross-stitched a very simple bunny-and-flower design on the basket side. You might prefer to embroider, applique or paint the design.

Another of our most popular Easter projects is Big Hoppy, a whimsical stuffed-fabric rabbit nearly 5 feet tall!

To order plans for the Easter basket, specify Project No. 1354; and for Big Hoppy, No. 1318. Send $4.95 for either plan, or receive both for only $8.90. Include $2.95 for a catalog.

Mail to: Makin' Things, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. 74008-1000.

To make the basket, I used 3/4 yard of 14-count ivory-colored aida cloth, 1 1/2 yards of pastel plaid fabric, single-fold braid, gathered eyelet trim, and satin ribbon in two different colors.

You'll also need some lightweight cardboard, a small piece of bonded quilt batting, and embroidery floss.

Cut a 7 1/2 x 27 1/2-inch piece of aida cloth for the basket sides. Cross-stitch the design in the center, with the top toward one long edge. I did a simple outline design.

Cut from aida cloth: three straps, each 2 x 36 inches; and one circular bottom, 9 1/2 inches in diameter.

Cut from pastel fabric: one basket lining, 6 x 27 1/2 inches; one bottom lining, 8 inches in diameter; and one strap, 5 x 25 inches. Piece together a long ruffle strip, 8 x 80 inches.

Fold the ruffle strip in half lengthwise, wrong sides together. Press the seam allowances to the inside along both ends. Gather along the long raw edges to 26 1/2 inches.

Pin the gathered edge of the ruffle to the right side of the basket lining piece, centered along one long edge. Pin the cross-stitched aida piece right side down on top, with the top of the design toward the pinned edge.

Stitch the seam through all layers, 1/2 inch from the edges. Open the lining and aida layers outward and press the seam open.

Fold the basket assembly in half widthwise, right sides together, and stitch the seam along the matching raw edges, to form a tube. Don't catch the ends of the ruffle in the seam.

Pin the circular bottom lining piece into the open lining end of the tube, placing right sides together and easing to fit. Stitch the seam all the way around. Clip the curves.

To turn the tube right side out, fold the aida half down over the lining half, wrong sides together. The ruffle will now extend out from the upper edge. Topstitch around the basket just below the ruffle.

Insert a 5 1/2 x 28-inch piece of cardboard between the aida and lining layers, overlapping the ends. Insert a matching piece of quilt batting between the cardboard and aida layers.

Place the circular aida bottom piece on a flat surface and glue a 9 1/4-inch-diameter piece of cardboard to the center. Clip the lower raw edge of the aida basket side at 2-inch intervals.

Place the basket in the center of the cardboard circle, flaring the clipped edge outward. Adjust the edges of the basket and bottom aida pieces to match.

Pin and then stitch the two aida layers together, 1/4 inch from the edges. Encase the raw aida edges in decorative braid, beginning and ending at the vertical seam at the back of the basket. Glue eyelet trim around the bottom of the basket sides.

To make the strap, fold one of the aida strap pieces in half lengthwise, right sides together, and stitch along the long raw edges. Turn and press. Repeat for the other two aida strap pieces, and for the pastel strap piece.

Tack the three aida strap pieces together at one end and make a flat braid. Sew the braided aida strap along the center of the flat pastel strap, using a hand blindstitch.

Whipstitch the ends of the assembled strap to the inside of the basket, on opposite sides. Wrap satin ribbons around the basket just below the ruffle and tie in big bows.

Joking about teeth rings false not once but twice

DEAR ABBY: I have recently had a couple of puzzling experiences that maybe you or your readers can help me with. I am a single woman 45 years old.

The first was a year ago. While touring New Zealand, I dated a 56-year-old man. On our first date (which was also our last) while dining at a restaurant, he reached over for what I thought was to be a friendly kiss — instead he stuck his fingers in my mouth, tugged at my teeth and laughingly asked, "Are these false?" Fortunately, I don't have false teeth, but what odd behavior!

Then a Pennsylvania man I had known intimately for 15 years (and almost married) arranged to meet me in Las Vegas for a romantic weekend, after we had not seen each other for four years. Upon retiring the first evening, he reached over as if to hug me, but instead he pulled at my teeth, making a joke (ha-ha) about false teeth. I was stunned! (What if I had had false teeth?)

In this crass and rude behavior what we can look forward to should we lose our teeth? How can a lady handle this repulsive behavior without stooping to their level?

APPALLED IN CALIFORNIA

Dear Abby

usual. Some may suspect, or even inquire, but to actually tug at someone's teeth in order to determine whether they are false is truly bizarre.

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing about that letter you ran from the "Proud Texan." He wrote you about a western-club owner who had changed the sign from "Cow" to "Heifer" on the ladies' restroom door because the women resented being called cows. If you think that's bad, wait until you hear this one!

My husband and I are both country-and-western people through and through. Anyway, when I told my husband I was pregnant, he bragged to everyone that he had me "bred" and that I was due to "calve" in July. After the baby was born he started calling people to tell them the news — and

DEAR APPALLED: It is indeed amazing that you should have encountered two such weirdos with the same fixation about teeth. I assure you that this kind of behavior is not he told them all that I had "dropped" him an 8-pound "heifer." Sign me ...

PROUD COW WITH A 3-YEAR-OLD HEIFER

DEAR PROUD: Thanks for writing. Now I've heard everything.

DEAR ABBY: I am marrying my ex-husband in September. We never gave our marriage a chance, and were divorced shortly after we were married.

Our first wedding wasn't much. We were married by a justice of the peace with a few close friends and some family members present. This time we are having a church wedding with lots of friends and relatives.

The problem: Our relatives and close friends who attended our first ceremony already gave us lovely wedding gifts, and I want them to know that they are not expected to give us another gift. However, we do want them to share our day of happiness. Would it be all right to enclose a little note with the invitations to these special people saying, "No gift, please. You already gave?"

SECOND MARRIAGE, SAME MAN

DEAR SECOND: No notes. Tell them privately that a second gift is not expected.

'Avon Man' doesn't mind being kidded

By SHARON GOODALL
Decatur Herald & Review
TAYLORVILLE, Ill. (AP) — When the doorbell rings and a voice says, "Avon calling," it may not be the Avon Lady. It could be Ed Akers, the Avon Man.

Akers is one of fewer than a dozen men regularly selling the company's beauty products in central Illinois.

Akers, 49, of Taylorville, joined Avon in 1983, after 23 years as a speech therapist with the Taylorville School District and about a year after a divorce.

The father of two grown children remarried in November and acquired a new teen-age stepdaughter.

"I'm used to being teased about being the Avon Man," Akers said recently. "But most of the adverse reactions aren't to me personally." Some people, he said, don't like door-to-door salespeople, period.

After his divorce, Akers began looking for a supplemental income and a way to meet new people. He met Judy Driver, a local Avon sales leader at the time, at a friend's house. He asked her if men ever sold Avon.

"I told him I didn't know why men couldn't sell," said Driver, who trained Akers and still offers consultation.

Georgetown, Providence advance in NCAA tourney

Irish coach Digger Phelps watches his team lose.

By The Associated Press

After a year's hiatus from the Final Four, the Big East Conference is back in business. Twelve teams still remain from the 64 that began the NCAA Basketball Tournament last week, but the Big East already is assured of having at least one team — and possibly two — in the Final Four. If the latter happens, one of them will be in the championship game because of this year's draw.

Georgetown won the tournament in 1984 and Villanova beat the Hoyas for the 1985 title, the year St. John's gave the Big East three members of the Final Four.

Georgetown, Syracuse and Providence are still alive this year after impressive victories in Thursday night's regional semifinals. And if the Big East doesn't turn out to be the best conference in the country, at least there won't be any argument from the Southeastern Conference.

—In the Southeast Regional at Louisville,

Providence rolled to a 103-82 upset of ninth-ranked Alabama as guards Billy Donovan and Delray Brooks bombed away for five 3-point goals apiece.

—In the second game, Reggie Williams scored 34 points and Charles Smith's seven consecutive points erased a two-point second-half deficit as fourth-ranked Georgetown downed No. 20 Kansas 70-57 for its 14th straight victory.

Georgetown and Providence will meet Saturday for the fourth time this season — Georgetown has won twice — with the winner advancing to the Final Four.

—In the East Regional at East Rutherford, N.J., center Rony Seikaly scored a career-high 33 points and led No. 10 Syracuse to an 87-81 victory over Florida.

—Then, in Thursday's only game that didn't involve a team from the Big East, freshman sensation J.R. Reid scored 31 points and personally held off No. 18 Notre Dame down the stretch as second-ranked North Carolina avenged a regular-season loss by defeating the Irish 74-68.

If Syracuse beats North Carolina on Saturday, the Orangemen will play the Georgetown-Providence winner in the national semifinals.

The other two regionals resume tonight. In the West Regional at Seattle, No. 1-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas plays Wyoming and sixth-ranked Iowa faces Oklahoma. In the Midwest at Cincinnati, third-ranked Indiana goes against No. 17 Duke and fifth-ranked DePaul meets LSU.

Georgetown lost a 39-31 advantage before Smith erased a 41-39 Kansas lead with a 3-point shot with 13:17 remaining. He then added another basket off a fast break and hit two free throws to stretch the Hoyas' lead to 46-41.

Smith finished with 13 points and Perry McDonald had 10.

Pampa's Hopkins dominating discus, shot events

Andrea Hopkins gets set to heave the discus.

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

Andrea Hopkins relishes the thought of returning to the state track meet again. And the way the Pampa senior is throwing the shot put and discus this year, she's headed there with an excellent chance of grabbing the gold in both events.

"I want to win state and maybe set some records. That's my goal," Hopkins said.

Hopkins, who was second in the discus at the state meet a year ago, has been a dominant figure in the three meets the Lady Harvesters have competed in so far in 1987. She hasn't lost yet in either event and set meet records in both the shot and discus at the Hereford Invitational last weekend. In fact, her 40-11 winning throw in the shot is the best in the state so far. Her 124-11½ heave with the discus ranks second best among Class 4A schools.

Hopkins' best discus throw (131-0) came at Austin last season and her feat didn't go unnoticed.

"After I finished, a coach from Texas Tech came up and was asking if I would be interested in coming to their school," Hopkins said.

Coaches are still asking her that question, either in person or in a letter.

"I've had many letters, even one from West Point, but I really don't know if I'm going to college or not," Hopkins said. "If I go it will probably be to Angelo State because I've heard it's one of the better colleges."

Hopkins is also a standout volleyball player and actually prefers that sport to track.

"I would much rather play volleyball in college if I had the choice, but I would like to do both," added Hopkins.

Meanwhile, Hopkins continues to outthrow the opposition while looking ahead to the state meet, but she hints her tosses may have been even better had she had former teammate Sandra Farrah to challenge her.

As a freshman, Farrah bettered Hopkins in the district meet by winning both the discus and shot. Last season, Hopkins won both events at district while Farrah was second in the discus and third in the shot.

Farrah has since moved to Arizona.

"I miss her. We competed against each other, but it made us both better," Hopkins said. "She scored a lot of points for us."

"Andrea is capable of winning state, but she's going to have to work hard because of the stiff competition," said her coach, Gary Cornelsen. "The top three throwers are in our regionals."

Hopkins enjoys throwing the discus more than the shot, mainly because she feels it takes more skill.

"Anybody that's big and strong can throw the shot, but it takes coordination to throw the discus," Hopkins said. "You see girls that are tall and skinny throwing the discus."

Hopkins won the discus event six times during the Lady Harvesters' march to the Class 4A state track championship last season. Pampa has won two of three meets so far this season, and Hopkins feels the Lady Harvesters have an excellent shot at bringing home the state championship trophy again.

"There might not be as many go as there were last year, but I think we have a good chance of winning again," Hopkins said. "We're still improving and there's still three meets to go before district."

Hopkins started competing in track and field when she was in the seventh grade.

"I've always liked sports and track was just another sport I wanted to try," Hopkins said.

Cornelsen and the Lady Harvesters are glad she did.

Witt compared to Ryan

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) — Texas pitching coach Tom House compares Ranger starter Bobby Witt to a young Nolan Ryan, and Witt already is challenging some of Ryan's accomplishments.

Witt recovered from a slow beginning as a rookie starter in the major leagues last season with a 11-9 record that included seven straight victories to finish the season.

He also walked 143 batters, the most since Ryan had 148 walks in 1978. Witt also set an American League record with 22 wild pitches.

"Those aren't the kind of records I want to be setting," Witt said.

But he showed enough to convince House that the Rangers' young starter has the third-best pitching arm he's seen in 20 years of observing big-league talent.

"I saw the young Nolan Ryan and I've seen Roger Clemens," House said. "Bobby's one of those specials. They don't come along very often."

Ryan, still humming 95-mph fast balls for the Houston Astros, and Clemens, the 1986 American League Cy Young and Most Valuable player, rank No. 1 and 2 on House's list. Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden is fourth.

Like Ryan early in his career,

Witt had control problems last season, but House anticipates a turnaround.

"Bobby's got the body, the arm speed, the mastery of mechanics," House said. "All he needs to do is figure out what his body is doing and the arm will take him as far as he wants to go."

Witt doesn't feel intimidated by being placed in such elite company.

"It's nice to hear things like that said about you, but you really have to block those things out of your mind," Witt said. "I don't look at comparisons like 'maybe he can be as good as this guy in a few years.' If you start thinking about those things, that's when the concentration goes."

Witt pitched just 11 minor-league games last season before the youth-oriented Rangers called the promising rookie to the big leagues. He wilted at first, posting a 4-9 record and 6.67 earned run average and uncorking 15 wild pitches.

Then he turned it around with a mechanical and mental adjustment.

"The mental adjustment of your called up to the big leagues was first year and going 4-9 kind of took its toll," Witt said. "Then I won a couple of games and got some confidence going."

Boswell history at Oklahoma University

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — All-America linebacker Brian Bosworth has only the slimmest of chances of returning to the Oklahoma football team next season — and his alter ego, "The Boz," has no chance at all.

Sooners Coach Barry Switzer told the Associated Press on Thursday night he is "99.9 percent sure" that Bosworth will not be around for his final year of eligibility.

Bosworth was not included in Oklahoma's spring football guide this week — prompting questions about his status, since the Sooners begin spring practice later this month.

"Bosworth has been gone since the Orange Bowl," Switzer was quoted in Thursday's Norman Transcript. "It humors me to see the attention he gets. He's gone. He's history."

But Switzer said later that he would be willing to talk with Bosworth "if he came in and was sincere that he really wants to come back next year."

Without elaborating, he said Bosworth would have to drastically change his nonconformist image — the multi-colored hairdo with the shaven temples and the outrageous remarks and actions — to have any chance at returning.

"It (his return) would be structured how I want it," he said. "I'll play Brian Bosworth; I won't play the Boz."

Switzer said Bosworth has occasionally worked out on his own in the Oklahoma weight room but has not participated in the football team's off-season conditioning program.

Bosworth, a three-year All-Big Eight selection, two-time All-American and winner of the Butkus Award as the nation's top linebacker in 1985 and 1986, will be eligible for the NFL draft if he graduates this spring, as scheduled. He has said several times in recent months that he would like to return to Oklahoma rather than play for a poor NFL team.

He must inform the NFL by April 13 if he wants to be in the regular draft on April 28. He could decide to enter the supplemental draft, which is a weighted lottery for the first time.

Cal-Berkeley advances in NIT cage tournament

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Top-seeded California-Berkeley and second-seeded Providence had to fight from behind in the second half, but both advanced to the second round of the women's National Invitation Tournament.

Cal-Berkeley, with four freshmen in the lineup after their leading scorer fouled out, defeated Appalachian State 109-99 on Thursday, and Providence edged DePaul 95-93.

In the other first-round games, sixth-seeded Creighton surprised third-seeded Stephen F. Austin 76-68, and fifth-seeded Arkansas rolled past fourth-seeded Montana 92-74.

Providence's Lady Friars, 23-7, and the Arkansas Razorbacks, 18-12, play at 6 p.m. today, followed by Cal-Berkeley's Bears, 20-9, vs. the Creighton Lady Blue Jays, 22-6, at 8 p.m.

In afternoon games, DePaul's Lady Blue Demons, 22-7, was paired against the Montana Lady Griz, 25-4, at 1 p.m., followed by the Appalachian State Mountaineers, 24-5, against the S.F. Austin Lady Jacks, 23-6, at 3 p.m.

Championship and consolation games are scheduled for 6 and 8 p.m. Saturday.

Jennifer Bennett scored 27 points, Anja Hellman 22 and Seija

Leino 21 to lead Cal-Berkeley past Appalachian State.

The Mountaineers had a 53-52 halftime lead, and the game was tied 90-90 with five minutes to play. But the Bears outscored Appalachian State 19-9 the rest of the way to pull out the victory.

Appalachian State's Valorie Whiteside led all scorers with 33 points.

Diann Reynolds hit a 20-foot jumper with 31 seconds remaining and added a free throw with 12 seconds left to give Providence its victory over DePaul.

DePaul, led by Mary Burke's 24 points, overcame a 50-46 halftime deficit and a four-point deficit during the final three minutes of the game.

DePaul's Sally Anderson led all scorers with 30 points.

Tracy Webb scored a career-high 28 points to lead Arkansas past Montana in the only decisive victory of the tournament's first day of play.

Arkansas' 92 points was the most scored against Montana in nine years. The Razorbacks hit 36 free throws, tying a tournament record set in 1984 by Clemson.

Webb scored 20 of her points in the first half as Arkansas raced to a 46-30 halftime lead.

Cavalier can make Harvester football coaching history

I DIDN'T KNOW THAT: Two of the Panhandle's all-time finest high school football coaches and great antagonists of the Harvesters once worked for them.

Gene Mayfield, who has been a major thorn in the side of the Green and Gold during stints at Berger and Levelland High Schools, once signed a contract to become an assistant in charge of the PHS offense. But there was an escape clause in the contract, permitting him to break the pact if he accepted a head coaching job elsewhere. That offer came from Littlefield for the just-graduated WTSU quarterback, and an outstanding coaching career was launched, including only two losses to Pampa in 12 games.

Howard (Bull) Lynch, who guided the Amarillo Sandstorm to a 10-4 mark over Pampa in 14 seasons with Amarillo High (then the only high school in Amarillo), accepted a request to also help Pampa beat his club in the 1950 season, earning the bi-district berth against the Wichita Falls Coyotes of Joe Golding. Asked by the Pampa coaches to scout the Harvesters for any overt tendencies or play tipoffs, Lynch agreed to do so. "I've been asked several times to scout the Amarillo schools by their opponents, but I always refused. I would never do that," Lynch tells me. A bit handicapped today physically, the former player for legendary Center College of Kentucky is still brilliantly sharp of mind and wit and always ready to talk football.

YOU ASKED: Although he hasn't signed a contract yet (he's in Colorado taking advantage of spring break) newly announced head football Coach Dennis Cavalier is expected on the job by April 1 ("hopefully before," says AD John Kendall). His contract will be for two years, at a salary between $38-39,000. His duties will include teaching two academic classes. He will be able to hire one assistant for sure, possibly two or three. In the past he has run a multiple offense, out of the basic I formation, and wants to coach in Texas, the reason given for leaving a 6A job at Wichita, Kansas South East HS and Chickasha, Okla. HS.

Sports Forum

TRIVIA: Can you name the former major league baseball player who played in two consecutive Cotton Bowl Games for two DIFFERENT colleges?

TURNAROUNDS: Cavalier has an opportunity to perform the best program turnaround in PHS football coaching history when he kicks off the season next September 11. Taking over a program which went 0-10 this past season under his boss, AD Kendall, should the out-of-state import reach 6-4, he will tie the top turnaround mark and 7-3, of course, will set a new one.

John Welborn, now Baker Elementary school principal, took a Buddy Williams' 1973 3-7-0 program to 8-2-0 the next season, a plus 6 in the win department. Buck Prejean earned a plus 4% when his first ballclub, the 1941 squad, went 8-2 after a 3-6-1 final campaign for Odus Mitchell. Tom Tipps inherited a 3-7 squad and went 6-4 his initial campaign, for a plus 3, the same as Danny Palmer built with a 6-4 mark off a 3-7 the year prior.

With an 0-10 to beat, Cavalier doesn't have to worry about performing the poorest, that infamous mark held by Buddy Williams. His first team in 1972 won three fewer games than Swede Lee's final 1971 team, and then Williams' fell to 2-8 in 1973, back to back minus 3 seasons, setting the table for Welborn's turnaround record.

ANSWER: They called him "Handsome" Ransom Jackson when he was a major league all-star third baseman. But Coach Dutch Meyer called him a half-back when the super athlete reported for football at Texas Christian University in the 1945 34-0 loss to Oklahoma State in the Cotton Bowl. Enrolled in the V-12 program, the Navy switched the program that year to the University of Texas, giving Jackson a chance to play for the Longhorns the next season. They blasted Missouri 40-27 in game ten of the Bowl's history. And for good measure, his roommate that year was the late Bobby Layne. Jackson is now a senior executive with an insurance firm in Athens, Georgia.

GOOD GUY AWARD: "There's never been a town that's treated me better than this one has, and I want to do what I can to really get it going again," said Larry Bird of Terre Haute, Ind., where he played his college basketball at Indiana State. Then he proceeded to buy the financially strapped multi-story Sheraton Hotel in that city and re-named it Larry Bird's Boston Connection.

The heavily unionized industrial-agricultural-based city has suffered over 10,000 population loss in the past couple of years. And the presence of his college roommate-teammate Bob Heaton as a successful Terre Haute insurance-realt estate businessman didn't hurt Bird's decision. But it just does again prove that some super athletes don't forget their roots.

Wheeler coach looking ahead to state meet

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

Ask Wheeler track coach Ronnie Karcher what weekend he looks ahead to with greatest anticipation and he'll probably tell you this weekend. Saturday, the Mustangs will compete in the annual Shamrock Invitational.

But deep down inside, you have to believe what Karcher is really thinking about is the weekend of May 15-16. It is then that he hopes to take a passel of his boys to Austin for the state track meet.

And it is with good reason that he has high hopes for success that weekend. Karcher is blessed the area's most powerful group of track and field athletes, including three 1986 regional qualifiers and a state qualifier, not to mention what is probably his most prized possession, a state champion.

Richard Smith had what is referred to as a "career year" in 1986. He won honors as the state champ in the discus, with a throw of 159 feet.

That is obviously Richard's most memorable achievement. But there were others.

Last year he was a regional qualifier in the high jump, he finished third in the district meet in the 110-meter high hurdles and fourth at the same meet in shotput competition.

Just last week at the Groom Tiger Relays, Richard had his career best throw in the shotput with a mark of 47-6.

The amazing thing to remember is that Richard is only a junior. He is a favorite to once again visit Austin in early May. And, of course, there's always next year.

Danny Benefield is another reason Karcher anxiously awaits the state meet.

Benefield, a senior, is a returning state qualifier in the 300-meter intermediate hurdles, where he crossed the finish line 39.8 seconds after the opening gun sounded.

He is also a regional qualifier in the high hurdles, and is a member of the sprint relay team which last year broke the school record.

Another senior on the squad is Hale Hughes. 1986 was very good to Hughes, too. With a time of 11.32, he qualified for the regional meet in the 3200-meter run.

Hughes finished fourth in the regionals in the 400-meter dash, and also runs a leg in the 1600-meter relay.

Karcher also expects continued success from Bubba Smith, who could conceivably have as much success as brother Richard this year.

Bubba is only a sophomore. In 1986 — his freshman year — Bubba was a regional qualifier in the high jump and shot put. He also finished third at district in the discus and fourth in the long jump and high hurdles.

Last week at Groom, he had two career bests. In the high jump, Bubba cleared the bar at 6-6; in the shot put, Bubba had a throw of 49-2.

Bubba has also added 25 pounds to his frame, which will allow him to put more power in his throw and more leg in his leap.

The list of impressive track stars goes further at Wheeler, including these Mustangs:

- ★ Junior Clifton Bradstreet. A fourth place district finisher in '86 in the 3200.
- ★ Junior David Jones. A third place finisher in district in the 800.
- ★ Junior Todd Hilton. A sixth place finisher in district in the 1600.
- ★ Junior Grayson Benson. In district, he was fourth in the pole vault and fifth in the long jump.

- ★ Sophomore Steve Hinshaw. A fifth place district finisher in pole vaulting.
- ★ Sophomore Chad Bentley. Finished fourth at district in the 800.
- ★ Senior Cody Wiggins, who's best event is the long jump. His career best is a jump of 20-6.
- ★ Senior Dickie Salyer. Even though Salyer has been sidelined, and in a leg cast because of ligament and cartilage damage suffered in the football season, he hopes to back in the swing of things by this year's district meet at Booker, April 11.

All these athletes combined make up what will hope to be a phenomenal year for Wheeler high school.

The memories of a just-missed state championship in football still haunt Wheeler students and townspeople alike.

A nice consolation prize would be sending as many of the above athletes as possible to the state meet.

But, as Karcher will tell you, the first thing they have to concern themselves with is making a good showing in Shamrock Saturday.

Public golf group plans ad campaign

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

Pampa Public Golf Association met Thursday night for one last shot at drawing support for a public golf course prior to the April 4 election.

Association members voted to draw $2,000 out of their account to spend on radio and television advertising, while also agreeing to meet on April 3, the day before the election, to pass out handbills in the community.

Association president Buddy Epperson also stressed at last night's meeting that this may be Pampa's last chance at having a public golf course, at least for several years.

"If it wasn't for a couple of people (Judge Carl Kennedy and Commissioner Gerald Wright), we might not be having this meeting, except to refund everyone's money. I want to praise their efforts because the other commissioners seemed lackadaisical about putting the golf course vote on the ballot," Epperson said.

Gray County commissioners voted last Thursday for a referendum asking voters whether or not they want a public golf course.

The Association was formed five years ago in an effort to obtain a public golf course and since then over 100 Pampans have contributed $250 or more to become charter members of the organization.

In a non-binding ballot last year, Gray County taxpayers voted in favor of county participation in building the course, but commissioners decided to put the issue before the voters again in the Nov. 4 general election.

However, Texas law prohibited the golf course issue to be placed on the ballot without legislative approval, but Epperson said he learned later from the State Attorney General's Office that the law was misinterpreted.

"We got some bad information from the state office or we could have had a vote on the proposal back in November," Epperson said.

Epperson said this time around the ballot will be binding and the commissioners would be obligated to abide by the taxpayers' wishes.

The Association also heard from commissioner candidates Austin Sutton and Dwight Fiveash, who both voiced their support of a public golf course.

"I feel the golf course is about five years overdue. I hope to present a budgeting plan which would make it a top-notch course. It's one thing to build it and another to keep it properly maintained," Sutton said.

"I've worked with golf courses in the past and one of the things that people look at before they move into a town is the recreational facilities," Fiveash said. "It's something that should be looked at cautiously. You get what you pay for."

Epperson believes a public course would attract area golfers, who, along with their families, would shop and eat in Pampa. He said a public course would also be an added incentive for business and industry to move to Pampa.

Epperson said opponents are afraid the construction of a public course will raise taxes, but he doesn't believe a tax increase would ever happen.

"We're talking about $300,000 that would be used to build the course and that money in itself would not cause taxes to be raised," Epperson said.

Epperson said the $300,000 would come from the $2.9 million sale of Highland General Hospital.

"Interest on that sale has now earned $4.6 million," Epperson pointed out. "And the $300,000 would not be drawn out all at once. The county would designate X number of dollars to be used and the remainder would still be drawing interest."

Two sites are available for golf course construction if the referendum passes. One site is located just north of Pampa on Highway 70. The other site is located four miles south of Pampa, also on Highway 70.

"We're not locked into any piece of land," Epperson pointed out. "Once the city gets involved, it's going to be out of our hands. Hopefully, we will have a say in the selection."

Path blocked

Mark Aguirre of the Dallas Mavericks finds his path to the basket blocked by Sacramento's Johnny Rogers during NBA action Thursday night. The Mavs won a squeaker 105-104.

Lloyd crushes opponent Virginia Slims

DALLAS (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd agreed she had probably just played one of her best matches of the year.

"The best of three tournaments," she said.

Evert Lloyd, top seed of the Virginia Slims of Dallas, needed only an hour and six minutes to blitz unseeded Carling Bassett 6-0, 6-1 Thursday in a second-round match of the $250,000 tournament.

Evert Lloyd said later that the 19-year-old Bassett, ranked as high as eighth in the world two years ago, has the sort of game that scares her.

"Carling hits the ball very hard and I enjoy that kind of match," said Evert Lloyd. "It forces me to go for my shots a lot more."

Evert Lloyd will meet unseeded Stephanie Rehe of Highland, Calif. today in the quarterfinals.

Evert Lloyd, of Boca Raton, Fla., set the tone by breaking Bassett's serve in the first game of the first set. Bassett, of Toronto, was never in the match after that. She failed to win a game until she broke Evert Lloyd's serve in the fourth game of the second set. Evert Lloyd broke back in the next game.

"I was so frustrated out there," said Bassett, who has not beaten Evert Lloyd in nine career meetings. "The only thing you can do is get the load off your back. Instead of shooting yourself you have to use humor."

Evert Lloyd, ranked third in the world, is trying to get her game into shape after taking six months' off. With eight of the top 10 players in the world skipping the tournament, she is a heavy favorite to win the $50,000 first prize. The finals are Sunday afternoon.

"The way I'm playing right now I deserve to be third," said Evert Lloyd. "When you take five, six months off the computer isn't kind to you."

"But we'll see in December who's one, two and three. I don't see myself as the third player. But who knows? The year is still young."

Fifth-seed Bettina Bunge of Monte Carlo had no easy time with unseeded Kate Gompert of Rancho Mirage, Calif. in an afternoon match.

Bunge fought off three match points in the third-set tiebreaker and went on to edge Gompert 6-1, 4-6, 7-5 (9-7). Bunge meets third-seeded Zina Garrison in Friday's quarterfinals.

Seventh-seeded Wendy Turnbull of Sandgate, Australia also struggled before defeating unseeded Barbara Gerken of Thousand Oaks, Calif. 3-6, 6-2, 6-4. Turnbull faces second-seeded Pam Shriver in the quarters.

Fourth-seeded Manuela Maleeva of Sofia, Bulgaria moved on to the quarters against sixth-seeded Lori McNeil of Houston with a 6-2, 6-4 triumph over Dianne Balestrat of Sydney, Australia.

Leaders listed in bowling tourney

Leaders after the first weekend of the Pampa Women's Bowling Association Tournament are listed below:

Team — Wheeler Evans, 3,053; Doubles — Tammy Hill-Annette Hahn, 1,263; Singles — Bea Wortham, 695.

Class B

Team — John T. Anthony Construction, 2,873; Doubles — Dwinna Miller-Vicky Salazar, 1,262; Singles — Lori Kidd, 641.

All Events (Optional) — Shirley Jernigan, 1,906; Scratch All Events — Bea Wortham, 1,681; Team Scratch Event (Optional) — Earl's Engraving, 2,375.

Clemens still unsigned

HOUSTON (AP) — It's deja vu for Roger Clemens. He's back throwing batting practice for his old team.

No, not the Boston Red Sox, but for the Spring Woods Tigers, the high school team he left seven years ago.

Clemens walked out of the Red Sox training camp in Florida March 6 and is being fined $1,000 a day. After compiling a 24-4 mark last season and leading Boston to the World Series, he wants a contract of $2.4 million over two years.

Pampa hosts Levelland Saturday

Pampa hosts Levelland at 1 p.m. Saturday in a District 1-4A baseball opener.

The Harvesters enter the game with a 4-3 non-district record while the Lobos are 2-5.

Bret Mitchell (2-2) is scheduled to start on the mound for the Harvesters.

The game will be aired over KSZN (1340 AM) Radio with Earl Davis handling the announcing duties.

Riding club schedules open playday Sunday

The United Sheriffs Poses and Riding Clubs are sponsoring an open playday Sunday at the Top O' Texas Rodeo Arena in Pampa.

Events include pylons, barrels, golfette, poles, flags and baton. Books open at 8 a.m. and the games are scheduled to start at 9 a.m. A session stand will also be open.

Ribbons will be presented to the first six places in each event and trophies will be awarded to the high point winner in each age group.

4. Do you want a commission that will listen when you speak in open commission meetings and is willing to respond to the wishes of the people?
Or do you want a commission which will rubber stamp every special interest group that comes along?

5. Do you want to maintain our present home rule form of government where you elect qualified, dedicated people to devote their time and effort to run your government for $20 per month?

Or do you want to change our form of government, as some propose, to a general rule city and have a full-time, fully-paid, mayor and commission (not all of whom are required to be elected by you)?

East Texas beekeeper used to getting stung in business

TUCKER (AP) — Keith Eiben manages millions of workers, and every day a few of them turn on him.

But Eiben is quick to admit he takes advantage of his bumbling multitude of servants.

As a beekeeper, Eiben makes his living off the bees' work, but his job also is labor-intensive. He is not afraid of the bees and said getting stung is something more to be ignored than feared.

"I've probably been stung at least 100 times in one day," he said. "It ain't too bad once you get used to it. I used to swell up, but now they don't hardly leave a mark on me."

Eiben's father and uncle both worked with bees, he says, and after spending nine years as a railroad engineer, he turned his heart toward honey. He has been a beekeeper for five years and is beginning his third year as his own boss.

With 1,500 hives producing about 250 55-gallon barrels of honey a year, Eiben stays busy all year, moving hives, feeding bees, maintaining equipment and extracting honey.

Although the work is hard and the hours are long, Eiben said he loves it, especially in the spring.

"I enjoy building up the bees for the honey flow, raising queens and making new hives," he said. "I just enjoy messing with them."

During the winter Eiben keeps his bees on farms in Palestine, Crockett and Lovelady and stocks feeders in each hive with corn syrup. In the spring and summer they are placed on farm-lands across the state for better pollination.

"After April you can't make good honey around here," he said. "If you leave them here, they'll eat up what they've made."

The majority of the hives, each of which can hold as much as six or seven pounds of bees, are taken to an area south of Houston to feed on Chinese tallow trees while the remainder are placed around the Vernon area where alfalfa abounds.

Eiben picks up the Houston hives and brings them back to his shop in Tucker to extract the honey after about three weeks. And as soon as the work at home is done, he's back on the road to Lubbock to let the bees have a go at some cotton.

Eiben has come to know about 75 farmers across the state who like to have the bees on their land because their presence serves a double purpose.

"They get their crops pollinated and I get the honey," he said. "It's good for them and for me. I usually give them a little honey for setting my bees out."

During peak production, Eiben said the bees don't know how to rest.

"During heavy honey flow, bees won't live two or three weeks," he said. "They work themselves to death."

But at the same rate new bees are born, Eiben said. Queens lay eggs and bees are hatched every 21 days.

Each hive consists of a box with eight or nine frame inserts joined to another box that serves as living quarters for the bees. Combs for honey storage are formed by the bees on each frame and a hive weighs between 35 and 70 pound when full.

Eiben said he probably has several million bees, adding, "I'd hate the job of counting them."

"Moving them around and taking off the honey is the hardest part," Eiben said. "Toting them all day long, you get worn out."

Eiben's operation includes three and a half acres off Farm Road 645 near Tucker, four 28-foot trailers, three flatbed trailers, an 18-wheeler, two one-ton pick-ups, a forklift and a building containing many of his boxes and extracting equipment.

Joseph Kattan, who has been with him for a year, is Eiben's only full-time employee, though Eiben's wife, Suzanne, sometimes helps, especially in extracting honey.

"The first year I did this it seemed like I had a new person every day," Eiben said. "I had been getting help through an employment agency, and they would come out, get stung and go home. I think Joseph will stay with me."

Because honey is a farm product, Eiben gets operating money from government loans until packers can be located. He puts the raw honey into barrels and when packers make a purchase, the government loan is paid off.

Last year he sold honey to packers in Arkansas and Wisconsin, but each year Eiben sells to the highest bidder.

Beekeeper Keith Eiben stands with a portion of beehives ready for shipping.

House extends inmate furloughs

AUSTIN (AP) — The House has voted to give furloughed inmates an extra two days at home before returning to prison.

Sponsor Rep. Larry Evans, D-Houston, said that the current five-day furloughs are too short for many inmates, especially those who must make a long trip home.

In a non-record vote, the House Thursday tentatively approved the Evans plan to extend furloughs to seven days. The measure faces a final vote next week before going to the Senate.

Inmates who have earned furloughs are allowed to go home for up to five days in cases involving death or serious illness in the inmate's family. Furloughs also can be granted for personal and family business, such as lining up a job for after release.

Most inmates who are granted furloughs are within a few months of their release from prison.

"There are inmates who live in distant parts of the state, such as an inmate incarcerated in Huntsville who goes on furlough to El Paso, which is 713 miles away, that will spend approximately 12 hours getting home," Evans said.

Inmates who are sex offenders or escape risks are not eligible for furloughs. Evans said local law enforcement officials would be notified when a furloughed inmate is in their area.

Last year, TDC granted 3,136 of 7,839 furlough requests. Sixty-one inmates were late in returning to prison.
