Celanese may close without state permit

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

Hoechst Celanese may close its Pampa plant — taking 400 jobs with it — if the Texas Water Commission blocks construction of a $28 million waste water project, company officials testified Wednesday.

In a public hearing before TWC hearing examiner Duncan Gordon, Pampa plant Manager Ron Guard said the proposed waste wells, to be located east of town, are crucial to the chemical plant's survival. The wells would replace solar evaporation ponds that the federal government has ordered phased out by November 1988.

Guard

"We either have to be out of those ponds or cease to operate," Guard told a room filled with water commission officials and area landowners. Meanwhile, Gray County farmers and ranchers expressed grave concerns about how the 10,000-foot-deep injection wells would affect their mineral rights and the Ogallala Aquifer, a major underground source of fresh water in the Plains. Celanese plans to pump hazardous liquid waste through a 13-mile pipeline from the plant five miles west of town to three disposal wells, three miles east of Pampa and two miles north of U.S. Highway 60. The pipeline would travel a route about five miles south of the city.

According to the company's permit on file with the water commission, treated waste dumped down the wells would consist of 99.5 percent water, 0.4 percent salts and 0.1 percent of numerous "organic compounds."

The hearing was expected to conclude today at the Pampa Community Building, following nine hours of testimony Wednesday.

Celanese Technical Manager Charles Loeffler testified Wednesday that the compounds would include waste from water used to wash equipment and from products produced at the plant, including acetic and butyric acids.

Loeffler said the company plans to dump an average of 855 gallons of waste water per minute down the wells.

"In my opinion, there's no other alternative available to us at this time," he testified.

Loeffler said the company had looked into treating its waste to the point that it could be reused, but that plan was abandoned after Celanese determined it would cost the company about $50 million. His testimony prompted Pampa farmer Earl Smith to ask why a firm that spent $2.8 billion in a takeover would be opposed to spending an extra $22 million for safety.

Celanese was recently acquired by American Hoechst, a subsidiary of Hoechst AG, a West German firm.

"They're foreign-owned is what it amounts to," Smith said in complaining that new ownership may change the company's stated commitment to safety. "We're not sure the ownership of this company is going to remain the same."

Loeffler also testified that the waste water to be dumped down the wells was tested on mice and rabbits in a New Jersey laboratory and determined to be "non-hazardous," although he admitted "it's not something you and I would want to drink."

The dumping permit sought by the company is for disposal of what's listed as hazardous waste.

Bob Kent, founder of Underground Resource Management Inc. of Austin, testified that the wells would be enclosed in several layers of steel and concrete and be closely monitored to prevent leaking into the aquifer or oil and gas zones. He said he did not expect the waste water to seep into any areas crucial to mineral production.

Kent's firm compiled geological studies for Celanese.

"I believe that both ground and surface water will be protected," he said. Under cross-examination, he admitted that waste previously pumped underground by the company will take about five years to leave the area under Celanese property.

Also testifying was Pampa geologist Dan Michael, hired by Celanese a month ago to study the plans in preparation for this week's public hearing.

Building drops like brick

By LARRY HOLLIS

Valuation of construction issued permits by the city dropped below last year's comparable figures for both the fiscal and calendar years, according to the latest monthly report.

The March report furnished by the Department of Building Inspection shows 11 building permits were issued last month, with a valuation listed at $331,275. A year ago, the city issued 21 permits for construction and remodeling projects, with valuation listed at $2,170,200.

For the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, to date, 83 building permits have been issued, with valuation recorded at $4,114,574. That's down nearly $968,000 from the $5,082,169 listed for the first six months of the 1985-1986 fiscal year, when 107 permits were issued.

For the current calendar year, beginning Jan. 1, department personnel have issued 28 building permits, with a total valuation listed at $2,139,459. A year ago 52 permits had been issued in the first quarter of the calendar year, with valuation recorded at $2,968,000, more than $828,000 above this year's comparable figures.

Department head David McKinney reported March permits included one single family dwelling with a valuation of $75,000; one commercial building, $225,000; three mobile homes, $14,500; two garages, $2,895; two alterations or additions to dwellings, $13,880; and two miscellaneous, no value listed.

The department collected $772 in building permit fees last month compared to $2,545 in March 1986. Fees for the current fiscal year period total $5,998 to date, down from the $8,804 collected in the same 1985-1986 period. For the current calendar year to date, $3,039 has been collected in building permit fees.

The city issued seven electrical permits last month for fees of $168. A year ago 14 permits were issued for $212 in fees, McKinney reported.

For the fiscal year to date, 69 electrical permits have been issued, with fees totaling $1,921. There were more permits issued in the first half of the previous fiscal year — 99 — but fees were less at $1,797. For the current calendar year, 24 permits have been issued for $392 in fees.

Fifteen plumbing permits were issued in March for fees of $167, down from the 38 permits and fees of $1,571 listed for last March.

Personnel have issued 216 plumbing permits in the first half of the current fiscal year, collecting fees of $3,366. In the same previous fiscal year period, fewer permits were issued — 197 — but fees were higher at $3,907, McKinney said. For the first quarter of the calendar year, 69 permits have been issued for $768 in fees.

In March, department personnel, including other city employees involved in a cross-training program, conducted 19 building inspections, 17 electrical, 33 plumbing, one mechanical and 89 miscellaneous. McKinney reported a total 159 inspections for the month, an average of 7.4 inspections each working day.

White Deer loser gives up challenge

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

WHITE DEER — Jayson Smith, who lost his chance for a White Deer-Skellytown school board seat by two votes Saturday, said he will neither seek a recount nor challenge the legality of the election.

Smith, 47, lost to incumbent Trustee John Kotara by a 226-224 margin in the Place 7 White Deer trustee race Saturday.

Smith threatened to challenge the election results Monday, maintaining the election was illegal because no private voting booths were set up at the polling places in White Deer and Skellytown. He asked the White Deer-Skellytown trustees Monday to "set a good example" and toss out the Place 7 election results.

The board took no action on Smith's challenge. And, according to election appeal procedure, the trustees probably couldn't have.

A spokeswoman for the Texas secretary of state's office said an election is not invalid or illegal simply because a polling place had no voting booths, as required by state election codes.

Sharon Hanko, director of legal services for the secretary of state's Election Division, said an election must be contested through district court. She said the loser must contend that he lost because officials counted illegal votes, kept qualified voters from voting, engaged in fraud or made a mistake, "which caused election returns not to reflect the true outcome of the election."

Smith said Wednesday that he is not going to bother appealing the election through district court.

"You can't spend all that money to go through district court to get a non-paying job," Smith said. "I'll just wait until the next election and file again."

N.Y. explosion kills at least six in tenement

NEW YORK (AP) — Rescue workers early today pulled a sixth body from the rubble of a small grocery and a tenement that disintegrated in an apparent natural gas explosion, raining bricks and plaster on nearly two dozen people.

Police and firefighters dug through the wreckage by hand to rescue several people, including a 2½-year-old boy, during the hectic moments after the blast in the South Bronx on Wednesday afternoon. One man was trapped, conscious and in great pain, under a steel beam for six hours until he could be saved.

Seventeen people were injured in the blast, and 12 rescue workers were injured during the search for survivors, authorities said. At least three of the injured

Septien confesses to molesting child

DENTON (AP) — Dallas Cowboys place-kicker Rafel Septien, in an about-face from his earlier insistence of innocence, admitted he had sexual contact with a child and was ordered to undergo psychiatric treatment as part of his 10-year probation.

Septien, 33, pleaded guilty Wednesday to a charge of indecency with a child Wednesday in exchange for the 10 years' deferred probation and a $2,000 fine.

The only evidence Assistant District Attorney Lee Gabriel presented was a signed confession by Septien, indicted Jan. 22 in the sexual assault of a 10-year-old friend of his roommate's daughter.

Septien was living with the friend while separated from his wife. He originally pleaded innocent to the charge, and was to have faced trial April 27 on a sexual assault charge.

That count was reduced to indecency with a child as part of the plea bargain.

The guilty plea was entered before State District Judge John Narsutis. The first year of Septien's sentence would be under intense supervision, but under deferred probation, the charge will not appear on his record if he follows the terms of his sentence.

"I am relieved that this matter has been resolved in the best interests of all parties. I am looking forward to making a positive contribution to the Cowboys and the community," Septien said.

"The matter has been resolved by the court, and he's still a member of the football team," Cow-

Fire report

The Pampa Fire Department reported no fire runs in the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

Celanese

Michael said there is a "slight show" of oil and gas deposits in the 3-mile radius surrounding the proposed disposal well site. He said no producing wells are in the area, but that three dry holes have been drilled.

"I believe there is no potential for oil and gas accumulation within the 3-mile radius of the injection well," Michael testified. "There's no one interested in drilling in that 3-mile area, and those that did found three dry holes."

But Smith, along with a dozen or so other surrounding landowners, said he fears the waste water "will someday wind up under my piece of property" and accused Celanese of already polluting the land under its plant.

"This is just a cover-up to hide this hazardous waste beneath our ground," Smith said of the proposal.

All landowners said in preliminary statements that they are primarily concerned with how the proposed project would affect their mineral rights. But each expressed some measure of concern for the Ogallala.

Kathleen Greene, wife of Gray County Commissioner Jim Greene, said the couple has two water wells on their property, near the proposed well site.

"Our grandchildren are the seventh generation that have been drinking water from this water source, and we want it to be there for a least another seven generations," Mrs. Greene said. Several of the landowners were expected to offer testimony today.

Hearing examiner Gordon also received public statements prior to the Celanese testimony. Speaking in behalf of the chemical firm were Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy, Pampa City Manager Bob Hart, Pampa Chamber of Commerce President Norman Knox and U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter's district representative, Ernie Houdashell.

They said Celanese has been a responsible member of the community.

Gordon said that, following today's testimony, he will have about six weeks to make his recommendation to the water commission. Both Celanese and the landowners will have a chance to file further objections prior to the commission's final ruling, he said.

Explosion

were undergoing surgery today.

Heavy machinery continued picking through the rubble of the one-story grocery store and vacant three-story apartment building today, but authorities said they believed they had found the last victim with the sixth body pulled out shortly after midnight.

A gas leak in the store was reported about 15 minutes before the blast, and Fire Commissioner Joseph Spinnato said natural gas probably caused the explosion. The utility Con Edison said it would investigate.

Uhuru Roper, 14, said he stepped out of the store just before it collapsed.

"All that happened was a big boom. Just a boom," he said. "I tried to move, but the contact just crushed me up against a car."

Then some rocks and pebbles started falling on me, and I couldn't get out. I was kicking for a little while, but then I just kind of passed out."

Roper was in stable condition in the intensive care unit at Lincoln Hospital this morning suffering from multiple injuries, a spokesman said.

"I saw some kids going into the store and the next thing you know it just blew up. It just collapsed," said Nicole Joseph, 18, who was walking by the store. "I couldn't even believe it because one minute the store was there and the next minute it was gone."

Five of the dead apparently were inside the store when it collapsed and the sixth was outside, authorities said.

Luis Lugo, 17, said he also had left the store and crossed the street when he heard a boom and turned to see "a rush of flames and smoke... The top of the store came up, it lifted off, and then it fell back down."

At least five people suffered burns from the flames, authorities said, but there was no fire to be extinguished.

Firefighter Nicholas Giordano crawled 25 feet through the rubble to find Norberto Luna, 24, of Roselle, N.J., a store employee who was trapped under a steel beam. While debris was removed, the firefighter talked to Luna about his "upcoming marriage, children, God, anything you want to talk about."

The firefighter said Luna, who was rescued six hours later, was "very aware of what was going on and was in a great deal of pain."

Luna was in stable condition with some broken bones and was awaiting surgery this morning, said Harlem Hospital spokesman C. Burton Jackson.

Officials blame lax security for penetrations at embassy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two lawmakers, just back from Moscow, today blamed the Soviets' apparent penetration of both the old and new U.S. embassies there on a lax American attitude and "a complacency toward security."

Asked on the NBC-TV "Today" show who was to blame for the security breaches, Rep. Olympia Snowe of Maine, the senior Republican on the House Foreign Affairs international operations subcommittee, said, "It's clear to me that everybody bears a substantial part of the blame as to what took place."

She and the panel's chairman, Rep. Daniel Mica, D-Fla., returned Wednesday from a three-day inspection of the current embassy in Moscow and the new $191 million diplomatic complex next door.

"It appears to us, based on our interviews again, that there was an erosion of security ethic and standard procedures and, as a result, I think created a very lax attitude and complacency toward security, which resulted in one of the most tragic and unfortunate events in the history of U.S. embassies," Snowe said.

Mica, interviewed with Snowe, discounted a report in today's editions of The Washington Post that the United States tried unsuccessfully in 1979 to implant bugging devices in apartment buildings at the new Soviet Embassy complex in Washington.

"Both sides have intelligence operations," Mica said. "The issue is that they tried and they succeeded, and they succeeded beyond our wildest imagination."

A security expert said in a separate interview that the United States is far behind the Soviet Union in detection systems. William Sharek of CCS Inc. in Port Chester, N.Y., also said he believes the new U.S. Embassy can never be made completely free of listening devices.

In Moscow today, Foreign Ministry officials charged that U.S. agents had bugged Soviet diplomatic missions and housing in the United States, creating "intolerable conditions" for Soviets.

Settlement bans dancing at club

DALLAS (AP) — For 15 days, dancing in a trendy Dallas nightclub will be against the law because of a negotiated settlement of charges that the place was a haven for blatant drug use, authorities say.

The ban on dancing at the Starck spans eight business days and comes after the nightclub agreed to pay a $10,500 fine on the drug use charges, city officials said Wednesday.

boys President and General Manager Tex Schramm said.

"The court has made its ruling and, hopefully, the matter is now closed," Coach Tom Landry said in a statement.

Gabriel said during the hearing Wednesday morning that the victim's family told lawyers for both sides it was "their desire to resolve the case in this manner."

"They wanted a public confession of his guilt, which is what they got today," she added.

The victim's mother expressed compassion for Septien, but said she wanted him to acknowledge his guilt.

"We wanted it to be clear to the public that he was guilty, that we were not just trying to make trouble for him," said the mother, a former neighbor and friend of the football player.

Septien, as part of the terms of his probation, was ordered to avoid alcoholic beverages and notify the probation office the first and third Tuesday of each month beginning April 14. He also must undergo psychiatric treatment.

A Mexican native who has not obtained U.S. citizenship, Septien joined the Cowboys in 1978 after attending Southwest Louisiana.

He was the 10th-round draft choice of the New Orleans Saints in 1977, but was released in training camp and signed by the Los Angeles Rams. He was later released by the Rams after the final preseason game of 1978 and was immediately signed by the Cowboys as a free agent.

The White Deer school and city elections were held Saturday at the White Deer High School gymnasium lobby. Skellytown elections were held at Skellytown Elementary School. White Deer ISD Superintendent Tom Harkley said that while portable cardboard privacy shields were in stock, none were set up. Instead, tables were set up at either end of the lobby.

The State Election Code requires private voting booths at all elections and dictates the dimensions of each voting booth. However, there are no criminal penalties for not having voting booths. Smith said he decided the issue wasn't worth the effort "when you have to go through court to prove a law."

"That to me seems like a failure in the system," Smith said. "It keeps the lawyers in business. But they'll make no money out of me."

Smith said he'll keep his options open for the April 1988 election. "Being a school person all my life, I'll stay in touch," Smith said.

Senate disconnects deregulation of AT&T

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has disconnected a bill to free AT&T Communications' long-distance service in Texas from state regulation.

The AT&T bill that was finally sent to the House on 16-15 voice vote was so cut up by amendments that sponsor John Montford was not sure what was left.

Montford, D-Lubbock, acknowledged that an amendment by Sen. Hugh Parmer had blocked his attempt to achieve total deregulation for AT&T but he said, "It's a step forward, I think."

"It (the bill) first of all focuses attention on the issue," Montford said, but he added, "I've got to analyze the Parmer limitations ..."

AT&T is the only regulated long-distance telephone company in Texas, and Montford said in debate that "what we have here is not a level playing field."

US Sprint, MCI and about 160 other phone companies set their own rates and pick whom they serve and what services are offered, but Sen. Chet Edwards said those 160 companies include small operations that sell answering services and mobile phones.

Edwards, D-Duncanville, said AT&T had long-distance revenues last year of $19.1 billion and held 80 percent to 100 percent of the market in many rural areas of Texas.

Montford acknowledged that an amendment by Sen. Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth, had blocked his attempt to achieve total deregulation for AT&T and said he was not sure he would support the amended bill, which was sent to the House on voice vote.

"I would have a hard time in total defense because of the Parmer amendment, but I'm not ruling it out," he said.

AT&T executive Tom Jones described the amended version of the bill as "regressive" and said, "We're in worse shape than we were."

The amendment by Parmer, D-Fort Worth, states that "dominant carriers" — as AT&T has been identified — would be subject to regulation by the Public Utility Commission in applying for a rate increase.

AT&T could lower its rates without PUC regulation, but the commission would have authority to set a "just and reasonable rate" if it appeared a lower proposed rate would be "anti-competitive or reflect monopolistic pricing that would be anti-competitive."

Another amendment would call on the PUC to hold hearings this year on whether AT&T still dominates the long-distance market and yet another would reinstate PUC regulation of AT&T if the company is found to engage in price-fixing, abandon rural service or engage in "preferential or discriminatory activities."

Montford said Sen. Eddie Bernice Johnson's unexpected vote for the Parmer amendment was the key to its approval.

Just before the vote on the amendment was announced, Parmer tracked Ms. Johnson, D-Dallas, to the front of the Senate chamber and spoke with her for several moments.

"She was subject to a lot of pressure, and I simply told her she ought to do what she had told me she was going to do," Parmer said.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, said he first was asked by AT&T to sponsor the deregulation bill.

"This is the No. 1 worst bill I've seen since I've been in the Legislature," said Glasgow, who added he had broken with the company after carrying "every AT&T bill on the Senate floor since 1981."

"I do not believe the FCC (Federal Communications Commission) would consider this bill much more than toilet paper," Glasgow said.

Nebraska is the only state to approve deregulation of AT&T, but was enjoined by court order from putting it into effect, Parmer said.

Clements concerned over DOE nuclear waste dump selection

WASHINGTON (AP) — More Texas firepower has been mustered to halt the Energy Department's site-selection process for the nation's first high-level nuclear waste dump.

On Wednesday, Rep. Larry Combest of Lubbock announced that Texas Gov. Bill Clements joined the delegation in asking Congress to review the way DOE carried out its search for the waste repository.

"I'm glad to see the governor asking for the same things we've been asking for for the past year and a half," Combest said. "If we have to delay for two or three or 10 years a project that will be used to store materials for 10,000 years, then so be it."

In a letter to the Republican congressman, with copies sent to the entire delegation, Clements called for a probe into the Nuclear Waste Policy Act program and a halt to virtually all of its activities, including land acquisition.

"The entire Nuclear Waste Policy Act program should be reviewed by a congressionally appointed body over the next two years, and then appropriate action taken by the Congress to get the nation on a technically sound and reasonable track toward meeting our needs for safe and acceptable high-level nuclear waste management and disposal," the Republican governor wrote.

Three sites have been chosen by President Reagan for possible location of the nuclear waste dump, including Deaf Smith County in Combest's district. The others are Yucca Mountain, Nev., and Hanford Reservation, Washington.

El Paso bans street hawkers

EL PASO (AP) — An ordinance making it illegal for vendors to sell items, including newspapers, on street corners is drawing opposition from various sources, including some members of the El Paso City Council.

An attorney who is researching the matter says the ban may be unconstitutional because it includes newspaper vendors.

City Council voted Wednesday 4-2 to pass the ordinance, saying numerous complaints had been received about the safety of vendors at intersections. Council members who favored the measure said they were also concerned about the health of the vendors, especially children, who stand in the traffic for hours breathing exhaust fumes.

Council member Alicia Chacon, who voted against the measure, said council member may have had other motives.

"They're not saying that's why ... (but) they are concerned with the image of the city," said Ms. Chacon.

Tony Ponce, another council member who voted against the ordinance, said it will put many adults out of work in a city where the unemployment rate is more than 11 percent. Youths who sell by the roadside also will be denied pocket money and lessons in enterprise, he said Wednesday.

"I was a newspaper boy and a shoeshine boy," said Ponce. "It's a springboard to the American dream."

Richard Munzinger, who represents the El Paso

Times Inc., said the ordinance may violate rights under the First Amendment to the Constitution, which guarantees freedom of the press.

"This ordinance does not distinguish between newspaper sales and other sales, and the law does," Munzinger said in a story published in Wednesday editions of the Times.

Attorney Carl Green, who represents El Paso Herald-Post newspaper, said the constitutionality of the ordinance is "a close question."

"Obviously the municipality will assert they have legitimate authority to regulate the streets," said Green.

"At the same time there are definitely First Amendment issues that are raised by the absolute prohibition of any type of vendors, especially if it relates to newspaper vendors," he added.

Ponce said he knew of no fatalities involving street vendors and did not think they were endangered by traffic.

"I was a messenger boy for Western Union and I was out there hustling in traffic every day," said Ponce. "Nothing ever happened to me. My bicycle was stolen one time, but that was it."

Last month, city officials in neighboring Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, banned street vendors who approach motorists on bridges across the Rio Grande and tourists on the streets. The reasoning was that the vendors were detrimental that city's image.

House advances job safety bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A LaMarque lawmaker has won House backing for a bill he says will reduce Texas' on-the-job death rate, the nation's highest.

Rep. Lloyd Criss' bill won preliminary approval with no opposition in a non-record vote Wednesday. It could come up today for final approval, which would send it to the Senate.

The measure would require the State Board of Insurance to scrutinize accident-prevention programs offered by insurance companies that sell workers' compensation coverage.

The insurance board also would be allowed to hire at least five inspectors to check job sites and accident-prevention programs.

Also Wednesday, the House voted preliminary approval to bills that would:

- Exempt people under 17 and over 65 from fishing license requirements.
- Require hospitals to set up a system for identifying potential organ donors.
- Allow possession of drugs by people who train drug-detecting animals.
- Require the Texas Department of Corrections to set up a treatment program for sex offenders.
- Require all state aircraft, except those used for law enforcement, to be marked with the Texas state seal.
- Allow judges to order DWI offenders to install breath-analysis machines in their cars.

The bill won backing from the Texas AFL-CIO and the Association of Fire and Casualty Companies in Texas. Criss said many business groups also back the bill.

"The cost will be, per business, 85 cents per year.

And they're willing to pay it. That's a cup of coffee and a doughnut," Criss told the House.

Federal statistics show an average of 776 deaths a year at Texas jobsites from 1980 to 1984, the nation's highest rate.

Current Texas law requires insurance companies to provide accident-prevention programs, but it contains no state enforcement provisions.

The fishing license bill, already approved in the Senate, sparked more than an hour of debate. The measure makes it legal for people under 17 and over 65 to fish without a license. Under current law, they must get a license, but the $8 annual fee is waived.

House sponsor Jack Harris, R-Pearland, said it costs the state about $286,000 a year to issue fishing licenses to people who do not have to pay the fee.

The measure was approved on a non-record vote, and faces a final vote that could send it to Gov. Bill Clements.

The organ-donor bill also is a Senate-approved measure. It won preliminary House approval in a non-record vote.

The measure is aimed at making sure relatives of people who die are told about the potential use of organs from the deceased. Hospitals would be required to have an appropriately trained person who would ask about organ donations.

Rep. Terral Smith, R-Austin, won preliminary approval, in a non-record vote, for his drug possession bill. It allows trainers of drug-detecting animals to possess drugs, including marijuana, for use in the training.

And still more on radio chatter

Off Beat

By Larry Hollis

You'd have thought Dan Murray was back in town angering some provincialized Panhandle residents.

And what was this great alleged sin leading to outpourings of rage against my ignorance?

Apparently I confused CB radio interference with that of amateur radio. (See my column of March 26).

You'd think I had suggested Pampa residents go shopping in Amarillo or skinny-dipping at a Baptist youth camp.

One letter writer — who, though he asked for his name to be withheld, is actually a good friend of mine — suggested I had written the column deliberately to get a rise out of ham radio operators. Well, while such an aim would not be out of scope for me, I actually just made an honest mistake.

One phone caller, who later wrote a letter to the editor, called up and chastized me for my mistake, claiming it was a direct slam at all good, upright, law-obeying ham radio operators. She left out God, Motherhood and Country, but that's because I hung up on her before she had the chance. She was so intent on rattling against my error that she wasn't even rationally interested in hearing my side. And if no one's interested in a dialog, I won't permit a diatribe to waste my time.

To set the facts straight, I honestly, truly assumed the interference on my stereo set was coming from a shortwave radio. (And, yes, I know not all shortwave radio operators are ham radio aficionados.) For one thing, the operator kept referring to towers.

Now I know "a little" about ham radios — I'm not completely educated about the systems just because I covered some ham radio exercise 15 or 20 years ago. And one of the things I know is that shortwave radios generally use towers for the radio transmissions. So when the operator kept talking about the towers, it surely sounded to me like he was referring to a shortwave system.

Another caller, when I tried to explain that to him, said I should not assume anything, suggesting

I should have checked the facts out before reporting it. Well, for one, I wasn't "reporting" it. I was just using the situation, one occurring in a personal experience, to write a column. Whether it was a ham radio or a CB or a short in someone's electric razor was irrelevant to the purpose of the column.

And since it was only a column, not a factual article or a news feature, I was not "obligated" to check the facts out. These columns are not always factual in nature; they allow for opinions, reactions, emotional displays, even just ramblings. Even fiction. Read Grizzard and Harvey and you'll see what I mean.

With my March 26 column, I was doing just that — reacting to the frustration of not being able to tape because someone's rambling radio ravings were interfering with my night.

For some reasons, too many people seem to think reporters are supposed to be omniscient. I don't know why that is so. After all, we're only human, too. We certainly don't expect our public to be all-knowing. I don't go screaming at someone just because he told me he enjoyed my "editorial" when he actually meant my "column." Nor do I go on a rampage when someone assumes I'm the staff photographer just because I sometimes use my own camera to take a photograph for the newspaper.

Now, I do get a little rattled when someone thinks my job is only a form of typing. If I were only a typist, I'd be a secretary. (And, no, that is not a slam at secretaries. I have a great respect for many secretaries, who have to spend much of their time correcting their bosses' ignorances.)

In short, my so-called ignorance was just a small mistake. It's not like I was accusing ham radio operators of being subversive commies, though you might have thought I had done just that.

And though amateur radio operators may think otherwise, I generally admire them. It takes a lot of study and work and skill to become a licensed operator. And most — certainly not all, but most — are professionals, as much as a hobby can be a profession. Their usefulness in disaster situations, such as the recent blizzard, are too often unheralded.

But to assume that all ham radio operators never abuse their privileges or equipment is like assuming that all politicians are honest just because they have received the trust of the public in being elected to office. (Nor should amateur radio operators or anyone else assume that all CB'ers engage in the inane conversations I recorded.)

So, I'm sorry I may have upset a few amateur radio operators who overreacted to my mistake. But that's all I apologize for in the column.

U.S. citizens pay for trade barriers

It must seem simple to the politicians. The United States has a bigger economy than any of its Pacific Rim trading partners. And our economy is less dependent on trade than Japan, South Korea, or Taiwan. So we can safely indulge in retaliatory measures, even though that would damage both trade and the U.S. economy. Our large economy can better absorb the shocks of a trade war than theirs can, so eventually they will knuckle under. We can shoot ourselves in the foot because we'll still have nine toes left. Our politicians can posture about saving American industries and jobs.

How much longer will the American people be gulled into supporting economic warfare against political allies when the warfare is financed almost solely by U.S. consumers? The politicians act as if the people will never wise up.

The U.S. Senate unanimously called for retaliatory action against Japanese semiconductor makers for violating a pact pushed down their throats last July. The pact itself was aimed almost solely at making semiconductors more expensive in the United States, and it has done serious damage to the domestic U.S. computer industry. The sensible step would be to repeal the agreement, but our politicians prefer to "stand tough" and damage U.S. consumers.

The Japanese are accused of "dumping" microchips at below cost on the overseas market. When advocates of controls talk about dumping, they usually mean a sinister effort to grab dominance in an industry by selling below-cost for awhile, the better to drive competitors out of business and reap monopolistic profits later. Never mind that such tactics are seldom tried in real life because they seldom work. The theoretical scenario sounds scary and sinister enough to get the pot boiling.

In fact, most observers agree that what happened with Japanese semiconductor manufacturers is more akin to your neighborhood grocery store overstocking tomatoes and having to sell them at whatever price it can get. Rapid increases in production capacity coincided with several years of unexpectedly slow sales to create price competition. This was a boon to consumers — many of them U.S. manufacturers who use semiconductors and provide U.S. jobs — but the U.S. government seems to regard low prices for Americans as the ultimate evil.

Clifford Winston, an economist with the Brookings Institution, has completed a study documenting that limits on Japanese auto sales in the United States have cost thousands of U.S. jobs and motivated the Japanese to set up manufacturing shops in this country.

U.S. consumers also paid about $12 billion more for autos than they would have without the controls.

Washington is abuzz this year with "competitiveness." You'd think that even a politician could learn that you get more competitive by competing, not by being protected from competition. But apparently in Washington, the only way you can get away with committing common sense is by speaking anonymously.

James J. Kilpatrick

Name the capital of Maine

WASHINGTON — Let us hear it for Bill Bradley, the senior senator from New Jersey! The hooray is not for his prospective candidacy for the White House, though the Democrats couldn't do much better. Neither is this a cheer for his uncommon good sense in matters of taxation. Let's hear it for Bradley's resolution to declare "Geography Awareness Week."

That's right. The long tall gentleman from Denville wants to set aside the week of November 15-21 to direct national attention toward the revival of a subject that has all but disappeared from most of our public schools. He came to the floor of the Senate on March 17 loaded with depressing news.

He cited, by way of example, a survey taken in January of 5,000 high school seniors in eight major cities. Brace yourself. Twenty-five percent of the students tested in Dallas could not identify the country that borders the United States on the south. In Boston, 39 percent of the students could not name the six New England states.

Brace yourself, again. In Baltimore, 45 percent of those tested could not respond correctly to this instruction: "On the attached map, shade in the area where the United States is located." Nearly half of the students in Hartford could not name even three countries in Africa. Forty percent of those in Kansas City could not name three countries in South America.

Bradley had another survey, this one taken by the University of North Carolina in 1984. This was a survey not of high school seniors, but of college students. Fewer than half of them, when asked to identify the two largest states, could name Texas and Alaska. Almost 80 percent couldn't think of the two smallest states.

The senator had even gloomier tidings to report. He cited two surveys by The New York Times, one taken in 1950, the other in 1984. Thirty-seven years ago, 84 percent of the college students knew that Manila was the capital of the Philippines. In 1984, only 27 percent responded correctly. Almost 70 percent of these students could not name even one country in Africa between the Sahara and South Africa. The situation grows worse, not better.

Said Bradley: "This news is not only shocking; it is frightening. We depend on a well-informed populace to maintain the democratic ideals which have made our country great. When 95 percent of some of our brightest college students cannot locate Vietnam on a world map, we must sound the alarm. We cannot expect to be a world leader if our populace doesn't even know who the rest of the world is!"

Amen to all that, and again, amen. Fifty or 60 years ago, when some of us were ploughing through the public schools, we got great chunks of geography. We had whole books on the subject — fascinating books, filled with pictures of exotic lands. We learned about the Tigris and the Euphrates, about rice in China and coffee in Brazil and windmills in the Netherlands. We colored maps. For some reason, France was always blue. The first time I flew to Paris, and looked out the window, I confidently expected to see an azure landscape down below. It was mostly green, which was the color for Peru.

As I recall, we concentrated at one point on North America. This must have been about the fifth grade. The textbook offered Mexicans in serapes and sombreros, Eskimos in fur hats beside improbable igloos. We had to memorize the state capitals, and some of these were tough. Remembering the capital of Washington, Kentucky and North Dakota wasn't easy.

Geography was a wonderful subject! I don't know that we ever got deeply into economic geography, but we learned a good deal about people and places. Some of it was trivial: Name a mountainous country famed for yodeling. Some of it made an impact: Why is the Mississippi muddy, and what does this tell us of soil erosion?

Bradley is right when he warns that the decline of geography in our schools will have serious consequences in years to come. The globe dwindles. The planet shrinks. I was 6 years old when Lindbergh flew to France. It seemed an unbelievable adventure. Now the unbelievable becomes routine. Satellites and supersonic planes have turned strangers into neighbors. Our children and grandchildren ought to get to know them better.

Bradley's awareness week may get no more attention than most of the special weeks beloved of Congress, but if his resolution prompts even a few states into restoring geography to its old eminence, the effort will be worthwhile. What are the principal crops of Mexico? If our kids don't know, they ought to find out.

Fudd for press secretary

I've had some goofy ideas in the past, and maybe this is another one, but I would like to see Jimmy Carter back in the White House in 1988.

There are a number of reasons I feel this way: 1. Jimmy Carter has been president before. It would be nice to have a president who has presidential experience.

I think Carter knows what he did wrong when he was in the Oval Office before and that he wouldn't make the same mistakes again.

2. I'm not overly excited about any of the others who have been mentioned as presidential possibilities for 1988.

I don't like Gary Hart or George Bush, and Bob Dole strikes me as maybe having a mean streak.

I have a suspicion that Jack Kemp uses extra-hold hair spray, and I simply can't see the United States with a president named Babbitt.

Can you? Imagine Barbara Walters interviewing him:

"Pwesident Bwabbutt. . . Who would Pwesident Bwabbutt get for his press secretary? Elmer Fudd?"

3. In retrospect, Jimmy Carter didn't do as bad a job as president as we thought when we picked Ronald Reagan over him in 1980.

■ He got Israel and Egypt to kiss and make up.

■ He didn't order the invasion of a single Caribbean island.

■ He championed human rights.

■ And, as far as we know, he didn't sleep through a single crisis.

4. I realize this may not be that sound a reason to want a certain individual to be president, but Jimmy Carter gives good White House parties, too.

I was invited to the Carter White House for dinner, and later, I was invited to the Reagan White House for dinner.

I had a nice time on both occasions, but I must admit I felt a lot more at home at the Carter affair.

The Carter party took place in the backyard of the White House. They served barbecue and beer, and you didn't have to wear a tie.

The entertainment was Willie Nelson. I never will forget sitting there, as the moon hovered over the Washington Monument, hearing Willie, sing, "Precious Memories."

It was a religious experience.

The Reagan party was much fancier. The ladies wore evening dresses, and the men came in tuxedos, and Henry Kissinger's wife dumped her cigarette ashes on the floor during the pre-dinner cocktail party.

I have nothing against the cello, nor anybody who plays one, but in a crisis I think I would prefer a Willie Nelson man making important decisions to someone who would invite a cellist to dinner.

If Jimmy Carter became president again, I think his brother Billy would be more than happy to wait in the truck this time.

Elmer Fudd simply has no place in politics.

New generation hits the streets in protest

By Sarah Overstreet

There are those who say protest is dead among the present generation of young people. (These are the same those who believe they were the first to protest behavior that contradicted the ethics they learned in Sunday school, confirmation class, Hebrew school — ethics they thought their elders merely gave lip service to. They are also the same those who said they'd never demean future generations by saying, "In my day....")

A glance through daily newspapers lately has to tell them they're wrong. There are young people all over the country who are responding to an injustice happening far from their safe world of parents who made sure their children had more than they had when they were growing up. These children are responding not to a war that to injustices that make America the privilege of one race. They are responding to something happening across the world from them in South Africa, to people they most likely will never meet.

They are young people building "shanty towns" all over American campuses to protest apartheid. Some of them have gone to jail for their beliefs. One of them is former President Carter's daughter, Amy. Another is a former student of mine, a nice kid that everyone liked when he was a seventh grader at Ozark Middle School in Ozark, Mo., in 1974.

When I saw his name in an Associated Press story about apartheid protest at the University of Missouri-Columbia, I called him to ask what in the devil was going on. His answer was pretty simple: He and a group of other students had been following politics

They took special interest in Central America and South Africa, and considered it their duty to protest actions they considered illegal or immoral. They abhor the University of Missouri's financial holdings in companies linked to South Africa.

I asked him where he picked up his social conscience. Mine came from spending summers in the South, seeing dual lines every place there were nice things to have like bathrooms, drinking fountains and Dairy Queens: one line for whites, one for "coloreds." No, he didn't come by his social conscience like I did mine. He didn't have to be slapped in the face with it, to face friends who couldn't go the places I could.

"My father always discussed those things with us," he told me. "Dad was always interested in politics and always told us about what was going on in the world. I just came by it naturally."

He arranged for me to talk to other students active in apartheid protests. They told me of taking "non-violent resistance" training from someone who had been active in the civil rights movement under Martin Luther King. They were ready to go to jail for what they believed, although they wondered practically how their actions would affect their "permanent records," the same accountings that scared us back in the 1960s.

One of these students told me, "It's not that your generation doesn't care anymore. People get tired. They start having families and building careers and they want to hand the torch to the new generation."

Watch the wire services. After a short recess so we could all catch our breath, the new generation is taking up the challenge.

House Democrats confident their budget plan will prevail

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is poised to reject President Reagan's budget for one of its own, a Democratic vision of fiscal 1988 with less military spending, stronger domestic programs and higher taxes than Reagan says he'll allow.

In a series of votes today, the House will consider the president's $1 trillion plan before voting on the Democratic spending blueprint. Congress' majority party was confident of victory.

"I think the choice is clear," Rep. William H. Gray III, chairman of the House Budget Committee, said Wednesday as a day of prickly partisan debate closed. "We have, I believe, a budget that represents a consensus. It is balanced and fair."

House Republicans, who refused to help Democrats draft the spending plan and declined to offer a comprehensive package of their own, ridiculed the result.

"This is just another tax and spend budget," said Rep. Delbert L. Latta of Ohio, the Budget Committee's senior Republican. The sharp reduction in Reagan's Pentagon spending request would "totally wreck our defenses," possibly forcing 100,000 to 300,000 soldiers out of the armed forces, he said.

The Democratic plan claims to reduce the deficit next year by $38 billion, but fails by congressional estimates to meet the $108 billion deficit limit of the Gramm-Rudman law. Adopting Reagan's more optimistic economic scenarios, which show Treasury revenues rising strongly with the economy even without tax boosts, Democrats claimed they met the targets as the president did.

The House plan includes a call for $18 billion in new taxes and more than $3 billion from fees on users of government services and increased tax enforcement. Reagan's budget, in contrast, contained less than a third that much in tax revenues, mostly through small technical changes in the law, and relied heavily on selling government assets to raise money.

Reagan has promised to veto any tax increase. His budget director, James C. Miller III, has said Democrats were slashing defense to "blackmail" the president into changing his mind on taxes.

The Democratic plan would limit defense spending to $281.7 billion next year, about $15 billion less than the president's plan. New military budget authority, which covers spending commitments that stretch through multiple fiscal years, would be held to $288.7 billion, $23 billion under Reagan's request.

While the president's figures would give the military a 3 percent increase above inflation, the House would make the Pentagon absorb rising costs to maintain current operations.

The military spending cut would be about $9 billion under the level needed to meet anticipated costs, and the Democrats pared a similar amount from the domestic side of the ledger.

Most of the domestic belt-tightening came from freezing programs at current levels. And while the plan envisions pay increases for federal workers, it does not provide money to cover them in most cases.

Furthermore, about $2 billion of the domestic "cuts" actually would be user fees to offset costs of federal services.

Other features of the Democratic plan include:

- Full cost-of-living increases for Social Security and other retirees, also provided by the president's plan.
- Rejection of Reagan's plan to scrap or curtail sharply urban and rural development grants.
- An increase in education spending by $2 billion, instead of the administration's proposal to reduce it.
- An increase in spending on selected programs including trade, job training, health, the homeless and nutrition.
- A sharp curtailment of the president's request for foreign aid spending.

Justice, FBI concerned about North early on, Webster says

WASHINGTON (AP) — An inquiry by Attorney General Edwin Meese III that showed possible diversion of funds to Nicaraguan rebels is under scrutiny again after it was disclosed the Justice Department and the FBI earlier raised questions about activities of Oliver L. North.

Meese launched his inquiry last Nov. 21, rejecting an offer of assistance from FBI Director William Webster and using a few trusted political aides to assist him instead of the department's career criminal attorneys.

By the time the Meese probe turned into a formal criminal investigation on Nov. 26, documents crucial to the inquiry had been destroyed or altered, government investigators have said.

Last Oct. 30, a memo based on conversations between a Justice Department official and the FBI speculated that North, the fired National Security Council deputy who now is a central figure in the investigation into alleged diversion of funds to the Contra rebels, could face criminal investigation for his activities in Central America.

Details about the memo were released Wednesday by Webster and the Senate Intelligence Committee at Webster's confirmation hearing to become CIA director.

The FBI asked the Justice Department for guidance on whether to release some classified material to North. Mary Lawton, head of the department's office of intelligence policy and review, recommended in a conversation with an FBI agent that the information be withheld from North, according to sources close to the matter who spoke only on condition they not be identified.

The memo shows that Lawton pointed out news accounts saying a number of congressmen had asked that an independent counsel be appointed to investigate the private aid network to the Contras and that North might come under criminal investigation. She also pointed out that the information North was seeking already was in the public domain.

Webster told the committee he had read the Oct. 30 FBI memo, initiated it and then forgot about it. He did not press Meese to use FBI agents in the weekend inquiry three weeks later, testified Webster.

Intelligence committee member Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., questioned the FBI director closely, asking whether the Oct. 30 memo didn't represent a "red light" that should have drawn the attention of the FBI.

Study supports new chemical approach for cancer therapy

BOSTON (AP) — Natural chemicals that boost the body's built-in vigilance against disease may provide a powerful new weapon in the war on cancer, but researchers caution that this promising field is still in its infancy.

In a report published today, doctors from the National Cancer Institute followed up their first highly publicized study on the use of the chemicals with more results to bolster their early optimism.

Dr. Vincent T. DeVita Jr., head of the cancer institute, said the new approach appears to be the most promising treatment available for spreading stages of kidney cancer and malignant melanoma, a lethal skin disease.

But at the same time, experts say many important questions remain unanswered about the new approach, which uses the hormone interleukin-2 in a treatment called adoptive immunotherapy.

"We have in front of us all the same things that were in front of the people who first got a response out of cancer chemotherapy" in 1945, said Dr. John R.

Durant of the Fox Chase Cancer Center in Philadelphia.

"Now we've got to figure out why it works, who it's going to work in, how to make it better, what's going to happen when it's mixed with other treatments, how to make it safer, how to make it cheaper."

The therapy uses interleukin-2 to turn ordinary white blood cells into natural killer cells, which seek and destroy cancer. Dr. Steven A. Rosenberg and colleagues at the cancer institute found that nearly a quarter of patients with advanced cancer at least partially respond to the experimental therapy.

Using the body's own disease-fighting powers to stop cancer "is an idea that has been around as long as chemotherapy," said Dr. David Parkinson of New England Medical Center. "But this is the first time that reproducible cancer responses have been seen. And it means the beginning of a new arm to cancer therapy in addition to chemotherapy, radiation and surgery."

Air traffic control mistakes up 18 percent in early 1987

WASHINGTON (AP) — Air traffic control miscues that resulted in planes coming closer than federal regulations permit soared by 18 percent during the first three months of the year, the Federal Aviation Administration says.

The increase is of special concern because it followed a decline in such errors during the last three months of 1986, an FAA official said.

Senior FAA officials, perplexed by the increase, said they are looking further into why controllers committed 313 "operational errors" during the first quarter of 1987, compared with 264 during the same period a year ago.

"It's an indication that we should be concerned," Keith Potts, associate administrator for air traffic control, said in a telephone interview Wednesday night. "It doesn't mean the sky is falling."

But he said the Jan. 1-March 26 figures caught his attention also because in the last quarter of 1986 operational errors declined by 6 percent when compared with the same period a year earlier.

"They (operational errors) had been down. That's why I was concerned," said Potts, who is the FAA's top air traffic control official.

FAA Administrator Donald Engen was expected to be questioned today about the jump in controller errors in an appearance before a House subcommittee that is looking into the agency's handling of near-collision reports.

"Operational errors and near mid-air collision reports are indicators of system safety," said Rep. James Oberstar, D-Minn., chairman of the Public Works and Transportation Committee panel.

Last year there were 839 near-collisions reported, about 40 percent involving at least one commercial aircraft and half involving incidents in which planes came within 500 feet of each other. In 114 cases the two aircraft reportedly came within 100 feet, according to the FAA.

Operational errors by controllers often do not involve a direct threat of two aircraft colliding. An operational error is automatically recorded whenever controllers allow two aircraft, both of which are being tracked by radar, to come within 5 miles horizontally and 1,000 feet vertically of each other.

Some safety experts argue the number of operational errors serves as an indicator of how well the overall air traffic control system is working.

Potts noted the sharp increase in controller errors in his recorded weekly telephone message to controllers around the country. He said the agency had hoped to reduce operational errors by 2 percent, but instead saw them jump 18 percent.

The message also gave some insight into what causes such errors:

An FAA study of 1,400 operational errors, some dating back to 1985, showed 27 percent were the result of a breakdown in coordination, 26 percent on misreading radar information and 21 percent because of human failures in communications.

The review also revealed that operational errors often occurred in late afternoon, especially around 3 p.m. and 5 p.m. local time, and that a large percentage occurred when controllers were fresh on the job and traffic was relatively light.

"A majority occur during the first 15 to 30 minutes" that a controller is at the radar screen, and the chance of an error occurring appears to drop significantly after the controller has been working 1½ hours, Potts said.

About 70 percent of the errors at en-route control centers and 53 percent of the errors at airport towers occurred when the controller was handling five or fewer planes, and 76 percent of all errors occurred when the controller was responsible for 10 or fewer aircraft, the FAA study showed.

Security expert says Moscow embassy may never be bug free

WASHINGTON (AP) — A security expert familiar with the ways nations eavesdrop on one another believes the U.S. Embassy in Moscow never can be made completely free of listening devices.

"If you peel off the skin of the building, you are going to lift away a lot of bugs," said William Sharek of CCS Inc. in Port Chester, N.Y. "But it would be too early to pat ourselves on the back. We are talking about a high security installation and 99 percent certainty is not certain enough."

Sharek, whose firm does security sweeps for foreign embassies in Europe and elsewhere, said the United States is far behind the Soviet Union in detection systems and that it is using World War II tools to fight a high tech surveillance war.

"People ought to be aware that when we talk about cleaning up that building, we are not talking about taking out a few bugs or transmitters," he said. "The use of transmitters is a 20-year-old surveillance process. We've gone way beyond that."

Emergence from ruins

(AP Laserphoto)

Palestinians trapped in the hunger-ridden refugee camp of Chatilla in Moslem west Beirut emerge from the ruins of their shell-devastated shacks to see the sun Thursday, after Syrian troops deployed around the shantytown to ease a five-month-old starvation siege by Shiite Moslem militiamen.

Top industrial nations supporting dollar, trying to head off trade war

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top finance officials of the world's seven major industrial powers are sending out another message of solidarity in an effort to halt a 26-month slide in the value of the dollar and head off a threatened trade war.

Finance ministers and central bank leaders of the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Canada and Italy issued a statement Wednesday announcing an extension of an agreement reached Feb. 22 in Paris that was designed to bring stability to currency exchange rates.

The Paris agreement has been tested severely in recent days as the dollar has fallen to new lows against the Japanese yen amid rising concerns of a possible U.S.-Japan trade war and persistent worries over sluggish worldwide economic growth.

On the Tokyo Foreign Exchange Market, the dollar opened today at 145.20 yen, down from Wednesday's close of 145.63 yen. The financial meetings are being held in conjunction with this week's meetings of the 15-nation International Monetary Fund and its sister organization, the World Bank.

In addition to trade squabbles between the United States and Japan, officials of West Germany have complained that the Reagan administration is pressuring that country to do more than is possible to boost worldwide economic growth.

In the one-page communique issued after a day of private meetings at the Treasury Department, the seven countries said much progress had been made in promoting worldwide economic growth but that more remains to be done to "resist rising protectionist pressures, sustain global economic expansion and reduce trade imbalances."

The participants at the meeting, hosted by Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III and Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, were upbeat in their assessment of the discussions.

Japanese Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa said he was pleased with the new agreement and noted that his country was singled out for praise in unveiling the day before a new $34.5 billion package of economic stimulus measures.

The Paris agreement, which many analysts had suggested was not working, "is alive and well," French Finance Minister Edouard Balladur told reporters after the session.

However, private analysts were not as enthusiastic.

Soviets claim United States is bugging Russian missions

MOSCOW (AP) — Foreign Ministry officials charged today that U.S. agents bugged Soviet diplomatic missions and housing in the United States, creating "intolerable conditions" for Soviets.

The officials displayed items that looked like pencils and hair brushes and said they were listening devices planted on Soviet property in the United States. They said the devices were found recently but did not say when.

The Soviets called a news conference in response to U.S. allegations that Soviet agents penetrated the U.S. Embassy in Moscow and compromised security there.

The Soviet Union has denied the allegations, maintaining the United States is trying to "poison the atmosphere" for next week's visit of Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

The U.S. campaign "plays into the hands of the extreme right which is opposed to normal relations with the Soviet Union," Foreign Ministry spokesman Boris Pyadyshv told the news conference.

Pyadyshv said the bugs planted by American agents created "intolerable conditions for work and life" of Soviets in the United States.

I.N. Miroshkin, a representative of the Foreign Ministry's security service, said bugs had been found in the Soviet Embassy in Washington, the adjoining residential complex, the Soviet mission to the United Nations in New York, and the consulate in San Francisco.

Miroshik said some listening devices were found in rooftop beams and cables that were part of surveillance equipment were found concealed near windows.

He also said several listening devices were found buried six feet deep in the foundation of the San Francisco consulate.

The Soviets also have found listening devices in the master television antenna of the housing complex for the Soviet mission to the United Nations, the Soviet officials said.

On Wednesday, Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir F. Petrovsky issued the first firm Soviet denial of the sex-and-spy scandal at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, calling the charges a "dirty fabrication."

Petrovsky also denied U.S. allegations that the KGB planted bugs in a U.S. Embassy complex under construction.

Three former Marine guards are accused of helping Soviet agents spy on U.S. diplomatic missions in Moscow and Leningrad. President Reagan has said the new $191 million embassy complex in Moscow may be so compromised by Soviet listening devices that it must be torn down and rebuilt.

Mexican telephone strike fails to interrupt service

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Telephone service continued mostly uninterrupted after 32,000 union workers nationwide declared themselves on strike but remained on the job, working side by side with emergency personnel sent in by the government.

"It is a strike in legal terms but not in fact," Francisco Hernandez Juarez, president of the Mexican National Telephone Workers Union, said a few hours after the strike began at 1 p.m. CDT Wednesday.

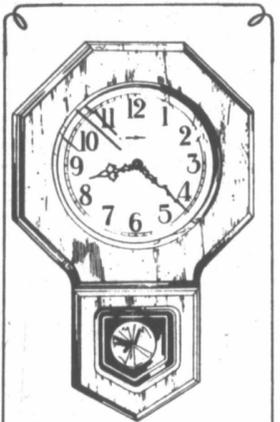

No new wage talks were scheduled between the union and the Mexican Telephone Co. or Telmex, a private company with majority government ownership. The two sides had agreed to a 20 percent wage hike effective April 1 but are stalemated over the size of an emergency raise retroactive to March 1.

The government took over the telephone operations under an emergency plan allowing it to circumvent normally strict labor laws.

Miguel de la Madrid arrives to 21-gun Guatemalan salute

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid arrived Wednesday for a three-day visit, the first leader of his country to visit Guatemala in more than a decade.

President Vinicio Cerezo, who visited Mexico last July, was present at the international airport here to welcome the visitor from Guatemala's northern neighbor. The traditional 21-gun salute greeted de la Madrid as he stepped down from his plane.

Private talks between de la Madrid and Cerezo until Friday are expected to concentrate on the return of thousands of Guatemalan refugees still in Mexico, Central American peace efforts and economic problems.

De la Madrid is scheduled to address the Guatemalan Congress on Thursday.

Relations between the countries were strained while conservative, military dominated governments held sway here. The inauguration of Cerezo, a Christian Democrat, in January 1986 marked a return to elected civilian rule after 16 years.

Guatemalan refugees, mostly Indian peasants from the northwestern highlands, have begun to return home from U.N.-supported camps on the Mexican side of the border.

However, 39,000 refugees, down from a maximum of 46,000, remain in the camps in Mexico's southernmost state of Chiapas and on the Yucatan peninsula.

The refugees fled fighting between leftist guerrillas and the army and an all-out army counterinsurgency campaign in the late 1970s and early 1980s.

Reports show contamination extent on nuclear reservation

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP)—Billions of gallons of cooling water contaminated with thousands of pounds of radioactive materials were dumped into the soil in the first 25 years of operation of the Hanford nuclear reservation, say federal documents released Wednesday.

The amount of the daily dumping caused scientists to revise their estimate of the time it would take contaminated groundwater to reach the Columbia River from 1,000 years to only one year, the documents indicate.

In another document, a Hanford scientist called 20 years ago for many of the same safety modifications that were started at the N Reactor following last year's explosion at the Soviet Union's Chernobyl reactor.

The 23-year-old N Reactor shares key design similarities with the Chernobyl facility and has been shut down for $50 million in safety improvements.

Those improvements include covering of an open liquid waste disposal basin, making a control room able to function remotely and installation of equipment to mitigate the effects of potentially explosive hydrogen buildup during an accident.

In an August 1966 study, scientist R. E. Trumble called for spending $1.9 million to do essentially those same things.

More than 400 declassified or unclassified reports were released by the U.S. Department of Energy under a Freedom of Information request filed by the Hanford Education Action League, a Spokane citizens activist group.

The Hanford documents cover reports detailing environmental studies, waste disposal practices and releases of radioactive materials into the environment.

Information in the documents is expected to fill in some of the gaps found in reviews of environmental monitoring reports issued a year ago, said Tim Connor, a HEAL researcher and writer.

The documents give an indication of the massive task of cleaning up the contaminated 570-square-mile reservation in south central Washington state.

The wastes, mostly in ponds and ditches, contained 3.2 million curies of radioactivity. By contrast, about 14 curies of radiation escaped from the Three Mile Island plant in Pennsylvania.

Congressman wants INS chief ousted

AUSTIN (AP)—A Texas congressman has launched a campaign to boot the district chief of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, citing criticism the man leveled at some Austin officials.

U.S. Rep. Jake Pickle said Wednesday he has written INS Commissioner Alan Nelson in Washington, telling him that district director Richard Casillas should go.

"Personally, I think we should have a new district director of the INS," the congressman said.

Casillas, responding from his San Antonio office, said he has a duty to enter controversies to correct misstatements by public officials.

"I don't start fights, but I do not run away from them. I'm not paid to be a whipping boy," Casillas said.

Pickle, an Austin Democrat, wrote Nelson to say, "Mr. Casillas improperly made strong personal statements against city officials, and this should not be tolerated."

He said Casillas had "angered, insulted and needlessly harassed citizens all over my district, and I find this situation intolerable."

Casillas is the head of an INS district that encompasses 78 counties in South and Central Texas.

Pickle's complaint to Nelson was prompted by a letter Casillas sent to Travis County Commissioner Jimmy Snell last October.

In that letter, Casillas criticized city officials who in 1985 opposed the opening of an INS detention facility in an Austin neighborhood. Snell had written asking for help in solving a specific problem with a group of illegal aliens in his precinct.

In response, Casillas criticized "your illustrious mayor, city council members, some school board members and radical Hispanic groups" who opposed the INS detention center.

Casillas last year threatened to dump Central Americans on the steps of Austin City Hall when City Council was considering a resolution to declare the city a sanctuary for refugees.

In an interview last week, Casillas said Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower was "shoveling manure" when he suggested that some parts of the new federal immigration law should be relaxed.

Casillas said it is his duty to answer public statements he considers erroneous.

"I'm bound to set the record straight; that's what I'm doing," he said.

"I don't see how we can get the kind of cooperation we need between local, state and federal officials with the kind of antagonism expressed by Mr. Casillas," Pickle said.

Eckerdt collects glasses for Eagle Scout project

Roy Eckerdt of Pampa Boy Scout Troop 413 recently collected over 200 pairs of eyeglasses as his Eagle Scout project. The glasses were collected from area residents and were to be taken to Texas Eye Bank in Amarillo.

Eckerdt was assisted by fellow Scouts in collecting the glasses door to door. Texas Eye Bank of Amarillo will process and distribute the glasses.

"Many people across the state of Texas have a need for eyeglasses but cannot afford them. The Texas Eye Bank, with the help of the people of Texas, is making it possible to get the spectacles they so badly need."

"I sincerely believe that a great service is being done for the need of Texas by the actions of my fellow Scouts and I," Eckerdt said.

Eckerdt, 17, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Eckerdt of Pampa. He is a senior at Pampa High School, where he is active in band and football. He is also a member of First Baptist Church.

To become an Eagle Scout, a Scout must first become a Star Scout and then a Life Scout. He must earn 21 merit badges, 11 of which are required and cannot be substituted. He must be active in the troop for two years and must serve in various leadership positions. Three service projects are also required, as well as showing Scout spirit and conducting an Eagle project. The Eagle Scout ranking must also be approved by an Eagle review board.

Add dash to workwear

Taking widely available workwear, a creative group of design students at New York's Fashion Institute of Technology embellished them for a design competition. Originally a '60s fad, this latest trend has an '80s flair. Uniforms, from doctors' scrubs to workmen's overalls, are popping up on college campuses and at nightclubs everywhere. At left, this basic hospital candystriper has been given a fresh new look with the addition of a crinoline pouf and a brightly dyed oversized lab coat. At right, a classic waiter's uniform becomes weekend wear with added shoulder pads, knitted cowl and cuffs and decorative buttons; the trousers have been tapered and quilted. (Basic garments are made of Celanese Fortrel.)

Minister: Kids, weddings don't mix

DEAR ABBY: May I share some of my personal experiences concerning children in weddings?

A little flower girl (about 2 1/2 years of age) announced loudly, while she was at the altar with the bride and groom, "I have to make a wee wee." She wasn't lying; she made a puddle during the ceremony.

The ring bearer, an attractive little boy of 3, took the pillow and kept throwing it up in the air and catching it (sometimes) during the entire service. He was seated between his parents and neither one attempted to discipline him.

Frequently, during the procession, the kids do not make it up the aisle, but wander instead to an aunt or uncle on the way there, and cannot be prodded to go where they went during rehearsal.

Kids crying in the church (or synagogue, or whatever) are an invasion to the sacred ceremony,

Dear Abby

and well do I remember the words of a minister, "A baby who cries in church is like a New Year's resolution — it ought to be carried out." A bolder colleague once said, while a baby persisted in crying during the service: "Will that mother with the crying baby please give her a bust in the mouth?" Now, I've said it. Use it as you deem advisable. It is all true.

THE REV. PAUL E. FARRELL, ONTARIO, CALIF.

DEAR MR. FARRELL: I believe you, and so will everyone else who reads this. But don't expect your testimony to discourage brides and grooms from including children in their weddings. They look so adorable, they say it's worth the gamble.

DEAR ABBY: Please settle a dispute. Our household is at war over this. In the game of poker, if one player has three 6s and two 10s, and the other player has three 7s and two 5s, who wins?

The male family members say the one holding the three 6s and two 10s wins. The women in the house say the one holding three 7s and two 5s wins. Thanks from...

A FULL HOUSE IN GLOBE, ARIZ.

DEAR FULL: According to our poker expert, Jack Hill in the mail room, three 7s and two 5s beat three 6s and two 10s. So the "Queens" (women) win over the "Kings" (men).

Tuxedo still popular on 100th anniversary

By JUDIE GLAVE Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—The tuxedo turns 100 years old this fall.

Once limited to the upper crust of the upper classes, the tuxedo has evolved into formal wear that allows every man to feel like part of high society, if only for a night.

"That's the great democratic thing about wearing a tuxedo," says Jack Hyde, a Fashion Institute of Technology professor. "At a black-tie affair you can't tell if a man's a millionaire or a pauper when he's dressed in a tux."

Though de rigueur today, the satin-trimmed suit received a less than warm reception when playboy millionaire Griswold Lorillard showed up sans tails at exclusive Tuxedo Park, N.Y.'s annual Autumn Ball on Oct. 10, 1886.

The affront had residents with surnames like Astor, Pell, Collier and Poor, seeing red.

"Young Griswold Lorillard appeared in a tailless dress coat and waist coat of scarlet satin looking for all the world like a royal footman," a New York gossip columnist wrote the next day.

Wearing a tailless coat in "mixed company" then was like showing up at a White House dinner today dressed in pajamas.

The shock waves have long since subsided and "from that little episode, Mr. Lorillard, in effect, launched a new industry," says Norman Karr of the Men's Fashion Association.

He was referring to the formal wear industry, a nearly $600-million-a-year business. Rentals account for 75 percent of the profits.

Through the Roaring '20s and even Depression days, "anybody who was anybody had a tuxedo," says Ken Hall, a spokesman for Philadelphia-based After Six, the nation's largest tuxedo manufacturer.

51st Masters tourney tees off today

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—Charles Crenshaw mentioned one of the historical facts of the Masters to his son, Ben, but it did not good.

"My dad told me, 'You know that no one's ever won the par-3 and then won the big tournament,'" Crenshaw said Wednesday after his 7-under-par 22 secured the title in the short-course event held annually on the eve of the season's first major golf championship.

"He said to me, 'Son, what are you doing?' On the ninth hole, he said, 'Hit one into the water.'"

Crenshaw, a golf history buff, was aware of the Masters trend without the reminder.

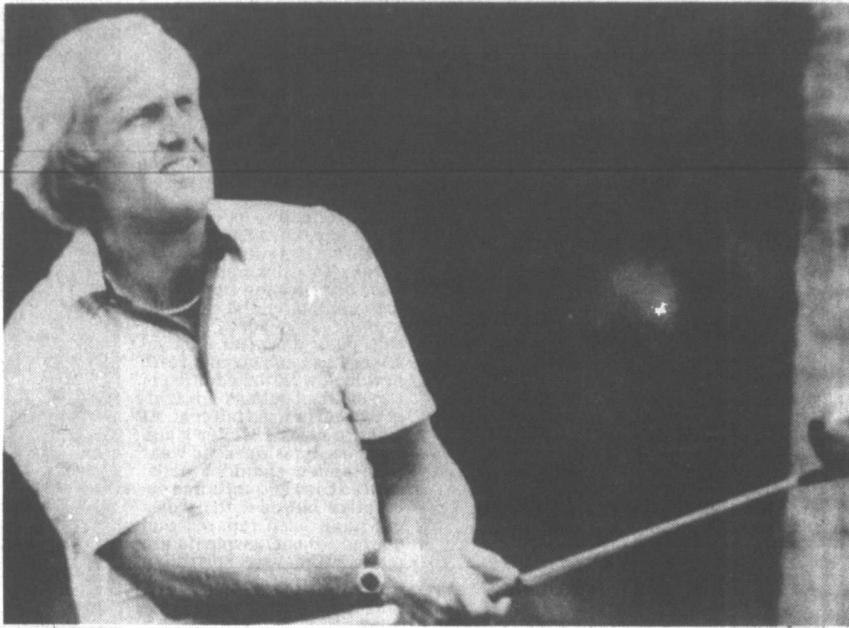

"I made a couple of birdies and I thought, 'Whoa, hold on here. What are you doing?'"

Crenshaw's wife, Julie, who is expecting the couple's first child in late summer, said, "There's a first time for everything."

Crenshaw, winner of the USF&G Classic at New Orleans this year, was in the international field of 88 that began play this morning in the 51st Masters on the 6,905-yard, par-72 Augusta National Golf Club course.

He was among a rather select group of players regarded as contenders in this event, which he won in 1984.

Crenshaw said whoever dons

(AP Laserphoto)

Greg Norman... a close second in '86.

the green jacket on Sunday will have to be effective with iron shots.

He said the greens are firm and fast and, for that reason, "the scores are going to be up. It has raised the degree of difficulty and it places a premium on your second shot. It's been doubly important here to work on your irons and keep your iron shots below the hole.

"There are some terrifying spots (on the greens). But there always have been. The greens are elusive enough that I think you'll see everyone at times having trouble with them. Our hands are full this week."

The list of pre-tournament favorites has a foreign flair, headed by Australia's Greg Norman and Spain's Seve Ballesteros.

Norman has never won the Masters, but he finished second last year when Jack Nicklaus closed with a dramatic flurry on the final six holes to claim this title for the sixth time.

Norman led all four majors last year going into the final round, and won one of them, the British Open.

Ballesteros already owns two Masters crowns — 1980 and 1983 — and he has three other finishes of fourth or better in 10 appearances.

No one is ready to count out Nicklaus after winning at age 46 last year, adding to his aura as the greatest player in the history of the game.

Crenshaw said he doesn't know why the foreign players are becoming dominant in the game.

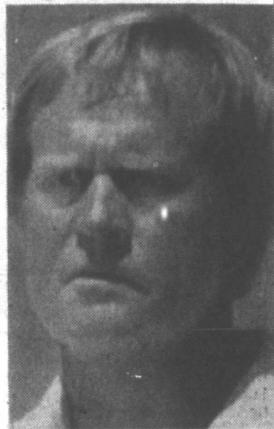

"In the past five or six years, their level of play has risen, not just here but all over," Crenshaw said.

"I can't buy the theory that it's because they're tournament tested all over the world under difficult conditions. That's always been the case.

"They just have better individuals, guys like Seve, Norman and Bernhard Langer. That must breed some sort of chain reaction, but I don't think there's any real reason for it. Our (Americans) chances are just as good as theirs. They just have shot better numbers at times."

Langer, the West German who won the 1985 Masters, also is regarded as one of the favorites this week.

Astros sweep Dodgers

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Nolan Ryan suffered through last season with a painful elbow, and teammate Jose Cruz had a slow start because of an ankle injury.

But they were in mid-career form Wednesday in leading the Astros to a 7-3 victory over Los Angeles, completing a three-game season-opening sweep.

It completed a frustrating series for the Dodgers, who announced prior to the game that Vice President Al Campanis had resigned after saying on ABC's Nightline Monday night that blacks were unqualified to be field managers or general managers.

Ryan, 40, pitched six shutout innings and struck out 10 batters, increasing his major league record strikeout total to 4,287. Cruz, 39, hit a two-run homer to key a seven-run seventh inning that rallied the Astros from a 3-0 deficit.

"Cheo's (Cruz) off to a real nice start and I'm pleased with the way I threw today," said Ryan, 1-0. "I'm happy for him."

Cruz's home run capped the Astros' rally. Phil Garner, Jim Pankovits, Bill Doran and Billy Hatcher drove in runs in the inning, and Pankovits scored on left fielder Ken Landreaux's throwing error.

All Houston's runs came after Rick Honeycutt gave way to Tom Niedenfuer, the first of three Dodger relievers. Honeycutt shut out the Astros for six innings, retiring the final 10 batters he faced.

Trying out

Gerald Reyes, 10, is intent on catching the ball during Bambino League baseball tryouts Wednesday at Optimist Park. Tryouts in the Babe Ruth (13 through 15 years of age) and Bambino Leagues (10 through 12 years of age) continue today from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.

McEnroe wins in WCT championship

DALLAS (AP) — John McEnroe and Yannick Noah are friends off the court but at one point in the fourth set of their quarterfinal match in the WCT Finals they stood across the net exchanging harsh words.

Noah was disturbed because McEnroe's running argument with chair umpire Richard Kaufman was breaking his concentration.

"I've been waiting," said Noah.

"You just play, you just play," answered McEnroe.

At the time Noah was leading 40-30 but McEnroe went on to a service break to take a 2-0 lead.

McEnroe continued to a 7-6 (7-2), 6-2, 4-6, 6-3 victory in the WCT Finals.

After the altercation the crowd swung to Noah.

At that point McEnroe, always one to thrive on controversy, lifted his game. The scene was a flashback to the old McEnroe, the McEnroe before he took six months off last year to reevaluate his commitment to tennis.

"He broke me right after that. He's used to that kind of situation," said Noah. "He knows how to control it."

McEnroe not only had problems with Noah. He had harsh words for linesmen, fans and photographers who were taking pictures of his wife, Tatum, seated at center court.

"It's very rude to do," said McEnroe of the photographers. "It's something that's gone on for a long time and it's very disappointing, very sad."

McEnroe also kicked a television camera after missing a shot.

"I kicked it because it was there," said McEnroe.

Noah said he doesn't thrive in an atmosphere of controversy.

"I like it when there are good feelings on the court," said Noah. "I don't like that kind of atmosphere."

McEnroe, off the tour for six months last year, is competing in only his fourth tournament of the year. He continued his push toward what he hopes will be a return to his former number one ranking. Last year his computer ranking fell to 21st, but he has risen to seventh this year.

Sweden's Stefan Edberg, the top seed left in the tournament, will meet McEnroe in one of Friday night's semifinals.

McEnroe served and volleyed with power and precision. Noah's plan also included plenty of serve-and-volley but McEnroe was the master Wednesday.

Noah, ranked fourth, and McEnroe had met only twice previously, strange for two veteran players. McEnroe prevailed each time, taking a five-set Davis Cup clay court marathon in 1982 and a straight-setter on carpet in Philadelphia in 1985.

Noah said he and McEnroe worked out their differences after the match.

"We talked about it and it's no big deal," said Noah. "We also talked to the umpire so the communications seem to be working."

McEnroe was somewhat pleased with his play.

"It was pretty solid but not very solid," said McEnroe. "Yannick seemed a little flat. On this surface I should be able to dictate to a player like Yannick."

Concentration has been a problem for McEnroe during his comeback.

Pampa entered in Amarillo Relays

Pampa's Lady Harvesters will have a chance to take vengeance against Tascosa in the Amarillo Relays Friday and Saturday in Dick Bivins Stadium.

Tascosa slipped by Pampa, 130-115, to win the Pampa Invitational last weekend, even though the Lady Harvesters won two more events than the Rebel girls.

"Tascosa just has too many good distance runners. I was surprised we stayed as close as we did," Cornelsen said.

The Amarillo Relays start at 2:30 p.m. Friday with the finals scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Tascosa is favored in the girls' division with Pampa expected to fight it for second with Borger and Lubbock Estacado.

"It seems like every team has sprinters, but no distance runners," Cornelsen said. "That gives them a good advantage. I don't see anybody cutting them out of points."

The Lady Harvesters, despite depth problems, have still won three of five meets this season. Yolanda Brown, who has missed two meets because of a leg injury, returned for the Pampa Invite and helped Pampa win the 400 and 800-meter relays.

"Yolanda is a good jumper and sprinter, but I held her out of those events because I didn't want to risk her with district coming up," Cornelsen said.

The Lady Harvesters face a critical situation because of the shortage of runners going into the District 1-4A meet, scheduled April 18 at Canyon.

"We've got to be careful not to get a bunch of girls hurt. If we push someone to win district, it's not going to do us any good when regional comes up the week after," Cornelsen said. "We want to try to get enough people to Austin (Class 4A state meet) to defend our title."

The Lady Harvesters are the defending Class 4A state champions and stand a good chance of repeating if enough track members stay healthy.

Sophomore Tonya Lidy, the defending state champion in the 200, is expected to return to Austin along with Andrea Hopkins, who has not lost a shot or discus event this year. Lidy could also qualify for the state meet in both the triple jump and long jump. Lidy has won the long jump four times and the triple jump twice this season.

Both the 800 and 400-meter relay teams (Lidy, Schivone Parker, Yolanda Brown and Laquita Brown) are solid favorites to make the return trip to Austin. The 400-relayers set a meet record (48.9) in winning the Pampa Invitational.

Pampa boys travel to Liberal, Kans. for a meet there Friday.

PMS hosts girls' track invitational

Seven teams are entered in the Pampa Middle School Girls' Track Invitational Friday at Harvester Field.

The meet begins at 4 p.m. with Pampa hosting Borger, Dumas, Canyon, Valley View, Hereford Stanton and Hereford La Plata.

In a recent meet held at Canyon, Pampa finished second in both the seventh and eighth grade divisions. Borger was first in the seventh-grade division and Canyon won the eighth-grade division.

"We're going to be after both Borger and Canyon Friday," said Pampa Coach Sandy Barr.

In the Canyon meet, Nekesha Ryan long jumped 15-4 to take first and set a new seventh-grade school record in the event.

Melisa Brookshire won both the 100 and triple jump for the Pampa seventh grade and Jennifer Bailey won the high jump in the eighth-grade division. Pampa's eighth-grade sprint relay team also placed first.

The "playoffs" in the world of high school track and field are set for this weekend.

Four area teams with legitimate chances at sending individual athletes to the regionals will compete in four district meets Friday and Saturday.

At the district meet in Groom, both the Miami Warriors and host Tigerettes have a chance at advancing some of their competitors.

Another district meet will be held in Booker, where Wheeler and Kelton will compete.

The White Deer Bucks and Does will travel to Stratford, the site of their district contest.

Shamrock is the site of the final district meet. Canadian and the host Irish will be among the competitors.

There were a few close calls in the two track meets held this past weekend at Booker and White Deer.

Both Bubba Smith and Danny Benefield of Wheeler finished with a time of 15.8 seconds in the 110-hurdles, good for a first place tie.

In the 100-meter dash, Eldon VanHooser of Briscoe finished two-tenths of a second behind the Higgins runner for a second place finish.

The same two runners faced each other in the 200. VanHooser again came out on the short end by a hair. Bradley Hall of Higgins finished at 23.1. VanHooser at 23.4.

In the girls' division, Miami Warriorettes Autumn and Alicia Walls finished with identical first place marks in the triple jump. Both had distances of 32-feet, 2 inches.

In White Deer, there was never really any doubt as to who won the high jump.

As he always does, Buck Joe Don Brown won the event, clearing the bar at 6-9½.

That was not only a first place finish for Brown, but also his career best jump.

The second-place finisher was only able to manage a leap of 6-0.

In the boys 400-relay, White Deer finished five-one hundredths of a second behind first place Sanford-Fritch.

In the 100, the top three finishers were Canadian Wildcats.

Shawn Wright won the race with a time of 10.87. In second was Dan Dockray who crossed the line at 10.90. In third, Jeff Kirkland, who's time was 10.99.

Talk about close...

In the girls' 400 relay, Panhandle won the event with a time of 52.2. The White Deer Does were right behind with a finish of 53.04.

Canadian Lady Wildcat Wendi Burns, a senior, is nearing a decision on which scholarship offer she will accept.

According to her father, Wildcat coach Jackie Burns, the choice has been narrowed down to four schools that have shown interest: West Texas State, Southwestern in Georgetown, Tex., Stephen F. Austin in Nacogdoches and South Plains College in Levelland.

All have expressed a desire to have Wendi on their basketball team, with the exception of SFA, who wants her on their volleyball team.

Wheeler's Marlo Hartman is reportedly close to making a decision on which college she'll attend. She is expected to make her decision on the several programs that want her on their basketball team within the next couple of weeks.

WT Coach Bob Schneider, who is looking for post players like Hartman, told The Pampa News he is very interested in the Wheeler senior.

BASEBALL TRIVIA: When was Los Angeles Dodger pitcher Fernando Valenzuela's first 20-win season? Answer follows.

I don't know if anyone was appalled as I was over a statement Al Campanis made on Monday night's edition of ABC's Nightline.

Campanis, who spent several years in the majors and was asked to resign Wednesday as Director of Player Personnel for the Los Angeles Dodgers was commenting on the lack of blacks in general manager positions in the majors.

"I truly believe they may not have some of the necessities to be, let's say, a field manager or general manager," Campanis said.

He actually said that! After that statement, maybe his "necessities" should be put under a microscope.

TRIVIA ANSWER: Valenzuela's first 20-win season was 1986, when he won 21 for the Dodgers.

Red Raiders sign 7-foot center

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The top players were already committed, but Texas Tech signed 7-foot center Maurice Artis of Killeen, and Texas A&M landed 6-5 swingman Darren Terry of Hughes Spring on Wednesday's national basketball signing day.

The state's three most highly sought players — high school all-Americans LaBradford Smith of Bay City, Larry Johnson of Dallas Skyline and Johnny Pittman of Rosenberg Terry — signed last November during an early signing period, which made Wednesday anti-climactic.

Smith signed with Louisville, Johnson with Southern Methodist and Pittman with Kentucky.

Artis, who averaged 13.1 points, seven rebounds and four blocked shots, led Killeen to a 30-8 record and the regional semifinals. He chose the Red Raiders over Tulsa and Temple.

That gives the Raiders two big men. In the early signing period, Texas Tech signed J.D. Sanders, a highly regarded 6-9, 225-pound forward from Nebraska Western, although they lost out on the 7-foot Pittman, whom they coveted.

Terry was a two-sport star for Hughes Springs. After winning all-state honors as a defensive back in football, plucking off 16 interceptions in 10 games, he led Hughes Springs to a 35-0 record before they lost, 66-64, to Sweeny in the Class 3A state championship game.

Terry connected on 10 of 11 field goal attempts in the second half of the championship game and was named to the all-tournament team at state.

The University of Houston announced the signings of two players they eagerly sought — 6-1 guard Horace Chaney of Garden City (Kan.) Community College and 6-5 swingman Darrell Mickens of Paris.

Chaney, an honorable mention junior college all-America selection, averaged 25.1 points and six rebounds last season for Garden City, which produced Final Four Most Valuable Player Keith Smart of Indiana. Chaney played with Smart last season and also at Baton Rouge, La., where they were on the same high school team.

Chaney hit 80 of 202 attempts from outside the 3-point line, which impressed Houston Coach Pat Foster.

"Horace will fill our need as an outside shooter," Foster said. "He has excellent potential to be a very good player in the Southwest Conference." Chaney picked Houston over Clemson and Florida State.

Mickens, a Class 4A all-stater, almost signed with Houston in November, but waited, and Oklahoma State was thought to have gained the inside track. But on Tuesday, Mickens signed with Houston.

"Darrell is a big time athlete. He is a great jumper and a player who can get up and down the court," Foster said.

Foster already has landed one of his former players at Lamar University, 6-7 Brazilian forward Eduardo Drewnik.

Baylor announced three signings, including a unanimous Louisiana all-state guard, 6-3 Melvin Hunt of Tallulah, La., who averaged 17.67 points and nine assists last season.

"We were looking for a high school point guard of this caliber. We feel that his size and ball-handling ability will pay great dividends for us over the next few years," said Baylor Coach Gene Iba.

Baylor also announced that Dennis Lindsey, a 6-2 guard from Brazoswood, and Jim Harman, a 6-7 forward from San Antonio Madison, had signed national letters-of-intent.

Lindsey "was one of the better players this year shooting the three-pointer," Iba said. "But unlike most players that shoot the 3-point shot well, he is an extremely good athlete. Dennis is not a one-dimensional player. He can do a lot of things on the court."

Brazoswood Coach Bob Cooke said, "The 3-point shot was designed for Dennis Lindsey."

Harman, who averaged 16.3 points and 12.1 rebounds, also considered Texas Tech, Tulsa, Wyoming and Texas-San Antonio. Iba called Harman a "great passer and good shooter" who "probably was one of the most underrated players in the state."

Texas Christian's coach Moe Iba announced the signing of guard Danny Hughes from Trinity Valley Community College. The 6-0, 160-pound was Trinity Valley basketball team captain and most valuable player last season as a sophomore when he also earned all-Texas Eastern Conference honors.

Rice announced the signing of David Willie, a 6-5 guard-forward who averaged 25 points and 15 rebounds last season for Austin Crockett. Willie was named the MVP on the Austin American-Statesman's all-Central Texas team.

Darrell Johnson, 6-6 of Houston Yates, was among the state's top players who were still unsigned on Wednesday. He reportedly was trying to decide among Oklahoma, Houston and Arkansas.

Also on the sidelines was 6-1 LaPorte guard Charles McCovey, who was said to be considering Texas Tech, Houston, Texas A&M and San Jacinto Junior College.

Taju Olajuwon, 6-7, of Houston Marian Christian, brother of Houston Rockets center Akeem Olajuwon, was debating between Houston and Louisiana State.

Texas added two power forwards to its list of basketball signees on Wednesday. The Longhorns snared 6-8 Thomas Gipson of Seguin and 6-8 Alvin Heggs of Florida Community College. Gipson averaged 19.3 points, 11 rebounds and 5.5 blocked shots last season. Heggs averaged 19 points and 14 rebounds. Texas had signed five other players in the November signing period.

SMU got a prize with its signing of hometown star Johnson last November, one of three early-period signings by the Mustangs. This spring, SMU Coach Dave Bliss was after only one other player, Thomas Hocker of Highland Park. But Hocker committed verbally on Tuesday to Miami.

Alvin Lee of Western Junior College in Snyder had considered Arkansas, but announced on Tuesday that he would sign instead with Alabama.

Daron "Mookie" Blaylock, a 6-1 guard from Garland who led Midland College to second place in the national junior college championships, eliminated Houston from consideration on Tuesday and indicated he won't decide until later in the month. He is thinking about Oklahoma, Florida, Kansas, Southwest Louisiana and also Texas-Arlington, which recently named Midland Coach Jerry Stone as its head coach.

Another Midland player, Todd Duncan, was being recruited by Arkansas and Texas Tech, but was also considering Cal State-Fullerton and Texas-Arlington. John Hudson, 6-8, of powerful San Jacinto Junior College, was considering South Alabama, which just hired San Jacinto Coach Ronnie Arrow as its new head coach.

Verbal commitments announced on Tuesday had Mike Bell of Lon Morris College, one of the state's best junior college prospects, going to Oklahoma; Trent Edwards of Alvin to Arizona State; and guard Lincoln Minor of Midland Junior College to Kansas.

Boo Harvey, 6-0 guard of San Jacinto, committed to St. John's, and Michael Porter, also a 6-0 San Jacinto guard, committed to Virginia Tech. Lamar won a commitment from 6-7 forward Freddie Williams of Angelina.

Otto Aigner, left, and Sulema Chavez show off some of the strawberries that will be shown at the 40th annual Potet Strawberry festival this weekend.

Poteet strawberry festival strong as industry declines

By DAVID SEDENO
Associated Press Writer

POTEET (AP) — The volume of strawberries cultivated near this South Texas community has dwindled, but the annual Potet Strawberry Festival continues to grow.

Forty years ago, more than 3,000 acres of strawberries were cultivated in the area surrounding Potet, compared to today's 50 acres of strawberries.

But this weekend more than 100,000 people are expected to invade the town of 3,000 for the juicy red berry and the activities celebrating its harvest.

A city ordinance allows only Potet-grown strawberries to be sold in the city limits. The price during the 40th annual festival is about $1 per pound.

Variety shows, children's entertainment and strawberry contests await the visitors to Potet, located about 30 miles south of San Antonio.

But the festival is a bittersweet celebration because farmers know next year it will be more difficult to plant, maintain and harvest the delicate crop, which two weeks ago escaped a freeze.

The cost of growing strawberries makes it less and less attractive to farmers.

"Our farmers find it very expensive to grow strawberries," said Sammie Franklin, spokeswoman for the 40th annual Strawberry Festival. "It's almost impossible for us to produce enough for the festival. At the end of every festival we start preparing for the next one."

A.F. "Otto" Aigner, 87, who has planted strawberries since he was a child and who will serve as the grand marshal for Saturday's parade, said this season is the first in 60 years he hasn't planted strawberries.

"I used to have 28 to 30 acres and I used to have 100 hands out there helping me," said Aigner, whose father began commercial production of Potet strawberries in 1918.

"Ten, 15 years from now, I don't know what's going to happen. It's going to be rough," Aigner said.

Sulema Chavez and her husband, Jose, champion strawberry growers in years past, hope to win yet another title at this year's festival.

"Sometimes we make money. Sometimes we don't make money," said Ms. Chavez.

But Kenneth Hoffman, 66, and his brother, Glenn, 54, are banking on keeping the industry alive.

Brandley wants lie detector test with trial guarantees

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Condemned prisoner Clarence Brandley says he will take a polygraph test, but only if passing it means he gets a new trial in his controversial murder case.

"If they guarantee me a new trial, I'll take it, and if they guarantee it is fair," the 35-year-old death row inmate said Wednesday.

Attorney General Jim Mattox, however, said it is not within his power to strike such a deal. His office is investigating the case at the request of the Montgomery County District Attorney.

"I don't have the power to make such a guarantee," he said. "I've been asked to investigate all the matters and circumstances and it is not in my power to grant a new trial. You can't put the attorney general in a bargaining position. I won't allow that."

Brandley said the person administering the test would have to be approved by his attorneys, who said they also wanted to be able to screen the questions before they are asked.

"I think it basically will show the same thing as it did the first time, that I'll pass it. I don't have anything to hide, but I don't want the same thing to happen to me that happened before," he said.

Brandley, convicted and sentenced to death for the 1980 rape-slaying of a 16-year-old girl, passed a lie detector test two days after the girl's body was discovered at Conroe High School, where he worked as a janitor.

"If a polygraph is given fair and guarantees are met, there's no doubt in my mind that I would pass," he said. "This whole ordeal is that no one wants to admit that what happened was wrong."

Brandley was one of several janitors working at the school Aug. 23, 1980, when Cheryl Ferguson was found raped and strangled.

He was the only black among them, however, and defense attorneys contend he was singled out because of his race. The victim was white and Brandley was convicted by an all-white jury.

The questions raised in the investigation and trial have prompted probes by the Texas attorney general's office and the U.S. Department of Justice.

"Under Texas law, there is no procedure for granting a new trial based on new evidence at this stage of proceedings, nor is there in federal courts," Mattox said. "Hopefully there will be enough evidence we can prove conclusively guilt or innocence."

Depending on the outcome, Mattox said he would make a recommendation to the governor or to the Board of Pardons and Paroles. The recommendation could include a full pardon or commuting the death sentence to life.

"If I'm convinced an injustice has taken place, I'll be much more inclined to make a more favorable recommendation," Mattox said.

Brandley said he was skeptical of Mattox's investigation because he represents the state.

"They all work together," he said, referring to the investigation as a smokescreen.

Brandley has had two execution dates and has been on death row since 1981. His case also has prompted demonstrations among blacks in Montgomery County, north of Houston, who insist his conviction was unfair and racially motivated.

His previous record includes a conviction of possession of a sawed-off shotgun.

Panel defers bilingual education vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Texas congressman's move to amend a House bilingual reauthorization bill has been deferred until the full Education and Labor Committee can consider it.

The amendment, authored by Rep. Steve Bartlett, R-Dallas, gives more flexibility to school districts as to how they spend federal money on various bilingual education programs.

"What this Congress needs to recognize is that different curriculums work better for different circumstances," Bartlett told the subcommittee.

"The bilingual education curriculum in New York is different than Los Angeles, is different than Dallas, is different than Little Rock."

Bartlett offered his measure as an amendment to the Bilingual Education and Labor Act of 1987, which will be folded into a House omnibus primary and secondary refunding bill that calls for increasing bilingual education funding from $143 million to $246 million in fiscal 1988.

A similar bill is making its way through the Senate.

Both Republicans and Democrats agree that more money needs to be spent to teach elementary and secondary public school students who are not proficient in English.

Under current law, only 4 percent of the money allocated to bilingual education programs can fund teaching methods other than transitional bilingual education.

House members consider second mortgage bills

AUSTIN (AP) — Consumer

protections are included in bills attempting to repeal the state's homestead law, but consumer groups say the best protection is the law legislators are trying to kill.

The House Committee on Financial Institutions considered a package of bills Wednesday that attempt to rewrite a 148-year-old law that allows homeowners to borrow against money invested in their homes only for certain home-related loans.

The change in the 1839 Homestead Law would require a constitutional amendment which must be approved by two-thirds of the House and the Senate, as well as by voters.

Rep. Charles Evans, R-Hurst, and Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, say the bills they are sponsoring contain protections for consumers who are concerned the measure could mean increased home foreclosures.

"In that we're the last state, we've been able to learn from the mistakes of other states," Ms. Danburg said.

The protections include allowing homeowners to borrow only 80 percent of the value of their home and requiring the loan be made by a licensed, regulated bank or financial institution, Ms. Danburg said.

But Brad Wiewel, president of the Texas Consumer Association, said the best consumer protection is already provided in the state constitution.

"There is absolutely no public outcry to change (the Homestead Law). The outcry is from the bankers," Wiewel said. "Any economist you talk to would tell you one of the biggest problems facing the country now is the massive amount of consumer debt... It's bad public policy to be encouraging people to get into that kind of debt."

Supporters argued that the homestead law takes a freedom from Texans that residents in every other state enjoy.

"We essentially tucked under our mattress a resource that every other state has," said Sydney Smith Hicks, chief economist for InterFirst Bank Dallas.

In addition to reducing Texans' buying power, Ms. Hicks said they are unable to take advantage of lower interest rates available to homeowners who borrow on money invested in their homes.

Texans also can't take advantage of tax writeoffs offered on home loans, she said.

Wall Street's ornery bull

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — As even its most ardent admirers will readily admit, the bull now romping in the stock market has an ornery streak.

Every so often it turns without warning on the cheering crowd behind it, setting off a panic. Then, just as abruptly, it starts surging forward again with renewed vitality.

The latest incident occurred in the last two trading days of March, when the Dow Jones industrial average fell more than 100 points.

As onlookers began warning of increased inflation, trade wars and rising interest rates, the Dow took off again, breaking the 2,400 mark for the first time early this week.

To people who have been tracking the bull market since its youth say it was merely running to true to form.

They point back as far as Oct. 25, 1982, when the market had just started to rise and the Dow stood at about 1,000, below the highs it reached in 1973.

The previous Friday, after the market closed, just about everyone had expected the Federal Reserve to lower its discount rate.

But the Fed stood pat. And in that Monday's trading, the Dow fell 36.33 points, what was then its largest single-day drop since the Great Crash of 1929.

Yet little more than a week later the market was soaring again.

City loses federal money for lack of spending

EL PASO (AP) — "Use it or lose it" is a piece of advice city officials are repeating to each other after El Paso had to surrender $340,000 in federal money because it failed to use it.

The money was part of $926,000 given the city in 1984 by the Department of Housing and Urban Development. It was to be used as incentive grants for apartment and tenement rehabilitation projects.

The federal government took the $340,000 away and gave it to other cities that were using their share of the money for the program.

Now El Paso has until Sept. 1 to use $366,000 that remains or it will also be taken away.

Debbie Hamlyn, acting director of the Community and Human Development Program, explained to City Council members Monday some changes that officials hope will get back some of the lost money.

Ms. Hamlyn said HUD began taking the unused money away about four months ago.

Ms. Hamlyn said only $220,000 of the $926,000 available had been used because City Council chose not to award grants, but to blend that money with federal funds set aside for low-interest loans under conditions that were not attractive to tenement owners in El Paso.
