Pampa expects chief by mid-May

By PAUL PINKHAM Senior Staff Writer

With any luck at all, Pampa should have a permanent police chief by mid-May.

With the deadline for applications 24 hours away, City Manager Bob Hart and Personnel Director Phyllis Jeffers have reviewed close to 80 resumes for the job vacated by J.J. Ryzman in January. Applications were still coming in Monday afternoon.

"The overall quality has been very, very good," Hart said Monday. "There's been some excellent applications." Ryzman left to accept the police chief's position in Corsicana, Hart named Lt. Jesse Wallace interim chief until the position could be filled permanently.

City commissioners chose to have Hart and Jeffers conduct the search for Ryzman's permanent replacement, rather than hire an outside executive search firm to do the job.

Hart said applications are being screened as they come in, and by Monday afternoon, he and Jeffers had narrowed the list to seven. The seven include at least one officer from the local department, the city manager said.

In a January interview, Hart said he is looking for a chief who will serve the public and who possesses a strong knowledge of current trends in police work. He also said the new chief should be committed to education, physical fitness and training community and understanding the role of the police department in city government.

I want somebody that believes that police work is a service occupation and that believes in a lot of interaction between the officers and the public," Hart said at

Monday, he said those goals have not changed

The bulk of the applications received, 80 to 90 percent, are from out-of-state, Hart said. He added that five applications have been received from the Pampa department, and a few have come from other towns in the Texas and Oklahoma panhanTexas applications are not from the immediate area.

"The ones in-state have been from downstate," she said.

Jeffers said the applicants run the gamut in ages — from "32 to 62" — but the average age seems to be around 40. Most have master's degrees and several have doctorates, she said.

Hart said most of the applicants currently work for other police departments, although some are with sheriff departments or state prison or law enforcement agencies. He said one Mississippi applicant works for the Bureau of Indian Affairs and is in charge of security for an Indian tribe

Ouch! Tax time again

From Staff and Wire Reports

If you've waited until this close to the deadline to file your federal tax return, you may get your refund just in time for the Fourth of

With the midnight Wednesday deadline approaching, the Internal Revenue Service reports its 10 service centers are operating full time processing tax returns. Backlogs of unprocessed returns are relatively low and "we expect no problems in dealing with the last-minute filers," IRS spokesman Larry Batdorf said Monday.

But because of the crush — the IRS expects 23 million returns will be filed between last Friday and the deadline — you can no longer count on getting a refund in four or five weeks. Now, says Batdorf, it may take as long as 10

In Pampa, Postmaster Richard Wilson said any returns mailed by midnight Wednesday are guaranteed an April 15 postmark, provided they are mailed in the slot designated for a Pampa postmark.

'If they just drop it in the (regular) out-of-town, we're likely to overlook it," Wilson said. He explained that out-of-town mail, unless placed in the special Pampa postmark slot, is postmarked in Amarillo and may not be stamped until Thursday if mailed Wednesday night.

Wilson said he expects 20 to 30 returns to be mailed on the Wednesday deadline. He said scales, charts, stamp vending machines and a dollar bill changer will all be available to the public in the post office lobby overnight Wednesday.

LEFORS — It took the testimony of just two men, not community sentiment, to convince the Lefors school board Monday to reconfirm its decision to get rid of industrial arts and math teacher Merray Stroud.

Nuclear dump compared to

By LARRY HOLLIS News Editor

A nuclear waste dump in Deaf Smith County would be "one of the world's largest, colossal Edsels," an opponent of the Department of Energy project said this morning.

Discussing opposition to the repository at a breakfast meeting sponsored by the Energy and Environment Committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce were Angela Lamb, Amarillo District supervisor of the Texas Department of Agriculture, and George Drain, president of Serious Texans Against Nuclear Dumping (STAND).

Drain said there are serious flaws and lack of planning in the proposed nuclear waste repository project. He said the project needs much more study, review and design to make certain "we're not building one of the world's largest, colossal Edsels.

Lamb, noting the TDA became involved when farmers and ranchers protested, said the proposal should "be of concern to all people of Texas.

Claiming nuclear waste is "the most dangerous product known to man," Lamb said DOE personnel have often shown "sloppy planning." The agency's past record with nuclear energy projects and materials poses

"a frightening nightmare" for Panhandle

Lamb said DOE studies on the Deaf Smith site failed to include data on the area's high wind velocity, missed the Santa Rosa Aquifer through which the waste disposal tunnels would be drilled and ignored contacting more than 20 grain elevator operators in the area.

Drain said he became concerned when he became aware that the DOE was "an agency run amuck" displaying its arrogance by showing little regard for the people. "The DOE has very serious problems,"

Drain said, citing instances of contamination and health hazards involving DOEcontrolled projects that the agency has kept

The federal agency's past record "has been abominable," Drain claimed, noting that Congress has become disillusioned with the agency and enacted severe budget cutbacks in its operations.

The DOE has censored its own staff reports and hampered communication about flaws and problems in its studies and projects, spreading "half truths and misinformation," he said.

In his discussion and in a videotape of a Seattle television program, Drain pointed out instances in which the DOE reportedly misinformed the public

Even a minor leakage of radioactive mate rials could create a serious problem in the surrounding area.

■ DOE-distributed film clips of nuclear waste container cask tests fail to indicate that the casks are outdated and that test accidents did in fact result in damages causing potentially dangerous leaks in the con-

■ The casks used in the tests are not actually the ones that will be used in the disposal project. Those containers are still yet to be designed and tested.

There are too many chances for rail and traffic accidents often passed over lightly in the DOE studies

An accident with radioactive materials could tie up medical facilities and equipment beyond the capacity of most local hospitals to handle.

■ There are not enough trained personnel to handle a serious accident involving nuclear waste spillage.

"We are in jeopardy," Drain stated, later adding that opponents to the project are concerned "because we get half truths and deceptive claims" posing "some very major

Canadian teacher appeals board action

CANADIAN — High school drama teacher Tal Lostracco is appealing a recent decision by Canadian school trustees not to renew his contract for the 1987-88 school year.

A hearing on Lostracco's appeal is scheduled for 6 p.m. April 27 at Canadian's Baker Elementary School cafeteria Trustees voted in March not to rehire Lostracco, 28, when they discovered he lacked 27 hours toward his teaching certificate. But public outcry pressured the board to rehire the award-winning speech teacher March 16. But, after the Texas Education Agency threatened school accreditation, the board voted March 26 not to renew Lostracco's contract.

Lostracco was hired in 1984 on an emergency teaching permit, which could not be renewed after three years. The drama teacher, who has had his students to post-district one-act play competition for three years, said he is working up a plan in which he earns credit hours during the summer. But he said he doubts he'll get 26

"I think I can get 18 hours," Lostracco said

Lostracco declined to say how he plans to make up the required hours because "I'm trying to get our play through regionals." The play, What I Did Last Summer, will compete in regional competition April 24.

local policy requires that all teachers obtain three hours of credit at a "certified institution of higher learning" every three years

According to Lefors Superintendent Earl Ross, Stroud lacked five hours of professional growth credit in April 1986. Ross contends that the 23-year Lefors ISD veteran was in breach of contract by not correcting this deficiency by March 1987.

Ross testified that he first notified Stroud of his alleged deficiency in April 1986 during his teacher evaluation. Ross added that Stroud asked him about credit for a composition class he took in 1980 at the Region 16 Educational Service Center and two continuing education classes in photography and computer programming at Clarendon College.

The school district's attorney Tracey Whitley of Austin, asked if continuing education classes would constitute college credit and fall within the "spirit and letter of the policy." Ross replied they would not.

Bill 72, a 1.5 hour credit would count as one credit hour. 'He (Stroud) kept pointing to

Ross added that under House his 1.6 hour credit and his 1.8 hour credit." Ross said. "Was there any attitude of concern on his part?" Whitley asked.

"No, not really," Ross testified at the hearing. "I think he had all kinds of opportunities to enroll and take courses Ross confirmed that Stroud had told him about a discipline management class at Southwest Texas State University, which apparently would have given him professional growth credit. But, Ross said, Stroud was not one of the two Lefors faculty members the school sent because Stroud has no problems with discipline management."

My records don't reflect courses from a university campus since 1969 for Stroud," Ross Under cross examination, Stroud's representative Timothy Bacon asked Ross how many hours Stroud is short. Ross replied that Stroud lacks five hours unless the board accepts the photography and computer classes. Then he would lack three.

"Did Stroud ask if he could attend the discipline management class," asked Bacon, a UniServ representative with the Texas State Teachers Associa-

Ross said he didn't remember, but he agreed with Bacon that it would have been beneficial for Stroud to take the course. Bacon asked Ross if professional growth credit was granted for non-college courses. Ross replied that credit was given to teachers attending a seminar presented by a professional reading teachers' organization.

'How about interscholastic athletic tournaments?" Bacon Ross said coaches may attend coaching clinics and schools, but such clinics and tournaments would not count as professional growth credit. Bacon then asked to see professional growth records of other school employees, which are kept in the teachers' personnel files. When denied access to the records. Bacon asked for a postponement of the hearing.

Board President Arnold Story denied Bacon's request.

After the hearing, Bacon explained that he has reason to believe Ross was not being consistent in granting professional growth credits to other teachers. He declined to specify which, if any, teachers were granted "improper" credits.

During the hearing, Bacon asked Ross that if Stroud had not "argued his case" at the April meeting, could the two have worked something out? Ross said that was possible.

Bacon asked if Ross offered Stroud any "positive sugges-

"We didn't get to that point," Ross said.

In his testimony, Stroud maintained that he didn't understand details of the policy, especially those concerning continuing education courses.

'No one ever explained to me what a continuing education course was." Stroud said

Stroud testified that he spent 23 years of his 31-year teaching career at Lefors and was planning to retire in four years.

He told Bacon that he has a master's degree plus 55 post graduate hours. Stroud said 45 of those hours came during his tenure at Lefors.

"That's almost two credit hours per year," Bacon said. Stroud then testified that he has had to do extra plumbing, building, electrical and other "odd maintenance jobs" to help support his family and to put his wife a teacher at Grandview-Hopkins School — and his three daughters through college. His extra jobs kept him from attending the extra classes. He added that in 1975, he helped repair

Lefors buildings damaged by a

The teacher said he also works after school, without pay, to keep the school shop in shape.

Stroud — who wore an "I teach because I care" lapel button said that, if rehired, he would comply with any professional growth plan Ross would draw up and would teach wherever he was assigned.

Although the townspeople crowding the library had strong feelings, mostly supporting Stroud, few made their opinions known at the hearing. Story had admonished the crowd that anyone speaking out of turn would be ejected from the hearing.

But that didn't keep Lefors resident Margie Prestidge from declaring "I believe you're forgetting what kind of teacher he is.

"And you don't have to eject me," Prestidge added as she exited the library.

Lefors school patrons echoed Prestidge's sentiment and criticized the board's action. Said Linda Daniels, the mother of two students, "I think it's a shame it happened. They shouldn't have let it get this far. They should have stopped it.'

School patron Dale Garrett declared that Ross was lax in explaining the policy and added that Pampa schools have no such professional growth policy.

Lamb said the DOE has also ignored or briefly passed over concerns regarding the agriculture industry in Deaf Smith County.

The food products in the county will be ingested by numerous people, she noted. The sale of the products depend on their reputation. Any rumors that the products are contaminated by nuclear radiation would seriously hamper the ability to sell those products, she said.

"Even the DOE has admitted that sales of agricultural products (from the county) will fall off, Lamb said. Though the department claims the sales will come back, Lamb expressed doubts about the ability of overcoming rumors among markets for the products.

Bill to ban paddling students bruised by pan poral punishment got a legislative slap when it failed to win committee approval for Senate floor debate.

Monday's 4-3 vote was not enough to get the bill out of the Senate Education Committee and sent Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, out of the meeting in a huff.

"I'm going to let the teachers and the PTA get on (them)," Washington said when asked if he would try to get the two additional favorable votes needed to pass his bill out of committee.

Paddling students as a discipline measure is prohibited in nine states, and many cities across the country, according to People Opposed To Paddling Students, Inc., a Houston-based group. Some states allow individual school districts to set corporal punishment

The National Parent Teachers Association, the American Medical Association and the American Bar Association all have adopted national stands against corporal punishment in

In 1977, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled paddling was not cruel and unusual punishment, but said excessive force could not be used on students.

We of course disagree with that decision," testified Gara La Marche, Texas Civil Liberties Union director. "We cannot beat prisoners of the TDC and we don't think children should be treated worse than prisoners of the Many Texas school districts allow paddling only if a parent grants permission, while some school districts prohibit paddling altogether.

"The school district should try to find some alternative means of disciplining children than using violence. We believe the violent nature of discipling children contributes to a violent society," said Sandy Kibby, Texas PTA Legislative chairwoman.

But Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, who voted against the bill, said the paddle can help maintain discipline in classrooms and keeps the undisciplined from disrupting education. 'No one from my district has asked me to vote for the bill," Edwards said.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, also said he hasn't heard an outcry from parents, but voted in favor of the bill. "I have mixed emotions about it ... I don't believe in letting districts have authority where obviously authority has been abused." Parker said he has heard reports of children being badly bruised from paddling.

Much of the opposition to the bill stems the belief the issue is a local one.

"Any bill that takes away the authority of local school boards to determine its own policies we're against," said James Crow, Texas Association of School Boards governmental relations

dropped from abortion bill

AUSTIN (AP) - It's not the typical birthday present for a 70-year-old, but Gov. Bill Clements says it was just what he wanted.

The House on Monday-- Clements' birthday-voted preliminary approval for a "budget execution" bill setting up a system for emergency budget action when the Legislature is not in ses-

The plan that was advanced to a final House vote is not the precise one Clements wanted, but he said he was pleased.

"The best birthday present I could have," he called it.

Clements and some lawmakers have complained that the state's hands are tied when budget problems crop up when the Legislature is out of town. Under the plan tentatively approved 76-68 by the House, the governor could submit a proposed solution to the Legislative Budget Board, which is made up of 10 lawmakers.

Kemp names Beau Boulter his state campaign chairman

DALLAS (AP) — Republican presidential hopeful Jack Kemp said he plans to campaign heavily in Texas to counter the home-state strength of Vice President George Bush.

'I think Texas — where it is Vice President Bush's home state — there's going to be a lot of support for Jack Kemp," said the congressman from New York State Monday. "I'm going to be in

"I have never felt uncomfortable in playing in someone else's ball park," Kemp told a group of reporters. "The rules are the same.

Kemp, a former pro football quarterback, said that by the time next year's Super Tuesday presidential primary rolls around on March 8, "I think it could very well be different in Texas.

Kemp, 51, who announced his candidacy April 6. was in Dallas as part of an 18-state tour to garner support for his campaign and to introduce U.S Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, as his state campaign chairman. Boulter also sits on Kemp's national steering committee.

Kemp said it was important to continue the "Reagan revolution" by protecting what he called family values, strengthening the economy with free enterprise and supporting the Strategic Defense Initiative, or SDI.

"I'm in this for one reason - keep the cause alive," he said.

Kemp said that he supported a repeal of the windfall profits tax and the fuel use act and deregulating the natural gas industry as ways to help the ailing domestic energy industry. However, he does not support an oil import fee.

He criticized a recent proposal by Bush to step up research in synthetic fuels as being too costly to taxpayers.

Kemp also disagreed with President's Reagan's recent decision to place stiff tariffs on various Japanese goods in retaliation for trade agreement violations. "There is no doubt in may mind that retaliation leads to trade wars," said Kemp. adding that incentives to free trade are more effective to bring U.S. trading partners into line.

Meanwhile, Kemp aide David Hoppe said Monday Kemp will give up his position as chairman of the House Republican leadership conference, the GOP's formal organization within the House, to devote more time to campaigning. Kemp has held the position since 1981.

Committee considers proposed lottery bills

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas could reap more than $600 million from a lottery, but would have to spend at least $20 million to set it up, state officials told a House committee

The House Committee on Urban Affairs held a hearing Monday on bills that would allow voters to decide if the state should have a lottery and how it should be run.

John Moore, a member of state Comptroller Bob Bullock's staff, gave committee members two sets of figures and reminded them the amount of revenue made from the lottery is contingent on many variables.

"Any one variable, inconsequential as it might seem, could affect hundreds of millions of dollars of revenues," Moore said.

Moore's economic analysis staff estimated the state could net $658 million during 1988-89, if the lottery is operating 90 days after getting voter approval, he said. If the state waits another month, it would probably only net about $620 million, Moore said.

"Both of these projections assume the amendment authorizing the lottery is approved by the voters at the Aug. 8 uniform election day," he said, adding that the projections also assume licensing agents, committing money and letting printing contracts begins the next morning.

"Lottery revenue projections can vary widely because of the timing of startup, because of delays in gaining space for a lottery headquarters or because of changes you might make in the legislation you have before you," Moore

Rep. Ron Wilson and Rep. Larry Evans told committee members about $20 million would have to be spent to activate the lottery. But the Democrats from Houston said the state would make up the expenditure in little time.

Chief Deputy Comptroller Jack Roberts testified the states with the most successful run them like a business

"A state lottery is completely different from anything else that government does. In fact, it really isn't government at all but a complex billion-dollar business that happens to be run for the benefit of the state," Roberts said.

and the abnormal fetus," he said. Senators debate Clements prairie chickens

AUSTIN (AP) — Senators took exception to being called "prairie chickens" by Gov. Bill Clements, although one said there are worse

"I would a lot rather be a prairie chicken than an ostrich with his head in the sand," Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, said

Monday In an interview with the Associated Press last Friday the Republican governor said liberal Democratic senators remind him of prairie chickens thumping the ground during breeding season.

Clements accused the senators of trying to turn the debate over state finances into a partisan brawl because of their opposition to Clements' no-new tax stance.

Sen. Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth, made a personal privilege speech saying Clements "used this attack to once again put himself forward as the great defender of the people against taxes.

Parmer said Clements' efforts to hold 1988-89 spending to current spending levels is faulty because $36.9 billion for the last two years is not the same as for the next two years.

Parmer said there have been inflation increases, population growth and extra state spending for 1988-89 caused by the prison overcrowding litigation and other court mat-

"I want to suggest to the governor that this is not all partisanship because there are Republican members of the Senate as well as Democrats that can do simple addition and subtraction that tells them the governor's proposed bottom line wreaks havoc among the children of this state, the college students, the poor, the elderly and the middle class families that are trying to make ends meet, Parker said.

"Prairie chickens are tenacious. They are not afraid to stand up and fight for what they believe. They are protective of their domain,." said Montford.

Buchanan's outlook ignores free choice

Now that former White House communications director Pat Buchanan is free of the "mice," those Don Regan functionaries who delighted in draining the life out of the presidential speechwriter's prose, he can address his former boss, Ronald Reagan, in a manner that can only be described as bare-knuckled. Bare-knuckled, that is to say, in the sense that he wishes the president to come off the ropes swinging. In a public memorandum appearing in Commentary, Buchanan tells the beleaguered president just how to emerge triumphant from the current White House mess.

Ronald Reagan's career over the past two decades has paralleled most political successes that modern conservatives have enjoyed. Though Reagan has soared rhetorically above the great moderate mush in which most politicians swim, he owes much of his electoral success to what he calls "the soft sell." Indeed, much of his political genius has been to stake out clear conservative positions, and then whisper softly he really isn't so wild and maniacal as the quivering pun-

That sort of habit irks Pat Buchanan, who takes the rhetoric seriously and would even fuse strategy to it. Buchanan reports a regular exchange he has had with Reagan, the communications chief advising fisticuffs and the president fussing that the true believers always want to "go over the cliff with the flags flying." An interesting argument, that, with merit on each side. But we do wish the president would listen to his old aide, if only because we prefer politicians who try to stick to their principles.

Otherwise, the next two years will be a reprise of Ronald Reagan's drift out of the California governorship, in which — with the exception of his quixo-tic tax limitation initiative — he presided over business as usual, and the state government grew only

Buchanan gives the president sound advice, particularly when it comes to his dealings with Congress, Mikhail Gorbachev, and Daniel Ortega. But when it comes to the issue of censorship, the combative jour-nalist (he is returning to that field, we trust) comes across as a base pragmatist, willing to use power to enforce his notions of virtue.

As it happens, Buchanan's notions of virtue are about the same as ours. Pornography is bad stuff and it does, in thousands of subtle ways, demean and weaken individual human beings. But it is precisely individual human beings who must be free to make moral choices about such alluring but ultimately degrading sensations, otherwise the "virtue" thereby enshrined will be meaningless. That is an argument straight from the late Frank Meyer, one of the conservatives' greatest modern philosophers, and it races on a straight line back to John Milton. Surely Pat Buchanan remembers those two champions of Western civilization.

If the president does take the easy, pragmatic way and jerk a few television licenses, as Pat Buchanan suggests, it will be a sorry day for freedom.

Congress mutinies for pork

WASHINGTON - To look at the dismaying roll call in the Senate, overriding the president's veto of the highway bill, is to recall one of Browning's better poems. Thirteen Republicans refused to sustain ther leader. Just for a 65-limit they left him, just for the pork they denied him a veto.

Consider the circumstances. Here was a Republican president, struggling to recover from the wounds of the Iranian arms affair, fighting to re-establish his leadership role.

Here was a bill indefensibly larded with pork barrel politics. Packed into this plump sausage were scores of "demonstration" projects, all of them to be financed with federal funds, few of them subject to rigorous examination for need.

And here was the president's veto: "The bill authorizes funding levels of $87.5 billion over five years, $10.1 billion more than my original request and more than is brought in by highway user taxes. . . It represents a failure to constrain federal spending, especially pork barrel spending.

"Some of the unaffordable provisions include add-on funding for 152 special interest projects. The five-year federal cost of the 152 highway projects is estimated to be $1.4 billion, and nearly $900 million of this amount is not subject to any spending controls. The total cost to complete these projects is estimated to be $5.5 billion, and they have not even been selected through the established mechanism that relies on the expertise of state and local officials.'

pense of all other states, through expansion of the Boston interstate highways. Los Angeles would get up to $870 million for its metrorail system. Eleven cities would gobble up 80 percent of the fund for mass transit. For these and other reasons, he returned the bill without his signature.

With a defiant whoop and a lusty holler, the House at once voted to override. Republican "leaders," notably Bob Michel of Illinois, were in the vanguard of the mutiny. Their desertion can be explained if not excused: It is more immediately important to representatives than to senators to bring home a few pounds of bacon.

The Senate's final vote to override arouses what? Scorn? Contempt? Incredility? Thirteen Republican senators heard a personal plea from the president, begging them to stand with him. Not one - not one! - would come to his side

Some of the defections were expected. Not one drop of party loyalty flows in the veins of Connecticut's Lowell Weicker; any man of integrity, given his views, would move his chair across the aisle and let the GOP say good riddance to bad rubbish. Pete Wilson of California comes up for re-election next year; it would have been hard for him to vote against a bill that rewards California so richly. Hecht of Nevada and Durenberger of Minnesota also face the voters in 1988; the 65-mile authorization was important

What of the others? Kit Bond and John Dan-

John Heinz and Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania similarly defected. Al D'Amato of New York succumbed to the lure of subway money. And what of Steve Symms of Idaho? Yes, his constituents probably would like a 65-mile-perhour limit on parts of the highway from Boise to Pocatello, but could that have justified his vote to override? Symms was just re-elected, in large part because of Reagan's energetic campaigning in his behalf. Under the unwritten rules of the game, Symms owed Reagan a favor in return. When Symms refused to budge. Reagan might have recalled a line from King Lear: How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child.

Some of the reporters and editorial writers have described the Senate vote as a "humiliating" or "stunning" defeat for the president. The descriptions were quite wrong. My guess is that the 13 rebellious Republicans will suffer whatever "humiliation" may be spread around. Reagan himself will benefit from the admiration that goes to a fighter who fights the good fight against overwhelming odds. The president emerges as a man of conviction. His compaisant colleagues emerge as men of expedience only.

Besides, real men don't go around messing wiht a bunch of flowers. Can you picture Charles Bronson out in his petunia patch? Tony Randall, maybe, but never Charles Bronson.

Rutberg had left for work when I got up the next morning. I poured a cup of coffee and reached for the paper and read the latest in the Jim and Tammy saga. I think all television evangelists should be arrested for fraud, but we're dealing with the flowers here. After the paper, I walked out into the Rutberg's yard. I noticed the flowers immediately.

I found a weed. There wasn't a hoe around, so I pulled it with my hand. My mother would have been proud. I thought to myself that my stubbornness in regard to flowers likely had caused me to miss a lot over the years. I made a silent vow to pay more attention to flowers from now

When Rutberg came home, he asked, "Did you see the flowers?"

American Jews should fret for a while

By Ben Wattenberg

Jews tend to worry a lot, and for good reason. In one way or another, on several continents, they have felt the sting of persecution for 2,000 years. And so, when things go badly, many Jews start looking over their shoulder.

It has not been a happy time for worried Jews in America. In late 1985, Jonathan Pollard, an American Jew, was caught spying for Israel. In the spring of 1986, the "insider" trad-ing scandals broke on Wall Street. Most of the accused were Jews. Then came the Iran arms affair. The American government knew what it was doing, but the Israelis provided much of the intelligence. Just when Pollard was sentenced to life in prison - the Israelis promoted two of his

So there has been a troubled air in the Jewish community. The scandals linked up uncomfortably with some old anti-Semitic stereotypes. The Wall Streeters could be seen as those unscrupulous Jewish financiers. The Pollard case raised the old question of 'dual loyalty"; Pollard was loyal to Israel, not America.

A group of American Jewish leaders went to Israel to tell the Israelis how wrong they were. Some Israelis countered that the nervousness displayed by American Jews betrayed their own exile mentality, and, even in America, Jews couldn't really feel

But one critical item was missing. There didn't seem to be any increase in anti-Semitism in America. The public argument about dual loyalty, for example, was essentially speculation about what other people would say. But "they" didn't say it.

There is, I think, a reason for the missing rise in anti-Semitism. This: There is not much anti-Semitism in

In 1982 a Roper poll gave respondents a list of different races, religions and nationalities. The respondents were asked whether they thought it was a good thing or a bad thing for America that the various groups had come here. The results showed the English in first place, the Irish in second place and the Jews in third place - with 12 other groups strung out behind.

Such results are astonishing to any student of Jewish history. It would be unfathomable to get such findings in the European countries, either in the old days or even now. Jews were and in some cases still are, considered aliens. Such a result would have been most unlikely in America even a few decades ago, when Jews were denied admission to many colleges or businesses. But every attitudinal index shows that anti-Semitism is losing ground in America.

Jews, indeed, have been both successful in American society and given much back to it. That seems to go a long way toward combating negative stereotypes.

So when incidents like Pollard. Iranscam and financial skulduggery surface, they are surfacing in a reservoir of comparative good will. And soon they are forgotten, and life goes on as before in a nation that has, in its way, opened up not only for Jews, but for so many peoples from all over the world.

Texaco not guaranteed quick relief in bankruptcy

NEW YORK (AP) - Texaco Inc. joins Manville Corp. and A.H. Robins Co. in seeking the haven of bankruptcy court not because it is broke, but because it wants protection from a potentially huge liability that could cripple its future.

As Manville has shown, however, reorganizing under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy laws does not necessarily provide quick or easy relief.

Texaco is solvent, just as Manville and Robins were when they filed. But Texaco petitioned for Chapter 11 protection Sunday because it faces a judgment of $11.1 billion that a Texas court awarded smaller Pennzoil

The judgment stemmed from Texaco's alleged interference in Pennzoil's proposed 1984 merger with Getty Oil Co., which Texaco acquired instead for $10.1 billion.

Texaco is appealing, but in the meantime is required by Texas law to post a bond equal to the damage amount. Texaco contends the bond would bankrupt the company and says the mere prospect of having to pay the bond already has strained the company's relationship with its suppliers and lenders.

Although it has $9 billion in cash or assets readily convertible to cash, Texaco decided the only way to protect its business was to freeze Pennzoil's claim, and the claims of all its creditors, by filing for Chapter 11 protec-

Under Chapter 11, a company is free to operate but is protected from creditors' lawsuits while it works out a reorganization plan to pay its debts.

Most companies seek bankruptcy court protection because they are running out of money. But on Aug. 26, 1982, Manville took the novel step of filing for Chapter 11 even though it was healthy.

Denver-based Manville sought protection because it faced thousands of lawsuits alleging death or disease among workers who were exposed to Manville's asbestos products.

The company believed it could use Chapter 11 to efficiently and quickly work out a plan to settle the claims in one forum But nearly five years later, Manville remains in Chapter 11. Manville's effort to fashion a strategy for paying asbestos victims has been tortuous and filled with disputes between Manville, its commercial creditors and representatives for the claimants. Manville now has a plan with which it hopes to emerge from Chapter 11 within a year. But analysts say it will be a costly burden for Manville for years to come.

The plan also is costly for Manville's stockholders, who will see their ownership of the company nearly erased. Their combined equity is to be slashed to only 6 percent as much of Manville's common stock is paid to present and future asbestos victims, commerical creditors and holders of its preferred

Despite Manville's problems, Robins took a similar step Aug. 21, 1985.

The Richmond, Va.-based pharmaceutical concern sought bankruptcy court to settle a flood of litigation relating to alleged health problems caused by its Dalkon Shield intrauterine birth-control device

Twenty months later Robins has yet to submit its reorganization plan to the court, partly because of delays caused by an unsuccessful takeover bid by American Home Products

Dean Gandy, a Dallas lawyer and former bankruptcy judge, said the Manville and Robins cases are not comparable to Texaco's in many respects.

In Manville and Robins, the potential liability involved thousands of current and future claims, compared with just one - Pennzoil's - in Texaco's case, he noted.

The amount of Pennzoil's claim also is clearly identifiable, while Manville, Robins and their respective creditors and claimants have wrestled to devise an equitable payment for each of the claimants.

Yet despite the clear-cut nature of Texaco's potential liability, it by no means faces an easy solution in bankruptcy court, Gandy

First, Pennzoil is likely to argue that Texaco is much too wealthy to be invoking the court's help and ask that Texaco's petition be thrown out, he said.

Failing that, Pennzoil might again seek help from Texas courts to begin seizing Texaco assets to enforce its judgment, he said, noting that bankruptcy courts "bend over backwards" not to interfere in state law.

Pennzoil might contend that even though its claim is unsecured - not backed by Texaco assets - and thus subordinate to Texaco's secured creditors, the claim still should receive a high priority when Texaco devises its reorganization plan.

FAA investigating four near-collisions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four incidents during a 10-hour period in which commercial jetliners came within 500 feet of small, private planes are under investigation, Federal Aviation Administration officials say.

There were no injuries in any of the nearcollisions, all of which occurred last Friday, but in two cases the pilots of the jetliners reported they had to take evasive action.

The four incidents involved a United Airlines Boeing 737 near Burbank, Calif., a Trans World Airlines Lockheed L-1011 near Newark, N.J., a Northwest Airlines DC-9 near Saginaw, Mich., and an American Airlines Boeing 727 over Chicago, the FAA confirmed Monday.

The agency has been under criticism because of an increasing number of such incidents. Last year, there were 340 nearcollision reports involving commercial aircraft, most of them filed by pilots, or an averahead at the same altitude.

age of just under one per day.

FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said in two of the Friday cases, air traffic controllers had provided the jetliner pilots with advanced traffic advisories and in another case the smaller plane was not on radar. It could not be determined how many passengers were in the jetliners. But some aviation safety experts said the total of four such incidents in one day is unusual. "How unusual, I don't know," Farrar

Congressional cost-cutting hurts poor, elderly

WASHINGTON (AP) - Costcutting steps enacted by Congress in the past six years have substantially increased out-ofpocket medical expenses for the nation's poor and elderly, a new study concludes. The report by the General Accounting Office finds that senior citizens in the Medicare program are paying about a third more than they used to, while poor people covered by Medicaid increasingly must contribute towards health care.

The changes are the result of five spending and tax bills passed during the Reagan administration, according to GAO, the nonpartisan investigative arm of Congress

The Medicare increase came to about $162 per enrollee in additional out-of-pocket expenses — a

Changes in out-of-pocket payments under Medicaid were unavailable because of program differences from state to state, GAO said. But the agency said 26 states have increased costsharing requirements for participants as a result of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982.

Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Calif., who requested the report, called it "a convincing argument for congressional and administration action to prevent further Medicare and Medicaid benficiary out-of-pocket cost increases' and avoid program cuts.

All five spending bills of the last few years encouraged states to curb soaring Medicare costs, GAO said.

The new laws led to a 49 percent increase in out-of-pocket payments for Part A Medicare services, including hospital, skilled nursing and home care, from 1980 to 1985, adjusted for inflation, the report said. The dollar increase

Double-duty furniture fascinates consumers

AP Newsfeatures

There's something about a secret compartment that many people find fascinating.

How else can one explain the popularity of a feature that is, at best, inconvenient and, in countless stories and novels, downright disastrous?

Besides the secret compartment desk, history is full of examples of furniture that has a hidden meaning, such as seating with built-in cupboards, tables that have their own attached seating and beds that disappear into closets when not in use.

And now a new exhibition of furniture with double meanings shows that the historic fascination is far from over. The showing of one-of-a-kind pieces at a branch of the Workbench furniture chain in New York will travel to branches in Columbus, Ohio, Chicago and Boston this spring and summer

Twelve furniture-makers have contributed about a dozen and a half examples of furniture that can be used or viewed in more than one way.

Not all the individuals with work in the show have been concerned with everyday practicality. Some examples of their ideas include a coffin-shaped cabinet its maker, Stephen Whittlesey, calls a "Mummy's Cupboard" and a "Musical Chair" that comes with its own drumsticks by Jeff Behnke. (Perforations render the seat musical when struck with the rubber-tipped sticks.)

On the other hand, a mahogany arm chair by Arthur Shaffer flips up to become a library ladder and could be useful in the right spot. A low valet seat by Alphonse Mattia is a good height for putting on one's shoes and has a series of small drawers that could hold for the night all the odds and ends many men seem to carry around in their pockets. Other ideas are useful or not depending on your circumstances. For example, Jay Stanger's "3D Painting Dining Table" looks like a colorful abstract painting, but folds down so that the underside becomes a wall-mounted table. It could be the answer to a studio apartment dweller's dreams as a practical way of fitting in a table and a picture at the same time.

If it were mounted in a rambling farmhouse, the invention might occasion quite a few raised eyebrows. But James Schriber's contemporary version of the 19thcentury settle table that is a bench with storage drawers and a table would be a nice addition to

The variety of examples of furniture with more than one role shows the idea still has the power to intrigue — and to solve some problems.

If that were not made clear in the exhibition, a trip around the rest of the store (or through any contemporary furniture store nowadays) would show that more prosaic dual purpose furniture is

According to Workbench's executives, sleep sofas, recliners, modular seating, desk-dining tables and wall systems with a choice of units to serve a variety of storage needs are more popular today than ever because they solve some problems of small space living.

Bernice Wollman, vice president, said similar tests of durability and quality should be evaluated when shopping both for oneof-a-kind pieces that will serve a functional use in the home and for mass-produced multi-use furni-

Wall systems, for example, require the most careful evaluation since these storage pieces usually need to support a substantial amount of weight. Poor quality can pose a special problem if the furniture is not adequate to the

Wollman says that whether the wall system is assembled at the factory or sold in a kit for home assembly, consumers should examine the places where side panels join top and bottom.

A tight fitting back panel, cross bracing, corner blocks and internal framing are signs of strong and stable furniture. The best KD systems incorporate carefully engineered locking hardware preferably of metal, while in standard furniture traditional doweled or tenoned joints of wood reinforced with glue are good.

A storage system is only as good as its shelves. Moveable shelves are more flexible but shelves that are structurally locked into the side panels are stronger than the removable

The rule of thumb is that the longer the shelf the less weight it can bear per running foot. Consequently, when heavy loadbearing is required, as in bookshelves, choose narrow units that have stationary shelves. To be sure of strength, opt for a system built with thicker boards.

Wollman said that despite obvious differences between art furniture and utilitarian furniture, there were similarities. 'Makers of both types are concerned with function, and pragmatic solutions to home furnishings needs.

Caribbean hideaway Ranch home becomes

The typical suburban ranchstyle home can be transformed from boring to beautiful with a little imagination.

People are snapping up older homes, including ranches, and redoing the interiors to suit current lifestyles. They find it's often cheaper than building a new house, and they get exactly what they want because they plan the alterations themselves.

To show how much potential there is in these older homes, the interior designers at Armstrong, the flooring company, turned the core of a one-story ranch into a suite of rooms with the flavor of the Caribbean. They bumped out a kitchen wall, entirely removed the wall between the kitchen and living room, and added on a sun

In the new suite you can almost hear the sound of a steel band and taste rum punch, so accurately do the colors and decorating touches evoke the Caribbean. The walls and kitchen cabinets are gleaming white, the cabinet interiors a surprising soft blue. Blue also is the cabana fabric that covers the cushions of the wicker chaise lounges. The Solarian no-wax flooring is sand-

A triangular island overlooked by a large skylight occupies the strategic middle of the kitchen. It's only a step or two from it to the refrigerator, wall ovens (microwave and conventional) and

The island itself contains a range, dishwasher, ample storage in swing-out doors and drawers and a large surface for preparing meals. One side of the island accommodates two pull-up stools for informal dining conveniently facing a TV built into the wall opposite.

Two white-painted ceiling fans in the kitchen circulate the air. The various parts of the suite flow freely into one another, and the no-wax flooring flows along as well to help unify the decor. It's crucial in open-plan layouts to carry elements of the decorating scheme throughout the entire

The formal living room-turnedinformal family room is the place to gather on chilly evenings. It's filled with comfortable chaises nestled near a fireplace.

The daytime place to be is the sun room, whose ceiling is a ribbed glass roof. The glass is tinted to reduce the glare, and the amount of sunlight entering can be regulated by opening or closing a retractable shade.

A wide ledge built into the arch between the sun room and kitchen serves as a table for four for dining, and after dinner becomes a game table. The stock wooden moldings that form the arch make an essential contribution to the suite's Caribbean atmosphere. The same moldings top lo-uvered doors in the suite. To complete the subtropical atmosphere, the suite is filled with an abundance of foliage, including graceful palm plants. For the occupants of this newly remodeled ranch-style home, it's almost like being on a perpetual

Son's daily food, fitness visits driving mom out of home, mind

DEAR ABBY: Our son, 26 years old, married three years, is attending college full time. The college is located near our home. He and his wife live in a small but very nice mobile home. She works. Now the problem: Our son comes to our house every day for lunch, which I have to make. Then he goes back to school for classes, and returns here to lift weights and exercise in our basement. (He hasn't space for his exercise gear in his mobile home.) He plays loud rock music (nervewracking to me) while exercising.

He is a sensitive and well-meaning person, and he would be hurt if he knew how much I resent this daily intrusion on my privacy.

Abby, each day I fix his lunch, give him a hug, then go "somewhere" just to get away from all that racket. I feel as though I'm being driven out of my own home. My husband says if we say any-thing to him, he'll be hurt, but close friends say I'm foolish for putting up with it. What do you say? IMPOSED UPON

heeler's Hartman headed for North Texas State

By JIMMY PATTERSON Sports Writer

WHEELER - Marlo Hartman, a standout post player for the Wheeler Mustangettes girls' basketball team, announced Monday she has been offered a scholarship to North Texas State University in Denton, Tex.

After strongly considering WTSU in Canyon, Hartman, who plans to major in accounting, said there were two main reasons she decided to attend the Denton school.

"They have a good accounting department," she said. "I also wanted to play Division I (NCAA) basketball. Those were big fac-

"I can't say I'm going to start as a freshman, but I think if I work on it, I might be able to start some games," Hartman said.

Hartman's coach at Wheeler, Jan Newland, agrees.

"North Texas has two returning seniors. If she plays and practices just as well as they, she has a chance to beat them for a starting spot," Newland said.

Just how much confidence does Newland have in Hartman's abi-

"She's been underrated all over the state, every year she's played here," Newland said, while agreeing she should have been named to the All-State team

Her statistics would support that theory, also. In the 1986-87 season, the 6-1 post averaged 24 points and 12 rebounds per game. She shot 57 percent from the field and an incredible 70 percent from the free throw

Hartman helped Wheeler to a 26-3 mark this year and a spot in the playoffs, before losing to Nazareth in the regional championship in Levelland.

In the 17th Annual Texas Golden Spread All-Star Girls' Basketball Tournament held earlier this month in Canyon, Hartman was a member of the East squad. Arguably, the team's most valuable player.

On the way to the runner-up title following a loss to the south in the championship game, Hart-man played with her usual consistency

In the two-game series, she had 31 points and 26 rebounds.

A native of Nazareth, Hartman will share the freshman spotlight with Ramona Black, who played for the South All-Stars in that tournament.

Black, a soon-to-be graduate of Plainview High School, also announced Monday she would be going to NTSU.

Hartman said she doesn't mind that she'i be going to a college some 300 miles away from her

Her parents, too, have supported her in her decision.
"They're for it all the way,

Hartman said. "They've always been great about letting me make up my own mind."

NTSU was established as a private institution in 1890, and raised to university status in 1961. Student enrollment at the school, located about 20 miles north of Dallas, topped 22,000 last semester.

NTSU's athletic program is a member of the Southland Athletic Conference.

Other members in the conference include the University of Texas at Arlington, Louisana Tech and McNeese State.

Bosworth decides to skip football draft

By OWEN CANFIELD AP Sports Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) -While it may have appeared that Brian Bosworth's decision to forego the National Football League draft was made long ago, the Oklahoma linebacker's father says that is not the case.

"When I talked to him Sunday he was still very much undecided about what to do," Foster Bosworth said Monday night from his Irving, Texas, home. "I guess he just decided there are other avenues to approach.

By not notifying the NFL in writing by the Monday deadline, Bosworth automatically became ineligible for the regular April 28 draft. The two-time All-American can participate in next summer's supplemental draft or can return to Oklahoma.

Bosworth said Monday morning that he was still undecided about what decision to make. Repeated attempts to reach Bosworth at his Norman, Okla., residence later Monday were unsuccessful.

'I kind of got an inkling of what he might do Sunday when we didn't sit down and draft anything up," the elder Bosworth

The NFL said Monday that it had not heard from the line-

"We don't have anything, and it has to be in writing," said Joel Bussert, director of player personnel for the NFL.

Bosworth, 6-feet-2 and 240 pounds, was expected to be one of the first five players drafted. His reluctance to enter the draft centered mainly on his wish not to play for the Indianapolis Colts or Buffalo Bills, who have the second and third picks, respec-

The Tampa Bay Buccaneers, who pick first, will take Miami quarterback Vinny Testaverde. The Heisman Trophy winner has already signed a contract with the Buccaneers.

While Bosworth can avoid being chosen by the Colts or Bills in the regular draft, there is still a good chance a poor team will get him in the supplemental draft.

In that process, Tampa Bay will get to toss 28 slips of paper into the hopper. Indianapolis will get 27, Buffalo 26, etc., with the Super Bowl champion New York Giants getting one slip of paper.

Dodgers hand Astros season's first loss three weeks while Madlock's out,

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A few days ago, Mark Cresse, the Los Angeles Dodgers' bullpen coach had some instructional advice for rookie Tracy Woodson. Two days ago I hit a ball off the wall in left-center field, and Mark told me, 'When you hit your first home run, hit the ball into the bullpen so I can get it back for you," Woodson said. The rookie followed instructions Monday night and deposited the first pitch he ever saw from future Hall of Famer Nolan Ryan into the Los Angeles bullpen in left-field. Woodson's homer led the Dodgers to a 4-2 victory over the Houston Astros, extending a Los Angeles winning streak to three games and making the Astros losers for the first time this year. Woodson, 6-foot-3, 216 pounds, has been filling in at third base for Bill Madlock while the fourtime National League batting champion recovers from arthroscopic surgery on his right

"Right now I've got two or but if I keep hitting the ball, maybe they'll find somewhere to play me," said Woodson, who led the Dodgers with a .364 spring batting average but has collected only five hits in his first 21 bigleague at-bats. "I want that position when he retires, so I have to do what I can right now. Right-hander Brian Holton, another Los Angeles rookie, equalled his longest career outing with five innings of four-hit ball for his fourth victory in 18 career starts.

The right-hander allowed four hits, including a pair of singles by Billy Hatcher that extended Hatcher's hitting streak to seven games. The only run off him came on Phil Garner's two-out, solo homer in the ninth.

"My curve wasn't as sharp as I would have liked," Holton said after evening his career record to 4-4 with his first decision in three relief appearances this season. 'But I put my fastball where I wanted to.

Clemens, who led the major leagues with a 24-4 record in his second full season with the Red Sox last year, said he he had "no hard feelings" after his prolonged wage fight with the Red

Clemens shocked the baseball world on March 6 when he walked out of the Boston training camp at Winter Haven, Fla., 24 hours before he was scheduled to start in the exhibition season opener.

He walked when negotiations broke down between his agents, Alan and Randy Hendricks, and Gorman, who handled the talks for the Red Sox with the advice of club counsel John Donovan and co-owner and chief executive officer Haywood Sullivan. Clemens was paid $220,000.

plus $120,000 in incentive money, in pitching the Red Sox to their first pennant in 11 years. The Hendricks brothers demanded a $2.4 million two-year contract -$1 million in 1987, $1.4 million in 1988. The Red Sox, who offered a base salary of $500,000 and $375,000 in incentives, rejected the demand.

With Clemens 30 days shy of being a three-year man and thus ineligible for salary arbitration, the Red Sox automatically renewed his contract for a negotiable $400,000 for 1987 after he walked out.

Negotiations stalled after the Red Sox stuck to their offer of a $500,000 base salary, although adjusting and increasing the incentive money.

Then, in the final week of spring training, baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth intervened. He acted as a mediator in getting Sullivan, Clemens and the Hendricks together for meetings at Scottsdale, Ariz.

Jordan hits 50 points to lead Bulls past Bucks

By BILL BARNARD AP Basketball Writer

Michael Jordan doesn't have to score 50 points to impress Chicago Bulls Coach Doug Collins.

When Jordan did just that Monday night, hs seventh 50-point game of the NBA season and second in two nights, Collins found other things to be pleased

"In my estimation, he's the greatest player in the NBA right now," Collins said after the Bulls beat Milwaukee 114-107. "He came back at the end of the game and got the big rebound, stepped in and made the free throws and dished for a dunk. There's not much more I can say. His performance speaks for itself."

Jordan's performance virtually assured that he will become the second player in NBA history to score 3,000 points in a season. Jordan needs 37 points, his singlegame average, in Chicago's last Philadelphia 113, Washington 105; Atlanta 102, Indiana 101; Detroit 120, New York 100; and Sacramento 123, San Antonio 118.

Jordan had 16 fourth-quarter points, made 16 of 31 field goals and 18 of 22 free throws and had nine rebounds as the Bulls improved their record to 40-40, a half-game behind sixth-place Washington and a half-game ahead of Indiana.

Jordan's steal and basket with 8:02 left gave the Bulls the lead for good at 88-86.

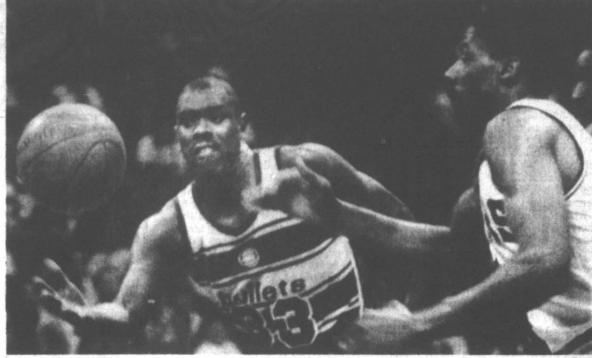

Jordan later scored six points during an 8-0 streak that extended a one-point lead to 102-93 with 2:45 left. Then he added five free throws in the final 19 seconds to seal the victory.

Charles Oakley added 22 points and 19 rebounds for the Bulls, while Terry Cummings had 24 points and Rickey Pierce 20 for the Bucks.

Hawks 102, Pacers 101 Atlanta, trying to earn the homecourt advantage in the first three rounds of the playoffs, pulled within a game of Boston in the Eastern Conference standings as Dominique Wilkins scored 28 of his 34 points in the second half against Indiana

Wilkins had 14 points in each of the last two quarters, including two free throws that put the Hawks ahead by four with less than two minutes to go. Indiana pulled within one point on a basket by Wayman Tisdale with 35 seconds left, but Antoine Carr's basket and Kevin Willis' free throw gave Atlanta a 102-98 edge.

Jackie Robinson changed face of America

By JOHN NELSON AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - In the spring of 1947, the Brooklyn Dodgers traveled to Chicago overnight by train to play the Cubs in their first meeting of the season.

It was to be a special game, one in a series of firsts. Jackie Robinson, a college-educated black man, was in a Dodgers uniform, playing baseball and changing the face of America.

Robinson already had become the first black man to play in the major leagues, starting at first base for the Dodgers at Ebbets Field on April 15, 1947 — 40 years ago Wednesday.

When the doors were closed at Wrigley Field, there were more than 47,000 in a ballpark meant to hold about 38,000.

"The place was packed," Cubs outfielder Phil Cavarretta recalled, "and in those days, you know — I don't mean to be degrading but black people very seldom came out to our games. This particular day, when Jackie was there with the Dodgers, the place was packed, and over half of them were black people. This was a special day for black Americans in Chicago, just as there were special days for blacks throughout the country during Robinson's first tour of the National League in 1947. Only later would all of America fully realize how special those days

"They cheered for this man like he was the late Babe Ruth,' Cavarretta said. "When he came to bat, fielded a grounder or stole a base, there was thunder in the stands.

Jack Roosevelt Robinson, the grandson of slaves, was born in Cairo, Ga., on Jan. 31, 1919, the fifth and last child of Mallie and Jerry Robinson, a plantation worker. Jerry Robinson left home for good when Jackie was 6 months old, and Mallie took the family west to Pasadena, Calif., the next year.

They moved into an all-white section of northwest Pasadena, living in a two-story house on 121 Pepper St. It was there that Robinson first heard the word 'nigger," and it was there that he learned how to fight back within the context of the games he would play later at UCLA and in major league baseball.

"Jackie was emotionally volatile," said Rachel Robinson, who married Jackie on Feb. 10, 1946 and was with him when he died on Oct. 24, 1972 of complications from a lifelong fight with diabetes.

"He was always ready to take action. Maybe volatile isn't the right word, but he had a strong emotional reaction to things. He could fight back very easily, as he did at UCLA. He knew all the techniques for fighting back within the structure of the sport he was playing.

"Early in his career, the major stress he was under in baseball was not to react.'

Robinson's days at UCLA where he was a standout football player and track star, and the time he spent barnstorming with a racially mixed baseball team were two things in Robinson's past said to have intrigued Dodgers' General Manager Branch

Already a pioneer in the areas of minor leagues and talent scouting. Rickey was ready to blaze another trail. He wanted to get a black man into baseball, and as World War II began to work its changes on the world, he felt the time was right.

"At the end of the 1945 season, Mr. Rickey called Jackie over," remembered Roy Campanella, who would join Robinson in the majors in 1948 and catch for the Dodgers for 10 years.

Rickey met with Robinson in his Manhattan offices for three hours, calling him every name that his strict Methodist upbringing would allow. It was a test, and Robinson passed.

Robinson would play one year for the Dodgers' International League team at Montreal before joining the Dodgers in 1947.

"All of us who played with or against him are so respectful of him," said Hall of Famer Monte Irvin, who broke into the majors in 1949 with the Dodgers' crosstown rival New York Giants. "We knew what he had to go through. A lot of us experienced the same things. ..

"They called us nigger. 'You're not gonna make it,' they said.' 'Coon, shine,' they called us. Anything derogatory," Irvin recalled.

While Robinson was the trailblazer, the experiences of other early black ballplayers closely paralleled those of Robinson.

"You knew you had to go play: someplace," Campanella said. "You'd be there on time, play, shower up and then go find a black hotel. You couldn't stay with the team. You did what you had to do."

Bill to sue school boosters pass through Texas Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas senators have sent the House a bill that would let Southwest Confer- tion now, mostly because of these ence members sue ambitious violations," Montford said. "This school boosters who cause NCAA violations that bring on suspensions.

There was no debate or opposition to the measure by Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock.

'This is the product of a year of research," Montford told the Senate Monday. "We consider this a workable approach to an increasing problem. Montford's bill would give colleges and universities and their regional associations, such as the Southwest Conference, the right to bring suit against individuals whose actions result in sanctions against schools by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

It passed on voice vote. Colleges and universities currently have no recourse against boosters who are not associated directly with the schools but bring on the suspensions by their violation of NCAA rules.

has caused the loss of ticket revenue and the loss of TV revenue and other costs. This bill would allow civil suits to be filed.'

Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, asked if the bill would cover the board of governors of a university, in apparent reference to Gov. Bill Clements' former role as chairman of the Southern Methodist University board of governors.

"This would allow SMU or the conference to bring suit, but not the board of governors," Montford said. "I would think if this bill had been in effect SMU probably could sue for several millions of dollars.

SMU's football program was suspended for 1987 because supporters of SMU's football team violated NCAA rules by giving money to athletes while the school was on a previous NCAA suspension.

"Four of the nine Southwest Conference school are on probation now mostly because of these George P. Shultz today renewed the invitation for Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to go to Washington for a superpower summit, but the Kremlin leader said "generally without reason I do not go anywhere, particularly to America.

At the start of a meeting with Gorbachev in an ornate hall at the Kremlin, Shultz delivered a letter from President Reagan containing the invitation to Washington.

"You're welcome to come," Shultz said. "I have a letter from the president and it says so."

Reagan and Gorbachev have held two summit meetings. The first was in Geneva in November 1985, and the second was in Iceland last October.

They agreed informally in Geneva that Gorbachev would visit Washington to see the president last year. Reagan then would have gone to Moscow this year.

But Gorbachev has not acted on the U.S. invitation, which Reagan renewed in the letter. Howard H. Baker range missiles from Europe.

MOSCOW (AP) - Secretary of State Jr., the president's chief of staff, said Monday in California that he would not be surprised to see a decision on a superpower summit emerge from Shultz' three-day visit to Moscow.

As Gorbachev and Shultz shook hands, posing for photographs, a reporter asked the Soviet leader if he would be going to Washington this year.

"That's precisely what we are going to discuss." Gorbachev said. "We must continue the discussion and then answer your question."

The Communist Party general secretary added: "I think I have to be hopeful, and it just cannot be that I would avoid America in my travels. But generally without reason I do not go anywhere, particularly to America. This cannot be just a walk.'

Earlier today, Shultz met with Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov and had a working lunch at the U.S. Embassy. At the same time, arms control experts from both sides met to work on a possible agreement on removing medium-

Destruction reported in Afghan bombing

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) -Soviet jets bombed and machinegunned villages in northern Afghanistan in revenge for a guerrilla attack on Soviet territory, and troops blocked roads to prevent civilians from escaping, sources said today.

Western diplomatic sources, speaking on condition they not be identified further, said Soviet air and ground attacks caused extensive destruction in northern Afghanistan's Kunduz and Takhar provinces next to the Soviet border in the first week of April.

Soviet soldiers surrounded Khunjai-Ghar and other villages in Takhar province and blocked roads to prevent villagers escaping before the jet attacks, the sources said. Civilian casualties were high, but no overall figures were available, they said.

Afghan guerrilla officials also have reported massive Soviet attacks in northern Afghanistan in retaliation for a March 9 guerrilla rocket attack against a Soviet border settlement. Several people were killed in the guerrilla attack, which the Soviet press confirmed.

Reprisal attacks were continuing well into April, indicating a major Soviet attempt to suppress guerrilla activity near the border and curb any Afghan civilian support for the insurgents, guerrilla and diplomatic sources said.

As many as 3,000 Soviet troops were deployed in the operation and one diplomatic source said ground forces were carrying out attacks on civilians.

Names in the News

NEW YORK (AP) -Actress Loni Anderson says she and actor Burt Reynolds would like to have a child but that perhaps a grandchild would be more realistic for her.

Ms. Anderson, 40, who recently moved in with Revnolds, said in an interview with McCall's magazine that Reynolds, 51, "wants a child more than anything else in the world."

"He really does believe it. Yet when Burt's around a terrible 2-yearold for any length of time, he kind of shrugs, pulls back and murmurs, 'Well, I don't know

"In all my fantasies, I want to have a child very badly," she said. "But when Deedee (her 20year-old daughter) told me she was getting married, I asked, 'So when will I be a grandmother?' Maybe a little baby, an infant in the family, will fill up the space for me more realistically.
