Canadian police chief suspended

Remarks about man's innocence prompt ouster

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

CANADIAN — Police Chief John Bradshaw has been suspended indefinitely while city officials investigate a claim that Bradshaw told a class he was teaching that he thought a convicted arsonist was innocent.

Interim City Manager Dean Looper confirmed Tuesday that the 45-year-old Bradshaw — the city's fourth police chief in four years — was suspended with pay while the city investigates a complaint leveled by 31st District Attorney Guy Hardin.

Canadian police Sgt. Phil Taylor was named acting chief pending the investigation, Looper announced this morning.

Chief Bradshaw could not be reached for comment this morning.

District Attorney Hardin said today that Bradshaw made his statement while teaching an Amarillo College law enforcement class about taking confessions. Hardin said a student in the class gave the prosecutor's office a tape of Bradshaw's lecture and signed an affidavit about the reported comments.

The district attorney quoted Bradshaw as telling the class: "We had a fellow in Canadian on probation and we took his confession and extradited him. But I know he didn't do it."

Hardin explained that the statement was made in reference to Claude Gene Grinder, who is serving six years in the Texas Department of Corrections after pleading guilty to setting fire to a rural Hemphill County mobile home Sept. 13. Hardin said Grinder was on probation when the mobile home burned.

Hardin said he will investigate the validity of Bradshaw's remarks concerning Grinder. The district attorney plans to visit Grinder in prison Thursday afternoon to take a statement.

"After hearing about Bradshaw's remarks, I fired off a personal letter to Bradshaw," Hardin said, adding that copies were sent to 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhany and the Hemphill County Sheriff's Department. He said he did not at the time intend to send a letter to the city.

"I was waiting for him to respond," Hardin said. "I don't know how this was made public."

Looper said he received a copy of Hardin's letter from "one of the other parties" on Monday. He added that

Hardin should have sent a copy of his letter to the city "because the police chief is answerable to the city manager and the mayor, not the district attorney."

Looper said he had decided to suspend Bradshaw late Monday. He added that he phoned Bradshaw in Dallas Monday afternoon, where Bradshaw is visiting a relative.

Looper said he had hoped to meet with Bradshaw in person "to give him a chance to respond" before the city announced the suspension.

Looper added that he hasn't been able to contact Bradshaw since the Monday telephone conversation.

"No one has been able to contact him at his home, and he has not shown up at City Hall or at the Police Department," Looper said late this morning.

Bradshaw told the Amarillo Daily News that he didn't know why he was suspended and had not seen Hardin's letter.

"If I screwed up, I can stand up and take my knocks," Bradshaw told the paper. "I'm just not sure what I've done."

Said Interim City Manager Looper: "I feel the credibility of the force has been breached."

Hardin said he feels betrayed.

Canadian Mayor Therese Abraham confirmed that she knew of the suspension Monday afternoon. She said she announced it to the City Council during an executive session Monday night when they were discussing an unrelated personnel matter.

Abraham added that the council didn't officially act on the suspension because, "Dean's job is to hire and fire the police chief."

School board won't alter make-up days

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

Wait 'til next year, parents protesting school on Memorial Day were told at Tuesday night's Pampa School Board meeting.

Parent Susie Edwards, 1936 N. Zimmers, presented a petition with the names of 322 citizens to trustees Tuesday. She said she had asked only 325 parents to sign the petition against school on the holiday.

The petitions decried a weather make-up schedule that may include school on Saturday and Monday of the Memorial Day weekend and that already forced students to attend class on Good Friday.

Good Friday was used to make up a snow day missed in January, while trustees are considering the Memorial Day weekend to make up two days missed as a result of the March blizzard.

Edwards told the school board that time students spend with their families is important and that many families plan trips or family outings on three-day weekends. She asked trustees to find a way to make up weather days without intruding on a family's limited time together.

"A lot of us believe that there should be a way that that can be done," she said. "If this means giving up all or part of spring break, the names on the petitions are willing to do that."

She noted that many parents are not off from work during spring break, unlike holiday weekends.

Edwards said if nothing can be done this year, she wants trustees to take parents' concerns into account when making up next year's school calendar.

School board President Joe VanZandt promised Edwards that trustees would take the petitions into consideration when drawing up the calendar. But, he contended, any decision this year essentially rests with the Texas Education Agency.

Trustees have asked the TEA to grant a two-day waiver from the state's 175-day class minimum to avoid having to send students to class on the holiday weekend. TEA has given no indication of how it will rule, but Interim Pampa Superintendent Tommy Cathey has predicted the agency will grant the district a one-day waiver at most.

Other options available to the board have disappeared in a quagmire of state laws and scheduling conflicts.

Extending the school year into June would mean rescheduling graduation a week later, a task school officials have described as akin to changing a wedding date after the reception hall is booked. Sending students to school on two alternate Saturdays in May would mean some students would be disqualified from extracurricular activities because of the state's so-called 10-day rule, forbidding students to miss parts of more than 10 days as a result of extracurricular events.

High School Principal Oran Chappell said some students are nearing the 10-day limit, and making Saturdays school days would mean those students would not be able to participate in important extracurricular events scheduled for those days.

Among the Saturday events scheduled in May are the state track meet in Austin — where Pampa's girls team is hoping to repeat as state champion — and a long-planned band and choir trip to Washington, D.C.

"Our hands are fairly well tied right now as far as what we can do and what we can't do," Van-

Canadian pushes for development

By CATHY SPAULDING

CANADIAN — City officials, business leaders and Chamber of Commerce representatives were on their best behavior today while "business prospects" checked out the city.

The visiting prospects are actually representatives of Texas Cities for Economic Leadership (TEXCEL), which is considering certifying Canadian for its state economic development program.

Canadian and Pampa are two of 12 communities up for certification under the development program. The towns receiving certification will be officially announced April 30 at a Texas Industrial Development Corporation workshop in Killen.

According to Canadian-Hemphill County Chamber of Commerce Director Diane Black, the TEXCEL team that visited Canadian today posed as a prospective business client.

"We're taking them on a tour of the city, and we prepared a written presentation sheet about our city," Black said.

On Monday, the Canadian City Council approved the city's TEXCEL economic development strategy and agreement designating the chamber as the town's economic development authority.

Black explained that, as the "lead agency," the chamber is High court favors capital punishment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a crushing defeat for opponents of capital punishment, ruled today that state death penalty laws are constitutional even when statistics indicate they have been applied in racially biased ways.

By a 5-4 vote, the justices upheld Georgia's death penalty law.

They said statistics showing that killers of white victims draw death sentences far more frequently than killers of black victims do not establish that the Georgia system violates the Constitution's equal-protection guarantees.

The closely watched Georgia dispute, perhaps the most important capital punishment case in a decade, had been hailed as the last sweeping attack against the death penalty. Death penalty opponents fell one vote short of casting into doubt the fates of hundreds of the nearly 1,900 men and women on death rows nationwide.

Writing for the court's majority, Justice Lewis F. Powell said the statistical study of Georgia's death penalty system "at most indicates a discrepancy that appears to correlate with race."

The ruling upheld the death sentence given to Warren McCleskey for the 1978 murder of an Atlanta policeman.

McCleskey's hopes to avoid death in the state's electric chair had been pinned on a study by a University of Iowa law professor, David Baldus.

Pampans unite to wage war against trash

'Head trash lady' talks

In a crowded luncheon meeting Tuesday, Pampa residents were urged to get behind efforts to clean up trash and litter from the community and state.

Addressing the capacity audience in the M.K. Brown Room of the Pampa Community Building were representatives of Keep Texas Beautiful Inc., the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation and Clean Pampa Inc., sponsors of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce monthly membership meeting.

Speakers included Ebby Halliday Acers of Dallas, KTB president; Mary Ellen Shoop of Austin, KTB executive director; Jim Moss of the Amarillo District office of the highway department; and Betty Henderson, Clean Pampa board of trustees president.

Henderson, who introduced the other speakers, said Acers is "just our head trash lady" in the KTB.

"I have been in trash for more than 25 years, and I'm proud of it," Acers said, later noting that her attorney and businessman

Highway work catches fire

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

Few people would be pleased to find a fire on a highway roadside. But a new state program has many volunteers burning to get out on the roads.

Jim Moss of the Amarillo District office of the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation spoke Tuesday at the Pampa Chamber of Commerce monthly luncheon meeting to urge people to get behind the Adopt-A-Highway program.

Moss said thousands of Texans, representing more than a thousand groups, will be out on highway roadsides Saturday to help pick up litter during the Great Texas Trash-Off.

The program is the result of a statewide effort to reduce the more than $25 million being spent by the state to reduce the trash on state highways, Moss said.

Adopt-A-Highway has swept the state since a trial program 3½ years ago in Tyler proved the plan was feasible. Before then, the state department had not let groups of people go out on the state's highway rights of way, Moss said.

But Texas "was spending millions of dollars picking up litter,"

Board

Zandt told Edwards. "It's one of those things that we just don't have all that much control over right now."

Chappell said he would like to see parents and others concerned be allowed to participate in the schedule-making process next year.

In other action Tuesday, the board agreed to permit Gray County Latch Key to extend its services to two remaining elementary schools: Travis and Lamar.

Program Director Londa Snider told the board 27 families at Lamar and 44 at Travis were interested in the program, designed to provide a place to go after school for children from families where both parents work.

Without the program, Snider said, many youngsters would come home every day to an empty house for several hours.

Snider said Latch Key currently serves 112 pupils at Wilson, Austin, Mann and Baker schools.

Austin Principal Bill Jones said his school has had the program two years. Jones described Latch Key as much more than just a "baby-sitting service."

Also at their meeting Tuesday, trustees:

- received a letter from Pampa-Gray County Emergency Management Coordinator Steve Vaughn commending Cathy and his staff for work done during the blizzard;

- hired former Texas Education Commissioner Raymond Bynum as a financial consultant to help with formulating next year's school budget, at a fee not to exceed $1,000;

- tabled action on granting an easement that would allow the city to extend Crocker Street behind Mann School to an alley behind North Banks, until Cathy can meet with city officials to see about getting the street extended all the way to North Hobart;

- accepted the resignations of Wilson first-grade teacher Pam Jeter, vocational teacher Debbie Lewis and Austin teacher Melissa Wellborn, the employment of Amanda Charles as a half-time high school biology teacher and Ernie Manning as a behavioral learning center instructor and assistant high school football coach, and granted Mann fourth-grade teacher Leslie Schafer a one-year leave of absence.

tricts in the state, there are now at least 76 groups participating in the program, he said. And it's still growing, Moss added, saying participants are "coming in so fast I can't keep up with them."

He said the Amarillo office recently received 15 applications in one day from groups wanting to adopt a two-mile section of highway.

The program "is picking up the litter, and we were not able to do it," Moss stated. Even if the program is not saving a cent, it is cleaning up the highways, he said.

Adopt-A-Highway has proved it is working, he said, with nearly a 30 percent reduction in litter reported on state highways in just the past year.

The program also ties in well with the Keep Texas Beautiful concepts relating to improving the highway entrances into communities, Moss said.

Moss said the program will get its biggest showing this Saturday when thousands will join together for the one-day effort of the Great Texas Trash-Off.

"We're tickled to death to get to do that," he said.

Moss said the Adopt-A-Highway program has become a model for other states also having similar litter problems. He said he expects Saturday's event will be talked and written about throughout the nation.

Betty Henderson, president of Clean Pampa Inc., said she understands the state has purchased 150,000 plastic bags to collect the trash in Saturday.

The one-day project represents "the greatest volunteer clean-up effort in the world," she stated.

Moss encouraged more groups to get involved in the program in Pampa and in smaller, surrounding communities.

Groups wanting more information on the Adopt-A-Highway program may write the highway department, husband, Maurice, has also been a KTB president.

Lady

Acers said she had been impressed with the highways into Pampa, the people she had met in the city, the attractive community building and the enthusiasm displayed by those at the luncheon.

"Congratulations on all the good things you people are doing," she said, adding that special emphasis must be given to Clean Pampa and its efforts to improve the community's appearance by cleaning up trash and litter.

Referring to Moss' remarks about the Adopt-A-Highway program (see related article), Acers said the highway clean-up program "is certainly going well," adding that its success is "probably a big surprise" to the state highway department and to Keep Texas Beautiful.

Involved in various civic, community, small business and KTB efforts, Realtor Acers said she wears three hats: the chamber of commerce hat, the small business hat and the Keep Texas Beautiful hat.

Yet all the hats tie together in their end result — to make a community more attractive to its citizens and business prospects, to draw more business to a city, to promote more tourism and to improve the economic climate, Acers explained.

"I'm a chamber person, and I know I'm preaching to the choir," Acers said. But no one truly interested in the community can afford not to be in the chamber and working together for the community, she said.

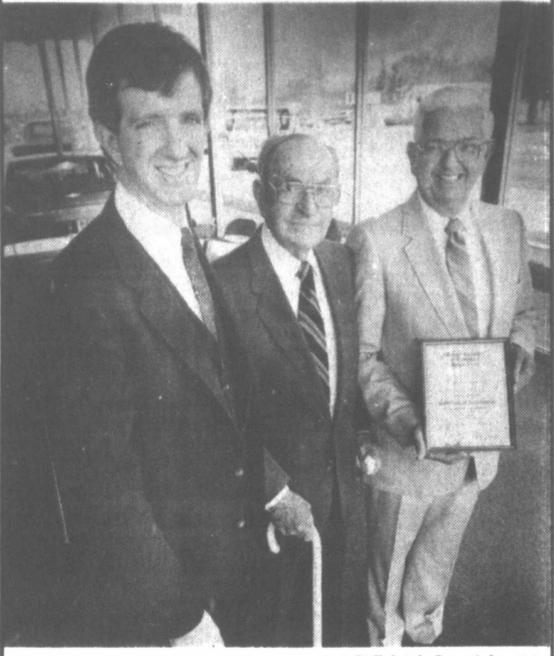

"And Clean Pampa Inc. will be one of the most valuable assets in your community," Acers stated, adding that she expects great things to happen through the organization "with your support."

She said Clean Pampa was "doing great in many areas" except for putting the Waste in Place program in the schools, "and that needs your encouragement."

Discussing the aims of KTB and its related associations, such as Clean Pampa, Acers said as many as five million anti-litter volunteers, working with the state, are seeking to "drive down litter" and to "aim at prevention as a solution." KTB allows the private sector, through grassroots support, to cooperate with the state in combatting trash problems, she said.

Acers said studies have indicated the most serious litter violator is "Bubba," males 18 to 34, "and they drive pickups on our highways." But KTB is trying to gain their involvement "in a positive program" throughout the state with the current "Don't

President emeritus

Richard Stowers, left, and Dick Stowers were also honored for their association with Culberson-Stowers Chevrolet, now in its 60th year of continuous operation.

Mess With Texas" program. "We have achieved phenomenal results in Texas" in the past year, Acers said, encouraging more residents to get involved with Clean Pampa's efforts.

The program is supportive of economic development goals, Acers said: a more attractive community, more citizen involvement and a means of impressing business and industry prospects with clean streets and community appearance.

"But the greatest thing of all is the community spirit, the can-do attitude," Acers said, encouraging people to go out and grab for the opportunities and to tell the world, "Don't Mess With Texas."

Acers then brought out a ukelele and played a song for "Beautiful, beautiful Pampa" and encouraged support for Clean Pampa. The audience gave her a standing ovation.

Shoop said every corner of Texas is involved in "the stewardship for our highways."

KTB and Clean Pampa offers a great chance for volunteers on the local level. "We are not bosses... we are all partners," Shoop said, adding that the state highway department is "our number one partner" in reaching out and asking Texans "to come aboard" and help.

"Clean Pampa is very much a part of the Keep Texas Beautiful program," she said, providing a type of grassroots movement using community volunteers.

An essential element in a long-range anti-litter program is in the school, reaching youth to make them aware of litter problems and to educate them to become responsible community members, Shoop said.

"A program in the school is invaluable" in developing a long-range impact, she said.

The KTB has developed a program to be used in the schools — Waste in Place.

"It's really taken off in the classroom, in science, art and social studies," Shoop said, noting Waste in Place is a nationally tested program that has received the support of Texas State Commissioner of Education William Kirby.

Waste in Place is compatible for classroom use under education reforms in the state, Shoop said, urging its support by principals, teachers, administrators and school board members.

Poindexter gets limited immunity

The comments about Casey came after the Senate panel voted unanimously to grant limited immunity to former National Security Adviser John M. Poindexter, the 13th figure in the case to receive partial protection from prosecution in return for his testimony.

Moss noted, and needed some way to cut back the escalating costs.

A number of Tyler residents, aware of the problem, suggested using groups, civic clubs and other organizations to go out on a selected section of roadway to pick up litter on a volunteer basis.

The Tyler District highway department formed a pilot program to see if it would work. "The program went well," Moss said, despite one tragic accident. The idea caught on, and with state approval, the Adopt-A-Highway program has expanded throughout the state.

Now thousands of volunteer citizens are involved.

"All of a sudden, this program caught on fire, and now it's snowballing," Moss stated.

House leaders unsure of tax ban's fate

AUSTIN (AP) — House leaders are unsure of the Senate fate awaiting a proposed constitutional amendment that would prohibit personal or corporate state income taxes unless voters give their permission.

"It's been over there before and they haven't taken any action on it. I would hesitate to forecast," House Speaker Gib Lewis said after representatives voted 106-35 Tuesday to approve the amendment.

Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, sponsor of the proposal he said would give voters the final say, called it "a fair compromise." But he declined to predict what senators would do.

Schlueter said that under the proposal, any income tax plan placed before voters first would have to pass both the House and Senate. That means voters would know precisely what kind of tax they would be paying, what the rates would be and what deductions would be allowed if they approved it, he said.

"This allows the people to find out what is going to be in an income tax before the Legislature passes it in the dark of night — which is the only way (without the constitutional amendment) it would pass if it could pass," Schlueter said.

The proposed constitutional change also would require the Legislature to return to voters if lawmakers wanted to raise the rates after an income tax was approved.

Opponents argued that the Legislature now has the power to enact an income tax if needed, and they said putting the question before voters would be passing the buck.

"I was elected to come up here and make decisions, not pass the ball off to the public every time we face a difficult choice. It's our job and our responsibility to vote for or against a state income tax," said Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen.

Hinojosa said it is unlikely voters would decide to tax themselves, adding, "They elected us to make those decisions. If they don't like the decisions we make, they can vote us out in the next election."

But Rep. Bill Ceverha, R-Dallas, said the Legislature often gives voters the final say on major state issues. Last fall, lawmakers chose to allow voters to decide whether Texas should legalize gambling on horse racing with an election to be held this November, he noted.

"We have, on selected items, gone to the people and said, 'How do you feel about this issue?' All it would take is a majority vote and a referendum of the people, just like we did on parimutuel gambling," Ceverha said.

Rep. Doyle Willis, D-Fort Worth, noted that before enactment of the state sales tax in 1961, some people urged lawmakers to pass a constitutional ban on that levy.

But the sales tax today is the state's major source of income, and without it state services would suffer, he said, urging lawmakers to defeat the proposed income tax limits and allow a future Legislature to decide if one is needed.

"Let's leave this out of the Constitution, where it certainly doesn't belong. I've got a lot of confidence in future legislators," he said.

Should the Senate pass the House proposal, the proposed constitutional limitation on income taxes would go before the voters in November.

Schlueter said he considers this plan a compromise when compared to previous amendments that proposed an outright ban.

"I think it's something the Senate can possibly live with. I think it provides a middle ground," he said.

responsible for developing local economic strategy to be submitted to the city of Canadian and the Canadian Industrial Development Corporation for approval. The chamber will also be the initial contact point for businesses considering locating or expanding in Canadian.

Black said the economic development strategy will "help the growth and diversification" of the area's economic base.

She listed two goals: To expand the number of jobs provided by existing businesses and industry and to diversify the county's industrial base.

To achieve the first goal, the chamber has set six objectives to be met between the next two and 12 months.

Among the objectives is to sell the federal government-owned Lake Marvin recreational area to private agencies or foundations.

Black explained that the lake, nestled in the Lake Marvin National Grasslands, was originally built during the Franklin Roosevelt administration as a Work Projects Administration project. It has been maintained by the federals ever since.

"The feds are not putting any money into this," Black said, adding that the chamber is talking with such wilderness preservation groups as the Texas Nature Conservatory.

She hopes a new owner will develop the lake's tourist potential.

"The lake may not be here in 100 years, but it is very important to preserve the plant life," she said. "We have species there that you don't find anywhere else in the Panhandle."

Another objective is to promote Canadian "as a stopping point" by offering motel guests passes to the municipal swimming pool, golf course and the YMCA. Black said she is working with businessmen and officials with the YMCA and the city on the passes.

Another objective, to be reached within four months, is to publish a directory of oil and gas service companies located in Canadian. The directory will be sent to home offices of oil and gas drilling companies operating in the Canadian area.

Black said the chamber has not started on the directory.

Objectives to be reached within the next year include:

- bringing more tourists by expanding the July 4 rodeo and city Centennial celebration, Fall Foliage Festival and regional sports events.
- sponsoring three retail promotions and two business assistance workshops through its Retail Merchants' Committee. The committee will begin a "shop at home" campaign using local news media and presentations to civic groups.
- visiting local businesses to recognize efforts to expand and remain in Canadian, identify special needs a business has in order to remain in Canadian and offer assistance in meeting those needs.

To help diversify the industrial base, the chamber hopes to compile a community profile to be used in conjunction with the existing brochure-folder in an outreach marketing program.

Other objectives the Economic Development Committee hopes to reach within the next year are:

- working with local land owners and Santa Fe Railroad to identify marketable sites for location of industry.

course," Abraham said.

The mayor said Bradshaw "does a good job." "But he goes out of town a lot," she added.

Before taking the Canadian police chief job in August 1986, Bradshaw operated the Panhandle Regional Crime Prevention Unit, an organization designed to help combat crime in the Panhandle. He has also worked with the U.S. Secret Service and has been an independent security consultant.

Abraham said the law enforcement veteran still teaches law enforcement classes and conducts crime prevention seminars. And his absences have created problems.

"He puts in his 60 hours a week," Abraham said. "But there's been a lot of times he's been out of town, going to Amarillo a great deal."

She added that the city has had "a lot of complaints because the police give a lot of tickets."

Abraham said that Bradshaw can appeal his suspension to the City Council.

Canadian City Council members were notified of the suspension the night they reviewed the Police Department's 1986 Annual Report. The department is made up of four paid officers and three reserve officers.

According to the report, officers wrote 860 tickets in 1986.

Canadian will interview another candidate for city manager's job

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

CANADIAN — City council members may cross Conroe hamburger merchant Lloyd Wood from their list of potential city managers — he has found a job.

Wood, 54, was one of three finalists city officials selected Monday to replace former Canadian City Manager Jody Butler, who resigned in January. Other finalists were interim Canadian City Manager Dean Loper and Robert Wherry, former Glenpool, Okla., city manager.

Canadian Mayor Therese Abraham confirmed Tuesday that Wood, who worked for several Kansas communities before becoming manager of Hamburgers Plus in Conroe, has found another job, but she did not know what the job is.

Abraham said the city will interview a third runner-up, Colonel Bob Moore, a post commander at Fort Sam Houston near San Antonio.

The finalists were chosen from a field of 23 applicants Monday at the council's regular meeting.

In other business, council members told a Canadian rent house owner that they could not waive his $25 disconnection fee even if he had billing transferred to his name.

Warren Harrington asked for this waiver after his rental house became vacant. He requested that the council transfer utilities to his name rather than shut them off and charge a disconnection fee.

"This is unreasonable," Harrington said. "I am retired and you are cutting into my income."

But Loper told Harrington that the disconnect fee applies to billing transfers as well as disconnections.

Council members accepted the resignation of City Attorney Joe Hayes, who is moving to Amarillo. They hired Hayes' law partner, Ty Sparks, as his replacement. Hayes had been city attorney for 14 years.

Council members also passed a resolution granting Abraham, Mayor Pro Tem Lonnie Donaldson, and the city manager, secretary and finance director access to the city's account balance information at the First State Bank. City Secretary Terry South, Loper and all council members were granted authority to sign checks.

The city passed the resolution after First State Bank President Jay Godwin asked Hayes who should be granted checking account authority.

Council members also approved revisions to the city's swimming pool policies. Under the revisions, the pool will be open for shorter hours and fewer days — 1 to 8 p.m. daily from June 1 to Aug. 16.

Miami band festival Thursday

MIAMI — Music and dry ice will fill the air at the Miami school auditorium Thursday as the Miami Warrior Band presents its second annual Concerto Festival.

The festival, which opens at 7 p.m., features solos from 12 high school and junior high school band students, band director Jeff Witcher and his wife. Also featured will be seven duets or ensembles.

According to Witcher, student soloists include Mindee Flowers, who will perform Beethoven's

"Andromeda" on the French horn; Nora Marucio's euphonium solo, "Is It Enough?" and Kjersti Morris' flute solo, "Open Arms."

The performances will be critiqued by Pampa Middle School band director Bruce Collins.

Witcher said his solo will be a tuba rendition of Eugene Bozza's "Effie Suite" about an elephant's escapades.

The dry ice will come as Miami band members prepare homemade root beer floats at a reception following the concert.

Students visit Post Office

LEFORS — Elementary school students will be taking field trips to the U.S. Post Office station in Lefors today and Thursday.

Postmistress Norma McBee said students from kindergarten through sixth grade in the Lefors school will be visiting the post office during the school day. Classes were to tour the facilities at 9 a.m., 10 a.m. and 1:15 p.m. today and at 1:15 p.m. Thursday.

The students will be shown the mail boxes and cancelling machine and will be able to watch the office personnel putting out the mail, McBee said. Assisting her with the tours will be postal clerk Karen Lake.

Students also will receive postal related handouts and treats. A photograph will be taken of each class at the post office.

McBee said the student tours began three years ago and have become something the children have begun looking forward to each year.

House panel hears bond issue

AUSTIN (AP) — The head of the AFL-CIO in Texas urged approval of a bill that would allow Texaco to post only $1 billion appeal bond instead of $11 billion in its court battle with Pennzoil.

AFL-CIO Texas president Harry Hubbard told Texas lawmakers on Tuesday that the jobs now held by about 8,500 Texaco union employees might depend on the legislation.

"Approval of this bill would help our business climate," agreed Bernard Weinstein, an economist at Southern Methodist University. He said he spoke for neither Texaco or Pennzoil but for the good of the state.

Several speakers representing Pennzoil spoke against the bill.

The discussion was on legislation proposed by Rep. Charles Evans, R-Hurst, that would put a $1 billion cap on appeal bonds in civil suits.

The legislative conflict stems from a 1985 state jury verdict that awarded Pennzoil $10.53 billion after determining Texaco unlawfully interfered with Pennzoil's attempted merger with Getty Oil Co. An appeals court cut the judgment to $8.5 billion but with interest the judgment is about $11 billion.

Under present Texas law, the losing side in a court suit must post a bond roughly equal to the judgment.

The pending bill by Evans, and another by Sen. Carl Parker, D-

Port Arthur, would limit that appeals bond to $1 billion.

"Texaco is telling the world it is not going to put up with rules the way they are and they want you to change them," said Joe Jamail, Houston attorney for Pennzoil. "Texaco could care less for Texas."

"This bill is a horrible example of overkill," testified Don Baker, an Austin attorney for Pennzoil. "It would be terrible legislative policy to legislate like this for special interests. This bill would just invite frivolous appeals."

Evans argued that the bill would be good for Texas. The fact it would benefit Texaco Inc., is coincidental, he said, and then chuckled. "I introduced this because it's a good bill."

He noted the State Employees Retirement Fund and the University of Texas investment system contains considerable amounts of Texaco stock.

"This bill is in the public interest," Evans added.

David Crump, professor at the South Texas College of Law, called the $11 billion bond requirement unrealistic. He said the worldwide capacity of firms that could grant appeals bonds is $1 billion to $1.2 billion.

Texaco has not posted its appeals bond, and would be affected by a $1 billion cap.

Trade barriers hit consumers' pockets

Apparently President Reagan believes it is better to appear forceful and in command in pursuit of a damaging policy than to do something intelligent and have some ignoramus call him a "trade wimp." It's hard to come up with any other explanation for his punitive tariffs on Japanese electronics products.

The Japanese are accused of violating an agreement foisted on them during the campaign season last summer to limit the production and sale of microchips and keep their prices artificially high. The treaty amounted to a two-country cartel, or an open conspiracy to harm U.S. consumers.

The pact was, of course, unenforceable; if it had been enforced, U.S. consumers and electronics manufacturers would have been harmed even more. But since the Japanese government didn't clamp strong enough controls on some Japanese companies, the United States has retaliated. Once again, American consumers, ever the unwilling foot soldiers conscripted into these trade wars, will get it right in the wallet, to the tune of $300 million. Aren't you glad we have a benevolent government to look out for us?

The proper thing would be to admit that the microchip pact was a mistake, to take note that the dangerous drift toward a trade war jeopardizes U.S. economic recovery and severely damage the emerging world economy — and announce a new strategy. Instead of blustering and threatening, our government could announce that it will remove a barrier to the U.S. market for every barrier to the Japanese market removed by the Japanese government.

Those who support bluster, threats, and retaliation in international trade matters talk as if they're the tough guys. All those foreigners, they whine, are perfectly free to sell things in the United States, but erect barriers to U.S. exporters so we can't get at their consumers. The only way to get their attention is to talk tough and retaliate. Otherwise we're playing the sucker.

We still have trouble understanding how letting American consumers make their own choices and buy high-quality, low-cost goods makes us suckers, but let that pass. Let's look the myth of the wide-open U.S. market.

The Reagan administration, while waxing eloquent about the benefits of free trade in theory, has imposed tariffs or quotas on autos, steel, motorcycles, machine tools, pasta, and computer chips — and renewed restrictions that sharply raise the price of clothing, sugar, dairy products, and many other consumer goods. In 1983 Murray Weidenbaum, former chairman of the Council for Economic Advisers, put the cost to consumers of U.S. tariffs and quotas at $58.5 billion per year in 1980 dollars. The cost today is more like $80 billion.

It's true that other countries also have important restraints that make things difficult for U.S. exporters and damage their consumers. But Japan, for example, has been removing restraints — though not quickly enough — in the last few years (as the United States erected new ones). For their trouble they get punitive tariffs and mock-macho posturing.

Campaigning for the future

The Democratic Party hopes the 1988 election will be a replay of 1976, when the combination of a White House scandal and a weak nominee cost the Republicans their hold on the presidency. But the Democrats shouldn't bet that Iranomok will have the impact of Watergate, or that Gerald Ford will be reincarnated at the head of the GOP ticket. They would be better off looking for parallels in another election that brought a Democratic victory — 1960.

A glance at the crowded democratic field of declared or likely candidates — Gary Hart, Jesse Jackson, Michael Dukakis, Bruce Babbitt, Richard Gephardt, Albert Gore Jr., Joseph Biden, Paul Simon — underlines what may be the crucial element in the next presidential contest. What most of them share is comparative youth. Only two are older than 50 — Simon at 58 and Dukakis at 53 — and several are 45 or younger. In 1988, a touch of youth could offer an important advantage.

There are two reasons. The first is Ronald Reagan, the oldest president in American history. Reagan was able to deflect the age issue in 1980 and 1984, but his recent physical ailments and his air of absent-minded confusion about the arms scandal have revived it. A candidate conveying youthful vigor should profit from the comparison.

The second and more important reason is the growing importance of the Baby Boom generation. In 1988, about 37 percent of the population will be between the ages of 21 and 42 — compared with about 26 percent in 1960. This group will amount to about 60 percent of the electorate in the net election. Two political scientists, Gregory Markus and M. Kent Jennings, argue in a recent paper that candidates have only two options: "Win this group or perish."

Age by itself doesn't reveal much about political preferences, but shared historical experiences inevitably shape the way people look at the world. Those who reached adulthood in the 1960s and '70s lived through the Vietnam War, the sexual revolution, the Watergate debacle, the civil rights movement, the rise of feminism, the failure of the Great Society, the energy crisis, double-digit inflation and more.

The results are a skepticism about the government's power to solve problems, at home or abroad, an ingrained distrust of authority and a tolerance of social diversity. On issues, Baby Boomers confound traditional ideological groupings, leaning right on economics but left on foreign policy and social issues.

They don't automatically vote for the youngest candidate: In the past two elections, they gave large majorities to Ronald Reagan. But 1988 probably will be the first election in which at least one of the presidential nominees will be, in effect, one of them.

Unlike Walter Mondale, almost any of the Democratic contenders ought to be able to address this generation of voters on its own terms, combining a youthful aura with the unconventional themes that resonate with Baby Boomers. Hart showed in his 1984 challenge to Mondale how potent that ability can be at the polls.

It could be a key Democratic advantage if the Republicans nominate someone who is not only older but closely identified with the status quo — say George Bush or Bob Dole. Bush is 63, Dole, 64. More important, both men personify the establishment Washington insider, a type that Baby Boomers learned to distrust from Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon.

Jimmy Carter in 1976 and Ronald Reagan in the past two elections have appealed to this group by stressing their opposition to entrenched politicians and policies. Neither Bush nor Dole could use that strategy, but they would be vulnerable to it — particularly against an imaginative Democrat willing to depart somewhat from his party's traditions and special interests.

The scenario that produces a Democratic victory is thus strongly reminiscent of 1960. That year, the Republicans nominated an uninspiring vice president who suffered from his association with a popular but aging president whose second term was characterized by lassitude and inaction. The Democrats, by contrast, chose a young senator noted more for his evocative appeals for change than for his legislative record.

John Kennedy managed to turn the election into a contest between the future and the past, a contest the future won. If the Republicans don't heed the lesson of the 1960 campaign, and the Democrats do, 1988 may provide a reminder.

Gorbachev's faces are red

The current leader of the Kremlin, Mikhail Gorbachev, is trying to put a new face on communism.

The new face is a smiling face.

But make no mistake, both faces are red. If we need anything more to remind us, we certainly have it in his attitude toward the saturation bugging of our embassy in Moscow.

On the other hand he is accusing us of manufacturing the bugging allegations for propaganda purposes.

On the other hand he is flexing military muscle off our East coast — five Soviet hunter-killer submarines under an umbrella of based-in-Cuba Soviet bombers.

Gorbachev has produced more conciliatory words than deeds.

President Reagan has been protesting since before his first election that the Soviet Union will "democratize" only as much as it has to for economic reasons — but that it will never allow freedom for Soviet citizens and it will never give up its intention to expand its influence worldwide.

Some Americans had so wanted to hope — and some to believe — otherwise. Before Canada's Parliament, President Reagan challenged Gorbachev to demonstrate his sincerity in seeking improved relations "by stopping trying to install dictators throughout the world."

He said, "The surest sign that the Soviet Union truly wants better relations — and it truly wants peace — would be to end its global strategy to impose one-party dictatorships and allow the people of the world to determine their own futures."

Henry Kissinger says the Soviets are in a lot of trouble. Gorbachev is himself fighting a constant rear guard action against senior individuals in the Politburo who want no reforms.

And Kissinger believes that if Gorbachev succeeds in his economic objectives — creating a stronger U.S.S.R. — he will become a more demanding negotiator and a more dangerous adversary.

On the other hand, an impoverished and struggling Soviet Union, more likely to see itself threatened by the economic might of the West, might be more likely to unleash military power.

All of Gorbachev's talk of reform is not new. Lenin in the '20s and Khrushchev in the '50s tried reforms that failed.

So Gorbachev is not going to change the Soviet system.

And we could find ourselves making concessions — in order to secure a politically happy-sounding agreement with Moscow — only to discover that Gorbachev has been replaced and the agreement is worthless.

The bottom line is that President Reagan has been correct in his admonition that our best hope for world peace is to keep us — the U.S. — strong enough to enforce it.

Fast food industry gets health conscious

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — "We want McDonald's food to fit comfortably into your well-balanced diet," proclaims the four-color, full-page advertisement for the country's largest fast food chain.

"Test Your Nutrition IQ!" challenges the headline on the paper place mats now being distributed at McDonald's. The quiz that follows leads customers to believe that the chain's meals are relatively low in everything from fat and sodium to calories and cholesterol.

Another fast food chain, Arby's, is reading an advertising campaign that boasts some of its offerings are "prepared in compliance with the guidelines of the American Heart Association." Indeed, an industry not previously known for its contributions to good nutrition claims to have suddenly become concerned about its patrons' diets. Skeptics suggest that much of that belated sensitivity to nutrition is part of a cynical attempt to neutralize efforts by health professionals and politicians to enact legislation aimed at fast food restaurants.

Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., plans to reintroduce legislation, initially proposed in 1986, that would require disclosure of the ingredients in all fast food offerings.

"The typical burger, fries and shake is anything but low-fat or low-cholesterol... (and) the amount of sodium in our fast food is clearly alarming," says the senator.

"Fast food labeling would allow consumers... to avoid meals heavy in fat, sugar and sodium. They would know whether their french fries had been cooked in vegetable oil or in beef fat and whether their shake contained any real milk," adds Chafee.

Among the organizations endorsing

Chafee's initiative are the American Heart Association, American Cancer Society and National Parent-Teacher Association. Opposing it is the National Restaurant Association, which claims labeling "would create undue anxiety" among fast food patrons.

Michael Jacobson, executive director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest here, suggests there is good reason for that anxiety: "Eat a McDLT, french fries and a shake and you will ingest an artery-clogging 15 teaspoons of grease."

McDonald's, which has launched a multi-million-dollar, nutrition-oriented advertising and promotion campaign, typifies the industry's ambivalence on the issue.

The company publishes a booklet of detailed information about its food that is supposed to be available at all of its stores — but two out of three outlets visited here had none in stock.

Although most physicians identify cholesterol as an artery-clogging substance that leads to heart disease, the McDonald's booklet contains a curious paragraph about cholesterol that only touts its purported virtues.

"Its presence is considered normal in the body," says McDonald's. "Cholesterol is necessary for the production of hormones and for transport of essential fatty acids."

In mid-1985, Jacobson's organization requested ingredient information from 12 fast food chains. Six refused on the grounds that the information was confidential, two said it was not available and three failed to respond to repeated requests.

Only Arby's provided all of the data. Now, almost two years later, not only McDonald's but also Burger King, Wendy's and others offer the information — but the industry remains relatively benighted on the issue.

IRS resisting bill to shift burden of proof

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a country where "innocent until proven guilty" is a basic right, the Internal Revenue Service is resisting a bill that would shift to the IRS the burden of proving that a tax return is incorrect.

"I don't think it's (a question of) guilty until proven innocent," IRS Commissioner Lawrence B. Gibbs says in drawing a contrast between civil tax law, which places the burden of proof on the taxpayer, and criminal law, which requires the government to prove its case.

Since the taxpayer has access to all the information to show whether a return is correct, Gibbs said, "the burden is on the taxpayer to show he's reported all income and is entitled to deductions and credits claimed."

The commissioner told a Senate Finance subcommittee Tuesday that shifting the burden of proof to the IRS would result in a system that is more intrusive than existing law.

The provision shifting the burden of proof is one of several in a measure, called the "taxpayers' bill of rights," aimed at curbing the powers of the IRS. The measure, which is being considered by the subcommittee, grows out of years of complaints that some IRS employees have trampled taxpayers' rights.

"The question before us here today is what can we do to protect the rights of our citizens without handicapping the tax-collection system," said Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., subcommittee chairman and a sponsor of the bill. "If we find that it is impossible under the existing procedures to preserve the basic due-process right of taxpayers, then Congress is obliged to make reforms."

Since the panel's opening hearing on the bill April 10, Pryor said, he has received more than 400 letters, most of them telling "horror stories" about alleged abuses by the IRS.

Gibbs acknowledged that some of the 100,000 IRS employees occasionally have been guilty of excesses, but added, "By and large, we are talking about a very small minority ... in a tax system that for all its faults is recognized as best in the world."

The commissioner told the subcommittee that several parts of the "taxpayers' bill of rights" are not necessary, but he pledged to work with Congress to build up confidence in the IRS.

"We must increase the quality at the IRS and we are committed to doing that," Gibbs said.

He promised to strive for a change in attitude among IRS employees so that taxpayers are viewed as customers who deserve "to be treated fairly, competently, professionally and timely." The ideal employee, he said, will be able "to distinguish between somebody trying to pay a fair share and those who don't."

The bill is sponsored chiefly by Pryor and Sens. Harry Reid, D-Nev., and Charles Grassley, R-Iowa.

Hinckley allegedly said he wrote movie review for porno magazine

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shortly after John W. Hinckley Jr.'s psychiatrist recommended he get an Easter pass from a mental institution, the presidential assailant told her he had written a movie review for a pornographic magazine, sources say.

Hinckley made the statement April 3 to Dr. Joan Turkus, who joined other psychiatrists at St. Elizabeths Hospital in recommending that he be given an Easter pass to visit his family without an escort, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Hinckley was acquitted by reason of insanity in the March 30, 1981, shootings of President Reagan, presidential press secretary James S. Brady, a city policeman and a Secret Service agent.

The hospital last week withdrew its March 23 request for court permission for the pass for Hinckley following revelations that he had exchanged letters with triple murderer Theodore Bundy.

The names of the publication and the movie Hinckley reportedly wrote about could not be determined Tuesday.

Clendon Lee, a spokesman for U.S. Attorney Joseph diGenova, declined to comment about the Hinckley movie review.

Dr. Harold Thomas, a hospital spokesman, said he would inquire about the report but he did not comment on it.

Hinckley's admission that he had penned the movie review led to further questioning by Turkus about his correspondence, which the hospital stopped monitoring in 1984, the sources said.

On April 7, Hinckley told Turkus that he had written to Bundy, according to testimony at an April 13 hearing on the proposed Easter visit.

Turkus, who called the Bundy letters innocuous, did not make note of them in the hospital record until April 13, according to prosecutors' statements in court last week.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker suspended the April 13 hearing following the surprise revelations that Hinckley had written Bundy, who is appealing death sentences for three Florida murders and is linked to three dozen other killings.

Two letters from Bundy to Hinckley were given to the court.

Parker ordered Hinckley to turn over additional writings and letters found during a court-ordered search of his room.

Those documents will be placed under court seal for future use if the hospital renews its request to grant Hinckley an off-grounds family visit.

The hospital withdrew its request amid criticism by federal prosecutors over failure to disclose the Bundy correspondence.

The National Institute of Mental Health, which operates the hospital, has begun a review of how St. Elizabeths manages the cases of patients who have been acquitted by reason of insanity. The review was begun at the request of diGenova, who publicly criticized the hospital's management of the Hinckley case.

Meanwhile, the hospital and a spokesman for Hinckley's family disputed reports that John W. Hinckley Sr. paid for the courtroom testimony of psychiatrist Glenn H. Miller.

diGenova said over the weekend he was shocked to learn that Miller's fee to testify at the April 13 hearing was paid by Hinckley's father instead of the hospital.

Miller said he had not yet billed anybody for the court testimony.

Thomas, the hospital spokesman, said Miller was hired by the hospital in February to examine Hinckley and do a report, but he did not say whether the hospital plans to pay Miller's bill.

AIDS testing for sexual assault suspects proposed

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Sexual assault suspects should be tested for the AIDS virus so authorities can file additional charges — possibly even murder — against those who test positive, a prosecutor says.

But Alan Nudelman, supervising deputy district attorney in Santa Clara County, acknowledges that legislation or a statewide referendum may be needed to make his proposal legal.

And civil rights advocates oppose Nudelman's idea, saying such mandatory testing for the AIDS virus is an invasion of privacy.

State law allows the prison term of someone convicted of a sexual assault to be increased by five years if he is proven to have transmitted venereal diseases to his victim.

It would be illegal to do that in cases involving acquired immune deficiency syndrome, however, under a state court ruling last week that mandatory testing for the AIDS virus is prohibited by a 1985 California law.

"It's absolutely untenable to take the position that you can punish someone for transmitting syphilis, gonorrhea or herpes in the commission of a sexual assault, and not prosecute for the transmission of AIDS," Nudelman said.

Nudelman and Harry Stangel, commander of the San Jose Police Department's sexual assaults unit, have proposed that AIDS testing be added to the blood tests already routinely administered to sexual-assault suspects.

Those found to have transmitted the virus to their victims could have years added to their penalty, and could face murder charges if the victim contracted AIDS and died within three years, Nudelman said.

Last week's ruling by the 4th District Court of Appeal in San Diego came in the case of a homosexual man who bit two San Diego police officers during a demonstration, then protested when police drew blood for testing for the AIDS virus. The court disallowed the blood test.

Prosecutors who wanted to stiffen the assault charges against the man if he did have the AIDS virus say they haven't decided whether they will appeal the decision to the state Supreme Court.

"Right now, based upon the rulings at the Court of Appeal, it's either going to take some action by the Supreme Court, or it's going to take some legislation to cure what is clearly a very, very substantial shortcoming in the current state of California law," Nudelman said.

The prosecutor and police commander said victims of sexual assault also have the right to know whether they may have been infected with the AIDS virus.

"It's possible that this rapist or sexual assault person could become a mass murderer," said Stangel, whose unit investigates about 2,000 sexual assaults a year. "If someone commits a sexual assault and gives a victim AIDS, they should pay the penalty."

Fallout trial plaintiffs not surprised by appellate ruling

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Martha Laird was not a bit surprised by an appellate court's ruling that the government can't be blamed for her son's death from leukemia 30 years ago despite nuclear tests near her former home.

The 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver on Monday overturned a 1984 decision that the federal government negligently failed to warn residents of southern Utah, southern Nevada and northern Arizona of radiation hazards from above-ground nuclear blasts at the Nevada Test Site from 1951 to 1962.

"They're never responsible for anything, are they?," Laird, a plaintiff in the case, said Tuesday from Carson City, Nev. "I'm very disgusted, but I'm not surprised."

In striking down the ruling by U.S. District Judge Bruce Jenkins of Utah, the three-judge panel held that the government is immune from claims for injuries suffered as a result of an official decision.

In a similar ruling filed Friday, the 10th Circuit also said that the government cannot be held liable for failing to warn southern Utah uranium miners of radiation dangers.

In that 16-page decision, a three-judge appeals court panel affirmed a Utah federal judge's finding that the United States cannot be held liable for keeping miners ignorant of radon dangers in the Marysvale-area uranium mines 36 years ago. In July 1985, U.S. District Senior Judge Aldon J. Anderson granted summary judgment to the federal government, ruling failure to warn the miners of the hazards was a government policy decision and was therefore protected.

Jenkins' ruling went the other way. He presided over a 13-week trial in 1982 in which 1,200 plaintiffs contended that fallout caused friends and family members to sicken or die from cancer and other maladies despite official assurances the fallout was not dangerous.

The judge chose 24 claims representative of different forms of illness. In 1984, he issued a 500-page ruling that government negligence led to the cancers of nine people and awarded their families $2.6 million.

However, the appeals court ruling said the government could not be held liable because of the discretionary powers given to the now-defunct Atomic Energy Commission.

Presiding Judge Monroe McKay wrote in a concurring opinion, "Until Congress amends the discretionary function exception to the (federal Tort Claims Act) or passes a specific relief bill for individual victims, we have no choice but to leave them uncompensated."

Plaintiffs' attorneys have vowed to appeal the ruling as far as the U.S. Supreme Court.

Soviet planes seen off U.S. east coast

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Air National Guard jets have intercepted four Soviet warplanes during the past week flying over international waters as close as 190 miles from the East Coast, officials said.

"They were performing some kind of anti-submarine warfare maneuvers," said Lt. Col. Isiah James.

Joint ventures could prove to be exceptionally rewarding for you in the year ahead, especially those directed by people you admire and trust.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your judgment in most situations will be good today, with the possible exception of the management of your resources. Be smart there as well. Major changes are ahead for Taurus in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't discount the importance of something that comes easily for you today. Don't complicate issues to make them seem more worthy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't get angry with associates just because they don't perform up to your expectations today. When the accounts are balanced, you should come out ahead.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It's best not to make major changes on the spur of the moment today. Before doing anything drastic, take into account all the ripple effects.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Hasty agreements made with others today might not survive. Involved parties would be wise to take more time to iron out all the details.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Try to handle important assignments early in the day. By late afternoon you could tire a bit, and it will have a negative effect on your temperament.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your luck has its limitations today, especially in speculative ventures where you hope to garner a big reward from a relatively small outlet.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) To accomplish your purposes today, you might make unnecessary concessions. In the final analysis, what you gain will be insignificant.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you suffer a disappointment today, it's likely to be of your own doing, not the fault of people at whom you'll be pointing the finger of blame.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Prudent judgment will be required in your financial affairs today, or you might be extravagant and waste funds you should be saving away.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Guard against inclinations today to alter your course just when a goal for which you are striving is within reach. Success is possible if you follow your blueprint.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you have to make a choice today, rely on your logic rather than your hunches, especially if the judgment pertains to a matter of financial importance.

Linnas arrives

Karl Linnas, who has been sentenced to death by the Soviet Union, arrives in Tallinn, the capital of Estonia, a Soviet republic on the Baltic, Tuesday. Linnas was deported from New York to Prague after being tried by the Soviets and found guilty in absentia on charges he ran a Nazi concentration camp in Tartu, Estonia, during World War II.

Military discontent shakes Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — A company of army engineers ended a six-hour revolt in the northern city of Salta as Argentina was shaken anew by military discontent over human rights trials and the makeup of the general staff.

Late Tuesday, Defense Minister Horacio Jaunarena said the situation at military bases throughout the country was "one of absolute normality."

The unrest followed two related rebellions last week by groups of officers who oppose the army's leadership and want amnesty for soldiers accused of torture and killing under military governments that ruled from 1976-83.

At least 19 high-ranking officers have resigned or been fired in the unrest.

The five-man Supreme Court met in extraordinary session Tuesday and decided to request reports from all federal courts hearing human rights cases. The court is considering taking charge of the cases, two legislators and court sources said Tuesday. The court will meet again today.

It also is considering changing the interpretation of a law so as to exempt some officers from prosecution on the grounds they were following orders. About 250 officers face charges of human rights abuses during the military's "dirty war" against suspected leftists, in which at least 9,000 people disappeared.

The army long has sought a court ruling, that many officers who may have committed crimes acted under orders from superiors.

President Raul Alfonsin, whose election in 1983 ended military rule, held an emergency session Tuesday with Supreme Court President Jose Severo Caballero, but no details were given on the meeting.

In downtown Buenos Aires, 2,000 militant leftists protested Tuesday night in the front of Government House against the army revolts.

Jaunarena met late Tuesday with the new army chief of staff, Gen. Jose D. Caridi, to analyze the replacement of 10 generals, a colonel, seven lieutenant colonels and a major who were replaced in the military unrest that surfaced April 15 with a two-day military rebellion in the western city of Cordoba.

Air force bombs Tamil strongholds

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Government warplanes today pounded Tamil separatist strongholds in retaliation for the terrorist bombing of Colombo's main bus station, and the two-day civil war death toll rose to more than 220.

Near Trimcomalee in eastern Sri Lanka, Tamil rebels detonated a bomb under an army vehicle today, killing 15 soldiers and wounding another 60, according to a military officer.

The officer, who commented on condition of anonymity, also said Tamil separatists attacked an army camp at Kankesamurai, 12 miles north of Jaffna, and killed 14 soldiers and three policemen late Tuesday. He said eight rebels were believed killed.

Today's violence raised to at least 360 and perhaps more than 450 the number of people killed in ethnic violence since Friday.

So far 106 have been confirmed dead in Tuesday's bus station bombing, which the government blamed on the rebels. But one official said the toll could exceed 200.

The military sources said revenge-seeking Sinhalese prisoners at Colombo's penitentiary may have been beaten to death six Tamil prisoners.

The government said the air force carried out retaliatory bomb attacks today on outposts of the two Tamil rebel groups that it blamed for the bus station bombing. It said the air strike killed at least 80 people and injured about 80 others.

Tilak Ratnakara, chairman of the government media center, said some civilians may have been among the injured in the bombing on the Tamil rebel-dominated Jaffna peninsula.

"The government has issued a call that civilians should not remain near known militant targets," he said. "The government will continue to strike at these targets until civilian killings are stopped and peace negotiations resume."

Sinhalese, who are mostly Buddhist, make up a majority of island's 16 million people and control the government and military. The mainly Hindu Tamils claim they are discriminated against by the Sinhalese, and Tamil guerrillas have been fighting for four years to set up an independent homeland in the north and east.

Ratnakara said the confirmed toll from Tuesday's blast was 106 dead and 295 wounded, many of whom were badly burned.

However, he said the number of dead could rise, and that the dismemberment of many bodies was making the count difficult.

"We cannot count heads and arms," he said.

Another official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said more than 200 people may have died in the explosion, which occurred shortly before 5 p.m. when the open-air terminal was crowded with thousands of workers heading home.

Thronges of people stood behind police lines around the station this morning, staring blankly or pointing at the carnage.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility. Officials blamed the blast on Tamil guerrilla groups, but they denied involvement.

After Tuesday's explosion, several Tamil-owned shops were stoned or looted.

The military officer said at today's briefing that one Tamil was apparently beaten to death near the station shortly after the bombing.

Ratnakara said it was believed the bomb was planted in a car, but that police were still investigating that aspect of the blast. He said a second bomb was found in a nearby bus and defused.

Offices, banks, schools and many shops were closed today by government order.

Tuesday's blast came after more than 140 people were killed in two massacres in the previous five days.

New grits recipes bring flair to Southern traditional cooking

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Few foods, especially those that are so basically bland, stir up as much ire and passion as grits. Yet, along with the familiar biscuit, they symbolize Southern cooking. And loving them is almost aligned with loving the South.

To many native Southerners, grits are as necessary for a good breakfast as bacon and eggs. Steaming-hot grits, topped with butter, have been included in their daily diets for generations.

But visitors and regional newcomers tend to approach their first serving of grits with a certain amount of fear. That first experience is often a negative one. And the reason may be that many of these folks have never eaten "true grits" — cooked slowly over low heat and stirred every so often so they don't stick to the pan.

Curiously, grits are closely related to cornmeal, enjoyed extensively both in the South and out of it. They're derived from the same base — dried kernels of corn, whole or ground.

The heart of the corn kernel is hominy. To separate out the hominy, corn kernels are hulled, washed and boiled. When the hominy is ground into very fine particles, it becomes cornmeal. And when it is ground coarsely, it produces grits.

Grits come in three forms — regular, quick cooking and instant. To the true grits lover, quick cooking and regular varieties have the most satisfying taste and texture.

While the origin of the word "grits" is not certain, it may relate to the product's texture, which is actually gritty since it is a collection of those tiny particles of ground hominy.

But while the name's beginnings are questionable, the origin of the product is fairly well nailed down. Southern historians claim grits as America's first food, which was offered by the Indians to the settlers who landed in Jamestown, Virginia in 1607.

Those American Indians are generally credited for giving us the process for making grits. They learned to soak corn in lye-water to remove the skins. And those tender inner kernels were then washed and boiled to make hominy or ground into grits.

The Indians called the product they gave to the settlers "rockahominie." That name was later shortened to hominy and was to become the mainstay of the Southern diet.

Besides being delicious and filling, grits are also good for you. Like other grains, they provide vegetable protein that, when combined with a little meat or cheese, or some beans, produce a complete-protein meal.

By themselves, grits are a simple staple. But nobody eats grits plain. At the very least, butter and salt or pepper are a requirement.

But for generations, Southern cooks have shown a tremendous amount of ingenuity in fixing grits, allowing them to become a major ingredient in every kind of recipe imaginable. You could say that grits are to Southern cooking what rice is to Oriental fare and pasta is to Italian chefs.

Americans now consume more than 600 million pounds of grits a year, and the challenge for many comes in thinking of new uses for this ever popular Southern staple.

The three recipes below will please both experienced grits cooks and those seeking to add some flair to this traditional Southern cooking art.

FRIED CHEESE GRITS PARTY BITES
4 cups water
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup quick grits
1 egg, lightly beaten
1 cup (4 ounces) grated sharp Cheddar cheese
¼ teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon hot pepper sauce

1 cup self-rising flour
Bring water and salt to boil in large saucepan. Slowly stir in grits; cook 4 to 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat. Stir small amount grits mixture into egg; return all to saucepan. Add cheese, paprika and hot pepper sauce; blend well. Pour mixture into greased, shallow 2-quart casserole. Cool; cover and place in refrigerator several hours or overnight. Cut into 1-inch cubes and coat with flour. Deep fat fry until cubes are golden brown and float to the top. Drain well; best served warm. Good with sweet and sour sauce.
Makes about 40 appetizers.

JALAPENO CHEESE GRITS

1 to 2 tablespoons chopped jalapeno pepper
Paprika

Preheat oven to 350°F. Grease a 2-quart baking dish. Bring water and salt to a boil in large saucepan. Slowly stir in grits. Cook 4 to 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat. Add butter and cheeses, stirring until all are melted. Stir in Worcestershire sauce, eggs and chopped pepper. Pour into prepared dish. Sprinkle lightly with paprika. Bake about 45 minutes or until set.
Makes 6 to 8 servings.

CREOLE GRITS CASSEROLE

Bring water and salt to boil in large saucepan. Slowly stir in grits. Cook 4 to 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Pour grits into greased loaf pan; cover and chill. Saute celery, onion and green pepper in oil. Stir in mushrooms, tomatoes, ketchup, oregano, salt and pepper. Simmer 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Preheat oven to 350°F. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Baked Chicken and Apples is a tasty and satisfying meal for those who count calories.

Baked chicken can perk up eating for fitness and health

Eating for fitness and good health can be a challenge, but it doesn't necessarily result in bland and uninteresting dining — not when those who plan their meals with good nutrition in mind choose chicken.

It has been said that creative cooks could serve chicken every day of the year and not repeat the same dish twice. A simple change of seasoning with herbs and spices or the addition of varied ingredients such as healthful fruits and vegetables can produce tasty but different dishes without adding to chicken's naturally low calorie count.

The National Broiler Council developed two low-calorie recipes below which rely on fruit and spices for a change of flavor rather than on heavy sauces. Both are so delicious you'll think you are cheating on your diet!

Baked Chicken and Apples is quick, easy and colorful. Apples, which are available year-round, add a touch of natural sweetness to the diet. A subtle blend of spices seasons the combination with chicken to perfection.

Fresh Herb Baked Chicken is another dieter's treat. Also easy to prepare, the chicken takes on fresh-from-the-garden flavor as well as color from a savory mixture of herbs. There's another plus in serving chicken often. It's economical — for a lighter wallet as well as a lighter you.

BAKED CHICKEN AND APPLES

8 broiler-fryer chicken parts
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon ginger
¼ teaspoon curry powder
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
Vegetable cooking spray
¼ cup water
3 apples, cored and sliced

In small bowl, mix together salt, pepper, ginger, curry and cinnamon; set aside one-fourth of this mixture (¼ teaspoon). Sprinkle chicken with remaining spice mixture. Spray non-stick frypan with vegetable cooking spray; heat over medium-high temperature. Add chicken and cook, turning about 15 minutes or until brown on all sides. Pour off all accumulated oil from pan; set aside. Add water to frypan and remaining ¼ teaspoon of spice mixture. Stir in reserved drippings. In 2-quart baking dish, arrange slices of two of the apples; top with browned chicken. Place remaining apple slices on top. Pour liquid from frypan over all. Cover and bake at 350°F. for about 45 minutes or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease.

Makes 4 servings.

FRESH HERB BAKED CHICKEN

8 broiler-fryer chicken parts
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup chicken broth
¼ cup wine vinegar
2 tablespoons fresh parsley
2 tablespoons fresh chopped chives
2 tablespoons corn oil
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon fresh thyme
½ teaspoon fresh marjoram
¼ teaspoon coarsely ground pepper
¼ teaspoon cumin

In blender container, place broth, vinegar, parsley, chives, oil, salt, thyme, marjoram, pepper and cumin. Blend for about 30 seconds on HIGH. In ½-quart baking pan, place chicken in single layer. Pour seasoning over chicken. Place in 475°F. oven, uncovered. Immediately reduce oven temperature to 350°F. and cook about 1 hour, turning and basting often, until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease.
Makes 4 servings.

Bananas flavor creamy dressing

½ cup small curd cream-style cottage cheese
1 medium banana, cut up
2 to 3 tablespoons orange juice
1 tablespoon honey
½ teaspoon poppy seed
6 lettuce leaves
1 medium orange, peeled and sectioned

1 medium apple, thinly sliced
1 medium banana, sliced
1 cup halved fresh strawberries

For dressing, in a blender container combine cottage cheese, cut-up banana, orange juice and honey. Cover and blend until smooth. Stir in poppy seed. Place lettuce leaves on 6 individual salad plates; arrange orange sections, apple slices, banana slices and halved strawberries on top. Top each serving with 2 tablespoons dressing. Makes 6 servings.

Trade calories between meals to lose weight

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — One way to lose weight without feeling that you are cheating yourself is to trade calories from one meal to the next, according to a food industry expert.

"Try eating a light meal at lunch, such as a salad, when you know you'll be going out to dinner," said Donna Higgins, director of Del Monte Kitchens. "That way you can enjoy yourself without gaining weight."

Higgins said weight gain is "a matter of calories consumed vs. calories burned. Reducing the amount you eat without skipping meals will do more to take weight off than a crash diet, and it is a technique that can be used anytime."

Serving as leaders in Lefors are Peggy Day,

Tonya Lock and Vicky Elkins.

Today's Girl Scout leaders are different from the leaders of 1912 when Julietta Gordon Low began girl scouting. She may be an entrepreneur, a single parent, an athlete or a homemaker. Yet they embody the same ingredient that established girl scouting as a community tradition, a commitment to share and explore opportunities with girls.

Special people, Girl Scout leaders work in partnership with girls to help them develop values. In so doing, they help shape girls' lives. For 75 years, Girl Scout leaders have provided the guidance to help girls grow into competent, resourceful women, with communities reaping the rewards.

Significant contributions of past generations of Girl Scout adults have made a marked difference in the world, and present-day Girl Scout leaders continue the fine American tradition.

Community residents are encouraged to thank the Girl Scout leaders for their contributions to the scouting programs.

Secretaries pray for patience

DEAR ABBY: A word about Secretaries' Day: We hear about it a month in advance through ads for cards, candies, flowers, restaurants, etc. I try to ignore it until it arrives, then I dread that day when attention is showered on the secretary.

Why the secretary? Since the birth of this day, I've been dined, flowered, candied and carded — and I must say embarrassed to death.

How about spreading the glory? Let's make it National Employees Day. Pick a day to send all employees a card, give them a flower or bring in a treat — even a warm handshake for a job well done. It would mean so much.

JUST A SECRETARY
IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR ABBY: I hate National Secretaries' Day. My boss feels obligated to take me to lunch, and I feel obligated to go. He's a nice man, but all he talks about is himself. How boring! I'm sure there are secretaries who would be thrilled to go to lunch with their bosses, but I'm not one of them.

GIRL FRIDAY IN FLORIDA

DEAR ABBY: Last year, I received a corsage — addressed to the secretary of the president of this company. It must have been a promotion dreamed up by a florist. Never mind that I am a male secretary. The corsage was beautiful — and I wore it!

MOREY IN MANHATTAN

DEAR ABBY: Please print this message to my boss on National Secretaries' Day, but don't use my real name or town: If you want to show me how much you appreciate me, skip the lunch and flowers and give me a raise.

MONEY TALKS
IN SACRAMENTO

DEAR ABBY: I am hosting a retirement party for a woman who has been my devoted secretary for 34 years. I heard that you published a prayer for secretaries several years ago. I would like to read it at the dinner.

I hope you can find it. Thanking you in advance, I am ...

IN OIL
IN MIDLAND, TEXAS

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR IN: You are also "in luck." Here it is:

PRAYER FOR SECRETARIES

"Dear Lord, help me to do my work well; to have the memory of an elephant, the patience of a saint and the hide of a rhinoceros. And when the boss asks me to stay late to type a three-page letter that absolutely must go out today, and he doesn't get around to signing it until tomorrow, please help me to keep my mouth shut."

"Dear Lord, never let me lose patience, even when the boss has me searching the files for hours for something that is later discovered on his desk!"

"Help me to have the knowledge of a genius, although my education is limited to high school and secretarial training."

"Help me to understand and carry out all instructions without any explanation."

"Let me always know exactly where my boss is and when he will be back, even though he never tells me when he leaves."

"And Lord, when the year ends, please give me the foresight not to throw out records that will be asked for in a few days, even though I was told emphatically, 'Destroy these — they are cluttering up the place!' Amen."

DEAR ABBY: My lady and I were introduced last year by mutual friends, and our relationship has grown to where we are seriously discussing marriage.

While we both appear to be in above-average physical condition, due to our respective ages, plus the fact that both of us have lost our spouses to cancer, the suggestion that we have complete physicals appeared to be in order. Both her doctor and mine concluded that we would probably be around for some time to come.

I am in my 60s, she is in her 70s, and that is her only concern impeding a total commitment on her part. My view is that even if we were to receive a revelation that one of us would be gone in five years, I would rather spend those years with her in loving marriage than to remain apart. Neither of us would consider a "live-in" arrangement.

Your views would be appreciated.
YOUNG AT HEART
IN PASADENA

DEAR YOUNG: If you need someone to say "Go for it," you've written to the right person. All good wishes, and do not waste another precious day.

DEAR ABBY: Re: "Worried Wife" whose husband, Sol, has to lose 40 pounds after his heart attack. The key words in Sol's wife's letter were: "I don't have the heart to tell Sol's friends off in front of Sol."

So, do what I did — write them a letter! Photocopy it, and let each one know you've sent a copy to Abe, Sam, Dave, Ed and Fred.

My husband, Gerry, has had two heart attacks, then open heart surgery. I've done just what I'm telling Sol's wife to do. Here's the letter:

Dear Friends: I'm writing to you on Gerry's behalf. Thank you all for coming to see Gerry, and not bringing candy. Thank you for cooking poultry without salt when you have us over for dinner. Thank you for helping Gerry to stay on his diet so that we can enjoy life longer and enjoy your friendship longer. And most of all, thank you for truly being his friend and never questioning what his doctors tell him to do. You good people brighten our lives every day, and for that we thank you. Love,

BERNICE

Astros nip Braves

HOUSTON (AP)—The Houston Astros used a little ninth-inning magic to run their 1987 record in the Astrodome to a perfect 7-and-0.

Down 6-3 going into their last at-bat, the Astros scored four runs in the bottom of the ninth to defeat the Atlanta Braves 7-6 Tuesday night, and most of the damage came after two outs with nobody on base.

"This was a typical Astrodome game — getting four base hits with two outs is outstanding," manager Hal Lanier said.

Alan Ashby's leadoff homer cut the deficit to 6-4, but Atlanta pitcher Paul Assenmacher, in his first inning of relief, then struck out pinchhitters Mark Bailey and Terry Puhl. Then he walked second baseman Bill Doran, and Braves manager Chuck Tanner went to his stopper, Gene Garber, to face league-leading hitter Billy Hatcher.

Hatcher, whose seventh-inning single had extended his season-opening hitting streak to 14 games, greeted Garber with a single that moved Doran to third. Phil Garner singled Doran home, and Glenn Davis followed with a single that tied the game and moved Garner to third with the potential winning run.

Garber walked Kevin Bass intentionally to load the bases, setting up a force at every base, but pinchhitter Denny Walling singled home the game-winner.

Opponents vow to fight for taxpayers' rights in golf course project

A group known as "Concerned Taxpayers of Gray County" is being formed to guard the taxpayers' interest in the construction of the Pampa public golf course, announced organizer Ray Velasquez.

"We are asking for contributions so that we may hire a lawyer to make sure that if any money is ever spent on this course, that every penny, every manhour and every machine used is accounted for," Velasquez said.

County voters passed the golf course referendum during the April 4 elections and city commissioners are currently studying financial figures and expenditures on the course. The city, under a proposal by the Pampa Golf Course Association, would provide land and water for the course and assume ownership once its built. Voters approved county participation in the building of the course with construction funds coming from the $2.9 million sale of Highland General Hospital.

Two sites have been offered for the course's location, but Velasquez says residents in the southern part of the county are upset because it was their understanding that the course would be situated south along Highway 70.

"This would be more of a county location instead of the northern county location, which for all practical purposes would be more of a city location," Velasquez said.

Land in the Rolling Hills addition north of Pampa was planned as the original site for the course before the Association asked for county support in building the $300,000 project. Landowner Bob Keller had offered the land free of charge to the Association.

Names in the News

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music star Ricky Skaggs and his wife, Sharon White, will make a rare joint public performance Saturday on the Prairie Home Companion radio show in Minneapolis.

Ms. White normally restricts her performances to the trio, the Whites, spokesman Mike Hyland said Tuesday. Her father and sister are the other members.

Skaggs and his wife have a record out, "Love Can't Ever Get Better Than This."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Roy Orbison, whose hit songs include "Only the Lonely" and "Pretty Woman," is re-recording his 24-year-old "In Dreams," which was revived last year in the movie "Blue Velvet."

Orbison, who celebrates his 51st birthday Thursday, completed tracks for the record Monday.

Parents recall horror of shark's attack on daughter

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — As Robert Voglino responded to his daughter's cries and saw a shark biting her, he thought she might need only stitches. But after he drove the shark away by pounding on it, she raised her right arm.

"There was no flesh left for several inches above where the elbow should have been," Voglino, of Kingsland, said Tuesday. "I grabbed the stump and told her, 'Let's go to shore!'"

As April Dawn Voglino, 16, ran the 75 feet toward shore Saturday, however, the 5-foot-long shark headed toward them again in the chest-high water.

"It was getting closer, and I had the impression it was going to attempt to swim past me and go for her again," her father said. "I grabbed one of its fins sticking out of the water and attempted to hold it while she got to shore."

"I had the fin in one hand, and was trying to get a hold on it underneath with the other hand. I held it, I think for about 20 seconds and then it jerked out of my hands and swam to deeper waters."

"By this time, April was in shallow water. We both collapsed on shore from exhaustion. By now, Beth and the girls realized that something was wrong and that we weren't just playing out in the waves."

Beth Voglino, April's mother, said, "I ran down to April and Robert. Robert was still holding onto her arm, but he was very weak. From that point on I used everything I had learned in a first aid class I had taken about three years ago.

"They told us to stop the bleeding with our hands — and it worked. They told us that no one else will know what to do, that we'd have to give instructions for everything. And that was true, too."

Other people on the beach gathered around to keep April warm, she said. Some brought blankets and towels, while others moved cars to block the wind.

"A young man named James stayed right by April's head the whole time, stroking her hair, and ready to give CPR if her breathing stopped," Mrs. Voglino said. "He was praying to Jesus the whole time."

A U.S. Coast Guard helicopter flew the girl to Memorial Medical Center, where doctors operated for 45 minutes to control bleeding and amputate the part of the bone still protruding, Voglino said.

The attack occurred in the Gulf of Mexico off Mustang Island, where marine scientists and officials are now trying to assure beachgoers that a repeat of the attack that ruined the Voglino's Easter weekend holiday is unlikely.

"This was a bad bite," said Robert Jones, director of the University of Texas Marine Science Institute. "We don't want to try and play down the damage done to this young lady. ... But the probability of getting bit by a shark is very, very remote."

City's residents balk at speeded dismantling of old nuclear plant

SAXTON, Pa. (AP) — A pioneer nuclear plant, built 25 years ago at the dawn of the nuclear power age, sits mothballed behind a locked fence, its fuel gone and its control room gutted. It's ready for dismantling, but townspeople are wary about that sort of pioneering.

The owner, General Public Utilities Corp., wants to take down five structures this year and ultimately remove the reactor vessel to purge the site of radioactivity. GPU says the deteriorated buildings pose a risk to workers and are costly to maintain.

But some residents want the company to wait until the radioactivity decays to less potent levels and more is known about dismantling nuclear plants. They also lack faith in the company because it failed to inform them about radioactive leaks in the 1970s.

"Dismantling these things is a very new procedure. We did our bit for nuclear power. Let them learn someplace else," said Ernest Fuller, 42, a computer consultant who lives in nearby Six Mile Run.

"I don't trust General Public Utilities. They have a poor record," Fuller said. "There's no rush. Every year they wait is that much less potential for possible harm to workers and the community."

The Saxton station, the fifth in the country built by a utility, was sort of a nuclear plant with training wheels. Its 7-megawatt reactor, a dwarf to modern furnaces that churn out 100 times more power, operated from 1962 to 1972 and trained operators for GPU's plant at Three Mile Island, near Harrisburg.

The Saxton reactor was one of the first to test plutonium as a fuel. It also controlled the nuclear reaction with boron, a chemical that absorbs neutrons, which are the bullets that split atoms to release energy.

This rural central Pennsylvania hamlet, a former rail and coal town, beamed with pride at the experimental station on the West Branch of the Juniata River. Visitors were routinely taken on car tours past the domed plant.

To this day, some of Saxton's 814 residents speak favorably about it.

"We welcomed it with open arms," said Olin Horton, 65, a former mayor and head of economic development for the local Chamber of Commerce. "We were more than happy to have that plant after the coal industry went bust. It brought us into the 21st century."

After outliving its purpose, the reactor was mothballed, shut down permanently to be guarded and monitored. Its fuel was removed and buried in South Carolina.

But a controversy surfaced after the 1979 accident at Three Mile Island. That accident, the worst in U.S. commercial history, prompted the local weekly newspaper, the Broadtop Bulletin, to check federal records. And eventually, it was learned that radioactivity had leaked from the Saxton plant four times in 1970 and 1971.

Federal officials were told but not residents or students at Tussey Mountain High School, less than a half-mile from the plant. The total radioactivity released was about six millirems. A person gets about 25 millirems from a chest X-ray and about 200 millirems a year from normal sources.

House passes bill to grant two Texas Indian tribes federal status

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives unanimously voted to grant federal trust status to two Texas Indian tribes faced with a cutoff of state benefits that protect their reservations and tribal governments.

The federal trust relationship ended more than 20 years ago when Texas accepted the responsibility to care for the Tigua and Alabama-Coushatta tribes of Texas. But a 1983 Texas attorney general's opinion questioned the state's role in providing for the tribes.

The House measure, introduced by Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, would shift the responsibility back to the federal government. It would also prohibit gambling or gaming of any kind on the reservation lands.

"This legislation is essential to the future of the Tiguas of El Paso and the Alabama-Coushattas of East Texas, tribes whose survival was jeopardized by a ruling of the Texas attorney general that held the State of Texas can no longer support the tribes," Coleman said Tuesday.

The Tiguas comprise a tribe of about 1,100 who live on a 100-acre reservation near El Paso while there are about 500 Alabama-Coushattas on 4,600 acres near Livingston, Texas.

The only opposition came from Rep. Robert S.

Walker, R-Pa., who wanted to know how much the benefits would cost and how many Indians would be eligible.

"What we are saying here is that the eligibility for these benefits — that amounts to about $3,000 per person — would not be locked in upon passage of this bill, but instead we would allow the tribe a 10-year period of time to determine what the membership of the tribe is going to be," Walker said.

Walker said the Reagan administration opposes enactment of the bill because it is uncertain how large the tribes will expand during a ten-year transition period.

Interior Committee Chairman Morris Udall, D-Ariz., told Walker that roughly 2,000 tribe members would qualify and that eligibility for federal benefits would be limited to those with at least one-eighth Indian blood.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, is positioned to help steer the bill through the Senate. A nearly identical bill was passed by the House last year without opposition, but it died in the Senate.

"With the support of Chairman Udall and all the members of the Texas delegation, I am confident we will be able to work with the new Senate leadership to assure smooth passage of the legislation," Coleman said.

NBC is king of the ratings

NEW YORK (AP)—It was the year of the sitcom as "The Cosby Show" and "Family Ties" helped carry NBC to its second-straight season as king of the ratings, while CBS suffered its lowest season average ever.

"Cosby," the highest-rated prime-time program for the second season in a row, and "Ties," No. 2 for the second-consecutive season, also became the two most-watched series in history, the A.C. Nielsen Co. said Tuesday.

In the season ending April 19, situation comedies had the highest three-network average rating — 18.2 — of all program types. Sitcoms made up 18 percent of the networks' schedules this year, up from 15 percent last year.

Action-adventure series take up the most room on the schedule, 24 percent, but had an average rating of 14.3, lower than news-information shows, which had an average rating of 14.6.

The rating is a percentage of the nation's estimated 87.4 million homes with televisions.

According to the A.C. Nielsen Co., NBC won the season with an average, prime-time rating of 17.8. CBS' average was 15.8 and ABC's 14.1. That was a 1 percent increase for NBC from last season, when it averaged 17.5.

CBS and ABC were down 5 percent each and NBC, which was in third place only four years ago, beat second-place CBS by even more this year than last, when CBS had an average rating of 16.7 and ABC 14.9.

It was CBS' lowest season-average rating ever and ABC's lowest since 1954.

NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff, in a telephone news conference from Burbank, Calif., was already looking toward next season.

"I still look at the schedule as a work in progress, and I'm far from satisfied," he said. But Tartikoff said NBC won't be open to many more sitcoms.

"Going into next year, we're going to be highly selective in what we'll add to the mix in terms of situation comedies," he said.

Though NBC finished the season winning three nights — Monday, Thursday and Saturday, Thursday night was the key. NBC won it with an average 12.5 rating point lead over its nearest competitor, CBS.

In the news ratings, the "CBS Evening News" and "NBC Nightly News" ended the season in a first-place tie, each with an average 12.0 rating. ABC's "World News Tonight" had 10.8.
