28 killed in attack on U.S. warship in Persian Gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A crippled U.S. warship headed toward port today after an Iraqi missile attack killed at least 28 men and injured 21 others in the deadliest assault on a ship in Iran-Iraq war.

The attack on the USS Stark Sunday night near Qatar was the first on an American warship in the nearly 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war. The previous highest death toll in the so-called "tanker war" was 10.

In Washington, White House spokesman Dan Howard said Iraqi ambassador Nizar Hamdoun "already has expressed great regret that the incident has occurred." He said the Iraqis "haven't accepted responsibility as yet. They have suggested an immediate investigation involving the U.S."

The London-based Lloyds Shipping Intelligence Unit reported an Iranian gunboat struck the Liberian commercial vessel, the Golar Robin, today as it sailed toward the Saudi Arabian-Kuwaiti Khafji oil field. Marine salvage executives said a fire broke out aboard the 219,387-ton tanker after the 12:21 p.m. (5:21 a.m. EDT) attack. There was no word on casualties or damage.

The Pentagon announced today that at least 28 men died in the attack on the Stark, which Lloyds said took place at 8:18 p.m. (1:18 p.m. EDT) Sunday 45 miles north-east of Qatar. Lloyds earlier had said the attack occurred at 10:40 p.m. (3:40 p.m. EDT). The Pentagon said two were seriously injured, four more were taken ashore for treatment of lesser injuries and 15 were treated and returned to duty.

Details on the injuries were not available.

It was not the first time an American ship in the Middle East has been caught in regional hostilities. In 1967, Israel launched an air and sea attack on an unarmed U.S. intelligence ship, the Liberty, killing 34 servicemen and injuring 171 in the midst of the six-day Arab-Israeli War. Israel maintained the attack was an accident, and paid compensation to the families of the victims.

U.S. officials in Washington said the Stark was hit by at least one and possibly two French-made Exocet missiles fired by Iraqi warplanes in "a case of mistaken identity." The State Department issued a strong protest.

Gulf-based marine salvage executives said two missiles punched gaping holes in the ship's port side and started a fire that destroyed electronic gear. They said the ship started moving toward Bahrain this morning under its own power.

In its first statement on the attack, Iraq said today President Saddam Hussein had ordered a "serious investigation" to determine if the Iraqi air force was responsible.

In a statement given to the official Iraqi News Agency, an unidentified Iraqi Foreign ministry spokesman urged U.S. officials to exercise "patience" until the investigation was completed. The spokesman insisted Iraq would "publicly announce the results of the investigation and apologize with sorrow" if its air force was behind the attack.

Iran made no comment on the attack.

Iran and Iraq have attacked hundreds of ships in the gulf in an effort to cripple each other's oil-dependent economies. The U.S. Navy patrols the gulf in an effort to protect American shipping.

The attack on the Stark ignited a "huge fire that damaged the frigate heavily," said a gulf-based salvage executive who spoke on condition of anonymity.

A military spokesman in West Germany said a U.S. Air Force plane with medical personnel had been sent to the gulf to pick up injured seamen. The spokesman, Navy Cmdr. Gerry Ryan, said he did not know where the injured would be taken.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz said, "The United States regards this attack with great seriousness ... and is following the situation closely."

The Pentagon said other U.S. Navy warships had aided the crippled ship, and the flagship for the U.S. Mideast Task Force, the Lasalle, also was dispatched.

The attack came a day after a Soviet oil tanker leased by Kuwait hit a mine off Kuwait, blowing a large hole in the hull but causing no fatalities.

Gulf-based shipping sources initially had said the frigate was fired on by a gunboat. Most gunboat attacks in the gulf are carried out by Iran.

"We believe this was a mistaken attack," said Defense Department spokesman Robert Sims in Washington. He said two Iraqi Mirage F-1 fighters fired at missile at the ship and at least one struck it, tearing a 10- to 15-foot hole in the hull.

The Stark is part of a seven-unit U.S. naval task force that patrols the gulf south of the Iran-Iraq war zone. Britain, France and the Soviet Union also maintain warships in the gulf.

According to "Jane's Fighting Ships," the Stark is a 3,585-ton, 445-foot frigate carrying a crew of 200.

Iran and Iraq have been at war since September 1980, and the Iraqis have frequently raided Iranian and other merchant ships in the Persian Gulf. Iraq has vowed to choke Iran's economy by keeping it from exporting oil.

Prom memories

Prom-goers enjoy a slow dance Saturday night at Pampa High School's "Cotillion Ball" prom dance in the M.K. Brown Auditorium's Heritage Room. The dance was one of the last times the Senior Class members can enjoy a school activity together before graduation commencement exercises on May 29 at the McNeely Field House. Students went all out, with formals and tuxedos, limousine rides, pre-prom dinners and extensive decorations highlighting the prom's theme.

Lawmakers dispute Reagan's claim that ban on Contra aid didn't apply to him

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators looking into the Iran-Contra affair say President Reagan is wrong when he asserts he was exempt from congressional restrictions on U.S. aid to Nicaraguan rebels. "He's not a king and this is not a monarchy," Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, said Sunday on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley." "The reality is that Colonel (Oliver L.) North was engaged in activities covered by" the Boland amendment that banned U.S. aid to the Nicaraguan Contras.

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, said on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" that the president "is clearly wrong" when he says the restriction didn't apply to him.

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, also appearing on the CBS program, said: "There's growing evidence a number of laws were broken at specific periods of time. I'm disappointed, and I have a sense of outrage when I find there have been clear examples of a flouting of the rule of law."

All three legislators belong to the House and Senate committees jointly investigating the sale of U.S. arms to Iran and the diversion of some of the money to the U.S.-backed Contra guerrillas fighting to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist government.

One key question at the hearings, which enter a third week Tuesday, has been whether U.S. help to the Contras violated the Boland amendment, which was named after Rep. Edward Boland, D-Mass.

The amendment banned official U.S. military aid to the Contras from October 1984 to October 1986, but Reagan and his top aides have asserted that the president did not violate that law.

Reagan told reporters Saturday he had "never done anything that encroached upon or violated" the Boland amendment.

In other developments:

■ The president said he was not aware that travelers' checks were being distributed by North to Contra leaders, as North associate Robert W. Owen testified in the Iran-Contra hearings last week.

■ Fawn Hall, North's secretary when he worked at the NSC, testified before a grand jury that North told her to alter four NSC memos about his support of the Contras during the congressional ban on military aid. The (Baltimore) Sun reported Saturday.

Politics or not, Texas sites are down to two

DALLAS (AP) — Some West Texans are ready to secede as Amarillo and Dallas gear up for the biggest super collision of them all: when more than two dozen states flood Washington with proposals grasping at the big-money "super collider" project.

A promoter of West Texas' Garden City site for the $4.4 billion project that will bring 2,500 jobs and a $200 million annual operating budget is so angry his bid lost that he thinks West Texas should secede from the state.

"The whole thing was just a sham," Louis J. Thompson said after Garden City and 11 other communities were lopped off the list of sites Texas will promote as candidates for the costliest physics experiment ever.

"West Texas is always treated as a stepchild," he grouched. "Let's exercise our rights. ... We have the Permanent University Fund lands in West Texas. Let them keep the buildings and we'll keep the land."

Last week, months of speculation ended when the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission chose sites near Dallas and Amarillo as the locations to promote in the national steepchase.

Lutheran pastor bids congregation farewell

The Rev. Charles Paulson's benediction at Sunday's worship service at Zion Lutheran Church was not just another part of the worship ritual.

Sunday's benediction was Paulson's farewell to a congregation — his first — which he has served for five years.

In June, the 45-year-old minister, his wife Kathy and three-year-old son Michael will move to Wichita Falls where he will become pastor of the Our Redeemer Lutheran Church.

"We weren't looking to move," Paulson said, adding that he happened to be on a list of candidates for the Wichita Falls pastorship.

"They called me at the church and said I was the candidate they picked.

"It was an opportunity I couldn't pass up," Paulson said of his new flock. "It is a growing church — 500 members — and there will be opportunities for all types of ministries."

Our Redeemer, part of the Lutheran Missouri Synod, is one of four Lutheran churches in the Wichita Falls area.

Still, Paulson admitted, it will be hard to leave what he said was a "loving and caring congregation."

The Pampa pastorship was Paulson's first since he graduated from Concordia Seminary in St. Louis with a master of divinity degree in May, 1982. He was ordained and installed as pastor of the Zion church on July 25,

PAULSON

Before entering the ministry, Paulson taught high school history. His love for teaching continued through his pastorship as he initiated several adult Bible classes and youth confirmation classes.

Paulson was also known for his "gift of planning and executing beautiful and meaningful worship services."

He was also instrumental in building a new sanctuary classroom and office building at the church on 1200 Duncan.

But Paulson leaves more than just his service to the church. The pastor has been active with the Ministerial Alliance and the Pampa Chamber of Commerce and was president of the Good Samaritan Christian Services.

Salt removal plan may be scrapped

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — Officials were startled to learn that they may have to share the costs of a $126 million project to remove salt from streams in the Red River Basin.

Officials say they fear the project may be delayed if not killed if they are required to share in the costs.

Last week, an Army Corps of Engineers official talked about cost-sharing during the dedication of Truscott Brine Reservoir, which is designed to help bring salt-free water to lakes Kemp and Diversion.

Maj. Gen. Jerome Hilmes, director of the southwest division of the corps, said a cost-sharing agreement may be needed to pay for the $126 million in future projects to clean salt from the Red River Basin.

"I personally think the general was in error in making his statement," Ronald Glenn, general manager of the Texas Red River Authority, said. "The Congress would have to take a vote to rescind funding."

"The federal government has made a commitment, and the people of North Texas and South Oklahoma will make them hold to it," he said. Glenn and other area water experts said the Water Resources Act of 1986 clearly states that future Red River Basin projects will be fully federally funded as were projects in Area 8.

All $50 million to build Truscott Brine Reservoir and its pump station came from the federal Treasury.

"I reminded the general what the omnibus water bill said," said Jimmy Banks, Wichita County Water Improvement District No. 2 general manager. "We were promised full federal funding if the review committee findings are positive."

A five-member committee will review Area 8 in three years to see how successful it is at removing salt from the south fork of the Wichita River.

Hilmes said Friday the committee's decision will decide if the project continues, but he stuck by his earlier statement concerning federal funding.

"What I said was that I understand you're coming at this fully federal funded," Hilmes added. "But the general thrust of the administration is toward cost-sharing. How that sorts out remains to be seen," he told the Wichita Falls Times and Record-News.

North Texas officials volunteered to share 10 percent of the cost prior to the 1986 water bill, he said.

Sites

The decision infuriated West Texans, who said they were railroaded.

"You could hear the freight train whistle before you got to the conference room," said Jim Heath of the San Angelo Chamber of Commerce, which backed the Garden City site between Midland and San Angelo.

Aware of the feelings of West Texas, some speculated that the state commission merely tossed a bone when it picked Amarillo as second choice.

The reasoning was that support from West Texas was needed to get voter approval of $1 billion in bonds to prepare a super collider site — whether it's in Waxahachie or the Panhandle.

By comparison, other states have committed or expect to commit a combined $76 million for their super collider proposals. More than two dozen states are now interested in luring the project.

But "if they did that by picking Amarillo, then I think it came as more of a shock to everybody in this part of the country than it would have if the Garden City site was selected," said Burt Terrill of San Angelo, whose group on Friday decided to ask the state commission to reconsider.

Those associated with the Dallas-Fort Worth SSC Authority say that if they had an inside track, they weren't aware of it.

"We were scared all the way to the end," said Hylan Lyon, director of science and technology for the local group.

The project would include a 50-mile circular tunnel in which atomic particles would be smashed into each other in efforts to explore the secrets of matter.

Lyon said the state chose the Waxahachie site, 25 miles south of Dallas, because technically it is closest to specifications of the U.S. Department of Energy.

"The reason there are two sites is that we're not sure how to read all the criteria," Lyon said.

For example, he said, the scientists who make the final selection could put more emphasis on cost. In that case, the Panhandle site's lower cost could still attract the project to Texas.

Panhandle supporters also say the reason for their site being selected was based on logic.

"There's always some political sensitivity in things like this," said Amarillo Mayor Glen Parkey. "We have a lot of pride in our area."

That was illustrated when Panhandle backers made their presentation.

"In the beginning, God created this site for the SSC," bank president Richard Ware II told the state commission. Parkey said that bit of hyperbole was intended to lighten up the atmosphere. But in a sense, it's true, he said.

"We don't have anything to do with the geology there," said Parkey.

Despite regional pride, he said, there will be no infighting when it comes to pitching the Texas sites.

"I don't think we have time for that," Parkey said. "I think everybody's going to have their nose so pressed to the grindstone. I would imagine that Dallas is probably a whole lot less concerned about us than we probably should be about them."

The season of tornadoes is upon us

By BOB HART
Pampa City Manager

With the coming of spring to the Texas Panhandle, there is also another season approaching us. Typically, during latter March through early July, Pampa is in the tornado season.

Just as our feathered friends, the birds, migrate north in the spring, warm air fronts are pushing farther north. When these warm air fronts collide with the cold air fronts, turbulence is caused in the air which may spawn tornadoes.

Usually we receive notification of weather conditions that may produce tornadoes from the National Weather Bureau in Kansas City. However, if our fire or police departments spot the clouds that may form tornadoes, the tornado spotters are placed in their strategic positions.

This year the responsibility of organizing and implementing tornado spotters is given to the Fire Department. The trained tornado spotters consist of members of the fire, police, water, street and sanitation departments.

When conditions warrant, the Fire Department will notify trained tornado spotters to respond to a designated position to watch for tornadoes.

There will be from five to eight spotters in an open area with a large view of the skies in pre-designated areas circling the city. These spotters are trained to spot the types of clouds that produce tornadoes and the portions of the clouds where tornadoes are most likely to occur.

When a spotter locates a tornado, he relays the information by mobile radio to the other spotters and to the Emergency Management personnel located in City Hall.

Immediately, the other spotters will pinpoint the tornado location through triangulation and track the direction of travel. The Emergency Management personnel will sound the warning sirens located throughout the city to warn the public of an approaching tornado.

Upon hearing the sirens, the public is urged to take shelter or gain immediate access to a place of safety.

School trustees to hear administrative reports

A series of administrative reports by Interim Superintendent Tommy Cathey will highlight the Pampa school board agenda at 6 p.m. Tuesday, when trustees meet at Carver Educational Center, 321 W. Albert.

Cathey is scheduled to report on the condition of the track and tennis courts at Pampa High School, a bid on telephone equipment for the high school, teacher exit interviews and reports, negotiations with the city concerning the Crocker Street easement near Horace Mann school and the Saxon math program.

Also scheduled for consideration is a report from the teacher career ladder committee.

In other action, trustees plan to:

- set the 1987-88 tuition rate for out-of-district students;
- receive a budget report from Business Manager Jerry Haralson; and
- consider personnel matters, including retirement, resignation, reassignment and employment in a possible executive session.

Decision time near for state's lawmakers

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas House and Senate members returned to work today with the common view that if there is to be a legislative miracle, this is the week for it.

However, Gov. Bill Clements predicted in McAllen on Friday that it was too late to get a budget agreement by the June 1 deadline of the 140-day regular session.

"I don't think we'll have time to put together a budget and get it approved by Comptroller Bob Bullock," said Clements, who must call a special session if needed to complete a 1988-89 budget. "If it can be signed off within the next few days, it could be a regular session plan," Speaker Gib Lewis said Friday. "If not, it's a special session plan," Lewis said.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby predicted the Legislature would approve at least $5 billion in new revenues, possibly in a special session if not in the regular session.

Lewis proposed on Friday a "middle ground" revenue plan, calling for increasing sales taxes by half a cent but also trimming almost $1 billion from the House-approved spending plans.

"I don't think the governor will accept that plan," said Reggie Bashur, Clements' press secretary.

Clements has said he would veto any tax bill more than $2.9 billion to maintain the current revenue level.

Meanwhile, lawmakers faced debate calendars filled with controversial issues on other subjects that appeared likely to occupy them at least six days of this week.

Prominent on the House agenda today was a measure allowing the state to regulate late-term abortions.

The proposal, backed by politically active anti-abortion forces, was postponed in the Senate last week by Hobby in order to take up other. However, Hobby said if the bill passes the House it will get a run in the Senate.

A bill that some senators say would weaken the state's air quality control laws was on the Senate calendar again today after being tentatively approved Friday in the face of a threatened filibuster.

The bill by Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, would repeal a provision that says industrial plants' permits to release contaminants into the air must be reviewed every 15 years.

"This is an open door to air pollution," protested Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, who vowed to "talk as long as I can" when the measure comes up for final approval.

Tax bills must originate in the House, but senators will get a chance today to discuss the issue with a meeting of the Senate Policy Committee.

Ground broken for reservoir

BALLINGER (AP) — Joe Pickle never imagined a plan to help solve West Texas' water needs would become so entangled.

The start of the Stacy Dam project had been delayed 10 years by battles in the Legislature, the federal government, the courts and by the Concho water snake, a reptile that had been placed on the endangered species list.

On Saturday, Pickle, other members of the Colorado River Municipal Water District and elected officials broke ground for the $70 million reservoir project that will provide drinking water for more than 500,000 people in Abilene, Midland and San Angelo.

"It's the fulfillment of a dream that we didn't know would come about," said Pickle, the river authority's secretary. "This says something about our water supply in West Texas."

"You can't wait until you need it before you start something like this. You have to anticipate it by 10 years or more."

The groundbreaking ceremony had to be moved to Ballinger High School because the construction site because of a deluge of rain late last week.

John Taylor, president of the CRMWD, said equipment already is at the reservoir and that some preliminary construction has begun.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said he fought for the project because it meant jobs and water for West Texas.

"It will be an economic base for jobs and growth for our people," Gramm told about 1,500 people.

"It literally has the potential for making West Texas bloom in terms of new opportunities we all want for ourselves and our children," Gramm said.

Officials and citizens from area communities took turns at turning dirt that had been hauled from the construction site 20 miles away.

When completed in three years, the reservoir will encompass more than 19,000 surface acres in Concho, Coleman and Runnels counties and will have the capacity for 544,000 acre feet of water.

SMU board votes against legal action against Clements, others

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist University should not take legal action against Gov. Bill Clements or anyone else involved in improper payments to football players, the institution's board of trustees decided in an informal vote.

"We recommend that the university not take any legal action against any of the alleged participants in the continuation of improper payments," Thomas W. Luce III, an attorney heading the SMU Legal Action Committee, said Saturday.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association cited the improper payments in banning the school's 1987 season and imposing other sanctions in February.

Clements said in March he and other board members were aware of payments and agreed to continue them, with the intention of phasing them out, after the school was placed on probation for previous similar violations.

The governor is a former head of the board of trustees.

Clements declined to identify board members who were aware of the payments. Most board members denied that they had any knowledge.

Luce said the board in a straw vote Saturday unanimously indicated it would follow his committee's recommendation. The board of trustees must ratify the committee's decision by a formal vote at a June 19 meeting.

On May 8, Luce had said the committee would recommend no legal action be taken, but Saturday's informal vote was the board's first action on the matter.

He said legal action would be counterproductive and not in the interest of the university.

"We want to reconcile all the elements of the university and we think that litigation is not the way to do that," Luce said.

Yarborough returns to press flesh

AUSTIN (AP) — Ralph Yarborough remains a tireless campaigner, although it's been 30 years since he won his first statewide race and 17 since he lost his last one.

Yarborough returned to practice one of his finest arts last week when an exhibition of photographs taken during his many political campaigns was opened.

He shook hands, traded stories and looked people in the eye. Yarborough, who will be 84 in June, also listened, smiled and reminisced, "Why, when I was your United States senator ..."

Authorities say letter may be more prevalent than LSD

DALLAS (AP) — A letter warning of the dangers of LSD may be more widespread in North Texas than the hallucinogenic drug itself, authorities say.

Law officers say the letter is circulating in North Texas and in Oklahoma, but authorities in both states have been unable to trace its origins.

While the availability of LSD appears to be growing marginally, numerous inquiries about the letter have presented law officers and school officials with a dilemma.

On one hand, they agree, forewarned is forearmed. However the tone of the letter may be frightening parents needlessly, they say.

David Sugg, director of drug prevention for Dallas schools, said parents need to be aware of the dangers of drugs.

But until there is evidence LSD is being circulated among children, telling them about it could "open up a realm of possibilities that kids weren't even aware of," Sugg said.

Headlined "Parents, Be Alert," the letter is making the rounds among teachers, police, day camp and school counselors, school bus drivers, doctors and parents. It describes the dangers of a stamp-like paper, often featuring cartoon characters, laced with the sometimes fatal, 1960s-era lysergic acid diethylamide.

Authorities say they have not detected a strong resurgence of this form of LSD, also known as acid.

The case of a 14-year-old Richardson boy who was hospitalized last week after taking LSD in blotter form was an isolated one, Richardson police said. The boy has recovered.

While police have been unable to determine where the boy obtained the LSD blotter paper, they do not believe it is widely available, said Richardson police spokesman Jerry Tobia.

Federal drug agents have confiscated three shipments of the drug destined for the Dallas area in the last 13 months, said Phil Jordan, special agent in charge of the federal Drug Enforcement Agency's Dallas division.

In the largest of those seizures, 2,000 doses of the LSD blotter from California were confiscated at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport in April 1986. Late last month, two doses of LSD were confiscated at the airport.

Groom grads ready to face world

By CATHY SPAULDING

GROOM — It's not easy to pull away from such a close and fun-loving bunch as the 1987 GHS seniors and venture into the "real" world.

But valedictorian Kristi Jackson and salutatorian Jowannah Ruthardt say they're ready to hit it with their best shots.

With grade point averages of 96.60 and 95.79 respectively, Jackson and Ruthardt pulled through stiff competition to top the 21-member class. Third-ranked Jami Duke barely missed the top two with 95.58.

Jackson, the daughter of Alice Wells and Kenneth Jackson, spent her kindergarten and first grade years at Groom and returned to Groom in the seventh grade.

With a $4,230 scholarship supporting her, Jackson will attend Southwestern University at Georgetown to major in accounting.

Despite her top grades, Jackson isn't quite sure she's ready for tougher college classes. "I heard a lot of my friends say they had problems in college," Jackson said. "But things have gotten tougher here since they graduated, so I'm sure I'm more prepared than they were."

Jackson may be better prepared than she thinks. She took fourth place in accounting at the State Class A University Interscholastic League academic meet earlier this month. She was also co-editor of the award winning Tiger's Tale school newspaper.

Ruthardt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Brooks, is bound for Angelo State in San Angelo, which she said has a good business program. She, too, has a school sponsored scholarship.

She's just returned from the State Track Finals in Austin where she placed fourth in the 800 meter run. She worked on the Tiger yearbook staff and has been active in band and basketball.

Though she admits to a tinge of nervousness about the future, Ruthardt is ready to leave Groom, where she's lived all her life.

"I'm looking forward to getting out of a small town," Ruthardt said. "Nobody's ever heard of Groom."

But, she and Jackson concede, there is safety smallness.

"You don't have as many murders or rapes going on here," Ruthardt said. "You're safe in a small town."

Responded Jackson: "Sometimes you feel too safe."

Jackson admitted college is going to be a challenge to her standards and morals.

There's also the warmth of closeness of a small class.

"Something I noticed about our class was that several years ago, everybody hated each other," Jackson said, with Ruthardt in agreement. "But in the last two years — in the last year — we have grown to like each other. It shows we've grown up a bit."

Bootleg houses open in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Police say operators of as many as 175 bootleg houses scattered across the city's poorer neighborhoods cater to more vices than just drinking.

Some bootleg houses try to provide one-stop shopping for all their customers' vices, including gambling and occasional prostitution, according to investigator Dale Erves.

"The operators really don't want to hurt anyone," Erves said. "They'll just do anything they can to take money from you."

Neighbors who live around a bootleg house operated in the Oak Cliff area complain that as many as 100 people come to the house in search of alcoholic beverages.

Many of the bootleg house operators are in areas of the city that are "dry" and cater to customers without transportation to reach the "wet" areas.

Dr. Fred H. Simmons
OPTOMETRIST

Q. My 8-year-old grandson is in a remedial reading class. He omits words and confuses similar words when reading. He scored 20/20 in the school eye test but could he still possibly have a vision problem?

A. Your grandson may have a learning-related vision problem. These typically cannot be detected during a school vision screening. Have his vision examined by an optometrist experienced in treating learning-related vision problems. Bring along a list of symptoms you, the parents and teachers have noticed. This will help with the diagnosis.

If a learning-related vision problem exists, treatment may involve glasses alone or vision therapy or a combination of the two. Vision therapy programs use specially prescribed visual tasks to help the eyes learn to relearn needed vision skills.

Overcoming a learning-related vision problem will not automatically end your grandson's reading problem but it will help him to respond more effectively to the remedial reading program.

Anti-takeover law distorts economy

The Supreme Court, in upholding an Indiana law that makes it more difficult for out-of-state investors to buy up large chunks of stock in Indiana firms for the purpose of eventually taking them over, has paved the way for at least some measure of Balkanization of the American economy.

Within weeks of the ruling, North Carolina adopted a similar ordinance, and Delaware, where so many corporate headquarters are located, began deliberating an anti-takeover measure. Half a dozen other states also are considering such laws.

If these laws take hold, they will distort an economy that depends on the ability to quickly move assets and capital where they will do the most good. The fact that the motive of investors may be to make large sums of money in no way undermines the truth about how the U.S. economy works best.

The Indiana law is more stringent than the current federal law governing takeover bids — the Williams Act. Since the federal government is given power by the Constitution to regulate commerce among the states, it seemed likely that the Indiana law would suffer the same fate as an earlier, similar bill in Illinois, which had been ruled unconstitutional in 1982.

This time, however, in the charged atmosphere surrounding insider-trading scandals and flamboyant hostile takeovers, the Supreme Court brushed aside those reservations and ruled that since the Constitution allows states to regulate corporations within their borders, and since that is what this law does, it stands.

The Indiana law does more than merely "regulate corporations" within its borders. Its intent is to regulate the activities of firms and investors outside its borders, to stop such firms and individuals from "raiding" Indiana corporations, and with them, their assets, capital, and, of course, jobs.

The Indiana bill increases the time, from 20 days to 50, that the Williams Act allows management to respond to a takeover offer. More importantly perhaps, an investor who buys 20 percent of an Indiana firm can be denied voting rights in those shares by a majority of "disinterested" shareholders.

The tougher state bills share with their federal counterpart the unfortunate tendency of all anti-takeover bills to reward inefficient and entrenched corporate managers, and to penalize shareholders. But at least nominally, the federal bill is not designed to trap capital and assets within geographical boundaries.

In the long run, neither Indiana nor any other state can really opt out of the national economy. As a New York investment banker told The New York Times, takeover specialists are an innovative breed. But, the new rules, as epitomized in the Indiana law, will complicate things and divert precious resources to unproductive purposes.

And thus does an economy become less competitive.

Instant news crushed Hart

The Gary Hart debacle has left the American press in the position of the small boy who, delightedly trying out his new BB gun by firing at a bird, is shocked to discover that it can indeed kill.

When The Miami Herald's story of his weekend frolic broke, it was clear that it could wreck Hart's campaign. But few suspected that the demolition of a strong front-runner, tested in a bitter 1984 presidential race, would be finished in just five days. Journalists are so accustomed to discounting descriptions of our power that we weren't prepared to have it so vividly demonstrated. The experience should be sobering.

The power is not the product of any conspiracy among journalists to run the country or to prevent elected leaders from doing so. It grows largely out of technology, which, by providing more and more information faster and faster, speeds up the pace of events themselves. In 1937, or even, 1957, the news of Hart's indiscretion might have taken days or weeks to fully penetrate the public consciousness. In 1987, it took about 24 hours.

The public reaction to such events no longer builds gradually, giving voters time to consider and reconsider and defend themselves. It is as sudden and overwhelming as an avalanche, which can be survived but not resisted.

The biggest change, of course is television. Reading about a candidate in the newspaper, or even hearing him on the radio, gives voters only a vague impression of what he is like as a person. The average voter's knowledge used to consist of information filtered through layers of reporters and editors. As people, they were nearly as remote as figures in history.

Now the filter has been removed. Television, by continually supplying viewers with instant images of each politician, gives them a misleading sense of personal acquaintance. That magnifies the betrayal felt when a candidate turns out to be different from what voters had judged him to be.

Good or bad, there is no way to reverse these changes. Like nuclear weapons, modern means of communication are here to stay. But their power, like that of nuclear weapons, obliges those controlling them to exercise due caution. Due caution was not exercised by The Miami Herald when it reported that a young woman had spent the night at Hart's home while his wife was gone. Its investigation was perfectly justified. But its handling of the story was reckless and sloppy.

It's common knowledge by now that the Herald's reporters didn't watch a rear entrance to Hart's house for five hours during the Friday night he supposedly spent with Donna Rice and that they didn't watch the front or the back for two hours. But other distressing facts went unpublicized.

One is that from 11 p.m. to 3 a.m., when the Herald said its reporters were watching the front entrance, they were watching sporadically. Two reporters were there at the time, and one of them told the Chicago Tribune that they only drove by to check on Hart every 10 minutes or so.

Another, unmentioned by the Herald until a week later, was that on the afternoon of Saturday, May 3, a car belonging to a friend of Hart stopped at the house, whereupon a man got out, went to the door of the house and returned to the car with another man — buttressing Hart's account of his activities that day and contradicting what the Herald previously had reported.

Unfortunately, in the course of these events, the Herald photographer who was watching bent over to pick up a camera and "lost track of the participants." Some passing cars also blocked his view. He couldn't even tell if the second man had gotten in the car or returned to the house. So he followed the car and eventually saw a man and a woman — not Hart or Rice — get out. But when he developed the pictures he had taken, he discovered he had followed the wrong car.

With these gaps in the Herald's surveillance, it's entirely possible that Rice left unnoticed — entirely possible, in other words, that Hart's candidacy was destroyed by a false story. Maybe the newspaper could have built a convincing case of a sexual relationship between Rice and Hart without knowing for sure whether Rice spent the night at his house. But the editors didn't choose that route. Determined to get the story, they ignored the possible inaccuracy and rushed into print.

Given the stakes involved, the Herald had an obligation to make sure of its facts before going to press. Gary Hart, like the rest of us, now grasps the full power of modern communications methods. Like other dangerous inventions, they shouldn't be placed in the hands of children.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, May 18, the 138th day of 1987. There are 227 days left in the year. This is Victoria Day in Canada.

Today's Highlight in History:
On May 18, 1980, the Mount St. Helens volcano in Washington state exploded. The blast took 1,300 feet off the top of the mountain, left 57 people dead or missing, devastated 150 square miles of forest and blew an ash cloud around the world.

On this date:
In 1642, the city of Montreal in Canada was founded.

In 1804, the French Senate proclaimed Napoleon Bonaparte emperor.

In 1860, the Republican Party convention in Chicago nominated Abraham Lincoln for president.

In 1910, Halley's Comet, as seen from Earth, moved across the Sun.

In 1911, composer Gustav Mahler died in Vienna, Austria.

In 1926, evangelist Aimee Semple McPherson mysteriously vanished while visiting a beach at Venice, Calif. (She reappeared a month later, claiming to have been kidnapped.)

In 1933, the Tennessee Valley Authority was created.

Canada needs own controls

If you really care about someone, you should not allow minor irritations to fester, right? You and your friend should confront whatever disagreement and resolve it, right?

I care about Canada that much. We've had too much fun together — in skiing in her Laurentians, fishing in her Ontario and, in Vancouver, just smelling the flowers.

I've never sought to second-guess her dichotomous politics, which are none of my business. I have recommended her economic potential as perhaps the greatest on the planet.

But Canada has not stepped across our unguarded boarder in a manner which is at least impolite.

Canada has been selling the United States a billion dollars worth of electricity every year.

At the same time, Canada is agitating in Washington, D.C., further to cripple our state-side production of electricity with acid rain legislation.

Now hold the phone.

Canada, in our Congress and in our courts, is trying to get us — the U.S. — to take corrective measures which Canada is unwilling to take in Canada!

When it comes to controlling air pollution, the United States has outdone Canada in every way.

The United States is spending $29 billion a year on air quality controls.

Any American who pays his electric bill is helping to pay $10 billion of that total.

U.S. utilities operate 142 stack scrubbers and are planning 50 more. Each scrubber costs $100 million or more.

Canada has installed not one stack scrubber. Canada's government has promised to help reduce stack emissions by 50 percent. Instead, the emissions increased.

While in the United States, electric power plant emissions have declined 16 percent despite the use of more coal.

Yet the Canadian government is threatening to attack the United States — in court — demanding that we take corrective measures which Canadians have not bothered to take.

The entire acid rain brouhaha derives from some very questionable science. Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd recently called it "A crisis that does not exist."

A 1985 survey by the Environmental Protection Agency revealed that of 1,619 lakes in the eastern half of the United States, only 4 percent in the Northeast, 2 percent in the Midwest and none at all in the Appalachia are "acidified."

This suggests that what the Detroit News calls environmental commandos don't know what they are talking about; that acidification is more likely the result of regional rainwater runoff.

Yet Canadians persist in an almost theological commitment to crippling American manufacturers with added pollution controls while selling ever more of their electricity to us.

That is not neighborly.

Substandard containers threaten dumping

By Robert Walters

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (NEA) — Both the military and commercial applications of nuclear technology long have been widely suspected because of their proponents' record of misleading claims, deceptive practices and broken promises.

A fresh example of that deviousness and duplicity recently surfaced here in New Mexico, the state that not only boasts of its role as the birthplace of the atomic bomb but also continues to rely heavily upon nuclear weapons activities to sustain its economy.

Among the newest of those facilities is the Waste Isolation Pilot Project, operated by the U.S. Department of Energy and located 25 miles east of the community of Carlsbad in New Mexico's sparsely populated southeastern corner.

WIPP is to serve principally as a depository for what is known as transuranic waste, whose radiation emissions cannot penetrate even a piece of paper but which poses a serious health threat to humans if inhaled or ingested.

Transuranic wastes require secure long-term storage because their half-lives — the amount of time that must pass before they lose half of their radioactivity — can last for centuries if not millennia. For example, the half-life of plutonium 239, the predominant radioisotope, is 24,000 years.

Much of the waste destined for WIPP consists of rags, gloves, protective clothing, laboratory implements, pumps, valves, motors, tools and other materials that have been in contact with radioactive elements during the weapons-making process.

Most of the waste shipments will come from four Western facilities — Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, Nevada Test Site, Rocky Flats Plant in Colorado and Hanford Reservation in Washington — although some will originate at such distant locations as Oak Ridge National Laboratory in Tennessee and Savannah River Plant in South Carolina.

The 500 to 1,200 yearly waste shipments destined for WIPP will be hauled by truck and train, passing through every state west of the Mississippi River except those in the Upper Midwest.

To minimize the danger to the public in the event of accidental radioactive releases, the U.S. Department of Transportation has long maintained strict standards for the containers used in such shipments.

"But DOE has known since 1979 that the package it was developing for WIPP shipments would not meet those requirements," says Don Hancock, a staff member of the Albuquerque-based Southwest Research and Information Center.

Indeed, state officials warned DOE in mid-1985 that its shipping container was "unacceptable for use in New Mexico" because of "design inadequacies" and "fundamental deficiencies."

Instead of complying with the existing safety regulations, DOE earlier this year audaciously called upon DOT to change its requirements to legitimize the substandard shipping containers.

Weaker dollar is expected to fuel inflation

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. economy will see significantly higher inflation this year because of a weaker dollar, but the falling greenback will finally begin to lift the fortunes of American manufacturers, leading economists predicted today.

The National Association of Business Economists said its latest survey of member sentiment found more optimism that the country will be able to avoid a recession through 1988.

The economists, who work for some of the nation's largest corporations, forecast stronger growth this year, a lower trade deficit and a declining federal budget deficit. But they said these favorable economic developments would be offset somewhat by a pickup in inflation.

Consumer prices, which rose at a two-decade low rate of 1.1 percent last year, will climb 4.3 percent in 1987, the economists forecast. This prediction was more pessimistic than a survey just three months ago which forecast a 3.8 percent price rise for this year.

Even with the less-favorable inflation prospects, the economists still were optimistic that the recovery from the 1981-82 recession will continue for at least the next two years.

The analysts forecast the economy, as measured by the gross national product, will expand this year and next at annual rates of 2.9 percent, up from the 2.5 percent GNP growth turned in during 1986.

More than half the economists, 57 percent, believe the current expansion will last through 1988, compared with only 48 percent who were that optimistic in the previous survey.

While the Reagan administration is forecasting no downturn through 1991, the private economists are not that optimistic.

"Virtually all of the business analysts look for a downturn to occur within the next five years," said Jerry L. Jordan, president of the association. "Ninety percent of the economists think a recession will begin by the end of 1989."

The Reagan administration, led by Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, began in 1985 pursuing a policy of pushing the value of the dollar lower in order to limit imports and make American goods more competitive on overseas markets.

The new survey indicated this strategy was finally beginning to pay off, with one-fourth of the economists reporting higher export sales by their companies in the past three months.

And 55 percent of the economists in manufacturing firms reported rising demand, both domestically and internationally, for their products.

Shultz: Israel must support international peace conference

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States will participate in an international peace conference on the Middle East only with Israeli backing, Secretary of State George P. Shultz says.

"The president and I are not committed to an international conference," Shultz said Sunday following a 90-minute meeting with Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres.

Peres is on a U.S. visit to recruit Reagan administration help in convening such a multi-nation conference as an umbrella for peace talks with Jordan.

Outlining the American position on the subject, which has been somewhat unclear over the past few weeks, Shultz told a conference of the American Israel Public Affairs Committee, "We will proceed only with the support of the government of Israel."

Shultz, addressing his remarks to pro-Israel lobbyists, urged Israel to give the conference a chance because for the first time ever "a genuine opportunity" for direct talks between Israel and Jordan may have been presented by Jordan's King Hussein, who has been meeting with U.S. envoys on the subject for more than a year.

"We believe Jordan is sincere," Shultz said, adding that Israel and the United States should explore the emerging possibilities, albeit "carefully, cautiously, skeptically."

Shultz said Hussein had agreed to discuss with Israel "a negotiated settlement in an environment free of belligerency" and has "dealt with Israel straightforwardly."

The Israeli government is split on the subject of the Jordanian-backed proposal to hold negotiations with Israel under the auspices of the five permanent members of the U.N. Security council: the United States, Soviet Union, China, Great Britain and France. Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, leader of the right-wing Likud bloc, is bitterly opposed.

Both Peres and Shultz said the Soviet Union would only be allowed to join an international conference if they renewed the ties they severed with Israel in 1967 and eased their restrictions on Jewish emigration.

Shultz said the Soviet behavior until now had not qualified the Kremlin as a participant, nor would the Palestine Liberation Organization be considered for a peace talks role unless it renounced terrorism and recognized Israel. The Palestinians would be represented at peace talks by moderate leaders as part of the Jordanian delegation, he said.

Peres has told U.S. Jewish leaders he was asking the Reagan administration to seek clarifications from the Soviet Union regarding the role they want to play in Mideast peace talks.

"I think we shall try, the United States and Israel together, to see where the Russians are, if they're available for a constructive opening of direct negotiations," Peres, leader of Israel's left-leaning Labor Party, told the American Jewish Committee earlier Sunday.

Gephardt making his move in the wake of Hart's fall

By JONATHAN WOLMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Mike Dukakis and Paul Simon were courting Gary Hart staffers in Des Moines last week, but it was fellow presidential candidate Richard Gephardt — already strong in Iowa — who nuzzled up to the most glittering Hart constituency of all: Hollywood Democrats.

Gephardt introduced the Film Integrity Act of 1987, a bill that would prohibit the "colorization" of black-and-white films without approval from the director and screenwriter.

Why would a busy congressman from Missouri make this legislation a personal priority?

- Two reasons, perhaps.
- 1. He believes, deeply, in artistic integrity.
- 2. It wouldn't hurt to have access to Hollywood campaign contributions.

The timing of Gephardt's attack on colorization was politically perfect. With Hart out of the race and his allies surveying the field, Simon, the Illinois senator, and Dukakis, the Massachusetts governor, were making approaches to the talented Hart staff in Iowa.

But Gephardt already is well organized in the first-caucus state; in fact, a poll of Iowa Democrats released in Sunday's Des Moines Register indicates he benefited mightily from Hart's withdrawal and now leads the field. Thus, an entree to the California campaign money freed up by Hart's withdrawal might be more valuable to Gephardt than Hart's Iowa organizers.

Enter the Film Integrity Act of 1987. "This is a very serious problem," Gephardt said in unveiling HR2400 at a news conference last week. Feature films are "a uniquely American art form... one of the most potent voices through which one generation speaks to the next."

An AP News Analysis

But now these voices are in danger of being

At a reception with the film celebrities the night before his news conference, Gephardt referred many questions about the Film Integrity Act of 1987 to the general counsel for the Directors Guild of America. Asked what the bill would specifically do, Gephardt said: "I don't know. I don't know all that much about copyright law."

The next day, at his news conference, Gephardt said the bill would give "the screenwriter and director of a film the right of consent to any alteration of their work." Asked who would approve changes if the director had died, Gephardt stared at the questioner before Pollack stepped forward to help out. Heirs would retain the artistic control.

Gephardt allowed as how he actually had never seen the devastation that colorization can cause to a black-and-white film. He said "It's a Wonderful Life," with Jimmy Stewart, is one of his favorite films. The Frank Capra classic is slated for colorization.

Interest lessens, problem remains

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Sallie Crane was broke and emotionally spent, but still she didn't pull out of the search for missing children until an emotionally disturbed girl whose disappearance she'd been investigating was found murdered.

"I get upset," Ms. Crane says now, "because there are kids out there that I wish I could help." But she has closed down Child Watch of Virginia Inc.

Ms. Crane said closing organizations such as hers lessens public attention on the problem of missing children.

But others in similar agencies aren't so sure. They say the frenzy of worry that followed some highly publicized cases has matured into a concern for the broader issue of children as victims of crime.

"The specific focus of the society through news accounts has definitely changed... and it is not at the fever pitch that it was a couple of years ago," said Jay Howell, executive director of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children in Washington, D.C. The center was set up under the U.S. Department of Justice.

"Despite the short attention span, perhaps of the media, the concern of the average citizen remains very acute on this," he said.

Ms. Crane's voice trembled as she talked about walking away from the organization she started in 1984.

"I had perfect credit going into it and basically I went bankrupt," said Ms. Crane, who is now divorced and raising her children on her own.

"You're looking at a situation where you have to do something for yourself and your own family," she said, "and you have this parent who's crying, literally crying, to you at 3 in the morning, and what do you do?"

Other grass-roots organizations also have surrendered to financial reality, she said.

Ms. Crane estimated her organization, using her money and funds donated by individuals and civic groups, spent about $50,000 in three years, often acting as a private detective agency in tracking runaways or youngsters taken by non-custodial parents.

Runaways — the biggest part of the problem, according to officials — can end up as the victims of prostitution, drug abuse, pornography or murder.

Fourteen-year-old Tammy Agee failed to return to her group home in Richmond last Aug. 18 after a swimming trip to the James River. Emotionally disturbed, the girl had spent almost her entire life in residential programs and foster homes.

OH, MY ACHING BACK

If you're like a lot of people, you may have occasional or persistent back pain and wonder what caused it. You try to think of some incident in which you may have strained your back, and come up with nothing. But there must be some reason why you have back pains. The truth is that even the simplest of incidents may be the cause, such as reaching high on a shelf to get something. Or stooping suddenly to pick up something that has fallen. Or maybe you need some tips on good posture.

Whatever the cause, the problem may be that your spinal column is out of alignment... No pain-killing drug can cure the CAUSE. It can dull the pain for awhile and give you temporary relief. But if your back is out of alignment, the pain will probably not go away unless you get the treatment you need. No symptom can be more depressing than persis-

Early cabinetmakers charged by the leg

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL
Ordering a table from your local cabinetmaker in the late 18th and 19th centuries was a bit like buying a car today. You could order the basic model and then decide on the options.

Carved legs, inlay, extra banding with veneer, and the choice of wood could add to the price. Tapering of the legs cost a "penny a side."

There is no doubt that our ancestors watched how they spent their money. Most of the tables found today have legs tapered on only three sides.

Card playing and other gambling games were a popular pastime in America. Men and women played Whist, Loo, Faro, Quadrille and other now unfamiliar games. The cards were different but the tables were similar.

Circular tables were made in the early 1800s but the "square card table" was favored. It was often made with a folding top so it could be kept against a wall when not in use. The top was not actually square but was rectangular with small round corners that probably held drinks or chips.

The tables made right after 1800 had slender legs. By 1815 the legs became thicker.

Q. How old are bookends that are shaped like an "L"?
A. We have found catalogs offering the L-shaped bookends from the late 19th century when shelves became popular and books became more plentiful and less expensive.

The fireplace mantel or the top of a low cabinet was a practical place to store books, held by the heavy attractive bookends. It was easier to take a book from a shelf than from a pile.

The earliest bookends were made of heavy metal, cast iron, bronze or spelter. The metal was often colored by enameling.

Pottery was also used but it was lighter and less durable. Fewer breakable bookends survived.

It was not until about 1900 that someone had the idea of using the "L" so the books could rest on the flat section. This made it possible to design lightweight bookends—wood, copper, pewter and later plastic and chrome—of unusual designs.

ity and constructiveness. How was phrenology practiced? How old is it? How was the pottery head used?

A. Phrenology is the study of the shape of the head. The slight bumps were thought to reveal a person's personality. Phrenology was founded in the late 18th century by a German doctor, Franz Joseph Gall. He said 27 organs of the brain determined human characteristics. Each organ protruded as a bump on the skull. The study of the bumps was recognized as a science, and there were schools to train phrenologists by the 1830s. Your pottery head is one of the many used to show the position of the skull bumps and their meaning. The study had lost favor as a science by the 1860s. It became a carnival skill similar to telling fortunes from tea leaves or cards. Most of the heads were made in England in the 1860-1890s. They are interesting and attractive and have been reproduced for gift shops. We had our heads "read" by a penny arcade machine of the 1930s. It fit over your head like a hat and located the irregularity of the skull. It printed one of about 50 possible personality analysis charts.

DEAR ABBY: Prom night will soon be here, and then, summer vacation begins. Will you please rerun "Please, God, I'm Only 17"? I lost two of my best friends in a senseless car accident last May. Maybe running that piece again will make teenagers drive a little more carefully.

STILL MISSING CINDY AND BUD
DEAR STILL MISSING: I have printed that piece annually for the last 15 years, and each time the requests for a rerun have outdrawn all others. Editors of high school and college newspapers have asked for permission to reprint it. And permission is always granted. A class of teen-agers in Seoul, South Korea, recently sent for my booklet "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know," and wrote that they agreed that "Please, God, I'm Only 17" was the most helpful, memorable part of that booklet. It's a powerful piece, whose author is unknown, and here it is:

PLEASE, GOD, I'M ONLY 17
The day I died was an ordinary school day. How I wish I had taken the bus! But I was too cool for the bus. I remember how I wheedled the car out of

Mom. "Special favor," I pleaded. "All the kids drive." When the 2:50 bell rang, I threw all my books in the locker. I was free until 8:40 tomorrow morning! I ran to the parking lot, excited at the thought of driving a car and being my own boss. Free!

It doesn't matter how the accident happened. I was goofing off — going too fast. Taking crazy chances. But I was enjoying my freedom and having fun. The last thing I remembered was passing an old lady who seemed to be going awfully slow. I heard a deafening crash and felt a terrible jolt. Glass and steel flew everywhere. My whole body seemed to be turning inside out. I heard myself scream.

Suddenly I awakened; it was very quiet. A police officer was standing over me. Then I saw a doctor. My body was mangled. I was saturated with blood. Pieces of jagged glass were sticking out all over. Strange that I couldn't feel anything.

Hey, don't pull that sheet over my head! I can't be dead. I'm only 17. I've got a date tonight. I'm supposed to grow up and have a wonderful life. I haven't lived yet. I can't be dead.

Later I was placed in a drawer. My folks had to identify me. Why did they have to see me like this? Why did I have to look at Mom's eyes when she faced the most terrible ordeal of her life? Dad suddenly looked like an old man. He told the man in charge, "Yes, he is my son." The funeral was a weird experience. I saw all my relatives and friends walk toward the casket. They passed by, one by one, and looked at me with the saddest eyes I've ever seen. Some of my buddies were crying. A few of the girls touched my hand and sobbed as they walked away. Please — somebody — wake me up! Get me out of here! I can't bear to see my mom and dad so broken up. My grandparents are so racked with grief they can hardly walk. My brother and sisters are like zombies. They move like robots. In a daze, everybody! No one can believe this. And I can't believe it, either. Please don't bury me! I'm not dead! I have a lot of living to do! I want to laugh and run again. I want to sing and dance. Please don't put me in the ground. I promise if you give me just one more chance, God, I'll be the most careful driver in the whole world. All I want is one more chance. Please, God, I'm only 17!

Teen's lament has somber message for young drivers

DEAR ABBY: Prom night will soon be here, and then, summer vacation begins.

Will you please rerun "Please, God, I'm Only 17"? I lost two of my best friends in a senseless car accident last May. Maybe running that piece again will make teenagers drive a little more carefully.

STILL MISSING CINDY AND BUD
DEAR STILL MISSING: I have printed that piece annually for the last 15 years, and each time the requests for a rerun have outdrawn all others. Editors of high school and college newspapers have asked for permission to reprint it. And permission is always granted. A class of teen-agers in Seoul, South Korea, recently sent for my booklet "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know," and wrote that they agreed that "Please, God, I'm Only 17" was the most helpful, memorable part of that booklet. It's a powerful piece, whose author is unknown, and here it is:

PLEASE, GOD, I'M ONLY 17
The day I died was an ordinary school day. How I wish I had taken the bus! But I was too cool for the bus. I remember how I wheedled the car out of

Mom. "Special favor," I pleaded. "All the kids drive." When the 2:50 bell rang, I threw all my books in the locker. I was free until 8:40 tomorrow morning! I ran to the parking lot, excited at the thought of driving a car and being my own boss. Free!

It doesn't matter how the accident happened. I was goofing off — going too fast. Taking crazy chances. But I was enjoying my freedom and having fun. The last thing I remembered was passing an old lady who seemed to be going awfully slow. I heard a deafening crash and felt a terrible jolt. Glass and steel flew everywhere. My whole body seemed to be turning inside out. I heard myself scream.

Suddenly I awakened; it was very quiet. A police officer was standing over me. Then I saw a doctor. My body was mangled. I was saturated with blood. Pieces of jagged glass were sticking out all over. Strange that I couldn't feel anything.

Hey, don't pull that sheet over my head! I can't be dead. I'm only 17. I've got a date tonight. I'm supposed to grow up and have a wonderful life. I haven't lived yet. I can't be dead.

Burns state champ for third straight year

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

AUSTIN — What Canadian senior Wendi Burns did in Austin Saturday is believed by many to be a first. As in, never before in the 77 year history of the UIL Track Meet.

What Burns did was win the 100-meter hurdles for the third consecutive year, and in the third different classification.

In 1985, she was state champion in Class 1-A, when she was a student at Claude.

In 1986, when Canadian was in the 3-A classification, she won it for a second year.

And, Saturday, with a time of 14.7 seconds, Burns did it again.

This year, Canadian is a 2-A school, and it is represented well by the fleet-footed hurdler.

"I have had more success than I could ever ask for," Burns said. "(Saturday) I was scared. I didn't know what my legs would do for me."

Burns knew she had to win. She also knew of the extreme pressure that was on her, not only in merely competing, but also in trying to win the event for the third straight year.

"I'm relieved. Very relieved," Burns said. "There's a lot of pressure there. I've heard lots of stories about seniors that got down there and choke."

"There was more riding on this for me, though. (Winning) the three classifications was in the back of my mind."

"Daddy talked to me last night and told me, 'Right now, this doesn't seem like a big deal, but in a few years you'll look on this and be real proud.'"

The race was a close one throughout and Burns said she was constantly aware of her competition. "The girl from Refugio was in Lane 6," Burns said. "All I could see the whole race was her toe. I was just thinking how I had to beat her."

Jackie Burns, Wendi's father and coach, said shortly after the start of the race he knew Wendi had a legitimate chance of winning once again.

"She was the first one to clear the first hurdle," Burns said. "Normally, if she does that, she'll win."

Canadian sophomore Kim McEntire also made an excellent showing for herself at the track meet. She may have finished second in the 2-A 800, but along the way, she accomplished some firsts.

"Kim ran her personal best (2:16.5)," Burns said. "She was also just one-second off the 2-A state record time. That's doggone good. I'm real tickled for her."

McEntire led the race through the 200-meter mark of the second lap. Her competition just snuck up on her.

"I didn't realize she was so close on the back side," McEntire said. "She just caught up and passed me."

Last year, McEntire finished third at state as a freshman in the 800. This year she finished second. One wonders what's in store next year when McEntire will likely return to state in the race as a junior.

For Burns, she has had a star-studded high school career. This year was the capper.

Three years at state. Three gold medals. Three different classes. If she was eligible to return next year, she'd probably win it yet again.

Bad weather, bad traffic; 1987 State Track Meet had everything to offer

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

Pampa's Tanya Lidy may have been in more events than any other local qualifier, but that did not ensure her name would be pronounced correctly by the Memorial Stadium public address announcer.

Throughout the entire meet, announcer John Pritchard pronounced Lidy's name, "Light-ey."

While Lidy was having trouble with oral mispronunciation, Kelton's Michele Keelin was frustrated by the way her name was misspelled in the official program. The program referred to the Kelton senior as Michelle Kellin. That's two too many "L's." She spells her name Michele Keelin. The program also had Keelin from Wheeler-Kelton, when, in fact, Kelton is an independent school district apart from Wheeler.

In 1986, the six-hour rain delay was an experience. On Friday, the heat and humidity posed a problem for Panhandle athletes.

Normally accustomed to dry air, Austin weather provided them with 85 percent humidity. Was it a factor? Some say yes, others say no.

"This humidity is really groggy," Keelin said. "I'd just like to go find a shower somewhere."

"I kinda like this," Wheeler's Richard Smith said.

The heat and humidity didn't bother brother Bubba either.

All the Lady Harvesters agreed that while the southerly wind may have been a factor in the 800-meter relay, the heat and humidity did not play a significant role.

Resembling a sauna bath on Friday, the weather in Austin Saturday for the final day really took a turn for the worse. The rain began at 12:30 p.m. and continued throughout most of the afternoon. It rained so much, in fact, that it made one wish for the high humidity and heat from the previous day.

With the wet weather conditions came wind and temperatures some 20 degrees cooler. By 2:30 p.m., the track, the shot and discus areas were in standing water, hampering athletic efforts in every event.

With 1,659 athletes in town for the meet, not to mention countless parents, coaches and officials, parking was a major headache. Add to that, the University of Texas was in session, and the result was some people having to walk as far as 15 blocks to reach the stadium.

Towns from throughout the state were represented by their prize athletes. Every team nickname one could possibly imagine could be found across the participants' jerseys. Most common were Tigers, Wildcats and Longhorns.

Strangest nickname was the Moguls from Munday. The girls' team was referred to as the Mogulettes.

The most interesting and appropriate name for an individual athlete in the competition was Donnie Brook. Incidentally, Brook was from Brookeland.

The most inspirational moment of the meet came at 8:55 p.m., Friday. Obviously in intense pain, Rudy Rocha from Cuero managed to finish the Class 3A 3200. He was lapped twice and literally limped while running the last three laps due to an injury to his left thigh. Dry eyes were hard to find as Rocha crossed the finish line, helped out by a warm, standing ovation.

Chris Gilbert and Foote had two hits and scored two runs apiece to lead OCAW.

Brad Smillie hit a two-run homer for Glo-Valve that tied the game at 10-all in the fifth inning.

Dunlap had only one hit off Celanese, but took advantage of errors for an 8-2 victory Saturday.

Winning pitcher was Andy Elsheimer while Danny Frye took the loss.

Jason Johnson had a double to lead Celanese while Frye and Tyler Kendall each had a single.

Chris Poole had a double for Dunlap's lone hit.

In the American League, Keyes held off Holmes for a 13-9 victory.

Winning pitcher was Eddie Hernandez, who struck out 15 while walking nine and allowing three hits. Hernandez allowed 9 runs in one inning, but pitched shutout ball the rest of the way.

Hernandez had two doubles and three RBI and Coy Laury two singles to lead the winners.

Tony Martinez hit a home run for Holmes.

First National Bank crushed Cree Company, 19-1, in Junior Babe Ruth action Saturday.

Ricardo Armendaiez had a double and triple for Pampa Hardware. Seven other players for the Hardware team had one hit apiece.

Scott Lucas was tagged with the loss, walking eight and giving up nine hits.

'...So run, that ye may obtain'

State 4-A shotput champion Andrea Hopkins

AUSTIN — If the 77th State Track and Field Meet would have been judged on effort, then the Pampa Lady Harvesters would have won easily.

They may have been second in the final standings, but they were tops in desire.

Brenham won the meet with 72 points. Pampa had 66.

The Lady Harvesters wanted this one badly.

With defense of their state championship on the line, the Harvesters knew they faced a tough battle in overcoming the challenge from Brenham.

The girl's 800-meter relay was the difference.

If the girls had won the race, the final score would have been Pampa 70, Brenham 68.

Instead, the Lady Harvester's finished second with a time of 1:44.9. Brenham's winning time was 1:41.6.

Pampa did not leave the capital city empty-handed, though.

The girl's track team this year claimed three state championships, compared with two last year:

★ The 400-meter relay team (Schivon Parker, Yolanda Brown, Laquita Brown, Tanya Lidy) finished first with a time of 47.9. It was a down-to-the-wire race as second place Wilmer-Hutchins finished at 48.0.

★ Andrea Hopkins won the 4-A shotput, after a throw of 40 feet, 8 1/4 inches.

★ Tanya Lidy broke a class 4-A record, and won the 200-meter dash. Her time of 23.9 now stands as a state best, breaking the old record (24.0) set in 1985 by Fort Worth Polytechnic.

Pampa came away with five out of a possible seven medals.

Aside from the gold medals, Lidy won the bronze in the long jump and, even though the 800 relay team failed to get the gold, the were awarded the silver medal.

For the Wheeler Mustangs, the weekend was a good one. Wheeler athletes came away with four out of six medals. Bubba Smith had two.

Bubba's medals were both silver, as he finished second in both the discus and shotput.

Richard Smith, the defending state champion in the discus was awarded the bronze in that event.

Hurdler Danny Benefield won the third-place bronze medal in the 110 hurdles, and finished just a fraction of second behind for a fourth-place finish in the 300 hurdles.

For White Deer's Joe Don Brown, Saturday morning was his chance to break the boy's 1-A high jump record. He didn't.

As a consolation, though, he is now the state champion in the event, clearing the bar at 6 feet, 10 inches. The old record was 7-0.

Two towns win dual crowns

BY DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The East Texas municipality of Karnack and the South Texas town of Refugio have something unprecedented in common.

Both their girls and boys track teams are state champions in their respective divisions.

Karnack pulled off the rare double in Class 2A at the 77th University Interscholastic League meet at Memorial Stadium.

Billy Sims' double victories in the discus and shot put gave Galveston Ball the Class 5A boys' championship Saturday night.

Ball won the title without competing in the relays where points pay double. Ball scored 42 points to 38 for both Conroe McCullough and Dallas South Oak Cliff, 36 for Dallas Roosevelt, 32 for Dallas Carter, and 30 for Grand Prairie.

Fort Worth Trimble Tech won the 5A girls title with 44 points to 39 for Dallas Carter, 38 for Houston Sterling and 31 for Galveston Ball. A victory in the 800-meter relay clinched the trophy for Tech.

Refugio's girls had 98 points followed by Kerens 52, Wall Brazos 42, Hart 34, Crandall 24, and Albany 23.

The boys scored 56 points to 48 for Haskell, 40 for Alto, 36 for Eastland, 18 for Frankston and 16 for Whitewright.

Also in the night session before a crowd of 15,000, Eric Henry of Conroe McCullough established a new state record in the 3200-meter run with a clocking of 8:52.2. The old record of 8:58.6 was held by Reuben Reina of San Antonio Jay.

There were some other notable doubles.

Steve Lofton of 2A Alto won the 100 and 200 meter dashes and anchored his school to a 400-meter relay victory. Lofton is a wide receiver who signed a football scholarship with Texas A&M University.

Don Marshall, a freshman from Grand Prairie, won both the dashes in the 5A division.

Karnack, a community near Marshall, pulled off a double by winning the Class A Boys and Girls titles in the rain-drenched afternoon session.

Who's the boss?

A watchful pachyderm keeps a close eye on his keeper at the Carson and Barnes Circus, held Sunday at the rodeo grounds. The show, sponsored by the Pampa Noon Lion's Club, was in town for two performances and featured numerous exotic animals, including giraffes, rhinos and miniature horses.

Governor general, coup leader both say they're leader of Fiji

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — The governor general and an army colonel both claimed today that they were the legitimate leader of Fiji, whose month-old elected government was ousted last week in the South Pacific's first coup.

Governor General Ratu Sir Penaia Ganilau issued a statement over the army-controlled radio saying coup leader Lt. Col. Sitiveni Rabuka had acknowledged Ganilau's right to assume executive power, and had urged him to remain in his position.

But within 30 minutes, Rabuka read a statement on the same station saying Ganilau had sworn him in Sunday night as chairman of the new regime's Council of Ministers and planned to swear in the 16 other ministers Tuesday.

The power struggle broke into the open today as demonstrations continued against Thursday's coup.

Shopkeepers around the country, most of whom are ethnic Indians, closed their shops in protest, and 3,000 people gathered in downtown Suva to pray for a return to democracy. Banks shut down because of a run on the Fijian dollar.

Last Thursday, Rabuka arrested Prime Minister Timoci Bavadra and his Cabinet and suspended the constitution, saying he wanted to end communal violence sparked by April 11 elections that established a government dominated for the first time by ethnic Indians.

Ethnic Fijians comprise 47 percent of the population of 715,000 in this South Pacific island nation, while Indians account for 49 percent. Until the election, ethnic Fijians always dominated the government, while the Indians controlled the economy.

Rabuka ignored Ganilau's early statements that he was assuming executive power, and prevented him from speaking on the radio. But in recent days, he has tried to win support from Ganilau, who is Queen Elizabeth II's representative and is seen as the principal obstacle to the success of the coup.

Sunday night, the Fiji radio station reported that a joint statement by Ganilau and Rabuka was imminent, fueling speculation that Ganilau would end his opposition to Rabuka's government and its plans for a constitution favoring ethnic Fijians. However, no statement was broadcast.

This morning, Ganilau went to the radio station and repeated that he had assumed executive powers, as provided by the British-written constitution in the absence of ministers.

Ganilau, who normally is a figurehead, also announced he had received a message from Queen Elizabeth II promising to "do all we can" to support him. He said he planned to fly to London to discuss the crisis on this former British colony with the queen.

In an earlier speech today, Rabuka warned foreign journalists to "behave in a responsible manner and not provoke unrest by their activities," the radio reported.

Australian Broadcasting Corp. reporter Trevor Watson was expelled today, and more than 20 other foreign reporters have been detained for several hours for their reports.

British Broadcasting Corp. correspondent Red Harrison and another Austrian Broadcasting Corp. reporter, Peter Cave, were detained at gunpoint, taken into a back alley and lined up against a wall this morning before being released.

"I will dream about that moment for the rest of my life," said Harrison. "When I heard the click of the magazine being clipped into the automatic rifles, I thought we were finished."

Child with rare skin disease in burn center

GALVESTON (AP) — An infant girl suffering from a rare disease in which her skin looks like it was burned remained in critical but stable condition at Shriners Burns Institute, a spokeswoman says.

Tia Baker of Jacksonville, Fla., has a skin disease known as epidermolysis bullosa, which causes her skin to blister and crack, said Dr. Nick Wilson, Shriners Hospital administrator.

The 3-month-old girl underwent two skin-graft operations Saturday and was in critical but stable condition Sunday.

Tia is the fourth child this year admitted to Shriners with the disease. Epidermolysis bullosa affects about 50,000 people in the United States and can be fatal in severe cases. "She's a very sick little girl," Wilson said. "It looks like she's been burned over 90 percent of her body."

Tia had been in a Jacksonville hospital for about two months before she and her mother, Shea Baker, were flown to Galveston late Wednesday. The Shriners hospital is paying for the Bakers' flight and hospital stay.

The girl could be released in about 18 days if all goes well, Wilson said.

Press addresses social problems, but political reporting unchanged

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet citizens, long kept in the dark about the failings of their society, learned from the state-run press recently that prostitutes at Black Sea resorts can earn more in one week than a factory worker does in a year.

They also have been told in past months that homeless hobos wander the country, that teen-age gangs terrorize youths who dress like Westerners and that drug abuse, the dreaded AIDS virus and homosexuality are spreading among their countrymen.

The revelations spurred by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's policy of glasnost, or openness, have been stunning in their scope and frequency, and in the gashes they have made in the public armor of socialist superiority.

But glasnost so far appears to have done little to improve what it has exposed, and has had little significant effect on the basic role of Soviet mass media.

Since the 1917 Bolshevik revolution brought the Soviets to power, the press has served to promote Communist Party policies.

Glasnost, now the party's official policy, makes for more interesting reading and a better awareness of many of society's shortcomings.

But it has allowed no change in the media's espousal of Kremlin policy or in Soviet journalists' reports from abroad, where capitalist societies are still portrayed as blighted by hunger, unemployment and homelessness.

Nor has there been much change in the speed or thoroughness of reporting what are considered major news events in foreign countries.

The May 9 crash of a Polish jetliner, killing all 183 people aboard, was given three paragraphs on page 5 of the Communist Party daily Pravda, while the front page was devoted to commemorating the 42nd anniversary of the victory over Nazi Germany.

All newspapers are obliged to carry major party pronouncements on the front page, with state-approved headlines and without commentary. Gorbachev's Feb. 28 arms control proposal got the same presentation in Sovetskoy sport newspaper as it did in Pravda.

"Glasnost," which comes from the Russian word for "voice" and means literally the act of speaking out, mostly has affected local reporting on Soviet life and human relations.

Gorbachev has made glasnost an official campaign, exhorting the media to tell it like it is, at least on selected issues, with the hope that the heightened attention will speed resolution of the problems.

"There was a time when we couldn't raise certain issues because we were told these problems didn't exist," Gennady Seleznev, editor of the youth newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda, said in a recent interview. His newspaper has carried some of the most extensive reports on prostitution, homosexuality and other previously taboo subjects.

He contended the situation has changed, and that government officials no longer can hide unfavorable information from journalists.

Articles have denounced civil rights abuses by KGB agents, but plainclothesmen still seem to operate with impunity in roughing up and detaining demonstrators.

"Openness is a good thing. Most people are all for being more honest about our shortcomings," said a 40-year-old Moscow writer, who, like many still unsure of the limits of openness, spoke on condition of anonymity. "But openness about what's wrong should not be confused with actions to correct those problems," the writer said.

Before glasnost there was "pokazukha," which remains a formidable adversary.
