State targets Pampa gas prices

By PAUL PINKHAM Senior Staff Writer

Investigators from the Texas attorney general's office have been meeting with Pampa gas station owners this week to discuss price-discrimination allegations

Sources close to the 9-month-old investigation told The Pampa News that representatives of the attorney general's Antitrust Division have taken depositions from at least three Pampa service station operators.

Antitrust investigators began in August to look into complaints from Pampa about gas prices that were virtually identical from station to station and were at times up to 30 cents higher than in Amarillo and as much as 25 cents higher than prices in White Deer and Panhandle.

Currently, gas in Pampa is selling for 93.9 cents per gallon for regular and 97.9 cents for unleaded at all outlets surveyed except Exxon. Prices at Pampa's Exxon stations today were a few pennies higher.

Gas in Amarillo was selling for 79.9 and 82.9 cents today at Toot'N'Totum. In White Deer, 14 miles west of Pampa, regular cost 89.9 cents and unleaded was 93.9 cents today.

Pampa station owners have generally said they cannot sell gas cheaper because they would then be selling below their cost. There have also been charges of a gas monopoly.

"There's three people in town that can drive all the independent (stations) out of business, and they can afford to do it because they also sell the fuel," Pampa Shell retailer Ray O'Brien said in October.

The antitrust investigation remained a secret until October, when Assistant Attorney General Jack Hightower confirmed that Pampa's high gas prices were being scrutinized by not only the Antitrust Division but also by the consumer affairs and energy divisions of the attorney general's office.

A source inside the attorney general's office told The Pampa News in October that the investigation centered around allegations of price discrimination distributors' reported practice of selling gas to one retailer at one level and offering fuel at a distributor-operated gas station at lower prices.

The source indicated that some information uncovered by the investigation may have been turned over to federal authorities in Dallas

AMARILLO - U.S. Rep. Beau KGNC farm broadcaster Boulter has announced that Amarillo agriculture broadcaster Karr Ingham will become his new district representative, effective Monday

Ingham replaces Ernie Houdashell, who quit last week. Houdashell said late Thursday that he felt it was time for him to leave. He said his reasons are personal.

Ingham most recently served as associate agri-business director for Amarillo radio station KGNC. He had been farm and ranch director for KFDA-TV (Channel 10) in Amarillo, leaving that post in March.

In his new post, Ingham will represent Boulter, R-Amarillo, in the Panhandle area, working out of Boulter's Amarillo office.

Ingham grew up in Stratford and currently serves on the Agribusiness Committee of the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce. He is also director of the south-central region of the National Association of Farm Broadcasters.

He studied business administration at Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene.

Boulter said in a press release that Ingham will "continue to work closely with the agricultural community throughout the today he's seen no evidence "that I've been mortally wounded" by the Iran-Contra affair and that Americans do not "seem to be unhappy about what we've been doing here.

White House safe held Contra cash

WASHINGTON — A key operative in the Iran-Contra affair, in testimony that prompted the resignation of a White House official, says he funneled money and intelligence information straight from Oliver L. North's safe to a leader of Nicaragua's Contra rebels. Thursday's testimony by Robert Owen was followed in short order by the resignation of Johnathan S. Miller, director of the White House office of administration, who Owen said was involved in the money transfer.

Owen appeared at the end of two weeks of hearings by House and Senate committees that so far have shown deeper and broader Reagan administration involvement in the Central American conflict than previously admitted.

Owen was the first witness to testify under a grant of limited immunity from prosecution. He told how he went to work for Contra leader Adolfo Calero for $2,500 a month and became a gobetween with North at a time when Congress had prohibited aid to the Contras, "directly or in-

At one point, Owen testified that he and Miller were handed stacks of traveler's checks by North at his office in the White House complex and asked to go cash them. Owen said he later turned over the cash — about $6,000 — at his apartment to a Contra leader he did not name.

Miller resigned a few hours after Owen made the revelation on Capitol Hill.

In other developments: Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee and a member of the investigating committee, said the evidence collected so far "shows the president was not a passive, uninterested bystander."

Officials with the Federal Trade Commission and the U.S. Department of Justice's Antitrust Division in Dallas said they could neither confirm nor deny that an investigation was pending.

The attorney general's office source also said 'civil investigative demands'' were sent in October to those involved with the gasoline business in Pampa. He described the demands as similar to subpoenas to testify.

Hightower said today that he has not checked recently on the status of the state attorney general's investigation.

A Pampa lawyer close to the investigation said today that the two attorney general antitrust lawyers taking depositions were interested in how gas prices are set in Pampa. "They were just generally wanting to know the policies and procedures the various retailers use in setting gas prices," said the Pampa attorney, who spoke on condition of anonymity. He said one station owner testified that the company's policy is to drive around Pampa checking prices, then setting the stations' prices accordingly

Another local station owner, Michael Trimble, said he is aware of the attorney general investigators' visit but did not want to comment on what he

"I think the investigation is ongoing, and I don't think it'd be proper to make a comment at this time," said Trimble, who runs the Diamond Shamrock station at 1600 Duncan.

Station owners who reportedly gave depositions could not be reached for comment today.

One of the attorney general's antitrust lawyers now in Pampa, George Castillo, was contacted at the Coronado Inn this morning. He said he did not have time to comment on the status of the investigation.

"I'm in a meeting," Castillo said.

The current investigation is not the first time the state attorney general's office has looked into possible antitrust violations in the Pampa gasoline business.

the creation of the life-size bronze sculpture of Perry LeFors sitting on a horse, as though gazing out over some of the million acres of the Diamond F Ranch for which he was a foreman in the 1880s. The artist said he used a photograph of the rancher, the one that has hung at the Perry LeFors Field airport named by his late wife Emma in 1952 in memory of her husband. The photograph is a formal portrait of the man, wearing no hat. 'Emmett wanted me to have him with spurs, a short jacket and a tie," Muno said, along with the cowboy hat he wore, all befitting LeFors' status as a foreman of the large ranch Muno said he had only the portrait to use as the main guide. To add the other accoutrements, he used a saddle from the late 19th century period, along with a hat from the same period plus the other items like the boots and spurs.

First he did a small 18-inch model of the sculpture in clay and then gained Emmett's final approval. After that, he spent four months working the clay model up to life size in preparation for its casting in bronze.

It was then taken to the Scissor tail Bronze Foundry in Oklahoma for its casting, which took seven months to complete through all its stages, Muno said. Muno brought the statue to Pampa last weekend, meeting with the city parks crew staff to prepare it for its mounting on the pedestal that will support it. The statue has been stored in a Sawatzky Construction Inc. warehouse this week while landscaping and other work has been in progress at the site. Muno will arrive in town to help with the final steps of placing the statue at the site. Saturday morning the bronze sculpture will be brought to the site and placed on its monument pedestal. Muno said bronze pins will be used to mount the statue on the pedestal. The pins will be placed underneath the statue's base into holes that were drilled last weekend. The pins then will be secured with anchoring cement that will set in 30 minutes. The artist said he is pleased with the creation, adding that he's looking forward to seeing it in its permanent location. Muno said the statue will be cleaned up for its placement on the pedestal. rid of its dirt and other items acquired in its initial placement last Saturday.

Parks and Recreation Department Director Reed Kirkpatrick said it should only take a couple of hours to get the statue situated on the monument base. Then the parks crew will complete the final touches of the landscaping under the direction of Parks Superintendent Bill Hildebrandt. All that should be completed by 1 p.m., an hour before the dedication ceremony. The city crews also have been involved in the installation of the electrical wiring for the flood lights that will beam on the statue at night.

Hildebrandt said the vegetation around the monument will include pyracantha, dwarf mountain grass and tamarix juniper plants, along with flowers to provide seasonal colors in spring and

Cost for the statue has been

'The only place you can go to make up the $650 million is in cuts or pass a tax bill to make it up," Speaker Gib Lewis said Thursday after the House voted 72-73 against letting Texans decide on a state lottery.

The Senate and many House members are opposed to further budget cuts, and Gov. Bill Clements has vowed to veto a tax bill.

So it adds up to a summer special session or two to write the 1988-89 budget, which goes into effect Sept. 1.

If no agreement is reached by then, "we shut the doors down. We delay opening school for whatever time you do. You hope the people guarding the prisoners don't just walk off and leave them unattended," Lewis said.

Thursday's vote surprised sponsor Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, who thought he was close to the 100 votes needed to send the lottery measure to

"There were a number of folk who said they were with us who obviously were not," Wilson said, adding he thought he had 95 votes in the 150member House.

Lewis, who voted for the proposed constitutional amendment, said the "aye" vote teetered around the 80 mark until it became obvious the measure would get nowhere near the 100 votes

The House scoreboard — green lights for "aye," red lights for "no" - then reddened into defeat.

Wilson talked of bringing it back to the floor for another vote, but Lewis said he would not allow that unless supporters could prove they had over 100

"I don't see any groundswell for it understatement.

Rep. David Hudson, D-Tyler, led the floor fight against the lottery measure and then predicted it had "zero chances" of resurrection.

Rep. Billy Clemons, D-Pollok, set the tone for the anti-lottery side in the floor

"I know they have (lottery) in California and New York, but I don't want to imitate California and New York," he said. "The state is condoning and supporting and even promoting gambling (in a lottery). We're creating a whole new group of gamblers."

But Wilson said recent polls show that Texans want to play the lottery, despite opposition from church groups. And, he said, Texas needs the money.

"Prisons do not build themselves. Money for public education does not mysteriously appear on the Capitol steps for us to dispense. The highways don't pave themselves," he said.

Lottery backer Rep. Larry Evans, D-Houston, said, "We do have a responsibility to make sure that the laws we pass are moral. At the same time, we have a concomitant responsibility to finance state government."

Lewis won respect from both sides and probably sealed the defeat - by refusing to urge colleagues to join him in voting to put the lottery on the ballot. He said the issue did not lend itself to lobbying.

"I have a difficult time trying to persuade a member to vote against his moral convictions or a commitment he may have made to his preacher back home, which most of them have,' Lewis said.

But Gov. Bill Clements did push for passage.

"The governor applied heavy pressure to Republican members," Hudson said. "I talked to one Republican ... who said the governor chewed him out (before the vote). I'm sure that happened to more than one Republican."

Nevertheless, Reggie Bashur, Clements' press secretary, said, "The governor's position all along has been one of neutrality."

Asked what would be the next step toward busting the budget impasse, Bashur said, "Negotiations, options, discussions move on."

Replacing the $650 million a lottery could raise in 1988-89 would require budget cuts or a penny increase in the state sales tax, according to Lewis. That would be a penny above the %-cent increase already proposed by Lewis.

The state sales tax is now 41/4 percent. Asked about the chances of getting the budget balanced by June 1, Lewis said, "I think they're very slim." But despite the odds, he said he would not give up.

"I don't like special sessions. I've got a business I need to go back and look at just to see if it's still there," the Fort Worth labelmaker said.

Five economic development proposals for state reviewed

AUSTIN (AP) — With the guidance of Texas' top three political leaders, the Senate has approved five proposals to pep up the state's sluggish eco-

The measures — two proposed constitutional amendments and three bills — were prepared in an effort to diversify an economy that had relied on oil and gas revenues.

"Some bond brokers in New York have had some kind of a giggle and some kind of a laugh about the Texas economy, and they are concerned about our economy," said Sen. Bob Glasgow, sponsor of the proposals "The things that I hear a lot — 'If Texas is dumb enough to let the Arabs control our economy, we deserve what we get.' Well I don't think that's true," said Glasgow, D-Stephenville.

He said Gov. Bill Clements, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Gib Lewis had agreed that "one of the most important things that we can do in the state of Texas is get our economy back in line and move industrial development.'

Glasgow said the proposals originated in a committee appointed by Lewis and had provisions in line with Hobby's "Build Texas" program, as well as provisions suggested by Clements.

The legislation approved Thursday includes a bill that would consolidate several state agencies into the Texas Department of Commerce, which would be the contact point for businesses considering expansion, relocation or start-up in Texas.

Authority of such agencies as the Economic Development Commission, Tourist Development Agency and Texas Music Commission would be transferred to the commerce department.

Up to $400 million in bond money could be loaned to local governments for public facilities.

The Senate rejected 16-14, then accepted, 18-12, an amendment increasing from three to six the size of the department's governing board, with the members to be appointed by the governor from different geographical areas.

Another amendment would require state agencies participating in the economic development program to award at least 10 percent of its total value of contracts to disadvantaged businesses.

One proposed constitutional amendment would authorize the Legislature to provide $15 million in bonds for developing new state products, $10 million to foster the development of small businesses, and $100 million to assist small agricultural

A board would be created to review bond issues.

Dallas-Fort Worth area leads Texas in amnesty applicants

DALLAS (AP) — More aliens in the Dallas-Fort Worth area are applying for amnesty than in other Texas cities, and applications in Texas and the South have outpaced those in California and the West, federal figures show.

Through Wednesday, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service's legalization program that began May 5 had processed 5.811 applications nationwide — about 44 percent of them in the agency's Dallas-based southern region, an INS official

Of those 5,811, 2,546 were in the INS southern region, 1,724 in the western region including California and Arizona, 968 in the eastern region including New York and 573 in the northern region

Among the nine legalization centers in Texas, the Arlington center serving Dallas, Fort Worth and much of Northeast Texas had processed the most applications, 567, followed by Houston with 520 and Harlingen with 194.

"Business had really begun to pick up, especially in Dallas, Fort Worth and Houston," said Mario Ortiz, spokesman for the 13-state INS southern re-

MIAMI — Top student sellers won't get to taste the fruits of their labor under a policy declaring that all money raised by an organization is distributed evenly among the members.

Superintendent Allen Dinsmore said the policy, adopted Monday at the regular Miami school board meeting, broadened a University Interscholastic League prohibition of student "reward" selling to include non-UIL activities

The Pampa High School Choir used such selling methods in raising funds for their Washington, D.C. trip. Each student had to keep her own account of items sold in choir fund raisers.

'The Band Council had thought of such an idea to raise funds for their trip to Colorado Springs those who did more work got more benefits," Dinsmore said. adding that such a practice violates UIL policy because "it would be like a reward and students would lose their amateur status.

'We did checking on it when we heard about the proposal," Dinsmore said, adding that the board decided to do it for all organizations, including the senior class

Dinsmore said he sees "pros and cons both

Appraisal district's budget approved

MIAMI — A $73,000 Roberts County Appraisal District budget was approved this week by Miami ISD, the city of Miami and Roberts County, the three taxing entities that fund the district.

County chief appraiser Debbie Stribling said there's little difference between this year's budget

Stribling said the district managed to save $3,000 by having its mineral values done by a new company, Lone Star, instead of Pritchard & Abbott. But, she added, the district had to spend $2,000 on software maintenance.

This year's budget is about $700 lower than last year's she said.

Stribling said the RCAD proposed the budget at their April meeting. The school district and the county approved the RCAD budget Monday, the city approved it Tuesday.

Each entity's payment is based on the percentage of the tax roll in the district.

Miami ISD will pay the district $41,703 or 57 percent. Roberts County will pay $30,283 or 41 percent. The city will pay $1,125 or 11/2 percent.

In the new budget, Stribling will get a $18,685 salary plus $2,400 mileage allowance. The appraiser's deputy will get paid $14,553.

The mineral engineers will receive $13,000. RCAD payroll expenditures include $2.350 for district retirement, $190 for the Texas Employment Commission and $4,460 for medical insur-

Other office expenses include $2,000 for office supplies, $3,675 for maintenance and insurance of office machines, $1,000 for postage, $1,000 for telephone bills, $800 for education expenses, $500 for out-of-county travel, $3,000 for board liability insurance, $400 for board of review reimbursement ($25 per meeting for each member) and $300 for legal notices.

TV news executives require flea spray

If the news honchos at the nation's three largest television networks expected to gain any leverage in intracorporate warfare from their recent appearances on Capitol Hill, they got more than they bar-

What's that adage? If you lie down with dogs, expect to bring home some fleas. Sure enough, Rep. Jim Slattery had more than enough fleas to spare. The Kansas Democrat proposed a federal ban on future buyouts of television networks by defense contractors and said he'd like to start by forcing General Electric to sell off

Clearly, several congressmen — subcommittee members chief among them — don't believe that freedom of the press extends to the electronic media. While Slattery raised a valid issue, questioning whether General Electric might try to influence the way NBC reports the news about defense contracts, legislation is not the way to address it.

The ratings for network news shows are declining in the face of competition from local stations and cable networks such as Ted Turner's CNN. If NBC tried to cast a favorable light on an unfavorable story about General Electric, there are more than enough television outlets available to provide a different viewpoint.

Like any other commodity, the delivery of news is best achieved in a competitive marketplace. Lawrence Grossman, president of NBC news, told the subcommittee exactly that, but the electronic media would have been better served had he and his compatriots not attended the hearings at all.

The news honchos had gone before the House Energy and Commerce telecommunications subcommittee to testify about the potential for conflict of interest in the event of a corporate takeover. In the back of their mind, perhaps, was the thought that corporate bottomliners would be more reluctant to trim news budgets if the newsmen had the ear of Congress. But catching the ear of Congress also means ca ing its fleas. If Slattery is now ready to dictate who can own a network, what's to keep him — or some other congressman — from trying to dictate budgets or even programming decisions? If anyone is likely to want to influence news coverage, mightn't politicians be a better bet than defense contractors? The network news honchos should have declined the subcommittee's invitation to testify, pointing out that Congress has enough to worry about without wondering how the nation's television networks are run. Surely the news executives had better ways to spend their time, too.

The blame falls on Reagan

The White House arms scandal is finally acquiring the mood of suspense that every detective story needs and that this one had laced. When Maj. Gen. Richard Secord testified last week that he was told President Reagan knew of the diversion of profits from the Iran arms deal to the Nicaraguan contras, he posed the issue in a way that anyone can understand: Did presidential aides inform Reagan of the illegal funding? Is he lying when he says they carried out the operation on their own?

If the answers prove to be yes, his presidency will be in deep trouble. Reagan has said from the beginning that he knew nothing about the secret aid to the rebels. Being exposed as a liar would cost him dearly with voters, many of whom have given him the benefit of the doubt.

But, perhaps surprisingly, this is exactly how the White House would like the controversy to be framed. Its preference may grow out of a certainty that Reagan was indeed ignorant. It also may reflect a confidence that, whatever the truth, no one has any proof of the president's direct knowledge - and that, if it's his word against his former aides,' the public will believe Ronald Reagan

It would be a serious mistake, though, for the public to become so preoccupied with the narrow issue that it ignores the broader ones. Though a lot of illuminating details may emerge in the congressional hearings, most of the crucial facts are probably already known. Reagan may not be guilty of knowingly participating in an illegal operation. But, at the very least, he is guilty of fostering the contempt for the law that made the operation possible and of failing to exercise proper control over his subordinates.

In some cases, Reagan simply ignored clear legal requirements. Arms exports may not be made without certain controls, which may be waived only if Congress is notified in advance. Yet Reagan approved the shipment to Iran without letting Congress know.

In the case of covert actions, the notification may be made afterward instead of before, but it still has to be made in "a timely manner." In this case, Congress was informed months afterward — not by the president, but by the press. Had the news media failed to uncover the facts about the arms deal, it might never have been disclosed to Congress

In regard to the contras, plenty of administration people were doing everything they could to circumvent the congressional ban on aid that existed from 1984 to 1986. The bulk of the work was done by officials of the National Security Council — Robert McFarlane, John Poindexter, Oliver North — but they had help from the CIA, the State Department and the Pentagon. How did so many Reagan aides get the idea that the law was something to be evaded rather than obeyed?

Reagan himself played at least a minor role in this effort, meeting with wealthy citizens who had made large donations to the private groups helping the rebels. The White House explanation is that Reagan thought the donations were to pay for TV ads advocating American aid to the contras.

But in a memo written long before the scandal broke, North wrote, "The president obviously knows why he has been meeting with several select people to thank them for their 'support for democracy' in Central America." Maybe he didn't, but he should have.

The importance of the cause explains the administration's attitude, but it doesn't excuse it. For Congress to cut off aid to the contras was short-sighted and cynical. But unlike the secret aid, it was a decision reached through democra-

North, Second and the others involved no doubt felt an urgent obligation to keep faith with the rebels whose lives and fortunes depended on a continuation of U.S. help. But these Americans' first loyalty lay with the citizens and their elected government of the United States. Those who want to advance democracy abroad shouldn't abuse it at home.

That obligation rests not only on the principals who were deeply involved in the operation, but also on the president. Whatever his specific role or knowledge, Reagan is to blame for this affair. The Constitution obliges him to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed." By sins of omission or commission, he failed in that duty. That's the real scandal.

Campus harbors intolerance

When a foundation was formed to establish a permanent library in the name of President Reagan, I was invited to participate

I am satisfied that presidential libraries repositories for a president's papers and memorabilia — are worth whatever they cost They are of value to research scholars, to contemporary admirers and to posterity

I asked to be excused only because for any newsman thus to be identified with a seated president and his purposes could be construed as "partisan.

I did attend the first meeting of the foundation. I was privy to its plans for a Reagan Library on the campus of Stanford University and I did visit the attractive hilltop site. And though, as I say, I have no connection whatever with the project, it was nonetheless distressing for me to hear that the Stanford campus site has been vetoed; that the library will have to be built elsewhere.

Stanford University's board of trustees had voted unanimously in 1985 to build the library But the board was overruled by the Stanford

This raises a significant question as to "who is running the university.

And it's not just at Stanford that this question is answering itself.

In February, former President Ford, visiting the campus of his own alma mater, the University of Michigan, was hit with an egg. Yale's law school dean, Guido Calabresi, posted a notice reminding students of the right of unpopular voices to be heard. His notice was torn down The University of the Pacific withdrew the offer of an honorary degree to Education Secretary William Bennett. Smith, Barnard, Berkeley and Minnesota

The Brooklyn College faculty voted to delete the name of Bishop Francis Mugavero from a list of nominees for honorary degrees because he supported the Vatican position on homosex-

This, despite his impressive credentials as a liberal of lifelong service to the poor people of Brooklyn.

In short, the most obnoxious intolerance is not that which has been making the most news - in Cummings, Ga., or in Howard Beach, N.Y.

The place where intolerance never sleeps is on America's college faculties.

The Wall Street Journal suggests that parents might begin to decide that places like Palo Alto and Brooklyn are nice places to visit, but you'd not want your son or daughter to be educated

One thing that fails is Hart's judgment

By William A. Rusher

Former Sen. Gary Hart's downfall over charges of an illicit affair with a much younger woman raises several important issues. Let us try to consider them separately.

There is, first of all, the question of whether there is any truth to the story. Hart has admitted that he and a lawyer, William Broadhurst, took an overnight cruise to Bimini with Donne Rice and her friend Lynn Armandt aboard a private yacht, and that they subsequently entertained the same two young women over most of a weekend in Washington while Hart's wife, Lee, was in Colorado. But Hart insists that nothing improper occurred, and Mrs. Hart says she believes him. The Miami Herald, on the other hand, draws much darker conclusions from the known events, and its version of them varies from Hart's in certain respects. Further details are still coming to light. In the circumstances, it would probably be best to suspend judgment for the time being on what actually happened. But we must, inevitably, proceed with the discussion by assuming the worst. What then?

The first problem is that the American people are divided on just how bad adultery is. For many people, it is enough that it is expressly forbidden by the Seventh Commandment. On the other hand, a 1980 survey of the opinions of the media elite (for example) discovered that a majority of those questioned could not even bring themselves to agree that adultery is wrong

In any case, a candidate for the presidency must, at all costs, conceal such activity if he is going to engage in it. Plenty of candidates (and presidents) have done both, but that doesn't affect the point. The point is that there are still quite enough Americans who disapprove strongly of adultery to make the cost of its disclosure politically prohibitive for a presiden-tial candidate.

Next question. If a presidential candidate engages in adultery and a reporter discovers this, ought he to report the fact? This obviously may depend on what the reporter himself personally thinks of such conduct. If he is sincerely opposed to adultery, he may feel little or no compunction about telling what he knows, on the theory that it sheds highly relevant light on the basic character of the candidate.

But what if the reporter isn't opposed to adultery? (Does it matter, in such cases, that the reporter is not running for president? Would he still be justified in blowing the whistle on somebody who is?) Or what if the reporter opposes adultery but doesn't believe that the fact that someone commits it is relevant to that person's qualifications to serve as president?

Either of these considerations might well deter a conscientious reporter from raising the issue. But in one way or another, as in the present case, it often does contrive to get

But there is another aspect of the matter. Reporters and other observers who can't bring themselves to are gue that adultery ought to bar a person from the Oval Office may nevertheless consider that this episode, even if innocent and certainly if not, reflects very poorly indeed on Gary Hart. For it raises the gravest questions about his judgment, and judgment is surely one of the most important of all qualifications for the presidency.

Similarly, the voters, who are more sophisticated about these things than... they are sometimes given credit for, are likely to think less of Gary Hart in almost any case - either because they disapprove of adultery and consider the commission of it a relevant index of character, or because Hart, as a front-running presidential candidate, had no better sense than to commit it or to act in ways that give rise to a perfectly understandable infer-Rabuka convened a meeting today of his new Cabinet, which includes former Prime Minister Ratu Sir Kamieses Mara as foreign minister. Mara was defeated in national elections last month after 17 years in power.

Rabuka acknowledged his coup would not have succeeded without the 66-year-old Mara, a staunch pro-Western politician who ruled Fiji since independence from Britain in 1970. Several members of the new Cabinet, or Council of Ministers, belong to Mara's

Rabuka said the takeover was aimed at preventing multiracial Fiji from being torn apart by ethnic unrest. Bavadra's election last month and his naming of a government with an ethnic Indian majority triggered a wave of violence between the Indian and Fijian communities. Gunmen seize American, five Zimbabweans and Australian

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) - Gunmen abducted an American, an Australian and five white Zimbabweans, including a baby, from a rural mission in central Mozambique, Western diplomats and missionaries said today. Guerrillas of the right-wing Mozambique National Resistance seized the seven at gunpoint and marched them into the bush Wednesday, said a spokesman in for the international missionary organization Youth With a Mission.

Mike Oman, Zimbabwe national director of the mission, said the seven were abducted from the 1,600-acre mission farm where they worked near the town of Gondola, about 80 miles east of the Zimbabwe border.

Oman identified the American as Kindra Bryan, 29, a nurse from Texas who was stationed on the farm just four days before. Her hometown was not immediately available.

The Australian was identified as Roy Perkins, about 30, a Zimbabwean resident who ran the farm and who has witnessed two previous guerrilla attacks on it in the past six months.

His Zimbabwean wife, Patricia, also about 30, was taken by the guerrillas. Oman said.

The other Zimbabweans were identified by Oman as Phillip and Victoria Cooper, in their late 20s, and their 18-month-old daughter Abigail, who were visiting the Perkinses, and nurse Joan

Official says U.S. intelligence told of Barbie's war crimes

LYON, France (AP) - A former U.S. Army intelligence officer says he told his superiors he suspected Klaus Barbie was a war criminal, but was told the ex-Gestapo chief was too valuable an agent

Barbie, 73, is on trial for crimes against humanity stemming from his Gestapo activities in German-occupied France. He refuses to attend the

Some of the responses Barbie gave to French investigators who interrogated him about the charges were to be disclosed at today's session.

Normally, Barbie would be asked in court to give detailed replies to the allegations he tortured and deported Jews and French Resistance members. In his absence, court officials said, Presiding Judge Andre Cerdini would pose the questions and read Barbie's answers from the interrogation transcripts.

After the war, Barbie was recruited by the U.S. gence about German Communists, among other tasks

Erhard Dabringhaus, who was Barbie's American control officer, testified Thursday that another German agent told him Barbie was known for his brutal methods as Gestapo chief in Lyon from 1942-44.

"I became convinced that I was working with a real war criminal," Dabringhaus said in accented but fluent French. "That upset me."

He said he informed his superiors of what he knew, but was told Barbie was a valuable agent and a good anti-Communist.

"I was probably the only one in our organization who thought his information was not worth very much," said Dabringhaus, now a university professor in Detroit, Mich.

He said Barbie "said he was the best agent in France, but never talked about atrocities.'

In the late 1940s, French authorities became aware Barbie was working for the Americans and asked them to turn him over, without success. Eventually, U.S. agents helped Barbie obtain identity papers under a false name and emigrate to Dabringhaus said he was questioned once by French officials looking for Barbie, but was told by superiors to pretend to have no idea where he was. He said he only learned in 1983 after the publication of an American government report that the United States had helped Barbie escape to Bolivia. "I was really furious. That was unbelievable," Barbie has decided to stay in his cell at St Joseph prison rather than attend the trial, contending his expulsion from Bolivia in 1983 was illegal.

The former Bolivian official who handled the expulsion, Gustavo Sanchez, testified Thursday that the procedure was legal, and was necessary because Barbie was a danger to democracy in Sanchez said Barbie had influence with officials of a former Bolivian military government and was 'protected by the military and the drug traf-

to set national standards for teachers

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Carnegie Corp. panel today announced the creation of the first national board to set standards for teachers and to offer them professional certification similar to that given medical specialists.

The board, to be composed primarily of classroom teachers, will certify teachers who pass its muster after defining what those in various fields 'should know and be able to do.'

Leaders of the Carnegie Forum on Education and the Economy were announcing in San Diego today details of the creation of the new National Board for Professional Teaching Stan-

The board, consisting of as many as 64 members, will have to decide how it will judge teachers and in what subject areas and grade levels it will offer certification.

The idea is to give America's 2 million elementary and secondary school teachers a pathway for professional development and recognition similar to the board certification that physicians can gain in their medical specialities.

It will be three years to five years before the board awards its first certificates, and it may cost as much as $50 million to develop the methods of assessment and get the board started, a spokesman, Scott Widmeyer, said.

Widmeyer said in a telephone interview that teachers would have to pay as-yet undetermined fees for the certification process, which likely would include oral examinations, written testing and possibly internships

The door is not closed to any teacher in America," he said, describing the certification as a kind of "special badge" that states and school districts would recognize as enhancing a teacher's value to the education system.

Certified teachers, Widmeyer said, would be screened for skills in both their subject matter and in education, including the writing of curriculum, working with other teachers and relating to students.

The national certification board was the centerpiece of a series of recommendations a Carnegie task force made last May in a report aimed at triggering radical changes in U.S. schools and bringing bigger paychecks, better working conditions and greater responsibility for outstanding teachers.

The nucleus of the new board will be 33 educators, politicians and others who have served since last year on a planning board.

Former North Carolina Gov. James B. Hunt, chairman of the planning group, said the key to educational excellence is "attracting and keeping high quality teachers in our schools."

The board includes both teacher union presidents, Mary Hatwood Futrell of the National Education Association and Albert Shanker of the American Federation of Teachers, as well as New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean.

Futrell said in an interview Thursday that her organization has always been concerned that a majority of those on the national standards board be clas"very, very satisfied" that both the board and virtually all of its committees will be made up mostly of teachers.

Two-thirds of the members will be "teaching professionals" and one-third representatives of the "public and other educators." Most of the professionals will be actual classroom

Eventually, board-certified teachers will elect teachers to the board. For now, a third will come from the ranks of union leaders, a third from among those who have held office in an academic specialty group, and a third will be teachers recognized for outstanding accomplishments.

'Steelhammer' got special funds from 'Sparkplug' for 'T.C.' to give Contras WASHINGTON (AP) — The spy-novel workings of Lt. Col. Oliver L. North's clandestine Contra support operation included a safe of traveler's checks, principals code-named "Sparkplug" and "Steelhammer," and a courier who called himself "T.C.

The initials stood for "The Courier," code name for Robert Owen, a onetime public relations man and Capitol Hill aide who became North's intermediary with the Contra rebels and who now is telling his story to the select congressional committee investigating the Iran-Contra affair.

Owen testified Thursday that North had him carry money to various Contra leaders, deliver photographs and maps to the rebel forces and draw up lists of their weapons needs.

Owen said the money he delivered to designated Contras in Central America and in Washington came from a supply of traveler's checks in North's office safe in the Old Executive Office Building of the White House complex.

The situation as described by Owen involved a revolving-door financial operation, with the traveler's checks coming to North from Adolfo Calero, the Contra leader in Miami who controlled the rebels' finances, and being distributed to other Contras by North.

Calero has acknowledged he gave North about $50,000 when North said he needed it to help rescue Americans held hostage in Lebanon. However, Calero's attorney said Thursday the total amount of traveler's checks Calero sent North was at least $75,000 and possibly $100,000.

During this time, according to bank records that Calero provided, most of the Contras' money was coming from a foreign source believed to be Saudi

Aides relied on a computer but didn't know its capacity

WASHINGTON (AP) - In a measure of how much the National Security Council staff came to rely on its computer, Robert C. McFarlane had a terminal in his home, and even a year after he left government was using it to offer advice to his successor, John M. Poindexter.

On Nov. 21, 1986, hours after Attorney General Edwin Meese III interviewed him as the Iran-Contra affair began to unravel. McFarlane sent a computer message to Poindexter suggesting an explanation for not telling Congress about an Israeli shipment of arms to Iran. This memo was among many computer messages, known as PROF notes, mentioned and introduced in evidence as a joint House-Senate committee questioned McFarlane this week about the secret sale of weapons to Iran and the diversionof payments to the Nicaraguan Contras.

The PROF notes are playing a key role in the Iran-Contra episode just as the White House tapes did during the Watergate controversy 13 years

McFarlane, Poindexter and their aide, Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, apparently thought their messages would remain forever private. But three months ago, a young computer whiz found a way to coax hundreds of the messages, dating back to early last year, from the NSC computer system so many that the stacked printout of the messages measured 41/2 feet high.

The computer whiz, Kenneth Kreig, who was working for the Tower commission that investigated the affair for President Reagan, has refused to discuss how he retrieved the messages.

Rodney McDaniel, the NSC executive secretary under Poindexter, said he believes Poindexter and North were surprised to learn that messages they had erased could still be pulled from the computer. Indeed, investigators say the contents of some documents allegedly shredded by North on Nov. 21 may have been recovered from the PROF system. Donn Parker, a computer security specialist at SRI International in Menlo Park, Calif., said the messages may have been kept alive by the operators of the NSC computer.

'It's just ingrained into programmers never to throw away any data," Parker said. "It may be needed some time.

"There may be strict rules about purging the system regularly, but those operators remember the last time they were chewed out for purging data that was needed."

The word PROF is an acronym for a message sent on an IBM Professional Office System. The system at the NSC is similar to those in thousands of offices nationwide and allows several terminals to be connected to each other through a central IBM computer, known as a mainframe. The main computer acts as a switchboard for the system. McDaniel said the system's attraction is its convenience.

Vaccine for AIDS seems more likely

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A study that shows different strains of the AIDS virus display common, vulnerable "soft spots" suggests that developing a vaccine to prevent the deadly disease may be easier than previously believed, researchers reported today.

'It suggests that we may not need to make 100 vaccines against 100 strains. It is quite possible that one vaccine can protect against many strains," said Dr. David D. Ho, whose study with seven other researchers was published today in the Journal of

Doubts over the ease of developing an AIDS vaccine have arisen "because we have so many different varieties of HIV (human immunodeficiency virus) and because some of them are so different one vaccine may not protect against infection by different strains," Ho, director of the AIDS virology laboratory at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, said Thursday

But Ho said he and his colleagues "found the weak spots within the virus to attack, and three of the four are common to all strains of the virus" that have been analyzed.

"This is one small piece in a jigsaw puzzle,'' said Harvard University's Dr. Martin Hirsch, a co-author of the study and virology director at Massachusetts General Hospital.

Biology professor researching limb regeneration possibility Ms. Olsen thinks myelin, a fat-OXFORD, Ohio (AP) - A Miami University professor thinks salamander nerves may hold the key to understanding how to regenerate limbs in other. animals, including people.

By using the nerves, Cherie Olsen, an assistant professor of biology, hopes to overcome scar tissue that blocks regeneration in most animals. She said people have the same type of cells that allow salamanders to regrow amputated limbs

Backed by a $29,000, two-year grant from the National Institutes of Health, Ms. Olsen and Lisa Biggs, an undergraduate student, are testing the theory on

They take pinhead-sized groups of salamander nerves called ganglia and graft them to the point where frogs have had a limb amputated.

Frogs already show some ability to regenerate limbs. They form stubs at the amputation point, but then scar tissue blocks the process, Ms. Olsen said.

We're just at the beginning to see if it will stimulate more limbs to regenerate, or bigger limbs, or what," she said.

BIBLE LESSONS

ty sheath around the nerves, may be the answer to the puzzle. It breaks down at the point of the amputation, and "one of the degradation products is very similar to one that stimulates cell division," she said.

About a week after a limb is amputated in salamanders, cells along the edge of the cut regress to an embryonic state, from which they can grow to replace the limb, Ms. Olsen said.

In people, the embryonic cells also are present, but before they can regenerate, tough scar tissue forms to stem the bleeding, she said. It also appears the scar tissue blocks the growth of the embryonic cells, Olsen said.

"The initial response is fine, but it doesn't go anywhere," she

By adding extra myelin, Olsen speculates that scar tissue formation can be slowed, giving embryonic cells a chance to multiply.

There doesn't appear to be any difference in where the salamander nerve comes from. She takes the ganglia from near the salamander's spinal cord, instead of from a limb.

Ms. Olsen is encouraged that the regeneration process might be stimulated to work in people by reports that some children have regenerated fingertips that have been cut off.

The phenomenon has been noticed only in children under 12 years old who did not lose the finger past the last joint, and it may be linked to the presence of fingernail cells, which are continual ly regrowing, she said.

Regenerated limbs might not be exactly like the original, Ms. Olsen said

Artist restores stained

By KIM ESTES Sherman Democrat

SHERMAN (AP) - Stained glass fascinates Vivian Clift. The art of piecing it into a design is her career.

Trustees of the Sherman Historical Museum hired her to restore and replace stained windowpanes in the former Walnut Street Church of Christ building, which was purchased by the museum as its new headquarters following a fundraising campaign two years ago.

Ms. Clift relocated from Denison to Sherman in order to be closer to her work.

She says she has developed a deeper appreciation for her craft since she began scraping and soldering the church windows in December.

"When I take a piece of glass, put it down and it sits square, that means a lot to me," Ms. Clift says. "To take a piece of glass that the original artist cut, and it's so exact, down to the 32th of an inch, you get a feel for the artist who was there doing the original work."

Ms. Clift estimates that 10 to 15 percent of the church's 98 windows will be replaced. There are approximately 150 pieces of glass per window. That's a total of 11,500 pieces.

To tackle to delicate job, Ms. Clift has tools making the work a little easier than 67 years ago when the glass was first hung. For instance, a grinder sands down smooth edges that aren't cut exact or smooth cruddy with dirt," says Historical Museum Director Sherrie McLeroy.

To clean the windows, Ms. Clift removed glass panes from the window sash and soaks them in lye for four days. The glass is then taken from the caustic and scrubbed.

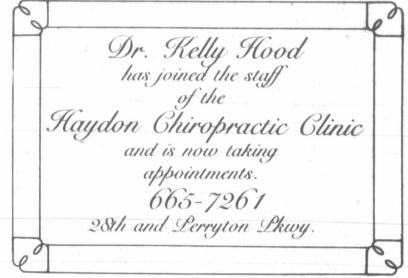

It becomes clear which piece of glass needs replacing - because it is broken or mismatched - and which one is just dirty.

Wherever possible," Ms. McLeroy said, "we're saving the original glass. There may be some cases where, say, the glass is cracked. "Well, instead of replacing it with new glass, Vivian puts a strip of lead across it and leaves it and leaves it alone, so we're saving the original glass.'

To replace panes too marred for mending, Ms. McLerov contacted the Kokomo Glass Company, in Kokomo, Ind. That firm has the original formula for mixing glass colors. However, sheets of glass Ms. Clift receives from them won't exactly match pieces of glass already in place. The colors are mixed by hand, Ms. McLeroy said, so no two sheets come out

To pay for restoration of the old church, each window was sold for $500 to $1,000

His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: For the grace of God that brings salvation has appeared to all men. It teaches us to say 'No' to ungodliness and worldly passions, and to live self-controlled, upright and godly lives in this present age . . . '' (Titus 2:11-12 NIV)

My elderly great uncle had a passion for liquid refreshment.

One late night, he returned home from an evening at his favorite bar. He walked into the dark bathroom and immediately smelled gas escaping.

The bathroom light switch was a chain attached to the light bulb in the ceiling, and Uncle Gyp couldn't manage to find the chain.

However, he wasn't so drunk he didn't know there's more than one way to skin a cat, and there was bound to be more than one source of light. So he figured it was reasonable to assume he could see better if he struck a match.

The explosion blew him out of the bathroom and singed him all around the edges; he didn't stop running till he got to the creek, which was a considerable distance.

I could tell several seriocomic stories about Uncle Gyp, but the humor would only cover the tragedy of a wasted

He was an alcoholic from the time he was just a young boy. During his later years, he often awoke from a sound sleep, shouting and fighting. He would explain, "The old devil was after me!'

He was nearly 80 years old when he accepted Christ's gift of redemption and salvation. He determined, with Jesus' help, he'd never swallow another drop of alcoholic drink.

His health was failing, and the sudden secession of his longtime dietary mainstay severely weakened him. His doctor suggested he drink an occasional beer for strength, but he adamantly refused. When he died a couple of years later, he went Home peacefully and soberly.

"Just say no!" represents a code of self-discipline and decency which has a scriptural basis, and it is currently a familiar campaign cry against the use of mind-altering substances.

We are deluged with drug and alcohol abuse education in schools and through the media; therefore, we can't plead ignorance — the smell of danger is obvious. The use of alcohol or unnecessary drugs is as foolish as striking a match to look for a gas leak; we know the inevitable result will be pain and destruction. May God help us to dig our heels into the love and power of Jesus Christ and "Just say no!'

Attending from the local council were Grand Knight H.J. (Hub) Homer, Financial Secretary John J. Haesle, District Deputy Lee Roy McBride (and his wife Mary) and longtime Financial Secretary of the Council Harry

The delegates will report on the activities of the state meeting at the Monday meeting of the local council.

This year's state council meeting had its highest attendance of delegates, with 499 delegates representing 277 local councils in attendance at all business sessions at the Bayfront Plaza Convention Center.

The opening convention mass was held at the Corpus Christi Cathedral at 5:30 p.m. Sunday, May 3. Principal celebrant and homilist was the Most Reverend Rene H. Gracida, bishop of Corpus Christi and state chaplain. The Corpus Christi Chorale from the cathedral performed prior to and during the service.

The annual Memorial Mass for deceased members in the past year was held at the Bayfront Plaza at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday, May 5. Principal celebrant and homilist was Msgr. Edward Rabroker, assistant state chaplain. The responsorial psalm during the mass was "Your Right Hand Has Saved Me O Lord.

The Frank Keim Council received three awards of recognition. The Council Achievement Award was given "in recognition of significant contributions to our Order, and its service to the needs of others, in memory of our founder, Father Michael J. McGivney.

The council also received the Community Service Award for its efforts in gathering food and the delivery of food to help the Hi-Plains Food Bank in meeting the needs of Pampa residents. Community Activities Director Daniel F. McGrath was chairman of the drive and largely responsible for its success.

The local group also gained the Best Scrapbook Award, the only one of its kind, for having the most completely detailed account of all council activities during the past year through pictures, newspaper articles, newsletter accounts and parish bulle-At the annual state banquet on Monday night, May 4, 1500 delegates and their wives, along with members and their wives from surrounding councils, attended the affair, the largest of its kind in the history of the state council.

Toastmaster was Nick Revna from one of the local Corpus Christi councils. Keynote address was given by the Most Reverend Bernard J. Ganter, bishop of Beaumont.

Newly-elected state deputy is Judge Ricardo Garcia of San Diego, Texas. Garcia briefly outlined some of the goals he has projected for statewide membership. He reiterated the challenges of the future and the goals of today. "In unity theres strength," he said. "Divided, and we will not stand united." Garcia pledged his untiring support in attaining necessary goals.

Other elected state officials include Ray Neumann of San Antonio, secretary; Scott McDonald of Fort Worth, treasurer; John W. Crumley of Fort Worth, advocate: Jodie Szymanski of Wallis. warden; and Most Reverend Raymundo J. Pena, bishop of El Paso, chaplain.

As the final order of business at the convention, Beaumont was named as the site for the 1988 state convention.

Rev. Charles Paulson, pastor of Zion Lutheran Church, is beginning a new ministry at Our Redeemer Lutheran Church at Wichita Falls.

Rev. Paulson has been pastor of Zion Lutheran Church in Pampa for the past five years. He and his wife Kathy moved to Pampa from St. Louis, Mo., in July 1982.

Paulson was ordained and installed as Zion's pastor on Sunday, July 25, 1982 by Rev. Paul F. Uhles, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church in Borger. Paulson graduated from Concordia Seminary in St. Louis with a master of divinity degree in May before his ordination in Pampa.

A vital part of Paulson's ministry is teaching. He has initiated several adult Bible classes and has taught the youth in confirmation classes.

As a result of a building program that was begun soon after Paulson arrived in Pampa, Zion Lutheran now has a new sanctuary and new classrooms and offices.

Congregation members say Paulson also is particularly blessed with the gift of planning and executing worship services that are meaningful and beautiful for the partici-

During their tenure in Pampa, the Paulsons' only son, Michael, was born.

Paulson will deliver his last sermon here Sunday at the 10:30 a.m. service Zion Lutheran.

A reception in the family's honor will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday at the church's parish hall.

DOWNERS GROVE, Ill. (AP) Evangelical theologian John Stott writes in a new book, "The Cross of Christ," published by In-

Evangelist Ed Hundley will be at Briarwood Full Gospel Church, 1800 W. Harvester, at the 10:45 a.m. and 7 p.m. services Sunday

Hundley has been in fulltime ministry for more than 40 years. He began as a boy preacher, traveling with his two brothers. After the trio broke up, Rev.

Hundley pastored churches in Texas; during that time, he furthered his education at Southwestern Bible Institute and Wayland Baptist College

The major part of his ministry has been spent in the field of evangelism. His forthright, dynamic style of presenting the gospel has made him a popular speaker at colleges, camp meetings and conventions

In addition to his other speaking engagements, Hundley has preached more than 1,000 revival meetings in every part of the United States and many foreign countries.

Hundley is joined in the meetings by his wife Jane and their son Terry. Together the family presents an enjoyable program of music and singing before he

Ansley reunion planned for June

Gena on Genealogy

The annual ANSLEY reunion will be held June 20-21 at White Columns Inn, Thomson, Ga. All descendants of WILLIAM ANSLEY of New Jersey (1700-1773) and REBECCA COX ANSLEY are urged to attend this fun-filled weekend. Remember your cameras, tape recorders, photographs and family material for sharing.

Make your own reservations before June 7 and mention the ANSLEY REUNION for a discounted rate. Write to White Columns Inn, Best Western Motel, P.O. Box 1408, Thomson, Ga.

rites because of the variety of activities included at the reunions. Perhaps I should "adopt" an ANSLEY relative. Some of the members are quilting and families are invited to contribute a quilt block. For more information on this project, write Mrs. Estelle Worrell, 2328 Golf Club Ln., Nashville, Tenn. 37215.

Another project is the ANSLEY COOKBOOK with over 300 recipes used by ANSLEY cooks. It is available for purchase at the reunion or by mail from Bill Ansley, 1800 Forest Drive, Camden, S.C. 29020-2020 for $6 plus $1.25 postage.

Do you know any ANSLEYs? The reunion officers ask that you tell them about the organization and ask that they send an address. No ulterior motive, just an opportunity for ANSLEY descendants to know their "cousins."

Are you planning a family reunion? The best way to ensure its success is to advertise. Genealogists clip newspaper columns and send to others, making a far-reaching cousin-finder.

Rockets' season

SEATTLE (AP) - In defeat, the sweat-glistening former soccer goalkeeper from Nigeria was truly mag-

But even Akeem "The Dream" Olajuwon, at his brilliant best on the basketball court, wasn't enough to prevent the improbable Seattle Super-Sonics from eliminating the Houston Rockets from the NBA playoffs 128-125 in double overtime Thursday night.

"I went up to Akeem after the game and told him he was one of the greatest players I've ever played against,' Seattle's Maurice Lucas said. "He was phenomenal

"We play with a lot of heart. But I can't imagine anyone wanting to win as much as Akeem did.

We played very well as a team but so did they," Olajuwon said modestly. "That's the name of the game. It was a very tough loss.

Despite a 49-point, 25-rebound performance that also featured six blocked shots in 53 emotion-charged minutes by the 7-foot Olajuwon, the Sonics ousted the Rockets four games to two in the teams' second-round playoff series and earned the dubious right to face the powerful Los Angeles Lakers in the Western Conference finals

The Magic Johnson-led Lakers, favored to win it all in the NBA this season, will host the underdog Sonics, a 39-43 regular-season club, at the Forum in Inglewood, Calif., Saturday at 12:30 p.m. PDT and Tuesday and 7:30 p.m.

Games 3 and 4 will be played in the Seattle Coliseum, but the NBA won't set those dates until Friday, Sonics spokesman Jim Rupp said.

The Lakers, who dispatched Denver 3-0 and Golden State 4-1 in their first two playoff series, were 4-2 against Seattle during the regular season. Los Angeles finished 26 games ahead of Seattle in the Pacific Division during the regular season.

But even the prospect of having to play the Lakers could not diminish the ecstasy of knocking off the favored Rockets and their Twin Towers of Olajuwon and 7-4 Ralph Sampson.

"This is the happiest moment of my life," said Dale Ellis, who scored 36 points and put Seattle ahead with 52 seconds remaining in the second overtime period. "I think we're going to go all the way.

On his field goal that turned out to be the game-winner, Ellis got the ball after Olajuwon blocked his shot and scored from under the basket to break a 125-125 tie. Ellis had tied the game for Seattle with a baseline jumper with 1:47 remaining.

Ellis also made a big play on defense at the end, partially blocking a long 3-point attempt by Richard Anderson, necessitated because Clemen Johnson scored the final Seattle point - his only of the night - on a free throw with five second remaining. Anderson's shot fell short and the buzzer sounded.

Houston led 107-102 with 55 seconds remaining in regulation play and it appeared likely the Sonics were going back to The Summit in Houston for a seventh game Saturday instead of going to Los Angeles.

"There was a lot of doubt at that point," said Tom Chambers, who led the Sonics with 37 points.

But Ellis insisted he was not concerned about his team's five-point de-"Our team has shown character all year in coming back from adversity,' he said. "We did it again tonight. No one expected us to be here but we're still here. Coach Bernie Bickerstaff of the Sonics thought his team's ability to come back from five points from behind inside the last minute of regulation play was the key to the victory.

"With 55 seconds to go and us down by five, I called a timeout and told the guys in the huddle, 'It's gut check time,' '' he said. "The guys came through."

Pampa High girls' track coach Gary Cornelsen gives the No. 1 signal as he boards the bus with the Lady Harvesters' track team. The Lady Harvesters defend their Class 4A track title today in the Class 4A state meet in Austin. Field events were held today and the running events in the Class 4A division are scheduled tonight.

Lady Harvesters eye state crown

By JIMMY PATTERSON Sports Writer

AUSTIN — A year has passed and two have graduated. But the determination, the glory, the memories remain.

The Pampa Lady Harvesters have a task ahead of them. A road to hoe. It is, of course, their dream to repeat as state champions in the 77th annual State Track and Field Meet in the 4A classification this weekend in Au-

The only thing standing in their way is the graduation of two of last year's participants - Sandee Stokes and Courtney Brown.

At last year's state track meet here, athletes from throughout the state were rudely greeted with a downpour that seemed like it would never stop. Unfortunately, the forecast for south Texas, including Austin, calls for a chance of afternoon and evening thundershowers Friday with a high in the 80s

Rain or not, the Lady Harvesters will again be well represented and will try to capture the capital like they did last year. Their lineup of tracksters is again impressive. Tanya Lidy, Schivon Parker, Yolanda Brown and Laquita Brown are members of this year's edition of the 400- and 800-meter relay teams for Pampa. Yolanda Brown and Lidy are returners. They were here last year when, along with Courtney Brown and Stokes, the relay teams grabbed the gold in the 400 relay and the bronze in the 800.

Those four were also members of the silver medal 1600 relay. Lidy will participate in three other events — the 200, long jump fending state champ in the 200. Earlier this month, Lidy set a regional meet record in the 200 and will take with her the momentum of that accomplishment. Andrea Hopkins also will remer F

Two of Pampa's district opponents, Canyon and Borger, will also have individuals in the state

For Canyon, Kenda Reeves is entered in the quartermile and Brandy Lowe will compete in the 800. The Lady Eagles also have a 1600-meter relay team entered.

Borger has Tonya Bowie entered in the 100-meter dash and Kristie Bennett in the 100 hurdles, in addition to an 800-meter relay

In '86, Pampa won the state meet with 78 total team points in seven different events.

This year, the Lady Harvesters are again fielding athletes in seven different events, so it is conceivable that they will win it all one more time. If they can finish with the gold in all seven events, they'll rack up an astounding 90 points. Their sights are set on successfully defending their title and they just might pull it off.

By JIMMY PATTERSON Sports Writer

AUSTIN — It is here, in the state capital, that the media pens stories every day about the state's budget troubles, the governor's troubles, and whether there should be horse racing and a lottery in Texas

This is not one of those stories.

This story deals with 10 winners. And, what these ten athletes do Friday and Saturday will be of more interest to the people of Kelton, Wheeler, Canadian, White Deer and Groom than any story they read about Hobby or horse racing

It is again time for the annual high school track and field event.

Officially, it is called the 77th Annual Athletic State Meet, as there will be championships decided this weekend in high school golf and tennis, as well.

For area athletes, it is kicked off at 3 p.m. Friday, when Michelle Keelin competes in the triple

Her mark of 34 feet, 51/4 inches was good enough to qualify her at regionals. Last year in 1A, a leap of 37-61/2 won the event.

Joe Don Brown, with a vertical leap Bobby Knight would be proud of, should be the hands down winner of the high jump.

Although he jumped 6-10 at the regionals in Big Spring two weeks ago, he landed a 7-1 jump last weekend at the state qualifiers meet

The 7-1 mark is the best of his career and is short by only one inch of the best jump in the state, regardless of classification. No other 2A jumper even comes close to Brown's mark.

Wheeler's Richard Smith is the defending state champ in the discus. His toss of 159-9 last year was good for top honors.

This year, Richard's best throw is 164-3.

Even though he has bettered his throw by almost five feet, he still placed second in regionals.

Winning the discus at Levelland was none other than his brother. Bubba, who had a heave of 173-7. The Smith brothers have a good chance of finishing 1-2 in the discus throw this weekend.

Bubba will also compete in the shotput competition. At Levelland he had a throw of 54-81/2, good for first place.

Wheeler will also send Danny Benefield and Hale Hughes to the finals.

Benefield finished second in the 110 and 300 hur dles at Levelland. Hughes will represent the Mustangs in the 800 Wendi Burns has a chance to do something that quite likely has never been done. If she wins the 100-meter hurdles, she will have won that event in 1A, 2A, and 3A.

In 1985 as a sophomore at 1A Claude she won the hurdles. She did it last year when Canadian was classified as a 3A school. With the school down to the 2A level this year, she has a chance to achieve the unprecedented. Burns will also compete in the triple jump.

Her teammate, Kim McEntire, was last year's 3A champ in the 800, and should grab that title again. McEntire finished first two weeks ago in Big Spring, setting a regional record with a time of Jowannah Ruthardt and Karen Bohr will represent the Groom Tigerettes.

Ruthardt, with a regional time of 2:28.95, placed second at Levelland.

Bohr won the silver at the same meet in the 100 with a time of 12.71.

It will be an interesting, eventful weekend in Austin. One that, for a change, will not feature politicians making decisions for us, but determined high school athletes competing their har-

The fact was duly noted and publicized by the Astros and Houston media. "I guess grandmother and I will have to take a side trip while attending the state track meet this weekend," said the former Pampa AD..."I'm back healthy and in excellent shape, fully recovered from the shoulder surgery," SF 49er veteran lineman JOHN AYRES tells me. Meanwhile, another former WT star and NFLer, CARL BIRD-SONG watches the Amarillo skies for the stork, due for a firsttime visit to the punter's home. Cut last year by the St. Louis Cardinals, Birdsong has had several contacts recently about signing, the most lucrative possibly Seattle. But the young man with a pharmacy degree is not excited

Rogers leads Colonial golf

By MIKE COCHRAN Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Bill Rogers says the player leading after the first round of the Colonial National Invitation "looks like somebody we knew from the past.'

It's someone, he said, who "resembles that guy who used to shoot some low scores."

Sure enough, the lanky blond who carved up Colonial Country Club's proud acreage Thursday was the same Bill Rogers who in 1981 captured seven international titles, including the British Open, and then slipped into a long and torturous slump.

"I don't even like to talk about it," Rogers said after shooting a 5-under-par 65 that gave him a oneshot lead in the $600,000 tournament over Chip Beck, Bill Sander and Clarence Rose.

With the usually brutal Texas winds reduced to a gentle breeze, Rogers stung the treacherous Trinity River course for six birdies and one bogey.

Former Colonial champion Ben Crenshaw led a group of seven golfers at 67. Also at three under were local favorite Mark Brooks, Tom Byrum, Keith Clearwater, Dan Forsman, Bobby Wadkins and Scott Simpson

A record 65 players broke or matched par, among them Bob Tway and Curtis Strange, 68, Tom Kite and Lee Trevino, 69, Tom Watson and leading money-winner Paul Azinger, 70.

Fred Couples, the winner of last week's Byron Nelson Classic in a three-hole playoff, was at 72. Watson, struggling to end a three-year non-winning streak, triggered a mild burst of excitement when he birdied three of the first eight holes but he hit into the water at the par-4 ninth, took a double bogey and never mounted a new charge.

For Rogers, 35, the Colonial represents a homecoming of sorts. He is a native of Waco, lived much of his life in Texarkana and is a resident now of San Antonio. His best finish of 1986 was a tie for third

"It's just good to be home, really," he said, dodging questions about the miseries that befell his once pristine swing that won him 1981's "Player of the

"I've beaten that dog to death." Although he did win once after his stunning success of 1981, Rogers earned $34,746 in 1984 and $44,179 in 1985. Last year he finished a dismal 131st on the money-winning list with $57,243. "Some guys can turn it around overnight, but I'm not one of those guys," Rogers said. "I'm one of those who has to work up to it." He may be on verge, the evidence being a 63 last weekend at the Nelson that gave him his highest finish of the year, a tie for 19th. "Regardless of what happens Friday — I may not shoot another 65 or even a 68 - I know things are going to keep going in the right direction," he said.

"When you get a little confidence, good things are going to happen. You get on a roll. And birdies will make you a grinner instead of a frowner.' Rogers has frowned long enough.

Miller, Anderson win motocross races

Three Pampa racers placed in motocross events held in Amarillo and Fritch recently.

Dustin Miller won the 80 seniors division and placed second in the 80 juniors division at the West Texas Motocross held in Amarillo. Miller was also second in the 80 seniors and second in the 80 juniors at the Lake Meredith Motocross in Fritch. Cody Anderson was third in the 80 seniors and Andy Anderson won the 125 class. The racers are sponsored by BF Suzuki.

Seeking help

Refugees, mostly children, newly arrived in Pakistan from war-ravaged Afghanistan, sit in border area earlier this month and await food from a mobile relief unit in Akora, Pakistan. The unit is funded by World Vision, a California-based Christian international relief and development agency, to help take care of the heavy influx of refugees from the uprising against their country's Soviet-backed government.

Special Houston police squad deals with city's Hispanics

Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - Sometimes the biggest barrier to solving a crime is language.

When a man is killed in a bar whose patrons only speak Spanish, an Anglo officer limited to English usually is out of luck.

Witnesses to the crime can't tell police what they saw, and some who can are afraid to try. The English-speaking officer is left with a lot of questions and no leads to pursue. Such were the barriers that marked the humble beginnings of the Houston Police Department's Chicano Squad — a few Spanish-speaking patrol officers who helped translate some witnesses'

"We started out as interpreters; that lasted about a week," says Sgt. Jim Montero, who helped create the squad.

The Spanish-speaking officers gained so much information and learned enough investigative procedures that they began to take over the cases, he Officially, the squad began in the summer of 1979 with Montero and five patrol officers. It was dubbed the "Chicano Squad" by reporters and the name has stuck ever since, Montero says.

It has grown into a division of detectives investigating many crimes in Houston's various Hispanic communities and now consists of 13 people — eight officers and five sergeants, including a woman. Montero says he initially was skeptical about Irma Lares-Sauseda joining the division more than a year ago because of the traditional "macho" attitudes within the Hispanic culture.

"But she has handled the job real well," he says. Ms. Lares-Sauseda, 35, says she has faced problems both within the division and the community. "They would treat me like an outsider," she says of her fellow investigators when she first started working on the squad. "I had to prove myself."

Most of the time people in the community don't treat her differently because she is a woman, she says. But she recalls the time when she was sent to a domestic disturbance only to have the woman involved ask, "They only sent you?"

Like other officers on the Chicano Squad, Ms. Lares-Sauseda says she has problems coaxing some witnesses to talk.

"There's a lot of fear. They don't know you," Ms. Lares-Sauseda says. "They're afraid if they give us a name that that person is going to come after

Some witnesses are illegal aliens and afraid of being deported. Others distrust police because they come from countries where corruption among law enforcement officials is common.

Ms. Lares-Sauseda says police do not report witnesses to the Immigration and Naturalization Service, even if they suspect they are illegal aliens.

Farmers turn to alligators

EDITOR'S NOTE - In Florida, alligators are turning up everywhere, from the interstate highway to the fast-food restaurant parking lot. Now, they're also winding up on the dinner table, thanks to a new breed of farmers, enthusiastic entrepreneurs who are hoping for big paybacks from the sale of alligator meat and hides.

By A.J. DICKERSON Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Alligators may sometimes bite the hand that feeds them, but more and more Florida farmers are willing to take that risk

"They've got a mean temperament," says Gatorland Zoo owner Frank Godwin. "It's a dangerous business. One of my employees lost part of his thumb last year. He was lucky it wasn't his hand.

Nonetheless, some say raising gators sure beats cattle ranching, prices being what they

In the past few years, the state has issued licenses to more than two dozen strictly regulated alligator farms and many more applications are pending, says Mai Kyle Hill of the state Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission.

Average start-up costs are about $50,000 but growers say they expect profits of up to $300,000 per 1,000 slaughtered alligators.

"It's going to be a major business shortly," says Clyde Hunt, whose 20-year-old Hunt's Alligator Breeding Ranch near Bushnell, about 50 miles northeast of Tampa, is one of the state's original farms. "The demand is the highest it's ever been.

Flying 'P' Ranch owner G.O. Parrott says the comparative prices of beef and gator are what lured him into the business. "If you break even raising cows, you're doing good," says Parrott, who has a cattle ranch in addition to his new venture with 2,624 alligators, also near Bush-

He hasn't yet recovered his initial investment but says, "We're making a profit, between 25 and 30 percent over all costs.'

Meat (only the tail portion is eaten) sells on the wholesale market for up to $6 per pound, with retail prices at $9 a pound. Hides go for about $25 per linear foot. Prices for finished alligator-hide products are impressive: up to $350 for a wallet, $2,000 for shoes or an attache case, and $1,000 for

An alligator skull will fetch $300 near Gainesville, home of the University of Florida Gators sports teams.

People like the meat, which tastes like a cross between chicken and pork, says Jack Herman, the manager of a trendy North Florida restaurant, The Yearling, at Cross Creek. Patrons there snap up a $12.45 entree of 16 lightly breaded, deep-fried gator tail tidbits. The restaurant serves about 150 pounds a week, Herman Godwin's central Florida zoo, billed as the world's alligator capital, opened in 1948 near Kissimmee as a tourist attraction.

He added commercial farming six years ago and last year slaughtered his first "harvest" from his stock of 5,000 roughskinned reptiles. He declined to disclose how much he earned from the 1,000 butchered alligators, saying only that "we have achieved our goal."

Godwin also notes that alligator farming is fraught with prob-
