Wet frontal system hangs over area

From Staff and Wire Reports

Intense thunderstorms were reported across portions of Northwest Texas and West Central Texas early today after a night of severe weather, including several tornado sightings.

Early today in the Panhandle, severe thunderstorm warnings were posted for three counties surrounding Childress.

National Weather Service specialist Kenny Brown said the Pampa area could expect "just thunderstorms" today.

Brown said a stationary low across the central Panhandle was causing wet, rainy weather and thunderstorms to continue.

KGRO-KOMX meteorologist Darrell Sehorn said this morning that Pampa had received 0.18 inches of additional moisture for the 24-hour period ending at 6:15 a.m. today and also had received an additional 0.19 inches between 6:15 and 10 a.m. That pushed the monthly May total to 6.62 inches and the yearly total to 12.13 inches, Sehorn said.

Sehorn predicted continued wet weather today and Friday and evening thunderstorms over the weekend. He said there is no weather system strong enough to push away the front that remains across the Panhandle.

"It's a very persistent system," Sehorn said. "It's just going to stay here."

Flash flood warnings remained posted across North Texas through tonight as forecasters predicted as much as three to six inches of rain is possible across the area generally west of a line from Lampasas to Paris.

Heavy thunderstorms dumped nearly three inches of rain at Wichita Falls, where some minor street flooding was reported, and about four inches of rain at Electra, where some roads were closed.

Intense thunderstorms were developing across a vast area of the state at dawn, prompting forecasters to warn of the possibility of dangerous lightning, high winds, hail and flash floods producing rainfall.

Tornadoes were sighted at several locations around the state Wednesday night.

The National Weather Service posted tornado warnings in several West Texas counties Wednesday because of twister sightings, and much of that area and north Central Texas were under a tornado watch.

Tornadoes were spotted near such diverse towns as Fort Stockton, Hamilton and Aspermont, but no injuries or serious damage was reported. A funnel cloud menaced Midland and a storm pelted the city with baseball-sized hail at about 9 p.m.

A Pecos County deputy sheriff reported a funnel cloud three miles south of Fort Stockton, which is about 45 miles

Doctors diagnose Medicare trouble

By CATHY SPAULDING

CANADIAN — The frustration continues in Canadian doctors' Medicare battle with the Texas Medicare Foundation and its Peer Review Organization.

And now Hemphill County Hospital board members and Canadian residents are beginning to feel the same frustration.

Canadian's four physicians — Drs. Malouf Abraham, Teddy Darocha, William Isaacs and Valerie Verbi — announced May 13 that as of June 15 they would no longer admit Medicare patients to the county hospital if the TMF does not ease up with its peer reviews. The federal government uses "PROs" to evaluate doctors treating Medicare clients.

The hospital board discussed the threatened boycott with the quartet at a called meeting Tuesday.

If anything positive is resulting from the Medicare stalemate, the doctors believe it is the increased public awareness their campaign has generated. Not only has the news itself drawn media attention, but hospital employees also are mounting their own information campaign by distributing leaflets in Canadian, Higgins and Miami.

"What we did has gotten attention," Abraham told the board. "It caught the attention of Congressman Beau Boulter, and he has been very helpful and supportive."

Boulter is co-sponsoring federal legislation that would require PROs to give doctors opportunities to respond to Medicare sanctions before they go into effect. Boulter feels such legislation would "restore due process and fairness" to Medicare evaluations, especially in Texas where a majority of the sanctions reportedly have occurred.

Almost all of the Texas sanctions have hit doctors in communities of less than 5,000, the doctors claim. The PRO has recommended a sanction for

Area seniors prepare for their final hours

The Class of 1987 will make its last official appearance at Pampa High School when commencement exercises get under way at 8 p.m. Friday in the McNeely Fieldhouse.

Meanwhile, area residents with cousins in White Deer and friends in Mobeetie may flip a coin Friday to see which commencement ceremonies to attend.

PHS Principal Oran Chappell said 249 seniors "at last count" will receive their diplomas, to be handed to the students by members of the Pampa Independent School District board of trustees.

Making speeches before their fellow classmates will be Kambra Winningham, valedictorian; Jay Taparia, salutatorian, and Kenny Steward, Senior Class president.

Interim Superintendent Tommy Cathey will certify the seniors for graduation before they receive their diplomas.

Gaining special recognition during commencement will be the honor graduates, who will be the first ones to march up to get their diplomas.

Marla Jett will deliver the invocation and Brad Wolcott will offer the benediction as the seniors prepare to leave the fieldhouse with their 1987 diplomas in hand.

The Harvester band and choir will perform "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" during the commencement, with the band also providing the processional and recessional music.

Following the graduation exercises, seniors are invited to Cherry and Ashley recall choking incident.

Pampa teen-ager saves choking tot Middle school student uses classroom lesson

Mr. Hannah's fourth-period science class was the furthest thing from Cherry Dona's mind when she wandered out of K mart on Mother's Day.

The Pampa seventh-grader was thinking about presents for her mom and aunt, whose 5-year-old daughter had gone along on the shopping expedition.

Cherry didn't know that in a few seconds, Mr. Hannah's science class would mean the difference between life and death for her young cousin.

Three days earlier, Cherry, 13, had seen a film in science class about the Heimlich maneuver. The film showed what to do if a parent, friend, infant — even Cherry herself — were choking.

Despite Mr. Hannah's admonition to pay attention because "you might need this some time," Cherry never imagined having to use what she had learned.

"I knew I could, but I didn't think it would ever happen," she says now.

But that was before Cherry became a heroine, or, in Vice Principal Doug Rapstine's words, a "shero," just outside K mart at the Pampa Mall.

Cherry remembers coming out of the store, holding hands with her 5-year-old cousin, Ashley Degner. The girls' aunt had taken them shopping.

All of a sudden, Ashley's hand went limp.

"She always holds my finger — she holds it real tight — and she just stopped," Cherry recalled.

Cherry said she looked down in time to see the youngster choking and trying to swallow two Life Savers, purchased minutes earlier inside the discount store.

Mr. Hannah's fourth-period science class was suddenly very important to Cherry.

Cherry said Wednesday that she remembers seeing a man sitting inside Revco Discount Drug store at the mall, and thinking to herself "he should know the Heimlich."

What happened next is all a blur. Cherry encircled her young cousin with her arms, as she'd been taught in class.

She said her aunt told her later

Senator says policy may draw U.S. into war

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration plans to protect Kuwaiti tankers in the Persian Gulf starting next week are being met with warnings from the Senate that the proposal is as risky as putting U.S. Marines into Beirut in 1983.

Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., who just returned from a visit to the area, said Wednesday the plan means "what we're seeing is the United States being sucked into the violent and savage" war between Iran and Iraq. Kuwait is an ally of Iraq.

"The environment surrounding our Navy in the Persian Gulf is as dangerous as the exposure of our Marines in Beirut," warned Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., former chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, agreed, saying, "We're not neutral now. We're getting away from that fig leaf of neutrality. . . It's not a bluff anymore as it was in Beirut where we wound up with 241 body bags."

They referred to the Oct. 23, 1983, attack on Marine headquarters in Beirut by a terrorist driving an explosives-laden truck. The blast killed 241 U.S. servicemen who were part of a peacekeeping force in strife-torn Lebanon.

"You can't say combat is not imminent when we just shipped 36 bodies back to Dover," said Glenn, referring to the U.S. servicemen killed in the May 17 Iraqi missile attack on the Navy frigate Stark. A total of 37 sailors were killed.

Iranian officials have warned that the U.S. move will not deter Iran from targeting the Kuwaiti tankers.

Reagan issued his own warning Wednesday, telling Iran the United States won't back down on its promise to keep open the gulf, home of much of the oil used by Western nations.

Bakker denies reports of homosexuality

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — Disgraced evangelist Jim Bakker dared anyone to prove he is homosexual, and said if the Rev. Jerry Falwell won't let him return to "save" the PTL empire, he may start a new ministry in California.

"I believe in miracles and I would like to have my ministry back if the people want us back," Bakker said Wednesday night in an appearance with his wife, Tammy Faye, on ABC News' "Nightline."

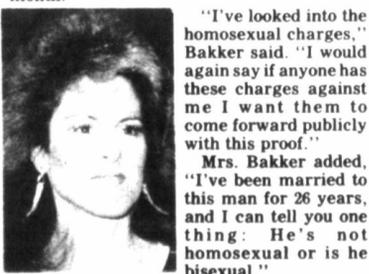

"If Jerry Falwell won't let us go home," he said. "I dream of building another city, maybe in California."

"I dream of maybe going back on television someday."

In March, Bakker handed his multimillion-dollar PTL television network and Heritage USA theme park over to Falwell and admitted to a sexual encounter in 1980 with church secretary Jessica Hahn.

Falwell said Wednesday he learned that Bakker and an associate had sex with Hahn and that a third person tried to, and that Bakker had had homosexual problems as far back as 1956. Bakker's denomination, the Assemblies of God, cited the allegations of bisexuality when it defrocked him last month.

Hahn said Wednesday he learned that Bakker and an associate had sex with Hahn and that a third person tried to, and that Bakker had had homosexual problems as far

"Why is now it being talked about going into bankruptcy?" he asked. "I would come back today to save the ministry that we spent a lifetime building and to honor the commitment to our wonderful partners and friends."

It was Bakker's second "Nightline" appearance in as many nights from the couple's home in Palm Springs, Calif.

On Tuesday, he accused Falwell of misleading him into giving up 518,000-member PTL by arguing the move was needed to prevent a hostile takeover by the Rev. Jimmy Swaggart. Bakker also said Falwell, the independent Baptist founder of the Moral Majority, agreed to return the ministry to Bakker at some point, but went back on his promise.

Falwell denied he hoodwinked Bakker and said Bakker either has a terrible memory or is dishonest or emotionally ill.

"When you consider the condition this ministry is in, to say that Jerry Falwell and this board stole PTL on March 17 is like accusing someone of stealing the Titanic just after it hit the iceberg," he said.

Tammy and Jim Bakker meet reporters.

Baseball-size hail was reported at Midland.

Showers and thunderstorms were reported early today over the Concho Valley, Permian Basin, the South Plains and the Trans Pecos.

Other showers and thunderstorms were located over the Red River Valley between Sherman and Wichita Falls at dawn.

All the activity was being triggered by moist, unstable air mass anchored over much of the state east of a boundary that separates the dry, cooler air to the west. This boundary, known as a dry line, was nearly stationary this morning along the Texas-New Mexico border into the Trans Pecos area of Texas.

Forecasts called for partly to mostly cloudy skies statewide through tonight with a good chance of showers and thunderstorms over the state. Some of the thunderstorms may possibly reach severe levels today, more numerous over the northwest half of North Texas.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 60s and 70s.

Highs Friday will be mostly in the 80s and 90s.

Early morning temperatures were in the 60s over West Texas and in the 70s over the rest of the state. Extremes ranged from 57 at Marfa to 82 at Corpus Christi.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 64 at Amarillo, 63 at Wichita Falls, 74 at Fort Worth, 75 at Waco.

Medicare

Darocha, but no action has been finalized.

"We can sit here and be sanctioned, or we can do something," Abraham declared. "The fact we did it as a group helped our position."

Verbi said she doesn't think she'll be sanctioned, "but I'm sick of what they're doing to Dr. Darocha."

Abraham has been the most vocal about the PROs. He has drafted a letter to Bill McCutchen of the Dallas office of the Health Care Financing Administration, which administers Medicare in Texas, to explain the doctors' position.

In his letter, Abraham noted "a doctor would have to be a fool or have suicidal tendencies to admit a Medicare patient to the hospital."

Abraham's letter added that the problem erupted "when they got their $18 million contract — all for salaries and expense accounts. No wonder they had to go looking for a bunch of hides to nail on the wall. We doctors in Spearman, Perryton, Booker and Canadian soon realized that we had been targeted to fill their quota."

Abraham's letter said the Texas PRO uses "Gestapo tactics" in sanctioning rural Texas doctors and said the actions "have been unfair, uncalled-for and un-American."

Copies of the letter, which also thanked McCutchen for clarifying Medicare rules as to whether doctors must admit Medicare patients to the local hospital, were distributed to President Reagan, Vice President George Bush, Texas congressmen, area legislators, nine area newspapers and 11 doctors.

And, Abraham claims, the response has been overwhelmingly supportive.

Ben Ezzell, editor of The Canadian Record, reports his weekly newspaper has been deluged with letters.

He added that 88th District state Rep. Dick Waterfield, R-Canadian, has also been deluged with letters, but as a state legislator, Waterfield said he could do nothing about these federal regulations but offer his sympathy.

"Every doctor I have talked to has been supportive," Verbi said. Abraham said he spoke to a doctors' forum in Houston recently and the downstate doctors were also sympathetic.

But board member Jane Bartlett wanted more proof of how effective the doctors campaign is.

Asked Bartlett, "If all this has to be done in Washington, how are people up there going to care less?"

Verbi responded, "That's why we're yelling so loudly."

Ezell said the TMF is a federal agency and is governed by federal regulations.

"But how can our congressman fix it?" Bartlett asked.

"They all switch off," board member Eugene Thompson said.

Bartlett, a nurse at Newman Memorial Hospital in Shattuck, Okla., said doctors there say the problem "doesn't happen in Oklahoma."

"If it doesn't happen in Oklahoma or Nebraska, how are they going to be concerned?" she added. "One state cannot fix it. It's difficult for me to understand, but I work in 'Geriatric City' — that's all the patients are — and the hospitals have no problem."

Isaacs said other states are beginning to have the same PRO problems Texas is facing.

"The Oklahoma PRO has no teeth," Isaacs said. "They slap their hands."

"Texas PRO's do not offer to help us the way the Oklahoma PRO helps them," said board president Blossom Newell.

Abraham said the doctors' boycott is "subject to revision at a moment's notice."

All it would take, he said, would be progress on Boulter's legislation or a lifting of threatened sanctions.

Abraham said HCFA officials have assured him that the Canadian doctors will not be punished for refusing to admit Medicare patients to the hospital.

The Canadian doctors will continue to treat Medicare patients at their clinics or to send them to other area hospitals.

One hospital interested in Canadian patients is Newman Memorial Hospital, which sent a delegation to the meeting to propose a mutual relationship between the hospitals.

NMH Administrator William Shain told the board, "It's time we established a better line of communications between our hospitals. NMH has eight full-time doctors and one coming later. A neurologist comes to Shattuck once a month."

Shattuck has about 1,800 residents.

Shain said his hospital can send their specialists to Canadian as consultants.

"We do not want to imply that we will do anything that is not approved by your medical staff," Shain assured. "We're not interested in a merger, but a cooperative program where we could build on each others' strengths. We want to broaden the base for our specialists."

"We have specialists willing to meet the needs of residents here," Shain said, adding that 18 percent of the NMH referrals come from Hemphill, Ochiltree and Lipscomb counties.

Shattuck surgeon Dr. William Keith said some members of the NMH staff are licensed to practice medicine in Texas, and those who are not can come as consultants.

"I can come to Canadian to consult, I can make referrals to the doctor here, but I cannot treat the patient," Keith explained.

Shain proposed that the hospital owners, Hospital Management Professionals, conduct a survey of the Canadian hospital to form a "blueprint of action."

HCA administrator Richard Arnold agreed the survey would be a good idea and said St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo has also expressed an interest in the hospital.

HCA Coronado Hospital and other Amarillo hospitals are also beginning to take an interest in a relationship, Arnold said.

But, he warned, such an agreement with any hospital would be "to the exclusion of other hospitals."

"It is a marriage," Arnold said. "We should develop a physician-to-physician relationship before we develop a facility-to-facility relationship."

Abraham and Darocha said they have a good relationship with the Shattuck hospital.

"Everyone calls it a Little Mayo Clinic," Newell said.

But Isaacs and Verbi were not as supportive.

"Most of my referrals go to Amarillo, and I'm pleased," Isaacs said.

Wednesday. Ashley's mother, Angie Degner, said she and her husband Danny were relieved when they learned their daughter was safe. By the time the shoppers arrived home, young Ashley had recovered enough to tell her mother the whole story.

"I was just glad Cherry was there," Mrs. Degner said.

Senate sends temporary tax hikes back to House

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements charged that the Senate was messing with Texas' future when it extended the so-called temporary sales-tax increase without making it permanent.

"The Senate is playing games with the future of Texas," Clements said after the Senate voted Wednesday to send the extension of the sales and gasoline-tax increases back to the House.

Clements has favored permanent extension of the tax increases made by the 1986 Legislature, which would produce $2.9 billion in 1988-89. But he has said he would veto any new taxes above $2.9

billion. Clements said Hobby "has placed himself in the dubious position of being the one responsible for drawing us closer to a cash flow problem."

But Hobby countered that "these are stopgap measures. This is the best we can do under present conditions."

House Speaker Gib Lewis said he would have preferred that senators make the tax changes permanent, as the House voted to do weeks ago.

"I would have like to see it passed as it came out of the House, but I'm not going to get bent out of shape about it,"

Lewis said. On voice vote, the Senate amended a House bill that made the 5 1/2-cent sales tax permanent to make it effective only until Jan. 1, 1988.

Senators also approved another House bill to make permanent the motor fuels tax increase from 13 cents to 15 cents per gallon. But that action was made contingent on the House passing a separate bill to revise the method of distributing funds.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, said both bills would add about $1.19 billion to the general revenue fund in the next two years. He said the extension of the sales-tax increase until Jan. 1 would produce $294 million. The change in distributing motor fuel taxes would add $680 million to general revenue while giving the highway department $210 million, he said.

Glasgow said the changes in gasoline tax distribution would not affect the part of the tax that goes to public schools or the Parks and Wildlife Department.

Glasgow said the Senate believes a special session will be called before the first of the year to deal with restructuring Texas' tax base.

"We need to make the sales tax more equitable before we pass an appropriations bill," said Glasgow, head of the Senate Tax Policy Committee. "But we need this revenue through December to avoid shortfall problems. We need to tell our colleges and schools we are not going to shut you down."

Sen. Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth, said a recent tax study committee found that "Texas has one of the most unfair tax structures in the nation after we lost our oil and gas tax money."

City finds way to save money

By LARRY HOLLIS
News Editor

The Pampa City Commission has authorized the exchange of claims and accounts for 1985 Certificates of Obligation in a manner that will save the city approximately $531,000.

Commissioners approved the action during their regular meeting Tuesday night.

The certificates were issued to pay for six main projects in the past couple of years: purchase of right of way for street lights at Highways 60 and 70 and at Highway 70 and Alcock; installation of street lights at Foster and Hobart, Alcock and Hobart, and Decatur and Hobart; rehabilitation of City Hall; an automated fuel system for city vehicles; storm sewer and street resurfacing and paving projects on Crawford, Somerville, Albert, Harvester, Lynn, Kentucky and Hobart streets; and handicapped ramps.

City Manager Bob Hart noted that the C.O.'s were issued in an amount not to exceed $1.8 million. After the completion of the projects, all but approximately $2,000 had been used to pay for the projects.

Finance Director Frank Smith, in a memorandum to the commission, noted that since the certificates were issued in increments of $5,000, "it is impossible to issue C.O.'s for every contract."

Smith said the city had passed resolutions for payments by warrants, which are part interest in the certificates, with the understanding that the C.O.'s could be exchanged for general obligation bonds in June 1987.

"Since the interest (8.875 percent) is the same, we opted to make one exchange at the end of the projects," he said.

Smith explained that the issuance of certificates instead of general obligation bonds, with the ability to exchange the C.O.'s for the G.O. bonds, allows a savings to be achieved because of changes in interest rates.

"If the city had issued G.O.'s, interest would have been paid on the full $1.8 million for the two-year project period at 10 percent for the full amount, and the interest would have been $360,000," he said.

But by issuing the C.O.'s, the city paid only $89,000 in interest for the same period, with a savings of $271,000 in interest.

Smith explained that the rate of 10 percent would have remained with the general obligation bonds for the full 15 year period.

"Since interest rates are now lower, the city will be able to sell the G.O.'s now at an interest rate of approximately 8 to 8.15 percent for the same period, for a saving over the 15-year period of approximately $260,000," Smith said.

He said that by issuing the C.O.'s in the interim period while projects were being completed, the city saved approximately $531,000.

In other matters, local realtor Walter Shed used the citizens request period to suggest the commission consider revising the water rates ordinance regarding vacancies in multi-unit housing.

Shed said under the present ordinance "in effect is charging people for services not rendered."

He said he knows of one multi-housing owner with 30 current vacancies who is still having to pay the city $15 a month for each unit, even though no water service is being used for the apartments because "there are no renters."

Shed suggested the ordinance could be amended to include a vacancy clause to handle such situations without owners having to pay extra money monthly for vacant units.

Hart suggested the owner, whom Shed refused to name, should contact the city for adjustments to be made.

Mayor David McDaniel said he's not certain there's a need to have a complete rewriting of the ordinance with additional public hearings. He said the staff could be asked to look at the possibility of amending the ordinance to include a vacancy clause.

In other business, the commission: approved changing the scheduled work session times from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. on the first and third Tuesday of each month; and approved two accounts payable.

Talk turns to special session

AUSTIN (AP) — State government leaders, sounding resigned to a special legislative session, say they hope lawmakers at that time can concentrate on balancing the budget.

"We'll probably have to have a special session," Gov. Bill Clements said Wednesday after legislative negotiations stalled on a 1988-89 state budget.

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said he hopes for quick action in a special session when legislators won't be able to deal with the hundreds of other subjects that come up during a regular session.

"Even though we tried to put the emphasis on the budget, at this point you've had other issues. When you come back in, hopefully it will be just for the budget and you can concentrate on the budget," Lewis said.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who presides over the Senate, said he hoped a special session would be called "as quickly as possible."

Power to call a special session and set its agenda belongs to the governor. Clements said he hasn't yet decided on a date for summoning lawmakers back after their regular session ends June 1.

"I don't think that we really have but two options — June or July," he said, explaining that August would be too late because it would create cash-flow problems when the state's new fiscal year begins Sept. 1.

Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, chief House budget negotiator, said he no longer sees a settlement coming out of the House-Senate appropriations conference committee.

"The blame is probably on all of us," Rudd said. "Everybody's standing on their principles, so much principle that we've locked it down."

Clements has proposed a $36.9 billion two-year budget and said he would veto any tax increase greater than the $2.9 billion needed to fund that total.

But the House approved a $39.4 billion budget and senators passed a $40 billion spending plan. And neither chamber has passed a large enough tax increase to pay for either budget.

Fezell trial is underway

AUSTIN (AP) — Reports on cases handled by McLennan County District Attorney Vic Fezell "did not jive with the facts," the prosecuting attorney in Fezell's federal racketeering trial says.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jack Frels of San Antonio told a jury Wednesday that Texas district attorneys frequently file dispositions to inform law enforcement agencies of the outcome of cases in which the agency made the arrest.

But the dispositions filed by Fezell are false because "the reports did not say (the case was) dismissed or retired because of contributions to my campaign," Frels said.

Fezell was named in a 10-count federal indictment charging him with mail fraud and accepting bribes. Frels said the money Fezell accepted from Waco lawyers was reported as campaign contributions.

Denying the charges, Fezell said they were brought against him because of his inquiry into the Henry Lee Lucas serial murder confessions, which Lucas later recanted and said had been a hoax.

The first prosecution witness, Department of Public Safety Sgt. Roy Boyter, testified he started investigating Fezell in the summer of 1984 when he began hearing rumors that Fezell had taken bribes.

On Jan. 16, 1985, Boyter said he received formal authorization to conduct an investigation of the district attorney.

Waco Police Sgt. Tommy Tidmore testified he started gathering information on Fezell as early as March 1983, after a conversation with someone he arrested on drug violations.

By October 1984, he said he was involved in the Fezell investigation the DPS was conducting.

Defense attorney Gary Richardson attempted to have Tidmore removed as a witness, but U.S. District Judge James Nowlin refused to grant the request.

In opening arguments, Richardson said "there was nothing unusual, unethical or illegal about the manner in which the cases were resolved by Vic Fezell."

Richardson said Fezell had no difficulties until he began looking into the allegedly bogus Lucas confessions.

Top Lefors graduates going separate ways

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

LEFORS — After sharing the same red-brick school building through their school years, Lefors valedictorian Norman Howard and salutatorian Deborah Stubbs are ready to go their separate ways.

Howard, son of Richard Howard and Maxine Stauffacher, leaves in autumn for Canyon where he will major in finance at West Texas State University. From there, he hopes for a career as a banker or a stock broker.

"I've always liked the financial field," Howard said, adding college will afford him the opportunity to "meet new people, have fun, learn all I can and get back to work."

Howard believes Lefors teachers have "done a good job."

"I know what I need to know," he said. "I'm ready to go on."

Howard, who moved to Lefors from Pampa six years ago, doubts he would have gotten a better education at the larger school.

"There's just a wider range of classes there," Howard said. "Here, they're more personal. You know everybody in school."

People in school ought to know Howard by now. The president of the LHS student council, Howard was honored this year for his leadership skills. He has been active in University Interscholastic League activities, including science, where he qualified for state in 1986. He has been class president for three years and is president of the LHS chapter of Students Against Drunk Drivers. He was also yearbook editor and active in football.

Stubbs, daughter of Robert and Helena Stubbs, is getting married this summer to Ricky Smith of Borger. After that, she'll attend Frank Phillips College to study to be a licensed vocational nurse.

But even that is Stubbs' partial goal.

"I want to do it just to get me going," Stubbs said. "Save money to reach a higher goal."

Stubbs, who's been at Lefors all her life, says she's ready for the rigors of college classes.

"I got a taste of college with our TI-IN Spanish lessons," she said, referring to a satellite television curriculum in which students may call in their answers to a "live via satellite" teacher.

She also took a course at Clarendon College to help prepare her for college.

That didn't keep Stubbs from staying active in LHS activities. She was active in basketball and track and was a regional qualifier in tennis this year. She was also this year's outstanding history student.

Although Howard and Stubbs are leaving, there will still be a lot of Lefors left in them.

Howard said he'll miss his friends.

"And the crazy times we had," Stubbs said.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Budget colored red during silly debate

Woody Allen says the issue of coloring black-and-white films is a matter of morality. If so, Congress should stay well away from it; politics and morals simply don't mix.

Truth to tell, the colorization controversy seems more about money. Which is no doubt why Congress, not to mention presidential hopeful Richard Gephardt, is so attracted to this issue. There are a lot of contributions to be had from the Hollywood set.

Indeed, the stars were out in full force recently. Allen joined actress Ginger Rogers and directors Sidney Pollack, Milos Forman and Elliott Silverstein in putting on a show for the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on technology and the law — which had no colorization legislation at the time.

They all came to testify about the recent trend to use a computer to add color to black-and-white movies. The practice was variously described as "sinful" and "morally unacceptable," but the real sin would be for Congress to outlaw the practice.

No matter how much blood, sweat, and creative juice an actor, actress, or director puts into a film, the finished product ultimately belongs to the person (or persons) who made the whole thing possible by paying the bills. If the owner wants to change the work, that is his or her prerogative, plain and simple.

There is no reason the owner of a painting cannot change its colors. The painting may not be worth nearly as much as it was before, and it would certainly be unethical to pass the work off as an original — but the act of altering personal property should not be a concern of Congress.

No one suggests that colored versions of films will supplant the original black-and-whites. But a host of studies do show that viewers respond better to color. Colored films sell better on TV and in the video stores, which means at least a part of the work is seen by a much wider audience. That should be heartening, not "sinful."

Nevertheless, the day after the subcommittee hearing, Gephardt introduced a bill to outlaw colorization. What's next — a bill outlawing the practice of cutting films to fit into prime-time television slots?

Surely that's as "sinful" as colorization. And just as silly an issue for a Congress that needs to first figure out how to balance a budget.

"Now then, about when did the ol' memory start to go?"

James J. Kilpatrick

Dump independent counsel

WASHINGTON — William French Smith, the handsome and courtly Californian who served as Ronald Reagan's first attorney general, turned up in town last week to get a load off his mind. He told a House subcommittee that it's high time to get rid of "independent counsels" who get appointed under the Ethics of Government Act of 1978.

Let's hear it for Bill Smith! He is absolutely right.

The 1978 act, if you recall, was adopted during the spasms of morality that swept over Congress in the wake of the Watergate affair. Among the act's unfortunate provisions was a section requiring the appointment of a special prosecutor — later retitled an independent counsel — whenever allegations of criminal wrongdoing are made against a government official. The act expires next year. Smith's advice is to let it go.

In one sweeping sentence he set forth his objections: "In my opinion this legislation has not served the ends of justice, is cruel and devastating in its application to individuals — falsely destroying reputations and requiring the incurring of great personal costs; has applied artificial standards often unrelated culpability, and to that extent has prevented the use of normal standards of prosecutorial discretion; has been used more for political purposes and media appetite than to achieve justice; has been a nightmare to administer, and has caused a needless and substantial waste of taxpayers' money."

Every word of that is true. The first invocation of the law, if memory serves, was Hamilton

Jordan, a top-ranking aide of President Carter. This was in November 1979, when a flimsy charge was made that a year earlier Jordan had tried to snort cocaine in a New York discotheque.

Under sensible procedures, this dubious allegation would have been turned over to the Department of Justice. The department would have looked into the matter, found it baseless, and gone about its business. But, no. Under this portentous act, a special prosecutor, Arthur H. Critsy, had to be appointed. It wasn't until the following May that Critsy's investigation cleared Jordan. Meanwhile Jordan had endured six months of undeserved hell.

A few months later, in September 1980, a similar allegation was raised against White House aide Tim Kraft. He was to manage Carter's 1980 campaign, but the unfounded charge put him on the sidelines. A special prosecutor cleared him in March of 1981.

Edwin Meese, while he was still at Reagan's White House, before he became attorney general succeeding Smith, went through an anguishing ordeal. He was accused of using his influence to get federal jobs for people who had provided financial assistance to him. If the charges had been true, he would have been subject to indictment. But the charges were manifestly untrue. Special counsel Jacob A. Stein came to that obvious conclusion after months of investigation. The probe cost the taxpayers $721,000 in Meese's trial fees alone. Now Meese is under investigation again, but there is no reason why the Department of Justice itself could not handle the matter.

By my inexact count, we are now in the midst of the ninth costly investigation by an independent counsel. In addition to the charges against Jordan, Kraft and Meese, allegations against Michael Deaver and Ray Donovan have been probed. None of these found any violation of federal law. (Deaver was indicted, but not for any of the charges that triggered his investigation.) Special counsel Lawrence Walsh now holds a brief for the whole of the Iran-Contra affair. An investigation of Lyn Nofziger's lobbying is incomplete. Two other investigations involve unidentified persons in the Justice Department.

In brief, Smith told the House subcommittee, this "cumbersome and expensive process so far has damaged reputations but produced little else." The rigid provisions of the law require that special investigations take precedence over any other matters that might occupy the FBI and the Department of Justice. The act makes no distinction between trivial allegations and serious allegations. Independent counsels, who are appointed by a panel of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, are subject to none of the checks and balances that normally govern prosecutorial discretion.

Smith did not get into the constitutionality of the act, but he has publicly expressed his doubts many times. Under the Constitution it is the duty of the executive, not the judiciary, to enforce federal laws. Toward this end a president appoints U.S. attorneys. The Ethics Act violates this principle of separation of powers. That issue to one side, as Smith said, the "independent counsel" provision is just plain bad law. It ought to be abandoned.

Bits of history

Important historical events in May include:

In 1647, the first recorded execution of a "witch" took place in Massachusetts. (The method involved was not burning at the stake, but hanging.)

In 1818, American reformer Amelia Jenks Bloomer, who popularized the garment that bears her name, was born in Homer, N.Y.

In 1837, American gunfighter and frontiersman Wild Bill Hickok was born in Troy Grove, Ill.

In 1911, the 38th vice president of the United States, Hubert H. Humphrey, was born in Wallace, S.D.

In 1929, aviator Charles Lindbergh married Anne Spencer Morrow in Englewood, N.J.

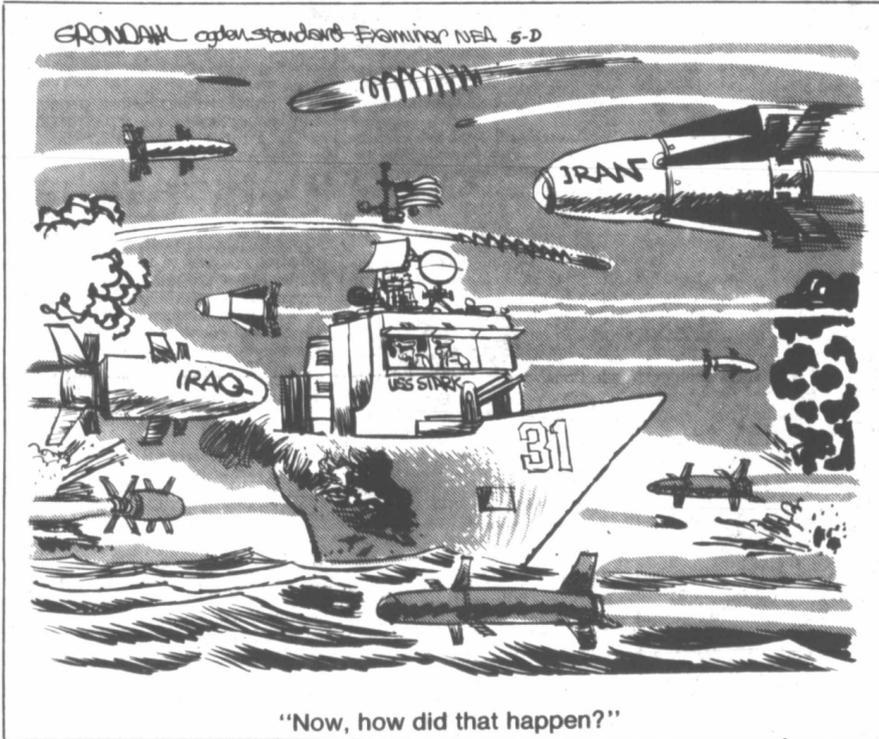

In 1935, the Supreme Court struck down the National Industrial Recovery Act.

In 1941, the German battleship "Bismarck" was sunk by the British navy off France, with a loss of 2,300 lives.

In 1949, author-cartoonist Robert L. Ripley, of "Ripley's Believe It or Not!" fame, died in New York.

In 1964, independent India's first prime minister, Jawaharlal Nehru, died.

"Now, how did that happen?"

Hunting the biggest roach

I ran into Bubba Tindol, of Tindol Pest Control in Atlanta, and he told me something I found hard to believe at first.

He said there is such a thing known as The Great American Roach-Off that is currently in progress all over the country.

The idea, he explained, was to locate the largest American cockroach.

"Stories by pest control operators are like fish stories," Bubba explained. "Somebody is always saying, 'I saw this big one or that big one.'" "Well, a guy in Texas named Micheal Bohdan of Bizzy Bee Pest Control of Dallas, decided to start a national contest to see just how big a roach could be collected."

Here's the deal: You go out and find yourself an American cockroach, and it must be an American Cockroach, not a German, Australian, Oriental, or Madagascar, which is the world's largest roach. They get to be the size of a Buick. An American cockroach, in case you didn't know, is 1 to 2 inches in length, brown, with a yellow stripe on the shield of its head.

The best way to kill a cockroach, of course, is to step on it and squish it, but you can't, according to Bubba Tindol, turn in any cockroaches that are squished.

"That makes them too hard to identify," Bubba explained. "We don't want somebody trying to slip a Madagascar in on us."

So strange your roach. Entries must be dead. You catch and kill your American cockroach, then you call Bubba Tindol, at Tindol Pest Control, if you live in Georgia, and ask how to enter it. If you live in another participating city call a pest control company there for further details.

There are 13 other cities involved in the contest besides Atlanta — among them are New York, Miami, San Antonio, Dallas, Houston, Birmingham — and the person finding the largest cockroach in these cities could win $500.

The winning roach in each city then will be sent to the national contest in Washington. The biggest of the lot in the national will be enshrined in the Smithsonian Insect Zoo, and the person who caught the nation's largest roach will win $1,000 and a trip to Washington.

The American Cyanamid Company is sponsoring the contest.

"The national winner could be in for big bucks," Tindol said. "Bug killer companies will no doubt be after the winner to do commercials."

Bubba Tindol said don't be embarrassed if you collect your roach from your house. He said it is impossible not to have roaches even in the cleanest of homes. "Roaches get a bad rap," Bubba said. "They aren't nearly as nasty as, say, the fly, but people are so disgusted by them."

The biggest cockroach that has been turned in to Tindol, Bubba said, is a 2-inch. "Guess where it came from?" Bubba asked.

"The city sanitation department?"

"No," said Bubba. "The IRS office."

The deadline for submitting your roach is June 3. Good hunting.

Incoherent Mideast policy brings deaths

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The slaughter of young men sent to the Middle East on an ill-defined U.S. military mission was appalling. Especially outrageous was the lax security that denied them any opportunity to defend themselves before they died.

A Republican representative said those slain were "designated sitting ducks." A Democratic senator criticized the "unbelievable breakdown in security that allowed it to happen." President Reagan expressed "outrage" over the "despicable act."

That may sound familiar, but it's not a description of the recent Iraqi air attack on the guided missile frigate USS Stark that left 37 Navy men dead in Persian Gulf.

Instead, the events described above occurred more than 3½ years ago, when a truck driven by a terrorist and loaded with explosives was purposely crashed into a Marine compound in Lebanon, killing 241 troops.

The similarities between the two calamitous episodes are more than superficial. Both were products of the president's incoherent Middle East policy. Both U.S. missions were flawed in their conception and bungled in their execution.

Reagan's preferred solution in virtually all cases of heightened global tension is military. Where President Carter struggled to fashion (at least temporarily) a rapprochement between Egypt and Israel, Reagan has little patience with such diplomatic initiatives.

Thus, dispatching the Marines to Beirut in 1983 was his idea of how to bring peace to chronically war-ravaged Lebanon, although the precise nature of the mission — somewhere between "showing the flag" and engaging in full-scale combat — was murky.

Compounding Reagan's difficulties was his blunder in stumbling into the Iran-Iraq war — a conflict whose outcome is almost entirely irrelevant to this country — by providing anti-tank missiles and other weapons to Iran in exchange for assistance in securing the release of U.S. hostages.

Now, in a clumsy attempt to regain credibility with the moderate Arab states that were aghast at the clandestine arms sales to Iran, Reagan has stumbled into another misadventure — providing military escorts to Kuwait's oil tankers as they traverse the Persian Gulf.

If Kuwait's ships require the protection of the U.S. Navy, there must be a serious military threat in the region — but Reagan once again is providing conflicting signals.

Witness says children sang while riding to their death

LYON, France (AP) — Forty-five children sang in happy innocence of their fate as trucks took them to Nazi extermination camps where most would be killed, a witness testified at the trial of Klaus Barbie.

Barbie is accused of directing the roundup of the children from a shelter in Izieu, 45 miles east of Paris, while he headed the Gestapo in Lyon in World War II. He is now 73 and charged with crimes against humanity.

Prosecutors say he arrested, tortured and deported hundreds of Jews and members of the French Resistance to Nazi concentration camps. Barbie was not in court Wednesday.

A man who was working in a field in Izieu on April 6, 1944, said Wednesday that he remembered Barbie and the German soldiers driving up to a house that was being used as a shelter for children whose parents had been deported.

"He had a soft hat," Julien Favet, 72, said of Barbie. "He questioned me, looked me over from head to foot. It was him. I swear it."

Favet, who was not arrested because he was not

Jewish, said he heard the children's voices raised in song as they were driven away.

Favet formally identified Barbie in 1983, during the judicial investigation.

Of the 45 children and seven adults taken away from the Izieu home, only two survived — Rene Wucher, a child who was freed because he was not Jewish, and Lea Feldblum, an employee of the home who now lives in Israel.

Prosecutors say Barbie ordered and personally directed the roundup.

Barbie declared May 13 that he would not attend the trial on the grounds that he was kidnapped from Bolivia, where he had lived for three decades, in 1983 and brought to France illegally. The Bolivian government expelled him.

Barbie was brought to the trial against his will Tuesday so five witnesses could make formal identifications, but Presiding Judge Andre Cerdini ruled against a request that he be brought in by force every day.

The trial was adjourned until Monday.

Financial pressures threaten the defense plans of NATO

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Even as NATO was polishing up a public pledge this week to spend more on conventional defenses, one alliance member was privately saying it no longer could afford one of its military tasks.

The Belgian government told its NATO partners that it would not, as previously planned, replace its nuclear-tipped Nike air-defense missiles with the more effective but costlier Patriot system. The Nike rockets will be dismantled and not replaced, it said.

In what has become a ritual at meetings of NATO defense ministers, the alliance declared Wednesday that the members were determined to increase national defense spending by at least 3 percent a year. Officials say privately there is little chance they will do it.

The ministers said the West's conventional defenses must be beefed up to meet the challenge of numerically stronger and rapidly expanding Warsaw Pact armies capable of overrunning NATO forces in days.

The issue has become even more pressing in light of improved prospects for a U.S.-Soviet deal to reduce nuclear arms in Europe.

If — as envisioned by the superpowers — the 316 U.S. medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe are withdrawn in exchange for removal of more than 1,300 nuclear warheads atop Soviet SS-20 rockets, NATO will have lost a key part of its nuclear defenses.

Reliance on non-nuclear defense would become even more pronounced if, as proposed by the Kremlin and under study by NATO, the two sides also eliminate shorter-range nuclear arms.

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said he told his NATO counterparts that progress in nuclear arms control talks "underlined and emphasized" the importance of improving conventional forces.

Warsaw pact holds summit

BERLIN (AP) — Warsaw Pact nations opened a two-day meeting in East Berlin today that is expected to focus on Western responses to Soviet nuclear arms proposals.

East German President Erich Honecker convened the session at 10 a.m. with a welcoming speech to the leaders of the six Warsaw Pact nations attending.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev also was expected to give an address today. The meetings, at a downtown East Berlin hotel, are held behind closed doors.

Western diplomats have speculated Gorbachev will use the annual meeting of the military bloc to announce a pullout of some of the 560,000 Soviet troops in Eastern Europe.

But Valentin Falin, head of the official Soviet news agency Novosti, told reporters Wednesday that troop reductions would have to be on the basis "of mutual agreement" between East and West.

Gorbachev and the leaders of Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Romania and Bulgaria arrived in East Berlin on Wednesday.

The Soviet leader flew to East Germany after wrapping up a three-day visit to Romania with a speech urging improvement in the quality of products that East bloc nations sell one another.

"Goods have been carefully selected to go to the West, where they have earned hard currency," he told workers outside Bucharest's August 23rd factory. "And to one another, we have supplied the worst. Is this really the way to reinforce socialism?"

Romanians' daily life has become increasingly austere as the government drives hard to increase exports to pay off hard currency debts. Gorbachev said that in the Soviet Union, he has encouraged private enterprise and production incentives because "we needed fundamental, radical reforms so as to throw off the fetters and eliminate the brakes on the country's developments."

AP News Analysis

Although Belgium plays a relatively small role in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, its financial pinch points up a dilemma facing the alliance as it moves toward less reliance on nuclear weapons.

The governments of the alliance say they worry that nuclear disarmament will expose Western deficiencies in conventional defense. Yet most of them are reluctant to spend more money to fill the gaps.

Chase becomes third big U.S. bank to gird for bad Third World loans

NEW YORK (AP) — Chase Manhattan Corp. says its decision to build up its reserves by declaring a quarterly loss of about $1.4 billion reflects a prudent and flexible policy of weathering bad loans to developing nations.

The nation's third-largest bank-holding company said Wednesday its decision to strengthen its reserves by $1.6 billion also would mean an $850 million loss for 1987.

The announcement made Chase the third major U.S. banking concern in a week to take such steps against possible bad Third World loans.

Chairman Willard C. Butcher said in a statement the move was appropriate in light of recent tremors in the Third World debt situation, including Brazil's suspension of interest payments on $6.7 billion worth of medium- and long-term debt to foreign banks.

"We think that what we're doing is prudent on the one hand, and helps our flexibility on the other," Chase President Thomas G. Labrecque said in a telephone interview.

He said Chase had been contemplating the action for a considerable period of time, but expedited it after Citicorp, the largest U.S. bank-holding company, took a similar step last week.

On Tuesday, Norwest Corp. of Minneapolis said it was adding $250 million to its loan-loss reserve for losses on its $650 million portfolio of foreign loans.

Chase made its announcement after the stock market closed. The company's stock on Wednesday dropped 50 cents a share to $37.25 on the New York Stock Exchange.

In other news of the economy: A weaker dollar is slowly boosting export sales and curbing imports, according to a government report that said the nation's merchandise trade deficit narrowed slightly in the first quarter to $38.3 billion.

The Commerce Department said Wednesday the trade deficit declined 0.7 percent in the first three months of this year after hitting a record high of $38.6 billion from October through December.

Operatives had suspicions of cheating, stealing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two managers of a clandestine air resupply operation for Nicaragua's Contra rebels voiced suspicions that its operatives were cheating and stealing, and the testimony added to evidence the operation was a creature of the U.S. government.

Felix Rodriguez, a veteran of the abortive 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion in Cuba and numerous other CIA operations, told congressional hearings on the Iran-Contra affair Wednesday that he distrusted the operation's leaders and warned Lt. Col. Oliver L. North privately. "There are people stealing here."

Rodriguez, who went by the pseudonym of Max Gomez, also testified that North had bragged to him that his activities were protected at high levels in the Reagan administration.

"Those people want me," Rodriguez said North told him while pointing to a House debate on Contra aid that was on the television in North's office during a meeting on June 25, 1986. "But they can't touch me, because the old man loves my ass."

Rodriguez also said he had heard the Contras were being sold hand grenades for $9 each which had been bought for $3 apiece, and said he complained directly to North, adding, "If this is known... it's going to be worse than Watergate, and this could destroy the President of the United States."

Earlier Wednesday, the committees heard from retired Air Force Col. Robert C. Dutton, who had been hired by retired Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord in the spring of 1986 to make the air resupply effort work.

Dutton told of internal struggles within the operation and of a request by Rodriguez to have control of a fund to pay for fuel and contingencies at the resupply operation's base at Ilopango Air Base in El Salvador. That request "raised a red flag," Dutton said, because he wanted to be able to account fully for the operation's scarce funds.

But like Rodriguez, Dutton said he had no doubt that the directions for the Contra support effort were coming from the top of the U.S. government. He said North had broader contacts among high officials than any military official of similar rank in his experience, and said North had mentioned specific contacts with CIA Director William J. Casey and Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

"He indicated to me that we were working for the president of the United States," said Dutton, who testified with grants of immunity from both the committees and a separate investigator, independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh.

The committees on Wednesday released part of a letter written by John Piowaty, a retired military pilot hired to help in the resupply operation, telling of a harrowing trip in which a cargo plane wandered 10 miles off course and struck trees atop a mountain.

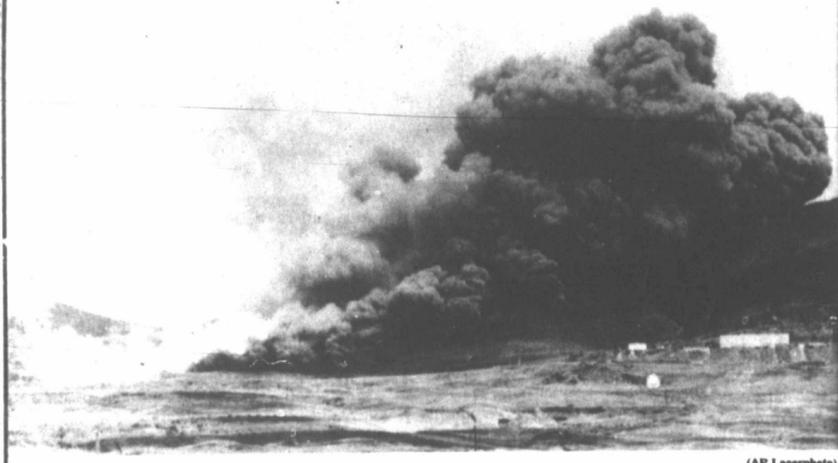

The crew was able to recover and make it back to base, but Piowaty complained bitterly that the resupply crews were being asked to risk their lives on unsafe aircraft. One plane had to rely on an automobile radar detector for radar detection inside Nicaragua, he said. "Is it simply greed that drives some of you to drive the rest of us?" he wrote.

Wednesday's testimony represented a new round of what was becoming a common refrain in the hearings: distrust by various factions in the Iran-Contra deals and allegations of dishonesty and profiteering.

Despite insistence of several principal witnesses, including Secord, that they were acting out of patriotism, there repeatedly have been charges of overpricing of weapons, motives of greed and the hiding away of huge profits.

Energy Department prediction: Gasoline prices up this summer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wasn't it fun while it lasted, watching the gallon dial spin faster than the price dial?

The average price of a gallon of gasoline should rise to a dollar a gallon this summer, the Energy Department predicts, and reach $1.04 by the spring of 1988.

That's an increase after inflation of 11 percent over last summer, the department says. The average, counting taxes and lumping together all grades and kinds of service stations, was 87 cents in the summer of 1986.

The quarterly forecast from the department's Energy Information Administration was released Wednesday. It says the higher prices will slow the growth of summer driving and reduce the use of gasoline this summer.

Driving increased by 5 percent from summer

1985 to summer 1986, when prices were falling and overseas travel dropped because of terrorist attacks abroad, but this year's summer increase over 1986 should be 2.1 percent. Gallons used in the summer should decline 1.2 percent to 7.18 million barrels per day, about 51.6 million gallons per day, the forecasters said.

Normally, more miles driven should mean more gasoline sold. But "increases in vehicle efficiency projected for 1987 and 1988 more than compensate for the impact of increased driving activity on motor gasoline consumption," the report said in predicting lower demand for fuel.

"New car sales were very strong during 1986; these new cars, with an average on-the-road efficiency of close to 23 miles per gallon, are helping push the fleet average up by 2 percent in 1987 to 17.3 miles per gallon."

Reagan worried about European view Gorbachev more trustworthy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he hopes Europeans who trust Mikhail Gorbachev more than him "wake up soon" but at the same time he says he hopes to have a summit meeting with the Soviet leader this fall.

"It is up to General Secretary Gorbachev now to set the date," Reagan said Wednesday.

In an interview, Reagan said he is optimistic about prospects for an agreement to abolish medium-range missiles from U.S. and Soviet arsenals in Europe.

"I do believe that great progress has been made (in negotiations), more than in all the years since World War II, and that we have the best opportunity for beginning the reduction of nuclear weapons that we've ever had," Reagan said.

The president was questioned for 29 minutes in the Oval Office by television reporters from the six countries that will be represented along with the United States at the economic summit next month: Canada, Britain, West Germany, Italy, France and Japan.

Asked if he is worried by recent polls in West Germany showing that people think Gorbachev is more popular and credible than he is, Reagan said, "Yes, and I hope they'll wake up soon."

While saying he did not mean to insult Gorbachev, Reagan said, "I do believe that on the record of abiding by treaties, on the record of striving for peace, that the United States' record is one that the people should have confidence in, more confidence than the Soviet Union, which has a wrong record of violating treaties and of using subversion in order to spread its influence throughout the rest of the world."

Reagan noted that Gorbachev has accepted in principle a summit meeting in the United States.

"Now it's simply a case of when will that take place."

He said the United States has been closely consulting with its allies on a Soviet proposal to eliminate medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

"There seems to be some pretty general agreement on the basic terms of what we're negotiating," Reagan said, adding, "We're hopeful of getting rid of those in the world."

However, Reagan said, "There is no thought on our side of totally denuclearizing Europe at the same time that this would leave the Soviet Union with a great superiority in conventional weapons."

On other points, the president said:

■ His credibility has been damaged by the Iran-Contra affair but "it has not been done by anything that has been proven — quite the contrary. It has been the image that has been created by our own, particularly Washington, press corps in describing what took place."

■ "The dollar is at the place where it should remain. We don't look for any further serious drops in the value of the dollar."

■ He will not permit a "barbaric country" like Iran to close down oil-shipping routes in the Persian Gulf. However, he won't say how far the United States will go in retaliating for an attack on a U.S. ship because "it's far better the Iranians go to bed every night wondering what we might do."

■ The United States and Japan seem to be making some progress in resolving a trade dispute on computer chips but "we still have not reached what I think must be the answer, and this a return to abiding by the agreement that both our countries had made" to control unfair trading practices.

How Reagan broke rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oh, sure, President Reagan, you've got a lot on your mind: the deficit, the Democrats, what Oliver North may say on the witness stand. But this is important.

This is grammar. This is history.

Sometimes, in your speeches and public papers, you say "an historic" and sometimes you say "a historic."

The record shows that you are inconsistent, and a frequent violator, sir, of the government's rules covering such matters. That's probably not an impeachable offense.

Last Jan. 27, in your written State of the Union message to Congress, talking about farm subsidies, you wrote: "Program costs are at an historic high," and, talking about human rights in the Soviet Union, "emigration remains at an historic low."

But last April 22, talking to foreign journalists about a forthcoming meeting with other heads of state, you said, "It's going to be somewhat of a historic summit."

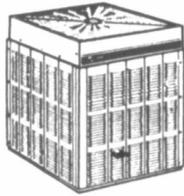

On April 16, 1986, in a Law Day ceremony at the White House, you said, "Today the House of Representatives will cast an historic vote."

But in welcoming President Mohammad Hosni Mubarak of Egypt to the White House on Feb. 3, 1982, you said, "The steps we took on the road to peace in the Middle East generated a historic change."

On June 24, 1981, you told the Jaycees convention in San Antonio, Texas, "And as I've said before, when Congress passed that bipartisan budget resolution, they took an historic step."

But on April 14, 1986, in a letter on the situation in Cyprus, you said, "The secretary general's initiative presents the leaders of the two Cypriot communities with a historic opportunity."

But after meeting with President Anwar Sadat of Egypt on Aug. 5, 1981, you said in a toast, "Our meeting today was a historic one by any measure."

Davis told to keep his mouth shut

FORT WORTH (AP)—A judge has ordered Cullen Davis, the defendant in a multimillion-dollar wrongful death lawsuit, not to discuss the case with anyone except his attorneys.

As jury selection continued for the second day Wednesday, State District Judge Claude Williams granted a request for a temporary order restraining Davis from repeat performances of statements he gave to reporters on Tuesday.

Jury selection was scheduled to continue today in the case.

Davis' ex-wife, Priscilla Davis, 45, contends he was the bewigged man in black who wounded her and killed her daughter, Andrea Wilborn, in an August 1976 shooting spree at the $6 million Davis mansion in Fort Worth.

Attorneys for Mrs. Davis and Jack Wilborn—the second of her three husbands and the father of the slain girl—took offense at the defendant's portrayal of himself to reporters as all but poverty-stricken—left only, he said, with "my house and my car."

Lawyers for Wilborn said Davis made "vicious and vituperative" statements about Wilborn to reporters and defamed Wilborn by saying the civil suits against him were based on greed.

They said Davis "impermissibly argued the merits of the case" when he claimed the facts had already been decided when he was acquitted in 1977 of the murder charges filed against him.

The judge granted the gag order, but said he would take no further action against Davis "unless he violates the order."

Attached to the request for the restraining order against Davis were copies of a Fort Worth Star-Telegram article in which Davis asserted that his ex-wife has spent the millions of dollars she won in their divorce settlement and is now broke.

"It's all greed," he said of the civil action.

Bit of warmth from husband might thaw his chilly wife

DEAR ABBY: The "Washingtonian" who complained that his wife is a dud in bed sounds like my husband. He treats me like a dog all day, and expects me to be wildly passionate the minute he drops his pants. Through the years he has asked me what he can do to make me more responsive. I have repeatedly told him to please treat me as though I were special to him, and the response would come naturally. He obviously can't do it. One night I prepared a delicious dinner, complete with chilled wine and candlelight. He walked in and proceeded to yell at me for leaving the basement light turned on. Needless to say, that left me as cool as the wine.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

A friend once told him he shouldn't be out looking for hamburger when he had steak home in the refrigerator. I would give the same advice to "Washingtonian." He should show his wife the same consideration and tenderness he shows his ladyfriends, and his wife might surprise him. If he doesn't, he will end up with nothing but hamburger.

WISHING IN WALLA WALLA

DEAR WISHING: Today, the issue is not the difference between steak and hamburger — it can be the difference between life and death! Any person who knowingly shares a spouse with anonymous others is taking an enormous risk. You need to be tested for exposure to the AIDS virus — and so does your philandering husband. And you both need to be educated concerning safe sex practices, and follow the instructions in the letter.

DEAR ABBY: You recently published a letter from a woman who was upset because her stepdaughter had invited her husband's ex-wife to her bridal shower.

I laughed. Five years ago, I remarried in a church ceremony, and I did it my way. My stepson was my ring bearer, my teenage son gave me away, and my guests were all friends of ours. These friends included my ex-husband, my ex-in-laws and my ex-husband's first ex-wife. (I did not invite his second ex-wife — I was his third!) Also invited (and attended) were several people who had been significant people from the groom's past as well as my own. Many of the people I worked with were there, and you should have seen their faces when I introduced these people around!

Abby, my ex-husband and his present wife are friends of mine now. He was at one time an important part of my life, and it seemed only proper that he should be present to share my joy. I suppose this is rather unusual, but my present husband's first ex-wife gave me a beautiful bridal shower. Life is too short for grudges.

I DID IT MY WAY

DEAR DID IT: It would be ideal if all divorced persons would do it your way, but your way is the exception. Pity.

***

DEAR ABBY: Are pantyhose considered undergarments? I work for a company that requires its female employees to wear pantyhose under their dresses. Abby, does an employer have the right to insist on it? I personally think it's degrading for a woman to be told what to wear under her dress. Your opinion, please.

ARIZONA WOMAN

DEAR WOMAN: I would say that pantyhose qualify as undergarments. And I think an employer has the right to require the female employees to wear hosiery as opposed to appearing bare-legged. But the employer wouldn't have a leg to stand on to insist on pantyhose specifically.

Most smokers want to quit

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Three of four smokers would like to quit, say researchers at the University of Rochester's Smoking Research Program.

"The reasons smokers give include awareness of the risks to their health, and changing social expectations," says epidemiologist Gary Giovino.

The majority prefer to quit on their own, without the help of a clinic, and many are eventually successful. Relapses are common for would-be quitters, says Giovino.

"The important thing is not to give up; previous slips don't mean the smoker will never make it," he says. "The quitter should analyze the reason for the relapse and be prepared when similar circumstances arise again to use another strategy to cope."

Pistons try to rebound

By HARRY ATKINS
AP Sports Writer

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Isiah Thomas, who blames himself for Detroit's stunning last-second defeat in Game 5, predicts the Pistons will rebound in tonight's Game 6 of the NBA Eastern Conference finals against the Boston Celtics.

"It's part of being a man," Thomas said. "In sports as in anything else, there are highs and lows. You have to learn to accept both. I'm man enough to put it out of my mind. I expect to play well in Game 6 and Game 7."

Thomas had made a tough jumper to give Detroit a one-point lead with 17 seconds remaining in Game 5 at Boston Garden on Tuesday night.

When the Pistons managed to get the ball back with five seconds remaining, Thomas wanted to get the ball in to Bill Laimbeer, but his pass was stolen by Larry Bird who flipped it to Dennis Johnson for the winning basket.

"It was a great play by a great player," said Boston assistant coach Jim Rodgers. "There weren't many options left. We had to steal the ball or foul someone."

"Larry read the pass. It takes great presence of mind to read that situation. That's instinct. That's greatness."

So instead of coming home with a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series, the Pistons need to win Game 6 to stay alive for a return trip to Boston on Saturday.

"If I take the attitude that all is lost, all is doom, it will affect this team," Thomas said. "I know all the guys look to me to lead. We'll win Game 6."

Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said it appeared during practice Wednesday that the Pistons had put the bitter disappointment behind them.

"I think we'll be fine," Daly said.

The Celtics, meanwhile, must cope again with the hostile crowd in the Silverdome where they lost Games 3 and 4. They also must deal with the absence of center Robert Parish and Coach K.C. Jones.

Parish, who wouldn't have played anyway because of a re-sprained left ankle, was suspended from Game 6 and fined $7,500 by the NBA on Wednesday for punching Laimbeer with 28 seconds remaining in the second quarter of Game 5.

"It bothered me that something happened so blatantly," Thomas said.

Niekro comes close, but fails to set record in 1-0 loss

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

With his younger brother watching, 48-year-old Phil Niekro pitched a four-hitter. But Boston's Roger Clemens was there, too, and his performance was good enough to keep the brothers Niekro out of the record book.

"He's one of the best pitchers in baseball," the elder Niekro said of Clemens, who gave up six hits

Wednesday night as the Red Sox beat the Cleveland Indians 1-0. "He's overpowering. We were overmatched tonight."

Phil and his 42-year-old brother Joe will have to wait until Saturday before they have a chance to become the winningest brothers in major league history. Together, they have won 529 games, matching Gaylord and Jim Perry.

"A loss is a loss, whether it's by one run or 10 runs," Niekro said. "Joe was here with the permisson of the Yankees and I wanted him to be a part of it. Now I'll go to New York to watch him pitch Saturday. Hopefully, he'll fare a little better than I did tonight."

Clemens, 4-4, struck out eight and didn't walk a batter. He got out of four jams with third base occupied and earned his second shutout of the year and fifth of his career.

The game's lone run came on a single by Jim Rice, a wild pitch, a walk, a fielder's choice ground-der and a sacrifice fly by Bill Buckner.

In other American League games, it was Seattle 6, New York 5; Baltimore 8, California 6; Detroit 4, Texas 3; Oakland 4, Toronto 1; Chicago 3, Kansas City 2, and Minnesota 7, Milwaukee 2.

Tigers 4, Rangers 3
Jack Morris, Eric King and Mark Thurmond combined on a three-hitter and Kirk Gibson hit a two-run homer for Detroit, which swept a three-game series with Texas.

New Yorkers undefeated

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

New York Life moved its record to 5-0 Wednesday night, defeating Grant 8-6 in a six inning affair that was halted early due to the time limit.

In the game that lasted just past midnight, Brandon Knutson was declared the winning pitcher.

Knutson (2-0) struck out 10 Grant batters, walked four and gave up only four hits.

NY Life's Quincy Williams came on in the sixth inning to pick up his third save of the year.

Offensively for NY, Tim Davis went two for four with three RBI; Quincy Williams drove in a pair of runs on a single and Mark Aderholt also drove in a run on a single.

Jessie Hernandez, Jason Williams, Ryan Osborne, Brad Chambers and Knutson all added singles for NY.

For Grant, Chris Morris was tagged with the loss. Morris struck out six, walked five and gave up seven hits.

Morris also tried to help Grant's effort offensively. At the plate, the pitcher went two for three and drove in two runs.

Jason Becker, Chris Roden and Heath Summers each pitched in with singles for Grant.

Wednesday night's win for NY Life sets up a battle of the unbeaten Saturday at 3 p.m., when NY plays First National Bank, also 5-0.

In Wednesday night's early game, Bowers Ranch defeated Lions Club 10-6. Both teams now have 2-3 records.

Bryan Ellis picked up the victory for Ranch, giving up eight hits and seven walks. Ellis struck out nine Lion batters.

Eric Cochran, Steve Sanders, Chris Archibald and Ellis each had two singles for Bowers.

Clay Lee had a single and a double and Jay Earp also added a two-bagger for Bowers.

Steve Murphy suffered the loss for Lions. He gave up 12 hits, six walks and struck out only a pair.

Barry Coffee led the offense for Lions, picking up three singles. Murphy had a double and single. Troy Black, Zach Thomas and Kelly Whitson all added singles for Lions.

Lions tried to gain some momentum in the bottom of the seventh, getting two hits from their first two batters. But, a center-to-short-to-home-to-first double play all but ended the Lion chances.

In Wednesday night American League Bambino action, Rotary and Holmes fought to a soggy 9-9 tie.

Holmes' Vincent Martinez threw a wild pitch in the last inning that allowed Rotary's Dave Davis to score the tying run.

Martinez led Holmes' hitters with a triple, two RBI and two runs scored. Lonnie Romero had a double, one RBI and one run scored.

Other hitting leaders for Holmes included Brad Baldridge with two runs scored, one RBI and a single; Kyle Johnson also scored a run and had a single, and T.J. Warren came up with the other single for Holmes. With it, he knocked in one run.

For Rotary, Garrett Scribner drove in three runs on one hit. He also scored a run. Dave Davis also had three RBI on two hits, and scored two of Rotary's nine runs. Jeff McCormick added a hit, drove in a run and scored a run.

Longhorns clash with Hogs in College World Series

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Two teams each from the Southwestern, Southeastern and Pacific 10 conferences in the 1987 College World Series may meet seeing familiar foes for teams in the NCAA's baseball championships beginning here Friday.

But familiarity with conference opponents isn't always an advantage, according to Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson.

"If history means anything, we're in bad shape," said Gustafson, who opens Saturday's first-round double-header against fellow Southwestern Conference member Arkansas.

Gustafson recalled that in 1979 Arkansas lost to Texas four of five times in regular-season and conference post-season play; then the Razorbacks avenged the losses with a CWS win over Texas.

"In 1985, they did that to us during the season and we beat them in the World Series," Gustafson said. "I think that's a disadvantage for us at this point to have to play a team we beat four times during the season. They've got a super team."

Texas, 58-9, has been a regular qualifier for the CWS from the Southwestern Conference, winning in 1949, 1950, 1975 and 1983. Arkansas is 50-14, having finished third to Miami and Texas in the 1985 series and second to Cal State-Fullerton in 1979.

Louisiana State, 47-17, is the first Southeastern Conference team to qualify for two CWS appearances in successive years, according to Charles Bloom of the LSU sports information office. The Tigers were 1-2 in their first CWS a year ago. Georgia, 42-19, also qualified from the SEC and will make its first appearance in the NCAA Division I baseball championships on Saturday.

Pac 10 qualifiers this year include two teams familiar with the annual series in Omaha. Arizona State, 40-25, has been to 14 previous series, winning in 1965, 1967, 1969, 1977 and 1981. Stanford, 48-16, qualified in 1982, 1983 and 1985 after finishing third in its first CWS in 1967.

Arizona State will open the 1987 CWS against 56-11 Oklahoma State at 5:10 p.m. EDT Friday, followed by LSU meeting 54-16 Florida State at 8:10 p.m.

Saturday's first-round games match Texas and Arkansas at 4:10 p.m. EDT, and Stanford against Georgia at 7:10 p.m.

Texas is making a record 25th appearance in the national tournament. Gustafson has brought 14 of those Longhorn teams to Omaha.

"We've got a team that's developing into a decent pitching team and we've got a lineup of hitters with each one having contributed and been a hero at one time or another," Gustafson said.

The coach said Texas doesn't have a pitcher the likes of recent Longhorns Roger Clemens, Calvin Schiraldi or Greg Swindell, all of whom are pitching in the Major Leagues.

"We've got three pretty good starting pitchers," Gustafson said. "Right now I really don't know which is the best. Curt Krippner (13-0) has been the closest thing to an ace we've got. But Kevin Garner (10-3) has been the most dominant when he's on."

Lefors looking ahead to Class 1A baseball playoffs

After several days of not knowing, the Lefors Pirates finally learned Wednesday who, when and where they will play in the first round of the Class 1A regional playoffs.

June 2, the Pirates will travel to Vernon to meet either Petrolia or Santo in the first round. The game is set for 2 p.m. and the field at Vernon Regional Junior College has been reserved for the contest.

Petrolia, near Wichita Falls and representing District 7-A, will meet Santo Friday to decide who will advance in area competition. Santo, near Mineral Wells, is the District 5-A representative.

Semi-final and final round competition is set for Austin, June 11 and 12.

Lefors chances appear good at making it to Austin, as there are only about 25 1A baseball teams in the state. The first hitch, though, would be to get by Gunter, which is one of the top 1A teams in the state. Lefors would meet Gunter if they win next Tuesday.

Outgoing Groom girls coach Frank Belcher is about to say goodbye to that community.

Belcher, who accepted a job in the Hereford school system, is preparing to leave early next week for his new home.

White Deer, Canadian and Miami each had their awards banquets this past week.

Bias introduced drugs to others, testimony reveals

By DAVID GINSBURG
AP Sports Writer

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP)—Testimony at the drug trial of Brian Tribble has revealed new insight into All-America basketball star Len Bias' involvement with cocaine.

Terry Long, testifying in Prince George's County Circuit Court Wednesday in the third day of the trial, said he first tried cocaine in late 1984 at the suggestion of Bias, then a University of Maryland teammate of Long's.

"I was introduced to cocaine through Len Bias," Long said without emotion.

Tribble, 24, is charged with cocaine distribution and possession charges in connection with Bias' cocaine-induced death last June 19. Long, giving the first public account of Bias' final hours, said he, Bias, Tribble and former teammate David Gregg had been snorting the drug for more than three hours before Bias suffered a fatal seizure.

Earlier Wednesday, 17-year-old Terrence Moore testified that he saw Bias five or six times in a well-known drug dealing area in Washington.

Testimony by Moore and Long came one day after prosecutors had accused Bias of being a "courtesy middleman" in a drug network run by Tribble.

Long said he first tried cocaine when Bias approached him during his sophomore year. Long claimed Bias came up to him with a rolled-up dollar bill and said, "Try this."

Long, who had charges against him dropped in exchange for his testimony, said he used the drug "seven to 10 times" and that Bias was with him "on most of the occasions."

Long testified that the early-morning party on June 19 began around 2:30 a.m. when Bias woke him up and asked him to help celebrate his new contract with the NBA's Boston Celtics.

Long said he left his room for a moment, and when he returned Bias and Tribble were standing around a large quantity of cocaine. At the request of prosecutor Robert Bonsib, Long poured about one-half cup of coffee creamer onto a mirror to demonstrate how much of the drug he saw when he walked into the room.

Hagler feels cheated by Sugar Ray's retirement

By DAVID GINSBURG
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sugar Ray Leonard's latest retirement from boxing has once again left Marvellous Marvin Hagler longing for a fight that may never happen.

Leonard, who outpointed Hagler last month to capture the World Boxing Council middleweight title, announced on Wednesday his retirement from professional boxing for a third time. As in 1982, when Leonard quit the ring months after retina surgery, the Hagler camp made clear its disappointment in the decision.

"We all feel that the results of the April 6 bout were tainted by the present investigations of the refereeing, judging and even the medical reports," Morris Goldings, Hagler's attorney, said in Boston.

"We would have expected that Sugar Ray Leonard would want to have these matters cleared up as a true champion before he made his announcement."

Hours earlier, Leonard had harsh words for the Nevada commission, which is investigating charges of irregularities in the fight.

Even before he told reporters he was quitting the ring, Leonard said allegations of improprieties were "ludicrous."

"It was just an attempt to explain the unexplainable, something that wasn't supposed to happen," he claimed.

Leonard, responding to comments by Hagler that the fight was judged unfairly, noted that Hagler selected both the site of the fight and the judges.

As he did in 1982, Leonard on Wednesday kept his decision to retire a secret until the moment of the announcement. Hagler, who came to the affair expecting Leonard to say he wanted to meet him in the ring, later said he felt "cheated" out of a chance to face Leonard for a sizeable purse.

Leonard, saying he needed to be "motivated" to perform, said he did not want to fight Hagler or light heavyweight champion Thomas Hearns because he has already beaten both of them.

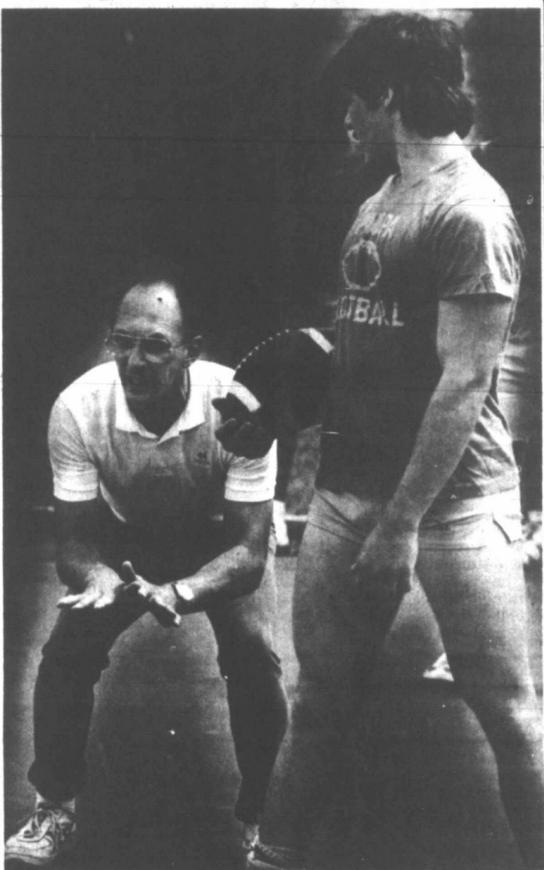

And right after making the announcement, he had an answer ready for a skeptical reporter who asked him, "Why should we believe you this time?"

"Because," Leonard said, "I told you guys I would beat Hagler and you didn't believe me. Maybe you should believe me now."

Leonard broke into professional boxing Feb. 5, 1977 with a six-round decision over Luis Vega. He went on to win 34 of 35 fights and titles in three different weight classes.

Duran was the only boxer Leonard ever fought twice.

Meet the press

Barry Slotnick, right, Bernhard Goetz's lawyer speaks to reporters after the conclusion of Wednesday's testimony in Goetz's trial for shooting a New York subway in 1984. A New York City policeman testified Wednesday that one of the youths told him the group had planned to rob Goetz.

NASA tries to kill ad using shuttle Challenger disaster to promote press freedom

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA is asking that a public service advertisement showing the Challenger explosion be withdrawn because the ad's wording implies the full story of the disaster would not have been told if there weren't a free press.

The space agency is worried its reputation may be damaged by the ad. NASA has been buffeted in the past year not only by the space shuttle tragedy but also by the forced destruction of a faulty Delta rocket and the loss of a $161 million rocket-satellite combination launched into lightning.

The copy shows the familiar picture of the Challenger fireball and carries the legend: "If the press didn't tell us, who would?"

The mere announcement of the forthcoming advertising campaign by the Advertising Council caused the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to launch a preemptive strike.

"We believe the advertisement suggests that without investigative press reporting, the public would not have learned the facts about or reason for the Challenger accident," Shirley M. Green, director of NASA public affairs, said in a letter to Robert P. Keim, president of the advertising council.

"There are examples of excellent investigative reporting connected with the Challenger tragedy. But any suggestion that the public would not have learned quickly the facts or the reasons for the accident is totally inaccurate," she said.

The ad was to have been sent out to print and broadcast media on behalf of the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi, as part of public service series that included some other well-known news events. That, too, was offensive to Mrs. Green.

"We find it inconceivable that NASA could be grouped with Ferdinand Marcos, Kurt Waldheim and Chernobyl as apparently is the case in this campaign," she wrote.

Keim said he had just come from a news conference last month at which the ad campaign was announced when he received a protest call from NASA. He has set up a meeting for next Wednesday to discuss the complaint.

"We don't want to be incorrect," he said, "but on the other hand we want to state the case, to point to a free press, to glorify the value of the free press in America. We wanted things that were well known, so they would ring a bell with people."

The ads are designed to be run free of charge by the news media.

"We wouldn't want to be in error," Keim said, "nor would we want to be underhanded, sly or devious. We don't want to take well-intentioned people to task."

The Challenger explosion on Jan. 28, 1986, claimed the lives of its seven-member crew.

The Challenger ad lists a toll free number for anyone who wants printed information on the role of a free press or to discuss any free press issue.

Convicted killer executed for abduction of teenager

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Convicted killer Anthony Charles Williams, asking for forgiveness, jumped on the Texas death row gurney with a smile on his face and was executed early today for the 1978 abduction, rape and slaying of a 13-year-old Houston girl.

"Mother, I'm sorry for causing you all the pain," he said in his final statement. "I want to thank all those who helped me. I thank you all."

No one represented the family at the execution.

Williams, 27, was 18 when he was sentenced to death for the killing of Vickie Lynn Wright. A jury took six minutes to convict him and nine minutes to decide the death penalty. He was sent to death row Nov. 8, 1978 — his 19th birthday.

Vickie Wright's mother, Beth, waited outside the prison for word that the execution took place, then said she did not believe prison officials who told her that her daughter's killer was dead.

"We've gone through hell," she said. "I don't believe he's dead. I'm going to have to have an autopsy. I want to see him in his coffin."

Mrs. Wright, accompanied by two of her daughters, said she was bitter that prison officials would not allow her in the death chamber or allow a videotape to be made of the execution.

"There's no provision for the victims," her daughter, Tina, said.

The lethal injection began at 12:12 a.m. He was pronounced dead 10 minutes later.

The execution came despite last-minute appeals filed by attorneys who attempted to halt it for a fourth time.

Six weeks ago, he won a reprieve — his third — from a federal appeals court only a few hours before he was to be put to death.

State and federal courts, including the U.S. Supreme Court, rejected requests for stays Wednesday.

Williams' final appeal alleged an injury he suffered as a child was not properly investigated by his lawyers and that he was not properly evaluated by a doctor who examined him. At his trial, defense attorneys characterized him as a slow learner who suffered difficulties since he was run over by a car.

Williams' debut album "The Way It Is" won him a Grammy this year.

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Linda Evans, star of television's "Dynasty," has bought a palatial 11,000-square-foot mansion in suburban Lake-wood.

The price of the early 20th-century Carman Villa, built for the pioneering Joseph Carman family, has not been made public, but in 1984 it was listed for $1.2 million, according to the Pierce County Assessor's Office.

House OKs criminal check for day-care operators

AUSTIN (AP) — The House has amended a bill to remove annual inspections for home day care centers, but voted to require state officials to check the criminal background of anyone who wants to care for more than three children in a home.

The change was made Wednesday as the House voted preliminary approval to a Department of Human Services bill that now faces a final vote that would send it back to the Senate for review of House amendments.

As it came out of House committee, the bill required DHS to annually inspect every registered family home that housed more than three children. There currently are no inspections.

To cover the cost of inspections, the annual registration fee would have been raised to $100 from the current $35. There are about 22,000 registered family homes in Texas.

But a floor amendment added Wednesday removed the required inspection, put in the criminal background checks and brought the annual fee back to $35.

House members got into a heated argument about a provision requiring DHS to collect statistics about teen-age pregnancies. Rep. John Smithee, R-Amarillo, said other agencies gather that information.

"We're administering to death in this state," he said of the statistical study. "It's not going to save any lives. It's not going to save any dollars."

But the House voted 79-64 against Smithee's motion to drop the study.

"The only thing it does is collect information," Rep. Lena Guerro, D-Austin, told the House.

"What are you scared of? Why don't you want to know?"

Also Wednesday, the House approved Senate changes to a Texas Youth Commission bill that is part of an anti-crime package. The Senate amended the House bill to allow sentences of up to 30 years for violent offenders as young as 10.

Rep. Granoff, D-Dallas, opposed that provision.

"It's a crowd-pleaser and it's lousy legislation," he said after the House voted 43-97 against his motion to reject the Senate version.

House members Wednesday voted to concur in Senate amendments on a bill that allows judges to order repeat DWI offenders to install interlock systems that would prevent them from starting their cars if they are drunk. The bill now goes to Gov. Bill Clements.

Names in the News

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Clint Eastwood, the mayor of Carmel who straddles a horse in his tough-guy Westerns, has taken to straddling political fences.

Eastwood told a news conference Wednesday that the state must give more money to counties for courts, law enforcement and other services.

The County Supervisors Association of California called the news conference to announce opposition to Gov. George Deukmejian's proposal to grant a rebate of $700 million to taxpayers.

Eastwood said he also supported the rebate and that this was "a little bit of a contradiction, maybe." He suggested that one compromise to save money might be consolidation of small school districts and that "I'd like to see some sort of a middle ground."

"Though I support the rebate program of the governor's, that's after we take care of the counties," Eastwood told a rally of about 200 county officials and others on the Capitol steps.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Singer-songwriter Bruce Hornsby, who has a plug for the governor of his home state on an album cover, says his Virginia upbringing helped him make music.

Gov. Gerald L. Baliles welcomed the Williamsburg native on Wednesday, ushered him into his office and received as a gift a copy of Hornsby's album in circulation in England. Hornsby is pictured with his band, the Range, on the cover, and he is wearing a "Baliles for Governor" cap.

Hornsby, who will embark on a tour of Europe next week, said he got two Baliles hats after his brother, a University of Virginia law school student, worked in Baliles' 1985 campaign. He said his songs are "about our experiences from growing up, and this is where we grew up. So we write about it."

Hornsby's debut album "The Way It Is" won him a Grammy this year.
