No layoffs expected at Coronado

From Staff and Wire Reports

Approximately 5,000 HCA Coronado Hospital brochures are waiting at a print shop to see what kind of cover they'll get. "We want to see what our new name is," said hospital Public Relations Director Linda Haynes.

Haynes and other hospital employees are waiting to see the effects of Hospital Corporation of America's decision to sell Coronado Hospital in Pampa and 103 other small hospitals to a private employee-owned company.

HCA Chairman Thomas F. Frist Jr. said HCA plans to sell 104 of its smaller hospitals to the private company to allow the firm to consolidate its larger acute care hospitals in southeastern metropolitan areas.

The Nashville-based hospital management firm plans to sell 19 hospitals in Texas, including Coronado, which HCA built in Pampa in 1981.

Company officials have said HCA's $1.9 billion reorganization plan will not mean a change in services.

Coronado Hospital Administrator Norman Knox said today that he does not expect any immediate changes in policy, procedure or personnel because of the sale. Nor does Knox anticipate any layoffs, despite an HCA executive's prediction that the changeover will result in employee reductions in "non-patient" areas.

An HCA division manager has said the Pampa hospital's staffing "was the most efficient of our division," Knox said.

"The top managers with the new firm are currently top managers with HCA," Knox said. "We'll still have the same philosophy and goals in the new company. We'll still be physician-oriented and patient-oriented."

Knox told hospital department heads about the sale Monday afternoon. They, in turn, were expected to pass the information to their employees.

"They all are asking what's going to happen," Knox said. "But the department managers' attitude has been positive."

Haynes said the hospital currently employs 225 people, making it the fifth-largest employer in Pampa, according to the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.

Falling occupancy rates for hospitals and changes in Medicare and private insurance plans have brought a decline in earnings for HCA and other hospital corporations. HCA reported its first-ever quarterly loss in December, but the rate of decline has generally been slowing.

HCA spokeswoman Meta Gaertner said the company's decision to sell the smaller hospitals will "allow the company to operate more efficiently."

District Clerk Vickie Walls sorts through piles of files in crowded office.

County seat split at seam

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

Inside the records vault at the Gray County district clerk's office, cardboard boxes stuffed with valuable court papers are piled high, one on top of the other. There's not enough room for even one more file cabinet.

Across the way, in the district adult probation office, four full-time officers handle 450 probationers, 50 more than the 100-per-officer caseload mandated by state law. There's not enough space for one more officer.

Sheriff Rufe Jordan's aging jail is operating with 12 variances from the Texas Jail Standards Commission. The county jail is smaller than facilities in the much-smaller communities of Perryton and Panhandle.

The district attorney and county extension agent don't even share the same building with the county officers because there's no office space available.

After nearly 60 years, Gray County may have finally outgrown its courthouse.

Monday, Gray County commissioners formally noted that something must be done about the cramped quarters by voting to "start the ball rolling" toward either revamping the old courthouse or building a new one.

The decision came on the heels of a cry for help from Chief Adult Probation Officer Jeane Roper, who said her office doesn't contain enough space for two more officers that the state says she has to hire.

Roper's plea was the second in as many months from a courthouse official claiming to be running out of room.

In April, District Clerk Vickie Walls asked for permission to begin microfilming district court records to save rapidly vanishing space in her third-floor office. No formal action has been taken on Walls' request, but construction of a vault to hold more records in the 58-year-old courthouse's basement has begun.

Special session called for single issue — tort reform

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — The Texas Legislature ended its regular session without a budget or action on several other issues, but Gov. Bill Clements early today called an immediate special session to deal with one — civil justice reform.

When the midnight Monday deadline arrived, lawmakers ended their 140-day session without passing a budget for the first time in 26 years.

A Senate filibuster, meanwhile, killed a bill that would reform the state's civil justice system.

"After much deliberation and with the solid recommendations of the lieutenant governor and the speaker, we will meet again in the morning at 11 o'clock to consider tort reform. So there you are," Clements announced about 1:20 a.m.

Clements said legislative leaders had told him the tort reform issue could be settled in one or two days, and that is all this special session will deal with.

However, still facing a 1988-89 deficit projected at $5.8 billion, lawmakers also will meet in special session on June 22 for more budget work, the governor said.

"Everybody has to realize that the fun and games situation is over. We're going to get down to serious business now. We're going to focus sharply on what the problem is with the budget process," Clements said.

The House and Senate adjourned Monday night after their 140-day session.

But for the first time since 1961, the final gavel fell without passage of a spending plan for state government.

"Nobody likes to end a legislative session with unfinished business, particularly when the unfinished business is as important as the state budget. It is a disappointing failure. No one can whitewash that," said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

House Speaker Gib Lewis was more upbeat.

"I don't consider this session a failure at all," Lewis said. "If you go back and really just try to find something besides the budget to discuss, you'll find that this has been one of the most productive" sessions, he said.

Lewis predicted that the special session would OK a balanced budget.

"I think we'll do what has to be done. Unfortunately, we were not able to do it in the regular session," he said.

Clements, whose threat to veto any tax increase greater than $2.9 billion helped deadlock budget action, said he thinks the special session will agree to a spending and tax package he can approve.

County pays disputed fee

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

For the second time in two months, Gray County commissioners bit the bullet Monday and paid a Pampa lawyer his requested, court-appointed fee. But this time the vote was a tad closer.

Commissioners voted 3-2 to pay John Warner $2,200 in fees for representing burglar Kevin Kirkham during a January probation revocation hearing, after meeting with the attorney for about 30 minutes.

County Judge Carl Kennedy and Commissioner Gerald Wright voted against paying Warner.

"There's no way that I believe he spent 53% billable hours on this case," Kennedy said, referring to a six-page itemized statement submitted by Warner.

The fee is the second ultimately awarded Warner. Commissioners previously made a legal challenge to the court-appointed fees. In April, acting on a ruling from the 7th Court of Appeals in Amarillo, commissioners paid Warner about $20,000 for representing convicted killer Richard Schreckhise in a 1984 murder trial. Warner had filed a lawsuit against the county, seeking to collect the fee.

Monday, commissioners paid him an additional $2,600 in interest on the murder case, also ordered by the appeals court. Warner said the interest is justified "after waiting three years" to be paid. He added he may also bill the county for court costs.

Warner told commissioners the Kirkham bill also is justified, considering the four charges against his client and the amount of time he spent trying to prove Kirkham didn't violate probation.

He quoted from the appeals court's original decision against the county, saying time spent in court is but the "tip of the iceberg" when considering an attorney's work. He said state laws have rightfully left decisions on court-appointed fees up to the district judge "who sees the effort."

In Kirkham's cases, two of which were eventually dismissed, Warner said he interviewed numerous witnesses in an effort to corroborate alibis for his client. He said the hearing was far from routine.

"I am very rarely appointed on a routine case," Warner said. "Most of the cases I'm appointed to are the woolly-boogers."

But Kennedy argued that most probation revocation hearings cost the county about $250. He questioned the amount of time spent on the case for one afternoon in court.

Kennedy has also pointed out that Warner also said the commissioners' decision may be the only response to a problem he says is plaguing counties across Texas — increasing demands on counties by state government.

"The state has said, 'You will do these things,' but they don't give us the money to do it. As county government, we're sitting here in old buildings and we're already overcrowded," Kennedy said. "I don't know what the answer is. One answer is the time has come for this court to consider a new facility."

But, although commissioners are sitting atop a $4.5 million surplus fund that has long been earmarked for courthouse renovation and jail reconstruction, Kennedy warns that taxpayers may not take kindly to construction of a new courthouse or even major changes to the old one.

"When we do, all of y'all be ready to go back to farming or whatever else, because we'll not be re-elected," Kennedy told commissioners Monday.

In the adult probation office's case, the state has ordered two more officers to be hired or state funding will be cut off, Roper said in an April letter to commissioners. She said most of the increased demand is due to efforts to reduce state prison overcrowding, placing the burden on county probation offices.

"To be in compliance, and to be able to receive the state funding, we cannot carry more than 100 probationers per officer," Roper said.

The problem, she said, is not enough space to put two more caseworkers, even after remodeling of the third-floor office last September. Putting two or more officers in a room won't work, Roper said, because many probationers need to talk to officers privately or further problems with the law can result.

"To put two officers in the same office — no one can work well," she explained.

Roper proposed moving her office to the south wing of the courthouse's fourth floor — thereby making room for the also-crowded district clerk's office to expand.

But commissioners said they are concerned about the county's liability for a narrow staircase leading to the fourth floor. And the courthouse elevator, with access gained only through the sheriff's office, opens into the county jail holding area on the fourth floor, making it virtually useless for getting to any offices located on the top story.

Judge Kennedy said he would only consider allowing the move if district judges indemnify the county against all claims that might arise from the narrow staircase.

"Who has the liability of 450 people going up and down those stairs every month?" Kennedy asked. "It's been my attitude that we need to minimize the amount of traffic up and down those steps out of sheer fear that somebody might get hurt."

Another option is renting an office outside the courthouse, but commissioners say they have no extra money in this year's budget for renting additional space.

Kennedy noted that "right next door" to adult probation is the "essentially private" court reporter's office, used mostly by 223rd District court reporter Bob question where the lack of cooperation is. It's in the Senate."

Hobby, who presides over the Senate, said this budget failure wasn't the first time lawmakers were unable to deal with the financial crisis that hit the state in 1986, when oil prices fell from near $30 a barrel to less than $10.

Two special sessions last summer also failed to enact a permanent solution to the severe loss of tax revenue caused by the decline in oil prices and the economic problems that triggered, Hobby said.

"It once again failed to address the budget issues, which is unfortunate," Hobby said. "It should have only taken one special session a year ago."

But he said taxpayers shouldn't be angry with lawmakers.

"It's a very difficult situation with the economy in transition. The experience we're having is not different from that of other states that have had the same problem," he said.

Volcker, appearing with Reagan and Greenspan at a White House briefing, said that he was relinquishing the post voluntarily. "I had no feeling I was being pushed," he said.

Greenspan was chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers from 1974-1977 during the Ford administration. He is now a New York economic consultant.

Greenspan's appointment came on the eve of Reagan's departure for next week's seven-nation economic summit in Venice.

Analysts had suggested that Reagan wanted to make the announcement in advance of the summit, so that the post would not become a summit issue.

"Filling Paul Volcker's shoes will be a major challenge," said Greenspan, 61.

Volcker, 59, the cigar-smoking, six-foot-seven Fed chairman who had won wide respect from leaders around the world, will serve as chairman until his term expires in August.

Baker, and occasionally shared by 31st District reporter Larry Porton.

"But we don't talk about utilizing any of his space, because that's the court reporter's office," Kennedy said.

District Clerk Walls' problem is not so much one of people as it is of paper that has been accumulating since Gray County was established in 1902. Walls is simply running out of room for the district court records, some of which must be saved forever.

"We'll have to find either an outside storage area, or another room in the courthouse," Walls said in a recent interview. "All our file cabinets are full, and we have nowhere else to go."

Two Texas State Library officials recently visited the district clerk's office, and recommended microfilming as a partial solution to the space problem. Michael Holland, assistant director of field operations for the state library, said all district court records in Gray County could fit on about 150 rolls of microfilm.

Holland said the process would cost the county between $20,000 and $30,000, mostly for equipment necessary to do the job.

Currently, Walls has no place to set up microfilming equipment. She has suggested expanding her office into the county law library, directly to the west, and moving the library to the fourth floor.

Kennedy said he'd like to see the library moved upstairs because it is seldom used, but, he said, previous attempts to move it have met with outcries from Gray County jurists.

The library is yet another state requirement for counties, Kennedy said.

Many big items failed, including budget package

AUSTIN (AP) — When it ended, the 70th Legislature couldn't, wouldn't and didn't do quite a lot — including pass the one bill that must be enacted to keep government's doors open.

The budget issue dominated the session from its opening gavel on Jan. 13 until final adjournment Monday night.

But despite all the attention and hundreds of hours of work, the House, Senate and governor failed to agree on a 1988-89 spending blueprint.

So lawmakers will return to Austin for a special session on June 22 to try, try again to write a budget for the fiscal year beginning Sept. 1.

Gov. Bill Clements proposed spending a total of $36.9 billion, which would have required $2.9 billion in new taxes. After campaigning on a "no-new-taxes" theme, he agreed to the extra $2.9 billion, but not a penny more.

His threat to veto higher taxes helped stop the budget process in its tracks as the House and Senate approved bigger spending bills but not enough taxes to pay for them.

While tax-and-spend issues topped the Legislature's list of failures, several other big issues fell by the wayside as well. Among them:

Lottery

When the session convened, many lawmakers said the financial crunch meant Texas finally might join the more than two dozen states that run lottery games. Texas needed money, and opinion polls showed 70 percent of the public in favor.

Don't place those bets. A proposed constitutional amendment to create a lottery couldn't find a winning number in the House.

Appointed Judges

Chief Justice John L. Hill of the Texas Supreme Court came to lawmakers early in the session with a plan he said would improve the quality of justice. Hill urged passage of legislation to have state judges appointed to the bench rather than elected.

Lawmakers decided that idea was out of order, and the bill never got out of committee.

Texaco-Pennzoil

In a high-profile assault that saw dozens of lobbyists signing on with the two principals, a bill was introduced to help Texaco Inc. with its legal dilemma.

Under state law, Texaco was required to post an $11 billion bond to appeal the loss of its legal battle with Pennzoil. Texaco backed a bill that would have put a $1 billion lid on such bonds, but the bill ran out of gas. Instead, lawmakers passed a resolution to study the question.

Handguns

National Rifle Association members and others urged lawmakers to pass a law to enable Texans to be licensed to carry handguns. Lawmakers shot that plan down.

Budget Authority

The governor lost, too. Clements had demanded "budget execution authority" — legislative talk for increased power for a governor to control state agency spending. He didn't get it but has the last laugh: He says he will place the item on the special session agenda.

No-Pass, No-Play

Coaches across Texas said more leniency was a good idea, and the Senate approved a bill that would allow the Texas Education Agency to experiment with an easier no-pass, no-play rule.

Under current law, students are barred from participating in extra-curricular activities for six weeks if they fail any subject. The bill would have allowed a pilot program for a three-week suspension instead at some schools.

But the House Education Committee flunked the idea, and the Senate passed bill never got that panel's approval.

Motorcycle Helmets

With nearly two dozen motorcycle riders looking on from the spectator gallery, House rules killed off a bill that would have required them to wear helmetts when riding.

Alimony

The House rules massacre Friday night also claimed legislation to allow Texas to join the other 49 states in providing "limited alimony" in divorces.

Second Mortgages

When the session began, it seemed nearly everybody was talking about legislation to enable Texans to take out a second mortgage on their homes. That's about as far as it got.

Annual Sessions

The House killed off one other idea. This one proposed changing the Texas Constitution to have the Legislature meet in regular session every year — instead of 140 days in odd-numbered years.

Said Sen. Cyndi Krier, R-San Antonio: "I haven't had a lot of mail from my constituents asking for more government lately."

They did pass some

AUSTIN (AP) — While many major problems of January are still problems in June, lawmakers made progress on several important issues.

The Legislature voted to ban late-term abortions, take beer cans out of drivers' hands, partially deregulate the trucking industry, crack down on campus hazing, allow quarantining of some AIDS patients and make it tougher for government officials to do the public's business in private.

The successful bill list grew Monday when the House and Senate approved a so-called "dram-shop" measure, under which bars can be held responsible for serving drinks to an intoxicated patron who then causes a wreck.

"We've had a good session. It's been a very productive session," Speaker Gib Lewis said.

He admitted to a few major disappointments, such as the budget impasse that has forced a special session that begins June 22.

The abortion bill was a significant, if less than total, victory for the pro-life forces. The bill bars physicians from aborting a fetus that could live outside the womb, with or without life-sustaining technology.

The bill would have made it a crime to perform late-term abortions, but the negotiating process resulted in a bill that makes it an offense punishable by loss of medical license or other Board of Medical Examiners sanction.

Pro-choice forces fear the bill will lead to more stringent anti-abortion legislation in coming years.

Gov. Bill Clements has said he would sign the abortion bill, which would give Texas its first abortion regulations since the U.S. Supreme Court's 1973 ruling that struck down state abortion restrictions.

Also headed to Clements' desk is a bill to permit quarantining of AIDS patients who pose a public health threat, although lawmakers at the last minute stripped that bill of a requirement for a pre-marital AIDS test.

Clements already has signed the bill that bars drivers from drinking alcoholic beverages while behind the wheel. The legislative battle centered on whether Texans have a right to drink — as long as they are not drunk — while driving.

The trucking deregulation measure, which ended years of squabbling, was a compromise bill that won approval with little floor debate. The bill, which is awaiting action by Clements, provides pricing leeway for some haulers. Under the current system, the Texas Railroad Commission tightly controls those rates.

Deregulation backers have argued for years that commission regulation has been anti-competitive and prevented shippers from getting better deals.

Deregulation also was sought by AT&T on intrastate long-distance phone calls. Instead, the Legislature approved a bill to make their case to the Public Utility Commission.

The anti-hazing bill passed in the wake of the death of a University of Texas freshman who died of an alcohol overdose after consuming a fatal amount of rum during a fraternity activity. Grand jurors who reviewed the case issued a scathing report about the incident, but said no state law was broken.

The bill that is on Clements' desk makes it easier to bring criminal prosecutions for hazing offenses.

The open meetings bill that won approval is viewed as a victory for reporters. For many years, news organizations have complained that public bodies — particularly on the local level — abuse the executive session portion of the Texas Open Meetings Act.

That act requires government boards to meet in public, but grants exceptions for consideration of personnel matters, land transactions and litigation. Reporters have long suspected that some officials cannot resist the opportunity to talk about other matters behind closed doors.

The revisions approved this year, and awaiting action by Clements, require officials to keep a tape recording or certified agenda of what is discussed in closed-door sessions. That would allow a judge to later decide if the Open Meetings Act was violated.

Dam closing is delayed by high water, but Wichita Falls still to get its falls

By The Associated Press

Swollen creeks postponed the start of filling what will be one of Texas' largest lakes, but floods likely will have receded later this week in time for Wichita Falls to get back its namesake, officials said.

Construction of a coffer dam to begin impounding water at Richland-Chambers Reservoir, a 44,000-acre lake in Navarro and Freestone counties, has been delayed because the creeks that will feed it are too full, said Mike Williams, project supervisor for Tarrant County Water Control and Improvement District No. 1.

And although the bottom of a manmade waterfall was under water from a flooded river Monday, Wichita Falls officials are counting on the waters receding by Friday. That's when they will inaugurate the mechanized falls at the beginning of a three-day community celebration.

Willard Scott, weatherman on NBC-TV's "Today" show, was scheduled to broadcast from the site of the falls this morning.

The Tarrant County water district, which is building the lake about 50 miles southeast of Dallas as a raw water supply for customers in the Fort Worth area, originally planned to close the reservoir's nine-mile long earthen dam last summer. Problems with land and mineral acquisition in the lake bed delayed it for a year.

Richland and Chambers creeks are full to their banks after heavy rains on their watersheds over the past week.

Lawmakers OK AIDS legislation

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislation to allow quarantining of AIDS patients who pose a public health threat is on its way to Gov. Bill Clements for his signature or veto.

The House and Senate approved the bill shortly before adjourning their regular session Monday. But the compromise adopted stripped the bill of an earlier proposal to require couples to take an AIDS test to get a marriage license.

The bill does require a premarital AIDS test if the statewide overall positive rate on AIDS tests hits 0.87 percent. It is now 0.01 percent.

The House, in a 108-37 vote, wrapped up legislative work on the bill less than three hours before the regular session was to adjourn at midnight. Senators approved the bill, which now goes to Gov. Bill Clements, earlier in the day.

Miami scholastic awards announced

MIAMI — Amy Goodman, Stephanie Byrum, Kristi Klaverweiden and Brett Byrum took top honors in the recent Miami scholastic awards.

Goodman, now a senior, received honors in chemistry, geometry, American history and English III. Her little sister, Lori, now a freshman, got her share of junior high honors for eighth grade American history and English.

Stephanie Byrum, now a junior, was honored for typing II, sophomore English and Spanish I. Her brother Brett, who graduated Friday, received class honors for computer programming, trigonometry, accounting and English IV.

Klaverweiden, another graduate, received class honors for computer programming and world history.

Other students receiving class honors were Gerri Anderson, business; Mindee Flowers, band; Clint Wheeler, physics; Mary Huff, biology; Robin

Rankin, eighth grade art; Allen Cook, senior high art; Terri Tolbert, government-economics, computer programming and pre-calculus; Eric Gillis, Algebra II; Kjersti Morris, algebra; Shelly Hale, freshman English, and Kim Locke, Spanish II.

Monday's votes came on a House-Senate conference committee version of the House bill. The conferees had removed the House-approved amendment that required AIDS testing for people getting married or going to prison.

The conference committee version allows — but does not require — the Texas Department of Corrections to test new inmates.

Rep. Jim McWilliams, D-Hallsville and author of the mandatory testing amendment, urged the House to reject the conference committee version.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Property owners should have control

Back in medieval times, a king or warlord arbitrarily gave huge grants of property to lords, dukes and other favorites. Along with the property came the ability to control the peasants, who rented it at the sufferance of the lord of the manor, paying a portion of the proceeds of the activities (mostly farming) and able to use it only as the lord dictated. The system made for little economic growth or development, and gave most people few options.

America escaped such a confining system partly because in the early years there was land aplenty out west, and partly because our institutions — post-feudal from the outset — respected property rights and other freedoms guaranteed in the Bill of Rights and other founding documents. This country thus became a magnet for immigrants, a place where almost anybody with grit, determination, and ambition had a chance in life. The growth that resulted from respecting individual rights made a remarkable economic success story, perhaps the most remarkable in human history.

Lately, however, city governments across the land — probably not fully conscious they are doing it — are abandoning the American model and reverting to the medieval European model. City councils and planning commissions act as if they in fact have deeded to all property within city limits, and the poor saps who think they own it — and pay mortgages and property taxes — are merely serfs with no more than squatters' rights.

When this attitude is translated into laws, it is a formula for economic stagnation, manipulation by vested interests, destruction of liberty, corruption, political favoritism — in short dealing a thousand cuts to the American dream.

Those who look kindly on stopping new businesses or bureaucratic red tape created by planning and zoning boards speak in terms of the need for long-range planning and coordination.

The real issue, however, is not whether there will be planning, but who will do it — those who have undertaken the risks, commitments and responsibility of property ownership, or those who haven't. The other key issue is whether development will be coordinated by the blunt and clumsy instrument of government dictation, or the subtle, responsive, flexible and dynamic interplay of supply and demand, ambition, and dreams made reality through a voluntary marketplace.

This country became an economic powerhouse and the envy of the world by welcoming the diversity and dynamism that result when people are allowed to make their own decisions about their own lives and property. Are we ready to abandon that approach, to tell those who haven't yet grabbed a piece of the American dream that it's too late, that they had the misfortune to try it while the society was on the decline, ruled by fear of change and the urge to control other people's property?

That's food for thought the next time the Planning and Zoning Commission or City Commission tells an owner what he can or can't do with his property.

Defining Boland confusion

WASHINGTON — During this lull in the Iran-Contra hearings it may be useful to take a look at laws that may have applied to the principal characters in the unfolding story. The legal situation has all the crystal clarity of a can of vegetable soup.

We have heard much talk recently about "the Boland amendment." It is widely and recklessly said that just about everyone from the president down to a lissome secretary in the National Security Council violated the Boland amendment. Alabama's Sen. Howell Heflin, in an uncharacteristically thoughtless remark, was ready to vote indictments. Hawaii's Daniel Inouye, chairman of the Senate's investigative panel, began the hearings by impliedly convicting the whole countryside of lawless conduct under the Boland amendment. Let us recur, as the venerable George Mason advised us so long ago, to fundamental principles.

One fundamental principle is that before a person may be convicted of a crime, he must be proved guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. Guilty of what? Guilty of violating the letter — not "the spirit," but the letter — of a criminal statute. And what does the law teach us of criminal statutes? It is elementary that such statutes must be strictly construed. A criminal statute, to pass judicial muster, must spell out precisely the conduct that is forbidden; the law must define the class of persons to whom it applies; if the law is of temporary or limited duration, the period of applicability must be defined. And so forth. This is the stuff of first-year criminal law.

Now what about "the Boland amendment"? The first relevant fact is that in the period under review, there was not just one Boland amendment. There were five Boland amendments. All of them were the handiwork, if so they may be described, of 75-year-old Edward P. Boland of Massachusetts, an inconspicuous liberal Democrat who has been around so long that he ranks sixth in seniority in the House.

Boland I became effective on Dec. 21, 1982, as Section 793 of Public Law 97-377. It is important as part of the legislative history. It began in this fashion: "None of the funds provided in this act" may be used by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) or the Department of Defense (DOD) for furnishing military equipment, military training or military advice to the Contras and Nicaragua. Such assistance was to be prohibited only if its purpose was to overthrow the government of Nicaragua or to provoke a military exchange between Nicaragua and Honduras.

Boland II, which seems to be regarded as "the" Boland amendment, became law on Oct. 12, 1984, as Section 8066 of Public Law 98-473. It began in this fashion: "During fiscal year 1985 (ending Sept. 30, 1985) no funds available to the CIA, the DOD, or any other agency or entity of the United States "involved in intelligence activities" may be obligated or expended "for the purpose or which would have the effect of supporting directly or indirectly military or paramilitary operations in Nicaragua by any nation, group, organization, movement or individual." Boland II continued with a long section instructing the president on how to achieve peace in Central America by reaching an agreement based on the Contadora Document — a document never defined.

Boland III became law on Aug. 15, 1985, as Section 106(a) of Public Law 99-88. It dealt with the handling of a congressional resolution if the Contadora negotiations failed.

Boland IV became law on Dec. 11, 1985, as Section 105 of Public Law 99-169. It tracked Boland II in dealing with funds available to the CIA, the DOD or any other agency "involved in intelligence activities." The act named 10 such agencies. Neither the National Security Council nor the White House was included on the list.

Boland V became law on Oct. 27, 1986, as Section 106 of Public Law 99-569. Its terms expire Sept. 30. It prohibits the 10 designated agencies from obligating or expending public funds to provide "material or other assistance to the Nicaraguan democratic resistance."

Notice that the "directly or indirectly" language appears only in Boland II. Notice that the several acts deal only with the spending of public funds; the laws have nothing to do with soliciting or accepting private funds. Notice that as a matter of criminal law, "involved in intelligence activities" has all the statutory charm of an egg that has been squashed in its carton. Now, having noticed all these things, let's talk sensibly about sending someone to prison.

Military shares experience

We were watching live television coverage of the memorial service for the men killed on the USS Stark.

President Reagan got up and explained to the friends and relatives of the 37 who died what they were doing in the Persian Gulf in the first place.

The president said, in essence, if the United States didn't keep a military presence in the area then our enemies might take it over and cut off the oil that is precious to the economies of the free world.

That might be true, but if one of mine had been killed aboard the Stark that wouldn't have given me much consolation. The cameras moved across the faces in the audience. An older couple who had lost a son held each other against the grief. A young widow fanned the heat away from the child in her lap. They had lost a husband and a father.

The person watching the television with me said, "I can't stand watching things like this.

They always make me cry."

She walked into the kitchen. We've known each other for less than a year. She laughs at my jokes and has a spirit of forgiveness about her.

She was a military brat. Her father married a German lady, and they moved back to the States. She was born on an army base.

Later, her father flew helicopters in Vietnam. Not many helicopter pilots came back alive, but her father was lucky. He came back.

After returning home, when she was still a small child, her father was instructing other pilots, and there was an accident. He was killed.

She had come back from the kitchen and had sat down in front of the television again. President and Mrs. Reagan were on the screen consoling the friends and relatives who had come to the service.

"I remember," she said, "when the man came to our house to tell my mother about my father. I kicked him in the shins because he made my mother cry. I'd never seen her cry before."

And then she went back into another room and brought out something for me to see. It was a picture of her father.

He was a handsome man in his uniform. She said had he lived he would have been 52.

I could sense she had a very good notion of how those at the memorial service felt. Certainly, she had a better notion than most of us.

Those who have grieved in anguish for those who have fallen on a million battlefields forever are entwined.

When they played taps for the dead of the Stark, I couldn't tell if there were tears in her eyes, but she watched in intense silence listening to the sobs and screams, wishing, I think, she was there to comfort as only one who has suffered the same loss can comfort.

The Iraqi government says the firing on the Stark was a mistake.

It certainly was, and those responsible ought to be made to pay dearly for it.

Population fuse lit for smaller explosion

By Ben Wattenberg

Are world population trends heading up or down? The answer is complex. The Population Reference Bureau of Washington, D.C., recently issued its annual "World Population Data Sheet." It's a remarkable publication: a single poster-size sheet, cramming in data for 173 nations.

The news generated from this year's PRB sheet answers the question about population trends with the word "up." Thus: Consider some newspaper headlines reporting on the Data Sheet. "World Population Growth Accelerating," said the New Orleans Times-Picayune. "World Birth Rate Said to Be Rising," said the Washington Post.

The genesis of such headlines was based on the stress placed by PRB on the fact that the "crude birth rate" or CBR had gone up from 27 births per 1,000 population in 1985 to 28 in 1986.

That happened, says PRB, because of new trends apparent in the world's most populous nation, China. One reason the Chinese trends have changed is because birth limitation policies have been either relaxed or violated. Apparently fewer families are adhering to the government's draconian one-child-only rule. Link that with other factors — that China is so large, that so many Chinese were born during their baby boom in the mid-1960s, that these Chinese are now reaching childbearing age — and one can see why the CBR is up in China, and why it is up slightly in the world.

True enough. But all this obscures another trend, probably more important, observable on the same PRB sheet. It yields a different answer to our question about population trends: "down."

The PRB sheet notes that in the less-developed nations exclusive of China the "Total Fertility Rate," or TFR, fell from 5.0 children per woman to 4.8 from 1985 to 1986. (The TFR can be roughly described as "completed family size.") And even counting China, the TFR in the less-developed countries stayed flat at 4.2 children per woman.

The PRB Data Sheet shows some stark year-to-year changes in TFR rates in some big Third World countries: a drop from 4.5 to 4.3 in India, from 4.4 to 4.2 in Indonesia, from 4.4 to 4.0 in Mexico, and a stunning drop from 4.1 to 3.5 in Brazil.

Moreover, with very little hoopla, Third World TFRs have been shrinking rapidly for about two decades. We always hear talk about explosive birth rates in the less-developed world. They are high — but much lower than they used to be. U.N. data shows that in the 1965-70 time frame, the TFR in less-developed countries was 6.0 children per woman.

If you play the U.N. projections out, the world will be growing at ever-slower rates, moving from about 5 billion people alive today to about 10 billion people by the middle of the next century. Then growth stops and population may actually start shrinking, on a global basis, just as it is shrinking in some European countries now. And the PRB Data Sheet will report that the population explosion — long dreaded — will be over.

House wants Reagan to disclose Persian Gulf plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan would have to provide Congress with new details about U.S. plans in the Persian Gulf under terms of a bill which House Speaker Jim Wright says is likely to be approved by the House.

Meanwhile, President Reagan has said he will bring up the question of allied help in protecting oil tankers in the gulf when he meets with other Western leaders at next week's summit in Venice.

In a speech Monday spelling out his goals for the meeting, Reagan said, "We will be discussing the common security interests shared by Western democracies in the Persian Gulf."

He noted the deaths aboard the USS Stark when it was hit by an Iraqi missile and said the sailors died "while guarding a chokepoint of freedom, deterring aggression and reaffirming America's willingness to protect its vital interests."

Yet, the American people are aware that it is not our interests alone that are being protected."

Wright, D-Texas, said of the Persian Gulf legislation, "I think it will pass and pass by a substantial bipartisan vote."

In an interview, he noted that the measure is backed by leaders of both parties. It is co-sponsored by Wright and Republican leader Bob Michel, R-Ill.

If it passes the House, the bill will go to the Senate, also controlled by Democrats, where a vote is likely later in the week. Passage in that chamber is also expected since Senate Democratic and Republican leaders back the bill.

Reagan's aides have said he will sign the bill, which was worked out to satisfy congressional complaints last week that Reagan had not adequately consulted with Capitol Hill about his plans for the gulf.

Legislators were worried about

Reagan's plan to put U.S. flags and captains on Kuwaiti tankers, bringing the ships under the protection of the United States. Iraq and Iran have been fighting a long, bloody war. Kuwait is a strong ally of Iraq.

The congressional fears rose in the wake of the May 17 Iraqi missile attack on the Navy frigate Stark, which killed 37 American seamen.

"This is not putting the House on record for or against the president's policy," said Wright. "It puts the Congress on record as needing more information. I want to see what the report says before I can say how I feel."

The House bill would require the White House to send Congress a report within seven days after Reagan signs the law.

The report, which would include both classified and unclassified portions, would require an assessment of the military threat to U.S. forces and details of the administration's effort to enlist U.S. allies in the effort to protect gulf shipping.

It would also provide details about the "rules of engagement," the military term covering situations under which the Navy ships could use their weapons. The Stark didn't fire back when it was attacked.

In other developments Monday regarding U.S. policy in the Persian Gulf: ■ Former President Jimmy Carter said the administration moves are a clear signal that America is siding with Iraq and they raise the chance of drawing the United States into the war.

"After our ridiculous sale of arms to Iran and the worldwide uproar because of that embarrassing mistake, I think we have tended to shift now toward Iraq," Carter said in an interview in a Washington hotel.

■ The son of the late Shah of Iran warned that if the United States is drawn into the Iran-Iraq conflict, it would inspire Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, adding to the "fanatic's war dance and liturgy." Reza Pahlavi, 26, at a luncheon meeting in Washington, asked the United States and the Soviet Union both to apply pressure on Iran to end the conflict.

■ U.S. Navy officials said they sent a guided-missile cruiser to escort a repair ship into the Persian Gulf to work on the Stark because 250 officers and sailors on the roughly 1,300-member crew are women. "It was a precaution and that's why we did it, because of the female complement," one official said Monday, requesting anonymity. The destroyer tender Acadia was escorted to Bahrain by the cruiser Fox, now the largest U.S. warship in the gulf.

Heat fells scores of students, sends thousands to beaches

By The Associated Press

A storm front packing baseball-size hail and 81-mph winds spanned the Midwest today as it headed east with relief from a 5-day-old Northeast heat wave that sparked a run on air conditioners, closed schools and felled scores of students.

Temperatures on the East Coast, except New England and Florida, were expected to hit the 90s today after hitting record highs Monday. By contrast, Elko, Nev., had a record-tying low of 30 degrees, Klamath Falls, Ore., dipped to a record 27 and frost was possible in southern Idaho today.

Newark, N.J., tied its mark for the date of 94 degrees, as did Baltimore, where it was 93 degrees, and Portland, Maine, 87. The 84-degree reading in Marquette, Mich., surpassed the 1963 mark by 2 degrees.

The Northeast can expect relief from the heat by Thursday or Friday, said Scott Tansey of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

On Monday, up to 70 students were overcome by heat during and after a concert at Paramus High School north of Newark, N.J., police said. School officials put the number at 40.

"Some kids became hysterical," said Vice Principal Richard Zanella.

Some of the students, including members of a Spotsylvania, Va., band, were treated at hospitals for heat prostration, hyperventilation and dizziness; others were given cold towels and told to lie down.

Tuckerton (N.J.) Elementary School, sent all 300 pupils home at 1 p.m. because temperatures in some rooms reached 94 degrees. Central Regional Middle School in nearby Berkeley Township sent 600 students home early.

A few kids "went to the nurse with stomach pains and throwing up," said Tuckerton Superintendent Michael Fogg.

About 73,000 people fled the heat for beaches around New York City, where it was 93 degrees, according to the Parks Department.

Air conditioners drew a peak power demand of 3,206 megawatts from the Long Island Lighting Co., the highest for June in the utility's 76-year history, said spokesman Ray Golden. LILCO asked its biggest business customers to cut power consumption as much as possible, and urged residents to conserve.

Reagan urges allies to stand together in the Persian Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, prodding reluctant European allies for military help in the tense Persian Gulf, says free nations "should not cower" or be expected to stand alone.

Outlining his goals for the seven-nation summit to be held June 8-10 in Venice, Italy, Reagan made clear Monday he will tell other leaders they have an obligation to help the United States defend merchant ships from becoming targets in the Iran-Iraq war.

"The American people are aware that it is not our interests alone that are being protected," Reagan said in a speech in the East Room of the White House. "The dependence of our allies on the flow of oil from that area is no secret."

Despite pleas from Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, NATO allies have refused to join U.S. warships in protecting oil tankers in the gulf. Officially, the State Department says consultations with allies have been inconclusive.

Reagan said the subject will be discussed again when he confers in Venice with the leaders of Britain, West Germany, France, Italy, Japan and Canada.

"The future belongs to the brave," Reagan said. "Free men should not cower before such challenges and they should not expect to stand alone."

Noting that 37 American sailors were killed in an Iraqi missile attack on the frigate USS Stark on May 17, Reagan said, "They died while guarding a chokepoint of freedom, deterring aggression and reaffirming America's willingness to protect its vital interests."

The president's speech came two days before he flies to Venice in preparation for the summit. Originally, he was to have made a state visit to Italy, but that was scrapped because of the collapse of the Italian government.

Aside from a day trip to Rome on Saturday to meet with Pope John Paul II, the president has no major activities scheduled before the summit, giving him plenty of time to rest and adjust to the six-hour time change between Washington and Venice.

One potential summit problem was eased by the conditional acceptance by West Germany on Monday of a U.S.-backed Soviet proposal to eliminate medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

The Bonn government said it would insist the Soviets withdraw their demand for the dismantling of 72 U.S.-made Pershing 1-A shorter-range missiles that are intended for West Germany's defense.

Referring to the Soviet disarmament offer, Reagan said, "We may be on the edge of an historic reduction of the number of nuclear weapons threatening mankind."

Reagan's speech celebrated the 40th anniversary of the Marshall Plan, which was the foundation of the rebuilding of Europe after World War II.

"Today we have known 40 or more years of peace, and one-time enemies are the closest of friends and allies as a result of the Marshall Plan," Reagan said.

Former medical examiner says evidence backs Goetz

NEW YORK (AP) — The city's former chief medical examiner says X-rays he was shown on the witness stand support his testimony that the four young men Bernhard Goetz shot on a subway were standing and not trying to flee.

The testimony by Dr. Dominick DiMaio, medical examiner here for 31 years, is important because of Goetz's claim that he was surrounded by the four when he shot them Dec. 22, 1984.

The defense also says Goetz fired in rapid succession and thus the four had no time to flee before they were hit by bullets.

Assistant District Attorney Gregory Waples showed DiMaio the X-rays at Goetz's involuntary manslaughter trial Monday after the pathologist concluded that the young men could not have been running or seated when Goetz shot them.

Waples maintains that Goetz shot some of the young men while they were seated or trying to retreat, and therefore he did not act in self-defense.

"After looking at the X-rays is there any change in your opinion?" defense attorney Barry Slotnick asked DiMaio, whom Justice Stephen Crane declared an expert witness.

"No change," DiMaio said.

And in a reference to the most seriously wounded youths, Slotnick asked DiMaio, "Is there any doubt in your mind that Darrell Cabey was standing when shot?"

"No doubt," the pathologist answered.

Navy sets up '800' informers number

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy, as part of its investigation of alleged espionage by Marine embassy guards, has established a toll-free "800" phone number to encourage reports of suspicious behavior.

The toll-free number went into operation late last month but was not publicly announced until Monday.

Unlike the Army, which established a "spy hotline" in March to field any reports of suspicious behavior, the Navy's new hotline is geared specifically to the continuing investigation of Marine guards and other embassy workers.

The Marine Corps is part of the Navy, and the investigation of the Marine guards is being conducted by a special task force of the Naval Investigative Service.

One Marine is awaiting a court-martial and a second has been arrested and charged with espionage in connection with that investigation. The two men — Sgt. Clayton J. Lonetree and Cpl. Arnold Bracy — worked as guards at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow in 1985 and 1986 and allegedly became romantically involved with Soviet women.

The Navy said its toll-free number is 800-445-7343. The Army's is 800-CALL-SPY.

Christians and Moslems go on strike in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Christians joined Moslems in a nationwide strike today to protest the assassination of Prime Minister Rashid Karami, who was killed when a bomb exploded inside his military helicopter.

Schools, shops, cafes, banks, the airport and other businesses were closed in Beirut's Moslem and Christian sectors in a rare display of unity for a nation deeply divided by a 12-year civil war.

The strike also was general in other cities, including Karami's hometown of Tripoli in northern Lebanon, where his body lay in state awaiting a state funeral Wednesday, two days after his death.

Army Commander Gen. Michel Aoun placed the military on maximum alert and army spokesmen said all leaves were canceled. There were fears the assassination would trigger an upsurge of sectarian fighting.

However, the army's abilities to maintain order are limited, as much of Lebanon is controlled by rival militias or foreign forces, predominantly Syrian. Israel and Iran also have forces in parts of Lebanon.

President Amin Gemayel named Salim Hoss, 59, the education and social affairs minister, to temporarily fill Karami's post, which has lost much of its power because of the war. Hoss, like Karami, is a Sunni Moslem, in keeping with an unwritten national agreement that reserves the presidency for a Christian and the prime minister's post for a Sunni.

Karami, 65, was killed Monday morning when a bomb hidden in an attache case on his lap blew up as he flew in a helicopter from Tripoli to Beirut. Four others suffered minor injuries, including Interior Minister Abdullah Rassi.

Senior army officers said the explosion ripped through the helicopter's left side about 10 minutes after it left Kubbeh army base in Tripoli for Beirut. Corner Joseph Soto said Karami's heart and kidneys were destroyed, and his ribs were "smashed and shredded."

The army officers said the explosives were placed in the prime minister's attache case and that it was lying in his lap. A military explosives expert, Warrant Officer Youssef Bitar, said the bomb weighed 10½ ounces.

An army command spokesman today reaffirmed Bitar's statement and denied local newspaper reports that a six-pound bomb had gone off behind Karami's seat. No official report has been issued.

Weeping supporters Monday afternoon removed Karami's coffin from an ambulance in Tripoli, hoisted it on their shoulders and led a procession through the streets to his home near the Mediterranean sea, about three miles away.

AIDS spreading among heterosexuals

WASHINGTON (AP) — New research from around the world shows AIDS is spreading steadily among heterosexuals, and one study suggests that the ability of AIDS victims to infect others climbs dramatically as their disease gets worse.

Among the findings reported at the Third International Conference on AIDS was one by Belgian scientists concerning a 48-year-old engineer who gave AIDS to 10 women before dying of the disease himself in July 1986.

"The reality that heterosexual contact is an efficient mode of transmission (of AIDS) is established," said Dr. Robert Redfield of the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research in Washington. "It is the major mode of transmission in the world and it will become the major mode in this country."

AIDS testing of military men and women has found, furthermore, that half of those with AIDS infections are single and half are married.

"This is no longer a disease of singles," he said. "It's a disease of the American family." Redfield reported Monday that the ability to transmit the virus is lower in the earliest stages of the disease, but climbs sharply as the disease progresses.

He studied couples in which one partner was infected with the AIDS virus and the other was not. In 19 couples in which one partner had a mild, pre-AIDS illness, three uninfected partners, or 16 percent of the total, became infected through heterosexual contact.

In 25 couples in which one partner had advanced AIDS, however, 14 uninfected partners, or 56 percent, became infected, Redfield said.

Another study by Margaret Fischl of the University of Miami found that the disease was spread through vaginal intercourse in 81 percent of couples in which one partner had advanced AIDS, Redfield said.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which damages the body's ability to ward off disease, had struck 35,980 Americans as of May 25, killing 20,798 of them, according to the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Only 4 percent of those AIDS victims acquired the disease through heterosexual contact. But Redfield pointed out that 26.5 percent of the AIDS victims are heterosexuals who may have contracted AIDS through shared hypodermic needles or blood transfusions but are now capable of passing it on heterosexually.

The case of the Belgian engineer was reported by Nathan Clumeck and colleagues at the St. Pierre University Hospital in Brussels.

Bush 'gay groups' remark picked up by microphone

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush's voice was picked up by a live microphone after he was booed during a speech on AIDS, and he was overheard asking, "Who was that, some gay groups out there?"

Bush was booed Monday, just as his boss was the night before, when he suggested a program of AIDS testing for certain groups of people.

Addressing the Third International Conference on AIDS at a local hotel, Bush reiterated the administration's support for testing. His remark about "gay groups" came just after he had concluded the speech.

President Reagan, speaking Sunday night to the American Foundation for AIDS Research, was booed when he said the administration had decided that routine testing should begin for certain classes of people, including immigrants, those seeking marriage licenses, federal prisoners and people who visit venereal disease clinics.

Reagan, at the end of a bill-signing ceremony Monday in the White House Rose Garden, was asked by Rep. G. V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., chairman of the House Veterans' Affairs Committee, "You didn't hear any boos in this crowd, did you?"

"Nope," the president was heard to reply. "They're across the street in Lafayette Park."

Study: People with AIDS trapped in silence, suffering

WASHINGTON (AP) — The doctor delivers the news: the patient has tested positive for the AIDS virus. And for many of those people, trapped in an emotionally draining Catch-22, the rest is silence.

"The vast majority of patients have to face the situation in absolute solitude," Michael Pollak of the Universite Paris said in an address Monday to the International Conference on AIDS.

"Anticipating adverse affects or even open discrimination in their social and work life, almost all sero-positive patients keep silent about their diagnosis."

The researcher, whose study fielded responses from 103 patients with positive diagnoses in the spring of 1986, described the phenomenon as a "double-bind situation," a classic Catch-22.

"Refusing help and support and continuing a normal life symbolizes hope. This quest of hope reinforces silence. This attitude of silence, then, hinders mobilizing support when it becomes absolutely necessary," Pollak said.

"Breaking this silence and counteracting this patient's tendency to self-isolation is very difficult, as this phenomenon is deeply rooted in general societal attitudes toward sickness," he added. "HIV patients continue to be perceived almost exclusively as a risk to others. Very seldom are they approached with comprehension and compassion."

In the French study, most of the patients stopped sexual activity for at least three months to nine months. One-third of them had not had sex since their diagnosis, and one-third had broken up with their lovers. Only half had told their partners about their condition, preferring separation to an open explanation, Pollak said.

"Clearly, the diagnosis is perceived as a social stigma that can be escaped only through silence and self-isolation," he said.

Prolonged hospitalization prompts some to confide in a friend or relative, but 30 percent remained silent even during those critical times, the study showed. The stress of silent suffering leads to anxiety, insomnia, depression and memory problems, but despite that, more than 80 percent refused offers of counseling.

In most cases, Pollak said, the patients were afraid of basing relationships on their illness and afraid that constant contact with other patients in support groups would continually remind them of their own mortality.

Simmon did agree that people with AIDS experience some degree of isolation, particularly if they live outside major cities with extensive support networks.

Leaky Pipe is the sub-surface watering system that cuts costs, eliminates evaporation and run-off.

Leaky Pipe is a porous, flexible rubber pipe which sweats when placed in the ground. Soil draws water from the pipe to be used by trees, plants and turf. Leaky Pipe delivers water, oxygen and nutrients directly to roots and requires only a fraction of the water used by conventional irrigation systems.

Leaky Pipe helps stabilize foundations. Spring rains and summer drought cause some soils to expand and contract. A single line of Leaky Pipe will stabilize soil around the house and eliminate this foundation damage.

Witnesses say shooting victims claimed Cullen Davis shot them

FORT WORTH (AP) — Immediately after a 1976 shooting spree in which two people were killed and two others wounded at Cullen Davis' mansion, several people were told the gunman was Davis, witnesses testified in a civil trial.

Seven plaintiff's witnesses testified Monday during the third day of testimony in a multimillion-dollar civil suit in which Davis, 53, is accused of killing his 12-year-old stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn.

An Amarillo jury acquitted Davis of the child's death in 1977. But the criminal verdict has no bearing on the current civil suits.

The defendant's ex-wife Priscilla contends in her wrongful death suit that Davis killed her daughter and then ambushed her and her live-in boyfriend, Stan Farr, in the August 1976 attack.

Farr, 30, died at the scene. Though severely wounded, Mrs. Davis ran from the mansion and sought help at the home of neighbors Clifford and Catherine Jones.

Mrs. Jones, now a widow, testified Monday she was awakened by her barking dog in the early morning hours of Aug. 3 and saw someone moving through the courtyard toward her front door.

"I'm Priscilla Davis and I live in the big house up on the hill," she quoted Mrs. Davis as saying.

After Mrs. Davis told her that "Cullen's up at the house killing everybody," Mrs. Jones said Priscilla asked her to call police and "tell them to hurry. It's bad."

The witness described Mrs. Davis as "excited ... but not hysterical."

John Smedley, 40, a former security patrolman, told the jury how Beverly Bass, then 18, whistled him down after the shootings and begged him to help her and her boyfriend, Bubba Gavrel, then 22.

"My boyfriend has been shot and I think he's dying," he quoted her as saying. There was this exchange:

"I saw him do it," said Miss Bass, who was not harmed in the shooting.

"You saw who do it?"

"Cullen. Cullen did it."

Smedley said Miss Bass told him also how she eluded the gunman in a chase across the darkened estate and how she flagged down a passing motorist who telephoned police.

Gavrel, who married Miss Bass last year, remains crippled with a bullet lodged near his spine. He settled his own personal injury suit with Davis last year for what was reported to be a million dollars in land, cash and deferred payments.

Smedley, Mrs. Jones, two police officers and three ambulance drivers were the seven witnesses permitted by the court to testify to the events immediately following the 12:40 a.m. shootings.

Fort Worth Police Lt. Gordon Box led off by recounting how he arrived at the Davis estate within minutes of the rampage and found a "very excited, possibly angry" young woman, Miss Bass.

"I asked her if she knew who had done the shooting," Box said.

"Yes, it was Cullen," he quoted her as saying. Box said there was this exchange:

"Cullen who?"

"Cullen Davis."

"Are you sure?"

Box said Miss Bass was "very adamant that it was Cullen Davis. She said she'd known him a long time."

Box told the jury Monday he entered the mansion after talking with Miss Bass and found Gavrel critically wounded and Farr dead on the kitchen floor.

Police: Procedures followed in fatal chase

HOUSTON (AP) — Police officers followed established procedures in an auto chase that ended with the deaths of a couple over the weekend, a police spokesman said.

Stephen C. Terry, 39, and his wife, Charlene A. Terry, 45, were killed Saturday when their car was struck broadside by a vehicle driven by Darrell Dewayne Chiles, who was being pursued by police, authorities said.

The crash occurred following a 20-minute chase that reached speeds of 100 mph, police said.

A series of procedures are followed in police chases, among them that there should be at least two police cars, and if possible, a helicopter involved in the chase, police spokesman Al Baker said Monday.

The chase also can be terminated at any time by a number of police officials monitoring the chase, he said.

"The primary rule for high speed chases is the danger involved in chasing the suspect should not exceed the danger of the offense being committed," Baker said.

The chase began after police were called to Chiles' mother-in-law's home, where he had released his estranged wife after kidnapping her Friday night, homicide division Sgt. S.P. Ward said.

After the abduction, Chiles, 22, robbed a fast food outlet, abandoned a stolen car he was driving and stole another car, police said.

Tedious jury-selection process is underway in murder trial

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Attorneys have begun the tedious task of questioning potential jurors in the high-profile murder trial of a policeman accused of killing a fellow officer suspected of vigilante activities.

Sixty people were summoned for jury duty on Monday and almost all said they had heard about patrolman Farrell Tucker killing fellow officer Stephen R. Smith last Aug. 18.

Smith, 31, was suspected of vigilante activities and allegedly planned to kill three top law enforcement officials he blamed for ruining his career.

Tucker, 36, maintains he shot Smith in self-defense.

Defense attorneys and prosecutors will interview the potential jurors individually and hope to assemble a 12-member panel to begin hearing the case Thursday.

Although the case has generated local and national publicity, Tucker is confident he can receive a fair trial in San Antonio, said his attorney, Terry McDonald.

"This particular case is not complicated. This case does not involve mercy killing. This case does not involve insanity," McDonald told the prospective jurors.

"This case has been very simple. Did Farrell Tucker set out on Aug. 18, 1986, to take the life of Stephen Smith or did he ... act in self-defense?" McDonald said.

McDonald and Sid Harle, the state's special prosecutor, are hoping to finish individual interviews and to select 12 jurors by Wednesday.

"I'm ready to get this over with," Harle told reporters before the start of jury selection.

McDonald said Tucker will have final say on jury selection.

"He's the one on trial. When I try a case I give my client my opinion as to the jurors I think that we should select," McDonald told reporters before the start of jury selection.

"But the bottom line is that he's going to take the pen and draw a line through the names of the people he doesn't want on the jury," McDonald said.

McDonald declined to say whether Tucker would testify.

The jurors spent most of Monday morning answering in writing questions about their knowledge and opinions on the case.

"I think we'll get more candid responses having them write it, rather than having them stand up in front of a judge and make a statement," McDonald said.

Tucker has been on suspension since his indictment last October.

The shooting incident led to the dismissal of two police chiefs and sparked a federal investigation and an $8 million lawsuit by 11 families who claimed they were victims of Smith's vigilante activities.

Lawmakers OK dram-shop bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislators have voted to let courts hold bars liable for serving alcoholic drinks to intoxicated customers who become drunken drivers and cause death and damage on the highway.

The so-called "dram-shop" measure was approved by the Senate 29-2 and the House 140-1.

The bill would take immediate effect if signed into law by Gov. Bill Clements.

House-Senate conferees came up with a compromise version of the bill Monday, the last day of the regular legislative session.

LOWER BACK PAIN

If you've been treated for lower back problem and the pain and discomfort are still there, you may be able to benefit from chiropractic treatment.

If your spine is out of alignment, this may be causing other problems in addition to lower back pain. Because the body's nervous system is closely integrated with the spine, any misalignment can cause painful irritation. Abnormal nerve function.

Other organs, glands, or tissues that are supplied by that nerve.

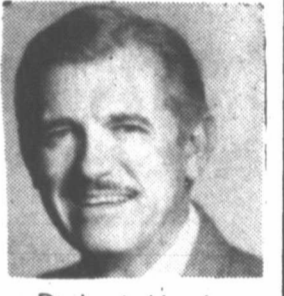

The nerves of the lower back, for example, are connected to certain organs and other structures in that area. If lower back spinal misalignment is putting undue pressure on the nerves, you may be suffering from more than lower back pain. It may be having a direct effect on other areas of your body.

A thorough examination can disclose exactly where the problem is and how it can be corrected.

Before moving on to new projects in the year ahead, make the ones in which you're presently involved pay off first. You're much closer to the profit column than you think.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Although you may have to contend with some extra responsibilities today, you won't be thrown off stride. In fact, you may relish the challenges.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Managing others is your long suit today. You'll be easy to get along with, but you can also be serious and realistic when situations warrant it.

Three new Eagle Scouts honored during ceremony

Three new Eagle Scouts were recognized at a recent Court of Honor for Troop 413, sponsored by St. Matthew's Episcopal Church.

Receiving the high honor in a Memorial Day evening ceremony were Dan Conner, son of Bob and Jane Conner; Tim Darling, son of Diana L. Darling; and Roy Eckerdt, son of Roy and Wenda Eckerdt.

With two and a half years in Boy Scouting, Conner has served troop positions as chaplain, assistant patrol leader, patrol leader and assistant senior patrol leader.

A member of the Order of the Arrow, Conner also likes football and traveling. A 13-year-old, he has completed the eighth grade at Pampa Middle School.

Darling became a Cub Scout in 1980 at Austin Elementary School with Pack 410. He earned his Bobcat, Wolf, Bear, Webelos and Arrow of Light badges, along with 11 activity badges, a gold arrow and six silver arrow points.

He became a Boy Scout in October 1982 and later joined Troop 413 in November 1984. Darling has been senior patrol leader, assistant senior patrol leader, quarter master and den chief. He was elected to the Order of the Arrow in 1983, became Vigil in 1986 and was elected treasurer for the Lodge in 1986.

Darling has worked at Day Camp for five years and attended Junior Leaders Training in 1986. He went to the National Jamboree at Fort A.P. Hill in Virginia in 1985. He has earned 30 merit badges.

A freshman at Pampa High School this past year, he was on the basketball team. He also enjoys swimming, guns and archery and holds a brown belt in taekwon do.

Eckerdt joined Boy Scouts in July 1980 when his father reactivated Troop 150 at Rangely, Colo. He joined Troop 413 in Pampa in November 1985. Completing his Eagle requirements in April, he has served as senior patrol leader twice, quartermaster and patrol leader.

Eckerdt had Junior Leaders

Training and received the Order of the Arrow, both in 1986. He attended Camporee in 1985. He has earned 22 merit badges.

Now attending Pampa High School, he has participated in band, football, basketball, wrestling, la crosse, baseball and track. He also has been involved in peer counseling, tech theatre and audio-visual activities.

In activities showing the scout motto, "Be Prepared," Eckerdt intervened in a student fight in November 1983 at Denver, Colo., and took a knife away from one student, detaining him until school authorities arrived. In August 1985, he saved a young child from drowning in the pool at Northgate Inn in Pampa.

Presiding over the Eagle ceremony was Connor Hicks, council advancement chairman. Troop Scoutmaster Jim Radcliff read a letter of congratulations from the chief scout executive.

Presenting the Eagles their awards were Radcliff, to Conner; Bill Ripple, to Darling; and father Roy Eckerdt, to his son.

Pick best cooling for you

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

Air conditioning is a decision that directly affects your individual or family finances. There are alternatives to consider when making air conditioning decisions.

Homemakers' News
Donna Brauchi

There are at least five alternatives to whole house central air conditioning worth your consideration. Even if your air conditioning equipment is already in place, these alternatives are worth considering for possible modifications or additions to your home, especially when it is time for replacement.

- You can decide to centrally air condition only part of your home — maybe just two or three rooms — without providing for even the occasional air conditioning of the remainder.
- You can decide to centrally air condition using "zones" so that you can at any time air condition one or more portions of the whole house, leaving the remainder temporarily without air conditioning.
- For best results, the interior walls of your home between zones should be insulated and made weather-tight, just as though they were outside walls. Separate mechanical systems may be required and an air conditioning contractor should be consulted.
- In spite of added initial costs, zoning your central system can be very effective as an energy and money saver because it gives you control over the square footage you actually cool, as well as the flexibility to cool the whole house when desired.
- Window air conditioners are an old and reliable way to provide cooling for one or more zones of your home.
- Evaporative coolers can also be used effectively in zoned cooling. They use much less energy than any other type of air conditioner.
- Another alternative is the use of an attic fan to cool your home.

Normally, a house holds heat so that a lag occurs between the time when the outside air cools after sunset on a summer night and the time when the interior of the home cools. An attic fan speeds up the cooling of the house by pulling in air through open windows, up through the attic and out.

Attic fans can be installed in older homes, providing at least a warm weather substitute for air conditioning.

The energy efficiency ratio is an important consideration for selecting central and window air conditioning units. The more efficient an air conditioner is, the higher its EER (Energy Efficiency Ratio).

High EER units are normally more expensive than low EER units, but in the long run, the total cost is less because your utility bills are lower. The big difference in air conditioning units is how much they cost to operate. An EER of 7.0 is the minimum acceptable for air conditioning in Texas, but if you truly desire to save energy and money, an EER between 8.0 and 10.0 is recommended.

Remember, too, that central air conditioning is no more efficient than its air delivery system. The ductwork is the network of air flow passages through which the conditioned air moves to the outlets located throughout your home. Since you are paying to cool the air, you don't want it to leak out of the ducts before you can deliver it to your living areas, and you don't want the lining of the ductwork to become much hotter or cooler than the air you are trying to move. Therefore, you want the ductwork to be well insulated and tightly taped or sealed at all joints and insulation seams.

A central air conditioning system will operate more efficiently and last longer with regular maintenance. Form the following habits:

- Clean or replace the air filter at the central unit or on the return air grill of the system at least once a month. A dirty filter causes an air conditioning or heating unit to use more energy and to work harder, increasing the possibility of an expensive breakdown.
- Check the outside condenser coil regularly for obstructions or dirt which can restrict air flow. Clean when needed. Your outside unit should be shaded in a way that does not restrict air flow around the unit. The cooler the air that flows through the condenser coils, the more efficiently your unit will operate.
- Once every two years, inspect and clean the inside cooling coil of the air conditioner to aid efficient operation of the system.
- Have your entire air conditioning system inspected at least once a year by a professional. As part of this preventive maintenance program, the following items should be inspected: (a) refrigerant levels and line insulation, (b) electrical connections, (c) belt tension, (d) motor lubrication, (e) evaporator and condenser coils and (f) thermostatic controls.

Woman's 'single' lover found to lead double life

DEAR ABBY: I am a 28-year-old woman who recently fell in love with a 25-year-old guy. We met at work and discovered a strong mutual attraction on both our parts. Abby, I was never so happy in my life when he told me he loved me and wanted me to be his wife. After spending almost every night together for three months, I get a phone call from his wife who is pregnant and has a 3-year-old daughter by this man.

I don't have to tell you that I was in shock. Now the question, Abby: How does a single girl know for sure if a man is lying or telling the truth when he says he is not married?

USED IN AUSTIN

DEAR USED: A single man will introduce you to some of his friends and relatives. A married man will not. A single man will probably invite you to see his house or apartment. A married man will not. A single man will give you his home telephone number and address. A married man will not.

There's a lesson to be learned here: Don't be so quick to give your love to a stranger. Too fast doesn't last.

DEAR ABBY: I want to share one good thing that has happened as a result of the AIDS-scare publicity. My husband of 50 years has been a skirt chaser for 49 of them. Last year he gave up his hobby (women) and I am now "Sweetheart," "Honey" and "Dearie."

After no sex for 20 years, I'm not sure I want to resume sleeping with him again. I find it hard to get accustomed to the feeling that I am really desirable since we have lived like sister and brother for so many years.

Don't use my name. Sign me ... MINNIE HA-HA

DEAR MINNIE: Please, no "ha-has" about a subject as serious as AIDS. Considering your husband's fast-track record, should you decide to resume marital relations, first, make sure he is tested to determine whether he has been infected with the AIDS virus. Then wait another six months, because it could take that long for the virus to show up in a test.

Lefors heads for Vernon, regional playoffs

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

It was an unusually cold day April 6. It did not seem like a day for baseball — whether in the big leagues or in high school.

But, that cold day was the day the Lefors Pirates were set to open their 1987 baseball campaign — come cold or high water.

It was not a good day for the Pirates in Dumas. The final score was 5-3, but it was a lot worse.

The Lefors defense had holes in it big enough for 1000 cockroaches.

In seven innings, the Keystone Pirates committed eight errors, including five in one inning.

Ten days later, Lefors traveled to Borger. It was some 40-degrees hotter.

The defensive errors were cut in half that day, but Lefors lost again, by a score of 10-2.

That second loss — some six weeks ago was the last for the Pirates.

Throughout the weeks, their play has continued to improve.

In a pre-season prospectus, it looked like Lefors might battle it out for last place with hapless Briscoe.

Fate, though, has a strange way of turning the tables and today the Pirates find themselves at Vernon Regional Junior College for a regional con-

Pirates on radio

This afternoon's regional semi-final baseball game between Lefors and Santo will be featured live on local radio station, KOMX-FM (100.3). Air time is set for 1:45 p.m. Play-by-play will be handled by Eldon Officer.

Officer said the station will continue to carry Pirate playoffs game as long as they remain in post-season action.

test against Santo.

On the heels of a five-game winning streak, the Pirates hope to continue the momentum that has gotten them this far.

"The kids seem confident, eager," Coach Brent Fountain said. "They have a lot of desire and want to."

Fountain, who has been confined to a wheelchair for the last week while he recovers from foot surgery, pointed out that several team members took it upon themselves to hold practice. The team drafted Harvester pitcher Troy Owen to throw practice for them.

Fountain also said that in today's game, it will be important for the Pirates to jump out to an early lead.

"If they get behind, they get flustered. If they can stay on an even keel and play like they know they can then they can make the other team play catch-up."

With a lineup chocked full of seniors, many of the team members realize this is the last chance for a berth in the state 1A tournament.

The team is led by the Kerbo twins — Kent and Kirk — and power-hitter Richard Hernandez.

It's hard to say which of these three seniors provides the most spunk that pushes the team.

Hernandez would be an easy choice for MVP. He leads the team in seven offensive categories: Batting average (.391), at-bats (23), hits (9), doubles (2), RBI (14), and stolen bases (5).

Hernandez, who came up with the game-winning and district-clinching hit last week against Follett, had his RBI total bolstered during a game against Briscoe when he knocked in 7 runs.

Catcher Kent Kerbo, who's also the team's lead-off hitter, led the team in runs scored (12), home runs (2), and walks (8). He and Hernandez shared the lead with 5 stolen bases Kerbo's batting average of .353 was nothing to scoff at either.

Brother Kirk, who struggled at the plate, was the team's ace pitcher. Statistics and appearance-wise, he was more or less the team's only pitcher.

Kerbo pitched 30 innings, allowed 23 hits and 15 runs. His strength is his fastball — a pitch that accounted for 55 strikeouts this season. Kerbo finished the regular season with a 5-1 record — his only loss being the season opener against Dumas.

Many members of the team have played together since their days in Little League.

Today, they hope, will be a big step in reaching their dream of making it to state.

As they say in the world of television, Stay tuned.

Leonard comes to the rescue

WASHINGTON (AP) — World Boxing Council middleweight champion Sugar Ray Leonard came to the aid of Washington D.C. police, and helped authorities find a child they say had been kidnapped Monday afternoon.

District police said that the child — 18-month-old Alecia Washington — was reported missing just after 2 p.m. EDT.

The child's mother, Mary Battle, told police she left the girl and her 3-year-old brother Ernest on the sidewalk outside their southeast Washington apartment when she went back inside to get her keys. When she returned a moment later, she told police, the girl was missing.

Police said their investigation led them to believe that Tony Spaulding, 27, who shares the apartment with the woman, might have taken the child.

But Spaulding refused to cooperate with authorities.

The investigation was at a standstill until Spaulding, a boxing fan, told officers that the only person he would talk to was Leonard.

Leonard, who took the title from Marvin Hagler in April, agreed to talk to Spaulding. Given a police escort from his home in nearby Potomac, Md., the boxer arrived at the apartment just after 10 p.m.

Leonard talked privately with Spaulding for several minutes, and then the pair emerged from the apartment, police said.

Police said Spaulding then led them to a wooded area in southeast Washington, where Alicia Washington was found tied to a tree — but otherwise unharmed.

The child was under observation at a local hospital.

Spaulding was scheduled to be arraigned Tuesday in District of Columbia Superior Court on kidnapping charges.

College series rain delayed

By TOM VINT
Associated Press Writer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Louisiana State Coach Skip Bertman says his Tigers will have to regroup when they resume a College World Series game against Oklahoma State.

But that line should be coming from Cowboy Coach Gary Ward, whose third-ranked Oklahoma State team trails No. 7 LSU 6-2 in a game suspended by rain Monday night. Play resumes this afternoon.

A severe thunderstorm delayed the game for 90 minutes with LSU leading 2-0 after two innings, then forced NCAA officials to suspend play again in the fourth.

Completion of the game will precede the other winners bracket semifinal between No. 1 Texas and No. 2 Stanford.

After Craig Faulkner singled in a run in the first and Rob Hartwig singled one home in the second for LSU, rain halted play the first time.

Oklahoma State, 57-11 on the season, evened the game with two runs on an RBI single by Ray Ortiz and a sacrifice fly by Jim Inland when play resumed in the third.

LSU, 48-17, then pounded three OSU pitchers for four runs in the bottom of the third on Pete Bush's two-run double and RBI singles by Richie Vasquez and Terry Belle.

Rain again stopped play with two Oklahoma State runners on and two out in the top of the fourth.

"We'll just have to regroup like we had to regroup after the rain delay," said Bertman.

Niekros become winningest brother combo

By CHUCK MELVIN
AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) — Phil Niekro was representing the Cleveland Indians and, more importantly, the Niekro family when he took the mound against the Detroit Tigers.

"Joe and I have been getting guidance from our family all along the way. They had a lot to do with kicking us in the tail when we were down," Niekro said after he beat the Tigers 9-6 Monday night, giving him and brother Joe a major-league record with a combined 530 victories.

They had shared the mark at 529 with Gaylord and Jim Perry since May 23, when Joe pitched the New York Yankees to a 3-0 victory over California. Phil and Joe each failed in their first attempt to break the tie.

But the Indians, behind homers from Tony Bernazard and Brook Jacoby, posted Phil to a 7-1 lead Monday, and the Cleveland bullpen made it stand up after Niekro let the Tigers back within a run at 7-6 in the sixth inning.

"I just got off the phone with him," Joe said in New York after the Yankees lost to California. "He said it wasn't pretty, but he'll take it. He said we did it together, and I said, 'You're right.'"

Phil Niekro, 3-5, set the record despite allowing six runs, five of them earned, on nine hits in 5 2-3 innings. He had lost 1-0 to Boston's Roger Clemens on Wednesday in his first shot at the record.

"They even out," the 48-year-old Niekro said. "I'm just happy to win it. The bullpen came through for me. I'll take a 1-0 win or a 9-6 win."

The victory was his 314th, tying him with Gaylord Perry for 11th place on the career list. Joe Niekro, 42, has won 216, one more than Jim Perry.

Phil and Joe each made curtain calls. Joe acknowledged the crowd's cheers in New York when Phil's victory was posted on the scoreboard there, and Phil hugged his mother on the field to a standing ovation from the 6,509 fans in Cleveland.

Mavs interview former Phoenix coach

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks like John MacLeod but they don't mind letting the unemployed coach sweat a little while they decide who is going to replace Dick Motta.

They told MacLeod to wait by his telephone after Monday's interview because they have several other candidates on their list, including assistant coach Richie Aduvato.

Aduvato will be interviewed on Wednesday.

MacLeod, the former Phoenix Suns' coach, said he was given no clue when the Mavs will come to a decision.

"I don't know specifically what the hiring time frame will be," said MacLeod, who was fired from the Suns at mid-season. "They said they would be back in touch in a week or so. They want to interview some other prospects."

The Mavericks, who won 55 games and the NBA Midwest Division crown but lost Motta to an unexpected resignation, were spurned in their attempts to hire

Don Nelson.

Nelson, who resigned from the Bucks, chose part ownership of the Golden State Warriors over the Mavs, who would have had to pay Milwaukee compensation.

MacLeod, who had four seasons at Phoenix in which he won 50 or more games, arrived in Dallas Sunday night.

He was interviewed by General Manager Norm Sonju and Player Personnel Director Rick Sund on Monday and taken on a tour of the Mavs' facilities. Sund then drove MacLeod to the airport for the return trip to Arizona.

"They asked me a lot of questions and I asked them a lot of questions," MacLeod said.

"I was impressed with a lot of things I saw," MacLeod said. "I'm impressed with the way this organization approaches things. It's first class all the way. They have a great practice facility. The weight training room and film room are a godsend."

MacLeod said if he was named the coach he wouldn't make any wholesale changes.

"I would try to add to the traditions they have already established, make an impact on their defense, and operate in a positive manner," MacLeod said. "I'm an upbeat kind of a guy."

MacLeod also said he would try to bring a faster tempo offense to Dallas.

"I think I could have an impact on the running game," MacLeod said.

Asked if he was disappointed he didn't meet with owner Don Carter, MacLeod said "Not at all. I understood he was out of town on business. Sometime I will meet and visit with him."

Sonju said the visit went well and reiterated, "John is very high on our list and we think he is an excellent candidate."

Sonju said "there are several other candidates we are considering."

MacLeod, who took the Suns to the NBA finals in 1976, said he also is being considered for the New York Knicks' coaching position.

"I'm receptive to whoever wants to talk," MacLeod said.

MacLeod has a 579-543 NBA record and is the ninth-winningest coach in NBA history. He was in his 14th season with the Suns when he was fired.

Lakers favored as series begins

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers, who have breezed through 11 victories in 12 playoff games, are the clear favorites in tonight's opener of the NBA championship series against the struggling Boston Celtics.

The Lakers, however, say they are not about to forget that the Celtics are the team that is trying to become the first NBA team since 1969 to successfully defend the title.

"The people who are giving Boston no chance are crazy," NBA Most Valuable Player Magic Johnson said Monday. "It doesn't make sense to write them off when they're trying to repeat."

While the Lakers rolled to post-season series victories over Denver, Golden State and Seattle, the Celtics needed seven games to eliminate both Milwaukee and Detroit in the Eastern Conference playoffs.

With starters Robert Parish, Danny Ainge and Kevin McHale hobbled by injuries and backup center Bill Walton hardly playing at all, the oddsmakers believe the Lakers could literally run away with the championship series.

"From what I read, the Celtics don't have a chance to win," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "If we make the assumption that they are too tired and injured, we're going to get kicked."

Riley said he became convinced the Celtics are not an exhausted team when they got five consecutive offensive rebounds on one possession late in Game 7 against Detroit Saturday.

"Which was the freshest team when it came time to get those offensive rebounds?" Riley asked rhetorically.

Los Angeles hasn't played since completing a four-game sweep of the SuperSonics on May 25 in the Western Conference finals.

Riley said that only tonight's game will tell if the playoff was beneficial or harmful.

"If we play great, people will say we're well-rested. If we play lousy, they'll say we're rusty," Riley said.

The Celtics arrived in Los Angeles Monday and had a late afternoon workout.

Larry Bird, who played all but 84 seconds and averaged 36 points in the last three games of the Detroit series, said the Celtics will be rested for tonight's game.

"We're coming off a tough series, but we've had a little time to rest up, and we're ready to go," Bird said.

Bird was besieged by questions about Boston's underdog role.

When the three-time MVP was asked if he was afraid it could be a short series, he said, "No, I doubt if we can sweep them."

Riley and Johnson said that neutralizing Boston's front line of Bird, Parish and McHale is the key for Los Angeles.

"Those three guys can kill you," Johnson said. "It's a must that we rebound well."

"Larry, Robert and Kevin need special attention," Riley said.

Bird said the Celtics will have to constantly be aware of the Lakers' running game.

"Pounding the offensive boards may be the one way to slow them down," Bird said.

"You have to rebound, go down and score and then hustle back on defense. We want to do that, but we don't know if we can."

Boxers banned in Jersey

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Thirty-five professional boxers will no longer be allowed to compete in New Jersey, after the state Athletic Control Board announced they were not healthy or skilled enough to continue fighting and stripped them of their licenses.

The list represents 9 percent of the 400 fighters licensed to box in New Jersey, ACB Commissioner Larry Hazzard said Monday.

"This is a very progressive move by the state and demonstrates our dedication to a high level of skill and safety," said Hazzard, a former professional boxing referee.

McDowell's first grand slam carries Rangers

ARLINGTON (AP) — When Kansas City's Willie Wilson climbed the center field fence to rob Oddibe McDowell of a base hit in Sunday's game, the Texas Rangers outfielder said he wondered if his luck would ever change.

It did, and in a hurry. In his first at-bat Monday night, McDowell hit a routine fly ball that Chicago outfielders Daryl Boston and Gary Redus allowed to fall between them for a two-base hit. "I knew my luck had turned around when that fell in," said McDowell, who nine innings later hit a grand slam home run that lifted the Rangers to an 11-9 victory over the White Sox.

"If anyone was going to be the hero of the game," said Rangers manager Bobby Valentine, "I was praying it would be Oddibe."

McDowell came into the game batting .180 and had been dropped out of his customary leadoff spot to seventh in the lineup. It proved a fortuitous move when McDowell faced Chicago reliever Joel Davis with one out, the bases loaded and the Rangers trailing 9-7 in the bottom of the 12th.

Davis, 1-5, had surrendered a leadoff double to Ruben Sierra and after getting a force-out, had walked Pete O'Brien and Larry Parrish to load the bases.

"He (Davis) was struggling with his control," said McDowell. "When he threw two bad ones to me, I knew he would be trying to get something in the strike zone."

"I wasn't thinking long ball. The way I've been going, I'm just trying to make good contact, to hit the ball hard. And I did that."

His shot, his third homer of the year and first career grand slam, made a winner of reliever Dale Mohorcic, 5-2, who went from goat to hero.

Mohorcic had relieved Mitch Williams in the top of the 12th with none out and a runner on first.

Ivan Calderon, the first batter Mohorcic faced, failed on a sacrifice attempt, then hit his seventh homer of the season to give the White Sox a 9-7 lead.

"One of the guys on the bench said that Mohorcic had pitched his heart out all year, so let's go get him a win," said Valentine. "And doggone it, they did."

McDowell's home run was the eighth in the game and one of 18 extra base hits produced by both teams.

Ranger starter Bob Malloy gave up four home runs in five innings, two to Greg Walker and one each to Jerry Royster and Harold Baines.

Those homers and a couple of unearned runs staked Chicago starter Rich Dotson to a 7-1 lead going into the bottom of the eighth.

Darrell Porter's pinch-hit home run in the eighth started the Ranger comeback that continued with five in the ninth that sent the game into extra innings.

Larry Parrish hit his 12th homer of the season, a 2-run shot, as part of the ninth-inning rally that came against five Chicago pitchers.

"I gave every one of our relievers a chance to save the game," said Chicago manager Jim Fregosi, "but we couldn't get it done."

Smith gets ninth save; Astros win again

By JOE MOOSHL
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Manager Hal Lanier of the Houston Astros can afford to gamble when he has relief ace Dave Smith on the mound.

And Smith said his only concern was to "get past Andre Dawson because I didn't want to see another ball go sailing out of here."

The Astros, who had lost a 5-1 lead because of Dawson's gamely tying, bases-loaded homer in the eighth, had regained the lead in the top of the 10th inning on Jose Cruz' home run Monday which provided them a 6-5 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

But in the bottom of the 10th,

Dave Martinez led off with a single and went to second on a sacrifice by Manny Trillo.

Up came Dawson, who also had homered in the first inning to provide the Cubs with all of their runs.

Lanier went to the mound to talk to Smith, and Smith responded by striking out Dawson on three pitches. The Astros then walked Jerry Mumphrey intentionally to put the winning run on base. But Smith got Jody Davis to foul out to end the game.

"It was a lefty-righty thing," Lanier said.

Smith, making his third appearance in three days, said the option was his and added: "I didn't care about putting the winning run on base."

Pampa sweeps Groom

The Pampa Babe Ruth (16-18) Team opened the season Saturday with a doubleheader sweep of Groom.

Pampa bombed Groom in the first game 15-0. Their firepower continued in the second game with a 10-0 victory.

Bret Mitchell won the first game for Pampa, striking out 11 and allowing no hits over five innings.

Pampa's bats came alive from practically top to bottom. Kyle Clark, Shawn Frye and Grant Gamblin led the attack. All three had 2 hits and 2 RBI.

Glen Pruet had a 3-for-4 day and scored 3 runs. Bart Thomas also added to the barrage, going 2-for-4 with 1 RBI.

In the second game, Grant Gamblin picked up the win. Gamblin allowed only 1 hit and struck out 7. Pruet picked up the save.

Clint Allen led Pampa batters in the nightcap, going 2-for-3 with 2 RBI.

Pampa will next take on Canadian in an away game Wednesday at 7 p.m.

Other teams in Pampa's Babe Ruth district include Dumas, Canyon, Perryton, Dalhart, Canadian, Groom and Beaver, Okla.

In T-Ball action Saturday, Wayne's Wildcats defeated Dandy's Market Cubs 15-13.

Joshua Brookshire was the winning pitcher for the Wildcats. Brookshire also picked up a single for Wayne's.

Other leading hitters for the Wildcats included Heather Garner and Francis Juan, both with homers; Todd Lancaster and Eric Graham had triples; Troy Carpenter and Clint Curtis each had a double, and Matt Hoganson added a single.

For the Cubs, David Hunter and Jason Harper had triples; Chad Epperson and T.J. Davis both had doubles, and Wade Bruce and Amy Morris added singles.

Defensively, Brookshire caught a line drive and made a double play at first base and Eric Graham also caught a pop fly.

In Monday American Bambino action, Holmes defeated Keys 10-4.

Sean Hardman struckout 13 on his way to the victory for Holmes.

Eddie Hernandez fanned 9 batters, but lost the game for Keys.

For Holmes, Lonnie Romero had a double and single; T.J. Warren and Kyle Johnson each had two singles in the game.

Handicapped golfer turns entrepreneur

By HOWARD RODEN
Port Arthur News

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — When Harold Trimble developed tendonitis in his left elbow last summer, it forced him to give up playing golf for three months.

But he never really gave up playing the game.

Driven by the passion only golfers understand, Trimble sought to satisfy his desire through the vicarious method of board games. To his disappointment, none of the ones he played provided the same mental anguish and challenge as the outdoor version.

So Trimble, a graduate of nearby Port Neches-Groves High School, set about inventing a better one. He began trying to create a realistic board game in which the only difference between it and the real thing would be "the swinging, the walking and the sweating."

After nearly six months of research, Trimble's "In Pursuit of Par" was created. What started out as a personal challenge has now mushroomed into a full-time, 12-hour-a-day business out of his Panama City, Fla., home.

"I never had any idea where this would lead," said Trimble, who was in Port Arthur recently to visit relatives.

Trimble's board game appears headed toward wide acceptance. In January, "In Pursuit of Par" was introduced at the Professional Golfers Association's annual Merchandising Show in Orlando, Fla.

Since then, Trimble has sold 2,000 of the games, and 5,000 to 6,000 more have been back-ordered.

He has arranged to market his game through a major department store, a sporting good chain in the Northeast, the National Luggage Dealers Association and all golf pro shops. Sales in 1987 should be around 20,000 to 25,000, he said.

"We've had exceptional response to this game in test markets," he said. "We've been very pleased to hear the comments about the challenge the game provides."

Trimble grew up virtually a chip shot from Port Groves Golf Club. But he left Southeast Texas in 1969 to pursue his fortune in the oil business as an independent consultant.

The job literally led him all over the world. He was involved in a project in Canada when the latest oil glut hit and forced the Canada project to shut down.

So Trimble returned to the Florida panhandle, fueling his love of golf by playing daily. He played so often that he developed tendonitis in his elbow.

"I really love golf," said Trimble, 51. "So when I couldn't play, I started looking for board games that I could play. But nothing really matched the game itself."

What Trimble created is an 18-hole course, printed on three double-sided boards. The players have a say in club selection and the direction of their shots, but the roll of the dice — one a 12-sided die, the other six-sided — ultimately determine the shot's distance and direction.

"With the 12-sided die, there's a 50 percent probability of the shot going straight, a 33 percent probability of it going 10 degrees off-line and a 17 percent chance of it going 20 degrees off-line," Trimble explained. "There's 42 different places where a tee shot could land."

Trimble's generic course, approximately 6,900 yards long, is fraught with trees, sand traps and water hazards. Contestants can suffer the same sort of penalties and terrors as a regular course, adding to the game's realism. (A problem die is included for those imaginary hackers.)

"I was amazed how accurate the game was after the first time I designed it," he said. "After an initial 60 rounds of test play, I had to make only one correction for an unrealistic chip shot."

A severe thunderstorm delayed play in Omaha, Neb., Monday of the College World Series game between Oklahoma State and Louisiana State.

Names in the news

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Carson will take it easier in his 26th year as host of "The Tonight Show."

Carson, 61, will do the show three nights a week, turning over Monday nights to comedian Jay Leno and Tuesday nights to "Best of Carson" reruns.

Leno and comedian Garry Shandling also will be the exclusive guest hosts when Carson is on vacation.

The guest-host plan, devised with Carson's cooperation, "will add a regularity and a familiarity to the broadcasts since what's-her-name left," NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff quipped, in a speech at a meeting of network affiliates.

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Snow White turns 50 this week, but Walt Disney's most famous cartoon heroine doesn't look a day older than when she made her film debut in 1937.

Ninety-three women who have portrayed the princess in the movie or at Disney theme parks will mark Friday's golden anniversary of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

Heading the list of 69 former Snow Whites gathering at Disneyland will be Joanne Killingworth, who played the part in the California park's opening day parade in 1955.

Also scheduled to attend was dancer Marge Champion, the model for the movie role for Walt Disney's animators, and Adriana Casselotti, Snow White's voice in the movie.

Governor gets deregulation bill

AUSTIN (AP) — An AT&T bill is on its way to Gov. Bill Clements' desk, hailed by senators who had fought against long-distance phone deregulation as a model proposal that will protect Texas telephone ratepayers.

The House and Senate approved a compromise measure before adjourning on Monday night.

As the bill passed the House on May 25, AT&T would have been able to set its own rates on intrastate long-distance phone calls.

But Sen. Hugh Parmer said Monday the final bill negotiated in a conference committee "is no longer a bill to deregulate AT&T or anyone else. It provides that no one will be deregulated as a result of their political power or by legislative fiat."

Instead, Parmer said, the bill gives AT&T a chance to go before the Public Utility Commission and "argue their case that they no longer are a dominant carrier" and should be deregulated.

Now, according to Parmer, D-Fort Worth, the PUC "can find any day AT&T is non-dominant and deregulate them instantly."

"When this bill becomes law, there will be a set of criteria relating to the area of monopolistic price control and competition which will have to be looked at ... as part of the PUC's decision-making process," he said.

Also, he said, the bill would extend "regulatory oversight" over AT&T after the hearing "to see that, in fact, consumer interests continue to be protected."

Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, said, "I think this is a win-win situation for everyone — for AT&T, for the people of Texas."

"This bill does not deregulate AT&T. What we're going to do is make them deregulate the old-fashioned way — they're going to have to earn it, they're going to have to go to the PUC, they're going to have to prove their case," Edwards said.

Easing no-play rule failed

AUSTIN (AP) — The 1984 education reforms emerged from this year's Legislature largely unscathed, but questions still loom about education funding.

Opponents of the landmark reforms charged into the Capitol this year ready to soften the legislation. But with the exception of a bill that would repeal teacher subject matter testing, the package withstood the "fine tuning" attempts.

"Nobody could really agree on what fine tuning was. There seemed to be a disposition on the side of a lot of House members that (the reforms were) just beginning to work," said Rep. Wilhelm Delco, D-Austin, chairman of the House Higher Education Committee.

Senators tried to ease the no pass, no play rule that suspends students from extra-curricular activities for six weeks if they fail any course. Their plan would have set up a pilot program to experiment with a three-week suspension period.

But the measure never received House consideration.

Another major fight was waged over financing both public schools and state colleges and universities.

To Ms. Delco, reluctance to make severe cuts meant lawmakers appreciated the importance of education.

"When it came right down to voting, the irreconcilable difference was that we could not say in all good conscience that we ought to take the amount out of education that it would take to balance the budget," Ms. Delco said.

"This is one session where we still are living under the cloud of the efforts to take money out. But we're also looking at the successes that have come out of both these houses and now are sitting on the governor's desk," she said.

Waco attorney testifies at Feazell trial

AUSTIN (AP) — A Waco lawyer told jurors in the federal bribery trial of McLennan County District Attorney Vic Feazell how he arranged for the dismissals of drunken driving cases through a friend of Feazell's.

Dick Clark's voice quavered as he testified Monday that he asked former district attorney Don Hall, then a Waco attorney and former law partner of Feazell's, for help in at least three cases involving people arrested for drunken driving for the first time.

"I knew Mr. Hall was an ex-law partner of Mr. Feazell. He supported (Feazell) in his campaign," Clark said.

"I knew he'd be able to check the file to see if there were any errors in the case for possible leniency from Mr. Feazell."

Hall served as McLennan County district attorney during the '60s. He and Feazell were partners in a law firm before Feazell was elected district attorney.

Feazell is charged with accepting bribes from attorneys in exchange for dismissals of their clients' cases or for reduced sentences.

Greek immigrant wears his heart on his large sculptures

By LAURINE MILLER
Dallas Morning News

FRISCO (AP) — George Kapotas has a lust for life that he expresses with good-natured bragadocio. His gestures are grandiose. His sculpture, larger than life.

His dress and style, purely Texan — lanky bones and tanned skin topped by a cowboy hat and bot-tomed by cowboy boots. But once Kapotas opens his mouth, his tone reveals origins closer to Ae-gian Sea than the Trinity River. He may be his own best crea-tion.

A native of Patras, Greece, Kapotas makes a ceremony out of the smallest niceties — such as kissing a woman's hand upon in-troduction. Then in a gesture one can describe only as "Georgian," he turns away and with great fan-fare takes the hand of one of his sculptures, a mermaid riding a dolphin, which he has carved from Texas limestone.

"I love my mermaid — can I hold her hand?" he politely asks permission, then does as he pleases. "After all, I carved her."

His relationship to his work is akin to the love that Pygmalion had for Galatea. It's a religion, an obsession, the recent realization of a promise made long ago and far away, when Kapotas, now 54, told his father: "One day, I will sculpt your bust." It's a promise he is now hoping to fulfill.

Kapotas' studio is as unconven-tional as he is. He works on the lot of his landscaping business on Main Street in Frisco, a Collin County town that bears few traces of the suburban bustle of neighboring Plano. Kapotas may not know everyone in town, but he greets strangers as old friends. He asks everyone his junior to call him "Grandpa George" and embraces new-found friends in the bosom of his family.

There probably isn't a soul in Frisco who hasn't stopped in dis-belief when driving past Kapotas' lot on the quiet town's main drag. It's populated with clusters of seals, mermaids, eagles, moun-tain lions, mushrooms, seas-capes, Indian heads, deer — any-thing Kapotas can create from his mind's eye and with indige-nous Texas rock. Although his landscape business bears his sur-name, his sculpturing business, appropriately, bears the name of the Greek god who was the patron of artists — Apollo.

Kapotas' odyssey from Greece to Texas began in 1958, when he came to Rockford, Ill., to study landscape engineering. "I spoke five words of English and had 85 cents to my name," he recalls. With the training he received, he built a landscaping business. Although he has returned to Greece for visits, the United States is home. He married an American and has four children and four grandchildren.

It was the desire to be closer to his grandchildren and to move to a warmer climate that led Kapo-tas and his wife to pull up stakes from Rockford three years ago and settle in Texas, where a daughter and her family were liv-ing at the time. With his only son, Nick, Kapotas started the land-scaping business in Frisco. Last fall, he began searching Mineral Wells and Pilot Point for lime-stone and sandstone to carve. He has never had a lesson. He simply picked up hammer and chisel and went to work.

Nick, too, is an incipient sculp-tor who enjoys working along with his father. He also reins in his father with comic relief. "I believe I was with Phidias, the sculptor of the Parthenon," Kapotas emotes, his deep brown eyes taking on a faraway look. "Maybe I was Phidias."

"And I was the water boy," Nick laughs. Kapotas is deadly serious about sculpting, and he hopes to turn it into a profitable business. As he describes it, when he finds rock, he may see a shape trapped within it, then carve everything away to release that shape.

He has little patience for mod-ern art that is abstract. "I re-create what God did," he says.

Murder, sex, bribery trials are under way across state

By JODY COX
Associated Press Writer

Texas courtrooms are the site of celebrated trials this spring as murder, sex and bribery cases — including three involving public officials — go before jurors.

A Waco district attorney is on trial in Austin on federal rack-eteering charges, a state district judge from Fort Worth is accused of giving leniency for sexual favors, and a San Antonio police officer faces murder charges in the shooting death of his former partner.

Other intriguing trials include a civil wrongful death suit against Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis and the capital murder trial of Jerry "Animal" McFadden, who led East Texas authorities on a three-day man-hunt last summer.

Two of the cases are in Fort Worth. The federal trial of State District Judge Tom Cave, which has seen a parade of prostitutes and convicted drug dealers testi-fy, is beginning its fifth week.

Cave, bail bondsman J. Dorsey Adams and attorney Ronald Ault-man are charged with conspiring to violate the civil rights of female probationers by forcing them to have sex with Cave in ex-change for leniency.

Cave, 57, who could be sent-enced to jail for 20 years and fined about $1 million if convicted, con-tends his legal troubles stem from a love affair with Rachel Perez Tallent, a 33-year-old for-mer prostitute, as his marriage of 30 years was falling apart.

In a Fort Worth civil case which began last week, Cullen Davis, who was acquitted 10 years ago of a double-murder at his mansion, is the defendant in a $8.5 million wrongful death law-suit arising from that case.

Andrea Wilborn, daughter of Priscilla Davis and Jack Wil-born, was one of two people shot to death at Davis' home on Aug. 10, 1976, by a black-garbed gunman who also wounded Mrs. Davis and a family friend. Priscilla and Cullen Davis were going through divorce proceedings at the time.

Mrs. Davis and Wilborn sued Davis seeking compensation for Miss Wilborn's death and for Mrs. Davis' injuries.

Meanwhile, McLennan County District Attorney Vic Feazell is standing trial in U.S. District Court in Austin on three counts of racketeering and five counts of mail fraud.

Feazell, who won re-election handily last fall despite being in-dicted, contends the charges were brought against him be-cause of his inquiry into the Hen-ry Lee Lucas serial murder con-fessions, which Lucas later re-tracted and said had been a hoax on law enforcement officers.
