Hemphill board OKs resignation of administrator Richard Arnold quits during Medicare flap

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

CANADIAN — Citing differences in philosophy and personality, Hemphill County Hospital Administrator Richard D. Arnold Jr. resigned Tuesday, ending a stormy 1½-year tenure at the hospital.

Hospital board members accepted Arnold's resignation with no open discussion or comment after an executive session at a called meeting Tuesday. The board appointed Deanne Miller, the hospital's office manager for eight years, as interim administrator.

Arnold's resignation becomes effective June 15, the day that Canadian's four doctors plan to stop admitting Medicare patients to the hospital because of perceived unfair inspections and sanctions against a few area doctors.

This morning, Arnold, 44, attributed his departure to "a difference in philosophies" he has with the hospital board. According to Arnold, the gap widened in April when two new board members, Jane Bartlett and Eugene Thompson, were elected.

"The Monday after the election, before they were sworn in, one of the new board members came in and said, 'Your days are numbered,'" Arnold said, declining to disclose which one made the remark.

Arnold observed that past boards were more "progressive" than the current board.

Thompson and Bartlett were among eight candidates seeking three board positions in the April election. Incumbent Sam Scrogins was re-elected to the board. Thompson confirmed this morning that the new makeup of the board may have prompted Arnold's departure.

"I think the voters felt it was time for a change," Thompson said. "I would not want to say anything in detail. But I think the hospital would be better off."

Thompson said he heard that the day after the election, Arnold "started taking things off the wall."

Miller, who was interim administrator before Arnold joined the staff, said the current board is "more conservative and willing to scrutinize things better."

"We need a closer union among the board, the hospital staff and the employees," Miller said. "We need to pull together, and I think we can."

Arnold added that the Medicare "bombshell" levied by four Canadian doctors May 13 also affected his decision. Earlier this month, physicians Valerie Verbi, Malouf Abraham, "Teddy" Darocha and William Issacs said that as of June 15, they will no longer admit Medicare patients to the hospital unless Medicare restrictions were lifted. The doctors were protesting what they felt was unfair treatment by the Texas Medical Foundation Peer Review Organization, which evaluates doctors participating in the Medicare program.

"I have a problem with physicians doing that in a community, because it puts the patients at risk," Arnold said today. "Although I agree with the doctors' concern, I don't think the hospital should continue putting the patients at risk."

Thompson said the Medicare threat "may or may not have been a contributing factor."

Arnold's departure comes on the heels of the April resignation of Dr. Robert Holmes.

According to The Canadian Record, Holmes resigned in April when the two new board members asked him about repayment of a $152,000 loan advanced to him during his first year of practice in Canadian in 1986. The newspaper reported that the loan from the hospital district was made public after the two board members took office in April.

When Holmes was hired in 1985, the hospital district agreed to provide "financial assistance" in the form of cash advances to defray moving costs, provision of facilities and personnel salaries. The advances were subject to re-

Deluge soaks area May rainfall tops 6 inches

From Staff and Wire Reports

Tornadoes were sighted in the southwestern section of the Texas Panhandle, but all Pampa had was clouds and a lot of rain Tuesday.

Showers and a heavy rainstorm around noon added 1.67 inches of rain to May's total, already above normal. The rains left Red Deer Creek swollen with runoff that at times reached several feet above the creek's bed. City streets also were several inches deep in water in places.

The muddy waters in the creek area left piles of debris above the banks and on top of bridges in the Central Park complex after the water began to recede some early Tuesday afternoon.

With rainfall from an early morning thundershower today still yet to be recorded, the latest rain totals pushed May's total moisture to 6.25 inches, according to KGRO-KOMX radio meteorologist Darrell Sehorn.

The total for the year to date is 11.75 inches, nearly 4 inches above the normal amount of 7.80 inches for the period, Sehorn said this morning. Sehorn estimated that about 0.20 inch fell after the 6:15 a.m. recording time today.

Both the monthly and yearly totals to date "are well above normal," he added.

Sehorn said more showers and thunderstorms, some possibly severe, can be expected today, with other chances for more showers continuing into Thursday and Friday.

Air museum cleared for takeoff

A proposed aviation museum in Pampa got at least one wheel off the ground Tuesday night when the local ambulance service offered to release the city from a contract on a potential site for the museum.

But the flight path isn't free of turbulence yet as the Pampa Army Air Field Reunion Association faces competition with other proposed projects for Memorial Park.

Addressing the City Commission at its regular meeting Tuesday, Pampa Area Supervisor Jim Howard said Rural-Metro Corp. personnel "recognize the popularity of aviation" and the PAAFRA air shows here.

Howard, who oversees the Rural-Metro Paramedic Ambulance Service in Pampa, said company officials have indicated that if the city wants to use the old pump station building at Memorial Park for an aviation museum, then the company will relinquish its rights to the property and use of the building.

Howard said the firm also would release the city from any obligations concerning its lease contract for the building with Rural-Metro.

Howard's statement was applauded by PAAFRA members who attended the meeting.

The City Commission then accepted Rural-Metro's offer of release from the contract.

Nina Spoonemore, PAAFRA executive secretary, thanked Howard for Rural-Metro's offer. "You can understand how very happy we are about this," she said.

Rural-Metro had previously obtained a lease contract with the city for moving its ambulance service into the former Pump Station No. 1 building on the south end of Memorial Park, located at Hobart and Ward. The ambulance service has not yet moved into the facilities.

Mayor David McDaniel said he feels it's appropriate for the PAAFRA to consider what procedures to pursue toward gaining approval for its proposed aviation museum at Memorial Park, across the street from

Colonel thought Reagan backed Contra supply

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The retired Air Force colonel who managed a private air resupply network for the Nicaraguan rebels testified today that White House aide Oliver L. North "indicated that we were working for the president of the United States."

Col. Robert C. Dutton, a former combat pilot in the Vietnam War, told Congress' Iran-Contra hearings that his mission in running the supply operation for the Contra guerrillas was similar to his work under President Carter in carrying out an abortive attempt to rescue American hostages held in Iran.

As the House and Senate investigative committees convened their fourth week of hearings on the Iran-Contra affair, Dutton said he worked directly under North, then a member of the National Security Council staff, and retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord. He said Secord had been deputy chief of the earlier covert operation to rescue hostages in Iran.

Asked about his understanding of President Reagan's role in the Contra resupply operation, Dutton replied that North, a Marine lieutenant colonel, was in charge of policy for the mission but "he indicated we were working for the president of the United States."

Dutton said that when he returned from Central America in September 1986, satisfied with the outcome of his mission, North had told him:

"This has been a success. You'll never get a medal for this, but someday the president will shake your hand and thank you."

He said North and Secord had emphasized that "we were working with donated funds" for the Contra operation. For two years, from October 1984 to October 1986, direct and indirect U.S. military aid to the Contras was forbidden by Congress.

Dutton, who retired from the Air Force a year ago after more than 26 years' service, testified under limited immunity from prosecution. Last December, citing constitutional protection against self-incrimination, Dutton had refused to answer questions asked by the Senate Intelligence Committee.

A member of the House investigating committee, Rep. Michael DeWine, R-Ohio, said Dutton was capable of explaining "exactly what was going on in Central America, how the drops were carried out, the mechanics of it."

The week was to have begun with testimony from Albert Hakim, an Iranian-American businessman and partner of Gen. Secord, who ran much of the Iran arms sale deal and the diversion of profits to help the Contras.

But in private interviews that stretched through the weekend, Hakim raised new issues and left so many questions unanswered that investigators were not prepared to go ahead with his testimony. His appearance is being postponed until next week.

Hakim controlled the Swiss bank accounts used in the deals, and — according to an earlier deposition — still controls bank accounts containing $8 million left over from the transactions.

DeWine said Hakim had told investigators he still is holding an account containing an unspecified amount of money earmarked for Secord, but that Secord had told him he did not want the money.

payment over a three-year period.

Under the loan agreement, approved by the board on Dec. 11, 1985, it was expected that Holmes' professional fees from patient billings would total about $20,000 per month for the first year. The district also agreed to pay Holmes $5,000 in moving expenses from Borger to Canadian, agreed to advance $750 per month for office facilities, plus $2,500 per month for two employees' salaries and $5,000 for supplies.

The agreement stipulated that after the first 12 months, Holmes was to repay the hospital in 24 interest-free monthly payments.

The Record reported that Bartlett and Thompson asked Holmes in April why he had not repaid on the loan. Holmes reportedly answered that he would repay the loan when he was able and that an insurance policy naming the hosrains fell in the area. The flood warnings continued in effect today in anticipation of additional rain.

A tornado watch was issued for the northeastern Panhandle Tuesday afternoon, lasting until 10 p.m. Tornado spotters were out around the Pampa area watching the skies as the thunderstorm cells swept through the area.

Pampa had a high Tuesday of 66 degrees, with a low this morning of 58. High for today and Friday is expected to reach only near 70.

Heavy showers also were reported in other cities in the surrounding area, including Lefors, McLean, Canadian, Wheeler, Miami, Mobeetie and Shamrock, with roads swollen with runoff in many areas.

Elsewhere in the state, storm warnings were common in West Texas for the second day in a row as heavy thunderstorms tracked across the Panhandle and Permian Basin, producing funnel clouds and tornadoes.

A twister called "a little small deal" by a Friona motel owner danced in the parking lot of the business for a few minutes around noon Tuesday.

Several other funnel clouds were reported early Tuesday afternoon in and around Friona and Hereford, about 50 to 75 miles southwest of Amarillo. No damaging tornadoes or serious injuries had been reported this morning.

According to Ed Lemons, owner of Sutter's Inn on U.S. Highway 60 in Friona, "It didn't look real stormy" right before a tornado hit the parking lot of the business.

"The first thing I knew something was wrong was when I saw the Dumpster behind Dairy Queen start rolling, and a whole bunch of loose rock started whirling around," he said.

"Then it came over near our lot. It was just a little small deal, but they still scare ya, anyway," Lemons said, adding that he and his wife had only enough time to seek cover in their ground floor motel offices.

The tornado caused minor damage to a truck and farm equipment behind a house being rising into the clouds, said Friona police dispatcher Doris Richards. The tornado was one of three funnel clouds spotted in the area at the time.

A total of 18 severe thunderstorm and tornado warnings had been issued by the weather service by late Monday, although officials were "too busy" Tuesday to have tallied all warnings for the two-day onslaught of severe storms.

"This isn't really that unusual," said NWS spokesman Chuck Hodgkinson, adding that conditions were ideal for tornado activity over the past two days because a mass of moist, unstable air aloft ran into a dry air mass.

"The only thing is, this should have all started about 30 days ago," he said.

In the Permian Basin, the weather service reported a tornado on the ground in Ector County about three miles northwest of Penwell about 5:20 p.m. However, a sheriff's dispatcher said that although he had received "jillions" of reports of funnel clouds, his deputies in the field had seen none.

A Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Department dispatcher said a funnel cloud also touched down in an open field between Friona and Hereford, causing no damage.

Hereford police reported several funnel clouds over the eastern half of Deaf Smith County at 12:23 p.m.

Storms also produced heavy rains in other parts of the Panhandle Tuesday.

In Amarillo, a thunderstorm that bombarded the city about 3:30 p.m. caused street underpasses to flood, and some residents called the city street department reporting water coming into their basements.

City crews had two pumps draining Lawrence Lake, said Mike Kennedy of the city's engineering department.

It rained on and off all day before hail, lightning and sheets of water startled the city in mid-afternoon.

News Editor Larry Hollis and The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Expert to discuss grants

Financial development consultant Jon Guthrie of The Guthrie Institute will conduct an economic development workshop, sponsored by Pampa's Main Street Project, at 2 p.m. Thursday in the Lovett Memorial Library auditorium.

The workshop may be attended by anyone interested in developing financial alternatives or in developing individual skills as a financial development specialist, said Main Street Project Director Lyn Moulton.

Moulton said there is no tuition fee charged. Guthrie said the workshop will provide helpful information in setting up a systematic approach to continuously request funding from the 33,000 private foundations in the United States, including 2,000 alone in Texas.

Moulton said the Pampa workshop also is designed to obtain feedback from community agencies as to whether Guthrie's institute has something significant to offer to Pampa.

Guthrie said private sector grants are awarded to many types of seekers, including individuals and for-profit businesses in addition to community agencies and non-profit organizations.

The most common recipients are educational institutions, direct service organizations (such as indigent health care programs), hospitals, research facilities, associations and professional organizations, museums, performing arts groups, governmental agencies, libraries and churches, Guthrie said.

He said grants are given for any number of reasons, including community firefighting, urban renewal, downtown revitalization, litter control, education, museums, research, youth groups and countless other programs.

Guthrie noted cutbacks in federal and state funds have added significantly to the financial shortfalls of many programs. Yet many programs seem better off financially than ever before, he added.

"It's a real dichotomy," Guthrie said. "Financial cutbacks have proved to be a windfall to programs that have finally discovered that there are alternative funds available for just about any purpose you would care to mention."

He said the private sector makes about $56 billion available every year to keep the nation's non-profit, education and church programs going, according to one source. Not all of the money is in cash, since volunteer services and "in-kind" donations are also included.

These funds and services are available for classroom teachers, religious activities, museums, law enforcement, libraries, boys and girls clubs, students looking for scholarships, artists, writers, poets, dancers, inventors and numerous others, Guthrie said.

Guthrie teaches workshops and seminars in funding development for The Guthrie Institute, which he founded. He also works as a development consultant and a magazine writer and teaches courses in fiction and nonfiction writing techniques.

Carmichael-Whalley Funeral Directors.

McDaniel suggested the association should make its pitch before the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board, noting the board had recommended the naming of the park and plans for development of the site.

The board has approved landscaping plans to turn the site into an aesthetic green area with grass and trees, with low use of the park planned because of its proximity to heavily-traveled Hobart Street. The Parks and Recreation Department has already begun initial work on the park, which will include installation of a water sprinkler system.

Pampa veteran John Triplehorn, with the support of the local Veterans of Foreign Wars post, has appeared before the board to ask that Memorial Park be considered for location of a memorial to Gray County veterans who have died in wars. The board has taken no action on the request; Triplehorn said the memorial is still in the planning stages.

Tuesday night Jerry Richards told commissioners he also has a proposal for the park involving an arts and culture center.

The reunion association wants to turn the old pump station building into an aviation museum in memory of the former B-25 training airfield located near Pampa during part of World War II. Included in its plans are the placement of a B-25 on a brick foundation at the park site.

Association President W.C. Ferguson of Magnolia, Ariz., has written a letter to the commission stating, "It has been a dream of the (PAAFR) for many years to establish a museum and depository to preserve our heritage for future generations. It is our heartfelt wish that this be in the park system of Pampa.

"For thousands of us of the Army Air Corps and civilian personnel, Pampa Army Air Field was not only a training base but our home away from home.

"Therefore, our reunion association believes with all our hearts that Pampa is the place to preserve our memorabilia, our uniforms, silver wings and our hearts for generations who never knew the ugly years of World War II. With this thought we shall pledge any and all properties presented the association as a permanent home of our dedication.

"If and when such a park can be presented, you may rest assured our goal will be to preserve this spot as a memorial to the binding ties of the citizens of Pampa and to the young men and women who gave through their efforts, and often their lives, that we might remain a free people."

Association officials have indicated they hope to be able to have enough progress on the museum to have it dedicated during their reunion in August.

In other matters Tuesday, the commissioners awarded a bid for a sound system at M.K. Brown Auditorium to Tarpley Music Co. of Lubbock for $21,946.

Before the bid was approved, Ward 2 Commissioner Richard Peet raised questions concerning what was included in the bid price concerning installation, adjustments and service. City Attorney Don Lane, looking at the bid folder submitted by Tarpley, said the price included a one-year warranty, free on-site service and labor for one year, and one on-site training session.

Saragosa survivors look to uncertain future

SARAGOSA (AP) — Isidro Casillas wept softly as he threw a fistful of dirt onto caskets in the tornado-ravaged land that residents have vowed not to relinquish.

Casillas, who was in nearby Balmorhea when the tornado robbed him of his wife and two of six children, watched as others followed suit Tuesday, kicking and tossing soil into the pit until a fine layer of dust covered both caskets.

"Today we bid farewell to men and women who loved Jesus and his church and who loved their family and would die for their children... they will be missed," said Bishop Raymond Pena of the El Paso diocese, who said a funeral Mass from the back of a trailer.

Thousands of people joined with the residents of this little town as they buried 17 of the 29 people killed when a tornado swept through last Friday. The wind's fury decimated about 70 percent of the town and left 162 people injured.

Scores of pallbearers carried 16 caskets, one holding the bodies of a mother and her baby, and put them in two neat rows for the funeral Mass as the crowd pressed in for a better view.

One by one, 12 caskets were lowered into the ground in the Saragosa cemetery. Four were buried later in Balmorhea.

Pena, standing near a statue of Jesus that had withstood the storm's winds, reminded the mourners that while their church had been destroyed in the storm, its foundation was intact.

"The foundation of your faith is equally intact," Pena said. "On that we will build the new community of Saragosa."

Many said they would rebuild and start over with the help of federal aid — President Reagan declared the town a federal disaster area Tuesday — but it was too early for others to decide what lies ahead for them.

"Right now I don't have too many plans at all. I haven't thought about it," said Manuel Mondragon, whose house was demolished and brother killed when the twister struck.

"You see all these people?" asked Ramon Olgin, Mondragon's cousin. "Most of them are family. That's where the strength will come from... Even though you see death and destruction, you find a lot of determination to rebuild."

Mondragon agreed. "It's our land. It's worth it," he said. "It's our land."

An American Red Cross spokeswoman said the disaster had prompted pledges of $470,000 from 12,700 people through the Red Cross' toll-free phone number.

Also, Gov. Bill Clements came to town announced that Reagan had declared Saragosa a disaster area, clearing the way for low-interest home loans, temporary housing and grants of up to $5,000 for those who qualify.

When reporters asked why he had not visited Saragosa earlier, Clements said a representative from his office toured the town Saturday, allowing him to expedite the disaster declaration process. He accused the media of manufacturing an issue.

"While you're doing the talking, we're doing the action," he said. "None of these people (state and local officials) would have been here if I hadn't been involved."

Saragosa resident Phillip Lopez, however, told Clements "people are ticked off" by delays in aid and officials' neglect in not dispatching National Guardsmen to secure the area from looting Friday night.

Saragosa resident Braulia Natividad, 28, complained to Clements about thievery and then, near tears, said, "He (Clements) makes me sick, because he should have been out here Saturday."

The tornado, which left more than 150 people homeless, caused an estimated $1.4 million in damage, said Reeves County Sheriff Raul Florez. Clements, however, said that dollar amounts shouldn't be considered in money or property when rebuilding the town.

"This is not a dollar problem," the governor said. "This is a people problem."

Jack DeVore, an aide to Sen. Lloyd Bensten, said federal, state and local agencies will set up an office in the Balmorhea High School to help residents apply for federal relief. The office should be ready by Friday or Saturday, DeVore said.

Winds rip platform from skyscraper

HOUSTON (AP) — Lunch-hour pedestrians watched in horror as gusty winds ripped a thousand-pound window-washing platform from the top of a downtown skyscraper and hurled it to the street below, killing two men aboard it and a woman on the street.

"All I could see was a border of black coming down," a shaken witness, Dick Dentley, said after the Tuesday incident. "It was horrible. I was thinking, 'My God, people, get out of the way!' But you can't."

"Even if I had hollered, it was too late. By that time I was speechless."

The platform was near the top of the 36-floor Pennzoil Building, possibly the 31st floor, and hit the street shortly after noon, striking two female pedestrians at a busy intersection.

"I was just standing on the corner, waiting for the light to change," Julia Comeau, 35, said. Someone yelled the scaffolding was coming down.

"It hit me. I didn't have time to move. I couldn't see. I didn't have time to move. This person to my left was just knocked out flat. It's just a miracle. You're never prepared for these things. You're just so damn lucky you're alive."

Ms. Comeau suffered cuts and bruises and underwent foot surgery Tuesday.

The woman standing next to her, Emily Perry, 37, was killed immediately, authorities said. Also killed instantly were the two window washers, identified as Baudilio Argueta, 23, and Efraim Ribas, 47, both of Houston and both five-year employees of the window-washing firm.

"They rode it down. They were locked into it," Deputy Fire Chief L.O. Martin said. "These men were dead on impact and so was the lady. There was no help for them."

Four bolts anchoring the window-washing platform to a permanent track at the top of the building gave way as stiff winds blew the scaffolding sideways, Martin said.

"These skyhooks are designed to go up and down. It appears the wind blew it sideways and when it got to the end of the track it came off. They (the victims) did have their safety harnesses on, but it's just that the whole machine came down," he said. "There was no way to control it."

Homicide detectives were investigating because of the magnitude of the accident, police said. A separate investigation was being conducted by the U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

OSHA Area Director Gerald Baty said the federal agency's probe would not be complete for at least two weeks.

Winds were unusually strong Tuesday, gusting to 25 mph at the time of the accident, according to the National Weather Service. Martin said he was unaware of any city regulations that limited window-washing due to high winds.

It took work crews about two hours to pry the bodies from the twisted wreckage as hundreds of pedestrians watched the gruesome scene.

"The thing that surprised me is that it's only three. It could have been much worse," said Paul Pepe, director of city emergency services.

Pat Harris, a spokeswoman with Gerald Hines Interests, which manages the building, said the accident was the first of its kind at the modern black-glassed skyscraper.

Mobeetie graduates will miss closeness

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MOBEETIE — A class with eight people develops a special closeness and Mobeetie's top graduates, Diane Moffett and Steve Bunn, are going to miss such closeness.

But all things must pass and Moffett and Bunn say they're ready to move on.

Moffett, 17, daughter of James and Alesha Moffett, is the 1987 Mobeetie valedictorian. She will attend Amarillo College, where she will study to be a legal secretary.

Moffett has attended Mobeetie since she was in kindergarten and her commitment to her school shows in her involvement in activities. She played basketball and volleyball for four years and was on the cross-country team as a freshman. She has been Future Farmers of America secretary for three years. She won the Citizenship Award at the Top O' Texas Stock Show in March.

In University Interscholastic League activities, Moffett qualified for state in typing in 1986 and won numerous acting honors in zone, district and regional competition.

Bunn, 19, son of James and Barbara Bunn, will attend Clarendon College, Pampa, to major in psychology. He moved to Mobeetie from Miami in the eighth grade and believes Mobeetians are friendlier.

His school profile has been more low-key. He served on the student council as a sophomore and the annual staff as a senior. He has been active in Future Farmers of America for three years and the Pep Club his senior year.

Neither Moffett nor Bunn are apprehensive about pulling up roots to attend college. They plan to bypass the wild college scene by living with family members.

Still, said Moffett, "I'm not used to large courses, and there were not as many courses offered here."

Moffett said Mobeetie prepared her "in some areas."

"But in other areas, I feel that if I tried harder, I'd be better prepared," she said, adding that she plans to "get more involved with classes" at college.

However, with her one-act honors behind her, she hinted she may get involved with the AC theater department.

Bunn agreed with Moffett that the limited course selection has hindered.

"But it's been pretty good," he said. "I think I'm prepared. You get more attention and help at a small school."

Student anti-smoking bills clear Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate unanimously approved a bill to ban students from smoking at public schools and at school-sponsored events.

Teachers' lounges would be excluded from the bill, which was amended to make clear that the bill applied only to students.

Before the House-approved bill was returned to the House Tuesday on a 30-0 vote, it also was amended to make it a misdemeanor for a person to sell or distribute a cigarette or other tobacco product to a youth under 18 years of age.

Senators approved a bill that would impose a 2 percent state gross receipts tax on bingo, which would raise over $5 million a year. The measure was returned to the House with amendments on voice vote.

Another fundraiser would increase certain fees and fines in the law requiring auto liability insurance. The minimum fine for failure to have liability insurance would increase from $75 to $150, and the fee for reinstating a suspended license would go up from $20 to $50.

The Department of Public Safety would receive 90 percent of the receipts, estimated at $8 million to $9 million a year for the first two years. Cities and counties would get about $1.5 million a year.

The bill was amended to require proof of liability insurance when a person buys a car, gets it inspected or obtains license plates. The measure was returned to the House on voice vote.

The Senate passed and sent to the governor a House-approved bill that would set state salaries paid to district judges and appeals court justices at levels closer to salaries paid to Texas Supreme Court justices.

Effective Sept. 1, 1989, a district judge would receive 10 percent less than a Supreme Court justice, and appeals judges would get 5 percent less. Supreme Court justices currently receive $78,795 a year.

In other action Tuesday, the Senate approved proposals that would:

— Require all structures built or repaired after June 1, 1988, to be inspected in order to qualify for wind and hail insurance from the CATPOOL, or Texas Catastrophic Property Insurance Pool. The bill was sent to the governor on voice vote.

— Allow victims to appear in person at parole hearings. The bill was amended and returned to the House on voice vote.

— Require the Industrial Accident Board to determine allowable medical fees under the workers' compensation law.

Convicted killer faces fourth execution date

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Texas prison officials prepared the death chamber for a fourth time for a Houston man convicted of the 1978 rape-slaying of a 13-year-old girl.

Anthony Charles Williams, who was 18 when he was sentenced to lethal injection for the death of Vickie Lynn Wright of Houston, awaited execution before dawn Thursday.

Williams, now 27, won a reprieve from a federal appeals court April 13, a few hours before he was to be put to death at the Department of Corrections Walls Unit in Huntsville.

"Let's hope it goes through this time," said Beth Wright, the slain girl's mother. "I don't know how much more of this I can take. I'm sick and tired of it."

"He's been through the system. He's fully litigated," Assistant Attorney General Bob Walt said, adding that the state would oppose any request by Williams' attorneys for another reprieve.

Miss Wright was abducted outside a Houston bowling alley as she returned to a friend's pickup truck to get some change. Her body — battered with a two-by-four board — was found the next day. She also had been strangled, then raped after she was dead, authorities said.

Senate committee OKs abortion bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill that would ban third-trimester abortions is heading to the Senate floor for debate, but at least one senator predicts that a filibuster will clog the proceedings.

The Senate Health and Human Services committee approved a bill regulating late-term abortions by a 5-3 vote Tuesday, the second time it approved such a measure this session.

A Senate bill, sponsored by Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, earlier passed the committee, but remains pending in the Senate.

With less than a week remaining in the legislative session, the chances of passage for the bill approved Tuesday appeared slim, lawmakers said.

Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, said he will filibuster against the measure if it reaches the Senate floor.

"I don't think the state has any business being involved in that at all," Washington said.

But Lyon said the threat won't stop him from pushing the bill forward. He said he has 27 or 28 votes for an abortion regulation bill, and "if somebody wants to do it (filibuster), let them do it."

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Private interests blend with forest

The Wilderness Society, an old-line environmental group, has criticized U.S. Forest Service plans to intensify timber sales from government lands over the next 50 years. This is an issue where the interests of environmentalists and taxpayers coincide.

The Forest Service does not have a mandate to consider the economic consequences of its decisions, and has a long history of selling timber from government lands at well below actual costs — sometimes below the costs of administering the sales. That's probably the case here.

In effect, the government is subsidizing the destruction of some of the forest resources it owns (supposedly "in trust" for the public). The taxpayers pay for these practices directly. Indirect costs include loss of recreational resources and environmental amenities (admittedly difficult to calculate), and undercutting the private timber market.

Timber production in this country is in transition, from timber "mining" in old-growth areas like the Rockies and the Pacific Northwest, to tree "farming," employing sophisticated reforestation practices and intensive management. Most of the farming occurs on private lands, while most of the mining occurs on public lands. A major problem is that much of the mining doesn't even recover what taxpayers pay to administer the programs.

The Congressional Research Service has estimated that the Forest Service lost about $1.6 billion on its timber sales during the 11 years up to 1984. Some studies put the figure at $2.1 billion. According to the General Accounting Office, 96 percent of sales in the Rocky Mountain region in 1982 were below-cost, and 88 percent were below-cost in 1981. In 1983, for every taxpayer dollar spent in timber sales in Alaska, two cents (right!) were returned.

When land is government-owned, there is little or no incentive for its managers to use it in an economically sensible way. The government owns many forest plots that it simply doesn't make economic sense to harvest for timber, but it does so anyway. As it happens, many of those plots are in areas the Wilderness Society and other environmentalists would prefer to see unmarred by logging roads and other development.

If the Forest Service didn't feel impelled to sell timber, even at a loss, it is likely that most of those areas would remain unharvested and relatively wild — available for recreational use or just plain enjoyment by hardy wilderness lovers.

The practice of subsidizing timber sales from government lands discourages the optimal use of private lands in ways that might even drive down the cost of building supplies in the long run. A 1980 Forest Industry Council study suggested that domestic timber demand could be met by private timber lands alone.

The best way to assure rational, accountable management of timber lands would be to privatize government lands. Short of that, the law should be changed to mandate that the Forest Service take economic considerations into account, and end timber sales that don't recover the full costs of making the sales. This is a case where sound economics and sound ecology coincide.

Woman has valid crusade

A columnist is supposed to express opinions, not regrets, but any honest one occasionally feels obliged to reconsider an unfair judgment made in haste. I owe Tipper Gore an apology.

Gore, the wife of senator and presidential aspirant Albert Gore Jr. (D-Tenn.), is best known for her leadership of the Parent's Music Resource Center, which was to combat pornographic and violent elements in contemporary rock music. In September 1985, shortly after some well-publicized congressional hearings on the subject, I wrote a column endorsing an industry decision to put warning labels on raunchy records and cassettes.

Reasonable enough. But I also had some harsh words for some of those raising the fuss: "This is one of those disputes in which it's hard to root for either party. On one side are the familiar prudes and Moral Majoritarians, allied with some busybodies whose chief credentials are the men they are married, including such capital big shots as Treasury Secretary James Baker and Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee."

Some of the people included in that indictment got only what they had coming. Some right-wing elements will use any excuse to drive the government into decisions about what Americans will be allowed to read, see or hear. All this was happening not long after Attorney General Edwin Meese had appointed a commission on pornography whose purpose was to justify precisely such intrusions.

But Tipper Gore deserved better. (In my defense, I was no kinder to some of her critics.) She recently has published a book, "Raising PG Kids in an X-Rated Society," which makes clear both her credentials for addressing this problem and her preference for dealing with it through means that don't endanger the freedom of adults.

The PMRC crusade often is caricatured as just one more example of rock music's capacity to appeal to teen-agers by infuriating their parents. The glib attitude is: Elvis was racy, and so were the Rolling Stones, and those of us who grew up listening to them turned out all right, so what's the big deal? Gore, citing hundreds of examples of how things have changed, shows that much of today's rock has gone beyond the risqué to the revolting.

To describe some of the lyrics and photos contained in the records of Slayer, W.A.S.P. and Def Leppard is to risk being an accomplice to their offenses against healthy sensibilities. But Gore, a rock fan herself, deserves credit for having the stomach to document the widespread infatuation with violence, sexual sadism and Satanism.

One of the few that can be mentioned in a family newspaper is W.A.S.P.'s habit of including in its live shows "simulated acts of extreme violence against half-nude women involving torture racks, attacks with knives and circular saw blades and, of course, much fake blood." Alice Cooper, whose performances run along similar lines, advises "anybody in the first few rows to wear blood bibs or raincoats."

Most people would agree that this is not the sort of thing to which children should be exposed. Appallingly, in most places, in the absence of parental knowledge and control, there are no obstacles to this exposure. The city of San Antonio, in a step applauded by Gore, has passed an ordinance barring children younger than 14 from lewd and violent rock concerts unless they are accompanied by their parents.

That is hardly the stuff of dangerous repression. In fact, measures to protect children become all the more critical the greater the freedom granted adults. In a society in which, say, pornography is unavailable to anyone, children can be allowed access to anything on the newsstand. Once it becomes available, restrictions are needed to shield those who lack the maturity to exercise such choices responsibly.

Gore, however, stresses that parents can do much without the help of the government — monitoring their children's entertainment, complaining to record and video stores that behave irresponsibly, canceling subscriptions with cable operators who refuse to provide lockboxes. "The market carries only what consumers buy," she writes. "But if we educate ourselves and communicate our concerns to the entertainment industry, we can bring to bear our powerful consumer influence for more socially responsible media programming."

In a society that cherishes freedom enough to tolerate its offensive manifestations, all adults have an obligation to help preserve the sanctity of childhood. Tipper Gore, who has not been deterred by the abuse of rock musicians or the scorn of journalists, deserves the gratitude of both parents and children for trying to awaken Americans to that duty.

Burning corn in our tanks

It would solve four major problems at once if we would burn farm crops as fuel in our automobiles.

Less dependency on foreign oil. Less trade deficit.

Less agricultural surplus.

Less pollution.

If we would just turn grain into alcohol and burn that in our cars.

Eventually we will.

This should help.

A prominent Texan is recommending it. Vice President George Bush says we need new uses for our surplus farm products and the "ripe one" is ethanol.

Ethanol is an alcohol that can be distilled from corn, wheat, barley, potatoes, or sugar cane.

Mr. Bush says it is time now to utilize this great resource.

Presently only 8 percent of the gasoline sold in the United States contains ethanol.

Our country's total ethanol production last year was 750 million gallons, which was manufactured from 300 million bushels of corn.

The vice president sees no reason we should not be converting a billion bushels of corn into ethanol within the next 30 months.

Alcohol fuel is nothing new. All Indianapolis race cars have run exclusively on alcohol fuels for the past 14 years.

Right now, today, there are buses in San Francisco running with pure 100 percent alcohol fuel, in the gas tank.

Ethanol blended gasolines — one part ethanol and nine parts gasoline — burn cleaner, are more efficient, have higher octane than ordinary gasoline.

GM, Ford and Chrysler welcome the use of ethanol blends in their warrantied cars.

There would be a further enormous dollar benefit to Detroit if we'd burn more corn in our cars. American farmers could afford to buy more cars and farm equipment — and 85 percent of America's Midwest farmers own American-made vehicles.

And the cities have a stake in the cleaner air that alcohol fuels provide.

Then what is holding up this inevitable switch-over? Cost. At 56 pounds of corn to produce 2½ gallons, it still costs more to produce ethanol than to produce gasoline — but with crude oil prices inching upward again, and with production costs for ethanol going down, the alcohol blends will very soon be cheaper.

Make no mistake, the petroleum industry can switch over in a hurry when it wants to. It proved that in 1975 with an almost "overnight" switch from leaded to unleaded fuels.

I've seen a letter from Vice President Bush to the administrator of the EPA that should expedite this too-long delayed evolution.

Firms find skilled workers inside prison

By Robert Walters

PHOENIX, Ariz. (NEA) — "Good morning, Best Western," chirps the young woman in her cheeriest voice as she answers a telephone call from a traveler seeking lodging at one of the chain's 3,300 properties in almost 40 countries.

In the same room, more than a dozen other reservation agents perform similar tasks, speaking with potential customers through telephone headsets and using computer terminals to check on the price and availability of motel space.

Scores of airlines, rental car companies and other lodging chains operate similar reservation centers, but the Best Western facility here is different: It is located inside the Arizona Center for Women, a state prison, and all of the agents are inmates.

Establishing businesses inside prison walls is hardly new. For decades, many states have relied upon prison industries to manufacture not only license plates but also furniture, highway signs and other products.

The federal government's prison industries program, more than 50 years old and known as UNICOR, makes and sells in excess of 100 products, including sofas, chairs, aprons, bed sheets, shoes and work gloves.

In all of those cases, however, the goods are sold to other government agencies. In most cases, transactions with non-government corporations or other institutions are prohibited by law.

In mid-1981, however, Arizona launched an ambitious program, under the banner of ARCOR (for Arizona Correctional Enterprises, that encouraged private sector cooperation to develop marketable skills for its inmates.

"The enlightened prison program in Arizona" was praised by then-Chief Justice Warren Burger of the U.S. Supreme Court, who argued that "we need to transform America's prisons from warehouses into factories with fences around them."

Such initiatives, Burger and other proponents suggested, would enhance the inmates' dignity and self-esteem, help rehabilitate them and reduce the financial burden imposed upon taxpayers by the country's prison systems.

No state was as fully committed to the concept as Arizona, although Minnesota, Kansas and others experimented with joint business ventures with private firms. (In one of California's few programs, prisoners in Los Angeles serve as reservation agents for Trans World Airlines.)

The ARCOR effort, however, has been plagued by political, managerial and financial problems. Although supposedly a profit-making venture, it has been a chronic money-loser with a deficit that has recently exceeded $2 million annually and now totals more than $11 million.

The goal of providing jobs for 20 percent of all inmates in Arizona's prisons has never been met. Growth has been unplanned and uncontrolled. State employees assigned to run the program have been accused of fraud and embezzlement.

A cooperative venture with a slaughterhouse collapsed when the company went bankrupt. A planned joint venture with a water bed producer never materialized.

A cooperative effort with a sheet metal firm to manufacture office partitions was abandoned after leaders of local unions complained that their members were unfairly "competing with convicted felons for jobs."

The ARCOR experiment has illustrated the special difficulties posed by public-private prison partnerships — but the Best Western success has demonstrated the value of carefully structured joint ventures.

U.S. weighs options to protect tankers against attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, weighing options to protect oil tankers against Iranian attack, may increase U.S. naval forces in the Arabian Sea or ask Britain, France and other allies to provide air cover for the Persian Gulf.

A third option under consideration, U.S. officials said Tuesday, is to ask an unidentified gulf country for landing rights for American fighter planes.

"We're not planning another D-Day," said an official in discussing on an anonymous basis ways to protect the 11 Kuwaiti tankers that will fly the U.S. flag beginning probably in early June. "But we must decide how to do it."

The Navy, meanwhile, took the unexpected step of escorting a Kuwaiti merchant ship carrying U.S. arms to Bahrain, the Pentagon disclosed Tuesday night. The ship carrying American-made M-60 tanks sold to Bahrain completed its journey Monday night "without incident," the Pentagon said.

President Reagan, in an interview published today, said he sees no danger of America getting into war with Iran.

"We are not out to attack, but if fired upon we'll fire back," Reagan was quoted as saying in the London daily, The Independent. The president was interviewed in the White House on Tuesday by reporters from six foreign newspapers. "I don't see the danger of a war. I don't see how it could possibly start," the president was quoted as saying. "As a matter of fact, we are doing everything we can to try and bring about an end to the (Iran-Iraq) war that we have."

Reagan will meet later in the week with the National Security Council. He is focusing his attention on the talks he will join in Venice on June 8-10 with the leaders of six other industrialized countries.

Among them are Britain and France, the two key allies in erecting a Western deterrent to Iranian attacks on Gulf shipping. So far this year, 20 ships, 16 of them connected with Kuwait, were struck.

The Iranians have never attacked a U.S. flag ship. They boarded a freighter last year to check for contraband and then let it proceed.

After Iraq attacked the American frigate USS Stark last week, killing 37 sailors, Reagan ordered U.S. naval forces in the area to fire at any aircraft that flew in a menacing pattern near them.

In other developments: —The remains of 36 of the men killed aboard the Stark arrived Tuesday at Dover Air Force Base, Del., where relatives and fellow sailors attended a solemn ceremony. The body of the 37th victim has not been found. With a huge American flag as a backdrop, Adm. Carlisle A.H. Trost, chief of naval operations, said: "We find it hard to understand why fate has singled them out. But we do know that they were doing a tough job... that they died in the service of their country, believing to the end in its wonderful ideals."

—Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger called on the North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies in Brussels on Tuesday to provide help in trying to keep gulf oil-shipping lanes open.

More bail denials seen following ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court's approval of pretrial detention could lead more states to deny bail to accused criminals who are considered a threat to the community.

The ruling was welcomed by the Reagan administration and law enforcement officials but denounced by critics who said it violates individual rights and could promote racism.

The 6-3 high court ruling Tuesday said people accused of crimes may be jailed without bail while awaiting trial if a judge decides they are a threat to public safety.

"An element of racism will creep in," said Randolph Jonakait of New York Law School. "White judges will see young blacks as more of a threat" than others, he said.

"For the first time the court is sanctioning imprisoning people for their status. Before, you could lock them up only for something they have done," he said.

Jonakait said judges and prosecutors lack the ability to predict accurately who is likely to commit a crime while on bail. "Psychiatrists can't do it and neither can the courts," he said.

The administration said public safety will be enhanced by the ruling.

Terry Eastland, a Justice Department spokesman, said that from September 1985 to February of this year, federal law enforcement officials have successfully petitioned courts 2,500 times to hold a person in jail without bail.

"The ultimate impact of the court's decision will be on the streets of our nation," said Eastland. "We think that preventive detention is an effective law enforcement tool."

Attorney General Robert Corbin of Arizona, which has a preventive detention law similar to the federal statute, predicted more states will enact laws to deny bail on the basis of danger to the community.

"We're very pleased," he said. "I'm sure more states will attempt to enact" such laws. It is also likely that some states with preventive detention will strengthen them to conform to the federal law, he said.

Twenty-four states and the District of Columbia deny bail on the basis of a defendant's perceived dangerousness, but most of those laws are not as sweeping as the federal law upheld Tuesday.

The justices upheld the pretrial detention of two reputed Mafia leaders in New York City who were denied bail on grounds they would likely engage in continued underworld activities if allowed to go free.

Average teacher pay is $26,704; fed support lowest in 20 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average salary for the nation's 2.2 million public school teachers is now $26,704, and the cost of educating each student in grades K-12 is just under $4,000 a year, the National Education Association said today.

The teacher union, in its annual compendium of school statistics, also reported that the federal share of the public school budget has dropped to its lowest level in more than two decades: 6.2 percent.

NEA President Mary Hatwood Futrell scheduled a news conference today to release the report.

"The public is clamoring for education reform, yet education revenues are barely keeping pace with inflation, and federal funding is on the decline. It's time to take a good look at what's needed to bring about real education reform," she said in a statement.

The NEA contends that taxpayers will have to pump 20 to 25 percent more money into teacher salaries and other public school expenses each year if they want to see dramatic improvements in children's learning.

Public school revenues were up by nearly $10 billion, or 6.3 percent, to $160.9 billion for the 1986-87 school year. Since 1976-77, school revenues have shot up 114 percent.

But adjusting for inflation, "public school revenues increased by only 13.8 percent over the decade," according to the NEA report. "Estimates of School Statistics: 1986-87."

Bill Kristol, chief of staff to Secretary of Education William J. Bennett, dismissed Futrell's criticisms, saying that total national spending on the schools has gone up every year.

"It's an advantage to have the money spent at the state and local level, where it's more likely to be spent responsibly," Kristol said. "It's really amazing that after the last two decades, when we increased federal spending and achievement went down, that the NEA is still obsessed with federal spending."

The salary figures, enrollment numbers and other data are the NEA's own estimates based on a survey of state education departments. It is the 45th year that the union's research department has compiled the statistics.

Last year, when consumer prices rose less than 2 percent, the average teacher got a 5.9 percent pay raise that boosted his or her salary from $25,206 to $26,704.

South Dakota pulled up the rear, with salaries averaging $18,781. Mississippi ($19,575) and Arkansas ($19,951) were the only other states below $20,000. Maine ($21,257) and Louisiana ($21,280) rounded out the bottom five.

The top five on the pay scale were: Alaska, where virtually everything costs more and teachers command $43,970; the District of Columbia, $33,797; New York, $32,620; Michigan, $31,500; and California, $31,170.

The fall 1986 public school enrollment was 39,800,608, up by 271,000 over a year earlier. A big jump — 400,000 — in elementary enrollments, offsetting a secondary school drop of 129,000, is expected to push the figure over the 40 million mark this fall for the first time since 1981-82.

Restoration of archbishop's authority announced by panel

SEATTLE (AP) — Roman Catholic Archbishop Raymond G. Hunthausen is getting his full powers restored eight months after the Vatican generated discontent in the U.S. church by limiting the authority of the liberal cleric.

While being returned to full status, however, Hunthausen will be forced to accept an assistant, or coadjutor, who would eventually succeed him, according to a panel of three bishops assigned to consider the situation.

The apparent compromise comes four months before a visit to the United States by Pope John Paul II.

In limiting his power as archbishop in September, the Vatican had accused the archdiocese of being lax in granting annulments, general absolution of sins, allowing intercommunion with Protestants, and letting homosexuals meet in church facilities.

The bishops panel, in a report issued Tuesday, said problems still exist in the Seattle archdiocese, and attributed them in part to a perception that Hunthausen is permissive.

Bishop Thomas J. Murphy, of Great Falls, Mont., was expected to be named coadjutor, and Bishop Donald Wuerl, who had assumed the powers taken from Hunthausen, was expected to be transferred from the archdiocese.

Hunthausen, 65, and Murphy, 54, were in Great Falls on Tuesday night to help Great Falls Bishop Eldon Schuster celebrate his 50th anniversary of ordination into the priesthood. Neither Hunthausen nor Murphy would comment when asked about the bishops' commission report.

While a coadjutor is designated eventually to succeed an incumbent bishop when he retires, this often is done long in advance to lighten heavy responsibilities, and does not necessarily imply imminent retirement. No retirement date was specified for Hunthausen, who at 65 is 10 years away from normal retirement age.

The Vatican's discipline of Hunthausen had been unprecedented in the American church and had distressed many U.S. bishops, sparking extensive protests, particularly among clergy and laity in Seattle.

Hunthausen and many others had called the split-authority arrangement with Wuerl humiliating and unworkable.

The National Federation of Priests Councils, representing most of the nation's Catholic priests, overwhelmingly passed a resolution May 14 calling for immediate restoration of Hunthausen's full authority.

The three-bishop commission, made up of Cardinals Joseph Bernardin of Chicago and John O'Connor of New York and Archbishop John Quinn of San Francisco, said in a letter to U.S. bishops that additional steps need to be taken to bring the Seattle archdiocese in line with Vatican guidelines.

In the year ahead, you are likely to make several important changes. You will orchestrate these alterations yourself, and the results should be as you anticipate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you're not careful, you might get involved with a person today who dislikes someone you like. Don't let his or her actions cause your friend to start thinking ill of you. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Guard against tendencies today to turn things that should afford you pleasure into tedious tasks. Life is tough enough without trying to make it worse.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Company politics could enter into the picture today; you might get tapped for an assignment that your fellow workers have been dodging.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Lady Luck will play a role in your affairs today, but her input will be limited. If you don't do your share, what you hope to achieve may not be attained.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Individuals with limited views will rub you the wrong way today. Rather than letting them upset you, avoid discussing important issues with them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Strive to keep a cool, logical head in your financial dealings today. Emotional moves where you hope to make or save money might end up costing you instead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Perhaps the reason you won't get all the cooperation you feel you should from your associates today is because they feel they aren't getting much from you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today, you might be saddled with responsibilities that are not of your own making. You'll be aware of this, but the tasks won't be easy to sidestep.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You may have to take a side today pertaining to a problem that develops among friends.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) To maintain tranquility on the home front today, you might have to put blinders on and pretend not to notice the infractions of certain family members.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful not to complicate the problems of a close friend today by offering suggestions without full knowledge of the facts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Treat warily any investment tips you get today from "insiders." Misery loves company, and you might be thrown one of their mistakes.

Government uses television to educate people, curtail infection

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The AIDS virus is spreading so rapidly in Haiti, among both heterosexuals and homosexuals, that the government has turned to television to teach people how to avoid the killer disease.

On one recent TV program, three medical students noted that AIDS can result from any form of sexual activity. A female student displayed a condom, described how it worked and urged people to use them.

A 30-second spot that is repeated frequently cautions that sexual promiscuity increases the risk of exposure to the virus. A voice-over accompanying cartoon figures of men and women says in Haiti's Creole language, "Girls, make love to only one boy and avoid catching AIDS!"

"There are people here used to having dozens of sexual partners. Some change partners every two or three days," said Dr. Bernard Liautaud, a specialist in sexually transmitted diseases who has spoken about AIDS on radio and television.

"That's a detestable habit that will almost certainly lead to contracting AIDS," Liautaud said in an interview.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome is caused by a virus that attacks the body's immune system, leaving victims susceptible to a variety of infections and cancers. Only a fraction of the people who are infected with the virus have actually developed the disease.

In November 1986, a World Health Organization official said there were about 100,000 known cases of AIDS worldwide. In the United States, 35,769 cases had been reported as of May 18, and in 20,683 of them the victim died, according to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, which says about 1.5 million Americans carry the virus.

From 1,000 to 2,000 Haitians have been diagnosed as having AIDS. Doctors estimate 100,000 to 200,000 Haitians carry the virus without knowing it, and as many as 1 million of the 6 million people who live in this impoverished Caribbean nation could become infected with the virus within the next five years.

Such experts as Dr. Robert Jean-Louis, president of the Haitian Medical Association, claim AIDS was introduced to Haiti in the 1970s by homosexuals from the United States who traveled here as tourists. The chief victims of AIDS worldwide have been homosexual men and intravenous drug abusers.

"They even had an international gay congress here in 1980," Jean-Louis said. "They made Haiti a world crossroads for homosexuals."

Barbie required by judge to confront alleged victims

LYON, France (AP) — A former Resistance fighter called Klaus Barbie a coward to his face after a French judge required the accused war criminal to present himself before some of the people he allegedly tortured.

A defiant Barbie, former Gestapo chief of Lyon, was returned to the courtroom against his will Tuesday to face five of his alleged victims. He looked directly at each of his accusers, but refused to respond as they identified him as the man who tormented them, then sent them to concentration camps more than 40 years ago.

Barbie, 73, who since May 13 had boycotted the court trying him for crimes against humanity, smiled and nodded to his attorney and the French-German interpreter as he was brought in. "I am here illegally and here by force," he told the court's three judges and nine-member jury during the 25-minute confrontation. "And, as judicially I am absent, I will not answer."

Assistant Prosecutor Jean-Olivier Viout said the defendant would not be in court today, the last day before a long holiday weekend in France. He added, however, that there were other witnesses who had not been confronted with Barbie and that he could be brought to court again at a later stage.

As Barbie's manacles were removed in court Tuesday, someone in the crowd murmured, "Bastard!"

Lucien Margaine, 66, Mario Blardone, 63, Vincent Planque, 68, Raymonde Belot, 66, and Robert Clor, 65, took the witness stand in succession. Barbie stared at them without expression.

Blardone, a member of the French Resistance during Barbie's tenure in German-occupied Lyon from 1942 to 1944, appeared almost overwrought on the stand, saying to Presiding Judge Andre Cerdini: "Look at that glacial stare, that mouth. I recognize it."

San Luis Potosi governor takes long leave of absence

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — San Luis Potosi state Gov. Florencio Salazar Martinez, whose administration has been beset with charges of human rights violations, apparently has stepped down after less than two years in office.

Salazar, a member of the dominant Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, petitioned the San Luis Potosi state legislature Monday night for a 10-month leave of absence.

The legislature immediately appointed Leopoldino Ortiz Santos, a minister of the federal Supreme Court, to fill the governor's post.

In an interview published Tuesday by the influential Mexico City newspaper Excelsior, Ortiz Santos said "the lack of unity is our principal affliction. I will try to make Potosinos abandon resentments, quarrels that don't lead to anything good and only put up obstacles to the progress of our beloved state."

Salazar did not cite a specific reason for seeking a leave of absence. But he had resigned without having completed a minimum two years of his six-year term, the PRI-controlled state legislature would have had to call for new elections.

This way the legislature will be able to appoint Salazar's permanent replacement when his 10-month "leave" expires, avoiding another confrontation with the opposition.

The left-leaning Mexico City newspaper La Jornada, which has been following the situation closely, ran as its banner headline Tuesday, "Florencio Salazar Fell; Leopoldino Ortiz Santos, New Governor."

Dental work would take big bite out of budget

DEAR ABBY: My husband is 70 and recently retired. I am 65. We live comfortably and are in relatively good health. I'm a nice-looking woman, but my teeth are ugly, and I want to have them fixed. I'm talking about extensive dental work — crowns, bridgework and beautification. My dentist says the job would run me about $9,500. My husband says we can't afford it — that I'm better off having all my teeth pulled and getting dentures, which would be cheaper and just as pretty. He's had dentures for years and says they're fine. Dentures would run me about $1,500.

We own $200,000 in certificates of deposit, bonds and short-term savings and checking accounts. Our home is valued at $160,000 and we have made provisions (trusts) for our three grandchildren when they reach 18 years of age. We give generously to our church and local charities and, of course, we both get

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Social Security checks every month. Can we afford a $9,500 dental bill? I'LL NEVER SMILE AGAIN

DEAR I'LL: You certainly can! Do not consider having all your teeth extracted and getting dentures. Keep your natural teeth as long as you can, and tell your husband to put his money where your mouth is. Besides, it's your money, too, so get your teeth fixed, and may your smile brighten the rest of your days.

DEAR ABBY: I was moved to tears reading the letter signed "His Widow in Idaho," who approved of her husband's corresponding with his childhood sweetheart until they were both disabled by old age.

As her husband was dying, he asked her to please call this lady to convey his final farewell. The wife called, and the lady said, "Tell him I love him in the same old way." They were both 91.

What a beautiful lady that wife was! It is a testament to the unselfish spirit that some people are capable of. Sad that so many of us do not have that capacity of understanding.

We all have wonderful memories of youth and the people who were so important during that period. It has nothing to do with the love we have for husband or wife.

Her husband must have loved her very much, knowing she transcended petty jealousy. God bless that woman — but he already has! A READER IN EAST MEADOW

DEAR READER: You and I are in total agreement. However, another reader wrote to express an entirely different point of view:

DEAR ABBY: To the "Widow in Idaho" who helped encourage correspondence with her late husband's first girlfriend, I have a message for her: You are sick, sick, sick!

If feelings existed for so many years between these two ex-lovers, why didn't they get married? Also, how could she stand being with a man who still thought of his ex-girlfriend? Strange relationship!

PLEASE, NO NAME OR TOWN

CONFIDENTIAL TO HURT AND DISAPPOINTED: When people snoop around in the drawers of others and read diaries and letters that were not meant for their eyes, whatever are they looking for? I'm not sure, but invariably they find something that will hurt and disappoint them.

...

DEAR ABBY: A person I know, J. John Smith III (not his real name), is the only person in his family whose name is J. John Smith. His father's name is C. Harry Smith.

How can this be? I was under the impression that "the third" was the son of a junior, who was the son of the original — or senior.

Now, where does "the second" come in?

BIRMINGHAM

DEAR BIRMINGHAM: How can it be, you ask, that J. John Smith III has a father named C. Harry Smith? Simple. Whoever named J. John Smith III was in error. You are correct when you say that the son of a junior is named "the third."

"The second" is named for an uncle, grandfather or cousin who has the identical name and middle initial.

United Way to honor volunteers at reception

Volunteers of local health and human service agencies are invited to attend a reception Thursday afternoon for the annual Volunteer Appreciation Day sponsored by Pampa United Way.

The reception will be held from 4:30 to 6 p.m. Thursday in the M.K. Brown Room at the Pampa Community Building.

United Way Executive Administrator Katrina Bigham said the reception is not limited just to volunteers of the United Way assisted agencies.

She said it's for any volunteers who give service in any local health and human care service or program: hospital, nursing homes, Good Samaritan Christian Services, health care agencies, church and charity groups, service club programs and other similar activities "whether it's United Way or not."

Bigham said the Volunteer Appreciation Day reception, hosted by the Pampa United Way board of directors, is a way of saying "thanks for caring" to all the many volunteers in the Pampa area.

She said invitations have been sent out to volunteers for which the United Way has been able to obtain addresses. But she said all volunteers may not have been listed and encouraged volunteers to drop by even if they do not receive a card.

Pampa gets funds for emergency programs

Pampa has been chosen to receive $6,090 to supplement emergency food and shelter programs in the area.

The selection was made by a national board composed of affiliates of national voluntary organizations and chaired by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

United Way of America will provide the administrative staff and function as the fiscal agent. The board has been charged with distributing $70 million appropriated by Congress to help expand the capacity of food and shelter programs in high-need areas of the country.

A local board — Jack Peoples, Jim Olsen and Rick Smith, the executive board of Pampa United Way — will determine how the funds awarded to the Gray County area are to be distributed among the emergency food and shelter programs run by local service organizations in the area.

The local board is responsible for recommending agencies to receive these funds and any additional funds available under this phase of the program.

Under the terms of the grant from the national board, local governmental or private voluntary organizations chosen to receive funds must:

- be non-profit;
- have an accounting system and conduct an annual audit;
- practice nondiscrimination;

• have demonstrated the capability to deliver emergency food and-or shelter programs; and

• if they are a private voluntary organization, they should have a voluntary board. Qualifying organizations are urged to apply. Further information on the program may be obtained by contacting the executive administrator of Pampa United Way, Katrina Bigham, at 669-1001 from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Technique teaches dyslexics to read

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — A simple piece of paper with a hole in it may be used to help teach some dyslexia victims to read by exploiting their keen peripheral vision, researchers reported Thursday.

Two scientists from Massachusetts Institute of Technology have discovered an apparently important difference between dyslexics and people with ordinary reading skills: Dyslexics have exceptionally good peripheral vision, but they have trouble distinguishing fine detail directly in front of them.

The researchers believe this different way of seeing the world is at the heart of dyslexics' reading difficulties.

"The ordinary reader looks at a word that's not very long and sees it clearly," said Gad Geiger, who directed the study. "However, for the dyslexic, the next word to the right or left is clearer."

Peripheral vision is best in those with the worst cases of dyslexia. The researchers described a man who could only read at a third-grade level despite many attempts to learn. They came up with a method that enabled him to read with his sharp peripheral vision.

First, he practiced tasks requiring detailed hand-eye coordination, such as drawing and wood carving.

Next, he put a dot on a sheet of white paper. Some 1.4 inches to the right of the dot, he cut out a rectangle that allowed him to see eight or nine letters. Finally, he practiced moving the paper over a printed page, looking straight at the dot and reading the words as they appeared in the cut-out window.

The goal was to help him rely on his peripheral vision, where his vision was clearest, to see the words on the page. After four months' practice, he was able to read at 10th-grade level.

Dr. Jerome Y. Lettvin, the co-author of the study, said the researchers have helped three dyslexics learn to read this way. However, he cautioned that the method won't work unless people are patient and have a high desire to learn.

People with dyslexia, an estimated 5 to 10 percent of the population, have normal intelligence but have trouble distinguishing words, and often transpose letters.

The work was published in today's New England Journal of Medicine, along with an editorial by Drs. Bennett A. Shaywitz and Stephen G. Waxman of Yale that said the study "also emphasizes how much we still do not know" about dyslexia.

Sanders exhibits bronze sculpture at arts, crafts fair

Pampan G.L. Sanders is among more than 200 artisans exhibiting their artworks at the annual Texas State Arts and Crafts Fair at Kerrville.

Sanders is showing his bronze sculpture at the fair, which was open May 23-24 and will be open again May 30-31 on the campus of Schreiner College.

This year's fair salutes the 1900s and the art forms inspired by that period. Art, crafts, music and dance that were popular in the four decades from 1920 to 1950 will be highlighted.

Demonstrations and lessons will be given on the games of the mid-1900s, including marble shooting, jacks and top spinning.

Proceeds from the non-profit event will be utilized for the development and appreciation of Texas art and artisans. The Texas Arts and Crafts Foundation, which sponsors the fair, uses fair proceeds to implement arts and crafts workshops across the state and to give numerous scholarships to aspiring young artists.

Celtics edge Pistons on game-saving steal Johnson hits winning goal

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — "I was right there," Boston's Jerry Sichting said. "I saw how it happened."
Years from now, similar words undoubtedly will be uttered by some of the 14,890 spectators who witnessed another amazing play by Larry Bird.
It was a play that saved the game and, very likely, the NBA season for the Celtics. It was a play that not even Bird's teammates expected. It was a play that Detroit certainly didn't anticipate.
"I'll put that on top of everything Larry's ever done," Boston assistant coach Chris Ford said.
Trailing by a point, Bird stole Isiah Thomas' inbound pass with five seconds left and fed Dennis Johnson for the winning layup with one second to go Tuesday night. The basket gave Boston a 108-107 victory and a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven NBA Eastern Conference final.
"We had the game won," said Thomas, who added that he didn't see Bird race to the ball.
"It looked bleak," said Sichting, who was guarding Thomas and forced him to throw the ball from the sidelines backward to Bill Laimbeer under Boston's basket. "You don't expect things like that to happen. Larry was going to the ball before Isiah threw it."
"It happened so quick, you don't have time to think about it," Bird said. "It was just a reaction. I was going to foul Laimbeer. I stuck my hand in there and then I knew I had it stolen. He (Thomas) didn't throw a good pass. He just lobbed it in the air.

"As soon as I got it I was going to shoot. I was counting four seconds in my head and then I turned around and saw D.J. cutting down the lane."
Despite being guarded closely by Joe Dumars, Johnson put the ball up with his right hand from the left side of the basket. It rolled around the rim and dropped through.
"We have a very good sense for each other," Johnson said of himself and Bird. "I'm really becoming a believer in the Boston Garden mystique."
The victory was Boston's 35th in its last 36 games in the Garden and 17th straight there over Detroit. But now the Celtics must play Game 6 Thursday night in Pontiac, Mich., where they lost by 18 points Saturday and 26 Sunday.
"Yogi (Berra) said it first," Boston forward Kevin McHale said. "It ain't over 'til it's over. Then Larry said it. And, sometimes, it's still not over."
If Bird didn't steal the ball or if Johnson missed the shot, the season would have been just about over for the defending champion Celtics. To stay alive in the playoffs, they would have had to win Thursday night on the road, possibly without center Robert Parish.
Now if they lose the next game, they'll return home for Game 7 Saturday to determine who will play the Los Angeles Lakers in the championship series.
Parish was helped off the floor with 7:19 remaining when he re-injured his sprained left ankle. He returned to the game 58 seconds later only to leave for good with 3:41 left when he fell and couldn't stand without help.
"I wasn't concerned with Parish leaving the game," Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said. "I was concerned with what happened with five seconds left."

Leonard closes career

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard, saying he no longer has the "stimulus to continue his boxing career" announced his retirement as a fighter today.
"There's no one out there to give me that motivation," Leonard, the World Boxing Council middleweight champion, said at a press conference. "I'm going to try to retire, to give it a shot."
It is the fourth time since 1976 that Leonard has announced his retirement.
Leonard's latest return to boxing lasted for one fight — a spectacular upset to dethrone middleweight champion Marvelous Marvin Hagler on April 6.
The fight was only the second in five years for Leonard, who had undergone surgery in 1982 to repair a detached retina. He attributed his comeback for that bout to his desire to fight Hagler.
Well-off financially, Leonard said that fighting Hagler was "something I had to do."
Leonard closes his career 34-1. His only loss came at the hands of Roberto Duran. He won titles in three different weight classes since he began his pro-career Feb. 5, 1977, with a decision over Luis Vega.
In announcing his latest retirement, Leonard said, "For me to perform, it takes a stimulus. I have to be motivated."

Lakers' coach mum on championship opponent

Riley learns from history

SEATTLE (AP) — Pat Riley, having learned from history, won't say which Eastern Conference team he wants his Los Angeles Lakers to face for the NBA title.
"I don't really care who we meet," Riley said as the Lakers await the outcome of the Boston Celtics-Detroit Pistons series for the East title.
Boston took a 3-1 lead Tuesday night with a 108-107 victory. Game 6 in that series is scheduled for Thursday night at Detroit.
"I know there's a certain romance about playing the Celtics, a mystique, a tradition. But you can't say you want to play them or you'll get beat."
The Los Angeles coach recalled when he was playing for the Lakers and they beat the New York Knicks in the 1972 Championship Series, then won the Western title the following year and waited for the outcome of the Eastern finals.

"We kept saying, 'We want New York,'" Riley related. "After New York sewed up its conference, Walt Frazier said, 'LA, you want us? You got us.'
"They beat us four out of five games."
The Lakers completed a 4-0 sweep of the Seattle SuperSonics on Monday for the Western Conference championship. Los Angeles may have until Saturday to see whether they'll play Boston or Detroit in the NBA title round, which could begin as late as next Tuesday.
The Lakers were 2-0 against Boston during the regular season, but went 1-1 against the Pistons.
Most of the Lakers followed Riley's lead and wouldn't say which team they'd rather face.
"Everyone, the fans and all, want us to play Boston," Magic Johnson said. "I'm kind of 50-50. Boston is always a great matchup, but I'd like to see Isiah do well."
Longtime friends Johnson and Isiah

Thomas, a standout guard for the Pistons, have never met in the playoffs.
"It doesn't matter to me who we play, it really doesn't," Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said. "After 1985, when we finally beat them (the Celtics) ... the whole idea of the rivalry was over."
Michael Cooper, however, did express a preference, saying, "I could lie, but I admit I want to go back to play Boston."
Regardless of the opponent, Riley was concerned that the long wait could take some of the edge off the Lakers, who rolled to a very impressive 133-102 victory over the Sonics in Seattle in the deciding game to sweep that series. They are 11-1 in the playoffs.
"I hate to have a long layoff before the finals," he said. "We'll need to fabricate some situations to keep them sharp."
"Becoming stale is always a problem, but I think the rest will do us good," the 40-year-old Abdul-Jabbar said.
"We definitely need a little rest," Cooper said. "It might take a little edge off our level of play, but I think the rest will help us more than hurt us."

If the Pistons-Celtics series goes six games, the winner will open the best-of-seven finals against the Lakers on Sunday at the Forum in Inglewood, Calif. If the East series goes seven, the finals will start Tuesday at the Forum.

Tigers slip by Rangers in 11 innings

By HARRY ATKINS
AP Sports Writer

DETROIT (AP) — It's a night when you've fallen behind three times in 11 innings, there are about 100 people left in the stands and you've been cold and wet for nearly four hours.

"Believe me, you've got to kick yourself in the tail to get it going again in those situations," Detroit slugger Kirk Gibson said. "My last at-bat, I got quite angry at myself. I said, 'You've had two chances to win this game and you haven't done it. Get your stuff together this time.'"

And he did.

Gibson, who had homered earlier, hit a two-out, two-run double in the 11th inning Tuesday night to lift the Tigers to an 8-7 victory over the Texas Rangers, stirring memories of 1984 — when Detroit won the World Series.

"It's taken us a while to find ourselves," Gibson said. "I think we're understanding now what makes this team up."

"Win like this bring you together, believe me. I hope it's me again tomorrow night. But, if it's not, I just have a feeling it'll be somebody else."

The victory was the third straight for the resurgent Tigers, who have won 11 of their last 13 to go over .500 for the first time since April 19.

"In the dugout, even though they'd gone ahead again, we just felt like we were going to do it," Gibson said. "I think this will help us. We're over .500 now, we're getting good pitching. If we start hitting, we can get something going."

After Pete O'Brien led off the Texas 11th with a home run, Detroit's Dave Bergman singled with one out and Lou Whitaker followed with a single. Darrell Evans hit a long flyball that was caught at the fence in left field, with Bergman moving to third and Whitaker holding first.

Gibson then lined a 2-2 pitch from Dale Mohorcic, 3-2, up the gap in left-center.

"That's my job," Gibson said. "That's what people expect me to do and that's what I expect from myself. I want to be up there in those situations."

Catcher Mike Heath had a two-run homer and a double for the Tigers.

It was a crushing defeat for the struggling Rangers, who lost for the ninth time in their last 12 games to drop from three to nine games behind Kansas City in the American League West.

"We'll get our act together," said Texas Manager Bobby Valentine, pounding a wooden desk with his fist. "We've got a lot of good baseball to play yet. We've just got to ride this thing out."

There were several bright spots for the Rangers, giving Valentine reason to hope.

Ruben Sierra hit two home runs for Texas and drove in four, Pete O'Brien homered and Scott Fletcher had a pair of doubles.

Rookie right-hander Bob Malloy, making his major-league debut, turned in six innings for the Rangers. He gave up five runs — only four of them earned — on six hits while striking out five.

Malloy jumped all the way from Class A Gastonia, S.C., of the South Atlantic League to the majors Thursday when he was called up to replace the injured Bobby Witt.

"He's a good-looking pitcher," Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said. "When you've got stuff like he's got, it don't matter whether you're pitching in Class A or the big leagues."

Right-hander Mike Henneman, 2-0, the fourth Detroit pitcher, worked the final 2 1/3 innings and got the victory. The game, held up for 31 minutes at the start because of rain, took 3 hours and 51 minutes to play.

Guest speaker needed instead of meaningless honors

May is when the severe case of banquetitis hits the nation's high schools. Like spring fever, it creates major problems with classroom education as thoughts stray from textbooks to making sure nothing is overlooked for the awards banquet, who will win what honors, will I be named team queen or MVP?

It used to be that various teams were honored singularly, thus allowing for special attention to individual as well as team accomplishments. In addition, the special attention also permitted time for a guest speaker of note to inspire and motivate the young athletes (and even their coaches).

But somehow that has disappeared. Citing it is against UIL rules to permit athletes to attend more than one banquet without buying a ticket, many schools are adopting the all-sports spring banquet theme. Although the UIL Rules and Regulations publication is relatively thick, after studying it for over an hour, I cannot find the printed word that supports that policy. It is, perhaps, local with those schools, who generally add another line to the effect "unless a team wins a state championship."

For those fortunate enough to have a top-notch speaker, there is much benefit. A few days ago, former PHS basketball coach Robert McPherson was able to use his coaching relationship with UTEP's Don Haskins to again tell the drug danger story. Relating how The Bear had done everything he knew to keep players from killing themselves with the addictive, but still lost a star senior Jeep Jackson two weeks ago, McPherson urged his listeners to become aware of their young friends and not to be afraid to tell a trustworthy adult if a problem is noted. It could save a life; certainly save a problem.

One of the very best I've heard this spring was the head basketball coach at Panhandle State,

Sports Forum

Warren Hasse

Earl Diddle. As he spoke to an all-sports banquet the other night, he was able to use himself as a prime example of how to and how not to become successful in life. There is nothing better than getting it from the horse's mouth. Personal testimony just seems to hold attention more than being preached to, and Earl was able to tell what has worked for him. Never once did he mention drugs. That wasn't his problem; a broken family was.

Diddle told about helping recruit a hard-working garbage collector and having him become possibly the greatest basketball player of all time. He was there at the start of The Larry Bird Story. Earl can tell of having applied for 55 coaching jobs and being told "Sorry, but we're picking someone else." 55 times. The 56th attempt got him to the Oklahoma Panhandle, where he is quickly becoming an outstanding young coach. He will tell of the "magic word," the "three questions" he asks every player he recruits, the "five qualities of greatness." The great John Wooden has his "pyramid to success," and has told it thousands of times to athletes and the nation's top corporate executives. Diddle — enthusiastic, positive, exciting — has a story to tell that will keep everyone listening. I strongly recommend you invite him next time.

From opening gavel, through meal, outstanding athlete awards, letter presentations and Diddle's speech, took less than 90 minutes. The reason was that the all-sports banquet was limited to meaningful athletic honors, the MVP. That is the one honor any athlete on any team can earn. It can go to the star player, the top scorer, the benchwarmer. It is earned by day to day performance, practice periods as well as game effort. It comes from team spirit and supportive encouragement.

Today, too many coaches have gone to giving out meaningless honors to the guy who gets the most tackles, the one with the best free-throw shooting record, the best batting average. Simply through playing time and playing position most members of every team are eliminated from these special awards. Most are given in an effort to motivate athletes because the weakness in the coaching staff cannot do it in a normal coaching matter. A carrot has to be dangled. And those awards, of course, usurp so much banquet time the outstanding speakers that can be so valuable, even if they only reach one young mind, are eliminated.

Through the years, PHS athletes have been exposed to some of the greatest speakers in the Southwest, and several national figures. Perhaps the day may come when that situation can return. And we could do a lot worse than letting Earl Diddle tell his personal story.

Nelson leading contender for Mavericks position

DALLAS (AP) — After a conference between the owner of the Dallas Mavericks and his general manager, Milwaukee Bucks coach Don Nelson emerged as the No. 1 candidate for the head coaching job left vacant by Dick Motta.

Mavs owner Don Carter was to contact Milwaukee owner Herb Kohl today to obtain permission to interview Nelson, said Kevin Sullivan, a Mavericks spokesman.

The Associated Press attempted to contact Carter and his general manager, Norm Sonju, on Tuesday, but neither returned calls.

Kohl already has said he would give the Mavericks permission to talk to Nelson, who has said he won't coach at Milwaukee next season because of differences with Kohl.

Kohl has also indicated he would require compensation in the form of a top player or No. 1 draft choice, or both, for Nelson, who despite his resignation has two years remaining on his contract with Milwaukee.

Sullivan said the talks had not yet reached the compensation issue. Carter and Sonju have said they would not talk to any coach under contract until they settled any compensation question.

Nelson had indicated at one time that if he coached next season, it would be in Milwaukee.

But over the weekend, he said he finds exciting the prospect of coaching a Mavericks team that finished 55-27 this season with a roster that averages 26 years of age.

"Absolutely," Nelson said. "It's one of the best basketball situations in the league. There's not a downside to the situation."

Nelson said he is also interested in other job possibilities — specifically general manager positions with Golden State and New York.

Motta came under fire from Mavericks fans, and some in the front office, for showing interest in coaching vacancies at the Los Angeles Clippers and the New York Knicks shortly after Dallas was eliminated from the NBA playoffs.

Carter was concerned about remarks attributed to Motta concerning Dallas' prospects for ever winning an NBA title and summoned Motta back to Dallas.

Motta called a news conference in Dallas and stunned Mavericks officials by announcing a week ago that he wouldn't apologize for anything he'd said or done and was stepping down.

Nelson coached the Bucks to the Midwest Division in 1979-80, then won six titles when the Bucks moved to the Central Division. Milwaukee was 50-32 this year, and overall, Nelson's record is 540-344.

Hobby says balanced state budget 'less and less likely'

AUSTIN (AP) — Time is running out on the Legislature, and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby says it appears lawmakers will fail to write a balanced budget before the June 1 deadline.

"It looks less and less likely, obviously, with each passing hour," said Hobby, who presides over the Senate.

Hobby noted that the failure isn't a first, since the state's fiscal crisis has continued for more than a year after oil prices tumbled from near $30 a barrel to less than $10 and took state government into the red.

"The tragic part of that is that there is not a single new fact known now that was not known last July," he said Tuesday.

Hobby said it has taken lawmakers considerably more time than it should have to correct the problems.

"The Legislature failed to address the issue last summer. It could have been done in two weeks instead of two (special) sessions last summer. All this could have been done in two months this time," he said.

House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said he now sees little chance now of avoiding a summer special session.

"Time's run out on us," Lewis said, adding that passage of a tax bill to fund any budget "would be almost impossible" in the Legislature's final days. The Constitution limits regular sessions to 140 days every other year.

Florida youth makes fourth attempt to win spelling bee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fourteen-year-old Andy Larson, last year's runner-up in the National Spelling Bee, is back for a fourth try at the spelling title, undaunted by past blunders on "kaolinic," "marjoram" and "ogive."

With 185 contestants assembled for the start today of the 60th annual spelloff, Andy was the most seasoned competitor, eliminated the past three years when he misspelled the puzzlers listed above.

"I've got a good chance, I think," Andy said Tuesday as he skipped an afternoon sight-seeing excursion to do some last-minute studying back at the hotel. "I'm not even nervous right now, but I get nervous up there on the stand while they're asking everybody words."

The eighth-grader from Tequesta, Fla., listed on the Bee roster as Kenneth A. Larson, last year was out-spelled by 14-year-old Jon Pennington of Shiremanstown, Pa.

Andy stumbled on "kaolinic," defined as resembling kaolin, a white-clay substance used in ceramics. Jon spelled it correctly, and then went on to clinch the championship by correctly spelling "odontalgia," a synonym for toothache.

In earlier years, Andy was tripped up on the spelling of "marjoram," a herb of the mint family, and on "ogive," a pointed arch.

This year's field of contestants, culled from an estimated 8 million to 9 million youngsters who participated in local spelling competitions, includes those from 47 states, the District of Columbia, Guam, Mexico, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

The youngest speller is 9-year-old Richard E.

Getty board denies it agreed to sell oil firm to Pennzoil

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In an action that could be a setback for Pennzoil Co., 13 former Getty Oil Co. directors said they never agreed to sell Getty to Houston-based Pennzoil.

The statement comes as Pennzoil is pursuing a $10.35 billion judgment it has won against Texaco Inc. for interfering with a merger between Getty and Pennzoil.

"For years, Texaco and Pennzoil have been telling the world what they believe happened," Pittsburgh, Pa., attorney Steve Feirson, said Tuesday as he released the statement from the former Getty directors.

"Now we will hear from those who were there and voted and know what they intended and didn't intend."

The former Getty directors said they authorized management to enter into talks with Pennzoil only on condition that whatever came from those talks must come back to the board for further consideration.

"The truth is that Pennzoil tried to acquire control of Getty Oil by forcing through a transaction at an unfair price (that) was far from adequate. Texaco simply outbid Pennzoil," the directors said in their statement.

Texaco agreed in 1984 to buy Getty for $10.1 billion, or about $989 million more than the value

"I think at this point you can say we'll be back here in June or July, trying to straighten out the budget," Lewis said.

The governor, who has the authority to call special sessions and set the agenda, hasn't indicated when a 30-day budget session would begin, although many lawmakers are speculating late June or early July.

House and Senate negotiators are still working on an appropriations bill, but even if they agree the Legislature hasn't finished work. Lawmakers have so far failed to pass a tax increase large enough to pay for either the House or Senate budget.

Gov. Bill Clements, who threatens to veto any tax increase larger than $2.9 billion, said he, Hobby and Lewis haven't met to discuss the budget since they went skeet shooting May 12.

"I think that we have made an effort in this regard, on meeting one-on-one, and actually they didn't accomplish anything," Clements said.

The governor again blamed the Senate, which approved a $40 billion spending plan calling for nearly twice the new taxes Clements has said he would approve.

Clements said he believes the budget and tax issue eventually will be resolved, but only after some lawmakers give in.

"It's going to take a meeting of the minds," he said. "The people of Texas do not want new taxes, period. And once we reach that understanding, I think we can move forward."

Maupin, a fourth-grader from LaCrosse, Ind., who belongs to a computer club, studies piano and collects stamps and Transformers toys.

Two 15-year-olds are the oldest competitors, Thomas Santopoli, from Hazelton, Pa., and Andrew Evans, of Plains, Kan. Both boys are returning for a second shot at the championship, Thomas having placed 147th last year, and Andrew, 71st.

While most of the competitors excel in academic subjects, biographical information provided by Scripps Howard newspapers, which sponsored the bee, showed them to be more than mere bookworms.

Laura Mitchell, 10, of Wichita Falls, Texas, gets up at 6 a.m. each day to practice her spelling, but she also collects spoons, rides horses, studies piano and plays in the school orchestra.

Shawn Szymanski, 12, of Bettendorf, Iowa, is a fan of professional wrestling; Daniel Kranowski, 14, of Blacksburg, Va., likes watching Three Stooges films; Kathleen Hardy, 13, of Albuquerque, N.M., has a menagerie of pets that includes 22 tomato-eating peacocks; and Amy Dahlberg, 14, of Hanson, Mass., belongs to the Monkees fan club.

This year's contestants, 92 boys and 93 girls, are sponsored by 182 daily, weekly and Sunday newspapers, including Scripps Howard newspapers in 14 cities.

The champion speller in the two-day contest will receive $1,500 plus other prizes, and the runner-up will receive $1,000. Third prize is $750; fourth prize, $500; fifth, $400; sixth, $300; seventh through 10th, $200; and all other competitors will receive $50.

Pennzoil's offer placed on the company.

Pennzoil spokesman Robert Harper said the company found it curious that the former Getty board members waited three years to make their remarks.

"We would only assume at this point that the reason the former Getty directors issued the statement is because they are somewhat nervous about the indemnities that Texaco agreed to," Harper said Tuesday.

In White Plains, N.Y., Texaco said it "is most pleased by the support expressed by the former directors of Getty Oil Co."

Feirson said the former directors didn't issue the statement at the behest of Texaco, although he said Texaco did receive an advance "courtesy copy."

No advance copy was sent to Pennzoil, he said. Pennzoil, claiming it had a binding agreement to buy the Los Angeles company, sued Texaco in Texas court and won.

Texaco, which has steadfastly insisted there was no agreement between Getty and Pennzoil, sought Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection from creditors to keep from posting a $12 billion bond while it appeals the award to Pennzoil.

Feirson said he represents 11 of the former directors and that two others concurred with their statement.

Pre-marital AIDS tests OK'd after hot House debate

AUSTIN (AP) — A bitter House debate produced tentative approval of a bill that would mandate AIDS tests before getting married or going to prison.

The tests were added as amendments to a bill that makes AIDS a reportable disease and allows health officials to ask judges to quarantine AIDS patients who become a public health threat.

Rep. Jim McWilliams, D-Hallsville, won approval Tuesday for the AIDS test provisions. "It allows the individual who is getting married to know who they are marrying and what diseases they have," he said of the pre-marital tests.

But opponents said the provision could discourage people from getting married because the results would become part of public records at county courthouses and the tests could be costly.

The bill won tentative approval in a House vote. It faces another vote that would send it to the Senate.

McWilliams also pushed the amendment requiring acquired immune deficiency syndrome and AIDS virus tests for new inmates at the Texas Department of Corrections. AIDS can be sexually transmitted and destroys the body's ability to fight disease.

Rep. Nancy McDonald, D-El Paso, and sponsor of the overall AIDS bill, opposed the pre-marital testing provision.

"I'm afraid of mistakes that will be made. One mistake to one young person can be almost suicidal," she said. "I think it is going to create more hysteria than it is preventive medicine."

Rep. Lena Guerrero, D-Austin, also voiced concern about the test results becoming public. "I can't understand why you just don't vote to tattoo them so we all see it. They are entitled to some confidentiality," she told McWilliams.

He replied, "Even if they are going to murder the person they are living with?"

Rep. Mike McKinney, D-Centerville and the House's only medical doctor, said the pre-marital tests could cost up to $150 per person because the amendment requires tests for many sexually transmitted diseases.

McKinney said he would support pre-marital tests only for the AIDS virus, a test he said would cost about $26.

McWilliams accused McKinney and other physicians of offering no help in working out anti-AIDS legislation. McKinney, in turn, questioned McWilliams' motives.

"I have an amendment to make homophobia a reportable disease," he said sarcastically. Rep. Billy Clemons, D-Pollock, said the required testing "is going to make a lot of people mad. It'll cause fewer people to get married."

The pre-marital testing amendment was approved 78-56. Ms. McDonald accepted the amendment mandating testing of new prison inmates. An amendment requiring the segregation of any inmate that tests positive for AIDS or the AIDS virus was approved 91-48.

Also Tuesday, the House voted final approval of its version of the AT&T Communications deregulation bill. The measure now goes back to the Senate, where a filibuster has been threatened.

The Senate version would allow AT&T to lower, but not raise, rates without Public Utility Commission approval. The House version would allow AT&T to raise or lower it rates without PUC approval.

Final approval also was voted to a bill that would increase class sizes in kindergarten through fourth grade from 22 students per teacher to 25 students per teacher. The increased limit would be allowed only in classes with a full-time teaching assistant.

The House failed to approve a proposed constitutional amendment that would increase House terms from the current two years to four years. The proposal picked up 87 votes in the 150-member House, but needed 100 votes to send it to the Senate.

Twins make the grade

ARANSAS PASS (AP) — Tom Mathisen never made less than an A, but he's graduating second in his class.

Mathisen's twin sister, Cherie, beat him out for valedictorian honors at Aransas Pass High School with a four-year average of 99.03, compared with her brother's 98.19.

"Everybody thinks we study a lot, but we really don't," Cherie said. "It just comes easy to us." Tom agreed.

"I never really tried that hard," he said. "I always just wanted to do my best." Cherie kidded her brother, "I always knew I'd finish ahead. I wouldn't let him beat me," she told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

The twins, who graduate Friday, both sing in the school choir. Tom serves as class treasurer. Cherie is on the student council. Both like to water ski. Tom likes to hunt.

Cherie works after school as a checker at the H.E.B. food store her father manages in Aransas Pass. Tom has the same job at the H.E.B. store a few miles away in Ingleside. Both have been honored in their respective stores for being the fastest and most accurate checkers.

"They're pretty good kids," said the twins' father, Tom Mathisen Sr. "I think we got lucky." The Mathisens moved from Kingsville six years ago and now live in a tree-shaded house they built on the outskirts of Aransas Pass, which sits on the east side of Corpus Christi Bay.

The twins share the house with their parents; their sister Latisha, 16; their cousin Shelda, 13; a dog named Polo; and several cats.

Despite the potential friction in a high-achieving, brother-sister relationship, the twins say the competition between them has been healthy, and probably helped them in school.

"Every time I take a test, I figure I better get all the answers right, because I know she will," Tom said. "I think there's a lot of competition between us."
