Missile threat overshadows start of talks

VENICE, Italy (AP) — Allied leaders gathered amid extraordinary security in this lagoon city today for the start of summit talks dominated by danger in the Persian Gulf and a disarmament plan for hundreds of missiles in Europe and Asia.

Even before today's opening session, the United States helped set the agenda by warning Iran not to "run the risk of retaliation" by deploying anti-ship missiles in the Persian Gulf. There also was a strong suggestion that President Reagan would partially lift trade sanctions against Japan.

As he was going into a meeting with Italian Prime Minister Amintore Fanfani, Reagan, asked about his tough talk on the Persian Gulf, told reporters, "I haven't bluffed once since I've been here." The president said he was not threatening anyone, merely stating facts.

In addition to his talks with Fanfani, Reagan is meeting today with Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl before the 13th annual economic summit gets under way.

Joining them at the summit are Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain, President Francois Mitterrand of France, Prime Minister Brian Mulroney of Canada and Jacques Delors, president of the European Communities Commission.

After a formal welcoming ceremony tonight at the imposing Palazzo Ducale on St. Mark's Square, the leaders will assemble with translators — but no aides — for a political discussion over dinner.

White House officials said Reagan would seek a unified position on a U.S.-Soviet proposal for the removal of hundreds of medium-range and short-range nuclear missiles in Europe and Asia.

"I think things look good," White House Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker Jr. said Sunday. He said he expected a consensus not only on those missiles but on long-range strategic weapons and perhaps on chemical and biological weapons as well as conventional forces.

Security agents armed with automatic rifles ringed San Giorgio, the pentagon-shaped island across the lagoon from St. Mark's Square, where the summit meetings will be held.

Because of the tight security, more than half of the city's nearly 400 gondoliers were prohibited by authorities from using their boats for four days starting at sunset Sunday.

Economists predicting higher inflation, possible recession under Greenspan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some private economists are cautioning that the transition from Paul Volcker to Alan Greenspan at the Federal Reserve will not be as smooth as that when Volcker took over in 1979.

These analysts expect higher inflation this year and say there is a greater likelihood of a recession right after the 1988 election.

Volcker wasted no time taking control of the Fed from his predecessor, G. William Miller. He moved quickly to curb the rampant inflation of the time by raising a key lending rate 10 days after he took office.

Volcker had spent four years as head of the Fed's New York regional bank, a position which allowed him to learn the arcane inner workings of monetary policy. Greenspan, who last served full-time in government as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers in the Ford administration, will not have that advantage.

"Fed policy is likely to settle into a don't-rock-the-boat approach while Greenspan is learning the ropes," said veteran Fed watcher David M. Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a government securities firm.

Jones said even after Greenspan takes charge, he will have to contend with supply-siders on the Fed board appointed by President Reagan who are more focused on economic growth than inflation worries.

"Whatever action the Fed takes is likely to be too little, too late," said Jones.

David Wyss, senior financial economist at Data Resources Inc., a Lexington, Mass. forecasting firm, said he believed Volcker's departure enhanced the likelihood of a recession late next year or in 1989.

City may place tax on local telephones

Pampa residents may find many of their telephone services subject to the city sales tax under an ordinance to be considered Tuesday evening by city commissioners.

In their regular meeting at 6 p.m. Tuesday, the commission will consider on first reading an ordinance providing for the repeal of the exemption of certain telephone and telecommunications services from city sales and use tax regulations.

A memorandum to the commission from City Manager Bob Hart notes that, according to legislation enacted in 1985, telecommunications services are subject to the state sales tax but are exempt from local sales tax.

But effective Oct. 1, 1987 a city may repeal the exemption of such services from local taxation. The ordinance must be adopted and then submitted to the State Comptroller's office by June 30 for the tax to become effective in October. Still exempted from the tax, however, are certain services such as interstate long-distance and basic local exchange services.

But the services that would be subject to the 1 percent city sales tax would generate approximately $21,400 annually to the city in additional tax revenue, Hart said.

In other business Tuesday, the City Commission will consider:

- matters related to the sale of waterworks and sewer system revenue bonds;
- matters related to the issuance and sale of general obligation refunding bonds;
- a contract with CH2M Hill Inc. for the rehabilitation of the Pampa Wastewater Treatment Plant;
- awarding of bids for the treatment plant rehabilitation; and
- awarding of bids for the purchase of one tractor and one mower.

Commissioners also have scheduled an executive session to discuss purchase of groundwater rights.

Trustees will discuss TEAMS tests results

Results of 1986-87 TEAMS tests are scheduled to be presented to Pampa school trustees when they meet at 6 p.m. Tuesday in Carver Educational Center, 321 W. Albert.

TEAMS, which stands for Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills, are given annually to third-, fifth-, seventh-, ninth- and 11th-graders in Texas public schools, and are used to gauge whether students have mastered basic language and math skills for their grade levels. Eleventh-graders must have mastered basic skills in order to graduate, under Texas education-reform laws.

The board also plans to receive bids on new band uniforms for Pampa Middle School.

During preparation of the 1986-87 school budget, trustees sought bids for new Middle School uniforms, and decided to accept delivery on Sept. 1, 1987. Half of the cost of the uniforms will be paid from this year's budget, and half from the 1987-88 budget.

Interim Superintendent Tommy Cathey said bids have been received from Nicsinger Uniform Co. of Neosho, Mo., for $23,500, and from Fruhauf Uniforms Inc. of Wichita, Kan., for $25,500. Fruhauf promises delivery by Sept. 1, while Nicsinger promises delivery within four months after completion of measurements and paperwork.

In other action Tuesday, trustees plan to:

- ratify a contract with the Gray County Appraisal District;
- designate KGRO-KOMX as official school radio station for 1987-88;
- act on a request regarding an exception to district policy for post-district competition;
- act on a career ladder report;
- receive a budget report;
- discuss the possible sale of property, a student disciplinary action appeal and personnel matters — including resignations, retirements, reassignments and employment — all in closed session.

Lawyer defends his Contra aid opinion

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Reagan administration lawyer, testifying at the Iran-Contra hearings, today defended his 1985 legal opinion declaring that the National Security Council was exempt from a ban on aid to the Nicaraguan rebels because it is not an intelligence agency.

"I think that was a fair conclusion then and I think it is a fair conclusion now," Bretton Sciaroni said of the opinion he wrote in 1985 in his capacity as legal counsel to the president's Intelligence Oversight Board.

But Sciaroni also conceded that he was never informed of wide-ranging, secret activities in support of the Contras by Lt. Col. Oliver North, then an aide on the National Security Council. Asked whether covert support for the war in Nicaragua was an intelligence activity, Sciaroni replied tersely, "That would seem to follow."

Earlier testimony has indicated that North and others in his private Contra aid network relied on this legal opinion to justify their actions during the two-year ban voted by Congress.

But Sciaroni said that as far as he knew his classified legal opinion was never shown to Congress. And House majority counsel John Nields introduced a copy of a legal opinion by a Republican staff attorney on the House Intelligence Committee — found in North's files — that flatly contradicted Sciaroni's opinion. It said NSC was covered by the ban.

Sciaroni said he undertook his legal research after questions were raised in the press and elsewhere about activities on behalf of the Contras by North. Sciaroni said he concluded that North's activities "as portrayed to me, did not constitute a violation" of the ban "even if it applied to the NSC staff." Other documents Sciaroni did not see reflected NSC efforts to get military aid for the Contras from third countries and outlined military strategy proposals for the rebels.

Sciaroni took the witness chair as the hearings began their sixth week. Investigators intend to summon North's former secretary, Fawn Hall, later in the day to question her about any role she played in helping North shred or alter critical documents in the Iran-Contra affair.

Miss Hall, 27, was North's secretary at the National Security Council for four years, including the period when North was directing a series of covert operations aimed at selling arms to Iraq in exchange for the release of American hostages and also giving military aid to Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

She once was described by an acquaintance as "a secretary in the old sense of the word — not someone who just typed, but someone who helped North wrap up details." She made travel arrangements for North and kept a detailed record of his meetings.

In November, after the Iran arms sales became known and before Attorney General Edwin Meese III broke the news that some of the proceeds had been diverted to the Contras, North apparently became concerned about documents and who they might implicate in the affair.

Miss Hall, who has been granted immunity from prosecution, reportedly has testified to a grand jury that on Nov. 14 she altered four documents dealing with the role of North and his superiors. The altered papers, along with copies of the originals, later were found in her desk.

Lefors congregation breaks ground Sunday for its new building

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

LEFORS — 16-year old Jimmy Hannon joined the First Baptist Church on Easter, the day the church building burned to the ground.

Sunday afternoon, Jimmy and the church's oldest member, Elma Cumberledge, pushed a shovel into the soft dirt that had been bladed over where the church building once was located. And with a gentle toss of the dirt, the young man and the elderly woman broke ground for what the congregation prays will be a new beginning.

The First Baptist Church, 315 E. 4th, was destroyed Easter Sunday by flames that continued to burn throughout the structure for nearly five hours that afternoon. Lefors Volunteer Fire Department officials attributed the fire to a faulty air conditioner.

Seven weeks later congregation members gathered in a semi-circle around the site of a planned new red brick church building.

Larry Heard, director of missions for the Top O'Texas Area Baptist Church, told the story of Jacob and how he battled with God for nearly 20 years until he fought an angel and built an altar.

Heard said that, like Jacob, the Lefors congregation needs a place of worship.

"It's time to put our shoulders to the wheel and do the Lord's work," Heard said.

The Rev. Lewis Ellis, pastor, said the new building should be completed by the

Rains have slowed city's Clean-Up Campaign

Last month's rains have slowed work some in the city's current Clean-Up Campaign, but city sanitation crews are still "pretty much on schedule," according to Sanitation Department head Larry Simpson.

Simpson said the sanitation crews moved into Ward 3 last week, still on schedule despite the 7 inches of rain falling on the city in May.

"We're only a block or two behind," Simpson said. "The rains have delayed us some, but we're running close to schedule."

The rains slowed the clean-up operations some because of muddy alleys that the sanitation collection trucks have to use, but the sanitation crews have managed to almost get caught up with the schedule, he said.

Simpson said the crews are busy in Ward 3, which is "a pretty heavy ward," he said. He expects the crews to be able to move into Ward 4 fairly well on schedule next week. "And Ward 4, of course, is even bigger," he noted.

"We're moving as quick as we can," Simpson said, noting that department personnel are working on Saturdays to help catch up. "We want to get into every alley and pick up everything that people have put out for us," he added.

City Manager Bob Hart reported that Sanitation Department crews have collected 69 truck-loads of trash and 19 truck loads of wood chips from trees and bushes from the campaign efforts in Wards 1 and 2.

"That represents a total of 1,120 miles driven and 670 man-hours worked," Hart said.

Ward 3 clean-up efforts will continue this week, with sanitation crews moving into Ward 4 next week to complete the major part of the clean-up drive.

Equipment auction attracts 900 bidders

DUNCAN, Okla. (AP) — Standing under the hot Oklahoma sun, leaning up against International trucks or shouting out their bids, they followed the mobile auction truck as it wound its way through Halliburton's equipment yard.

For the almost 900 registered bidders, Halliburton Service's two-day equipment and truck auction — the company's 31st in the past 26 years — was drawing to a close Saturday afternoon, and it meant the list of available trucks was growing smaller and smaller.

"I've already bought one (truck) and I'm hoping to buy about four or five more," said Bob Lusk, a purchasing agent for RIC Demolition and Asbestos.

Trailing the Miller & Miller auctioneer's truck in a golf cart, Lusk said he was looking for "some heavy trucks" for RIC, a diversified equipment and storage corporation headquartered in Borger, Texas.

"We build plants and tear 'em down. We've got a 48-state trucking service, and our own supply company, which is what I'm buying them for," he said. The equipment, trucks and cars sold at the auction were good enough, according to Halliburton officials, that the event raised more money than last year's auction, which netted Halliburton more than $3 million.

"This is the biggest auction we've ever had," said Roy Ford, purchasing manager.

"We exceeded last year by just a little bit. We had less bidders this year than last (when more than 1,400 showed up), but they were more legitimate bidders serious about buying."

The bidders, who brought along mechanics,

Maverick site backers ponder move

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — A site near here was knocked out of the fight to represent Texas in the national competition for the "super collider" but sponsors of the Garden City location aren't ready to go to their corner.

The Garden City SSC Commission is scheduled to meet at 10 a.m. today in the San Angelo Convention Center to decide whether backers of the West Texas site will forward their proposal to Washington, D.C.

But two state representatives said Garden City site backers should prepare for political battles in Austin if they end-run the two proposals — near Dallas and Amarillo — that won official state sanction.

"In my heart, you know where I'm at: I'm with the guys on the Garden City site," said state Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring.

Shaw, however, said his personal and political credibility could be destroyed if he worked hard for federal Department of Energy approval of a Garden City site.

"I know they have a good site. But I gave all that I was capable of giving, politically, to get the site where it is today," said Shaw, who signed an agreement to go along with whatever sites the Texas National Research Laboratory Commission picked.

"I have to stay true to that agreement, to keep my integrity in the House and Senate," he said. "I cannot publicly be part of a maverick proposal."

And on the evening of Nov. 21, as Meese was beginning an investigation, North and Miss Hall stuffed so many memos, computer messages and other documents into a shredder that it jammed. Despite their efforts, many documents were obtained by investigators.

Four days later, when Meese announced news of the diversion and North was fired, Miss Hall reportedly removed a half-inch stack of documents related to the affair and turned it over to North.

During her time at the NSC, Miss Hall for 15 months dated Arturo Cruz Jr., the son of former Contra leader Arturo Cruz.

Fischer has not been charged with a crime and has denied wide knowledge of the fund-raising end of September or the first of October. The church is paying for the new building with insurance proceeds from the burned structure.

Ellis said cooperation with the state Baptist convention and builder A.G. Sawatsky enabled the church to complete plans for the new church within two months.

While the Baptist congregation waits for their new place of worship, they are gathering at the Lefors United Methodist Church for their Sunday services.

"They have their service from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m., when we have Sunday school in their basement," Ellis said, adding that the Baptist church service is held in the UMC sanctuary at 11 a.m.

"They have been very gracious to let us use their building," he said. "We're helping them with the utilities."

"The community has been supportive," Ellis added. "From the very start, we have had several people help. This is a close-knit community when people get in trouble."

Takes time for city crews to catch up

By BOB HART
Pampa City Manager

We are now in Ward 3 of the Clean-Up Campaign.

Through Wards 1 and 2, the Sanitation Department has collected 69 truck-loads of trash and 19 truck-loads of wood chips, representing a total of 1,120 miles driven and 670 man-hours worked.

As you are doing your spring cleaning, we would request that you place your items behind your own fence and not next to the dumpster. Placing them behind your own fence makes it easier for our personnel to move through the alleys.

Additionally, we will collect large items such as furniture. We would much prefer these items be placed in the alley rather than being dumped on county roads or farm land.

The recent rains have created other problems for us besides slowing down the Clean-Up Campaign. Obviously, we have been slowed down in emptying the alleys because of the muddy alleys. Because of the rain, we are simply not able to drive the trucks through the alleys. Our personnel are working on Saturdays to help catch up.

Additionally, the Street Department is having difficulty grading the alleys because of the wet weather.

The size of the system makes it difficult to catch up. As an example, we have 2,953 residential dumpsters and 626 commercial dumpsters. We also have 88 miles of alleys. Consequently, when we have a series of rains like we had recently, it does take time for us to catch up. We appreciate your understanding and patience.

Further, because of the rain, weeds are growing now faster than ever.

If you have complaints about high weeds, please call Tom Adams or David McKinney at 665-8481 so we can contact property owners about cutting their weeds. Although our firefighters are regularly checking vacant lots throughout town, your calls are helpful in double-checking our work.

Officials investigate early morning fire

A Pampa mother-of-three awoke this morning to find her bedroom curtain ablaze, in what police and fire officials are investigating as an apparent arson.

Rebecca Alvarado, 26, 605 E. Gordon, reported the fire shortly after 5 a.m. The curtain fire was extinguished by the time fire trucks arrived.

No one was injured in the blaze, and the Pampa Fire Department reported minimal damage.

Alvarado lives with her three children and two cousins in the house, owned by Heliodoro Silva of Pampa.

"Somebody supposedly reached in the window, and set the curtain on fire," Fire Marshal Tom Adams said this morning. Adams said that a napkin apparently was lit with a match, then used to start the fire.

A napkin appearing to match the same design as napkins in Alvarado's kitchen was found near the charred curtain, Adams said.

Adams said police and fire officials still have the blaze under investigation and have no leads at this time.

Wildcat drilling reported significantly down

DALLAS (AP) — The number of oil and gas wells drilled in Texas during the first four months of 1987 plunged to about half of the number drilled during the same period in 1986, the Texas Railroad Commission said.

Through April 30, 133 wildcat holes and 89 gas wells were punched, down sharply from last year's four-month exploratory total of 181 oil and 270 gas wells.

When new wells in existing fields are added, Texas producers have drilled 4,273 wells through April 1987, compared with 9,202 for the same period last year.

Wildcaters have been strapped by continued weak oil prices and reduced exploration budgets.

Texas Railroad Commission statistics for the first four months of 1987 indicate exploratory drilling activity is down from last year in almost every area of the state.

The area of greatest activity this year is in RRC District 4 in South Texas, where 57 new gas holes and eight oil wildcats have been drilled through April. Last year the district had 86 new gas wells and 19 oil wildcats.

The overall state decline follows a year of significant wildcat activity for Texas.

An annual survey of the U.S. petroleum industry by Petroleum Information, a national energy consulting company, shows that Texas led all states in new field exploration in 1986 with 772 wildcat completions.

Of those, 65 opened new gas fields — the highest number of gas discoveries in any state in 1986 — while 63 resulted in new oil field discoveries, second only to Kansas.

PI also reports that Texas wildcaters enjoyed a 16.6 percent rate of success in 1986, 2 percentage points higher than the national average.

In West Texas, the Permian Basin ranked as the nation's most heavily drilled geological province in 1986, PI said.

Much of the successful exploration in West Texas resulted from deeper exploration in areas where established production is more shallow, PI said.

In East Texas, operators in Railroad

Commission Districts 5 and 6 concentrated on drilling in and around existing fields, and development work in existing reservoirs during 1986. Only 21.9 percent of the drilling activity in East Texas was exploratory.

By year's end, 941 wells had been counted in the region, about 30 percent below the number of wells counted during the same period in 1985. The 1986 total includes 378 oil and 224 gas producers, a 64 percent success rate.

Pure exploration in the region accounted for 140 completions during the year, including 15 oil and 14 gas discoveries, a success rate of 20.7 percent.

It cost a regional oil operator about $62.08 a foot to drill and complete an East Texas well during 1986, down from $77.87 per foot the previous year. PI estimated the total amount spent on drilling in Districts 5 and 6 in 1986 was $372 million.

In South Texas, RRC District 1 was the site of continued delineation of shallow oil reserves, as illustrated by Bexar County's ranking as the second best in the nation for completions last year — 518 oil and gas wells were completed in the county with a 90.2 percent success ratio.

Another significant development in South Texas 1986 was the continued expansion of Bastrop County's Serbit Field, PI said. By the end of 1986, more than a dozen operators had secured leases and were drilling outposts along the southwest flank of the field.

Governor invited by bishops to attend panel's final session

DALLAS (AP) — A committee investigating the Southern Methodist University football recruiting scandal has invited Gov. Bill Clements to attend its final interview session.

United Methodist bishops aren't saying if Clements has accepted the invitation to the session that runs from today through Wednesday.

"He's given us the assurances of cooperation," said Spurgeon Dunnam III, chairman of the committee. "I'm sure it is the hope of the committee that he will be present during some part of the meeting."

Clements earlier said he would meet with the committee after the Texas Legislature's special session adjourned. The Legislature is scheduled to reconvene in special session on June 22.

The committee will begin drafting a final report about the scandal this week and present SMU's Board of Trustees with it on June 19, Dunnam said. Bishops are trying to determine who knew of and approved the payments.

Clements revealed in March that, as chairman of SMU's Board of Governors in 1985, he and other SMU governors approved continued booster payments to football players with the understanding that the payments be phased out.

Members will meet again June 15 in Arkansas during an annual bishops' retreat to make final revisions before presenting the report to SMU trustees.

Clements was chairman of the Board of Governors until January. He has declined to identify the other SMU governors involved in the decision to continue payments to certain athletes despite repeated requests from trustees.

The payments, a violation of National Collegiate Athletic Association rules, occurred while SMU was on NCAA probation for improper recruiting practices.

The NCAA in February suspended SMU's football team for the 1987 season and limited it to seven road games for 1988. Strict scholarship limits prompted SMU officials to later cancel the 1988 season.

The revelations prompted the abolishment of the Board of Governors, an executive committee of the Board of Trustees that he chaired until January, and an overhaul of the school's governance structure.

Civil, criminal trials different, Cullen Davis's lawyer reports

FORT WORTH (AP) — Ten years ago, Cullen Davis, then 43 and among the richest men in Texas, was on trial for his life. Now it is his shrinking fortune that's at stake.

The difference between the criminal trial in which Davis was acquitted and the civil wrongful death suit he now faces is profound, not unlike comparing a world championship prize fight with a back alley brawl.

Both are bloody affairs, but the rules differ substantially.

"Our judicial system makes it a hell of a lot easier to take away a man's money than his freedom," a lawyer in the Davis wrongful death trial observed last week.

"And that's probably the way it should be," he said.

In what then was the longest, costliest murder trial in Texas history, an Amarillo jury acquitted Davis of killing his 12-year-old stepdaughter during a murderous 1976 shooting spree at his remote $6 million mansion.

The defendant's ex-wife Priscilla was wounded, her boyfriend Stan Farr was killed and a young mansion visitor, Bubba Gavrel, was permanently disabled by the bewigged gunman dressed in black.

Gavrel's date that night, Beverly Bass, 18, was the only person to escape the mansion unharmed.

The three survivors testified in Amarillo that Davis was the gunman. Together, they underwent three weeks of vigorous and withering cross-examination by Houston's legal bulldog, Richard "Racehorse" Haynes.

Haynes focused his attack less on their testimony than their lifestyles, hammering away at real and imagined drug and sex parties at the mansion and a stormy extra-marital romance between Mrs. Davis and an ex-motorcycle racer.

Last week, the three told their stories again, this time without interruption by scores of objections and without the intense cross-examination by the defense.

It took one day. Not that defense attorney Steve Sumner lacked the skill or the aggressiveness of Haynes, but the rules of evidence were different. More important, the presiding judge ruled repeatedly that the often lurid testimony in Amarillo was neither relevant nor material to the issue before his court.

A judicial gag order precluded comment by Sumner but his chagrin and frustration were apparent. It is also ironic that Sumner is being prohibited from using the fruits of his own investigation, since it was he who researched information for HYALIE IN Amarillo.

At the same time, Judge Claude Williams allowed testimony by a pair of expert witnesses who appeared on behalf of the plaintiffs, Mrs. Davis and her second husband, Jack Wilborn, parents of the slain girl.

Plaintiff attorneys were not at all certain that the judge would permit them to testify.

One, a former FBI agent, told jurors that a psychological profile he prepared on the mansion gunman fit Davis "to a T." The second, a criminologist, said Davis was the probable assailant.

Those expert opinions coupled with the uncluttered eyewitness accounts most likely will compel Davis to testify this week even if not called by plaintiff lawyers.

Critics: INS rules creating a major shortage of funds

DALLAS (AP) — The amnesty program set up to grant citizenship to certain undocumented workers is facing serious funding problems because federal regulations are barring so many applicants, according to a newspaper report.

Immigration and Naturalization Service officials had planned for the amnesty program to fund itself through application fees, but it is far below the financial break-even point despite work at 107 legalization centers nationwide, the Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.

During the first month that ended Wednesday, 63,511 aliens nationwide applied for amnesty, which, if extrapolated over the yearlong program, would amount to 762,132 applications, less than half the most conservative INS estimates.

In the first month, $10.1 million in application fees was collected — which over a year translates to less than $125 million, the amount of a loan the INS requested from Congress to run the program for the first five months.

The sluggish start is aggravated by discord between voluntary agencies handling applications and the INS. Immigrant advocates are advising undocumented aliens to delay seeking amnesty until changes are made and are considering class-action lawsuits against the INS.

Lawyers and voluntary amnesty agencies are also at loggerheads with the INS over some regulations and procedures.

If narrow INS regulations remain, critics say, thousands of undocumented aliens will miss amnesty — trumpeted as a way to escape exploitation and enter the economic mainstream.

Immigrant advocates are intensifying lobbying efforts in Congress against restrictive regulations, seeking to broaden amnesty to include more aliens before the one-time program ends. They see litigation as a last-ditch option.

Many proposed INS regulations were assailed during two public comment periods earlier this year, but key provisions were intact in the final rules. Now, rules that provoked widespread criticism are weeding out thousands of potential amnesty recipients.

"I really can't understand why the INS is sitting back scratching their heads wondering why there aren't more applications when they have these nifty rules," said Dan Kesselbrenner, director of the National Immigration Project of the National Lawyers Guild in Boston.

"They are losing millions of dollars because people aren't applying, and people have a distrust of the INS because these rules are disqualifying people rather than trying to find a way to make them eligible," he said.

Less than 10 percent of the applications have been prepared by INS-designated agencies, perceived as a crucial link to reach the undocumented population.

The many hours needed to document cases, bureaucratic paperwork and narrow regulations have impeded progress, said Vanna Slaughter of Catholic Charities in Dallas.

"We are not panicking yet," said INS spokesman Rick Kenney in Washington, adding that applications rose substantially in late May. "We are hoping to get the appropriate funding (from Congress), and we are all along collecting fees."

"We never really hoped for any particular number of applications," he said. "Generally, the numbers are within our realm of expectation, but we had anticipated a greater number."

The INS forecasts that 8,000 amnesty applications a day — including 2,400 in the Southern Region, which includes Texas — are needed to break even financially. But the daily average nationwide after one month was 3,175 applications.

Birthday bash

The community of Windthorst, 25 miles south of Wichita Falls, celebrated its 95th birthday Sunday with games, food and a street dance. The dairy farming town has a population of 400, made up primarily of German ancestry. Participating in the tug of war were from left: Cletus Schroeder, Jerry Horn, Bill Wolf and coach Mark Hoff.

Gulf moisture flows inland to fall over southern Texas

By The Associated Press

A flow of moisture from the Gulf of Mexico brought cloudy skies to much of Texas and more showers and thunderstorms to the coast and the Rio Grande.

Some of the stronger storms Sunday were located near Victoria and offshore southeast of Corpus Christi, the National Weather Service said.

The forecast for today called for mostly cloudy skies in the south and west with a chance of widely scattered showers and thunderstorms. It should be partly cloudy in the north through Monday, the weather service said.

Already, farm experts say heavy rain and flooding that inundated wide areas of Texas last week may have swamped some farmers' hopes for their 1987 crops, although other producers and ranchers welcomed the moisture.

Early estimates put the potential for damage to the state's crops as high as $500 million, said Dr. Zerle Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Texas A&M University.

However, there were hopes that some crops might recover, and Carpenter said the soaking rain should dampen the subsoil for future production.

Texas Department of Agriculture officials also believe many farmers and ranchers would rather be drenched than face drought conditions, as much of the Southeastern United States did last year.

"They'd rather have moisture in the ground and have it deep," said TDA spokesman Andy Welch. "It's also going to do wonders for the livestock producers," he added. "Their stock tanks are going to be full. The pastures are going to be green."

The heaviest losses were expected in South Texas, where more than a foot of rain accumulated over several days and kept farmers from getting to their crops, which were ready for harvest.

"In the Winter Garden of the state, the San Antonio area, we've had a substantial loss in onion production, simply because farmers were unable to get into the field," Carpenter said.

Flooding also damaged watermelons and cantaloupes in many areas.

Heavy rains cause problems for Lake Texoma resorts

By The Associated Press

Heavy rains have swelled Lake Texoma nearly 20 feet above its normal level, virtually closing down most of the recreation areas on both the Texas and Oklahoma side of the lake.

Oklahoma resort operators were pessimistic about when things will return to normal and if they will return in time for a summer season. On the Texas side, however, there was optimism.

Joe and JoAnne Showalter built a dike around their building at Willow Springs Resort and Marina in Oklahoma and used a pump to get rid of some of the excess water Sunday. The business was closed.

The restaurants and clothing store at Loe's Highport Marina in Texas were under water, but Dewitt Loe III was launching boats from his parking lot, shuttling customers to their boats and feeding them at a temporary restaurant.

"We're functioning," Loe told the Dallas Times Herald. "The restaurants are closed, but we hope to have the water out of our kitchen area in about a week."

"We've set up a temporary restaurant on higher ground and have been serving food to our clientele all weekend," Loe said. "As the water recedes, we'll get one thing after another back into operation."

Ranger Julian Means at Eisenhower State Park near Denison said the campgrounds and picnic areas were in good shape, but the boat ramp, swimming areas and fishing ramps were closed.

Private homes were not flooded because the water has been contained on property owned by the Army Corps of Engineers.

Hal Curtis, a fishing guide at Pottsboro, Texas, said he believes the striped bass for which Lake Texoma is famous are going out the flood gates along with the 40,000 to 50,000 cubic feet of water being released each second.

Beginning 1 July, 1987, my practice will be decreased. I will not be available for emergencies and office hours will be limited markedly.

Patients should make other arrangements for continuity of care.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Wider AIDS testing could slow outbreak

With a cure for AIDS not expected in the foreseeable future, the battle to contain this deadly contagion now centers on the volatile issue of testing the estimated 2 million Americans who are carriers of the virus.

Because persons infected with the AIDS virus often display no outward symptoms, they can transmit the disease to others unwittingly. This is a key reason why the epidemic is spreading at such an alarming rate.

Screening potential carriers by means of a blood test that detects the virus is a critical technique in checking the rampant growth of AIDS. The federal Public Health Service has urged a major increase in testing on a voluntary basis to help pinpoint the large numbers of unsuspecting carriers of the virus.

Although health experts agree that broader testing is essential, the question of mandatory screening has become clouded by political considerations arising from concerns about discrimination against homosexuals. The latest politically explosive development is President Reagan's recommendation that marriage-license applicants undergo required testing for AIDS as they do already for venereal diseases in some states.

If political considerations are stripped away, the merit of mandatory testing for AIDS is as valid as it is for other communicable diseases — and, in fact, much more compelling, given the enormously greater health threat posed by AIDS.

Couples preparing for marriage should know whether either spouse is carrying the AIDS virus, both to protect the uninfected partner and to decide whether to have children. Health officials estimate that thousands of infants will be born in the United States with AIDS over the next few years because the parents were unaware they had been exposed to the virus.

Some health officials oppose mandatory testing of marriage-license applicants on grounds that it would drive AIDS victims "underground," making them fearful of seeking medical treatment. But will more AIDS cases not go unreported due to voluntary or involuntary ignorance of infection than due to attempts to evade testing requirements?

The issue of AIDS testing blurs the line between personal rights and public health. All possible precautions should be taken to protect the rights of individuals. Whenever possible, voluntary methods should be employed rather than mandatory methods. But one's right to privacy does not include a right to endanger the lives of others. A high-risk AIDS carrier does not have the right to expose another person to the deadly disease without that person's consent. An AIDS carrier who engages in high-risk behavior endangers the public health like a rooftop sniper firing into a lunch-hour crowd. AIDS testing would be one way of protecting the public health.

Wider testing is the most productive way to bring AIDS out of the shadows. Enforced ignorance, caused by fear of testing, will only help promote the proliferation of this lethal affliction.

Gulf policy invites disaster

Any country concerned with protecting its security sometimes has to take risks it could avoid, and would dearly like to avoid, in order to prevent still greater risks further down the road. The Reagan administration portrays the current dispute over U.S. policy in the Persian Gulf as one of those cases. But some risks are necessary, and some are just risks.

The administration wants to put 11 Kuwaiti oil tankers under the American flag, Kuwait, by providing financial support for Iraq in its war with Iran, has become a target for Iranian missiles. Since September, 25 of its tankers have been hit. The "reflagging" is meant to deter Iran by raising the prospect of an American military response.

This measure has a public reason and a private motive. Neither casts a flattering light. The public reason for putting American sailors in danger, stated by President Reagan, is the fear that a new "Middle East oil crisis" will bring the return of "the endless demoralizing gas line, the shortages, the rationing, the escalating energy prices, double-digit inflation and the enormous dislocation that shook our economy to its foundations" back in the 1970s.

This is bad history and bad economics. The chaos that followed the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo and the Ayatollah Khomeini's 1978 revolution in Iran was a product of the U.S. government's self-defeating policies, not of any catastrophic loss of oil. Without price controls and federal allocation rules, the market would accommodate any reduction in oil supplies with no more disruption than occurs with the loss of Florida oranges to a winter cold snap.

The idea that a few Kuwaiti oil tankers are the only thing standing between us and a ruinous rise in oil prices is absurd. Given the existing glut, their loss would hardly be noticed. Other OPEC countries, notably Saudi Arabia, would be happy to make up the difference. Besides, this administration occasionally has suggested it favors higher oil prices to help American producers.

It's not hard to think of possible events in the Persian Gulf that could convulse the world economy. But as long as the Saudi monarchy remains in power and the Strait of Hormuz remains open, the Iran-Iraq war isn't likely to have much more effect on world oil supplies in the future than it has in the past. When the war began in 1980, oil was selling for $28 a barrel. It's now down to $18.

But if the public reason is weak, there are other explanations for the policy. The private motive is the administration's embarrassment at its Iran arms deal, which occurred at a time when it was twisting its allies' arms to stop selling weapons to Iran.

Reagan obviously hopes this showy gesture will reassure those allies, not to mention the other Persian Gulf states, that its policy towards the Ayatollah isn't appeasement. But granting that the arms deal didn't help America's — or at least Reagan's — reputation for steadfastness, there are better ways to undo the damage.

The first is by protecting what is truly important to the West — namely unimpeded shipping through the Strait of Hormuz, through which most of the Persian Gulf's oil travels. The strait is open today at least partly because the U.S. government has declared its resolve to do whatever is required to keep it open. Iran has not chosen to test that resolve.

The second is by reaffirming our support for the moderate Gulf states, including Kuwait but most importantly Saudi Arabia. They need to know that if Iraq loses the war, they won't lie exposed to Iran's regional ambitions.

The third is by reminding the Soviets that we won't tolerate any aggressive actions in the Gulf. Their agreement to reflag three Kuwaiti tankers doesn't qualify.

These commitments are credible because they are plainly essential to U.S. interests. They also are backed by 400,000 American soldiers and sailors allotted to the region. The stakes are high enough that our enemies can have little doubt about the consequences of challenging us.

The reflagging of the Kuwaiti tankers is a different case entirely. The oil they carry isn't vital. So Iran will be tempted to attack by the hope of driving the United States back — as its Lebanese friends drove the U.S. out by the bombing of the Marine barracks in Beirut. Nothing would be more harmful to our interests in the Persian Gulf than another debacle that makes the United States look unreliable. But that is what Reagan's policy invites.

The administration has yet to make a convincing case for this expansion of our role in the Persian Gulf, and whatever public support it has will vanish at the first significant American casualties. A president hobbled by the Iranok affair ought to have learned that in hazardous ventures abroad, public support is critical.

Can't stretch U.S. too thin

Our nation's "agricultural program" is a mess. Despite astronomical infusions of government money, agriculture, as such, has become unmanageable.

We cannot establish "policy" that is fair to cotton and catfish, cane sugar and corn sugar. Agricultural commodities are going to have to be priced and produced by whatever the free market demands. We can't do more than we can do.

Similarly, in foreign policy, world interests have become so varied and complex that no one "policy" is workable.

Example: Suppose our policy is to oppose any government that does not adopt our standards for free elections.

Under that "policy" we would have to fight every nation in Africa; every one.

Or suppose our announced "policy" is to sponsor freedom fighters in every country that has a Communist government. Under that policy we'd have to try to overthrow China and Poland, though these nations pose no threat to American interests.

Indeed, American interests are menaced much closer to home than that.

Mexico, just a shallow river away from us, is a country waiting for a revolution.

Mexico has enormous problems, is plagued by an autocratic one-party government plus massive, pervasive corruption. Mexico is suffering a damaging decline in oil prices, a $98 billion foreign debt, high inflation, tragic poverty and huge unemployment. Mexico is the major source of heroin and marijuana for the United States and the major source of illegal immigration.

And already the Mexican news media is overwhelmingly pro-Castro.

Mexico is ripe for a Red-led revolt.

Yet, we are presently engaged in a showdown with Iran and Iraq 6,000 miles from home.

American warships are committed to protect oil shipments in the Persian Gulf.

Why just us? The United States gets barely 5 percent of its oil from that source — yet, we are accepting 100 percent of the risk.

We can't do more than we can do.

If our nation's own resources are finite, then prudent allocation of those resources dictates first manning our own ramparts.

The rest of the free world loves to sit back and applaud the United States as "the world leader." Thus they get us to preserve, protect and defend them.

How can Japan eclipse us in industrial productivity? Because Japan can rely on us to keep the peace while Japan concentrates on getting rich.

Soon — and I hope not too late — the United States is going to have to indulge in some enlightened selfishness. We just can't do more than we can do and we can go broke trying.

Reagan won't forget Europe in arms pact

By William A. Rusher

If arms control weren't such a serious matter, there would be material enough for a Restoration comedy in the hullabaloo over the negotiations now going forward between the United States and the Soviet Union in Geneva. If all goes well, they will culminate in an agreement signed by President Reagan and Soviet boss Gorbachev at a summit meeting some time this fall.

One might suppose that this prospect would please America's liberals. They tend to score each presidential administration as a "success" or a "failure," depending on whether the incumbent president manages to reach some agreement, no matter how unfavorable or unverifiable, with his Soviet opposite number. But of course Ronald Reagan is The Enemy, in a way that (to them) Gorbachev can never be, so any agreement he is willing to sign must be opposed by all right-minded liberals.

This leagues them, uncomfortably but firmly, with the hard rightists, for whom no agreement with the Soviet Union can ever be favorable enough or verifiable enough, and who therefore, whatever they may say, privately oppose any agreement as a matter of principle.

And it links this odd couple, in turn, to yet a third body of opinion. These are the Nixon-Kissinger Machiavellians, traditionally detested by the left and despised by the right, who generally return both compliments and consider their own brand of amoral karate the only really sound way to conduct foreign policy. This crowd has been sidelined during the Reagan administration, and is eager to play a hand of its own in the negotiations now going on.

Getting wind of a possible agreement based on elimination from Europe of all but 100 intermediate-range nuclear missiles on each side (to be based in Soviet Asia and the United States respectively), this cockeyed coalition of no-agreement buffs, card-carrying wimps, and dime-store Machiavellians is rocking the rafters with protests.

The focus of their collective passion, of course, is the man who is indirectly but firmly guiding the Geneva negotiations on behalf of the United States: Ronald Reagan. To anyone who knows and understands him, it is downright comical to think that he could be tempted into reaching some ill-advised agreement with the Soviet Union in return for that "place in history" that the liberals promise to every president who does their bidding. If President Reagan does not obtain an agreement he considers beneficial, and not only beneficial but 100 percent verifiable, he will walk away from the bargaining table as coolly as he did at Reykjavik.

But what about the specific criticisms of the proposed agreement?

Having first charged (quite falsely) that Western Europe would be effectively de-nuclearized by the proposed agreement, the opposition has largely abandoned that contention. Instead it now asserts that, under the agreement, Europe would remain possessed of only the smallest nuclear weapons, usable only on German territory and thus bound to encourage a mood of neutralism in Germany, thereby dooming NATO.

Not so, replies Richard Perle in the May 25 issue of U.S. News & World Report. According to Perle, who was assistant secretary of defense until a month ago (and assuredly no wimp), the final 100 missiles on each side should indeed be eliminated in the interests of easier verification; but as for nuclear weapons, "the U.S. will have thousands of nuclear weapons in Europe, many with sufficient range to strike Soviet and other Warsaw Pact targets."

Housing, campaign finances on congressional agenda

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House will take up a major housing bill and the Senate works on campaign finance reform this week, while leaders from both chambers push to complete action on a fiscal 1988 budget.

The Democratic-controlled House plans to take up a $17.3 billion housing program for next year. The bill would increase federal housing spending to cover inflation and is $6 billion above President Reagan's request for more cutbacks. It was passed by the House Banking Committee over the objection of its GOP members.

"Truthfully, we can't afford to cut housing any more," said Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas. "The bill ... is not generous. At best, it will prevent the housing crisis from growing faster."

Congress has not enacted a regular housing bill since Reagan took office. But with the Democrats regaining control of the Senate this year, the legislation is being moved along quickly. The Senate Banking Committee also has approved a housing bill, slightly smaller than the House version.

The House also is scheduled to debate this week a bill authorizing the government's intelligence-gathering activities for next year, and the congressional Iran-Contra hearings are into their sixth week.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., is trying to find a Senate compromise on revising Senate campaign finance rules.

A bill before the Senate has provoked threats of a filibuster from GOP opponents.

The chairmen of the House and Senate budget committees struck a compromise last week, but angry liberals said it went too far toward the Senate's more generous allocation for military spending.

The proposed compromise included a defense budget of $300 billion for next year.

Airlines aren't fooling about no refunds on discount tickets

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the airlines' latest marketing tools, the non-refundable deep discount fare, can be a source of cheap travel this summer, but for some people the airline bargain could turn into a costly mistake.

With only rare exceptions, the airlines are refusing to let travelers off the hook if their travel plans change, pointing out that the deep discount tickets clearly state they are non-refundable.

But consumer experts, travel agents and airline officials say sometimes customers, eager to take advantage of savings of as much as 70 percent, do not heed the warning.

"When they see the $99 fare, that's the last thing they recognize," says Hoyt Decker, a consumer affairs specialist for the Transportation Department. "For everything else their eyes glaze over."

And, he says, the 100 percent no-refund provision is something new to air travelers since airlines have had a long history of taking back tickets if someone's travel plans change.

"People are properly warned, but some people take it perhaps not seriously enough," says Frances Gorain, owner of Vega International Travel Services in Chicago and president of the American Society of Travel Agents.

Airline officials argue that the tradeoff for getting a ticket costing only a third of a regular fare is that travelers must make certain they will be able to fly on the day scheduled.

"For a legitimate medical reason and if a person can produce a letter from a doctor, then we will consider making a refund," says Alton Becker, a spokesman for American Airlines. But that's about the only acceptable excuse besides proof of a death in the family, said spokesmen for a half-dozen airlines.

The tickets also are not transferrable. If anyone else shows up "we can refuse to board you on the flight," United Airlines spokesman Joe Hopkins said. But identification is rarely sought when boarding an aircraft, industry officials acknowledge.

Length of prison sentences up more than 30 percent since 1979

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal judges are cracking down harder on convicted felons, imposing sentences last year that were more than 30 percent longer than those handed down in 1979, a federal report shows.

The Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics, in a report released Sunday, said the average length of federal prison sentences increased 32 percent between 1979 and 1986.

The average sentence for a drug offense was 38 percent longer last year than in 1979, while the length of a sentence for fraud was 43 percent longer.

Sentences for weapons offenses were 41 percent longer, while sentences for robbery increased 10 percent.

The report compared sentences imposed between July 1, 1978, and June 30, 1979, to sentences handed down between July 1, 1985, and June 30, 1986.

"The length of time served is related to the length of the original sentence, the nature and severity of the offense as well as offender characteristics," said Steven R. Schlesinger, director of the bureau.

Last year, 51 percent of the 40,740 people convicted of federal offenses were sentenced to prison terms, with about 73 percent receiving only prison terms rather than a combination of prison and probation.

The average prison sentence was slightly less than 5½ years, according to the report. Approximately 39 percent of those convicted received sentences of more than five years, while 16 percent were sentenced to one year or less.

On average, those convicted of homicide were sentenced to prison terms of about 16 years, excluding life sentences. The average sentence for robbery was more than 13 years.

Drug law violators, including those convicted on marijuana charges, were sentenced to an average of five years and 10 months. Excluding marijuana, the average prison sentence was six years and two months.

Thirty-seven percent of those convicted last year were sentenced to probation only and the rest paid fines or served other sentences. The average length of a straight probation sentence was nearly three years, with 33 percent sentenced to more than three years and 22 percent to one year or less.

Of the more than 24,000 offenders who left probation and parole last year, more than one in five had committed a new crime or violated the conditions for release.

Report: Singer dropped out of Jehovah's Witnesses

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Jackson, who once pledged to tone down his music because it had offended fellow Jehovah's Witnesses, has quit the religion, according to a published report.

The denomination "no longer considers Michael Jackson to be one of Jehovah's Witnesses," according to a May 18 letter from its Brooklyn headquarters, the Los Angeles Times reported Sunday.

Jackson's manager, Frank Dileo, refused to comment or ask the reclusive singer to respond.

"Michael Jackson has disassociated himself from the Christian congregation and no longer wants to be known as a Jehovah's Witness," the member, who was not identified by name, told the newspaper.

He refused to elaborate or to describe how active Jackson was in the congregation, located in the San Fernando Valley not far from the singer's Encino mansion.

Donna Rice and friend have say in magazines

NEW YORK (AP) — Gary Hart spent nights with Donna Rice on a yacht in Bimini and at his Washington townhouse, then turned ashen-faced and coldly ended the affair when confronted about it by reporters, according to a friend of Rice's.

In cover stories published Sunday, Rice wrote in Life magazine that "I'm not a party girl," while her friend Lynn Armandt told People magazine The Miami Herald stories of the relationship between Hart and Rice were true.

"The actual truth is that some of that back-door stuff they talked about never really happened and Donna actually stayed in Gary's townhouse Friday night," Ms. Armandt said in People. Hart quit the presidential campaign May 8, five days after the Herald's story.

Hart denied that Rice spent the night of May 1 at his Washington townhouse, saying Rice left through a back door and stayed, along with Ms. Armandt, at the home of his friend William Broadhurst.

Rice, 29, on the advice of her lawyer, did not write about the relationship in her bylined Life article.

"I feel like a hunted animal," Rice said. Since the story broke, she wrote, "I have averaged less than four hours sleep a night and been under a great deal of stress. I have very bad mood swings."

America's future: Penturbia?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are engaging in the nation's fifth major migration, turning to the smaller towns and cities and away from the metropolitan areas that have been the focus of their lives in this century, an expert in urban development says.

Penturbia, as he calls the region of new growth, is becoming the nation's area of opportunity, according to Jack Lessinger, a professor of real estate and urban development at the University of Washington in Seattle.

The shift first was noticed between 1970 and 1980, and represents a change in values, says Lessinger, as Americans move from a consuming to a conserving approach to the world.

It's a move back toward an ethic that existed many years ago, he said.

"In the 19th century, we ... were a kind of society and economy interested in saving for the future and building up a vast industrial plane. We did it too well, and developed problems of overproduction," Lessinger explained in a telephone interview last week.

"As an antidote, we developed a consumption economy that put all the stress on the present rather than the future.

"Again, we went too far with that kind of economy, and as a result of the excesses of a consumer economy we have begun developing a conserving economy. It is ... just beginning to manifest itself, and the penturbias are just one of the many features of the new economy," Lessinger said.

"Look for penturbia beyond the normal commuting range of the nation's central cities. It is small cities and towns, new subdivisions, homesteads, industrial and commercial districts interspersed with farms, forests, rivers and lakes," Lessinger wrote in the June edition of American Demographics, a magazine specializing in population issues.

Leading the way to this new promised land is a type of American whom Lessinger calls the "caring conservator," a person who saves and guards resources, works for preservation of air, water, buildings, parks and cultural artifacts.

His label, penturbia, is derived from the Greek word for five, because Lessinger considers the shift to be the fifth major change for America.

These conserving Americans will succeed the consumers who settled the suburbs between 1929 and 1958 in the nation's last major migration.

Before that, he contends, major national migrations included movement away from coastal cities into colonies like Vermont and the Carolinas in the 1700s; the westward movement along the Ohio and Mississippi waterways in the early 1800s; and the rapid growth of the great industrial cities in the late 19th century.

Throughout most of this century the major cities and suburbs have been the booming growth centers, Lessinger said. But now the suburbs are becoming increasingly congested, polluted and expensive, while more distant counties still provide less costly land, open spaces and more opportunities.

Tilt-top tables have been in and out of style

By RALPH and TERRY KOVEL
If someone described a table to you by saying it was "a tilt top with a pie crust edge, cabriole legs, carved knees and ball and claw feet," would you really know what it looked like or when it might have been made?

The small table with a movable round top was popular in the 1760s. If the top has a raised edge, it is often called a "pie crust edge." If the top could be tilted so the table could be placed out of the way, the correct name is "tilt-top table."

The pedestal with three curved legs was often used to hold the table top at this time. The curved leg is called "cabriole." The "knee" is where the curve breaks.

If the ends of the leg are carved to look like claws holding something round, the table has a "ball and claw" foot.

By 1800 the table design had been simplified and the pie crust, ball and claw, and knee carving were often omitted. The elaborate carved table was copied again in the 1870s and later in the 1930s.

The style is still made, although many no longer have the tilting top.

Q. How was Chase Chrome marked? What did Chase make?

A. Chase Chrome was made by The Chase Brass and Copper Company. The company originally made buttons; later they made other brass articles such as lamps and beds.

By the 1900s the company was making brass in a rolling mill, and by 1918 they made brass and copper for the war. The company began making high style Art Deco chrome tablewares in the days of the Depression.

The company logo of a centaur holding a drawn bow was introduced in October, 1928. The chrome was almost always marked with this impressed mark on the bottom of each piece.

Some trays and other tablewares with plastic handles had the mark on the top of the rivet that held the handle. The mark is often difficult to see.

Q. When was wooden type used for printing?

A. The machinery needed to make wooden type was first made about 1827. Before that type was carved by hand.

By 1834 the machine-made type was easily purchased, and all sizes were made, from small to 30-inch letters. Wooden type is still made.

Q. My glass bread tray has a sailor in the center. He is wearing a hat with the word "Pinafore" on the band. The handles are shell shaped.

Can you tell me how old it is? A. "HMS Pinafore" was an operetta by Gilbert and Sullivan. It was first performed in England in 1878.

Your tray is part of a series of pressed glass called "Actress." Each piece pictures a different stage personality.

Q. I have an antique iron bank shaped like a bank building. It does not have a key. How was the bank opened and emptied?

A. The early still banks sometimes had keys, but they often used the easiest possible opener. Take a screwdriver and remove the screws that hold the bottom of the bank in place.

This sometimes causes the entire bank to fall apart. Don't worry, it is made so that it can be reassembled.

TIP: To remove a musty odor from a book, sprinkle talcum powder between the pages, then wrap the book and store it for a few months. When you open it again, brush out all the powder and the musty smell will be gone.

The new throwaway camera now offered for sale would have been disliked by our thrifty ancestors.

Many antiques are found today with a special type of repair that puts them in the category of "make-dos." They are items made from broken parts that seemed too useful to discard.

It might even be a glass goblet or lamp font that was repaired with a new polished wooden or metal stem. A syrup pitcher might have had a tin handle; a porcelain teapot, a silver spout.

Broken mirrors were made into small hand mirrors with wooden frames; broken glass stems or wooden feet were used as bases for cloth pincushions.

Admire the ingenuity of these items in the new book, "Waste Not, Want Not" by Donald Naetzer (205 South Main St., Fairport, N.Y. 14550, $10.95).

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Little girl's plight brings tears to eyes of reader

DEAR ABBY: After reading that letter signed "Helpless in Pittsburgh," I was in tears. I can't imagine a mother being so cruel as to take the thick eyeglasses away from her 4-year-old daughter, and tell her she doesn't want anyone to see her in them because she looked so ugly. And this happened in the cry room of a church yet! God bless you for asking "Helpless" to write again and tell you the name of the church and the priest so you could intervene in that child's behalf.

Did you ever hear from her, Abby? Please let us know. I can't get that child out of my mind.

ALYCE FORSTER, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

DEAR ABBY: Yes, I heard from "Helpless" who gave me her name, address and telephone number, as well as the name of the church and the priest. I phoned the priest and he promised to make every effort to locate the mother and handle the matter personally.

DEAR ABBY: You mentioned snakes in your column, so I thought I'd send this in: When I had a home and family of four, I put a hand-lettered sign in the front-door window and another in the back-door window. Both read: PLEASE DO NOT FEED THE SNAKE!

Ours was the only house on that street that wasn't burglarized.

JOHN HALL JR., HOUSTON P.S. We never owned a snake.

DEAR ABBY: Another year about not receiving thank-you notes for gifts of checks: Our family has always felt that a gift of cash is no gift at all. We would prefer to receive a card by itself if it contains a heartfelt sentiment. Obviously the giver of cash does not feel the need to take the time to select an appropriate gift, so why give a "gift" at all?

How much time does it take to select a pretty necklace or hair combs for a teen-age girl? It's easy to ask a salesperson for help to see what's in style.

Can't get out to shop? Why not send a subscription to a magazine? Or order from a mail-order catalog? We feel that cash is a poor substitute for caring. No cash, please. Draw me a picture or write me a poem.

SCHARRE JOHNSON, REPRESA, CALIF.

DEAR SCHARRE: I see no correlation between cash and caring. Some people are not as gifted as others in selecting appropriate gifts and, realizing their limitations, prefer to allow the recipient to do the choosing. One thing about a gift of money: The size is always right — and so is the color.

(For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61064.)

BECAUSE HE CARES...

Some bridges are known for beauty as the Golden Gate. Some are remarkable for their length like Ponchetrain. Some inspire awe like the Royal Gorge. Some go unnoticed like the plank bridge on a country road. But all make it possible to go from one place to another.

We need to be bridges, too. We need to link people together through communication, through compassion and understanding, through love. Our efforts may not be spectacular. They may go unnoticed like the small country bridge. But if we do as Jesus said, "Love one another," we've achieved success.

Boston bounces back 109-103

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Boston's task appeared so hopeless that even the Celtics' usually raucous rosters seemed to have lost hope. Now those fans have found reasons to believe and to scream again.

The Celtics, who got run off the court twice in Los Angeles, stopped the Lakers' running game in Boston Garden. The Celtics, who never led in the last three quarters of the first two games, never trailed in the second half Sunday.

After a slow start, Boston used 81 percent shooting from the field in the second quarter to take the lead and won 109-103. The victory cut the Lakers' lead in the best-of-seven NBA championship series to 2-1 and ended talk of a possible sweep.

"While the National Anthem was playing, they (the fans) were loud and then they got quiet," said Larry Bird, who led Boston with 30 points and 12 rebounds. "I've never been in the Garden in a big game when it's been quiet."

But he's never been in the Garden after the Celtics were crushed on the road in the first two games of the finals by a much healthier, more talented team that Bird called "the best in the league."

The suddenly competitive series continues in Boston Tuesday night and Thursday night. If necessary, it will return to the Forum in Inglewood, Calif., for two more games.

"They played a more patient offense" than in the first two games, Lakers' Coach Pat Riley said of the Celtics. "Their quickness and reaction (on defense) were a lot different."

"If we have any chance of winning this thing we have to win our home games and steal one there," said Celtics forward Kevin McHale, who had 21 points and 10 rebounds.

Boston has won 85 of its last 87 games at the Garden. It also is 103-5 there starting with the 1985 playoffs against Los Angeles, but just 3-3 against the Lakers in that span.

"We gain a lot of confidence from the crowd," said Boston's Dennis Johnson, who had 26 points. "Home is the best of everything."

The difference between the Celtics' home and road performances is startling. They are 4-16 in their last 20 games away from home. They have lost their last six playoff games on the road by an average of 15.7 points.

Boston, trying to become the first team to win consecutive titles since the 1969 Celtics, bounced back Sunday despite injuries that have hindered or sidelined five key players. It held the Lakers to just six fastbreak baskets after they had scored about half their 267 points in the first two games on fast breaks.

"When we can't run like that, we don't get the easy baskets," Los Angeles center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who had 27 points, said.

Boston slowed down the Lakers' fast break by hitting 17 of 21 shots in the second quarter, which kept them from running off misses, and dropping back quickly on defense.

The victory revived Boston's hopes for its 17th NBA title and ended the Lakers' chance of having the best playoff record in league history. Had they swept the Celtics, they would have been 15-1. Philadelphia's 12-1 playoff mark in 1983 is the NBA's best. Los Angeles is 13-2.

In the first quarter Sunday, the Celtics made just eight of 25 shots and trailed 29-22. In the second quarter, Bird and Johnson each hit six of seven shots as the Celtics took a 60-56 halftime lead.

Trailing 41-36, Boston made nine consecutive shots to take the lead for good on Bird's jumper from the foul line that made the score 56-54 one minute before intermission.

"That's just poor defense," Magic Johnson, who led the Lakers with 32 points, 11 rebounds and nine assists, said of Boston's second-period shooting.

Boston's biggest lead was 82-69 with 2:56 left in the third quarter after a 22-11 run in which Dennis Johnson had nine points. Los Angeles, which had scored at least 69 points in the first half of each of the first two games, had just one fastbreak basket to that point.

The Lakers cut the margin to 86-78 after three quarters. A three-point play by Magic Johnson got it down to 104-99 with 3:03 remaining, but they could come no closer.

Pirates to meet top 1-A team

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

By virtue of having beaten Gunter 4-3 on Friday and winning the Region One baseball Championship, the Lefors Pirates have earned the right to go to the UIL Baseball Tournament in Austin later this week.

UIL officials on Sunday released the schedule in semi-final and final round competition.

The class 1-A pairings are as follows:

Thursday, June 11

Lefors, 7-2, vs. Burton, 24-2, 1 p.m., Burger Center.
Savoy, 23-4, vs. High Island, 17-7, 3 p.m., Burger Center.

Friday, June 12

Class 1-A Final, 8:30 a.m., Disch-Falk Field.

The Pirates, who have been underdogs throughout the entire year, have their work cut out for them in the semi-finals.

Burton enters the game as the top-ranked team in the state, having dropped only two contests this year.

The UIL committee devised a playoff plan that would pit the two teams with the best records against the two remaining teams.

A coin-flip determined that Lefors would play Burton.

In Friday's regional final, the Pirates beat Gunter in extra-innings 4-3 after catcher Kevin Mayfield snagged Gunter pitcher Chuck Hesstam trying to steal third.

Pitcher Kirk Kerbo, who struck out 11 Gunter batters, also was credited with the game winning RBI, a single in the top of the eighth that drove in Richard Hernandez.

Twins tackle tumbling Texas

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minnesota Twins recalled catcher Sal Butera from the minor leagues mainly for defensive purposes. But it was Butera's bat that made headlines in his first Twins appearance since 1982.

Butera's bases-loaded double off the wall in left in the fifth inning wiped out the Texas Rangers' 3-0 lead, and his single in the seventh ignited the rally that led the Twins to a 7-4 victory Sunday.

"It was a nice way to come back," said Butera, who debuted in the major leagues with the Twins seven years ago and was called up from Class AAA Portland Saturday, after the Twins announced that catcher Mark Salas was traded to the New York Yankees for pitcher Joe Niekro.

"I think I was more nervous than pumped up. It was almost like my first game in the big leagues again. I know so many players from this club and it's great bunch of guys."

One Twin who remembered Butera was Randy Bush, who drove in the winning run with a single in the seventh.

"I know how excited Sal is to rejoin the ballclub and everything," Bush said. "He just went out and had a great game. There's a few of us who were here when Sal was here the first time. I was talking to him before the game and he just told me how happy he was to be back, how pumped up he was for this game."

Top of the heap

But Texas Manager Bobby Valentine wasn't so happy to see Butera, and he was even less happy that his starting pitcher Ed Correa allowed Butera's bases-clearing double.

The Rangers led 3-0 in the fifth when Correa, working on a one-hitter, gave up a single to Gary Gaetti. One out later, Tom Brunansky and Steve Lombardozzi walked, loading the bases for Butera.

Lendl wins in France

By ANDREW WARSHAW
AP Sports Writer

PARIS (AP) — Rain, darkness, a strangely quiet Center Court crowd and his critics could not stop Ivan Lendl from continuing his love affair with the French Open.

After four hours and 17 minutes of play, plus an additional 35-minute rain delay, Lendl, who for once had not been the clear favorite coming into the tournament, raised aloft the silver trophy Sunday for the third time.

Lendl's 7-5, 6-2, 3-6, 7-6 victory over Mats Wilander may not have been a classic in terms of quality but it was just as pleasing to the winner, who had won only one Grand Prix tournament this year and wanted to prove that when it comes to this Grand Slam event, he has few rivals.

"Many people said I couldn't win — that I wasn't fit, that I wasn't confident, that I didn't play hard, that I wasn't mentally tough," Lendl said. "I am glad to prove them all wrong."

While it was Lendl's third French title in five appearances, the women's title went to a new champion.

On Saturday, 17-year-old Steffi Graf of West Germany became the youngest women's titlist at Roland Garros with a 6-4, 4-6, 8-6 victory over top-seeded Martina Navratilova.

Graf trailed 5-3 in the final set and rallied to win her first Grand Slam title and extend her unbeaten streak to 39 matches through seven tournaments.

After losing the first two games in Sunday's championship match, Lendl, the world's No. 1 player since late 1985, showed that he was not about to be blown away by Wilander as Yannick Noah and Boris Becker had been in the previous two rounds.

Using his powerful serve and forehand, Lendl traded groundstrokes with Wilander, hitting deeper and harder to win a marathon opening set in 1:20.

The second set lasted just 39 minutes as Lendl held serve at love three times and broke Wilander twice. The Swede got back into the match in the third set as he took more risks.

The fourth set was going with serve, 3-2 to Lendl, when the rain that had been threatening since midmatch finally arrived.

As the skies remained gray, it looked as if the match would be suspended and resumed today. However, 35 minutes later, the match resumed.

Wilander immediately won a love game but Lendl went ahead 5-4 on a running forehand pass.

Twice Wilander served to save the set. Twice he succeeded, and the set went into a tiebreaker.

The rain came down again but play continued and the defending champion took charge.

He won the first four points of the tiebreaker, three of them with winners, and stretched the lead to 5-2 as the court became slippery and the players soaked.

Rangers to House: 'Say what?'

DALLAS (AP) — Bobby Witt is on the disabled list. Jose Guzman has back problems.

But the Texas Rangers pitching staff can't be called out yet, as long as "Professor Gadget" has a say.

That's what pitchers call the Rangers' Tom House, a pitching coach who looks more like a wire-rimmed stockbroker.

House is banking that a computer and other high-tech equipment will enable him to pull the team out of a throwing slump. He remains committed to his biomechanical equipment, including a video camera and computerized strength tests.

"Pitching is a ballet," said House. "It's a specific set of movements — angular momentum and linear momentum — working cotangentially to enable a pitcher to impart maximum force on a baseball, ideally over the shortest distance between his release point and home plate."

House also realizes what counts the most.

"Job security is a function of performance between the lines," said House. "And it's true we're not exactly tearing the league apart right now."

Manager Bobby Valentine was asked before a recent game against Kansas City whether he considered House's approach successful.

"Of course, I do," he said. "He wouldn't be here if I didn't have confidence in him. He's a real professional... He's not afraid to try something new."

Cisneros wants NFL team, complex

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — San Antonio is guaranteed to end up a loser if it doesn't doesn't have a sports complex that can support a major league football team, says Mayor Henry Cisneros.

Cisneros has been leading a campaign for a half-cent sales tax to fund a plan to build a downtown sports dome in five years. Ice skating, swimming and cycling facilities could accompany the main dome.

"We will lose and lose and lose over and over again if we don't have a facility," Cisneros contends.

But critics say the sports dome is a risky venture because National Football League franchises are hard to come by and several contenders for an NFL team are pumping millions of dollars into existing stadiums.

"I'm not aware of any domed stadium that does anything better than break even on an operating basis," said Bruce Bingham, a consultant with New York-based Peat Marwick Main & Co. "They usually end up with a monster debt service requirement on top of the operating expenses."

Cisneros says the dome could be paid for in five years with cash from the tax. The city, with voter approval, would use a half-cent VIA Metropolitan Transit tax already authorized by state law but not yet being collected.

The mayor said he is certain

San Antonio is a front-runner for an NFL team.

"Tex Schramm (Dallas Cowboys president and general manager) said last week on a radio show that San Antonio would get a team if it had a stadium," Cisneros said.

He said Philadelphia Eagles President Edward DeBartolo, a shopping mall developer with several projects in San Antonio, also has voiced support for a team in the Alamo City.

But Cisneros said the NFL team should not be the only consideration in building the facility.

"I think we need a facility whether or not we have an NFL franchise," Cisneros said last week.

Ryan continues to amaze as Astros shut out Giants

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — San Francisco Manager Roger Craig thought the Giants finally would get to Houston's Nolan Ryan Sunday. "He was throwing 96-97 mph and then in the sixth inning it dropped off to 95 so I figured we had him then," Craig joked. Craig was wrong. Ryan, 3-5, struck out a season-high 12 batters and allowed five hits over seven innings, leading the Astros to a 3-0 shutout victory. Ryan got help from short reliever Dave Smith, who got his 10th save and extended his string to 22 and 1-3 innings without yielding an earned run. "Nolan Ryan has to have a bionic arm to throw like that as old as he is," Craig said of the 40-year-old Ryan. "He's got the best arm God ever put on a man." Ryan struck out 10 or more batters for the fourth time this year and extended his major league record to 166 games with 10 or more strikeouts. Ryan has a major league record 4,373 career strikeouts. He is restricted to 110 pitches per game by General Manager Dick Wagner, who wants to preserve Ryan's pitching arm, plagued by injuries last season. "I'll probably never finish another game as long as I throw only 110 pitches," Ryan said. "I can see their side of it, but there's nothing magical about 110 pitches per game."

Smith had relief appearances in Houston's last two games, ending a period of inactivity. "I had about three weeks rest stored up," Smith said. "It was about time for me to get some action." Will Clark singled and reached third base on Candy Maldonado's single in the first inning. Clark was the only Giants runner to reach third base. Ryan got stronger as the game progressed. He struck out the side in the sixth inning and added strikeouts Nos. 11 and 12 to end the seventh. "He's always been overpowering, everybody knows that," Maldonado said. "What makes him so good is when he gets his breaking ball over like he did today." San Francisco's Atlee Hammaker pitched three hitless innings but ended up the loser. "I felt good about the way I threw," Hammaker said. "My goal was to keep the game close." Houston got its first run in the sixth inning when Billy Hatcher singled, stole second, went to third on Bill Doran's single and scored on Hammaker's wild pitch. Doran's sacrifice fly and a single by rookie Chuck Jackson added two more runs in the seventh. Ryan has pitched most of the season without much run-support. "With any luck, not good luck, just luck, he'd have six or seven victories now," Houston Manager Hal Lanier said. "It was very important for us to win this game. We couldn't have done it without Nolan."

Tigers sweep Bosox, score 32 runs in series

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The reason for so much hitting in baseball this season, Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson says, is a lot of lousy pitching. "With the pitching the way it is in the major leagues today, if you have more good hitters, you can pick teams apart," Anderson said after the Tigers battered the Boston Red Sox 18-8 Sunday. Matt Nokes hit two homers and drove in four runs, Chet Lemon homered and knocked in four and Tom Brookens hit a three-run homer, highlighting a 21-hit barrage as Detroit achieved season highs for runs and hits. The Tigers won three times in the four-game series at Fenway Park, scoring 32 runs on 50 hits. "We've been scoring a lot of runs lately," Anderson said. "But in this ballpark, you can't give me enough runs." In other American League games Sunday, Kansas City trounced Seattle 9-1, New York beat Milwaukee 5-3, Toronto edged Baltimore 3-2, Cleveland trounced Oakland 12-2 and Chicago defeated California 4-0. Nokes, Lemon, Bill Madlock, Lou Whitaker and Darrell Evans each had three hits for Detroit, which ripped rookie John Lester, 0-1, and three relievers. Nokes hit a three-run homer following Madlock's RBI single in the third and the Tigers made it 6-0 in the fourth.

Don Baylor hit a two-run homer and Spike Owen had a three-run triple in the fourth. Boston's Wade Boggs left the game in the sixth with a bruised left arm after a collision with Madlock at third base. Boggs said he thought he had injured a nerve and his status is day-to-day.

Indians 12, Athletics 2

Steve Carlton pitched seven strong innings and Cleveland took advantage of seven Oakland errors.

Pat Tabler drove in four runs, Tony Bernazard knocked in three and Joe Carter hit a solo homer, his 14th.

The host Athletics tied a team record with seven miscues. Carlton is 4-4.

Royals 9, Mariners 1

Bud Black pitched two-hit ball for seven shutout innings and Bo Jackson hit two homers as Kansas City beat Seattle.

Jackson and Frank White each drove in three runs and Danny Tartabull hit two doubles and a triple.

Tartabull, traded by the Mariners to Kansas City in the winter, went 8-for-17, scored five runs and drove home four as the Royals won three times in the four-game series.

Yankees 5, Brewers 3

Claudell Washington snapped a sixth-inning tie with a two-run single and New York won in Milwaukee.

The Yankees split the four-game series, which drew 165,180 fans to County Stadium. The Brewers' largest crowd so far this season, 52,770, watched the final game.

Blue Jays 3, Orioles 2

Garth Iorg singled home the winning run with two outs in the bottom of the ninth as Toronto beat Baltimore for its fifth straight victory.

The Orioles have lost four in a row and eight of nine. Ernie Whitt hit a controversial two-run homer in the Toronto first. Baltimore Manager Cal Ripken argued the ball curved foul before reaching the right-field foul pole.

White Sox 4, Angels 0

Bill Long scattered seven hits and Carlton Fisk connected for two home runs as Chicago won in California.

Long, 3-1, did not walk a batter and struck out six. No Angel got past second base. It was Long's second complete game, both shutouts.

Fisk helped the White Sox set a team record with home runs in 13 straight games. He hit a two-run shot in the fourth and a solo homer in the ninth.

Chicago's Ken Williams...

... can't quite...

... pull it down.

Raines prevents no-hitter in Philly

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Sports Writer

Montreal's Tim Raines led off the ninth inning with a double to spoil Mike Jackson's no-hit bid and the first no-hitter in Philadelphia by a Phillie pitcher since 1898. The Phillies went on to win the game, though, 3-1.

Jackson, 22, finished with a two-hitter and his first major-league victory.

Raines moved to third on Jackson's wild pitch and scored on Hubie Brooks' sacrifice fly to ruin the shutout. Steve Bedrosian got the final out for his 14th save.

Jackson struck out a career-high six and walked four.

Controversy after Belmont

By DICK JOYCE
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Alysheba's stunning fourth-place finish in the Belmont Stakes again raises the controversial Lasix issue.

If Alysheba — denied his sweep of the Triple Crown races Saturday — doesn't need the medication to control pulmonary bleeding, does he need it to make him run well?

Jack Van Berg, who the trains Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner, faulted the ride of Chris McCarron and maintained again Sunday that the lack of Lasix was no factor in the 119th Belmont in which Bet Twice, an 8-1 shot, romped home by 14 lengths.

"I don't think Lasix made any difference," Van Berg said.

Alysheba ran on the diuretic, which some trainers feels enhances horses performances, in Kentucky and Maryland. However, New York prohibits horses to run on it.

Van Berg's only previous Belmont starter, 1984 Preakness winner Gate Dancer, ran sixth to Swale after coming off Lasix.

Plans called for Alysheba to run in the $1 million Travers Stakes at upstate Saratoga on Aug. 22, but that is questionable now.

No decision about a future race will be made "until Jack and I

Willie McGee and Ozzie Smith each drove in four runs for St. Louis and Vince Coleman had three hits. Coleman has reached base in 37 straight games.

Andre Dawson hit his 20th homer for Chicago to tie Eric Davis for the NL lead and match his total of last season with Montreal.

Dodgers 13, Reds 7

Marshall paced a 17-hit Los Angeles attack with two home runs and five RBI in beating former teammate Jerry Reuss.

Reuss, who has a 7.89 ERA in six starts for the Reds, allowed five runs and eight hits in 2 2-3 innings in his first appearance against the Dodgers since May 5, 1978, when he was with Pittsburgh.

Los Angeles starter Bob Welch improved to 8-2, one more victory than all of last season when he finished 7-13.

Brave 13 Padres 12

With an 11-2 lead after five innings, San Diego seemed headed for its first three-game winning streak of the season. But host Atlanta scored four runs in the sixth and six in the seventh and won the game in the ninth on Ken Oberkell's bases-loaded walk.

So, instead of a victory, the Padres lost their 43rd of 57 games.

Mets 5, Pirates 4

Pirates 10, Mets 9

New York won the first game on Lee Mazzilli's two-run double in the 10th and Pittsburgh came back in the nightcap with a six-run eighth inning highlighted by Mike Diaz's three-run pinch homer.

Mazzilli, who started at first base in the second game, had five runs batted in with a three-run homer in the third inning and a two-run single in the eighth to give him eight RBI for the doubleheader. Mazzilli's game-winning double in the first game was his 1,000th major-league hit.

In his last 23 games, Mazzilli is batting .441 (15-34).

TENSION HEADACHE

If you're bothered by headache that seems to have its origin at the base of your skull, you may be suffering from tension headache.

Tension headaches can be caused by an irritation of the nerves in the area of the spine immediately under the skull. These are called the suboccipital nerves. They pass through small openings in the spinal column to muscles in the surrounding area. Any abnormal pressure or dysfunction of neck and muscles can irritate the nerves, causing tension.

The tension doesn't cause the headache. To treat this form of headache, attention should be paid to the bone and muscle structures. They should be returned to normal balance so they can function properly again.

Medication is not the answer to tension headaches. Aspirin and other painkillers may give you temporary relief - but they won't solve the problem. Once the source of the problem is found and treated, THEN you can get the relief you need.

'Les Miserables' wins eight Tonys; 'Fences' gets four

NEW YORK (AP) — "Les Miserables" was the big Tony Awards winner, taking eight of Broadway's top honors, including best musical, as "Fences," August Wilson's drama of a 1950s black family, won best play and three other Tonys.

"Me and My Girl" won three Tonys on Sunday, for Robert Lindsay and Maryann Plunkett as best actor and actress in a musical, and for choreographer Gillian Gregory. Lindsay plays a Cockney scamp who discovers he's a lord, in a pre-World War II London musical finally making its debut on Broadway.

"Les Miserables," also an import from London, yielded Tonys for Alain Boublil and Claude-Michel Schonberg, who in 1979 in Paris came up with the idea of turning Victor Hugo's epic novel of social injustice into a musical. They won for best book of a musical and they and Herbert Kretzmer won best score.

Michael Maguire and Frances Ruffelle took best featured actor and actress in a musical; Trevor Nunn and John Caird won for direction, and David Hersey for lighting, all for "Les Miserables."

The 41st annual awards, nationally televised on CBS and including a tribute to the late Robert Preston, capped a season in which Broadway reversed a five-year decline in attendance.

John Napier won the Tony for costume design, the only award garnered by the $8 million musical "Starlight Express," which has rollerskaters garbed as engines and cars, for a train race.

Napier, who also designed the "Starlight Express" scenery, took a second Tony for his "Les Miserables" set as though it were an insult.

He said in his second acceptance speech: "One is not supposed to feel things. But it seems a little peculiar to me that 'Starlight' wasn't nominated (for set). I'd give this back to you but it would be a little rude."

Resonant-voiced James Earl Jones won the best actor Tony for his role as a former baseball player and head of a family in "Fences," the Pulitzer Prize-winning play. Mary Alice, who plays his wife, won for best supporting actress, and Lloyd Richards for director.

While playwright Wilson was accepting the best-play Tony, "Fences" producer Carole Shorenstein Hays, in a maternity evening gown, suddenly looked perturbed. "I think I'm going to give birth right now," she said.

John Randolph, accepting the Tony for best featured actor for playing the grandfather in Neil Simon's "Broadway Bound," said the character "represents those of us past 70 who are full of life and fighting spirit, no matter what the body looks like on the outside."

Linda Lavin, who plays the mother of the budding playwright in "Broadway Bound," won her first Tony, as best actress. "I thought of nothing else for two months," she said of her anticipation. "I missed entrances and exits."

Arthur Miller's "All My Sons," starring Richard Kiley, won best revival.

The evening's emotional highlight was the presentation of a special award to director George Abbott, who turns 100 on June 25.

"I am really ashamed at all the fuss that's being made over my birthday," he said. "I didn't plan it. But I'm glad I lasted so long. I tell people it's because I love the theater so much that I thought I'd stick around."

Also receiving a special Tony was comedian Jackie Mason, whose one-man show, "The World According to Me!" was a surprise Broadway hit.

Accepting his award with a stream of jokes and barbs, he said, "I feel like Ronald Reagan tonight. He was an actor all his life, knew nothing about politics and became president of the United States. I'm an ex-rabbi who knew nothing about acting and I'm getting a Tony Award."

The Tony Awards were named for actress Antoinette Perry, who ran Stage Door Canteens during World War II. The League of American Theaters and Producers and the American Theater Wing present the awards based on the votes of 615 people active on Broadway.

Two girls shot at theme park pool; one is dead

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Someone illegally target shooting may have been responsible for gunfire that killed a teen-ager and seriously wounded a 6-year-old girl in a theme park pool crowded with 2,000 people, police said.

Witnesses in the crowd at Ocean Island, a 25,000-square-foot pool with machine-made waves, watched in horror Sunday as the 16-year-old girl slumped off her raft into the bloodied waters.

"It was like she was floating dead," said 13-year-old Bryant Artis. "Nobody knew what was going on."

Michelle Ann Sexton of Rock Hill, S.C., died after a gunshot entered her back and exited through her chest, said Barbara Barnette, a spokeswoman at Charlotte Memorial Hospital.

The other girl, Alesha Rollins of Charlotte, underwent surgery Sunday for a gunshot wound to the abdomen and was listed in serious but stable condition, said hospital officials said today.

Mecklenburg County police had no suspects Sunday night, no witnesses who heard the shots and no certainty where they were fired from.

Names in the News

NEW YORK (AP) — Journalist Ted Koppel says he has considered leaving ABC's "Nightline" for a job in the State Department, even though a diplomatic position might require him to lie.

"I've obviously thought about this some," Koppel said in an interview in the June 15 issue of Newsweek. He said working for the government would demand ethical compromise.

"Foreign policy by definition is immoral," Koppel said. "When you represent the interests of an entire nation, you are going to take actions that for an individual would be considered immoral."

Among them, Koppel says, would be lying.

"(An official) has got to be prepared to mislead and, at his own peril, sometimes even to lie," he said. "You cannot, in the formation of national policy, be it foreign or domestic, always tell the unvarnished truth."

Koppel, who turned down an offer from Henry Kissinger to become State Department spokesman in 1975, said he would consider joining the agency in the next administration.

ST. JAMES, N.C. (AP) — Talk show host Oprah Winfrey made a big splash at a birthday party for her boyfriend's grandmother, presenting the 100-year-old woman with a new car.

Miss Winfrey surprised Lois Webb Jacobs with the keys to a $15,000 Oldsmobile on Saturday, shortly after saying

Mrs. Jacobs and other grandmothers are "bridges that we have crossed over on."

"I am what I am today because I remember what I came from," Miss Winfrey said. "With all the material successes I have come to know, one of the greatest blessings I have come to know is knowing Grandma."

Pope in Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP)—Pope John Paul II started his third pilgrimage to his homeland today, with Poland's Communist government and the country's influential Roman Catholic Church both hoping to gain from the visit.

The pontiff's DC-9 jetliner landed at 10:40 a.m. local time at Okecie Airport, where Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski and Cardinal Jozef Glemp, the primate of Poland, led the delegation greeting John Paul.

Several thousand people turned out under bright morning skies, many carrying crucifixes and pictures of the Catholic leader.

"Warsaw, city of peace, welcomes the advocate of peace," said one large banner.

Several hundred more of the faithful waited outside the gates of the heavily guarded military airport for a glimpse of the pontiff.

Most Polish daily newspapers, including the government paper Rzeczpospolita and the Communist Party daily Trybuna Ludu, ran pictures of the pope and articles about the visit on their front pages.

The week-long tour of eight cities, which begins in Warsaw, will include a stop in the Baltic port of Gdansk, the birthplace of the outlawed Solidarity free trade union movement and a meeting with Lech Walesa, the former Solidarity leader.

It will also include the pope's second meeting this year with Jaruzelski, who led the martial law crackdown in December 1981 that crushed Solidarity.

John Paul and Jaruzelski were scheduled to hold talks this afternoon at the former royal castle in the Polish capital.

On the first day of his 35th foreign pilgrimage, John Paul also was scheduled to open a National Eucharistic Congress, a series of major religious meetings that will be held along the route of the pilgrimage.

Jaruzelski said last month that the pope would be welcomed "with due hospitality and respect" but that the pontiff would be expected to help authorities build national reconciliation and ease the tensions left over from the 1981-83 martial law period.

Roman Catholic bishops see the visit as a way to fight pessimism and passivity and consolidate spiritual values linking the people of the overwhelmingly Roman Catholic nation.

President Reagan, meeting with the pope on Saturday, said he hoped the pilgrimage would help "lighten the terrible burden of men everywhere who yearn for freedom."

Anderson's daughter makes plea for release

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — American hostage Terry A. Anderson's 2-year-old daughter appeared on Lebanese television to ask his kidnappers to honor her birthday wish and release the father she has never seen.

In a one-minute video tape, the curly-haired Sulome said: "I love you, Daddy. Come to us, Daddy." Blowing out two candles on her birthday cake, she said: "Our hearts are broken. Where is Daddy?"

She also waved a picture of her father, the longest-held foreign hostage in Lebanon, and kissed it. A Lebanese announcer watching the tape appeared afterward on the screen wiping away tears.

The tape was filmed in Cyprus where Sulome lives with her mother, Madeleine.

Anderson, 39, a native of Lorain, Ohio, and chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, was kidnapped in Moslem west Beirut March 16, 1985.

It was not known whether his kidnappers allowed him to see the tape. The independent newspaper An-Nahar had published an advance notice of the special television broadcast.

Sulome was born weeks after Anderson was kidnapped by members of Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, a group believed to be made up of Shiite Moslem extremists loyal to Iran.

In Nicosia, Cyprus, Sulome opened a large card covered with flowers and signed, "With all my love, Daddy."

Family friends said the child was led to believe it had been sent by her father, but the handwriting was her mother's. Ever since her birth in the United States her mother has been telling Sulome she would be seeing her father soon.
