New chief reorganizes department

By PAUL PINKHAM Senior Staff Writer

Pampa's new police chief says his style of management requires a No. 2 man

And Chief Robert Eberz wasted no time finding that man in his immediate predecessor in the police chief's office.

Eberz, who took over the reins of the Pampa Police Department a week ago, confirmed Monday that he promoted Lt. Jesse Wallace, 42, last week to the newly created position of deputy chief. No formal announcement was made

The appointment was one of a half-dozen personnel changes instituted by the new chief during his first week in Pampa, including one that has placed a civilian in charge of the department's service division, formerly headed by a lieutenant.

Wallace, an eight-year veteran of the force, had been the department's acting chief following the January resignation of Chief J.J. Ryzman, who became police chief in Corsicana.

The interim chief served until last week. He had been one of five finalists for the permanent chief's job.

Wallace came to Pampa in 1979 from Rupert, Idaho. Prior to his appointment, he headed the department's patrol division.

Replacing Wallace, at least temporarily, will be Sgt. Ken Neal. Eberz said he has named Neal, the senior sergeant, interim head of the patrol division until a new lieutenant is named, probably in about six weeks.

'(City Manager) Bob Hart and I are in conference now in setting up some testing and standards' for the position, Eberz said.

Wallace's promotion comes about seven months after former Capt. Roy Denman, the department's former No. 2 administrator, was demoted to lieutenant on the advice of a Canyon consulting firm. As captain for seven years, Denman had headed the department's service division. The report said all three divisions should be led by officers of equal Denman, who now heads the criminal investigation division, later was suspended and took a cut in pay for complaining publicly about his demotion.

Denman had no comment today on the department's reorganization

Monday, Hart attributed creation of the new deputy chief's spot to differences in the management philosophies of Ryzman and

"It hasn't been a change in stafdirection," Hart maintained. Eberz said the department needs an "intermediate supervisor" between the chief and his lieutenants.

"You can't have one person running the entire department," Eberz said. "I'm not impervious to error. This way there is a mediator between the top and the supervisor role.

Eberz said a deputy chief also will give the department more flexibility in handling complaints and is good training for someone who wants to be chief. He said he chose Wallace for the position because "I seriously believe that he is the most qualified person for that position in the department.' In another major change in department structure, Eberz named civilian employee Jeanne Gould as service division supervisor, placing her in charge of dispatchers, records clerks, the traffic control officer and school crossing guards. Previously, the service division has been headed by a lieutenant, most recently

Summit leaders vow to open gulf as bombs blast stations

By TERENCE HUNT AP White House Correspondent

VENICE, Italy — Western leaders, at the midpoint of their 13th annual summit, declared today that the free flow of oil "must continue unimpeded" through the Persian Gulf, and embraced a superpower plan to eliminate hundreds of nuclear missiles in Europe and Asia.

Besides giving President Reagan diplomatic support on the troublesome Persian Gulf, the leaders underscored concern about the threat of terrorism — even as summit serenity gave way before dawn as military frogmen scurried to retrieve a suspicious-looking metal box — rendered harmless — from a nearby Venetian lagoon

In Rome, 340 miles away, small explosives rocked the American and British embassies shortly before Reagan sat down to breakfast with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. Before the debris was cleared the leaders had signed off on their annual condemnation of terrorism, this time emphasizing a determination not to make concessions to terrorists or their sponsors.

A car bomb shattered windows and set fire to parked cars near the U.S. Embassy and bombs blew up was hospitalized for shock, police said. There were no other reported injuries. A caller to The Associated Press in London exploded on the grounds of the U.S. and British embassies. A woman who was near the car that claimed the attacks were the work of the Anti-Imperialist International Brigade. Callers last year using the same group name claimed responsiblity for the assassination of the French military attache in east Beirut and for bomb and rocket attacks on the U.S., Japanese and Canadian embassies in Jakarta, Indonesia.

The anonymous caller, who spoke English with a slight accent, said today's bombings proved "that the revolutionary will is stronger than the high security measures taken for the protection of the so-called seven giants of the world.

In Venice, military frogmen found a suspiciouslooking device in a lagoon not far from the summit site and blew it up. An Italian official called it a mine from World War II and said it was not connected with terrorists. The U.S. Secret Service said it was merely a harmless metal box.

Statements of East-West relations, terrorism, the Persian Gulf and other matters were issued in the name of the leaders of the United States, Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Italy and Canada

Agreeing to step up efforts against terrorism, the leaders pledged to halt all air travel to and from countries which refuse to cooperate in cases involving not only hijackings but all other violations of aviation security

True to his word, television evangelist and presidential hopeful Pat Robertson will try again Wednesday to "test the waters" of Pampa.

Robertson, founder of The 700 Club, is scheduled to speak at a $7.50-a-plate noon luncheon sponsored by the Gray County Republican Party at the Coronado Inn Starlight Room. A press conference is set for 11:45 a.m., and a public question-and-answer session is planned after Robertson's speech.

Ruling could force disabled from rolls

er court battles are expected over the Reagan administration's handling of Social Security disability benefits in the wake of a Supreme Court ruling upholding a procedure that could disqualify hundreds of thousands of recipients yearly Eileen P. Sweeney of the National Senior Citizens Law Center said Monday's court ruling favoring the administration could turn out to be "a relatively hollow victory.

"The court could have given the administration license to arbitrarily continue" denying claims by hundreds of thousands of people, she said. "It didn't." She said future lower court cases will decide whether the administration is carrying out the review of those claims fairly.

John Trollinger, spokesman for the Social Security Administration, said the government is not denying benefits to those who deserve them. "The important thing is people who are disabled will continue to receive decisions in their favor," he said. The Supreme Court, by a 6-3 vote, upheld a government regulation for withholding benefits based solely on medical evidence that someone is not severely disabled. The court said it is not necessary for officials to consider the individual's age, education

er-up his activities, Miss Hall replied, "I don't use the word coverup. I use the word protect.

Miss Hall, a 27-year-old parttime model with cascading blond hair, kept the Iran-Contra committees spellbound during 21/2 hours of testimony on Monday. Seated with her attorney Plato Cacheris, her voice appeared to shake nervously as her testimony reached its most sensitive subjects

She said she remembered only one occasion when North spoke of meeting with President Reagan at the White House. But she said he met regularly with former CIA Director William J. Casey and called the director "Bill."

Members of the House and Senate investigating panels said the testimony clearly showed a conspiracy at the White House to obstruct justice, involving at least North and Miss Hall and possibly a Washington attorney, Thomas C. Green

Miss Hall worked for North at the National Security Council for nearly four years while he was coordinating an Iranian armsfor-hostages deal and helping funnel weapons to the Contras during a congressional ban on lethal aid. She testified that North asked her on Nov. 21 of last year to alter the originals of four documents identified by the administration as problems, because they revealed too much about the government's role in aiding the Contras. At the time, Attorney General Edwin Meese III was beginning an inquiry into the affair that would lead to North's office and his firing.

"It was a policy of mine not to ask questions, and just to follow instructions," Miss Hall testified. "I believed in Colonel North and what he was doing. I had no right to question him.

One of the memos proposed sinking or seizing a ship bound for Nicaragua that was carrying weapons for the Sandinista government. When Miss Hall was through with it, the memo proposed only publicizing the shipment in an effort to halt its deliverv. Another document advocated increasing aid to a Central American country that had helped get weapons to the Contras, but the sanitized version makes no mention of Contra aid.

In other documents, references to private donors to the Contras are deleted, and a proposal to approach the donors for more money is changed to a plan to approach Congress for the funds.

Hall also described a 30-minute shredding session that same evening in which North opened a safe and began handing her stacks of paper to destroy. At one point, the shredding machine stalled under the load. In all, she said, an 18-inch stack of paper was shredded. North's aide, Marine Lt. Col. Robert Earl, was present and helped carry papers to the shredder, she said. The next week, after watching Reagan and Meese break the news of the diversion of funds from the Iran arms sales to the Contras in a televised news conference, Miss Hall said she discovered a six-inch stack of unfiled papers in her desk and "panicked" when she found it contained originals of the documents she earlier had altered and other documents related to the affair.

At the time, officials were securing the office and sealing documents in boxes, and Miss Hall testified that she called North, who had been fired earlier in the day, and insisted that he come to the office.

North arrived with Green late in the afternoon as she and Earl were sorting through the unfiled papers in Earl's office, away from the eyes of the security officials. She said she stuffed some documents into her boots and concealed others on her back under her clothing. She said she asked North whether the documents showed, he said they did not, and the group left.

When they got outside the White House grounds, she told North about the papers and offered to produce them, and Green said, "No, wait until we get into the car," she testified. Green then took the party to the lot where their cars were parked, and she pulled out the documents while in his car, Miss Hall said.

She said Green then asked her what she would say if asked about the shredding, and she replied, 'We shred every day.'' Green then said, "Good," she testified. Green did not return telephone calls late Monday.

Earlier Monday, Bretton Sciaroni, counsel for the president's Intelligence Oversight Board, was questioned closely by the committees about his 1985 legal opinion that was used by some in the administration to justify secret aid to the Nicaraguan rebels. Sciaroni said he stood by his opinion that congressional limits on military aid to the Contras did not apply to North and the National Security Council.

"I don't foresee any major problems, but I miss the excitement of it," Laramore said. "But at the same time, it's sort of the same thing because I do some investigating.

Hart said city officials hope Laramore's new position can help cut the city's insurance costs. The city manager said the city spent more than $100,000 in claims in 1986, while the cost of liability insurance jumped from $18,000 to $103,000.

"What that's geared at, we're spending entirely too much money on insurance claims,' Hart said of the new job. "We think we can pay for (the position) with decreasing costs associated with liability

Gould came to Pampa six years ago from Ohio to work as a typist, eventually working her way up to records manager. She has also served the department as a dispatcher and secretary to the chief.

Eberz called Gould's promotion a "cost-effective move" in a service division that is made up entirely of civilians.

"We don't need a commissioned officer in a division that has no commissioned officers,' Eberz said

The new chief said both Gould and Deputy Chief Wallace will receive raises but haven't yet. Laramore's salary has also remained the same. In other major reorganization moves Formal responsiblity for the city jail has been shifted from the service to the patrol division. ■ The department's crime prevention unit has been placed under criminal investigation. Previously, crime prevention answered directly to the chief.

■ The warrant officer and the planned position of training coordinator were placed under control of the deputy chief.

The communiques did not commit the allies to any military role in the Gulf, where U.S. warships soon are to begin escorting Kuwaiti oil tankers to protect them from attack.

However, it urged the adoption of a U.N. Security Council resolution sought by the United States that would impose an arms embargo against Iran unless it agreed to peace talks with Iraq, its enemy in nearly seven years of bitter war.

After encountering resistance from allies for a stepped-up military role in the Gulf, the United States scaled down expectations for a major summit commitment. The Gulf wasn't even discussed at a 31/2-hour dinner of the leaders Monday night focusing on political topics; U.S. officials said there wasn't enough time to take it up. Secretary of State George P. Shultz, interviewed on NBC's "Today" program, said, "We're not alone in the Gulf. We're certainly not alone in our Shultz said "there is a lot of emphasis on the diplomatic track, frustrating though it is, because the war has not been brought to an end. We are working with our friends, in the the U.N. to find our way to a strong resolution" dealing with the Iran-Iraq war.

The summit, convened officially to consider economic matters but dominated as usual by political issues, concludes Wednesday.

On East-West issues, the communique said new opportunties are emerging in the internal and external policies of the Soviet Union for progress in improving ties.

The leaders said "we note with satisfaction" that prospects are emerging for reduction in nuclear weaopons. The United States and Soviet Union are near agreement on a plan to dismantle hundreds of medium-range and shorter range nuclear missiles in Europe, and to cut back on medium-range weapons in Asia.

The single note of discord was a disagreement at the leaders' dinner Monday night over the next step in U.S. negotiations with the Soviets.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl urged Reagan to seek a commitment from the Soviets to take up restraints on tactical nuclear weeapons in Europe and John Paul Stevens, who their past jobs. ioined the majority, expressed reservations in a separate concurring opinion over the way the regulation is being applied.

'Empirical evidence. . .supports the inference that the regulation has been used in a manner inconsistent with the statutory definition of disability," O'Connor said in an opinion joined by Stevens.

Three dissenting justices voted to strike down the regulation as being on its face in violation of Social Security law.

It is not clear how many wouldbe recipients could be denied benefits under the regulation. But court records suggest the figure could be as high as 800,000 people each year. More than 2 million claims for Social Security disability benefits are made annually

In a surprise move, attorneys for Davis' ex-wife, Priscilla, called the millionaire defendant as a witness in a $20 million wrongful death lawsuit filed against him by Mrs. Davis and another former husband, Jack Wilborn.

Mrs. Davis and Wilborn allege Davis killed their 12-year-old daughter, Andrea Wilborn

Davis did not testify in a 1977 murder trial in which he was found innocent of killing his step-daughter.

Monday, he said that the night of the shootings he ate dinner and went to the movie alone, arriving around midnight at the home of Karen Master, now his third wife

Karen Master Davis testified in a previous trial that Davis was in bed beside her when she awakened on Aug. 3, 1976, at 12:40 a.m., the same time the mansion murders took place.

"I was there," Davis said under questioning from attorney Bob Gibbins. Mrs. Davis was wounded and her livein boyfriend, Stan Farr, 30, was also killed in the gunfire that night. A young mansion visitor, Bubba Gavrel, then 22, was partially paralyzed by a bullet that remains lodged near his spine. Beverly Bass, Gavrel's date at the time and now his wife, was not hurt.

Mrs. Davis and the Gavrels testified last week that Davis was the gunman. An Amarillo jury heard similar testimony in the 1977 murder trial before acquitting Davis in a trial that also allowed extensive testimony about the flamboyant lifestyle of his ex-wife.

The 53-year-old Davis insisted Monday he was not mad nor bitter toward his ex-wife, Priscilla, the day of the shootings but conceded he was "frustrated.

In a calm voice, Davis recalled that his divorce judge had upgraded his support payments to Priscilla that day from $3,500 to $5,000 monthly and ordered him to advance her thousands of dollars for expenses and legal fees.

The judge also had granted Ms. Davis a delay in the divorce trial.

Davis called the money a "drop in the bucket." He said his company assets at that time were worth about $100 million and that his personal and community property was valued at around $6 mil-

In 1985, the oil-related family business empire, Kendavis Industries, was forced into bankruptcy and Davis and his older brother, Ken, were ousted from the hierarchy last spring.

In testimony Monday morning, Davis was questioned by his ex-wife's lawyer about killing his stepdaughter's kitten during an angry scene in the 1970s.

"I was mad. I don't know about a rage. I knew what I was doing," Davis

Attorney Gibbins asked if he considered his action part of a blind rage.

"I consider it stupid," Davis replied. In another exchange, Davis testified he didn't attend Andrea's funeral or send flowers and said he first learned of the shootings in a telephone call from his brother Ken about 4 a.m. on Aug. 3. He said since he wasn't involved, he told Ken he was "going back to bed."

"Did you have any concern for Andrea?" Gibbins asked.

"It didn't occur to me that Andrea was over there," he replied.

Independent producers told natural gas task force created

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission is setting up a special task force to investigate complaints of unfair practices in the natural gas market.

'The commission has received numerous complaints of alleged anti-competitive activities,' FERC chairman Martha O. Hesse said Monday during a speech before the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association.

"I have decided there must be an administrative mechanism to examine and resolve such matters quickly and effectively to ensure an efficient and competitive natural gas market," she said.

"Formal administrative proceedures, while sometimes necessary, may be too cumbersome and time consuming for matters that can be resolved through a more flexible, informal process."

Use of gas pipeline facilities will be a major target of anti-discriminatory activities of the task force. Ms. Hesse said

Ms. Hesse said that she, an agency counsel "and as many more people as necessary" will serve on the task force and she encouraged companies with complaints to meet with her in person or by telephone to discuss the problem.

A. Scott Anderson, general counsel for TIPRO, gave this summary of activities leading up to the present attempt to provide equal access to gas pipelines by all gas producers:

In the past, he said, gas pipelines have purchased gas from producers and then have resold the gas to anybody who wanted it. In the process, they created a monopoly. In order to get gas, the user had to buy it from the pipeline.

The FERC has tried to remedy this situation by urging pipelines to agree to serve only as transportation facilities, which would permit a producer to sell his gas to the ultimate buyer and pay the pipeline a fee to transport the gas.

Staff begins revenue study

AUSTIN (AP) — Staff members from the governor, lieutenant governor and speaker turn to available revenue today in their preparatory study for the June 22 special session.

Bob Davis, the governor's budget officer, reported Monday that the behind-the-scenes study of the Texas budget had found common ground in deciding the current level of state spending.

Davis told reporters Monday the 1987 level of spending may be $185 million to $195 million above what Gov. Bill Clements' and the Legislative Budget Board have been considering as the current level.

"We did not get into the 1988-89 budget," Davis said. "The major differences of 1988-89 remain.

Davis and Jim Oliver, LBB executive director briefed reporters after the first meeting of staff members for the governor, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, House Speaker Gib Lewis and the LBB.

'Reaching a common ground where we are right now will be of help when we get to 1988-89," Oliver said

The group Monday agreed that the current spending level would be $25.95 billion to $26 billion for two years, higher than previous LBB totals or Clements' $25.7 billion budget proposed in February, Davis said, adding the figures would be rechecked. "Clearly you would have to have the revenue to support current spending," Davis said. He said Clements has always proposed maintaining the current spending stream plus the $2.9 billion available from extending the so-called temporary taxes passed in 1986.

Davis said he did not know when the staff figures would be taken up by Clements, Hobby and Lewis.

Secord's State Bar protested appearance

AUSTIN (AP) — A University of Texas law professor protesting the scheduled appearance of retired Maj. Gen. Richard Secord at the State Bar convention said Willie Nelson would have been a better choice.

Roberto Soto spoke Monday at a demonstration against the invitation for Secord to appear in Corpus Christi Friday for a fee of Soto said the invitation "violates not only notions of decency but any common sense. "He may be able to draw some people to the meeting, but we think Willie Nelson would have done a much better job ...," Soto said. Aproximately 25-30 persons, including some who identified themselves as attorneys or law students, held placards outside State Bar headquarters. Secord, who managed the United States arms sales to Iran and resupply of weapons to the Nicaraguan Contras, made his second appearance Monday before the Iran-Contra congressional committees. Soto, who also said he is a vice president of the National Lawyers Guild, stated that the purpose of the Austin demonstration was to urge State Bar leaders to withdraw their invitation and $7,500 fee for Secord to appear. Whitehurst said he did not think the protest represented a major problem, but he added, 'I think they have a legitimate question as to whether anyone like Secord ought to be given any kind of platform." "He's being portrayed as a speaker — what we're doing is we're having a forum on national affairs, international affairs. I've invited Secord to come because he is clearly the one who is in the spotlight right now on international affairs," Whitehurst said.

The prison system remained closed to new arrivals on Monday, but 54 more convicts were released, TDC spokesman Charles Brown said. As of midnight Sunday, the inmate population totaled 38,424, or 94.65 percent of capacity - 143 inmates under the 95 percent cap, officials said Monday.

The last time the prison department was forced to close its doors because the population exceeded the limit was April 13. That shutdown was part of an open-and-shut cycle that left the system open only on Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

Private individuals make foreign policy

President Reagan has made a half-hearted effort to clarify an issue that most people in Washington would just as soon keep obscure. "There is nothing in the law (the Boland amendment) that prevents citizens — individuals or groups — from offering aid of what ever kind they wanted to," said Reagan in an interview with U.S. News and World Report magazine. The president also said that the amendment, which is no longer in effect and which had differing provisions at different times, didn't prevent him from urging others to aid the contras.

This distinction deserves more clarification, for it points up one of the ways this nation still resembles a free country. Some opponents of aid to the contras have urged over the years that the government clamp down on various private or ostensibly private aid efforts. But private citizens still had the right, even when the Boland and Pell amendments were in force, to provide aid as individuals or through voluntary organizations. Whether such contributions would be tax-deductible is a separate issue. The Boland amendment clearly restricted the government from using taxpayers' money to aid the contras. The White House has pushed a more controversial interpretation: That it restricted the Defense Department and intelligence-gathering agencies like the CIA, but not the president and his top advisers — including the national security adviser and, by extension, the National Security Council. Apparently, this interpretation led to the use of the council as a operational arm during the time the Boland amendment was in force. But the fact that the operation was conducted under wraps suggests that even advocates of the "NSC-isn't covered" view were not entirely com-fortable with defending this interpretation in public. All this suggests that if the president and his men had played it straight — stuck to encouraging private donations to the contras, but abstained from using government channels and taxpayer-paid operatives to orchestrate the effort — the administration would be in less trouble today, and the contras might be in better shape, too. Substantial amounts were raised from private donors, and it's not unreasonable to believe that an aggressive private fund-raising effort, scrupulously separated from the government, might have raised

Certainly, private U.S. citizens who support the Sandinista regime have not been shy about volunteering time, money, tangible help, and even their lives to the cause — as is their right in a free society.

The standard bromide is that the Iran-Contra debacle shows the need for — ho hum — a bipartisan foreign policy that be supported by all Americans once it's decided. Perhaps what we need instead is a multipartisan policy carried out by voluntary organizations. Let U.S. citizens who support the Sandinistas support them, and let those who support the contras support them. Meantime, let the government (while maintaining a sufficient defense), neither help nor hinder either side.

Principals achieve results

WASHINGTON — Outside of their immediate localities, has anyone ever heard much about Dennis Sidebottom, Louise Smith, J. Joseph Whelan, Camerino Lopez or Princess Whitfield? Probably not. But if good news were as newsworthy as bad news, their names would be widely recognized. They are public school principals who have done a superlative job.

Each of them was recognized recently in a heartening report from the U.S. Department of Education on the teaching of "disadvantaged" children. Ordinarily in this capital of euphemisms, "disadvantaged" is taken to mean "black" or "Hispanic." In this report the adjective is used precisely. The report addresses the needs of children who are in fact culturally disadvantaged: They are poor

The thrust of the report is altogether positive. Secretary of Education William Bennett is convinced that children from the slums, the ghettos and barrios can learn - provided they are given opportunities and encouragement. Teaching such children may be demanding; no one says it is easy to instill habits of stduy and discipline in youngsters who are indifferent to academic values. Demanding, yes; difficult, yes. But impossible? No.

Bennett introduces us to Dennis Sidebottom. In 1981 he became principal of the tiny Carrizozo High School in Carrizozo, N.M., an isolated ranching community in an area of chronic high unemployment. He inherited an apathetic faculty and an uninterested student body. The school was characterized by absenteeism and vandalspected, and he succeeded. Today 97 percent of the students win their diplomas; 40 percent go to

Louise Smith became principal of Charles Rice Elementary School in Dallas three years ago. Of the school's 850 students, 99 percent are black and virtually all come from low-income families. She decided to concentrate on skills in reading and math. Teachers tutor daily after school; children are encouraged to stay for a homework center where they get individual help. Today 73 percent of the sixth-graders are at or above grade level in reading, 87 percent are at or above grade level in math.

Chambers Elementary School in East Cleveland, Ohio, has 726 students. All of them are black; three-quarters live in poverity, and twothirds are from single-parent families. For the past 18 years J. Joseph Whelan has been working devotedly with this unlikely material. He demands discipline. Without apology he promotes old-fashioned patriotism. At the front door is the school's motto: "To Achieve Excellence, Think Excellence." In a dozen ways Whelan recognizes and rewards good work.

Camerino Lopez has been principal of Garthe past five years. Ninety-nine percent of her 800 students come from low-income households. More than half are Hispanic. This means a tribute time and money. The school's attend- can get.

Here in Washington, Hine Junior High School used to be known as "Horrible Hine." Bennett's report accurately describes the situation in 1982: "Enrollment had plummeted from 1,000 students to 296. Drugs were openly used, vandalism was rampant, and academic achievement poor." Instead of closing the school, as a community task force had recommended, the Board of Education named Princess Whitfield as principal and gave her the assignment of turning the place around.

"Her plan for action included strict discipline and security policies, active parental and community involvement, and the introduction of a rich curriculum that would hold the attention of all students."

Today Hine's enrollment has passed the 700 mark; its curriculum includes Latin and "Great Books." Vandalism and drug use "have virtually ceased." School spirit has soared, and it is 'Horrible Hine' no longer.

The moral to all these stories is not only that top-notch principals can make top-notch schools. There is more to it. All that is required to turn poor schools into good schools is parental field Elementary School in Phoenix, Ariz., for support, community support, and a determination at every hand that the job will be done. # Baptist educator sneaks wine in bathroon

By Sarah Overstreet

While Gary Hart was throwing away his campaign and President Reagan was forgetting what his minions were up to, a curious series of events was taking place in the capital of Missouri.

The popular state head of education was sneaking into a grocery store and drinking liquor in a men's room. Over a period of months, Arthur Mallory was taking wine off the store's shelves, going to the men's room, having a few snorts and leaving the spent bottles in the lavatory.

Mallory's secret didn't escape the attention of store employees, howeyer. Apparently one of them told St. Louis Post-Dispatch reporter Terry Ganey, who broke the story. In a press conference, Mallory admitted what he had done, crying and calling it an "evil thing." He said he had developed a chemical dependency that he was afraid to admit to even his family, and even more afraid to admit to the public by actually buying the wine. He is a Baptist deacon.

I don't know if Mallory's close friends suspected anything, but the news swept through the Missouri media with about the same force as would Nancy Reagan's admission to secret marijuana puffing out a window of the Lincoln bedroom.

Mallory had distinguished himself early as young, strong and capable. His rise was meteoric: dean, college president. He became state commissioner of education at the age of 38 and he has held the post for 16 years. He has a magnetic personality that politicians pay other people to build for them and still only a few carry off. He was the cream of the crop of his generation of educators and administrators.

And yet, Arthur Mallory found it necessary to sneak into a grocery store and steal wine. What in heaven's name could lead a man like that to behave like a common wino?

I imagine heaven had more to do with it than any of us can fathom. Here's a man who built as close to a heaven on earth as any teacher can dream of, and whose moral life was built around a call for stiff upper lips during life and the promise of heaven everlasting after death. Where does a man like Arthur Mallory turn when his life leaves him lonely and frightened, and even the promise of heaven later can't touch his pain now?

IRS plans for tax filing from home computer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Within a few years, any American with a computer may be able to file a tax return from home, getting a refund three weeks sooner or paying any balance due with a credit card

Until the bugs are worked out, most taxpayers will have to stick with the old-fashioned way of filing — paper returns mailed to the Internal Revenue Service. But an increasing number will be able to use a system by which accountants and other professional preparers file returns to the IRS electroni-

The IRS on Monday announced the 2-year-old electronic-filing program will be expanded next year to professionals in all or part of 14 states and made available to as many as 30 million couples and individuals.

Judging by the first two years, it's unlikely that anywhere near that many taxpayers will file electronically in 1988 because there is no indication a sufficient number of professionals will take part. In 1986, the first year of the program, only a handful of firms took part and filed about 25,000 returns electronically. This year, more than 60 firms filed about 80,000 returns by this method.

During the first year of the project, electronic filing was available in parts of three states. This year, the program spread to four more areas.

Under the electronic system, an accountant or tax preparer calculates a person's tax liability and transmits the information to the IRS via telephone line. The taxpayer's signature is obtained on a separate sheet. At the taxpayer's option, refunds may be deposited directly into their checking or savings account, wiping out more paper-

For the moment, electronic filing is available only to couples and individuals who are getting a tax refund, and the return must be prepared by a professional, who charges a filing fee in addition to the regular preparation fee.

The IRS said its technicians are exploring ways for:

"Expansion ... to 'balance-due' returns under a system permitting a taxpayer to pay by means of a credit card." This would require action by Congress

"Development of compatible software and a secure system of transmission ... that would enable homecomputer owners to file electronically without relying on a tax preparer for Professional preparers throughout Alabama, Arizona, Indiana, Kentucky, Nebraska, North Carolina, Utah, Virginia, Washington and Wisconsin will be offering electronic filing next year, along with those operating out of offices in areas served by IRS districts in Albany and Buffalo, N.Y.; Cincinnati; Sacramento and San Jose, Calif., and

Fawn Hall: Just following orders or obstructing justice?

WASHINGTON (AP) - Fawn Hall may have earned a niche in the folklore of America's professional secretaries.

Testifying under oath and under a grant of immunity from prosecution, Miss Hall is telling congressional investigators that when the carefully constructed wall of secrecy surrounding White House initiatives on Iran and Nicaragua collapsed last November, she was asked to do things for which she had been prepared by neither training

A professional secretary helps her boss do his job, and Miss Hall, 27, opened her testimony Monday by telling the congressional Iran-Contra committees that that's what she did for her boss, Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North

But in the panic that followed the Iran-Contra disclosures, she said she did just a little bit more, enough more that some committee members said it is clear she destroyed evidence and took part in 'an obstruction of justice.'

She helped North shred a stack of documents a foot-and-a-half thick.

Acting under his instructions, she retyped and materially altered the contents of a sheaf of key documents drafted the year before.

After North had been fired by a president who simultaneously told him he was an American hero, she slipped documents North had overlooked past National Security Council officials trying to secure

She stuffed some in her boots and hid others "in my back.'

Walking out of the Old Executive Office Building she entered a car driven by North's attorney, Thomas Greene, and handed the documents over to

And when she was initially asked if she had done any shredding, she said that, in "a protective mode," she misled her questioners by saying she had done nothing outside normal office routine.

Miss Hall described destroying documents, saying she had placed as many as 15 sheets of paper at a time into the shredder, feeding so many that it jammed and had to be fixed.

In her opening remarks, Miss Hall recalled that she had first begun secretarial work when she was still only 15 or 16, working first for the Navy department. She also worked part time as a model.

She worked for the Navy until early 1983 when she was transferred to the National Security Council staff and became personal secretary to North, then a Marine major. Her testimony, she said, came from "the perspective of a secretary," someone whose job it was 'to facilitate the smooth operation of the office.'

She said she was good at what she did: "I was a dedicated and loyal secretary and performed my duties in an exemplary manner.

Then, with emphasis, she made a three-word

eini's guards pose new threat to ship

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Like modern-day pirates, Iran's Revolutionary Guards are launching attacks on merchant ships in the Persian Gulf from speedboats bearing rockets, machine guns and mines.

In the last few weeks, the Guards' 'naval wing" has hit at least eight ships, including two Soviet vessels, introducing a new element into the increasingly tense situation in the gulf.

The Iranian government appears to have reduced its air and naval attacks since the Americans and Soviets strengthened their gulf forces following the May 17 Iraqi strike on the USS Stark, which killed 37 sailors. But the Guards' raids have continued un-

Revolutionary Guards, fanatical followers of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, fired 21 rocket-propelled grenades into the 219,000-ton Liberianregistered tanker Gollar Robin May 18, starting a fire.

Four days later, the Guards hit the 2,600-ton Rashidia, a cargo ship owned by the Qatar National Navigation Co., with 10 rockets, wounding three crewmen.

So far, casualties aboard the targets have been minimal. But in several attacks, the raiders appeared to be aiming for quarters where seamen were

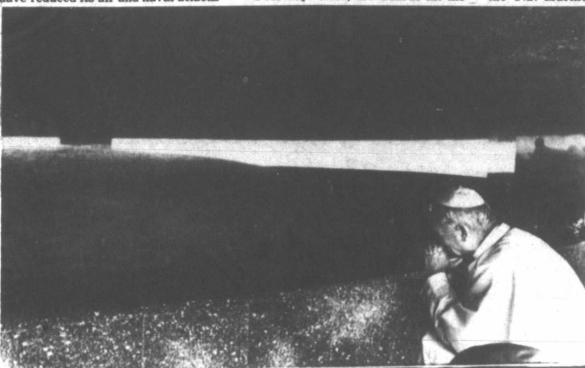

'These are the same kind of Shiite Moslem fanatics who carried out the suicide bombings in Beirut that drove the U.S. Marines and French paratroopers out of Lebanon," said a Western military analyst who regularly visits Tehran. "With the temperature rising in the gulf and the Iranians feeling that the world is ganging up on it again (this) is just the kind of climate in which the fanatics flourish. Suicide attacks in the gulf cannot be ruled out," the analyst noted, speaking on condition he was not named.

Tehran's leaders have warned they will not be deterred by superpower protection for shipping. They have said Iran will attack any bases in gulf Arab states that Washington is allowed to Khomeini last year approved the formation of naval and air wings in the 400,000-strong Guards Corps, which has been built into a force that rivals the regular services.

Iran bought 50 of the 42-foot twindiesel speedboats from Sweden's Boghammer Marin company, claiming it planned to use the lightweight aluminum craft against smugglers.

A prayer for the dead.

Pope prays at death camp

MAJDANEK, Poland (AP) - Pope John Paul II, his head buried in his hands, today knelt in silent prayer for the 1.5 million people who died in the notorious Majdanek Nazi concentration camp in eastern Poland.

As a band played solemn music on the second day of his pilgrimage to his homeland, the pontiff knelt on a white-draped stand under a large mausoleum inscribed with the words "Your fate is a warning to us.

The domed, circular mausoleum, shaped like a Slavic funeral urn, contains the ashes of tens of thousands of the camp's victims.

John Paul shifted occasionally as he prayed alone for nearly 10 minutes, sometimes resting his chin on his folded hands and sometimes covering

Around him were the wooden buildings remaining from the Nazi era, when Poles from all over the country were brought to the camp to be killed. The buildings included a crematorium, its smoke stack still intact, and a guard tower.

After the prayers, the Roman Catholic leader received a bouquet of red and white flowers from an elderly woman once held captive at Majdanek. located outside the city of Lublin about 50 miles from the Soviet border.

The woman, Wanda Ossowska, and the pontiff spoke for about five minutes.

After Auschwitz, Majdanek was the secondlargest Nazi death camp on Polish territory. The pope visited the Auschwitz site in southern Poland in 1979, and spoke out strongly against the horrors of the Nazi Holocaust.

On the first day of his visit Monday, John Paul paid tribute to a slain priest who has become a symbol of hope for the outlawed Solidarity labor movement. He spoke after hearing Poland's Communist leader vow there will be no return to the social upheaval sparked by the independent labor federation.

The pontiff paid tribute to the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko, a Roman Catholic priest and staunch Solidarity supporter who was abducted and murdered by government security agents in 1984.

At an evening Mass inside All Saints Church, the pope quoted the slain cleric as saying "thanks to the death and resurrection of Christ, the symbol of ignominy and of humiliation has become the symbol of courage.

There was no visible response from the hundreds of lay Catholics, priests and bishops in the audience for the start of a Polish Catholic conference.

John Paul is expected to pray at Popieluszko's grave at the end of his trip on Sunday. He is also scheduled to meet in Gdansk with Lech Walesa, the leader of Solidarity, the first independent trade union federation in the Soviet bloc. The pontiff and Polish Communist leader Gen.

Wojciech Jaruzelski exchanged formal greetings late Monday afternoon in Warsaw in an ornately decorated former royal palace. "The turmoil has subsided," Jaruzelski said in a clear reference to Solidarity. "The flames incited by foreign powers have cleared up.'

Polish officials have criticized Western countries for backing the Solidarity movement.

Reviving chip makers satisfied with Reagan's penalty action while some Democratic lawmakers in Washington NEW YORK (AP) - The nation's reviving semiconductor makers say they support President

Reagan's decision to remove 17 percent of the penalty tariffs against Japan that were imposed on their behalf two months ago.

"We hope this goodwill gesture will lead to a continuing pattern of compliance by Japan," the Semiconductor Industry Association said in a statement Monday.

In Venice, Italy, on Monday for a summit conference, Reagan sliced $51 million off the $300 million in tariffs he had imposed on Japanese electronics goods in retaliation for alleged Japanese violation of an accord on semiconductor trade. Reagan said the Japanese "ought to be rewarded" for partial progress, but it was too soon to eliminate the sanctions

Japanese officials in Tokyo said they hoped the rest of the sanctions would be removed promptly, said it was too soon to ease off on the measures at

The United States has accused Japan of selling chips at unfairly low prices and not opening its home market enough to foreign-made chips.

Reagan's decision came as the U.S. semiconductor business showed new signs of vigor because of the pricing measures and a general upturn in demand.

Orders and shipments in May were the highest since 1984, the industry trade group reported

Industry analysts said the trade agreement on chips, while good for a few chip makers like Texas Instruments Inc., is beginning to put a squeeze on big U.S. consumers of semiconductors, such as computer makers, by raising the prices they pay for the tiny slivers of silicon.

More jobs go begging, survey finds

NEW YORK (AP) - Demand for new employees, though higher than a year ago, fell slightly during April, the most recent month for which figures have been compiled based on helpwanted advertising.

The Conference Board, a business research group, said its index measuring classified advertising in 51 major newspapers fell to 144 from 150 in March

Despite the April drop, the volume of help-wanted ads has been rising modestly since November, leaving "little doubt now that labor demand has, in fact, begun to rise," said Conference Board economist Kenneth Goldstein.

TENSION HEADACHE

If you're bothered by headache that seems to have its origin at the base of your skull, you may be suffering from tension headache.

Tension headaches can be caused by an irritation of the nerves in the area of the spine immediately under the skull. These are called the suboccipital nerves. They pass through small openings in the spinal column to muscles in the surrounding area. Any abnormal pressure or dysfunction of neck and muscles can irritate the nerves, causing tension. The tension doesn't cause the headache. To treat this form of headache, attention should be paid to the bone and muscle structures. They should be returned to normal balance so they can function properly again.

Medication is not the answer to other painkillers may give you temporary relief - but they won't solve the problem. Once the source of the problem is found and treated, THEN you can get the relief you need.

Goetz trial testimony ends; judge ponders motion

NEW YORK (AP) - Testimony has ended in subway gunman Bernhard Goetz's attempted murder trial, and the judge said he would consider a defense request to drop most of the charges.

A medical examiner completed the prosecution's case Monday by poking a sharp stick into a dressmaker's dummy to show that one of the four young men Goetz shot could have been sitting down when he was shot and paralyzed.

The defense called no more witnesses and the judge, State Supreme Court Justice Stephen Crane, scheduled closing arguments for Wednesday.

Goetz, a 39-year-old electronics technician, is charged with attempted murder, assault, reckless endangerment and weapons violations for shooting the four, all 19 at the time, on Dec. 22, 1984

Goetz has said he fired in self-defense, thinking he was about to be robbed, after one of the four asked him for $5. One of the men said they were merely panhandling to play video games, which they intended to break

Defense lawyers did not call Goetz to tes-

The final witness, the prosecution's 35th, was Suffolk County Medical Examiner Dr. Charles Hirsch, called to rebut the testimony of Dominick DiMaio, a former New York City chief medical examiner.

Testifying as an expert, DiMaio had said that Darrell Cabey, the most seriously wounded of the four, could not have been seated when he was hit. Hirsch said DiMaio's testimony was "completely false" and "unsupported by fact."

Hirsch's testimony was considered important to the prosecution, which tried to prove that Goetz attempted to murder Cabey, Troy Canty, Barry Allen and James Ramseur and did not act out of self defense.

Prosecutor Gregory Waples contends that Goetz walked over to Cabey and stock him in

Using a wooden rod and the dummy, Hirsch said that if Cabey had moved his body slightly, the path of the bullet would be consistent with his being seated when shot.

Readers straighten Abby out on advice to gay man's mom

DEAR READERS: I recently published a letter from a reader who was emotionally torn over whether she should allow "John," her grieving homosexual son whose lover of 10 years had just died of AIDS, to return home for a family reunion and come out of the closet to his entire family. John had told his mother that he was not about to sit down with his family and pretend that life is "beautiful" after having been through the most painful and tragic year of his life - and unless he could be open and honest with his family, he refused to come home. His mother said, "We love our son, but don't want the embarrassment and hysteria that this situation could bring.'

I told the mother that the decision should be John's, but for him to insist that the entire family be informed that he is gay, though it might cause embarrassment and hysteria,

Many doctors have concluded that self-esteem plays a crucial role in the condition of the immune system. If John is forced to suppress who he is because his family finds it embarrassing, it could very well push his immune system over the edge. And what will his parents do if he does develop AIDS? The Celtics were bothered during the season and the playoffs by a series of ankle, knee and foot injuries that hobbled starters Robert Parish, Kevin McHale and Danny Ainge and deprived the bench of Bill Walton and Scott Wedman

"I didn't see anyone limping out on the floor," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "They had so many injuries this season that it became part of their picture and ultimately pulled them together.'

Blowout losses in the first two games had the Celtics believing they weren't physically capable of stopping the Lakers, but Ainge said Sunday's victory proved something.

"It's a frustrating feeling," Ainge said of the two losses. "I think that frustration is gone. It's back to reality.'

Ainge was at midcourt when the clock ran out in Game 3, and he slammed the ball to the floor in jubilation.

"We gave everything we had and finally won," said Ainge, who missed three earlier playoff games with a knee sprain. "In the first two games, it seemed like everything we tried to do, we still couldn't stop them. When we finally did it, the emotion just came out."

Plano's Green sparks baseball team both on and off the field

By KURT ROSENBERG Dallas Times Herald

PLANO, Texas (AP) - If Reggie Green is anywhere close to form, the Plano East Panthers' bus trip Thursday to the high school state baseball tournament in Austin should fly by in what will seem like 20 minutes.

Likewise, if Green is up to standards playing at Disch-Falk Field on the University of Texas campus, Saturday night's return trip might be even

On the team bus, in practice, before, during and after games, the Plano East first baseman has a way of holding the Panthers together - and breaking them up in laughter.

It might be a well-timed barb at a teammate, an irreverent rip at Coach Ed Norris, a clutch homer in the sixth inning, or a post-game dousing of Norris with the water bucket.

On the field, Green's postseason success may be the biggest reason the Panthers have advanced through the first four rounds of the playoffs and into this week's state tournament, where they play San Antonio MacArthur in a semifinal game at 6 p.m. Thursday. He has hit .431 and has four homers in his team's nine playoff games.

But an equally significant portion of his contribution is made off the field. His feel for the mental part of the game is as natural as his picturesque

"I feel like it's my job to keep the team's spirits high," Green said. "I come out trying to be loose, and I try to keep everybody else loose with me. We need to have a little sarcasm every once in a while and have a few laughs to keep us up on the bus." Often, it's not so much what he says, but how and when he says it. In comedy, as in hitting, timing is everything. Punctuated by an infectious, highpitched laugh, Green delivers a line as easily as he does a line drive.

So on the rare occasion that shortstop Jim

Jacobs misses a ground ball in practice, Green will chime in at precisely the right moment, "Nice Should right fielder Robin Kraus miss a fly ball, Green will inform him, "Catch it in the air and they're out.'

After Green fielded the final out as the Panthers swept Dallas Jefferson in last week's Region II final, he grabbed a broom and tidied up around first base before Norris stopped him.

Norris, however, couldn't stop Green from giving the coach a postgame bath for the third time in as many weeks. "If it wasn't him actually doing the bucket, it was him instigating it," Norris said. "I kind of figured I'd give him a little soak,"

Green said. Norris, far from cracking down on Green's antics, said he understands the value of such be-

"Reggie just goes out and has fun and enjoys the game," Norris said. "He keeps everybody loose, and he also has a very serious role on the field. He's

Green has been anything but a laughing matter to opponents. He has hit .442 this year, with nine homers, eight doubles, six triples and 46 runs batted in. He has committed just one error, and Norris said he is the team's fastest player and best base got a dual job and he does it well.

A federal grand jury has convened each Tuesday in Chicago to look into the dealings of New York-based agent Norby Walters and an aide, Lloyd Bloom, according to other sources and published reports.

Walters has admitted signing college athletes to contracts and paying them before their eligibility ended in violation of NCAA rules. He has filed at least six breach-of-contract suits against former clients.

The Atlanta Constitution, in a series of stories, has said that 60 athletes from 28 schools eventually will be subpeonaed to testify before the grand jury.

But reporters who staked out the grand jury hearing rooms two of the three previous Tuesdays have not seen a single witness enter or leave the rooms

"My guy hasn't been before the (grand) jury and neither have any of the others I know about," said an attorney retained by a former Walters client.

"I expected to hear from the U.S. Attorney's office by now," he added, "but I suppose they could be swamped if they're talking to as many people as the rumors have it. Especially if they're offering people deals."

U.S. Attorney Anton Valukas refused to confirm or deny the existence of a grand jury investigation on the matterm as did Howard Pearl, the assistant U.S. attorney who is said to be spearheading the inquiry.

Part of the prosecutors strategy is said to involve use of the Racketeering Influenced Corrupt Organizations Act, a federal law aimed at organized crime.

Athletes are required to sign documents each year that they have not violated any NCAA rules, including rules against receiving money from or signing contracts with agents.

The Constitution reported last month that Willie Anderson, the agent for University of Texas football player Edwin Simmons, said his client was threatened with a one-year jail term for fraud and tax evasion.

Holmes pulling for Cooney in upcoming heavyweight bout

By ED SCHUYLER JR. AP Sports Writer

Larry Holmes will be in Gerry Cooney's corner when he fights Michael Spinks next Monday night at Atlantic City. Figuratively, of course.

"I'm rooting all the way for Cooney," says the man who was the premier heavyweight in the world from 1978 until

"I have no love for either fighter, but I love Gerry more.

Holmes is still rankled about the hero treatment given Cooney before their fight success against Cooney. on June 11, 1982, in which Holmes retained the World Boxing Council title by stopping Cooney in 13th round.

Allegations continue in sports agents

He's still bitter about his two decision losses to Spinks in International Boxing Federation title matches. Cases can be made for Holmes winning both fights, especially the split-decision rematch.

So, you might say, nothing has taken away the taste of sour grapes left by the losses to Spinks, while the bitterness of what Holmes perceived as unfair treatment was softened by the sweet taste of

But Larry Holmes' opinion about the fight has to hold weight. His knowledge of boxing was not eroded by age as his skills "Cooney will knock him out," Holmes, who will be 38 on Nov. 3, says. "It won't go six rounds if Cooney fights him the way he fought me. He's too big. He hits too hard. "Michael doesn't punch as hard as me,

"Michael has to hope Gerry gets tired and frustrated, and Butch Lewis is hoping the judges will be awful.

"Awful judging" is what Holmes feels he was the victim of against Spinks both times they fought in Las Vegas, Nev., and he predicts "awful judging" is what over Spinks and probably will outweigh Spinks will need to beat Cooney.

NL roundup

The Reds won for the fourth time this season after trailing by six runs as they rallied past the San Francisco Giants 7-6 Monday the bottom of the ninth, moved the Reds three games ahead of the second-place Giants in the National League West.

"For San Francisco to be up six runs and lose, that's kind of puts a damper on it for the rest of the time," Parker said, referring to the last two games of the series.

The Giants led 6-0 after three innings against Reds starter Tom Browning, with Chili Davis hitting a two-run homer. But the Reds climbed back with a run in the fourth and four in the fifth, two coming on a Parker home

At 34-20, the Cardinals have the best record in the majors and are off to their best start in 20 years. Speed and power were the keys at Philadelphia, with Vince Coleman stealing four bases and scoring three times, and Jack Clark homering.

Tommy Herr knocked in three runs without getting a hit for St. Louis, which leads the NL East

In Chicago, Manny Trillo was the hero, homering on the first pitch he saw in the ninth inning from Doug Sisk. Dave Martinez had singled prior to Trillo's hit.

The Mets had tied it in the ninth on a two-run double by Barry Lyons. But poor baserunning stopped New York from taking the lead.

With Howard Johnson on third and Lyons on second with one out, Bill Almon bunted, but the runners held as Almon was thrown out at first base. Lyons then was picked off second by catcher Jody Davis during an intentional walk to Mookie Wilson.

It was the Orel Hershiser show in Atlanta. The Dodgers pitcher allowed three hits in 61-3 innings, singled in a run in the third in Randy Ready and Shane Mack opened the eighth with singles and both scored on a grounder by Carmelo Martinez that shortstop Craig Reynolds threw past first base. Benito Santiago doubled, scoring pinch-runner James Steels, and Santiago stole third and scored on Salazar's single to right field.

Schultz named new NCAA director By DOUG TUCKER

AP Sports Writer KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) -'Although he won't take charge of the NCAA for about a year. Dick Schultz is going right to work on the sometimes-tattered image of the governing body of college

"The common perception of most people you talk to is that the NCAA is some bureaucratic organization in Kansas City that makes all these controversial decisions, when the NCAA is us," said Schultz, who has signed a five-year contract to succeed Walter Byers as NCAA executive director, "Maybe one of the biggest contributions I can make might be in the first four of five months is by getting around and visiting with different groups and being able to have an exchange with them.

"How do other people view us?" he asked. "I think that's one of the biggest challenges, to bring reality and perception together.

The individual institutions have to play a larger role in solving the problems of intercollegiate athle-

The problems of college sports will become Schultz' problems when he takes over for Byers, who has run the NCAA since 1947 and became executive director when the post was created in 1951.

Schultz and Byers appeared at a news conference Monday to announce the NCAA Executive Committee's poorly kept secret that it had chosen Schultz as Byers' replacement. Schultz, describing himself as

"very honored, very humbled," noted he will simply be another member of the staff until Byers officially steps down, no later than Aug. 31, 1988. Byers, 65, will become executive director emeritus until Aug. 31, 1990.

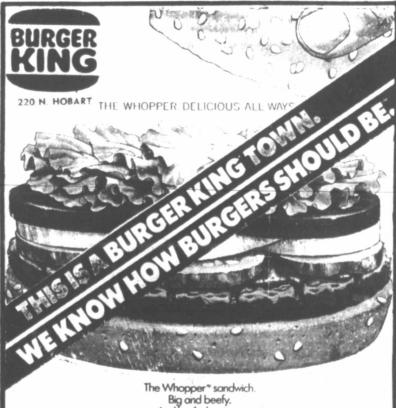

"I will be in the process of learning about this organization. Believe me, there is a lot to learn," said Schultz, 57, who since 1981 has been athletic director at Virginia. "There is no question as to who is in charge of the NCAA until that time comes about. And right now, no one knows when that date will be."

Schultz said he will take a hardline stand on academic integrity.

"The integrity issue is very high," he said. "Academic achievement and integrity in athletics go hand in hand. I would hope we can see some improvement in that. Legislatively in the NCAA, the stage has been set for that. Most loopholes have been closed in academic progress legislation and Proposition 48. I think the stage is set to see a major improvement in academic achievement of studentathletes

THE EFFICIENT WAY TO WATER LAWNS, GARDENS, ORCHARDS. ATHLETIC FIELDS and MORE

Leaky Pipe is the sub-surface watering system that cuts costs, eliminates evaporation and run-off.

> Leaky Pipe is a porous, flexible rubber pipe which sweats when placed in the ground. Soil draws water from the pipe to be used by trees, plants and turf. Leaky Pipe delivers water, oxygen and nutrients directly to roots and requires only a fraction of the water used by conventional irrigation systems.

Leaky Pipe helps stabilize foundations. Spring rains and summer drought cause some soils to expand and contract. A single line of Leaky Pipe will stabilize soil around the house and eliminate this foundation damage.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Catfish-cookturned-singer Randy Travis captured four awards, and the Statler Brothers won three, including entertainer of the year, at the fan-voted Music City News country awards show.

Travis, a million-selling singer after less than two years as a recording artist, was honored as male vocalist of the year during Monday night's syndicated television awards program.

Travis, 27, also won album of year for "Storms of Life," was named the "Star of Tomorrow" and his "On the Other Hand" was chosen single record of the year.

"I still am overwhelmed that in just over a year all these things have happened," he said afterward at the Grand Ole Opry House.

The Statlers, a veteran quartet discovered in 1963 by country king Johnny Cash, shared the spotlight at the awards show they have dominated for a decade

Their other awards were for group of the year and country music television special of the year for 'The Statlers' Christmas Present.'

Their honor as best entertainer was their third straight. They have been voted No. 1 vocal group every year since 1972, except 1983, when Alabama won the honor.

The Statlers now have won 36 of these awards, which were first presented in 1967. Their big hit during the past year was "Count on Me.

Travis. a catfish cook until 11/2 years ago, sold 1 million copies of his "Storms of Life." His single, 'Forever and Ever, Amen," is currently No. 1 on the country music charts.

Reba McEntire was named top female vocalist for the third straight year and her "Whoever's in New England" was voted top country music video. George Jones, a 30-year veteran, was chosen for the "Living Legend" award.

Other winners were the Judds, duet of the year; Ray Stevens, comedian of the year; the "Hee Haw" Gospel Quartet, gospel act of the year; and "Nashville Now," top country music television

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Jurors in the murder

Farrell Tucker is charged in the Aug. 18 slaying of his best friend, Stephen Smith. The videotape was made last October during a grand jury investigation into Smith's slaying and was played for jurors on Monday. In it, Tucker says he shot Smith in self-defense after Smith threatened to kill him. Smith, who was suspected of vigilante activities and was suspended on brutality charges, allegedly planned to kill three top law enforcement officials he blamed for damaging his career. Monday afternoon jurors saw a re-enactment of the shooting with Tucker playing himself and de scribing the events. An FBI agent played Smith. In the videotape, Tucker said he and Smith got into Smith's standard-transmission compact car with Smith in the driver's seat.

As they began to pull away from the curb, Smith began to talk to Tucker.

Officer Smith turned to me and he says, 'You know, don't you?' ... He says, 'Give me your 45' and at this point he has his gun on me," Tucker said.

Tucker said Smith had a 9mm automatic pistol in his left hand and was holding the steering wheel with his right hand.

Tucker directs the FBI agent to place the 9mm pistol under the driver's seat with his left hand, place that hand on the steering wheel and take

He said he shoots Smith three more times while trying to open the door and jump out of the car as it moves down the street before jumping a curb and stopping, Tucker said.

"That's what I know happened. The configurations of the bullets, two and then three," Tucker said.

He got out of the car and speaks to officers making the videotape.

"If you and your wife were driving down the street and if you were involved in an accident and if you were asked where your hands were, that's the situation I'm in," Tucker said.

"I can tell you what happened and somewhat what I feel happened. That's all," he said.

Detective Jerry Penshorn, who coordinated the investigation into the weapons found at the shooting scene, testified that blood spatterings were found on the .357 revolver, but only a drop of blood was found on the .45-caliber pistol.

Preventive 5-year checkups should start at age 20, association says

DALLAS (AP) — Even healthy adults should have physical checkups every five years starting at age 20 to help prevent heart attacks and strokes, the American Heart Association recommends in new guidelines.

The recommendations Monday mark a broader approach to preventing "silent" diseases, said Dr. J. Alan Herd. He said the association is urging doctors to tell patients about test results and suggest appropriate diet or lifestyle changes.

"The transaction should be something more than, 'You do not have heart disease now. You do not have diabetes now. You do not have cancer now," he said.

Herd was a member of the committee that drew up the guidelines, published in the June issue of the Dallas-based association's journal, Circulation.

The American Medical Association is in accord with the recommendations, but stresses that the five-year guideline should be used only for patients who are at zero or minimal risk, said Joseph Skom of Chicago, a member of the AMA's council on scientific affairs.

Noting that some people have a family history of heart disease, Skom said, "There are some people who feel much more comfortable being examined more frequently because they need to be reassured periodically that everything is all right.'

Herd said, "There's no question that we're taking a position that (yearly checkups) may be more than is appropriate." He said the association took a cost-efficiency point of view on the time between checkups

'What this is doing is it's putting the responsibility on the individual patient and his physician," said association spokesman Howard Lewis. 'Hopefully, it will get the physician who's actually seeing the patient more tuned in to practicing prevention at the same time.'

The push for heart checkups was inspired by successful public education programs about high blood pressure, said Herd, medical director of the Institute of Preventive Medicine at Houston's Methodist Hospital.

"We have learned that the physician's efforts in suggesting to the patients that they should change are more successful than we used to think.'

Herd said the guidelines recommended starting checkups at age 20 because many people with heart problems began developing the disease much earlier.

After age 60, the association recommends checkups every 21/2 years.

The checkup guidelines include updating information every five years on weight, blood cholesterol, triglycerides and blood sugar, taking blood pressure measurements at each exam and once between checkups, getting a baseline electrocardiogram at ages 20, 40 and 60 and getting a baseline chest X-ray at age 40.

Rock fans battle police at the Berlin Wall

BERLIN (AP) - A gathering of rock fans turned into a protest against the Berlin Wall early today as thousands of East Germans chanting "The wall must go" battled Communist border guards in the worst violence in the area in years.

Witnesses said 1,000 police with clubs advanced on a crowd of about 4,000 people who gathered Monday night to listen to an outdoor concert on the other side of the wall. At least 50 people were arrested, the witnesses said.

The youths lobbed firecrackers, bottles and rocks at the police, who dragged people away, punching some in the face and stomach before pushing them into vans. The number of injured was unknown.

"Down with the wall! The wall must go!" the East German crowd chanted, and "We want (Mikhail) Gorbachev," the Soviet leader whose reforms are popular among East German youth but shunned by the government.

It was the most violent clash in three days of confrontations at the wall near the historic Brandenburg Gate, where East Germans had gathered to hear a series of rock concerts in West Berlin.

The clashes were the worst since October 7, 1977, when police broke up a crowd gathered in East Berlin's Alexanderplatz to hear a rock concert there. Four people died in the Alexanderplatz fighting, according to witnesses, but East German authorities never confirmed the number.

The demonstration was a rare public protest against the wall on the Eastern side.

Younger artists performing at the Aug. 15-16 event will include Wynton and Branford Marsalis, with each brother leading his own group, Dick Upson, a spokesman for the Rhode Island State Council on the Arts, told a news conference Monday.

Gillespie will bring an 18-piece big band to Newport as part of a year-long series of appearances he is making to celebrate his 70th birthday, on Oct. 21.

l'exas gas producers foresee positive signs

DALLAS (AP) - Dorchester Hugoton is among a host of Texas natural gas producers betting that the decline in drilling activity, stable oil prices and winter demand for the fuel finally will restore some vitality to the slumping domestic gas market

And if the federal government wants to help, that's fine too.

Dorchester, a Dallas-based partnership, saw an immediate improvement in its competitive position recently when the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission decontrolled some of its reserves in the Hugoton Field in Kansas.

Now, instead of getting only 59 cents per million Btu for its gas, Dorchester will be permitted to receive as much as $1.40 on the free or spot market.

"I think the recent actions that the FERC has taken are positive for the natural gas industry, not only in deregulating wellhead prices, but also in the deregulation of the transportation of natural gas," said Howard Wadsworth, general manager of Dorchester Hugoton.

The natural gas industry has been plagued in ecent years by low prices caused by a surplus in gas supplies.

Wellhead prices for Texas producers which climbed as high as $8 per 1,000 cubic feet in the early 1980s, sank as low as $1.30 last year. The effect: Some Texas producers shut down wells. Some analysts have projected that prices could climb this year to an average of $2 per 1,000 cubic Adding to the improved outlook for gas producers is this year's rally in oil prices.

Natural gas competes in price with fuel oil for many residential customers, and low oil prices gave the crude oil by-product a big competitive

Oil company officials say any price improvement for natural gas will be limited by the price of No. 6 fuel oil for a long time to come.

But despite the competitive pressure from other hydrocarbon fuels, industry officials expect natural gas to move back toward a better price balance with oil.

Based on a traditional industry formula of a unit of gas commanding about one-tenth the price of a crude climbs to $20 a barrel.

'Obviously, we were nowhere near there because of the large gas surplus," said Richard Sharples, vice president of hydrocarbon marketing for Maxus Energy Corp., formerly Diamond Sham-

Sharples said the natural gas industry is hoping to regain the price parity with oil, possibly as early as the winter heating season.

The gas industry, which requires a complex pipeline transportation system to deliver the fuel from producer to end user, has been turned on its head by the low prices and oversupply.

Gas purchasers have walked away from the higher-priced, traditional long-term contracts as cheaper gas became readily available through shorter term sales agreements in the spot market. Analysts now are saying that the decline in drilling activity brought about by the collapse in oil prices last year will squeeze available gas supplies and strengthen prices as early as this winter.

Industry observers say utility companies and industrial users must now give more thought to

"The hope is that we will move away from the pure spot market," Sharples said.

Future contracts between producer and user will be responsive to the market, he said.

"If the producer is willing to take the upside price risk, hopefully he will have a contract in which the buyer will recognize the commitments," Sharples said.

In 1986, producers not only had to contend with surplus gas supplies but also declining demand. Gas consumption was at 16 trillion cubic feet in 1986, down from 17.3 trillion in 1985. "The decline in demand came pretty heavily in the last half of the year in the electricity and industrial sectors," said James Newcomb, an industry analyst with Cambridge Research Associates.

Analysts say that if U.S. production stays at last year's level of 15.2 trillion cubic feet, a cold winter will bring a significant boost in demand. Newcomb said he expects gas consumption to climb at 16.4

Fur demand on upswing

EDITOR'S NOTE - Ever since the Hudson's Bay Co. was founded 300 years ago, Canada's Eskimos and Indians have been trapping furs to trade to the white man. It's a way of life that has been threatened by animal-rights groups and environmentalists. but today the demand for furs seems to be on the upswing again.

By JEFF BRADLEY Associated Press Writer

FORT RAE, Northwest Territories (AP) — A Dog Rib Indian trapper with a sack of 200 muskrat pelts made his way past the dry goods and stereos to a rear counter in the Hudson's Bay Co. store in this settlement on Great Slave Lake.

He doesn't need to say a word to the manager, who examines the furs and peels off $770 in cash.

The Indian smiles as he stuffs the bills into his jacket. Thanks to a resurgence in the fur coat industry from Toronto to Tokyo, it was the best price in years.

Near the store, two more Indians have brought in 330 muskrat pelts from traplines in the snowcovered bush of Canada's sprawling Northwest Territories.

'It only took us a week. We set 150 traps," says Leon Weyallon, 26, unloading snowmobiles and sleds outside his governmentsubsidized house.

His wife was watching a soap opera on color television while an older woman was scraping pelts and turning them inside out on stretch-boards for drying. A crucifix and photos of priests hang on the wall.

Despite satellite TV from Detroit and Catholicism brought by missionaries, most of the 1.500 Dog Ribs in this largest Indian town in the Territories still live close to the land, trading with Hudson's Bay as their ancestors did 300 years ago when the white man first came in search of furs.

The trade in beaver, fox, marten and other furs provides a livelihood for some 100,000 trappers across Canada, including many of the 27,000 Indians, Inuit (Eskimos) and half-caste Metis in the isolated communities of the Arctic North where other sources of income are scarce

Although fur prices are good this season, Indians below the tree line and Eskimos above it are increasingly worried about animal-rights and conservation groups campaigning in Europe and America to stop the killing of wildlife and alleged "inhumane" trapping.

It's a complaint few natives understand.

"I never met an Indian opposed to trapping," Says Chipewyan Chief Felix Lockhart of Snowdrift

The International Fund for Animal Welfare and similar groups urge governments to ban fur imports and shoppers to switch to synthetics and in 1983 the European Economic Community felt compelled to impose a ban on seal skins - used to make fur coats and for leather goods

The decision deprived Newfoundland sealers of one-third of their income and forced 1,500 Inuit hunters onto welfare. Within three years, annual income for the 800 Inuit of Pond Inlet on Baffin Island fell from $23,100 to $5,000 to $3,850

The Canadian government halted the killing of harp pups, but when it approved a hunt for adult seals off Newfoundland this spring, protests renewed.

Indian and Inuit hunters fear for their livelihoods and cultures.

"Our way of life has been going on for hundreds of years. Did they just discover that animals had rights?" asks Joe Rabesca, chief of the Dog Ribs, part of the 9,000member Dene Indian Nation.

We don't hunt for the fun of it," argues Jack Anawak, director of the Keewatin Inuit Association along Hudson Bay.
