Innocent man awaits Clements'

An Arkansas native sent to prison after wrongly confessing to a 1986 Canadian mobile home fire may soon be free now that the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles has requested his release.

The board voted Tuesday to seek a pardon for Claude Gene Grinder, 25, who was sent to prison in November after confessing to arson.

The board sent the request to the governor's office for final approval. But a spokesman for the governor's general counsel said this morning that the request, delayed by paperwork, has not yet been received.

Meanwhile, Hemphill County and Canadian law enforcement officials and 31st District Attorney Guy Hardin have reopened the investigation into who set the fire that gutted a mobile home near downtown Canadian in September 1986

ter nearly nine months of inactivity. Peter Wassdorf, deputy general counsel for Gov. Bill Clements' office, said this morning that although the office was to have received the board's recommendation Wednesday, the letter is not there yet.

Wassdorf said the staff attorneys will review Grinder's file and make their recommendation to the governor. But he could not say when a decision is ex-

"We cannot take action until we receive the file," Wassdorf said.

Hardin sought Grinder's pardon in late April after investigating the validity of statements made by former Canadian Police Chief John Bradshaw to a law enforcement class. Bradshaw, who was fired in May, reportedly told a class at Amarillo College that he knew Grinder "didn't do it" even after the man was sent to prison

Grinder was sent to the Ramsey II unit in Rosharon after pleading guilty in November. He later said he made his confession only because he had a weak alibi and because, since he was going to jail on a parole violation anyway, he'd get favorable treatment for confessing.

Today, Hardin said he suspected "the Canadian police knew all along that Grinder didn't do it."

"Too many people are not satisfied that he did it," Hardin said, adding that he based his case on Grinder's "confes-

"But we are now checking into the matter again," Hardin said. "Our investigator Michael Hartsock has been working on it. And we have been told an eyewitness saw another person set fire to the mobile home.'

But, the prosecutor admitted, he does not know how strong a case he can work up after nearly nine months

Robertson draws support

Presidential hopeful and television evangelist Pat Robertson began a four-state campaign tour Wednesday in Pampa by saying he'll be "running flat out" until the Iowa caucuses next spring.

The head of the Christian Broadcasting Network and founder of The 700 Club. a Christian news-talk show, told about 100 enthusiastic supporters in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn that he fully expects to have 3 million signatures from people pledging support for his campaign by the end of the summer

Robertson has said he will seek the Republican nomination for president if he has signatures from 3 million supporters by Sept. 17.

He said during a press conference Wednesday that the recent scandals involving other television evangelists, while hurting Virginia-based CBN financially, have not hurt contributions toward his 'exploratory campaign.

'I'm going to win, and that's the only thing I'm running for," he told reporters.

Enthusiasm for the prospective candidate did not appear to be dimmed by his failure to appear for a scheduled Pampa breakfast in February. That trip was canceled at the last minute due to inclement weather and mechanical problems with Robertson's private plane.

Robertson was greeted with a standing ovation Wednesday when introduced by Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy. He also drew applause twice when he spoke of support for Nicaraguan Contra rebels and ending communism.

"I think the United States of America must always come down on the side of freedom," Robertson said. "I do not believe that we can permit a country in our hemisphere to become a Soviet base just to the south of Texas.

As president, his long-range defense goal would be "elimination of communist tyranny in every nation on earth, including the Soviet Union and Cuba." he said.

During a speech peppered with Biblical references. Robertson called excessive government spending a "serious mistake" that caused the national debt to rise to $1 trillion by 1980, and dou-

"You folks in Texas gave us one of the world's greatest spenders — Lyndon Johnson," Robertson said. But, he added, interest on the current debt is more than LBJ's entire annual budget during Robertson bemoaned America's foreign trade deficit and said rampant drug use and the breakup of the family are symptoms of a nation moving "away from a system of control to a system that is out of control.

"We're the biggest debtor in the world, and if it keeps up, the standard of living in America is going to change drastically," he said. "Like the Bible says, 'The borrower is the servant of the lender,' and when you have foreigners dominating your currency, you become their servant. It's already happening because in Africa we have refused to exercise restraint.

Robertson said the solution lies not in raising taxes but in fiscal restraint. He called for a balanced budget amendment and a line-item veto.

Robertson shuns

A TV evangelist turned presidential candidate said Wednesday during a visit to Pampa that the American people have a right to know whom their president might be "bedding down in the White House.

Pat Robertson, head of the Christian Broadcasting Network and founder of the Christian news-talk show. The 700 Club, said during a press conference that the media acted 'appropriately' in reporting the relationship between Democratic hopeful Gary Hart and Florida model Donna Rice. Hart dropped out of the presidential race after news of the reported extramarital affair reached front pages across the country "I would hate to think that some KGB agent, or some girlfriend of a Mafia boss, was bedding down in the White House. so I believe the American people have a perfect right to ask things like that," Robertson

He referred to reports that U.S. Marine embassy guards in Moscow had traded secrets for the "favors of KGB swallows," and said, "I would think that the president of the United States should at least have moral standards as high as Marine embassy guards.

Robertson also was asked whether it's proper to question a presidential candidate about adultery. He responded that a candidate's current behavior, not the past, is relevant.

He quoted the late U.S. Sen. Sam Ervin as saying, " 'The sins of my youth, either the good Lord has forgiven or the statute of limitations has run.

Reports of the Hart-Rice tryst aided his own campaign, Robertson said, by getting news of the PTL (People That Love or Praise The Lord) ministry scandal off the front pages. Although he has blamed the PTL controversy for 500 layoffs at CBN, Robertson said it has not hurt his presidential campaign.

"Gary Hart's demise has been a great help," he said. The ministry is down financially, but the campaign isn't, which is hard to understand, but that's just the way it hap-

"The Bible says he that meddles in a controversy not his own is the equivalent of a man ears." Robertson said. "That's one dog I don't want anything to do with Robertson's frequent references to the media reflect a mixed relationship with the press. Campaign aide David McCartney said during Wednesday's stop that Robertson enjoys answering reporters' questions more than speaking engagements.

Canadian doctors pull back on planned Medicare boycott

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

CANADIAN — Medicare patients may still be treated at Hemphill County Hospital now that Canadian doctors have delayed the deadline on a threatened Medicare boycott.

The four physicians — Drs. Malouf Abraham, Teddy Darocha, Valerie Verbi and William Isaacs announced their delay Tuesday night at the Hemphill County Hospital Board meeting.

Hospital officials could not be reached this morning to respond to the doctors' decision.

The doctors had threatened to stop sending Medicare patients to the Canadian hospital on Monday, if Medicare scrutiny were not eased. The doctors object to perceived unfair treatment by the Texas Medical Foundation Peer Review Organization. which watches doctors' eligibility to treat Medicare patients.

But overwhelming public support of the doctors' fight and an apparent easing of TMF "pressure" have altered the doctors' plans, according to Abraham, the group's leader.

Abraham confirmed Wednesday that the doctors will postpone D-Day indefinitely because of progress in the doctors' campaign. The doctor said a key to the quartet's decision is progress on U.S. House Resolution 2116, which cosponsor Rep. Beau Boulter believes would protect doctors from TMF scrutiny and give them due process in sanction hearings. "We are encouraged by HR 2116," Abraham said Wednesday. "And we're encouraged by growing support from the Health Care Financing Associa-

HCFA officials recently assured the Canadian doctors that their proposed boycott would not endanger their Medicare licensing. The Medicare financing agency has also reached a compromise with the TMF, the American Medical Association and the American Association of Retired Persons that could grant doctors the right to an attorney and transcripts of sanction hearings "And the TMF has changed its tune a bit," Abraham said. "They are being much much more conciliatory. The latest letter from the TMF has assured us that we're not being singled out. But, Abraham stresses, the battle is not over as doctors continue to question TMF actions 'Actions speak louder than words," Abraham said. "And the bottom line is that doctors are being sanctioned if they do not cooperate." Abraham said he's wary of the "prepared statements" issued by TMF Executive Director Robert King. The TMF has already sanctioned 23 Texas doctors, including Dr. Claude Betty of Perryton. They are considering a sanction against Darocha, but no final decision has been reached.

Abraham said apparently the TMF has eased its threat against Darocha and other rural doctors because of the public outcry. 'But the first sign they're on our backs again, that's the time they'll wish they've never heard of Canadian, Texas," Abraham said, noting that if the "pressure" returns, the doctors will go ahead

County to discuss morgue

By PAUL PINKHAM Senior Staff Writer

Lefors Volunteer Fire Chief Eddie Joe Roberts is scheduled to report to Gray County commissioners at 9:30 a.m. Friday on the status of a proposed county morgue in Lefors.

Discussion about locating a morgue in Lefors first surfaced when commissioners signed a contract with Amarillo pathologist Ralph Erdmann, who agreed to do authopsies for the county at halfprice in exchange for a $100 monthly fee.

The agreement cut the cost of autopsies from $1,000 to $500 each.

During contract negotiations, Dr. Erdmann in formed commissioners he would be willing to travel to Gray County at no extra charge to perform autopsies if a place could be found for him to

Currently, members of the Lefors Volunteer Ambulance squad transport bodies to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo for autopsies, often having to wait for hours at county expense

Chief Roberts has suggested building a facility behind the Lefors Fire Station at 107 N. Main St. He said it could be built for less than $5,000

Lefors City Secretary Yvonne Pittman said City Council members discussed the proposal with City Attorney Mark Buzzard in closed session Monday night, but no decisions were reached on whether to OK the autopsy facility. Pittman said Thursday that a special council meeting has been scheduled June 22 to discuss the morgue proposal.

Buzzard has expressed legal reservations about the proposal.

County commissioners also plan to meet with Chief Adult Probation Officer Jeane Roper during Friday's meeting to discuss Roper's cramped quarters in the third-floor probation office.

Roper has been ordered by the state to hire two more probation officers, but she says she has no place to put them in her office. She has proposed moving the adult probation office to the fourth floor of the courthouse, but Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy has expressed fear of county liability because of the narrow staircase leading to the fourth floor.

Roper has also been looking at rental space in various Pampa office buildings. Kennedy said the county cannot pay for rented space until Jan. 1.

In other action Friday, commissioners plan to: consider a request from West Texas Equipment Co. of Amarillo to locate a parts pickup station on county property in Precinct 2;

■ consider spending more than $5,000 for repairs to a D-5 Caterpillar;

consider a request to waive objections to connecting Oilwell Operators Inc.'s Melton No. 4 well to salt water disposal service;

appoint three members to serve on the District 4 advisory committee for the Texas Panhandle Men-

Skellytown appoints mayor

Skellytown Mayor pro tem Neil McBroom officially took over the mayoral reins Tuesday, replacing the late Wesley Russell, who died May 16 In White Deer, City Council members appointed former Carson County sheriff's dispatcher Mary Hart as municipal judge, replacing the late Alvin Adams, who died May 29.

New Skellytown Mayor McBroom was sworn in Tuesday at the City Council's regular meeting. McBroom's "promotion" left a vacancy on the council that was filled by the appointment of former council member Bill Stevens. Councilman W.P. "Red" Harris was named mayor pro tem.

In other business, council members declared that city workers are not plumbers and may not do "private" sewer repairs. However, the city will lend its sewer cleaning machine for $10 per day plus a $10 deposit.

Council members also agreed to seek a Texas Department of Community Affairs - Panhandle Regional Planning Commission grant to help fund construction of a new city park. Southwestern Bell Telephone presented the city with a $100 donation that the council will use to help pay for the city park. The council also agreed to study weed control ordinances in other cities to see how Skellytown can update its weed ordinance.

WHITE DEER — White Deer city aldermen appointed Hart, a former dispatcher for Carson County, to replace Adams as municipal judge Monday at their regular meeting.

Hart, 53, retired in July after nine years with the · White Deer city officials also agreed on a new general liability coverage policy with White Deer insurance agent Grady Melton.

The new policy will provide the city with $500,000 in general liability coverage with a $250 deductible. The council will pay a premium of $16,595 annually. The insurance policy went into effect Wednesday. The city also agreed on a building insurance policy media's handling of the Gary Hart affair, he blasts the national press for what he perceives as an "unquestionable liberal bias" that consistently strives to undercut U.S. policy

"They (the national media) are a little embarrassed by America and for some reason (they support) a one-world rule based on a socialist model," Robertson said Wednesday.

He blamed the current Iran-Contra scandal in part on an unpatriotic media and said that he has at times caught reporters in "absolute, blatant falsehoods." "They weren't trying to give a straight story; they were trying to give a biased story," Robertson said. "Regretfully, there's a liberal bias in the press, and they are liberal."

The potential Republican presidential candidate said his comments don't for the most part apply to smaller newspapers and television stations across the country.

He responded to a question from a woman who complained that Pampa news reporters were "agnostics," by saying he has met "many fine people" in the media during his campaign stops across the country.

Clements and lawmaker: Judges should resign

 $AUSTIN\,(AP) - Two\,\, Texas\,\, Supreme$ Court justices who were officially rebuked this week should step down to renew the public's faith in the system, say Gov. Bill Clements and the state legislator who led an investigation of the court

"I am calling for their immediate resignation to attempt to restore some confidence to the state Supreme Court," said Sen. Frank Tejeda, D-San Antonio. "The two justices ... should recognize that they can no longer function effectively on the court.

If Justices C.L. Ray and William Kilgarlin won't resign, impeachment proceedings should be studied, Tejeda said Wednesday.

"Should they be impeached? I would not discount that at all. And certainly, that is a question for the Legislature to determine," he told a news conference.

Clements press secretary Reggie Bashur said Wednesday that the governor, too, believes the two justices should resign.

Clements "believes in integrity and credibility must be restored to the state judicial system," Bashur said. "The governor has called for such reform for a long time and supports the thrust of reforms proposed by Sen. Frank Tejeda.

As a state representative in 1986, Tejeda chaired the House Judicial Affairs Committee that investigated alleged improprieties by Ray and Kilgarlin.

Information brought out in that probe was mentioned Tuesday when the State Commission on Judicial Conduct issued a public reprimand of Ray for seven violations of ethical rules. The panel also issued a public admonishment of Kilgarlin on two points.

Although Kilgarlin's rebuke was less serious than Ray's, Tejeda said both sanctions - the commission's first against Supreme Court justices — are serious enough to warrant the judges leaving the bench.

"The difference is between bad and very bad, between worse and much worse. They're both bad. I think it's shameful, and I think that immediate action should be taken," Tejeda said.

Tejeda urged Chief Justice John L. Hill to join him in asking the two justices to step down.

Austin lawyer Randall "Buck" Wood, who represents both Ray and Kilgarlin, said Tejeda's charges were ridiculous and politically motivated.

"I've never seen too many politicians that weren't interested in some publicity. I believe this one is about as extreme an example as I've ever seen. I don't think he'll ever want to quit seeking publicity," Wood said.

Wood said if the violations were serious enough to get the judges off the bench, the commission had the power to do so. It didn't, and the case should end,

Tejeda said he has asked the Legisla tive Council for a written brief on im-

House Speaker Gib Lewis, in whose chamber impeachment proceedings would have to begin, said he hadn't considered that action. "I really have not even had a chance to think about that," Lewis said.

The justices' lawyer said he sees no grounds for impeachment.

"If the commission thought so, they would have sought removal," Wood

Tejeda also said he is asking Clements to include judicial reform in the June 22 special legislative session that will be convened to complete action on a state budget. He said he will ask the Travis County district attorney and the U.S. attorney to look into the cases for possible criminal wrongdoing, and he urged the judicial conduct commission to make public its files on Ray and Kilgarlin.

Miami school trustees put school Principal Jerry Boyd on extended sick leave Monday while he awaits results of medical tests.

Meanwhile, at other area schools, McLean High School counselor and science teacher Carl Dwyer has announced his retirement, and White Deer-Skellytown trustees awarded Vibra-Whirl of Panhandle a $38,500 bid to resurface the school

Miami Superintendent Allan Dinsmore reported Tuesday that Boyd, who is still not certain what ails him, has been granted sick leave with full pay and benefits through August.

"If he is not able to come back, a determination on his job will be made at that time," Dinsmore

Dinsmore said Boyd, 41, was transferred to Presbyterian Hospital in Dallas Tuesday as doctors still try to figure out what's wrong with him. The superintendent said today that Dallas doctors were scheduled to do exploratory surgery this

Last week, doctors in Palestine, where Boyd lived before moving to Miami in August, said there was a 75 percent chance that Boyd does not have cancer in one of his kidneys. Initial tests in May indicated an 80 percent chance the principal and girls' track coach had cancer.

"It's one of those situations we have to operate under," Dinsmore said Tuesday. "Legally, we could let Boyd go, but the board is trying to help any way they can.

Dinsmore admitted that if Boyd is unable to return for another school year, trustees will have a hard time looking for a principal before school starts in early Septembter.

In other Miami school business, trustees approved an amended cheerleader constitution. Dinsmore said the only differences are the number of junior high cheerleaders — from five to six and the cheerleader costume policy.

Dinsmore explained that in the past, cheerleaders bought their uniforms and handed them down to newcomers when they left the squad. Under the new policy, the cheerleaders will lease the uni forms for $20 for as long as they are on the squad. Trustees also:

accepted a bid from T.C. Craighead & Co. of Ardmore, Okla., for a non-producing oil lease:

appointed trustee Marcile Locke delegate and Kay Thompson alternate to the Texas Association of School Boards; and heard a report from Dinsmore that the school has collected 99.3 percent of its taxes.

* * * ${\tt McLEAN-High\ school\ counselor\ and\ science}$ teacher Carl Dwyer has announced his retirement after 29 years in education, 23 of those years at Trustees accepted his letter of resignation Monday at their regular meeting.

In other McLean business, school business manager Shirley Johnson reported that trustees are expected to consider allocating $2,000 from their next year's school fund to help pay computer services at McLean's Lovett Memorial Library.

The school is considering using the city librarywith it's computer system and its access to the Harrington Library Consortium and interlibrary loan system - as its school library. Library and city officials asked the school to pay $2,000 to help maintain the library's computer system.

Johnson said the school is expected to act on the library payment when it prepares its budget.

WHITE DEER — School trustees awarded a $38,500 bid to Vibra-Whirl of Panhandle to resurface the school track.

White Deer-Skellytown Superintendent Tom Harkey admitted that the Vibra-Whirl bid was $3,500 higher than the other bidder, Southwest Track Builders of Cedar Park.

But, Harkey said, the school used Vibra-Whirl the last time the track was resurfaced 14 years ago and was pleased with its longevity.

Vibra-Whirl tracks are known for their softness and heat resistance in hot weather. Trustees also wanted to work with a "local" firm from Panhandle, 14 miles away, instead of one from Cedar

"It will weather better, we believe," Harkey said.

Trustees also awarded a $21,000 parking lot paying bid to G.W. James of Pampa. They discussed six bids for painting light poles at White Deer and Skellytown stadiums, but will take no action until they check on the bidders' references.

Trustees also appointed Skellytown City Secretary Sherry Daves to fill a vacancy on the Carson County Appraisal District Board left by the death of Skellytown Mayor Wesley Russell.

INS forms roving amnesty team

TYLER (AP) — The Immigration and Naturalization Service has put an amnesty office on the road to help illegal aliens who live nowhere near the state's nine legalization centers apply for

The roving office is staffed by Oklahoma Citybased agents who were relatively free of application-processing chores at home, INS officials said

The crew began operating last week in Tulsa, Okla., and will be in Amarillo next week.

Under the new immigration reform law, illegal liens who have lived continuously in the United States since before January 1982 are eligible for amnesty. Aliens who complete their applications are issued temporary work permits.

The roving amnesty crew arrived in Tyler on Tuesday, and by the end of the office's first day of operations had granted temporary legal residence to more than 70 illegal immigrants.

That includes many farm workers who took the day off to apply, said Jim Ward, a supervisor on the amnesty assistance team from Oklahoma City.

"We had a good day in Tyler," Ward said. "Everyone who applied today walked out with

Clements meets Hobby and Lewis

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislators must find a quick answer to Texas' spending and taxing problems this summer, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby says.

"Whatever happens this summer has got to be quick and dirty. It's got to be something that can be easily explained, be easily administered," Hobby said Wednesday

"And therefore, I think it will have to be something temporary," Hobby added as he emerged from an hour-long private meeting with Gov. Bill Clements.

Lawmakers ended their 140day regular session on June 1 without enacting a state budget for the first time in 26 years. The House and Senate each approved spending bills, but those plans called for more new tax money that Clements said he would allow, and negotiations broke down days before the session ended.

Hobby, balancing on a crutch because of a racquetball injury, was asked about the possibility that the special session, which begins June 22, would adopt a two-year budget that would be fully funded the first year but not the second.

"It was an idea I was very interested in at one time. Perhaps something like that ends up happening," Hobby said. But he added, "It has some very bad effects - a further erosion of the state's credit rating and a substantial increase in they amount of taxes that will be necessary.

House Speaker Gib Lewis, who had met earlier in the day with Clements, mentioned expanding the sales tax base to include services not now taxed and creating a state lottery as ways of raising revenue.

"All of those things will doubtless be necessary," Hobby said.

Beginning 1 July, 1987, my practice will be decreased. I will not be available for emergencies and office hours will be limited markedly.

Patients should make other arrangements for continuity of care.

Have you hugged a friend today?

Back in the '70s, there was a musical out called Grease. While the film is probably not even among my Top 100 favorite movies — the title song was the best part — there's one scene that has stuck with me over the years.

The two main male characters - played by John Travolta and Jeff Conway — are getting ready for a challenge drag race. John (see, I liked the movie so well I can't even think of his character's name) goes over and asks his buddy Jeff to be his partner in the race.

Now, these are two cool dudes, y'know - tight jeans, leather jackets, slicked-back, greasy hair (note the movie's title). For them, this is a "tender" moment between them, kind of like sharing a comb in the locker room before they go out to bedazzle the broads.

Caught up in the emotion — I can't remember exactly, but I think they had had some disagreement and this was John's way of making up — the two suddenly reach out and hug each other. Then, remembering the cool dudes they are, they quickly break apart and take up their usual swaggering stances again. Their friends were watching and. y'know, they certainly didn't want anyone to think they were, well, y'know what.

That scene, while amusing me, also kind of hit me hard. It reminded me so much of the guys I was friends with back in the '60s. We had to be cool. calm and collected; if not being outright macho, at least we had to keep a reserved distance in our friendships. There's no way any of us would have hugged each other, unless one of us was so drunk that the other had to hold him up or drag him into the nearest car. We were friends, but we weren't supposed to make much of it. Sure, we had strong feelings for each other, a lot of shared memories, even fondness. But we were never supposed to mention it or otherwise indicate it except just by hanging out

Only girls would hug each other, and then only while giggling, laughing or crying - and especially at graduations, engagement announcements and weddings, and even then giggling, laughing and crying was generally part of the scene. We guys, in a really emotional moment among us, might perhaps permit a strong handshake.

male friends and buddies seems to be changing. Guys are now allowed to be friends and to express it without anyone - except maybe some of us oldsters or dwindling macho-types — thinking much about it.

I first noticed this change in the younger generation while I was in Lubbock in 1983 managing a store at one of the malls. A young co-worker, who was only 17, and I had become good friends. While we didn't "hang out" together, sometimes after work we would go out to eat or catch a movie.

Then, one night while I was at work, I received a telephone call informing me my mother had died. My friend drove me home so I could make arrangements to get up to Amarillo. As we stood beside his car, he suddenly reached over and just hugged me tight, traces of tears in his eyes.

I was a little taken aback at first - I mean, this guy was only 17, but he was six feet tall and was heavily into weightlifting. He was, to use the term from my days, a real cool dude. But he seemed to have no bother about hugging me, nor did his friend waiting in the car seemed to be disturbed at the situation.

I next noticed it a couple of summers ago. I had gone out to eat with a couple of guys from the radio station, one about my age and the other, again, only 17. The younger one ran into some of his friends from school that he hadn't seen much of during the summer, and they all just calmly shook hands and hugged each other briefly.

A couple of them were football players and the others, I later learned, were in baseball and track, so they definitely weren't - well, y'now.

I most recently noticed the change during the events surrounding graduation activities. I had gone down to my niece Senya's graduation in Crosbyton. After the ceremony, I had to go back into the high school building to let her know her parents and I were waiting by the car outside. I had to wind my way in among all the kids saying their congratulations and goodbyes. And there it was - I had expected the girls to be hugging each other and crying, but there were all these guys joining in the emotion of the event also.

When I graduated, not one of us guys would dare to have been caught with tears in our eyes, and definitely no arms around each other.

Then I returned to Pampa and there in Sunday's paper was a group of Pampa High grads standing in the middle of the fieldhouse, boys and girls, hugging and crying. What is going on with this generation?

A lot, I hope. I myself find it great to see such sharing of emotion and friendship and, yes, even love. I hope it continues growing and never dies

Can you imagine how much better off this world might be if we could see President Reagan, Margaret Thatcher and Gorbachev reaching out and hugging each other — and meaning it?

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Private controllers could meet demand

Both Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole and California's Democratic Sen. Alan Cranston have something of a handle on the problems afflicting the air traffic control system. Unfortunately, neither has gone beyond conventional wisdom in seeking solu-

The essential air traffic control situation is not difficult to grasp. The airlines themselves have been deregulated, leading not only to billions of dollars in savings to consumers, but to more traffic and more frequent changes in flight schedules in response to consumer demand

Meanwhile, the Federal Aviation Administration, which has responsibility both for safety regulation and for running the air traffic control system, has not yet fully recovered from the air traffic controllers' strike of 1981. A slow-moving, ponderous bureaucracy to begin with, the FAA has been barred from hiring experienced former strikers (1,200 fewer controllers are at work now than before the strike), while its funding is subject to the whim of Congress sporadically and inconsistently concerned about the federal deficit.

Among the results of this situation are frequent delays and bottlenecks and an alarming increase in reports of near-collisions and potential safety problems. Secretary Dole and Sen. Cranston have responded in the usual way, by calling for more money.

Secretary Dole wants the FAA to have at least the $3.25 billion requested by the administration, instead of maintaining spending at the current level of $2.9 billion as Congress seems inclined to do. The administration wants to hire 225 more controllers in the next year and 525 in the next 18 months.

Sen. Cranston would go farther. He wants $4.9 billion of the $5.56 surplus now languishing in the Airport and Airway Trust Fund (derived from ticket and fuel taxes already paid) released right away to pay for modernization and the hiring of 1,000 new air traffic con-

Cranston and Dole are addressing a genuine prob-lem, but there is a way to approach it that would yield better results in the short run and a much more efficient and safety-conscious air traffic control system in the long run. That is to privatize the air traffic control system along the lines suggested in a careful and thorough study paper published last November by Robert Poole Jr. of the Reason Foundation in Santa Monica,

Poole suggests the creation of a user-owned, private air traffic control company on the model of Aeronautical Radio Inc., which has provided communications and navigation services to airlines successfully since 1929. Under private management, airports would be able to charge premium rates at peak hours. thereby alleviating congestion and delays. The new company would be free to hire fired former controllers and unionize. The proposal would leave the FAA free to concentrate on setting and enforcing safety stan-

No government agency could alleviate peak-hour congestion and the controller shortage as quickly as a private company. And a private company would be able to respond more efficiently in the long run to the dynamics of the deregulated airline industry than could a government bureaucracy.

Debating solutions to AIDS

Reagan said the other night, a vaccine against AIDS will be found. Unfortunately, as he added, an effective vaccine is at least 10 years in the future. The question that perplexes scientists and politicians alike can be posed in a few words: What can we do in the meantime?

The president's moderate and compassionate recommendations make sense. He would require testing for the virus in certain areas of federal responsibility. He would make it mandatory for immigrants to be tested before entering the United States; he would require tests of all prisoners in federal institutions. Military recruits and persons in the Foreign Service already are subject to an AIDS test.

The president would encourage, but not require, blood tests for marriage licenses. Similarly he would urge that persons who visit drug abuse clinics be tested. Those who are treated for venereal diseases also would be asked to be checked for AIDS. He asks the states to require routine testing in their own penal institutions.

Beyond that, the president's approach calls for education, counseling and research. He makes the sensible point that without widespread testing, public health authorities have no way of determining the scope of the AIDS epidemic. Last month the federal Centers for Disease Control reported 35,500 confirmed AIDS cases in the United States, of whom 25,500 have died from the disease. Experts who met in Washington this week have estimated that

WASHINGTON — Eventually, as President | another 1 million to 1.5 million Americans are carrying the virus.

'What our citizens must know," the president said in his address to a fund-raising foundation, 'is that America faces a disease that is fatal and spreading. This calls for urgency, not panic. It calls for compassion, not blame. And it calls for understanding, not ignorance. It's also important that America not reject those who have the disease, but care for them with dignity and kind-

All these elements ought to be combined in an approach to this disquieting and dangerous situation. Congress is prepared to appropriate roughly $900 million in the next fiscal year for AIDS research. It probably is more money than can be spent effectively, but given the seriousness of the epidemic some waste and duplication can be condoned.

The president is right in not asking the states to institute mandatory tests as a prerequisite for a marriage license. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Rep. William E. Dannemeyer, R-Calif., are pushing in the other direction. Helms offered an amendment to the pending supplementary appropriations bill that would deny any part of a $30 million AIDS fund to states that failed to fall in line. The approach not only would violate principles of federalism; it also would waste resources. More than 95 percent of AIDS cases are found among homosexuals or drug addicts - classes not likely to apply for marriage licenses in any event.

Helms argues that premarital tests make sense if the tests succeed in preventing transmission of the AIDS virus to even a few unborn children. The president made the same point: "I would think that everyone getting married would want to be tested." Twenty-seven states now require premarital testing for syphilis and other venereal diseases. What's the difference?

One difference is that syphilis and gonorrhea can be treated effectively. No treatment for AIDS has been found. Another difference is that the Wasserman test is simple and inexpensive. The current blood tests for AIDS are complicated and costly. Public health authorities make a believable argument that money and effort can be better directed to classes at grea-

As recent debates in the Senate have made clear, the AIDS epidemic has provoked a clash between private rights and public health. Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., is pushing a bill that would make it a federal offense to discriminate in housing or employment against a person who has tested postively for the AIDS virus. His bill compliments a recent decision of the Supreme Court indicating that an AIDS victim is a handicapped person within the meaning of the feder-

Waxman's proposal is well-intentioned, but some distinction should be made between those who are merely carrying the virus and those who are actively infected. Not everything is yet known about transmission of the disease. Until we know more, my thought is that the health of many is more than the right of a few

A miracle in Bakker's car

Well, it could have happened. Deputy Sheriff Whitlock was perched behind

Kentucky Fried Chicken, bird-like himself, watching for speeders.

Deputy Sheriff Whitlock enjoyed his job, especially watching for speeders behind Kentucky Fried Chicken. He got to doze off occasionally, and Charlene, the girl behind the KFC counter, would bring him out a wing or a leg and a roll and some iced tea each day at lunch time.

Deputy Sheriff Whitlock had just wiped the grease from the chicken off his mouth when his radar detector nearly jumped out of his car.

He looked up just in time to see one of those fancy 380SL Mercedes convertables whisk past him as nothing more than a blur. He took one last gulp of tea and threw gravel all over the parking lot as he sped away in hot pursuit of the Mercedes

"I got me a good 'un, this time!" said the deputy sheriff. The radar showed the Mercedes traveling 65 in a 40-mph zone. Deputy Sheriff Whitlock rarely saw so bold a speeder

Most of his collars were little ol' ladies in big Buicks who couldn't see over the dashboard and occasionally ran red lights, or a Roto Rooter van making an illegal turn.

The deputy roared up behind the Mercedes and turned on his blinking blue lights.

The Mercedes pulled over. Deputy Sheriff Whitlock got out of his squad car and walked toward the Mercedes, ready for action with his ticket book in hand.

"May I see your driver's license, please?" he said to the man in the Mercedes.

The man, well-dressed and cooperative, handed the officer his license.

After a casual look at the license, the deputy suddenly did a double-take and looked back at the name he found there. "I can't believe it!" he said. "You're Jim Bakker, the television preacher. 'Yes, I am," said the Rev. Bakker, as he flashed his best boyish smile.

"I'm a big fan of yours, and my wife just loves the way Tammy dresses," Deputy Sheriff Whitlock went on.

"You must be one of our partners at the PTL," said the Rev. Bakker.

"Damn right," said the deputy, who then asked, "but why were you going so fast?"
"I'm late for my show," the Rev. Bakker answered.

"Well, I guess I can understand that," said the deputy. "The Lord's work can't wait. But you were weaving a little, too, I noticed.

"Say, what's in that bottle in the seat next to you?"

"Nothing but water." "Water? That don't look like no water bottle.

Can I see it?" The Rev. Bakker handed over the bottle. Deputy Sheriff Whitlock took out the cork and had himself a smell. "Whooo! Rev. Jim," he said, 'this ain't water. This is wine!

"Praise Jesus!" the Rev. Bakker shouted, "He's done it again!"

Mexico assembles goods for U.S. firms

By Robert Walters

NOGALES, Ariz. (NEA) - The nondescript industrial buildings, identified only by uninformative names such as "Kelomex" and "Permex," are crowded together in a bleak manufacturing complex in the adjacent community of Nogales,

That dreary facade is deceptive, however, because the buildings house a relatively new form of economic activity of considerable consequence to both the United States and Mexico.

Under Mexico's maquiladora program, low-wage, low-skill employees in those plants assemble chain saws, circuit boards, suitcases, medical equipment and a host of other items destined for sale in this country.

Nogales, Mexico, is only one center of maquiladora activity. Other Mexican cities with sizable cross-border production facilities include Ciudad Juarez, across the Rio Grande from El Paso, Texas; Tijuana, south of San Diego, Calif.; Matamoros, across the Rio Grande from Brownsville, Texas; and Mexicali, south of El Centro,

(Although Mexican law originally allowed the establishment of maquiladora plants only within a 121/2-milewide strip south of the U.S. border. they now can be sited almost anywhere in the country's interior.)

Under the maquiladora program, the Mexican government allows the duty-free importation of raw materials and components as well as the machinery and equipment required for the assembly of the unfinished goods. The completed products are shipped back across the border, with import and export tariffs paid only on the value added during processing in

The goods produced under the maquiladora program include Westing-house and RCA electronics, General Motors and Ford vehicle components, Mattel and Kenner toys and hundreds of other products sold by America's largest corporations. Mexico established the maquila-

dora program in 1965 to offset the loss of jobs caused by this country's termination of the bracero program, which allowed Mexicans engaged in seasonal farm work to legally cross

At the end of the first year, there were 12 maquiladora plants employing 3,000 workers. Today, there are more than 1,000 facilities providing jobs for 250,000 to 300,000 people.

The maquiladora program accounts for 11 percent of Mexico's employment, generates almost $1.5 billion in annual revenues and has become the second largest industry behind oil but ahead of tourism.

Maintaining assembly operations on the border means that a high proportion of components will continue to be produced here - something that is less likely to happen if the assembly plants are halfway around the world. In addition, studies of the border economy indicate that about half of the money paid in wages to Mexican maquiladora workers is spent on the U.S. side of the border.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says it is happy with allied support of its Persian Gulf policies, but the Senate's Republican leader says Western Europe and Japan should do more to protect oil shipments in the volatile region.

The dispute centers around U.S. plans to begin escorting Kuwaiti oil tankers, a move which has raised fears the United States may become embroiled in the Iran-Iraq war. Kuwait is an ally of Iraq.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger told a House committee Wednesday that even if its allies won't help, the United States can't back down

The "fundamental issue is leadership, the leadership of the free world to resist the forces of anarchy and tyranny," Weinberger told the Foreign Affairs Committee.

But Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., was critical of the position taken in Venice, Italy, at the summit of leaders of the seven industrial-

The leaders issued a communique Tuesday pledging diplomatic support for U.S. actions, but no military help. That was fine with President Reagan, who pronounced himself "delighted" with the communique. He neither sought, nor was offered, military help.

But Dole disagreed. "It's good rhetoric," he said in a speech on the Senate floor. But "it looks like we're going to get no real commitment from our allies to meet their responsibility .. to defend their own interests."

"The talk from our allies is 'let's be calm," Dola said. "But I must say, it's easy to be calm in the cozy capitals of Europe and Japan when Uncle Sam has his ships and planes patrolling the gulf, and his red-white-and-blue flag protecting the tankers bringing the oil that London and Paris and Tokyo desperate-Dole said the American people wonder why the allies aren't helping and can rightly ask, "What about our allies? Why aren't they there, standing beside us? Why aren't they sharing the burden, sharing the risks?' Capitol Hill fears about deepening U.S. involvement in the gulf have risen in the wake of last month's Iraqi attack on the Navy frigate USS Stark in which 37 U.S. seamen were killed.

The United States receives only about 6 percent of its oil from the Persian Gulf, Weinberger noted, while Japan gets 70 percent of its fuel from the region and U.S. allies in western Europe get about 30 percent.

But those figures are misleading, Weinberger argued, because they "ignore the fact that the world oil market is one market, and should Persian Gulf oil supplies be disrupted, oil prices will rise for everyone.

Besides, he added, the basic issue is leadership.

"If we, who so strongly advocate free access to ideas and markets, abrogate the responsibilities of leadership, who will take our place in the Persian Gulf and elsewhere around the world?" he

Strong quake rattles 16 states; damage is minor

By The Associated Press

An earthquake shook residents of 16 states from Kansas to South Carolina and parts of Canada. breaking windows, tumbling chimneys and forcing hundreds to flee swaying buildings up to 700 miles away.

The temblor, registering 5.0 on the Richter scale, triggered an alarm at a Minnesota nuclear plant and cut telephone service in three Illinois counties, but only minor damage and one minor injury were reported

"It felt like somebody with big shoes was walking overhead, but nobody lives overhead - we're on the fourth floor," said Richard Horwitz of Chicago. "Our parakeet was chattering away, and it just stopped."

The quake, at 6:49 p.m. CDT Wednesday, was centered near Lawrenceville, Ill., 55 miles north of Evansville, Ind., the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., said. Shaking was felt from 10 seconds to nearly a minute.

Police dispatcher David Hoffee in Olney, Ill., said there were reports of broken windows, fallen chimneys and a roof collapse at a funeral home.

Teamsters leaders and dissidents decry possible government move

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teamsters officials and dissidents alike are lashing out at a contemplated Justice Department suit to oust the union's leadership and put the 1.7 million-member union under the control of government-appointed trustees.

"Takeovers of unions are nothing new munists and fascists have been doing it for years,' the Teamsters said in a statement from union headquarters in Washington late Wednesday.

Federal law enforcement sources said Wednesday that the government has begun "very preliminary" work on preparing a civil suit to remove Teamsters President Jackie Presser and the union's other 20 executive board members on grounds that they are controlled by organized

The contemplated suit under anti-racketeering statutes — the first ever against an entire international union — would place control of the Teamsters in the hands of court-appointed trustees, said the sources, all speaking on the condition of anonymity.

"This is nothing but an obviously specious attempt to interfere with the free trade union movement," the Teamsters said. "Organized crime has never, does not today and never will control the international union.

Leaders of a small band of Teamster dissidents Teamsters for a Democratic Union, also criticized the notion of a government-imposed trusteeship.

"Would the government negotiate the contract currently being bargained with United Parcel Service covering 100,000 Teamsters and reflecting very strongly on the government's own Postal Service contract?" said Ken Paff, an organizer for the Detroit-based dissident group that has pushed unsuccessfully for direct rank-and-file election of the union's leaders.

The proposed civil suit, first disclosed in Wednesday's Los Angeles Times, is the latest in a series of government assaults dating back to the mid-1950s against leaders of what is the nation's largest purely collective-bargaining union.

Lawyer says Goetz was traumatized

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernhard Goetz's taped confession about shooting four men on a subway should not be believed because he was traumatized when he made it after nine days on the run, his attorney said in closing arguments.

Defense lawyer Barry Slotnick also told jurors Wednesday that his client acted without thinking when he shot the four on a subway car Dec. 22, 1984, and was fantasizing on the tape when he said shot an extra bullet into one of them.

Prosecutor Gregory Waples "came in here without a case; please let him walk out wa'hout a conviction," Slotnick said. Waples was giving his summation today.

Justice Stephen Crane said he would instruct the jury after that, and the 7-week-old trial could go to the panel late in the day.

Waples has said he would rely heavily on Goetz's videotaped confessions in an effort to convict him with his own words.

But Slotnick said Goetz was a "tired, sick, psychologically upset individual" when he surrendered to police in Concord, N.H. "After nine days of running," he said, "he was psychiatrically traumatized ... an individual in Goetz, a 39-year-old electronics technician, is charged with assault, attempted murder, reckless endangerment and weapons violations.

Reagan sees nuclear arms agreement opportunity

VENICE, Italy (AP) - President Reagan said today he sees an "increased opportunity" for a nuclear arms agreement this year as well as a third meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Reagan's opening statement embraced the economic discussions of the three-day summit, but his answer to one of the few questions on the subject had to be clarified immediately by a top

Answering a question, Reagan said most of his summit partners believe that the value of the American dollar should remain stable.

'Well," Reagan said, "frankly most of us believe the dollar should remain stable. It could be, within reason, some lowering of the dollar.'

Less than 15 minutes after Reagan ended his news conference, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan had not meant to suggest that he wanted a further decline in the dollar. "he wants stability in the dollar," the spokesman said.

When asked what the president had been speaking about, Fitzwater said, "he was referring to other forces" and did not elaborate.

The news conference was dominated by political issues — the Iran-Contra affiar, arms talks with the Soviets and developments in the Persian Gulf among them.

Asked about his own role in the Contra matter, Reagan took the view again that prohibitions against aiding the Nicaraguan rebels had not applied to him and said that, in any event, "I don't think the law was broken.'

He repeated that he had not solicited any funds to help the Contra rebels during the congressional cut off of aid. And Reagan repeated that he never gave anyone orders to assist the rebels during the cut off. Reagan fielded questions in a sunsplashed garden on the island of Guidecca, his home during a nine-day stay in Venice. He was asked whether the summit and a NATO ministers meeting beginning today would advance prospects for a superpower summit to conclude a new arms pact with the Soviet Union. His

"I can't deny that I believe there is an increased opportunity for a summit conference and an increased opportunity for an actual reduction of armaments, particularly of the nuclear

As for a possible third meeting with Gorbachev, the president said, "All I know is that we have made it plain that they (the Soviets) have the invitation (to visit the United States) and we are waiting for them."

Reagan noted that Secretary of State

George Shultz was in Iceland briefing the NATO foreign ministers on the elements of a possible arms agreement with the Soviets that would reduce the number of nuclear missiles in Europe. With his news conference, Reagan be-the outcome of the summit and promote the superpower agreement. Reagan, asked about tensions in the Persian Gulf, said he was "gratified completely by the response" of allies

despite congressional demands that other nations join the United States in providing security for Kuwaiti oil tankers. He noted specifically that Great Britain already has escorted shipping in the region.

Asked if he had requested his summit partners' military help in the gulf, Reagan said he had not.

As for the economic aspects of the summit, Reagan told reporters: "I said last year that the Tokyo summit was one of the most successful" but "Venice must be seen as going one

He said the summit had taken an important stand against trade protectionism and had moved to reduce agricultural subsidies.

Reagan also expressed no disappointment over reports that West German leader Helmut Kohl had refused Reagan's personal request to extradite Mohammed Ali Hamadi, the terrorist being held for his alleged part in the 1985 hijacking of a TWA jet and the slaying of an American sailor.

Reagan said the only remaining question is whether Hamadi is tried for his crimes in the United States or in West Germany. "No decisiion has been made on extradition," the president said. "he has never said outright to me no extradition.

Today's news conference and a meeting with Italian and American businessmen were the president's last scheduled appearances in Venice after a nine-day stay.

Reagan also will devote his Saturday radio address to the summit and the missiles, and then address the nation from the White House on Monday. That will be followed on Tuesday by a question-and-answer session with reporters based outside Washington.

He will fly to West Berlin on Friday for ceremonies celebrating the divided city's 750th anniversary, and then will return to Washington that night.

The three-day summit meeting addressed a multitude of issues but produced no breakthrough initiatives on any of them. The summit's final communique described the AIDS epidemic as "one of the biggest potential health problems in the world'.

Thatcher waves after voting.

Thatcher poised for historic third victory

LONDON (AP) - Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, the "Iron Lady" who has cru-saded to roll back socialism, was poised to win a historic third term as Britain voted today in a general election, polls showed

A Conservative victory, forecast by all the major polling agencies, would make the 61-year-old Mrs. Thatcher the first prime minister to triumph in three consecutive elections since the Earl of Liverpool did so 161 years ago, when less than 5 percent of Britons could vote

But the polls predicted a reduced parliamentary majority for Mrs. Thatcher's Conservative Party, and Neil Kinnock insisted his Labor Party would win.

Kinnock, who has pledged to close U.S. nuclear bases in Britain, pump up the economy and put millions back to work, declared that Thursday would be "the last day of Thatcherism.

Polls opened at 7 a.m. (2 a.m. EDT), with rain forecast for much of the country. They were to remain open until 10 p.m. (5 p.m. EDT), and substantial results were not expected before early Friday (Thursday night EDT). About 43.2 million people were eligible to vote. A Marplan poll of 1,663 voters published today in the Guardian newspaper projected a 40-seat parliamentary majority for Mrs. Thatcher, with Conservatives winning 42 percent of the vote against 35 percent for Labor and 21 percent for the centrist Social Democratic-Liberal Party Alliance. Several tiny parties or regional parties split the remainder.

A Market and Opinion Research International sounding published in today's London Times put the Tories ahead 106 seats in the 650-seat House of Commons, with 44 percent of the vote, compared to 32 percent for Labor and 22 percent for the Alliance.

Margin of error in both polls was 2.5 percent.

No poll during the monthlong campaign put the Tories below the 40-percent level that would give them reasonable assurance of a parliamentary majority. The Conservatives held a 138-seat majority before today's elections.

Labor pinned its hopes on the so-called marginals, the roughly one-sixth of the House of Commons seats which could go to either party.

"We have made substantial advances," Kinnock said in a TV interview. "We are in the lead in so many (marginals) and that will provide Labor with victory tomorrow.'

David Steel, leader of the Liberal wing of the Alliance, also claimed the polls were missing last-minute shifts in the marginals that would produce a stalemated Parliament and make the Alliance the power broker.

Mrs. Thatcher, who became Europe's first woman head of government when her party ousted Labor in 1979, shunned forecasts.

"Every vote counts," she told supporters on a helicopter tour of southeast England.

Mrs. Thatcher's campaign boasted a Britain transformed during her eight-year tenure, from an economic sluggard held back by militant unions and dinosaur industries to a prosperous business-based "property-owning democracy" creating the wealth that will ultimately provide jobs for the 10.9 percent unemployed.

Government declares state of emergency

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) The government on Wednesday declared a national state of emergency after a second day of street demonstrations to demand the ouster of the country's military leaders. Thousands of demonstrators beat pots and pans, honked automobile horns and yelled "get them out" in 10 hours of demonstrations Wednesday.

Presidential Press Secretary Jose Hernandez read a statement on national radio and television saying the government was suspending eight articles of the constitution covering civil liberties.

No official figures were available on the number arrested.

Pope praises Solidarity during speech before crowd in union activism hotbed

SZCZECIN, Poland (AP) — Pope John Paul II today praised the 1980 agreements that paved the way for Solidarity as the only independent labor union in the Soviet bloc, saying the reforms promoted the "dignity of man."

The Roman Catholic leader, on the fourth day of his pilgrimage to his homeland, spoke before a crowd of several hundred thousand people in this hotbed of Solidarity activism in the early 1980s

"In the 1980s, Szczecin was the site of momentous events, and momentous accords between the state authorities and representatives of the working class," John Paul told the crowd jammed into Jasne Blonia (Bright Meadows) Square. The pontiff spoke from a raised platform of rough-hewn planks evoking the sailing ships that once plied the nearby Baltic waters. Behind the altar loomed the statue of an eagle, symbol of Poland.

It is the first time that the pontiff has been allowed to travel to the Baltic Coast, where Solidarity took root in the huge shipyards in 1980. This is his third pilgrimage to Poland since he became pope in 1978. John Paul's comments followed by one day his defense of the farmers' branch of Solidarity, and a clash between Krakow police and union supporters surging forward in an effort to see the pontiff. Solidarity supporters said police detained 56 people after the protest. The Szczecin accords, signed on Aug. 30, 1980, guaranteed shipyard and industrial workers pay raises, better working conditions and the right to form their own free trade unions. The latter led to the creation of Solidarity.

Solidarity was registered with officials three months after the August 1980 agreements were reached. It was outlawed by Parliament in October 1982. The accords also contained reforms aimed at limiting censorship, easing political repression and increasing the church's access to the mass media in this country where 94 percent of the population is Catholic.

The government insists it continues to implement some parts of the accords, while Solidarity leaders allege there have been widespread violations. The crowd interrupted the pope several times with applause as he spoke of the rights of workers

But the pontiff in Szczecin also criticized his fellow Poles, saying they show a "lack of confidence in the sense of honest work, lack of viewing its objectives in the long run.'

Thousands of buildings in Szczecin, a prosperous port city on the Oder River, were draped with papal decorations, as candles burned in the windows throughout the night in anticipation of the pontiff's arrival.

Lightning launches four NASA rockets, knocks out satellite link

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is investigating a freak accident in which three small scientific rockets, on a pad and primed for liftoff, were launched accidentally by a lightning strike.

Ironically, the rockets were part of a lightning

The same storm knocked the nation's prime weather satellites out of service for several hours, depriving Americans of satellite images from space normally seen on television news.

All launch personnel had been ordered into the blockhouse minutes before the involuntary rocket launching Tuesday night at Wallops Island, Va., and no one was hurt. The total value of rockets and equipment destroyed was less than $50,000, NASA

"We have launched more than 13,000 rockets and this is the first occurrence we have had of this type," said John L. Parks Jr., range safety officer of NASA's Wallops Flight Facility, who is heading the investigation.

Experts say such an accident is unlikely in larger rockets, which have more extensive safe-andarm devices, or in ballistic missiles, which are stored underground.

The accident differed from the one on March 26 when a lightning flash found its way to the computer aboard a huge Atlas-Centaur rocket being launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla. An accident board determined that the jolt caused the computer to send the rocket off course and it had to be destroyed at a loss of $161 million for launcher and

The three vehicles Tuesday were a 16-foot-long Orion and two 4-foot-long rockets used to test radar and data acquisition before launches such as the Orion's. The Orion was poised to study nighttime thunderstorm effects in the ionosphere.

"When the lightning hit, it ignited both test rockets and the Orion vehicle," Parks said. A fourth rocket, which had not been fitted with ignition devices, was unaffected.

'The Orion essentially destroyed itself," Parks said. The rocket's position on the pad was nearly horizontal. It shot forward and landed in the ocean about 300 feet distant.

The test rockets, set at a 75 degree angle, apparently followed their normal trajectory - rising to 15,000 feet, then hitting the ocean 21/2 miles away, Parks said. There is no tracking for those

The Orion and the test rockets were on pads separated by 150 feet.

"We do not have a complete understanding of the mechanism which caused lightning to set them off." Parks said. He said the pads have a ground system that connect all launchers and that may have been the path.

The motors on small rockets use a direct electrical igniter, while larger rockets like ballistic missiles or the space shuttle booster incorporate a safe-and-arm device that mechanically and electronically blocks the flow of ignition.

State bar's convention under way

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) - The largest State Bar of Texas convention in 15 years gets under way today, with a hotly contested appearance by retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord scheduled for Friday.

More than 2,000 attorneys are expected for the 105th annual convention that will span three days and include speeches from Secord, a primary player in the Iran-Contra affair, and Nicaraguan Supreme Court Justice Mariano Barahona.

Several attorneys protested Secord's scheduled appearance this week with picket lines and press conferences, saying his involvement in the arms scandal makes him the wrong kind of person to address the convention.

Convention officials, however, said Secord's appearance would give delegates a chance to hear "from the horse's mouth" about what is going on in Washington.

Texas Supreme Court Justice William Kilgarlin is also scheduled to speak after the day-long Criminal Law Institute opens Thursday morning in Bayfront Plaza Convention Center.

He and another justice were publicly censured Tuesday for what the Texas Commission on Judicial Conduct called improper conduct, and Gov. Bill Clements has called for the two men two step down from their posts.

of Directors will hold its awards luncheon Thursday, and Secord's address to the general assembly is scheduled for 9 a.m. CDT Friday in the convention center's auditorium.

Gay, bisexual men sought for study

DALLAS (AP) - As part of a federal AIDS prevention project spanning six cities, the Dallas County Health Department will study the sexual habits of 1,000 gay and bisexual men to determine how to encourage safer sex practices.

All gay or bisexual men who inquire about being tested for antibodies to the acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus will be asked to participate in the study, said AIDS counselor Marc Lerro. "We're actively going to advertise in news publications we feel gay people read," Lerro said. The AIDS prevention project will compile antibody test results and questionnaire answers to determine the best way to encourage safer sex and learn whether infected people are those who refuse to change their sexual behavior.

"Right now, one of the startling things we have found in Dallas is about one of three men in the gay community appears to be infected with the virus. Lerro said.

To gay men, Lerro says, that means "every time you go into a bar, one out of every three men might as well glow in the dark.'

Men who agree to participate in the new study will be tested every six months for antibodies to the AIDS virus and asked to complete a 25-page questionnaire about their sexual practices and attitudes, Lerro said.

On or off the face, back-combed for volume or sleekly molded. waves are the most important element of today's newest hairstyles, according to the Helene Curtis Master Trainers, a team of salon owners and educators around the country.

"Waves are that added touch that makes a hair fashion statement the way a crinoline under a simple circle skirt makes a fashion statement," says team member Richard Calcasola of Long Island, N.Y.

While Calcasola sees waves moving off the face with maximum volume, Brooxie Summers of Memphis favors a flatter '30sinspired wave for spring. But, both agree, a professional perm is the key to creating the glamor-

"The perm is no longer just for fashion," says Summers. "It has become a necessity for a great number of women. This season, more than ever, it's needed to give the kind of well-defined wave the fashion trends call for. and also to lend versatility and control to the hair.

the length of the hair. 'Longer hair takes a looser, larger wave pattern," he says.

'On shorter cuts, the waves become curl, and even very curly curl. The idea is to create the feeling of romance and femininity yet stay in proportion to the length of the hair.'

Marvaldi reports that blonding is an important color trend, but a different tone of blonding than in the past.

"For several seasons, we've seen a very white blond, reminiscent of Marilyn Monroe," he says. "Now the trend is toward more yellow blonds that add a golden quality to the hair.'

Reflecting the move toward more golden hues is the resurgence of red tones, the stylists

"Color in general has moved away from soft, dimensional tones, particularly with the reds," says Paul Morey. "Bold fashions demand bold coloring. So we'll be seeing more all-over coloring that is less 'natural' looking. If highlighting is done at all, it is a one-shade highlighting that makes a real statement.

Finishing techniques have also moved away from the natural, according to Morey. "We are getting away from the messy hair look to a more polished feeling," he says. "It's time to brush up on blow-drying techniques and even dust off the electric rollers. Hair should definitely look like it has been styled, not just towel dried."

The most styled looks of all now may be the '60s looks that Geri Mataya of Pittsburgh sees on the

"The '60s influence can be seen in sleeker fashions, such as zippered body dresses, turtlenecks and miniskirts," she notes. "For the young and adventurous we'll be re-creating the feeling of the '60s beehive with volume at the crown and bangs wrapping across the face. Look for backcombing to make a comeback for fun this summer, but more seriously this fall.

It will take waves to be on the fashion wavelength for spring and summer, say members of the Helene Curtis Master Trainers group. Richard Calcasola creates a head full of versatile curls to go with the season's feminine styles:

Today's bride-to-be often lives on her own while building her career, so she doesn't need the same starter kit that helped her mother set up housekeeping. Indeed, household items - while undeniably useful - don't exactly make the bride feel pampered.

Fine lingerie is an indulgence. "I never buy lingerie, even though I like it," explains Nancy Lauritzen, 26, who will be a June bride in Canton, Ohio. "Lingerie would seem more like a real gift than getting things you have to

Although a trousseau is literally "a bride's outfit of clothing," the term generally connotes sensuous peignoirs and unabashedly frilly underwear to take on the honeymoon. And there's no doubt that lovely lingerie appeals to the groom as well. "I've been living with my boyfriend for a while," says 26year-old Amy Brunhuber, who plans a September wedding in Nantucket, Mass. "So when I get married, I'd love a whole new wardrobe of lingerie, something

Celtics find Boston Garden no bed of roses

By HOWARD ULMAN AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics must do what's never been done if they are to keep their NBA title. And they must do it against the league's

No club has overcome a 3-1 deficit in the championship series. The Los Angeles Lakers hold that advantage over the Celtics and would claim the crown by winning tonight's fifth game of the bestof-seven series.

"There's no question it's hard as the devil," Boston guard Dennis Johnson said. "Seeing as how we're playing L.A., it's probably three or four times as hard.'

The Celtics must beat Los Angeles three straight times, twice on the Lakers' home floor at the Inglewood Forum, to become the first repeat champion since Boston in 1968-69.

The Lakers never lost three straight games in compiling a 65-17 record this season or two in a row at home. They are 46-4 there, including a 9-0 playoff mark, and romped over the Celtics in the first two playoff games at the Forum. Boston is 4-16 in its last 20 road games.

"Sure, it could be done," Los Angeles forward

James Worthy said about Boston winning three consecutive games, "but I think we'll have a lot to do with that."

"I think it's possible," Lakers forward Mychal Thompson said.

Boston knows the feeling, having won a leaguehigh 16 titles. But things turned sour for the Celtics Tuesday night when they blew an eight-point lead in the final 3:20 and lost 107-106.

Teenager snares huge shark

By ALBERTO S. FRANCO Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - A teen-age fisherman may have set a state record with a 1,120-pound tiger shark he fought for two hours before reeling it in off the Galveston coast.

Larry Simmons Jr., 16, of Katy said he didn't realize how big the creature was until it had been brought aboard his father's fishing boat.

"I thought it was about 700 pounds," he said Tuesday in a telephone interview. "He (Simmons' father) was kind of scared when they were pulling it up because it could have taken one of the wire men (crewmen) in." The record for a tiger shark is 1 010 pounds set in 1983, said Clarence Beezley, a Texas Parks and Wildlife Department spokesman. He said the latest catch would have to be verified before it could be listed as a record.

Although a fisherman normally would stay in a chair secured to the boat's deck while trying to land the shark, Simmons was on his feet the entire time.

'All we had at the time was a harness, and it didn't work too well," Simmons said.

"I kept real heavy pressure on the fish, but the drag kept heating up and slipping," he said. "The no idea it was such a monster shark never did run that far maybe 100 yards — but it was so strong. It stayed close but wouldn't give up.

Simmons' father, Larry Sr., and crewman Ken Cox helped the youth land the shark Friday night about 30 miles off Galveston in the Gulf of Mexico. The catch earned Simmons first place in the 11th annual Shark and Sport Fishing Tournament at Galveston. "It could have been dangerous," the younger Simmons said "It started to come alive when we shot it, and we had to shoot it again.'

The female shark was 12 feet, 2 inches long and swollen to a girth of 88 inches, Simmons said. It was carrying 52 pups, he said. "That's a pretty good size," said Roy Drinnen, curator of fishes at Sea-Arama Marine World in Galveston. He added that tiger sharks, which are among the 16 listed man-eaters, average 8-12 feet in length and 600-800 pounds. "We knew we had a big one but couldn't get the double line on the reel," Simmons' father said. "The shark was right under the boat. Then, when we were all looking over the port side, the fish surfaced on the starboard. I turned around and freaked - had

Lefors playoff game postponed

AUSTIN - Officials with the University Interscholastic League announced today the postponement of the high school baseball tournament due to heavy rains that have fallen on the area this week.

The 1-A semi-final game between Lefors and Burton has been reset for Tuesday, June 16 at 1 p.m. at Burger Center in Austin.

Officials had discussed postponing the start of the tournament just 24 hours, but continuing rains have not allowed the wet fields to dry sufficiently.

UIL officials said game times would be the same as originally scheduled for today.

Astros clobber Padres 10-1

HOUSTON (AP) — Alan Ashby said all he wanted to do was get the ball in the air, but he got enough air to get the ball over the centerfield fence for a grand slam homer.

Ashby's grand slam broke up a scoreless tie in the fourth inning and helped power the Astros to a 10-1 rout of the San Diego Padres Wednesday night. He also contributed an RBI single.

A lot of college baseball teams that make it to Omaha and fall short of the championship have the "wait 'til next year" consolation. But, not Texas.

Even UT coach Cliff Gustafson said, "We've got a chance to be pretty bad next year."

Gustafson, arguably the best college coach in the country, will be devastated by graduation and the Major League draft.

In the '88 college baseball season, the Longhorns will lose three starting infielders, two starting outfielders and four pitchers who combined this year for 46 of the team's 61 victories.

Two of UT's signees also went high in the amateur draft last week and may not even attend the university.

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — According to Jack Nicklaus, there are two reasons he is making a now-rare appearance at the $600,000 Westchester Classic.

First of all, he had promised to play here. And second, he needs to play here.

"Let's face it. I haven't played enough golf to fill a thimble," Nicklaus said Wednesday as he prepared for today's scheduled first round of the Westchester and its $108,000 first prize.

Nicklaus, holder of a record 18 major professional titles, describes himself as "semi-retired," and he has played in only six previous tournaments this

"I need some competition before the (U.S.) Open" next week in San Francisco, Nicklaus said. He tapped his head.

"I need to get something in my head that says I can play some golf."

Nicklaus, who rarely plays a tournament the week preceeding one of golf's major championships, said he agreed to play this tournament in a trade-off involving the dates of his Memorial tournament in Dublin, Ohio.

He said he had offered to play in the tournament in suburban New York if Westchester would make a one-year switch of dates with the Memorial, which Nicklaus wanted in order to get away from a television conflict with the Indianapolis 500 auto

"I still get interested and excited about the majors. I think I'm still capable of winning in the majors," the 48-year-old Nicklaus said. "But I don't want to play every week."

Nicklaus has won this title twice.

This time he faces a 156-man field that is led by defending champion Bob Tway and Seve Ballesteros of Spain, Europe's leading player.

Other top contenders include Curtis Strange, Andy Bean, Roger Maltbie, Fred Couples, Scott Simpson and Don Pooley, winner of the Memorial in his last start.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by CBS.

San Antonio's Devereaux can't let big league dreams die

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Like many young baseball players, Mike Devereaux has dreams. Big-time dreams.

NATO foreign ministers discuss arms control

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) - NATO foreign ministers met today at the site of the most recent superpower summit for two days of talks expected to produce support for drastic cuts in nuclear missile arsenals in Europe.

"It is now within reach that we get an agreement on the elimination of all or most" of medium- and short-range nuclear missiles, NATO Secretary General Lord Carrington of Britain told reporters before the meeting.

President Reagan is set to announce next week that he will have his first nuclear arms control agreement with Moscow later in the year. Such an accord was first proposed by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev last April.

But in a speech at the meeting's opening session, Carrington warned the allies of the implications of a sweeping nuclear arms deal. He urged them to remain "alert to the continuing expansion and upgrading of (the Soviet Union's) conventional

"The Soviet military threat has not diminished. even if the Soviet voice has become softer and more peaceful," Carrington said.

Carrington said the 16 NATO ministers, including Secretary of State George P. Shultz, would also discuss ways to safeguard navigation in the Per-

The foreign ministers' meeting included a luncheon today at Hofdi House, site of last October's summit meeting between Reagan and Gorbachev. At that meeting, Reagan and Gorbachev agreed in principle to eliminate European-based superpower medium-range missiles — those with a range of 600 to 1,500 miles. Gorbachev followed up the offer two months ago with a proposal to eliminate shorter-range missiles, with a range of 300 to 600 miles. The United States says the Soviets have a huge advantage in such missiles. The United States has delayed a response on the

Davis' wife returns to stand

FORT WORTH (AP) — The key alibi witness in a multimillion-dollar wrongful death trial returns to the stand to explain why she never told a grand jury in 1976 that Cullen Davis was in bed with her the night a killer gunned down four people at the defendant's hilltop mansion.

Karen Master Davis, 38, once the defendant's mistress and now his wife, testified Wednesday she awakened at 12:40 that August night 11 years ago and Davis was in bed beside her at her suburban Fort Worth home.

She told the same story to an Amarillo jury in 1977 that acquitted Davis of killing his 12-year-old stepdaughter.

Then as now, the compelling question concerning her testimony was why she neglected to mention the critical awakening to a Fort Worth grand jury nine days after the shootings.

She said under oath then that she took two or three sleeping pills at 9 or 9:30 p.m. and did not awaken until Davis' brother Ken telephoned at 4 a.m. to say police were looking for Cullen in connection with the shootings. Prosecutors at the Amarillo criminal trial had tried to convince jurors that Karen, after her grand jury appearance, concocted the 12:40 scenario to help Davis avoid conviction and a possible death penalty. Mrs. Davis had also insisted before the 1976 grand jury that Davis told her on Aug. 4 he returned home the night of the shootings shortly before 11 p.m. That scenario conflicts with Davis contention now that he returned home around midnight after going to dinner and a movie alone. Under abbreviated cross-examination Wednesday, Karen said she "obviously" was mistaken about what Davis told her. She was to return to the stand today for more questioning.

The current civil case is a consolidation of wrongful death suits filed against Davis by his exwife Priscilla, 45, and her second husband, Jack Wilborn, 66.

Their daughter, Andrea, was the killer's first target. She was shot in a utility room and left to bleed to death on the basement floor of the $6 million mansion.

The gunman, dressed in black and wearing a woman's black wig, critically wounded Priscilla and a young mansion visitor, Gus "Bubba" Gavrel, and killed Priscilla's live-in boyfriend. Stan Farr, 30.

Gavrel's date that night, Beverly Bass, then 18, escaped unharmed

The three survivors testified previously that Davis was the man in black.

Karen Davis, the 13th defense witness, told the jury she awakened for no apparent reason that fateful night and noticed the time on a lighted digital clock.

At 12:40 a.m., two lay dead and two lay wounded at the mansion and the killer was chasing Beverly Bass across the darkened grounds.

The shootings occurred at the height of a bitter divorce suit between Cullen and Priscilla in which Priscilla allegedly was demanding a $50 million settlement. She later received $3,475,000.

Witness says deals helped attorneys AUSTIN (AP) — Waco attorney Dick Kettler says lawyers who made deals with McLennan County District Attorney Vic Feazell could charge higher fees for handling DWI and drug cases. Kettler has testified the past two days for the government in the bribery trial of the 35-year-old Waco prosecutor. Feazell, who is still district attorney, has denied the federal charges that he accepted bribes or illegal campaign contributions in exchange for his influence over criminal cases

The trial is in its third week in U.S. district court and is expected to last at least a week longer.

Kettler testified Wednesday he and his law partner, Don Hall, prospered after they made an agreement with Feazell to "handle" certain cases for one-third of the legal fee.

"Our business seemed to continue to increase," said Kettler.

Kettler said Wednesday he never actually saw Feazell receive any money but he and Hall talked frequently about amounts to give Feazell for help in certain cases

Under questioning, Kettler said he had a written agreement with the government to plead guilty to a felony charge of tax evasion in return for his testimony. He said his attorney was still negotiating with U.S. attorneys over the punishment. The jury heard an hour-long tape recording The district attorney did not know the recording Wednesday made in Kettler's office on on Sept. 12, 1986, of a conversation between him and Feazell. was being made. Most of the conversation concerned the grand jury investigation in Austin into Feazell's office.

Feds probe PTL; Bakkers return to Carolina

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) - The U.S. Justice Department, the Internal Revenue Service and the Postal Service have launched criminal investigations of the PTL television ministry, the Rev. Jerry Falwell says.

Investigators are looking at actions taken before the Rev. Jim Bakker resigned as leader of PTL and turned control over to Falwell in March, Falwell said Wednesday night after a church service and a

At one point in the tape, which was arranged by the FBI, Kettler told Feazell "I don't know of anything they can connect you and us. He was asked what he meant by that. "At that time I did not know they had any records to connect Don Hall and me making payments to Feazell," Kettler replied.

At another point in the tape, Feazell reminded Kettler that "you have the privilege."

Kettler said this meant "I did't have to divulge anything between me and my attorney. Kettler said when the agreement was made with Feazell the firm's standard fee for handling DWI or drug cases was $200 to $300 if the client wanted to plead guilty or accept a probated term. If there was a chance the DWI charge might be dismissed for lack of evidence or decreased to public intoxication, the fee would be $1,500 to $2,000, Kettler said. But after the agreement with Feazell, he said, the fee in such cases was increased to $3.000-$3.500

"Feazell's share was generally one-third," Kettler said. "Hall would tell me how much money to get out of the office safe, and I would give that amount to him. I did not ever see Hall give the money to Feazell," Kettler said.

Kettler said the arrangement ended in April 1985 when he heard there was an investigation into Feazell's operations.

The indictment against Feazell accuses him of taking $19,000 in bribes from a circle of Waco attorneys in exchange for dismissing charges against their clients or reducing their punishments. A 10count federal racketeering indictment also charges him with mail fraud.

closed-door meeting of the PTL board. "They have all advised us it was prior to our arrival, thank God," Falwell told reporters.

Meanwhile, Bakker, and his wife, Tammy Faye, returned to the Carolinas Wednesday night to claim belongings from the Tega Cay, S.C., mansion they left in January, saying they hope to return to television ministry soon.

More clashes in Seoul

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) - Riot police in blackvisored helmets battled students and other protesters armed with firebombs and iron bars here today as violent anti-government demonstrations continued.

A pitched battle continued until nightfall around Myundong Cathedral in the heart of the city, where several hundred students armed with iron and wooden staves set up barricades. The masked students hurled firebombs and rocks at thousands of riot police who surrounded the area and fired volley after volley of tear gas.

On several campuses in Seoul, large numbers of students held rallies and headed toward the cathedral, declaring they wanted to "rescue" those besieged there.

"Down with the military dictatorship!" screamed the demonstrators, almost 4,000 of whom were arrested during Wednesday's nationwide clashes.

Armored cars moved in to blast the students with multiple tear gas launchers as fighting surged around the cathedral, the headquarters of the Roman Catholic church in South Korea. The church is surrounded by skyscrapers and luxury hotels.

Inside the cathedral compound, the Rev. Kim Byung-do told The Associated Press the students there were determined to hold out. He said supporters were smuggling food and medical supplies into the building

The priest, terming the police action "intolerable," protested the firing of tear gas into the cathedral

Tens of thousands of protesters battled riot police in Seoul and at least 21 other cities Wednesday as opposition groups mounted demonstrations nationwide to protest the government's plans to continue its rule for seven more years.

Former congressman runs for president

By ANDREW MANGAN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Former Texas Congressman Ron Paul wants to be president so he can uproot the economic establishment of the United States.

He wants to shake out the subsidies, income taxes and monetary system and replant them as a wholly free market system.

Stopping just short of anarchism, Paul, a Libertarian, says he would abolish every governmental function that could be performed by the private sector. Just how he'd go about this, he doesn't say

"I would just do it," he said in an interview

Tariffs would fall. Entitlement programs would close. Gunboats would be called home. The gold standard would be reinstituted.

"I would abolish the federal reserve, create a sound money system, define the dollar — you deregulate everything and you get rid of all the bums, all the bureaucrats who are running the bureaus. You just close them down," said Paul, a conservative who quit the Republican Party earlier this year out of frustration.

His newly adopted party believes government should have nothing to do with how people behave, as long as they don't hurt one another.

If he does capture the Libertarian Party's presidential nomination for 1988, the physician from Lake Jackson, Texas, will try to form a broad coalition of Americans he thinks are fed up with the way Democrats and Republicans have been running the country.

There will be the tax people who feel they are being ripped off by the IRS, the hard money movement because they understand gold, private school people. pro-gun people. There are the people who are very scared of a nuclear holocaust, a whole host of people," Paul said.

As for campaign contributions, the 51-year-old Paul says he's "doing a lot better than Jack Kemp," a conservative Republican presidential candidate whose campaign fund is already $200,000 in debt.

"We have well over $100,000 in the bank and I think we'll be raising mil-

His only opponent within the party is 47-year-old Indian activist Russell Means, who first received national attention in 1973 as a leader in the 71day occupation of Wounded Knee, S.D.

Means went to prison for inciting a riot but was aquitted of charges that he aided and abetted a murder. The Ogalala Sioux Indian leader said recently it is natural for an Indian to embrace the Libertarian philosophy because it fits the Indian belief in personal freedom.

Paul views Means as token opposi-

Under a Paul administration, military activity would be scaled back, with no ships roaming the far seas, no bombers circling the globe, no submarines beneath the poles, and no soldiers in Korea, Europe or Central America.

Think of the foolishness we're doing in the Persian Gulf for the benefit of Europe and Japan and how they're sticking it to Texas," Paul said.

"The whole idea that a Texan is taxed to go over there and protect these routes while oil production is destroyed in Texas is something that would blow their minds if they ever realized what was happening," he said.

"Instead of those sitting ducks in the Persian Gulf, I'd be happy to have a navy and put it in the Gulf of Mexico to protect us against Castro," Paul said. 'What's wrong with the traditional American policy of neutrality?"

By lifting every tariff on U.S. imports and shutting down all foreign and domestic subsidies, Paul believes the marketplace would weed out inferior products while allowing the best produced items to be sold, no matter where they are made.

Smiling and confident, the four-term former congressman said he is convinced that Americans would rise to the challenge and win out in such a com-

"I'd get rid of the the income tax. It's only a new 20th century phenomenon in order to finance the welfare workers

"Let's say we did not police the world and we had no welfare. Would we need an income tax? Isn't it interesting that the income tax came about the time we changed our foreign policy and got a central bank and started fighting wars overseas? In Woodrow Wilson's day."

Paul says that once a Libertarian system was imposed there would no longer. be any unemployment and the economy would be growing like a wild beanstalk.

"You'd be begging for labor. Aliens would be a great service to us because you'd create millions and millions of extra jobs and everybody in Texas would have an alien working for him," he said laughing softly.

Paul introduced 32 bills in the House in 1983, the last of his four terms there, designed to change the face of American society, many of which would fit neatly into a Libertarian presidential

"A key principle of Libertarian belief is that everything that is done is done without coercion," said Paul. "Everything is voluntary. Individuals can't coerce and governments can't coerce.'

San Antonio's least-known museum preserves heritage of Texas Rangers

By NANCY PERDUE The San Antonio Light

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — It may be San Antonio's least-known museum.

Indeed, many visitors find the one-room museum only by accident, believing they are headed for the Witte Museum next door.

But whether visitors arrive by accident or intentionally, a fascinating look at Texas history awaits them at the Pioneer Old Texas Trail Drivers Texas Rangers Museum on Broadway.

They also find a friendly and fascinating museum guide, Glo Hensley Stuart. She clearly is proud of her Texas heritage and strives to share her enthusiasm and pride with visitors to the tiny museum

'The Rangers are a special breed of men,' she said. "I love to be able to tell people about the individual Rangers and their lifestyles. But, having known the men of the early Ranger days is what's the most exciting.'

Mrs. Stuart is secretary-treasurer of the Former Texas Rangers Association and her duties include operating the Ranger section of the museum, which features photographs thumb-tacked to bulletin boards, weapons carried by some of the most legendary Rangers and their badges and other memorabilia

The other section of the museum pays tribute to the pioneers and trail drivers who settled the state. Those people often were dependent on Texas Rangers to protect them from desperados.

Mrs. Stuart was eligible to join the association because her father, John Hensley, was a Texas Ranger for 15 years

As she conducts tours of the museum that includes more than 500 photographs and a few artifacts used by men in the agency organized in 1823 by Stephen F. Austin, she is quick to point out her roots by bragging a little about the badge her father wore when he served in the borderlands beginning in 1913 — back in the days when law enforcement officials had to contend with Mexican bandit Pancho Villa.

'I guess my pride and joy is my father's badge," Mrs. Stuart said, explaining Hensley also patrolled the massive King Ranch while he was a Ranger.

Mrs. Stuart, who has served as secretarytreasurer of the association for 11 years, said her main goal is to preserve the history of the oldest continuous law enforcement agency in the nation. But she also takes advantage of the situation to enjoy a little fun and adventure

Through her job, she met "The Lone Ranger" actor Clayton Moore, and Ranger Doug, who performs with the country band Riders in the Sky and who has hosted Western movies on the Nashville Network

"I gave Ranger Doug the badge he wears to portray the Ranger image," Mrs. Stuart said, explaining the badges are sold as souvenirs at the museum

She said she first met the entertainer "a couple of years ago" when Riders in the Sky performed in San Antonio. He visited the museum wanting to learn more about the famous Rangers and invited Mrs. Stuart to be his guest at his concert. "Since then we have kept in touch," she said.

"He sends me little notes and stuff. I had to send him another badge because he lost the first one." When Mrs. Stuart is not showing people the museum, she visits area schools and nursing homes to share the story of the Texas Rangers.

The museum is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Sundays from May through August, and from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. from September through April. Admission fees are $1 for adults and 25 cents for children.

Trans-Alaska pipeline: 800 miles long, now 10 years old

EDITOR'S NOTE — Crude oil first coursed through the trans-Alaska pipeline on June 20, 1977. On its way to tankers in Valdez, it flowed through mountain ranges and over rivers, streams and earthquake faults. This report takes a look at the unique engineering feat, a decade later.

By WARD SIMS

Associated Press Writer

PRUDHOE BAY, Alaska (AP) — From its conception, the trans-Alaska oil pipeline was destined to be a superlative among superlatives. The final weld on the 800-mile-long, 48-inch-wide steel tube on May 31, 1977, signaled the end of what was then the largest construction project ever undertaken by private industry.

"It was truly an accomplishment that everyone can take credit for, that no individual can take credit for," said Ben L. Odom, senior vice president for operations for ARCO Alaska Inc., an Atlantic Richfield Co. subsidiary.

The pipeline's northern end is anchored at Prudhoe Bay. Nearly 20 years ago, the largest oil field in North America was found beneath the featureless tundra of Alaska's arctic plain. Trapped in the porous sandstone of the Sadlerochit formation was the world's 18th-largest oil reservoir in terms of recoverable reserves.

From Prudhoe Bay, the pipeline snakes through three mountain ranges, 834 rivers and streams, tundra and forests and over three earthquake

It ends at a marine terminal at Valdez, the nation's northernmost ice-free port.

Northern Alaska was never meant for man's works. Temperatures ranging from 80 degrees below zero in winter to 95 above in summer tested the 70,000 men and women who labored on the $8billion line over its three-year construction period.

'We were conquering the unknown, trying to ercome one of the most hostile envi the world," said Charles F. O'Donnell, manager of the pipeline control center in Valdez.

During winter at Prudhoe, when the sun never climbs above the horizon for 56 days, fierce winds can drive the wind-chill factor to 115 below. Exposed flesh freezes in seconds.

The terrain also poses formidable challenges. About 75 percent of the pipeline route traverses permafrost, some of it as deep as 2,200 feet. Permafrost is rock or soil that, if undisturbed, generally remains frozen year after year.

"Our greatest problem was how to deal with permafrost, to keep the foundations of our buildings from sinking," said William Lorenz of Standard Alaska Production Co.

Under original plans, all but a few miles of the pipeline were to be buried. But permafrost forced the builders to elevate about half the line. Included were 554 crossings designed for animals.

To prevent settling because of permafrost thawing, most production and pipeline buildings were elevated on steel pilings driven into the frozen

The environment posed only part of the problem after Atlantic Richfield and Humble Oil & Refining Co. (later to become Exxon USA) discovered Prudhoe Bay's oil wealth on state-leased land in February 1968.

In coming years, proponents of the pipeline would face challenges in Congress and sometimes bitter opposition from environmentalists.

A year after the Prudhoe discovery, pipeline plans were announced. The estimated cost was $900 million.

Immediately, the project bogged down in legal challenges from environmentalists who feared the pipeline would destroy the wilderness and its fish

And by the time construction could get under way, cost estimates had ballooned to $4.5 billion.

Engineering changes were made to meet environmental concerns; others were mandated by the federal government.

"All of our studies indicate there has been damage to wildlife," says George M. Nelson, president of Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., which operates the pipeline. "It was in our interests to build it

White's firm to join Fort Worth lawyers

DALLAS (AP) - A Houstonbased law firm headed by former Gov. Mark White will merge with a Fort Worth law firm to create what officials of the firm say will be one of the 15 largest law firms

The merger, to be completed by Aug. 1, involves Houstonbased Reynolds, White, Allen & Cook and Fort Worth-based Shannon, Gracey, Ratliff & Miller. The new firm will become Reynolds, Shannon, Miller, Blinn, White & Cook.

Mike Swan, managing director of the Fort worth firm, said the common interest for both firms was association with the former governor, who lost his 1986 bid for re-election.

Swan said the Fort Worth firm was interested in talking with White when he left office and his firm was also interested in affiliating with the former governor.

"That mutual interest led us to talking to one another," Swan said The firm hopes to cash in on White's name and contacts, Swan said.

"We're convinced it (the merger) is a very positive step," Swan added. "We think his name will attract clients to the firm."
