Reagan claims Soviet threat

By W. DALE NELSON Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - President Reagan, denying that he came home empty-handed from the Venice summit, says a congressional "lapse of faith" is threatening progress that he and other world leaders made toward economic health.

'The truth is we came home from this summit with everything we had hoped to accomplish," the president said in an 18-minute nationally broadcast speech Monday night from the Oval Office.

"I was particularly gratified, for example, for the support our allies gave to our Persian Gulf policy; it was extended without hesitation," the president said, although the support was limited to diplomatic rather than military backing.

Reagan answered critics of his plan to protect oil tankers in the Persian Gulf with American warships by saying, "If we don't do the job, the Soviets will" and said U.S. national security would be jeopardized if the Kremlin becomes the guardian of gulf oil.

Reagan disputed reports that "nothing was really accomplished at the summit, and the United States in particular came home empty-handed" while saying he "felt among the other six summit leaders a sense of unease about America's commitment to a consistent, enforceable plan to reduce our de-

He said he had "a special message, one that is about our own economy, about actions that could jeopardize the kind of progress we made toward economic health last week in Venice as well as the prosperity that during the last six years all of us here in America have worked so hard to achieve.

The president recalled the passage two vears ago of the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction legislation which he supported, but added, "And what's happened to that restraint on wasteful domestic spending solemnly promised under Gramm-Rudman-Hollings? It vanished. And to pay for this lapse of faith you, the taxpayers, are going to be saddled with an approximately $100 billion bill over the next four years.

He renewed his plea for a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget and for congressional action to permit him to veto specific items in appropriation bills. He said he would spell out other budget reforms, which he called "an economic Bill

Following the speech, Democratic leaders in Congress attacked his fiscal policies and said his Persian Gulf plans are deceptive.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said the president's budget picture "was like his early explanation of the Iran-Contra misadventure. It was long on rhetoric, short on facts and left a misleading im-

High court outlaws families' testimony

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The fight against racial and class prejudice will be helped by a new Supreme Court ruling that bars evidence in capital punishment cases about the impact of a murder on the victim's family, civil rights groups say

But victims' rights groups are lamenting the ruling as "a slap in the face" to their cause.

A deeply divided court ruled Monday that the impact of a murder on the victim's family may not be considered when a convicted killer faces a possible death sentence. The 5-4 decision threw out the death sentence for a Maryland man convicted of brutally killing an elderly couple.

Richard Burr of the Legal Defense and Education Fund of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said the ruling shows the court "is really on guard against the intrusion of race and class prejudice" in capital punishment cases.

He said if the justices decided the case differently "it would have opened the door to bringing in race and class differences. The suffering of white victims' families would have been deemed more persuasive than suffering and death in black families,' Burr said. "We're very heartened.

Gene Patterson, representing a coalition of victims' rights groups, said the decision "is a slap in the face to all victims of violent crime. It's a major setback to our movement because in essence the ruling says the rights of convicted murderers take pre cedence over the rights of innocent victims.

Victims' rights organizations argued unsuccessfully that society has a vital stake in meting out the harshest penalties in retribution for the harm done to families of those killed. Most states permit judges and juries to weigh the emotional, financial and psychological impact of a crime on the victim and family members

The court said the jury that sentenced Maryland killer John Booth to die may have been inflamed by evidence that the victims were dearly loved by family members who said they were devastated by the murders.

Justice Lewis F. Powell, writ ing for the court, said, "One can understand the grief and anger of the family caused by the brutal murders in this case. But the formal presentation of this information by the state can serve no other purpose than to inflame the jury and divert it from deciding the case on the relevant evidence concerning the crime and the defendant.'

Booth was sentenced to die for robbing and killing Irvin Bronstein, 78, and his wife, Rose, 75, at their Baltimore home on May 18,

Each victim was stabbed in the chest 12 times and was bound and

At their regular meeting Monday, council members passed an ordinance levying a 1 percent city sales tax on the monthly fees telephone companies charge their customers. The sales tax rate would be the same as the city charges other goods and

City Manager Dean Looper said the tax, which takes effect Oct. 1, applies to the telephone companies, not telephone customers. City residents will not see any direct tax increase, Looper said, calming the fears of one taxpayer who worried about "winding up with taxes, taxes, taxes.

Looper said the telecommunications tax would be a source of revenue, "but not a big one." He added that other towns such as Perryton, Pampa and Shamrock have either passed a phone tax or are considering it. In a split vote, Pampa city officials approved the first reading of a telecommunications tax June 10 and are expected to pass the ordinance in a second reading next week.

In other action, city officials tabled a decision on trash for an industrial park south of town. Canadian Chamber of Commerce manager Diane Black says the city should offer trash pickup to the park, which is not within the city limits, because two of Canadian's biggest employers are located there. Black said the industrial park "is a special sicua-

Lefors faces tax increase

By LARRY HOLLIS News Editor

Residents of the Lefors Independent School District face another tax hike in the coming year due to a decrease of more than $24 million in property

But the question is how great an increase the trustees will consider in budget preparations for the 1987-1988 school year.

Business Manager Rodney Howard said he received initial information from the Gray County Appraisal District estimating total property values in the school district at approximately $98.1 million, a decrease of about $24.5 million from the past year.

Adressing trustees at a regular meeting Monday night, Howard said adjusted tax values, accounting for exemptions for those over 65 and other adjustments, would require an effective tax rate in the coming year of $1.0769 per $100 valuation to produce the same property tax revenue generated in the past year That would be an increase of 21.55 cents above the current actual tax rate of 86.14 cents, Howard

The effective tax rate is that needed to produce the same property tax revenue generated in the preceding year.

Howard said the GCAD had indicated "the biggest cut" resulting in the decreased property values comes out of the oil fields. "Probably 90 percent of our loss has come there," Howard said.

Trustee Virginia Archer, former Lefors ISD business manager, said, "We may have to cut some out of the budget" to keep the tax hike from having to be so high. School board members in the past have complained about the state mandating education reforms and yet not providing the funding to pay for precautions when Celanese Chemical Co. President Harry Bartley came to town to present a President's Safety Award Monday.

Just as the Dallas-based Bartley came to the electric microphone on the podium outside the PAMCEL building Monday afternoon, it started to rain heavily.

Undaunted, Bartley delayed a progress report on the Hoechst-Celanese merger and quickly presented a massive trophy to operator Ivan Richards and maintenance mechanic Bob Johnson. The trophy was presented to the plant to commemorate nearly two years — 1.166 million man-hours — of accident-free operation. Bartley said the Pampa plant, which hires 400 people, has not lost time due to accidents since August, 1985. Earlier that afternoon, he presented the Celanese workers filed into the PAMCEL Hall to get their gift stainless steel thermoses. When the rain subsided, the workers were herded out to hear Bartley discuss the recent merger between Celanese and American Hoechst, an American subsidiary of West German chemical conglomerate Hoechst AG.

Bartley had little progress to report, however, noting that Celanese is trying to sell two of its fiber plants to comply with Federal Trade Commission stipulations concerning the merger. When FTC approved the Celanese-Hoechst merger Feb. 20, one of its stipulations was that the new company divest certain polyester fiber assets. The Pampa Celanese plant, which makes petrochemicals, was not among the plants to be divested.

"If this doesn't happen, then we have to go back to the drawing board," Bartley told the

"The companies are working to put the two corporate staffs together," Bartley said, adding that the merger should be complete by the end of summer. 'It takes a couple of years to put this together," the president said. Bartley told the workers that there is a good business climate for both the company and the chemical industry. And this pleases

He admitted that because Celanese is "too busy putting the merger together," he could not predict whether there would be any major changes at the Pampa plant.

it, instead putting the financial burden back on the local districts. Trustees have noted the problem is compounded in the Panhandle area because of declining property values caused by the economic problems of troubled petroleum and agriculture

In another report, Howard discussed revenue and expenditures to date for the current school year

Howard said estimated revenues were $1.22 million: $1.13 million has been received to date, leaving a balance of about $131,300 yet to come in, including delinquent taxes. Estimated expenditures were $1.13 million, with $847,700 spent to date, he said.

With payrolls and estimated bills yet to come, Howard estimated there would be approximately $73,000 left over from estimated budget figures at the end of August. With other funds available. there should be close to $300,000 to begin the school year with, Howard estimated. In other matters, trustee Joyice Cotham, reprefacing the district, board members discussed expenditure items on a high school energy conservation project, electrical and other work to be in compliance with fire code standards, and repairs for the track The board opened bids for the energy conservation project, which includes replacing the steam heating system with a hot-water system, doing electrical wiring work for the heating system and lights, and installing a lowered ceiling in some areas. Part of the work will be paid from a Department of Energy grant. Jim Brown, project engineer from Austin, discussed the bids with the board members, saying he will have to check the bids and contractors to make certain they meet the DOE standards for getting the grant. The board took no action on the bids Monday night.

Cotham reported on progress toward repairs, rewiring and clean-up to meet fire code standards. Supt. Earl Ross said much of the work has been accomplished but agreed there's more yet to be done. The work is the result of a presentation made to the board by Fire Marshall Lanny Atchley and Volunteer Fire Department Chief Eddie Joe Roberts last month.

Trustees approved a bill of approximately $1,230 to an electrician for the work done to date on the wiring projects.

Cotham also brought up matters concerning the "poor condition" of the school's track, saying it has one lane separating from the others. Other problems include cracks, grass growing on the curbing and other deterioration, she said.

Trustee Karen Lake said, "If we don't do something about it, we're going to lose our track." Board President Arnold Story agreed, saying "we need to do something about it.

The board took no action on the repairs but expressed a general consensus to have the track inspected and receive estimates for repairs. In other business, trustees:

Hobby talks budget; treasurer sounds warning

"It may be that (in) this session of the Legislature, the best thing we're going to get is some temporary address to our problems. I'm sorry about that if that turns out the be the case," she said after a budget briefing conducted Monday by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

Another temporary solution, Ms. Richards said, "undoubtedly is going to result in a very long, hard look at the dedication of the leadership of the state of Texas to deal with the problems that

During his briefing for about 50 business leaders, Hobby urged that the state's fiscal crisis not be solved by slashing spending on human services or education programs.

"We cannot afford to balance our budget at the expense of human services and higher education." Hobby said. "Recent budget cuts have damaged our colleges and universities. So far, it is not irreparable, but another round of reductions might be.

Hobby said some business leaders discussed the possibility of a state income tax during the hour-long meeting, but he said he doubted that would be

The lieutenant governor said he expected the Legislature's answer this summer would be a temporary tax surcharge - on the sales tax and other levies - to get the state through the 1988-89 budget period.

"I doubt that there's going to be any major revision of the tax structure this summer. I think what we'll see is probably ... a surtax on the sales tax and all other taxes to get us by a difficult period," Hobby said.

"Surtaxes are kind of the traditional way of avoiding thinking through a problem," he said.

Hobby said he would proposed a "starting point" for budget negotiations in the special session beginning June 22 that would require a $6.7 billion tax increase for 1988-89.

"That is an enormous amount of money to raise," Hobby said. "Therefore, reductions most likely will be made in this starting point budget in the next few weeks.'

But during his news conference, Hobby declined to say where cuts might come. He said he considered the proposal totaling about $39.3 billion too low.

"I think this is below an acceptable middle ground," Hobby said. Hobby noted that lawmakers also failed in two special sessions last summer to permanently repair the state's tax-and-spending structure

"Very little has changed except that our circumstances are even more urgent," he said.

Ms. Richards said that between $1 billion and $1.5 billion in state notes need to be sold soon to provide a shot of cash when the new fiscal year begins Sept. 1, and to sell those notes lawmakers must enact a budget by Aug. 1.

Hobby said maintaining the current level of state services would require an additional $4.6 billion in new tax revenue, but he said that isn't enough.

"A current operating level budget is not a real option for several reasons,' Hobby said. He cited growing prison population, high unemployment rate, court-ordered improvements in mental health care, growing public school eenrollment and the need to restore higher educataion spending.

Among those attending the meeting was Secretary of State Jack Rains, a close ally of Gov. Bill Clements.

Jury to get wrongful death suit against Cullen Davis

FORT WORTH (AP) - A jury will be asked for perhaps the final time today to determine if millionaire defendant Cullen Davis was the man in black who gunned down four persons at the showplace Davis mansion on a hot summer night in

Two died, including a 12-year-old girl.

Attorneys were to swap closing arguments and then surrender Davis' financial fate to a jury of eight women and four men.

Jurors were expected to get the multimilliondollar wrongful death case by midafternoon. Davis, 53, an heir to a vast oil-related fortune, is accused in consolidated civil suits of killing two and wounding two in a bloody shooting spree 11 years ago at the glittery white mansion that he once called his "dream home."

Plainiffs are the defendant's ex-wife Priscilla, 45, and a former husband, Jack Wilborn, 66, whose daughter Andrea was the first victim of the bewigged gunman in black.

An Amarillo jury acquitted Davis in 1977 of murdering the child, but that verdict has no bearing on the current civil cases. It is not his life but his fortune that is now at Another civil case stemming from the August 1976 shootings is set for fall but attorneys say privately they expect that suit to be settled or dismissed depending on the outcome of this trial.

In his farewell appearance Monday, Davis insisted that nothing stressful occurred that hot August day in 1976 to trigger what a psycholigist called an "explosive blind rage."

An "expert" witness testified that the mansion gunman acted in just such a rage when Davis's 12-year-old stepdaughter died in the basement of the remote $12 million mansion.

Priscilla Davis and a young mansion visitor, Bubba Gavrel, were wounded and Priscilla's boyfriend, Stan Farr, 30, was killed.

Davis, appearing for the fifth time in six days. left the witness stand before noon Monday after friendly and hostile questioning about his activities and his state of mind on Aug. 2, 1976.

In response to a series of questions about his state of the mind at the time, including his reaction to an adverse ruling in bitter high stakes divorce suit with Priscilla, Davis declared:

"Nothing I did that day put me in a stress situation...that reduced my judgment in any way." In another area, Davis said he settled his suit with Bubba Gavrel out of court last year because it would have cost him twice as much to go to trial

TEXAS CITY, Texas (AP) - One man was severely burned and five others injured when a fire broke out at an Amoco Oil Co. facility, officials

Fernando Rodriguez, of Baytown, was airlifted to John Sealy Hospital on Monday afternoon, where he was treated for burns over 70 percent of his body, hospital officials said. Sixty percent of the burns were third degree, the most severe kind, hospital officials said

The men were all employees of Mega Construction Co. of Pasadena, which had been contracted to perform insulation work at the facility, said Ray Thompson, Amoco spokesman Calls to Mega Construction on Monday were not answered.

The fire broke out around 2 p.m., sending a puff of smoke skyward that could be seen for several blocks, Thompson said. Firefighters were able to douse the blaze a short time later, Thompson said. The cause of the fire was not known, he said.

Operations at the facility were not significantly affected by the blaze, and no other injuries were reported, Thompson said.

White, 49, was convicted Monday for a second time of capital murder for killing a Collin County grocery more than a decade ago.

the death penalty again. Testimony in the retrial ended at 11:15 a.m. Monday, as proceedings went into their second week in District Judge John Roach's court. The jury began deliberations about 3 p.m. and returned with a verdict about 5:30 sentenced to death for the May 11, 1974 murder of grocer Preston Broyles, 73.

However, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals overturned the conviction in March on grounds that White was not told that what he said to a court-appointed psychiatrist could be used against him.

Roach ruled during the trial that oral and written statements given by White could be admitted during the retrial, and the jury was shown a 1974 videotape in which White told a judge that he

Bill Schultz, assistant district attorney for Collin County, had told the jury that White bragged to his family about killing Broyles and the two teen-agers.

Koop: Many fear AIDS tests due to stigma of positive test

HOUSTON (AP) — The stigma attached to being infected with the AIDS virus is hindering widespread testing for the disease, says U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop.

"Until we get over that stigma, we're going to have controversies over who should be tested and who shouldn't be," Koop told a news conference Monday.

"But right now, because there is no cure and no vaccine and the stigma is so great, individuals are not anxious to have it known that they are positive and they certainly are not anxious to reveal to you their contacts, who might also be positive," Koop

Koop said many people fear a positive test implies their homosexuality or use of intravenous

"There's no doubt about the fact everybody would like to know the status nationwide of the infection of the population by the AIDS virus,' Koop said at a news conference. "At the moment, the knowledge the individual is carrying the virus of AIDS can be extremely detrimental to his life."

As an example, Koop cited a worst-case scenario of a person who could have undergone surgery in 1984 and required a great deal of blood during the surgery. He took a test for acquired immune deficiency syndrome when it became available a year later and the test showed positive. "If suddenly it were known that he was positive.

and he wasn't some very special person in the public eye or didn't have some very special way to prove his point, he could lose his job and with that the insurance that would pay for his final illness,' Koop said.

"He could lose his housing, his children or grandchildren might be asked to leave the school where they wanted to be. His druggist might not want them behind the medications in their pharmacy. The pastor of his church might not want him

Koop said that although no one person fit his scenario, he knew of cases where each of the elements of his story was true.

Land bank is unhappy about lower interest rate given troubled farmer

LUBBOCK (AP) — An attorney for the Federal Land Bank said he will appeal a bankruptcy judge's order that allows a Texas Panhandle couple to pay back their farm loan at 9.5 percent instead of the 10.5 percent the agency sought.

An order, entered Monday by bankruptcy judge John Akard, also scaled down the FmHA debt of Leland and Frances Smith of Dimmitt from $814,000 to $120,000

Stephen Sakonchick II, senior Federal Land Bank attorney, contacted Monday, predicted that the 9.5 percent rate would result in higher interest rates being passed on to future FLB customers in order to cover costs.

Sakonchick said he will appeal the Smith case and any others like it - to U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward.

The Smith case was the first filed in the Northern District of Texas under Chapter 12, which took effect in late November. Chapter 12 allows family farmers owing $1.5 million or less to reorganize for three years and protects creditors up to the fair market value of collateral. Sakonchick claimed that Chapter 12, now embraced by more than 100 farmers in the Northern District, could have a chilling effect on lenders wary of continuing business with a farmer on the verge of reorganization and reduced collateral

"Everybody is filing Chapter 12 to keep hanging worhipping in that congregation.'

Koop said people who personally are opposed to

"That's one of the things that keeps people from

on to what they have rather than liquidate and face reality," Sakonchick observed. Lubbock attorney Bruce Magness said most Texas farmers who face bankruptcy are victims of mismanaged federal farm policy, not inefficiency. Magness had asked, during the Smiths' bankruptcy hearing last month, that the interest rate on property be reduced to 8.5 percent. In an apparent compromise, the judge opted for 9.5 percent. Akard also granted Magness' request for a 30year amortization period, which Magness said would lower the Smiths' payments, and gave Sakonchick a "balloon" (balance due or refinance)

the loans against their 900-acre Castro County payment in 20 years. Those terms apply only to three notes totaling $136,500 the Smiths owe Westex Federal Land Bank in Dimmitt. The debt is not being reduced, but the terms must be renegotiated if the land is Akard's order also set out terms for paying the Smiths' other creditors.

District Chapter 12 trustee Walter O'Cheskey, a Lubbock financial consultant, said Akard's ruling is the first to deal with FLB interest rates in a contested plan confirmation.

In his view, the real issue is the type of rate, not the amount. The FLB usually offers variable, not fixed, interest rates, he noted.

New tax form cuts privacy to the nub

If at first you don't exceed, pry, pry again! Given the propensity of institutional government to poke into our lives, the foregoing could well serve as the official slogan of almost any division of city, county, state or federal government.

Congressional committees, Census Bureau, Internal Revenue Service, just to name a few. A host of agencies — let alone the myriad policing agencies — want more and more information about us for their warehouses of files, the ubiquitous raison d' etre of all established authority. Without ever-bulging files, how can governments continue to justify enlarging their armies of employees?

But the slogan is particularly appropriate for the IRS and will be more so in the future, unless the citizenry rises in righteous wrath when the new Form 1040 comes to our attention this month or next.

According to those who've had sneak previews of the form, it will make you list all your dependents by name, age and relationship, account for your children who don't live with you due to divorce, and provide Social Security numbers for all your offspring older than age 4. You'll have to calculate tax for children under 14 who have more than $1,000 in interest on unearned income.

Not mad yet? Form 1040 insists on knowing your spouse's IRA deduction, joint tax form or not, and wants to know your interest income even if it's taxexempt but can be included in calculating how much income Social Security recipients will be taxed on.
If you bought or borrowed on a house, you'll have to tell the IRS all about it. And if you want to take off business expenses, you'll have to satisfy the IRS with two pages of data instead of one.

Expectedly, the IRS will attempt to justify its desire to breach more widely our afready-thin privacy screen. It argues that it needs the information to do the ongress with respect to the Act of 1986, that the information will make paying taxes easier and fairer for us all, and that it is our patriotic duty to comply.

Some wags have suggested that the new forms are a perverse IRS retaliation for the just-now-abating furor over the new 1987 W-4 forms, a weeks-long trial of embarrassment for an agency accustomed to getting its way. When the new 1040s arrive, the IRS expects a modicum of unhappiness from taxpayers. But it will be able to withstand the onslaught unless the unhappiness reaches massive proportions and becomes outright resistance.

Then, and only then, will the agency agree to deletions of privacy-invading questions and revision of the

Legalize heroin for cancer

WASHINGTON — Hawaii's Sen. Daniel Inouye is tied up these days as co-chairman of the Iran-Contra hearings, but several thousand pitiful and helpless human beings would like to send him a message: Get on with those hearings, senator. You have other important work to do.

Inouye is a principal sponsor of a bill, S. 143, that he hopes will become the "Compassionate Pain Relief Act" of 1987. The bill would establish 'a temporary program under which parenteral (injectable)-diacetylmorphine will be made available through qualified pharmacies for the relief of intractable pain due to cancer."

Diacetylmorphine is heroin. For persons dying of inoperable cancer, many physicians believe that it is the one drug that would best relieve the agony their patients suffer.

The idea of making heroin legally available to such victims is an idea that may be hard to accept, but it is scarcely a novel idea. Physicians in Great Britain have been prescribing heroin for such patients for several years. It Inouye's bill sets forth certain findings that lay the groundwork for his proposal. Cancer afflicts one out of four Americans; it is the second leading cause of death. "In the progression of terminal cancer, a significant number of patients will experience levels of intense and intractable pain which cannot be effectively treated by presently available medication." The effect of such pain often leads to "a severe deterioration in the quality of life of the patient and heartbreak for the patient's family.

At present, any use of heroin — even therapeutic use - is prohibited by law, although extensive clinical research has demonstrated the remarkable painkilling properties of the drug. The reasons that are given for opposing Inouye's bill lack both substance and merit.

Opponents contend, for example, that if heroin is legally stocked in a hospital's pharmacy, attempts will be made to steal it. This is a possibility, of course, but it can be dealt with. A related objection is that a pharmacy's supply of heroin might be diverted in some fashion to someone other than the patient for whom it is prescribed. The National Committee on the Treatment of Intractable Pain makes the point that if all the heroin required under Inouye's bill were stolen or diverted - all of it - it would constitute only 2 to 4 percent of the heroin illegally on the street and available to addicts.

Another objection — and this seems especially callous - is that a cancer patient might unexpectedly survive and turn out to be addicted. The bill is intended for the relief only of those patients suffering cancer "with a high and predictable mortality." There would be time to worry about addiction if the terminally ill patient surprised his doctors.

When the senator's bill was under discussion in the 99th Congress, some physicians testified that heroin is no better than other drugs for the relief of agonizing pain. The response to this objection seems to be yes and no. When given by mouth, in single doses, heroin and morphine may work equally well, but when given by injection, heroin may be more effective in certain patients. As for Dilaudid, it carries side effects that terminally ill patients positively do not

A final group of objections, gleaned from last year's debate, stemmed from the hopeful notion that eventually a new non-addictive drug, equally as effective as heroin, will be developed Perhaps so, but for a patient suffering the kind of pain with which the bill is concerned, "eventually" is a poor substitute for "now."

The principal, unstated objection to the Inouye bill is that members of Congress do not want to be politically identified with the legalization of heroin under any circumstances. This imputes to members both a want of compassion and an excess of cowardice. Surely voters are capable of understanding the vast difference between promoting heroin and prescribing it.

Inouye's bill contains abundant provisions against abuse. The drug would be available only to a special class of patients; it could be dispensed only by written prescription from licensed physicians. The program would expire after five years if it turned out to be unworkable.

Isn't it worth a try? Three times in my life I have seen loved ones die of cancer, and two of them were in such pain they could neither weep or scream. Injections of heroin might have let them go in relative peace. It's not a great deal to

Ethanol has double benefits

Alcohol and gasoline do mix! Indeed, if your and hydrocarbon. car has 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent alcohol in the gas tank it runs better.

Then why don't we use less gasoline and more alcohol? That is a worthy question; deserves a deliberate answer.

There are two kinds of alcohol fuel — ethanol made from grain and methanol made from coal or natural gas. The latter, methanol, can be a problem to an automobile fuel system unless modified. No such problems have resulted from the use of ethanol. Every auto manufacturer in the world approves the use of 10 percent ethanol blends under their warrantee coverage.

Ethanol is both a fuel extender and an octane enhancer. It is a better fuel than gasoline. And, more significantly as far as our environment is concerned, it helps to "get the lead out."

When ethanol is used there is a significant reduction of pollution from carbon monoxide

Many cities where air pollution is reaching suffocation levels already have - or are contemplating — laws to require 100 percent use of ethanol blends

But you have heard that ethanol fuels clog filters and foul plugs.

On the contrary, it's mostly lead that fouls spark plugs and the use of ethanol fuels reduces

Filters get clogged mostly with varnish-like residue from the fuel system; ethanol helps clean out this fuel line "plaque. Then why isn't everybody using ethanol fuel now? That requires education and distribution. Eight years ago ethanol fuel was available nowhere. Today it has won an 8 percent share of the entire national market. In some states that share is as much as 20 or 30 percent. Ethanol production has increased from 20 million gallons to more than 750 million gallons

For our nation's total economy, fringe benefits resulting from the use of ethanol fuel are incalcuable. A Purdue University study in 1985 found that 240 million bushels of corn were used that year to make ethanol fuel.

That saved American taxpayers $623 million in government farm program costs. In subsequent years the government has spent millions less to buy and store surplus corn.

And there are valuable byproducts. When corn is used to make alcohol, only the starch is utilized. The rest of the grain - protein and edible oils — is diverted into food for people and feed for cattle.

Our nation is presently more dependent on foreign oil than we were at the time of the OPEC embargo. Enough ethanol and we won't be any-

Saving and loan made its own problems

By Robert Walters

DALLAS (NEA) - Much of the chatter these days among executives of Texas financial institutions concerns the flamboyant rise and fall of the Vernon Savings and Loan Association, alleged to have been systematically looted by its officers.

As its name suggests, Vernon was founded in Vernon, Texas, about 165 miles northwest of here. In 1982, the S&L was acquired by real estate financier Don R. Dixon, who moved its headquarters to Dallas' booming northern suburbs. According to a civil suit recently filed in U.S. District Court here by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., Dixon and six other Vernon executives "looted, dissipated and wasted" at least $140 million worth of the

S&L's asset The FSLIC suit charges that their extravagant expenses included $5.5 million for a fleet of five private planes (including two jets) and six pilots as well as $2 million for a California beach house used as a residence by Dixon and his family

Dixon also benefited from hundreds of thousands of dollars in S&L funds used to pay for his wedding, art collection, European travel, audio equipment, liquor, mobile telephones, maid service and groceries, the FSLIC alleges.

In addition, Dixon and his fellow executives paid themselves more than $22 million in dividends, $15 million in bonuses and millions of dollars in other compensation, based on "bogus profits" and illegal diversion of funds, charges the FSLIC.

Vernon's collapse in March is a conspicuous but hardly unique example of S&L failure at a time when almost 350 of the country's 3,200 S&Ls are losing money at a rate of $6 million a

In Texas, 113 of the state's 281 S&Ls - 40 percent - no longer can meet the FSLIC requirement of having a net worth equal to 3 percent of their liabilities. Moreover, 41 of the problem S&Ls may be beyond FSLIC guarantees deposits of up to $100,000 at federally insured S&Ls but it currently is guaranteeing accounts valued at more than $900 billion with an insurance fund that has dwindled to less than $1 billion. The Reagan administration has asked Congress to approve a five-year FSLIC recapitalization plan that would raise $15 billion in addition to $10 billion in expected ordinary income, providing the $25 billion the General Accounting Office says is needed to rescue troubled S&Ls.

"The refunding of FSLIC," notes the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, the industry's largest trade association, "does not involve taxpayer money. All of the money will come entirely from... savings institutions."
But it is precisely because the $15 billion would be produced through assessments on S&LS that the league has waged an expensive and extensive lobbying campaign to replace the administration's initiative with a more modest - and probably inadequate - two-year FSLIC recapitalization plan.

The industry argues that S&L insolvency is a regional phenomenon. That's generally true, but at least four sprawling regions are involved — the Southwest, Midwest, Northwest and Rockies.

Some S&Ls were innocent victims of volatile economy that saw crude oil, farm land and timber prices spiral wildly upward, then plunge precipitously.

But many, like Vernon, knowingly invested uncounted millions of depositors' dollars in high-risk real estate, energy and other ventures without seriously checking into the borrowers' ability to repay the loans.

Students clash with police in Seoul

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of students battled riot police with firebombs and rocks in Seoul and two other cities today, and mobs attacked at least three police stations in a southern city. Students armed with wooden and iron clubs surged out of Seoul universities as rifle squads fired volleys of tear gas and police in armored cars pelted the crowds with tear gas grenades.

Hundreds of onlookers booed the police whenever they fired tear gas.

"Down with the military dictatorship," students yelled. Police huddled behind their shields as bottle bombs exploded in bursts of blazing gasoline.

Some of the worst fighting today was reported from the southern city of Chinju, where thousands of people took to the streets. At least three police stations were attacked by roaming bands of students, and one was gutted with firebombs.

About 1,500 students armed with rocks and firebombs battled police firing tear gas around the train station in the central city of Chonan.

Seoul and other cities have been hit by a wave of anti-government protests since opposition groups began a drive last week to oust President Chun Doo-hwan's government and force democratic elections

The center of Seoul, site of the worst battles in recent days, was relatively quiet today. Hundreds of people chanting "Down with Chun Doo-hwan' demonstrated in front of the Roman Catholic Myongdong Cathedral, but there were no clashes.

Most of the clashes today broke out around university campuses when students attempted to march into the streets. Political protests are common on South Korean campuses, but the violence appeared mach more intense than usual

Students took over the streets in at least two outlying areas of Seoul, pushing police back and bringing traffic to a halt. Triumphant students carrying flags emblazoned with revolutionary slogans ran up and down streets, taunting police.

Police headed by special martial arts attack squads stormed into Sogang University in the capital as students hurled firebombs, bricks and rocks. Police were eventually forced to give way and hundreds of students surged into the streets to the applause of onlookers.

Several police were hit by firebombs and rocks and were seen being helped away. Students were also injured in the fighting, but officials said they had no figures. Associated Press photographer Kim Chon-kil, 58, suffered a broken arm when he was hit by a rock in fighting around Sogang University.

Police said today that nearly 7,000 people had been arrested during the past week of violent demonstrations.

That figure included more than 900 people arrested Monday in protests that swept dozens of campuses and prompted thousands of middle-class South Koreans to take their demands for democracy into the streets, police said today

Monday's protests occurred in nine cities and involved at least 90,000 people, police

The two countries' oil ministers are expected to meet soon to discuss reopening the oil pipeline, closed by Syria in April 1982, that runs from Iraq's Kirkuk oilfield to Banias on Syria's Mediterranean coast

If that line is reopened, Iraq's oil export level could be boosted by about 500,000 barrels a day to about 2.5 million barrels a day.

That would be a major economic boost for Baghdad, whose economy has been badly hit by the 61/2-year-old war with Iran and last year's slump in oil prices

Officials in Baghdad declined all comment on whether the pipeline will be reopened, but they stressed that Iraq is prepared to talk with Syria to improve relahunderstorms bring brief respite from heat wave

Violent thunderstorms gave the Midwest a break from heat that has killed cattle and closed offices that were hotter inside than out, and officials warn that unless the heat wave breaks, livestock and crops could take a beating.

The East, where heat closed schools and felled soldiers, could expect cooler temperatures today thanks to a weather system over the Great Lakes that will "help turn on Mother Nature's air conditioner for a little bit," said Dan McCarthy of the National Weather Ser-

The Midwest, however, will be back in the oven after Monday's respite, and the mercury should be in the 90s to 100 in 'the main heartland sections of the United States," said McCarthy in a telephone interview from Kansas City, Mo.

The Midwest and West paid for Monday's relief as wind-driven sand and dust closed a Nevada interstate, heavy rain caused flooding in Texas, and storms spun off winds up to 67 mph and hail as large as golf balls.

It was already 89 degrees before dawn today in Phoenix, Ariz.

Record highs were set Monday in at least eight cities in the Midwest and East, including 100 degrees in Springfield, Ill., that broke the 1894 mark by 3. and 89 in International Falls, Mont.

"It feels like 100," Ed Wainielowicz said in New York City, where the 94degree reading was two short of a re-cord. "It feels like an oven with the door

In northern Iowa, the National By-Products Inc. rendering operation in Belmond got about 250 calls to pick up dead livestock, said a company official.

Garren Benson, extension agronomist at Iowa State University, said a short heat spell won't be a problem, although crops and livestock are beginning to show signs of difficulty.

"Certainly when you have wilting of plants, which we're seeing, it's slowing the growth of the plant," Benson said.

"When it gets so hot, the plant simply can't pump enough moisture through

Agriculture officials in Illinois and Michigan expressed similar concerns.

At Fort Myer, Va., several members of a military honor guard collapsed from the heat during a retirement ceremony for Marine Commandant Gen. P.X. Kelley and Gen. John A. Wickham, the Army chief of staff.

In Detroit, it was 88 degrees, down from 93 Sunday, but about 2,500 state workers were sent home when an air conditioner broke, pushing temperatures inside an office building above 95, said spokeswoman Ellen Jones.

Detroit's Henry Ford Hospital set up a 24-hour "Cool-It Line" to describe symptoms of heat illnesses that range from muscle fatigue to heatstroke.

Schools in the Baltimore area closed early because of the heat. Hundreds of people suffered heat ailments, none serious, but so many that fire trucks were used to transport some to hospitals, offi-

U.S. productivity gains, wage hikes below foreign producers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor costs of U.S. manufacturers plummeted nearly 22 percent last year when compared with those of major industrial foreign competitors, largely due to the declining dollar, new government data shows.

But even minus the effects of the devalued dollar, the United States outpaced all of its nine major competitors in the international market in both improving manufacturing productivity and keeping a lid on wages.

The 3.5 percent increase in U.S. manufacturing efficiency in 1986 was more than twice the average improvement of major foreign producers, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said in a report Monday comparing productivity and labor cost trends of 10

It was the first time in the 37 years that the bureau has been making international comparisons that U.S. manufacturing productivity improvements outpaced those of all nine major foreign competitors.

Because productivity improvements are the ultimate source for increases in "real" wages after inflation and a rising standard of living, declining U.S. gains in the 1970s averaging one-half to onethird the increases of Japan and Western Europe became a source of major concern.

"There isn't a single statistic that alone measures a country's competitive posture, but if there was one, growth in productivity would come the closest," Robert Ortner, undersecretary of commerce, said Monday.

Although less than the 4.5 percent productivity increase of 1985, the improved efficiency of U.S. manufacturers in churning out goods last year outpaced gains of 2.8 percent for Japan, 2.9 percent for Great Britain and 1.9 percent of West Germany and France.

U.S. manufacturers increased hourly wages and benefits only 2.9 percent, the lowest of any of the 10 major industrial powers, with labor costs for each item of goods produced in 1986 down by an average

In contrast, hourly wages and unit labor costs measured in local currencies rose by 3.5 percent and 0.7 percent, respectively, in Japan; 8.1 percent and 5 percent in Great Britain; 5.1 percent and 3.1 percent in West Germany, and 4.6 percent and 2.6 percent in France.

But measured in U.S. dollar, which fell sharply against major currencies, labor costs last year skyrocketed nearly 43 percent in Japan, 40 percent in West Germany, 33 percent in France and 19 percent in Great Britain.

'The exchange rate, not productivity, is what is determining our competitiveness," said Gordon Richards, an economist for the National Association of Manufacturers.

"The rising dollar really creamed U.S. manufacturing," said Frank Levy, an economist at the University of America. "Now it's turning around, and not a moment too soon. But there's a lot of inertia and these things don't happen in three minutes.'

Peace report highlights convention opening

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A "peace report" at the Southern Baptist Convention's 130th annual meeting may wind up increasing the tension among factions that have been feuding for 25 years, observers say.

With about 25,000 delegates attending the three-day convention of the nation's largest Protestant denomination, items on the agenda included election of a president and consideration of recommendations of a "peace committee."

The Rev. Adrian Rogers, from Memphis, Tenn., was expected to be nominated for a second, one-year term. The Rev. Richard Jackson, of Phoenix, Ariz., considered a moderate, also announced he would accept a

The peace committee, headed by the Rev.

Charles Fuller of Roanoke, Va., is trying to bring together the two sides. Last year the delegates rejected the committee's report.

The peace committee was formed two years ago to help resolve the dispute.

"And that," Reagan said, "will jeopardize our own national security as well as our allies.'

The Soviets already had volunteered to tote oil from Kuwait before the White House came up with the idea of putting the U.S. flag and American captains aboard 11 Kuwaiti tankers — and having the Navy see them through the gulf.

Keagan warns of Soviet gulf intrusion WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan warned Congress that if the United States doesn't defend shipping in the Persian Gulf, "the Soviets will," and he sent lawmakers a classified plan to keep the oil lanes open.

"Our role in the gulf is vital," the president said Monday night in a nationally broadcast address from the Oval Office. "It is to protect our interests and to help our friends in the region protect theirs. Our immediate task in the gulf is clear — and should not be exaggerated."

White House National Security Adviser Frank C. Carlucci spelled out the administration policy in more detail in a subsequent address.

"We cannot afford to let hostile powers, either the Soviets or (Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini) gain a chokehold on so central a region," Carlucci told the National Association of Arab Americans.

Neither Reagan nor Carlucci made public details of a plan the administration sent to Capitol Hill late Monday describing plans to provide U.S. Navy protection to 11 Kuwaiti oil tankers which are being allowed to fly the Stars and Stripes.

JOINT PROBLEM AND MUSCLE PAIN

If you've developed symptoms that make you think you have arthritis, it would be wise to have an examination to see if the muscles in the affected area are out of balance

Muscles help keep a joint stable and assist it through its normal range of motion. But if the muscles on one sidof the joint are weak, this puts a strain on the joint. It may also cause arthritic-like symptoms

The doctor of chiropractic will test the muscles to determine their balance and strength. He will also evaluate nerve patterns and may take an x-ray to study the joint structure involved. Perhaps some laboratory procedures will also be needed.

If the problem is in the muscles around the joint, treatment can be given to strengthen and return them to proper balance. Once this is achieved, the arthritic-like pain and discomfort may be greatly relieved or

Non-profit groups find fund raising is more difficult

DALLAS (AP) — Hard economic times, new tax laws and changing corporate ownership have combined to dry up the flow of money to charities in Texas, officials say.

Some non-profit groups in Texas are delaying or cutting services, while others wait in hopes they can wait out the setback, officials add

At the Center for Non-Profit Management i. Dallas, almost 40 percent of all charitable groups seeking the center's help need assistance in raising money, said Hedy Helsell, the center's executive director.

"The competition for the philanthropic dollar is getting tighter all the time," she said.

The increased competition for charitable giving has taken its toll on almost every Dallas non-profit group

The Dallas Ballet sent costumed dancers into the streets this year to raise money. The dancers managed to raise enough cash to keep the company afloat, but the organization is still $500,000 in debt.

At the beginning of this month, the city's public television station was $342,000 short of its June 30 fund-raising goal of $11.2 million, and the public radio outlet was $104,000 behind its $1 million

The Dallas Symphony, which ended its annual fund drive May 31, fell $125,000 short of its $1.5 million goal, said Dominick Ietto, development

The downturn in the state's economy has diminished corporate giving, leaving non-profit organizations without a source of giving that had been among the most dependable in more prosperous

At Arco Oil and Gas Co., contributions declined 50 percent in 1986 and another 50 percent in 1987. said Arco spokesman Rick Ostler. At the Dallas Bankers Association, annual contributions were slashed by $500,000, said Roy May, the group's executive director.

Corporate givers say some charities have been eliminated from contribution lists; other groups have received substantially smaller checks this

Mergers and acquisitions also worry charitable groups, which fear the merger will result in two donations being reduced to one or that corporate combinations will result in layoffs, hurting the United Way and other such agencies that depend heavily on payroll deductions.

The judge said Herring, 41, a city electrical inrooster attacked him and left two deep wounds in Opening arguments in the trial had been scheduled to begin today.

Garrison said he did not know how Herring was attacked. News reporters were unable to contact Herring because of a gag order issued that prohibits people involved in the trial from talking to the news media. The juror's wife told one reporter that the bird had spurred her husband while he was feeding chickens in the yard about 6 a.m. Monday. McFadden, 39, is accused in the May 1986 slaying of Suzanne Harrison, 18, a Hawkins High School cheerleader. The trial was moved to Belton on a change of venue from Upshur County. Garrison said he learned of Herring's injury about noon Monday and had three options.

The first was to dismiss Herring and replace him with the alternate juror selected last week. However. Garrison said that would not have left an alternate should another juror be unable to continue with the trial. That could have resulted in a mistrial, he said

The second option was to dismiss Herring permanently and call in 10 prospective jurors and seat another juror on the panel. However, Garrison said that would take time and money.

The third option was to postpone the trial. Garrison said he decided to do that after discussion with defense attorney Vernard Solomon and special prosecutor Stephen Tokoly.

"I have spoken to Mr. Herring's doctor and he assures me that Mr. Herring will be well enough by next Monday to proceed with the trial." Garrison

Punishment phase to continue with 11 jurors

DALLAS (AP) — A judge has ruled that the punishment phase of the trial of a man convicted in the slaying of a convenience store customer can continue with only 11 jurors.

State District Court Judge Ron Chapman made the ruling Monday in the case of one of the jurors who convicted Andre Lewis in the 1985 slaying of Matt McKay of Oklahoma City. He said the juror, who suffered an apparent nervous breakdown, could be dimissed without declaring a mistrial in the case.

The juror, a 66-year-old man, was admitted to Methodist Hospital for 90 days of psychiatric care. Lawyers for Lewis contend that the juror, who was not identified, could have been mentally unst-

A Dallas County psychiatrist who examined the juror said the "acutely psychotic" condition that suddenly incapacitated the juror may have been a stress-related problem triggered by the five-day murder trial.

'You could tell he was preoccupied with this trial," Cliff Cornett of the Dallas County Mental Health-Mental Retardation Center said. "He somehow thought he was involved in the crime it self. My examination revealed that this man had poor judgement."

Lewis had been accused of shooting McKay during the armed robbery of a convenience store in suburban Carrollton.

Radio listeners pounce on FCC over indecency ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) - Some people are hopping mad at the Federal Communications Commission's crackdown on raunchy radio, and they're making their point with some of the same blankety-blank language banned from the airwaves.

Though the FCC has received far more thanks than criticism in letters reacting to its decision on indecent broadcasts, a few of the complainers grabbed attention but not sympathy with their dicey words. A letter from students running WWQC-FM at Quincy College in Quincy, Ill., told the FCC, "We feel this country was founded on the rights and freedoms which your fascist organization can nev-

An unsigned postcard from New Jersey used the same obscenity in directing action at the FCC, and went on to say: "What are your trying to prove? What big (another expletive deleted) you are?"

The issue has generated an unusually large number of letters - about 1,300 - and by a margin of about 8-to-1 they applaud the FCC for trying to clear the airwaves of smut and make them safe for children's ears, said Edythe Wise, chief of complaints and investigations of the FCC's mass media bureau.

The decision also produced an unusually hostile reaction from critics who say the FCC is breaching the First Amendment by regulating what the public can hear on the radio.

"It's that kind of an issue," she said with a shrug. But FCC officials are taking the randy writings in stride, enjoying a chuckle over a few of them. Some of the crudest were sent to General Counsel Diane Killory, who appeared on ABC-TV's "Nightline" program to explain the commission's position after it approved the new policy April 16.

A critic from Duluth, Minn., wrote: "Do (expletive) yourself. Let the radio DJs go where they want and you (expletive) at the FCC just crawl back under your rock."

Another from Los Angeles was even briefer: "Don't (expletive) with my First Amendment rights. No censorship."

Most people want to move into a house that is in apple pie order. Suzanne Brangham, on the other hand, enjoys the challenge of a wreck. She has proven it by moving into 26 of the 71 homes she has renovated for profit since 1972.

Though the career of house renovation and resale is far from new, this divorced mother of one appears to have honed it to high art. In the process, she claims to have turned an original investment of $9,600 into more than $1 million worth of property and other assets.

But instead of taking a wellearned rest, the Binghamton, N.Y., native who now calls San Francisco home, has written a book about her methods. She continues to renovate at least one house a year, far below the rate that used to be typical for her each year.

Not surprisingly in one whose bright idea has proven successful, Brangham says that others can do it, too, and her book offers a map for succeess. In Brangham's opinion, the career she calls "housewrecking" is particularly appropriate for women who don't like their current home and have time to seek out a wreck they can fix up for resale or per-

It is not necessarily appropriate for those who are happy in the home and career they already

The advice offered in "Housewise: The Smart Woman's Guide to Buying and Renovating Real Estate for Profit" (Clarkson N. Potter) makes it sound easy, but the self-taught interior designer admits there are some pitfalls along the way.

She cautions readers to select properties carefully, making sure to obtain qualified guidance on the salability of the residence in terms of neighborhood, physical condition and financial factors at play in the community.

'I always hired a designer and an architect when I was puzzled, paying them by the hour at $50 to $100." Brangham says. She asked these professionals to look at the place and tell her what they would do if it were their own. Then she did her own legwork to bring thir ideas to fruition.

'I also read every magazine I could find and I copied a lot," she adds. She found a contractor and workers she liked and then stuck with them, usually working alongside the carpenters, plumbers and electricians to renovate the houses.

These ploys and her pursuit of quality workmanship, lots of light and arrangements that were likely to appeal to a wide sales of properties at their full asking price as a rule after being listed by real estate brokers for less than a month.

Since experience usually is the best teacher, Brangham was asked to share some of the information she had garnered from the 140 homes she has renovated. "I can usually tell in a half hour what to do and what not to do,'

Recently, for example, she visited a house outside Boston. The house cost $170,000, had a bathroom on the first floor but no bathrooms on the second floor. where there were three bedrooms, one with no closet. An undesirable feature of the main floor was a warren of small rooms, including a tiny kitchen.

The ground floor's tiny rooms would be opened by tearing down walls. In place of the small rooms there would be an enlarged kitchen and a large open living area. The existing old-fashioned walkin pantry would be kept and some of the old kitchen cabinets would remain with their doors removed for open storage.

Brangham points out that this house's dilapidated condition and old-fashioned layout were not so much of a drawback as might be imagined.

"I look for the potential in totally derelict buildings. When they are in terrible condition, I don't feel guilty about ripping everything out. I prefer to do lots of renovation to get exactly the presently, individuals who want range of people have resulted in quality and layout I want.

Create an executive suite from home dining area, den

During working hours it's a conference area complete with table. At mealtimes it's a dining area. At all times it's a handy setup to have if you're among the millions of Americans who work at home or make their home their base of business operations.

The "it" referred to is a combination conference-dining area that's the heart — but still just a part - of an "executive suite" designed for the home by the experts at Armstrong, the home furnishings company

To create the executive suite, interior designers took a separate kitchen and formal dining room, removed the wall between them, and turned the opened-up space into a setting equally suitable for business deals or homecooked meals. An adjoining den became a full-fledged home office.

The secret of the suite's versatility is the dining area that doubles as a conference area. A long newly installed island divides the kitchen from the diningconference area and serves to de-

A partition several feet wide extends from the top of the island to the ceiling, screening the conference-dining area from the kitchen and vice versa

The partition has a sliding panel. Slide it open and you make the partition wider still, gaining additional privacy. You also expose the interior of the partition which is a bulletin board for pinning up memos, reports, blueprints or other business papers or documents.

The executive suite is full of warm wood (the kitchen cabinets and island are natural oak) and earthtone colors appropriate for both a business and home environment. The color scheme takes its cue from the honeyalmond color of the Armstrong "Popular Choice" flooring.

The flooring looks like ceramic tile but it's easier to install and maintain. The designers used it throughout the entire space to unify the decor

Another unifier is the fabric insets on the partition, on the end of in pantry in the kitchen, and on the pocket doors that close off the office from the kitchen and dining-conference area. The fabric has a subtle North African motif.

Fabric insets are not difficult to make. You simply tack up a fabric and cover the edges with stock molding.

The office has rows of bookshelves, built-in filing cabinets and, naturally, a personal computer. The walls are covered with the same pinup material that lines the interior of the partition.

But the executive suite is not all business. The island features a wet bar and stool seating for two (for toasting the close of a deal?). And come dinnertime, you simply clear off the "conference table" and reset it with china and silverware and, if you like, fresh flowers and candles. Now you're ready to enjoy the fruits of your labors. For a free booklet on the executive suite, write to: Armstrong World Industries, Free Executive Suite Booklet, P.O. Box 3001, Lancaster, Pa. 17604. Or call 800-233-3823 toll-free and ask for a complimentary copy of the ex-

Best Father's Day present may be a gift from the heart

DEAR READERS: This Sunday is Father's Day. You're broke? Not to worry. Here's a suggestion for a Father's Day gift that won't cost you a dime, but will probably be the best gift your father has ever received for any occasion.

It doesn't matter if you're 8 years old or 60, if you're lucky enough to have a father, sit down and write him a letter. It doesn't have to be a literary masterpiece; just a few sentences telling him how much he means to you, and why, will do. Of course, if you are in a chatty or sentimental mood, go ahead and express the thoughts you have found difficult to verbalize. And when you sign it, be sure to add the date. Long after the neckties, shirts, sweaters and wallets are worn and discarded, I'll bet your Father's Day letter will remain - tucked away for safekeeping with the rest of Dad's important

Sports Scene Spinks wallops Cooney

By BARRY WILNER AP Sports Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) - Michael Spinks answered questions about his credentials as a heavyweight the best way any heavyweight can with power punching against the power puncher of yesterday. Now he must do it again against the power puncher of today

If he succeeds in that, there will be no disputing his claim as world champion.

Mike Tyson owns the World Boxing Association and World Boxing Council titles. Spinks has only his own claim to the title after a very impressive beating of favored Gerry Cooney on Monday night.

Spinks knocked down Cooney twice before stopping him in the fifth round. For Spinks, the first light heavyweight champion ever to move up and take the heavyweight crown, it matched the kind of punching power more associated with Tyson and, for that matter, the reluctant warrior Cooney.

Spinks, 30, landed 182 of 278 punches, including a devastating 84 of 101 in the fifth round. He staggered Cooney with a vicious right hand after Cooney missed a looping left hook. And Spinks kept battering the rusty Cooney, who had fought only seven rounds in three fights in five years, with a series of rights and some hard lefts. Twice, Cooney went down from rights; twice he got up only to find Spinks waiting to hit him some more.

When Spinks landed 15 consecutive punches to the head, Cooney's legs sagged and referee Frank Cappuccino stopped it.

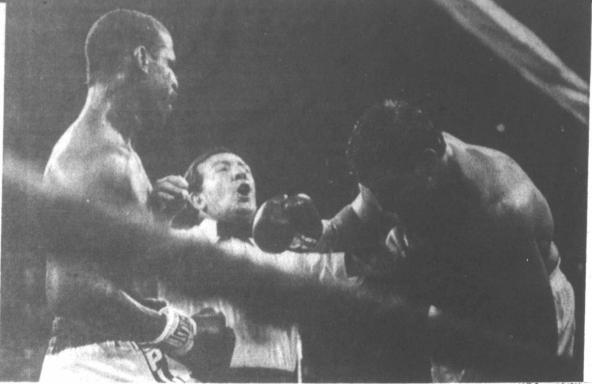

"I slammed him with a lot of rights to the side of the head," Spinks said.

In his two IBF title fights with Larry Holmes, Spinks showed little power. As a light heavyweight, he had 19 knockouts, but the question was, could he hit like a heavyweight? Ask Cooney, when and if he decides to talk about it.

"I felt, with my jab and hitting off my jab, I knew I could get him," said Spinks. "It was working very good. I had a sure shot throughout the fight.

Spinks will be anything but a sure shot against Tyson, who he was accused of ducking to fight Cooney. Now Spinks will have to wait for Tyson, and it probably will be at least a year.

Tyson is committed to fighting International Boxing Federation champion Tony Tucker, who Spinks refused to meet en route to the heavyweight unification showdown against Tyson. That led the IBF to strip Spinks of the title. Tyson also has two other bouts planned, starting in the fall with 1984 Olympian Tyrell Biggs

Doctors say Miami coach does not have cancer

By JIMMY PATTERSON Sports Writer

PALESTINE - Doctors in Dallas and Palestine have ruled out cancer in the case of Miami principal and track coach Jerry Boyd. Following a series of tests. Boyd said doctors told him the kidney, prostate and adrenal are free from the danger of malignancy.

'The tests showed no cancer in the organs they first thought it might be in," Boyd said. When Boyd entered the hospital for tests, doctors said there was an 80-percent chance he had cancer. After the initial series of tests, Boyd was told there was a 75-percent chance he did not have a malignant growth Boyd is now waiting on the completion of the final series of tests which will show adrenal activity. With those tests "we'll see if everything is OK with the endocrine and if the adrenal gland is in proper balance," Boyd said.

The Miami principal said doctors are still checking for the possibility of Cushing syn-

Cushing syndrome is characterized by brownish streaks on the abdominal wall, muscular weakness and a porous state of bone. The syndrome is associated with dysfunction of the adrenal cortex or pituitary

In the initial set of tests, scar tissue on the kidney was found, indicating there had been an infection present in the organ at one time.

Due to the infection, Boyd will be forced to drink a gallon of water each day to help control the calcification, or excessive excretion

As far as the damage done by uric acid crystals in the kidneys, that has stopped and so has the infection," Boyd said. "It's that uric acid that I'll have to worry about, but not as much if I just do what they tell me.'

Boyd was transferred to Dallas Presbyterian Hospital last week to undergo the second series of tests but is now back in Palestine.

Through it all, and despite the intense pain Boyd has been in, he has managed to keep his sense of humor, and now says five doctors have all attempted to figure out what the medical problem is.

"I've had nothing so far that is totally symptomatic of any one thing," Boyd said. 'If it hadn't been so painful, I would have laughed the whole time I was in the hospital."

Boyd said the final series of test results are expected back Monday and if everything checks out OK, he will return to Miami late ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) - Last season, when games between Texas and California were of greater significance, the Angels beat the Rangers in their first seven meetings.

Only after clinching the American League West title did the Angels lose to Texas — five consecutive times, in fact.

Texas Manager Bobby Valentine still considered those victories valuable, saying at the time, "It's important for us to know we can beat these guys." They haven't forgotten. A 9-7 victory Monday night was Texas' sixth in a row over California.

"We picked up where we left off last year. It was a big win," Valentine said.

Never mind that a new season finds the defending champs in fifth place and the Rangers a step

The Rangers at least appear to be heading in the right direction, having played two games above .500 since a terrible 1-10 start.

Monday, they resorted to a familiar script, scoring early and often and then quivering behind an inconsistent bullpen until the last out.

"We'll probably have to get used to these before it's over," said Valentine.

Texas finished its scoring by the sixth inning. Pete Incaviglia drove in three runs with two home runs, giving him 15 homers for the season, and Pete O'Brien homered, No. 16, and doubled for another run

The Angels chased starter Mike Jeffcoat during a four-run first highlighted by Doug DeCinces' three-run homer, his seventh, and took a 6-4 lead in the second on Dick Schofield's RBI double and a run-scoring grounder by Brian Downing.

But Jeff Russell, 1-1, got the last out in the second and over the next five innings allowed only Wally Joyner's solo homer in the fifth, his 13th.

The Rangers stormed back with four more runs in the third, when O'Brien's double knocked out Jack Lazorko and Chuck Finley, 0-3, surrendered Incaviglia's second homer and Mike Stanley's runscoring single Rangers' Pete O'Brien is congratulated by teammates after hitting firstinning homer.

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Mike Scott has at last found an opposing manager who doesn't think he's scuffing the ball.

Scott struck out 14 Cincinnati batters, tying a career-high, and combined with Dave Smith for a 7-hit 4-0 victory over the Reds Monday night.

"I don't think scraping the ball had anything to do with it," Cincinnati Manager Pete Rose said. "We had our opportunities to score if we hit a ground ball. We just didn't execute."

Scott, 8-3, shut down the Reds over eight innings and didn't walk a batter before turning his destiny over to Smith in the ninth

Smith, who extended his string to 25 and 2-3 innings without yielding an earned run, then struck out the final three batters to end the

Houston's combined 17 strike outs was the most by a team this season in the major leagues. Smith doesn't expect his personal streak to last forever. "I know the string can't last but when it's broken, I hope they score one run and we're leading by two," Smith said. "You really feel the pressure to preserve the shutout after Scotty pitched a game like that.'

Bill Doran, who had only two hits in his last 26 at bats, broke the scoreless duel in the sixth with a solo homer over the right field fence, his seventh of the season. Billy Hatcher's single in the seventh scored Scott with the second run and the Astros added two more runs in the eighth on Kevin Bass' triple and a sacrifice fly by catcher Ronn Reynolds.

Rose took note of the 17 strike outs by Scott and Smith.

"We had two guys who got the 'Golden Sombrero' tonight,' Rose said. "You know what the Golden Sombrero is don't you? It's the hat trick (three goals in a hockey game) plus one. Our No. 1 (Tracy Jones) and No. 8 (Ron Oester) hitters struck out four times

"Obviously he pitched well, this is first time we've been shut out this year," Rose said of Scott. 'You probably won't see another 17 strikeout game this year even though you see Scott and (Nolan) Ryan all the time."

Doran's solo homer broke up Reds starter Bill Gullickson's shut out.

With one run in six innings, you're going to win most of those games," said Gullickson, 7-4. We've still got a winning record against them. That's the way I look at it.'

Scott struck out five batters in a row at one stretch and reached double figure strikeouts for the 15th time in his career.

'Box' clubs may be declared illegal

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — There's a good chance that the man who wins the U.S. Open this week will be playing with clubs likely to be declared illegal. Tom Watson estimates as many as 90 percent of golf's touring pros carry at least one or two clubs with the controversial "box" or "square" grooves. A spokesman for the U.S. Golf Association, John Morris, said the clubs — more specifically a method of measuring grooves on these clubs - will be considered at a U.S.G.A. executive committee meeting early next week. "If the proposed method is approved, some of the clubs — specifically the Ping I-2 — will not conform to the Rules of Golf." Morris said. Any such ruling. however, will not be retroactive and will not affect players in the 1987 Open. The "square-grooved" clubs, along with the onepiece ball, represent the "greatest change in golf equipment since the shift from hickory to steel shafts" a half-century ago, Watson said Both Watson, a five-time British Open champion and once the leading player in the game, and Jack Nicklaus point to the equipment change as a principal reason for the exceptionally low scoring produced on the PGA tour this year.

And both object to the phenomena

"Maybe it is progress," Watson acknowledged "But there has to be a time to say, 'no more.

"The USGA has to do something. We can't let the integrity of the game be destroyed," Watson said. The controversial clubs, now produced by most major manufacturers of golf equipment, first came on the market about two years ago.

Instead of the traditional "V" shaped grooves, these clubs contain square or box-shaped grooves which impart a greater spin to the ball and allow the player to exert greater control over his shots, particularly out of the rough in wet conditions.

"You can get in the rough and stop the ball on the green. Shot-making is reduced," Watson said. 'You spend years, hitting thousands of balls, learning to play different shots under different conditions. Now, someone comes along and can hit the same shot immediately just because of his equipment.

'I don't like it. "It's making an ordinary golfer a good golfer and that's what the manufacturer wants. Did you ever hear an ad that didn't say it would make you hit it longer and straighter?

Veteran attorney tells of alleged deal with DA attorney Don Hall testified that McLennan County District Attorney Vic Feazell threatened him and his law partner with state prosecution when he found out they were becoming federal witnesses.

Hall, a Waco attorney for 36 years and a former district attorney, is the last scheduled government witness in Feazell's bribery trial.

Hall returned to the witness stand today as the trial of the 35-year-old prosecutor continued into its fourth

Both Hall and his partner, Dick Kettler, have testified that Feazell asked and got from them one third of all their legal fees in drunken driving cases where Feazell got cases dismissed or reduced

Hall said Monday that shortly before he and Kettler declared they would testify for the U.S. government, Feazell threatened to get Attorney General Jim Mattox to file state charges gainst them.

"He told Kettler that we could still be prosecutred by the state," Hall said. "and he would have his good friend Jim Mattox do it. He said government immunity would not extend to the state.

'I took it as a threat against the both of us." Hall said.

Hall described earlier Monday how Feazell asked for a share of legal fees.

"He told me that he wanted to participate in our fees," testified Hall. who was district attorney in 1963-66 and a former law partner of Feazell. ders

AUSTIN (AP) — Veteran Waco "He said he had done us a lot of favors and we had made money as a result of those favors "I asked him what he meant," said Hall. "I was astounded. I had never shared a fee with anyone nor had I taken one when I was in public office."

Hall testified Feazell finally asked for one-third of the fees that Hall's law firm received in cases where Feazell became involved in getting charges dismissed or reduced.

Hall said he and his partner, Dick Kettler, discussed Feazell's demands. "He was astounded too," Hall said Monday. "We never reached a conclusion on the matter. The next time a case came along, we just cut him out a third and gave it to him." Kettler testified for three days last week, telling of numerous instances in which he and Hall agreed to give Feazell one-third of the cases that Feazell "handled." Feazell is accused of taking $19,000 in bribes from a circle of Waco attorneys in exchange for dismissing charges against their clients. The 10count federal racketeering indictment also charges him with mail fraud.

Feazell has said the charges are false and were initiated by the Department of Public Safety, which he said was seeking revenge because of Feazell's investigation into the confessions made by Henry Lee Lucas, who claimed to be a mass murderer. Lucas later recanted many of the confessions, which had been used by local authorities to clear up unsolved mur-

Revision of real estate tax squeezed into corrections bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Mike Andrews of Houston led the fight in the Ways and Means Committee to overturn an Internal Revenue Service ruling barring real estate losses incurred before 1987 from being applied against real estate income.

The measure is part of identical technical corrections bills introduced in the House and Senate last week designed to refine the Tax Reform Act of

Andrews said the new tax law specified that passive losses, such as those from real estate investments, could only be written off against "passive income" derived from similar

While the tax law stated that income from real estate transactions would be considered passive, the December 1986 IRS ruling stated that income from real estate installment sales before Jan. 1, 1987 would not.

"The IRS ruling in this case was clearly not in line with congressional intent," Andrews said. "I am pleased that it will be overturned when this legislation becomes law, and I am hopeful that we can move swiftly toward that end.'

IRS spokeswoman Johnell Hunter said the Tax Reform Act included changes in the passive real estate loss area because Congress perceived abuses by wealthy taxpayers who used real estate deals as a way to shelter their income.

"The tax bill says 'Why should some people have an advantage because they have more money," she said.

Last week, Andrews and 21 of his colleagues on Ways and Means - including Reps. Bill Archer, R-Houston, and J.J. "Jake" Pickle, D-Austin -

James Baker asking him to withdraw the IRS ruling. A similar letter was signed by 12 members of the Senate Finance Committee, including Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

"I felt the legislation came down much harder on real estate that on other industries," said Bentsen, who applauded Andrews' work on the bill. 'And when the IRS issued a ruling that went even farther than Congress intended, I felt a technical correction was certainly called for.

According to Andrews, 8,000 commercial transactions totaling more than $9 billion and 4,000 residential transactions, or 4 percent, in the Houston area entered into between 1980 and 1986 would be affected by the IRS ruling.

"For some reason the IRS took the position that if you had entered into an installment sale before 1987 you couldn't have taken any losses as passive income," said Jenard Gross. chairman of United Savings Association of Texas, who owns apartment buildings in the Houston area.

"Let's say you sold two properties in 1984-1985 and one is foreclosed and you got it back. Under the IRS ruling you couldn't use one to compensate for the other." Gross said.

Ms. Hunter said that shouldn't bother the owner, since, in addition to whatever installment payments were made, he would get the property back for resale.

Gross, however, said there are fewer buyers in Texas these days and property is sitting idle across the state. In the month of April alone there were 3,000 foreclosures in the Houston area, he said.

The bill is expected to come to the floors of both houses of Congress withwrote a letter to Treasury Secretary in the next six weeks.

buying empty homes for public housing ouston agency

HOUSTON (AP) - Samuel Goodman and his family live in public housing, but you'd never know it by looking at the three-bedroom, single-family home with its well-kept lawn and shrubbery.

Taking advantage of the thousands of foreclosed houses left vacant in Houston after the oil boom went bust, the city housing authority has been buying residential properties to house low-income renters.

"It's the American Dream. It just took a different route," Goodman, 29, says of living in his own home. "We're kind of in a daze."

The Goodmans are among about a dozen families placed since early April in 121 homes bought with $5.4 million in federal money, says Angie Finn of the Houston Housing Authority.

"It was definitely a case of necessity being the mother of invention," she says. "This addressed our need for homes, while at the same time helping (decrease) the glut of housing in Houston.

Some other Texas cities are taking similar steps, but Houston officials believe they are pursuing the plan on a larger scale than most.

There are a record 4,400 homes foreclosed by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development in the Houston area, according to Jim Wilson, HUD's Houston area manager.

Until 1984, the largest number of HUDforeclosed homes at one time was about 250, he said.

Most of the homes are 7 to 10 years old and located in middle-class neighborhoods. The families living in them have incomes of at least $13,000 and otherwise might live in apartment-style housing projects.

Ironically, the federal money for the program initially was earmarked for a 105-unit public housing project, later torpedoed by community opposi-

Rather than give the money back to HUD, the city decided to spend it buying so-called "scattered site" housing.

Elaine Wheeler, a single mother with a 4-yearold boy and 16-year-old daughter, recently accompanied housing authority officials on an inspection tour before taking possession of a three-bedroom, two-bathroom home.

"A house is going to be a lot of responsibility," said Ms. Wheeler, excited about moving into a house with her children after living in an apartment the past several years.

Across the street, in another single-family home in the well-tended suburb of Alief, homeowner Jeff Weisman, 30, was working in his yard. He said the Wheeler family's new home had been vacant for more than a year.

"It's a good program," said Weisman, whose family has lived in the area for the past 15 years. 'Everybody wants a nice place to live."

For Shirley Young, a mother of four, the program enabled her to move back into her old neighborhood after living in an apartment for three years following her separation from her husband. "I love being in a house, especially with children," says Mrs. Young, who works for the Harris County sheriff's office. "This was a blessing, the kids are going back to the same school." Applicants for the program are screened for rent-payment and credit history and their ability and willingness to do home maintenance. After a lifetime of living in apartments, Goodman says he's eager to learn techniques of home

"With my colleagues at work, they talk about lawn care and things, and I felt left out," he said. 'This will get me into the swing of things.'

Goodman, who has four children, was laid off in 1982 when oil prices started their slide. He had worked two years as a machinist at an oil drilling company. Now he works at a lower paying job as a data entry clerk.

While it's too early to determine what kind of long-term reception the new neighbors may get, initial opposition in most neighborhoods eased after city officials spoke with residents who were mostly concerned about their property values. "Our response has been: your property value would go down even further if the houses remained empty," Ms. Finn says.

She says the Houston Housing Authority is working to screen and place applicants in the other homes it has acquired, and hopes to have all the homes filled by the end of the year.

The agency also wants to buy 86 more houses using money from another housing project that also was scuttled by community opposition.

Ms. Finn says the housing authority saved money by negotiating directly with HUD to buy the foreclosed homes, many of which had been vacant for a year or longer, rather than buying them through competitive bidding.

The homes bought by the housing authority had been valued by HUD at between $35,000 and $60,000 and the renters some day may be able to purchase them, depending on how well they are kept and how faithfully the families pay the rent, she says.

Longtime rancher at home on range

WEST COLUMBIA (AP) -Standing in the shadow of Columbia Lakes, a luxurious country club with manicured lawns and sprawling homes, lies a ranch where men and women have sweated and strained for the past 130 years. Life has been hard for people like D.M. "Shorty" Kleine, foreman of W.R. Nash Ranch, located about 12 miles out of town on Lake Road. But he's not one to bellvache about the years he spent ranching in the northwestern portion of Brazoria County.

He's says he's "darn pleased" to have been at the helm of the more than 2,000-acre spread for 23 of his 55 years.

When I first started as a kid in this, I dreamed of running one of the biggest and best operations I could. I've been doing that for many years and I'm not going anywhere now," Kleine says.

Originally called the Kittie Nash Ranch, Nash Ranch is part of the late Kittie Nash's estate holdings. Kleine says she had left instructions in her will that the ranch remain an active opera-

Money from the Nash estate was also responsible for building Kittie Nash Groce Memorial Rehabilitation Center in West Columbia

In addition to having miles of big, green pastures, like many Gulf Coast cattle ranches, it also produces the likes of rice, cotton, corn and milo

Kleine, who as his nickname indicates is short of stature, but stocky, calls the place "pacifywhere a man can work like a dog from sunup to sundown, but stop to listen to the distant lowing of cows and constant twitter of

"We got our problems here, but the abundance of grass and climate no freezes, makes it ideal for cattle. That's why I like the Gulf Coast," he says.

Sitting on the breezy back porch of the spacious ranch house one could be lulled into thinking life there is easy. That is not the Kleine says he is glad he's weathered good and bad years at the ranch and he wouldn't trade any of them, but he's concerned about the future of the cattle industry and what it will mean for those, dedicated to the lifestyle, facing changes.

"Things are changing for us .. there's new people. City people are moving to the country, bringing new ideas. The roads around here are harder to keep up and it used to be we didn't know what stealing was," Kleine says.

When subdivisions sprang up in many areas in the county, Kleine says he was not pleased.

"Brazoria County used to be one of the largest in cattle producing. Now it's urbanized," he Tough times are nothing new to Kleine and his wife Shirley.

"We've always worked like hell and been poor in good times, bad times, what have you," he says. Just as the availability of cattle pastureland has diminished, so has the number of experienced cowboys over the years. Kleine, who supervises six hands at the ranch, says it is hard to find people who have years of cattle handling under their belts. "It's because fewer ranches means fewer opportunities. I also think people don't want to work the long, hard hours," Kleine says, adding, "I'm pretty hard-headed, but I'm not sure I'd do it

Due to the influx of a variety of people to the area, Kleine says he's learned to get along with all kinds of people, but he prefers the company of cattle folks. He says there's a unique trust between ranchers that's not always present with those from other walks of life.
